Turner sets TNT start in October

By JANET STILSON Staff reporter

NEW YORK—Turner Broadcasting System hopes to launch Turner Network Television on Oct. 3 with a 10 million to 15 million subscriber base.

Gerald Hogan, president of TBS's entertainment network unit, is trying to nail down subscriber commitments in a series of teleconferences with the multiple cable system operator executives who attended TBS's meeting on TNT last week.

Mr. Hogan and Ted Turner, TBS's chairman and chief executive, are also talking to board members in an effort to get their approval of the proposal, including the Oct. 3 kickoff.

Representatives of about 10 of the country's largest MSOs attended the Turner meeting last week. At least one, Tele-Communications Inc. President John Malone, has given the network his full support.

Others, such as Robert Miron, president of Newhouse Broadcasting, expressed some reservations.

"It was an interesting presentation," Mr. Miron said. "Ted had some innovative program ideas."

He said some aspects of the plan, plus channel capacity considerations, will lead him to review the proposal "very carefully."

Turner's plans for a 10 million to 15 million subscriber base would be "by far the largest subscriber launch of a (cable) network," Mr. Hogan (Continued on Page 39)

Super Tuesday brings national politics home

By ROBERT HOMAN Staff reporter

When Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson made a campaign stop in eastern Kentucky a couple of weeks ago, Tony Turner, news director at WYMT-TV in Hazard, Ky., met him at the airport, camera in hand.

"It was the first time a presidential candidate had come to the area," says Mr. Turner, who filmed and interviewed the Rev. Jackson on an hour-long bus ride to the rural, mountainous coal mining town of Hazard.

Mr. Turner is one of the many broadcast journalists who are chasing the presidential contenders on their 20-state trail toward tomorrow's Super Tuesday, a sweeping primary day that has brought a new level of campaign coverage to many communities.

"We've never had anything that's come close to Super Tuesday," says Bill Foy, news director at WBTV-TV in Charlotte, N.C. "It's all brand new to us."

The primaries and caucuses have brought the campaign to many smaller cities in the South that received little or no attention during past presidential primaries.

Exit polling upheld

ATLANTA—Acting in time for tomorrow's Super Tuesday voting, federal judges here and in Miami relaxed state laws designed to limit exit polling by journalists. ABC, CBS and NBC fought the statutes on First Amendment grounds. In Georgia, a temporary injunction narrowed exit-poll restrictions from within 250 to 25 feet of a polling place. A Florida law banning exit polling within 150 feet of balloting was overturned and a new 50-foot minimum was implemented.

Cable hearings set

WASHINGTON—The Senate antitrust subcommittee hearings on the cable industry, set for March 17, will include a look at the elimination of mustcarry rules, a subcommittee staff member said Friday. Meanwhile, the House telecommunications subcommittee tentatively scheduled the first of what's expected to amount to three days of hear-(Continued on Page 39)

Radio hit by 'payola' accusations

By ADAM BUCKMAN Staff reporter

The radio industry last week braced for the possibility of further "payola" fallout in the wake of charges that independent record promoters paid cash and gave cocaine to get favorable airplay of records.

Indictments that were handed down on Feb. 26 against three record promoters and a former radio station general manager also have implicated seven station program directors in alleged payola schemes.

Four of the program directors were identified as government witnesses who had earned immunity from prosecution by testifying last summer before a Los Angeles grand jury.

It was unclear last week if the government, which is represented in the payola case by the U.S. attorney in Los Angeles, would indict any of the program directors.

Last week, officials in the U.S. attorney's office declined to comment about what the next step in its ongoing payola investigation would be.

In interviews with station executives around the country last week, some expressed concern that the allegations could spread beyond the initial indictments.

None of the implicated program directors, most of whom are still working at radio stations, would comment last week. Some of them went on a leave of absence last week, while others issued statements of "no comment" through their general managers.

In the indictments handed down on Feb. 26 in Los Angeles, U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner charged record promoters Ralph Tashjian, 40, and Valerie Tashjian, 31, of San Mateo, Calif., and William Craig, 42, currently of Scottsdale, Ariz., and formerly from the Detroit area. Each allegedly paid cash or (Continued on Page 39)

CBS concedes last place finish in ratings likely

By RICHARD TEDESCO

Staff reporter

NEW YORK-CBS, in assessing national results from the February sweeps, conceded last week that it likely will finish this television season in last place.

"If we run at this same level, we will lose," said David Poltrack, vice president of marketing for the CBS Television Network.

CBS will finish last for the first time in its history if it doesn't make up 11/2 ratings points during the remaining seven weeks of the season. "It's doable, but it's going to mean some pitched battles," Mr. Poltrack said.

ABC took the sweeps with a 17.4 rating (percentage of TV homes) and a 27 share (percentage of sets in use) over NBC at 16/25 and CBS at 13.8/ 21 in results from A.C. Nielsen Co.

In Arbitron Ratings Co. numbers, ABC led with a 17.3/27, over NBC at 15.9/25 and CBS at 13.8/21.

Through the end of February, ABC held a slim lead over CBS, with a 14.1 average rating on the season to CBS's 13.6, according to Nielsen. NBC maintained a comfortable lead with a 16.3 rating.

CBS/Broadcast Group President Gene Jankowski said the prospects for passing ABC are still "very good." He said the network is building for the future with new shows such as "Frank's Place" and "Beauty and the Beast."

As far as second place or third place goes, he said, "It's an emotional issue more than a financial one. Nobody says we're happy being third, but it has more of an impact on people's emotions."

Ben Tucker, executive vice president of Retlaw Broadcasting and chairman of the CBS affiliate advisory board, said: "I don't like to see CBS concede to third place, but with the race as close as it is, it's probably a practical assessment.

"All of the networks pretty well acknowledged that the success of the Olympics was going to deter-mine second and third," he said. "It's tougher to be a weak No. 2 than it is to be No. 3."

Meanwhile, CBS last week announced it would advance the start of its prime-time season for next fall as a result of disruptions posed by the Sept. 17-Oct. 2 Summer

CBS finance officer quits

By DIANE MERMIGAS Senior reporter

CBS Inc.'s chief financial officer, Fred Meyer, resigned last week to join Omnicom Group, an advertising firm, in a similar position.

Mr. Meyer is the third high-level corporate executive to leave in recent months. Many industry observers view the departures as an attempt by Laurence Tisch, CBS president and chief executive officer, to streamline the corporate ranks.

But CBS officials denied there are plans afoot for other high-level executive changes

"I don't suspect there will be any more," said CBS/Broadcast Group President Gene Jankowski. "This was a good opportunity for Fred Meyer. I think the team is in place, and we're all working hard on the same thing-which is to make CBS more efficient and effective."

CBS sources said that Mr. Meyer, who leaves April 1, had planned to leave the company at the end of his contract term later this year, but moved up his timetable in light of the Omnicom offer. He could not be reached for comment at press time.

Sources said it's likely that Mr. Meyer will not be directly replaced and his duties will be assumed by others under him, including Peter Keegan, CBS vice president and controller, as part of a planned realignment of CBS's entire corporate staff and functions. The restructuring could be discussed this week at the monthly board meeting.

Also at CBS last week, executives of the recently sold records division filed a class-action lawsuit charging that CBS and Mr. Tisch "maliciously and fraudulently" underpaid 1987 bonuses to them by $1.5 million. The lawsuit, filed March 3 in the New York Supreme Court on behalf of as many as 130 executives, also seeks $3 million in punitive damages and legal costs.

The outcome of the suit could effect the current dispute between CBS Inc. and Sony Corp., to whom CBS Records was sold on Jan. 5, over an adjustment in the $2 billion purchase price. The squabble over the true value of CBS Records could mean an additional payment of more than $100 million by Sony.

Basic to both the lawsuit and purchase price dispute is the question of how much the records unit earned in 1987 while it was still under CBS's wing. CBS, which didn't comment publicly on the suit, says it cannot disclose its earnings figures for the division until it reports its first-quarter statistics in April.

"Our requests for their earnings figures on records have been con-tinually been turned down," CBS Records President Walter Yetnikoff told ELECTRONIC MEDIA. "Mr. Tisch thinks he can bully a whole class of employees, but I'm not going to let him."#

Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

CBS will begin introducing its new 1988-89 prime-time shows on Labor Day, Sept. 5, two weeks before the Games. ABC and NBC haven't decided when their seasons will start.

NBC, meanwhile, sought to downplay the powerful impact of the Olympics in its interpretation of the February sweeps results. Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president of research projects, provided average prime-time ratings that excluded the numbers from the Winter Games

Aside from the Winter Games, ABC had the highest-rated miniseries for the sweeps period-and the season-with "Elvis and Me" getting a 24.5/36.

In a four-week average of the February news race, "ABC's World News Tonight" led the way with an 11.9/21, beating "The CBS Evening News" at 11.4/20 and "The NBC Nightly News" at 10.4/18.#

Writers Guild expected to picket

By WILLIAM MAHONEY Staff reporter

Los ANGELES-Members of the Writers Guild of America were expected to start informational picketing today if weekend talks hadn't settled the dispute that last week led the group to authorize a strike against movie and TV producers.

The 9,000 WGA members last week voted overwhelmingly to reject a proposed three-year contract offered by the Alliance of Motion Picture & Television Producers, ABC, CBS and NBC.

, 93 percent of WGA/East members authorized guild executives to call a strike, one day after more than 96 percent of WGA/West members approved the same measure.

The informational picket, in which union members hand out leaflets outlining their grievances, would be a last step before a full-fledged strike.

One of the obstacles in the talks is the Alliance's attempt to replace the fixed rate for residuals from hour-long shows, which have become increasingly hard to sell in off-network syndication, with a percentage of the gross. WGA members see that as a rollback in fees.

Other sticking points in the dispute center on fees for programs sold internationally, "creative rights," overscale payments and cable TV residuals.

The previous contract expired at midnight Feb. 29. Guild members last walked out in 1985 for two weeks.

Nicholas Counter, president of the alliance, met privately with Brian Walton, executive director and chief negotiator of the WGA, on March 2, but no resolution came out of those talks. More negotiations were planned for March 5

A walkout would not affect the 600 guild members working in news operations at ABC and CBS. They agreed to contracts last year after a six-week strike. NBC news staffers are represented by a different union.

Separately, members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists on March 3 authorized a strike against the producers of radio and TV commercials, although at press time union officials of those groups had not ordered a walkout.#

NATPE looks to spice up 1989 gathering

By WILLIAM MAHONEY Staff reporter

HOUSTON-Coming out of a generally lackluster convention, National Association of Television Program Executives officials are already looking at ways to breathe new life into next year's gathering.

Many syndicators characterized the Feb. 25-29 exhibition in Houston as a mop-up session. They said many TV stations were idly shopping for programing odds and ends, apparently because they had already lined up replacement shows or had decided to stick with their proven performers. In addition, attendance at this year's show was down about 300 from last year's 7,837; NATPE attributed the decline primarily to the fact that there were 25 fewer distributors on the floor. Syndicators responded to the tighter-thanever market by making projects "a firm go" with fewer clearances than they had in previous years.

"That's much of an indication of the tightness of the marketplace," says Dick Cignarelli, executive vice president of domestic TV distribution for MGM/UA Telecommunications, who predicts a shakeout soon as a result of the production go-aheads.

Mr. Cignarelli doubts that some of the programs given a green light with unusually low clearances will actually make it on the air.

Barter shows traditionally must reach 70 percent of U.S. TV homes to attract national launch first-run fare with clearance levels of 50 percent or lower.

Responding to criticism about NATPE's late-February date this year, the organization announced early in the meeting that the convention will be held several weeks earlier next year

Attendees, especially broadcasters, generally applauded the decision to move to January. However, distributors who met Feb. 29 after the exhibits closed complained that the (Continued on Page 38)

mpics losses to exceed forecast

By RICHARD TEDESCO Staff reporter

NEW YORK-Despite strong ratings, ABC's losses from the Winter Olympic Games are expected to greatly exceed previous projections of $40 million to $50 million.

Late last week, ABC executives were calculating exactly how large the loss would be and declined to comment.

But they confirmed that the amount will be larger than expected and will put ABC Sports in the red for this year.

It appears that the loss, including rights fees, production costs and advertiser make-goods, will be in the range of $70 million to $80 million.

Robert Iger, vice president of programing for ABC Sports, said the Winter Games will make profitability "an impossibility" for the division this year.

The final week of the Winter Games produced one record-setting telecast of 43 million viewers, which helped ABC finish with a 19.3 average national rating (percentage of TV homes).

ABC shelled out $309 million in broadcast rights fees and about $100 million in production costs.

There was also an estimated $35 million to $40 million loss in make-goods for advertisers, most of which ABC satisfied with unsold inventory during the final week of the Olympic telecasts.

Mr. Iger pointed to advance money

ABC paid to the International Olympic Committee and the negative impact of last October's stock market crash on Olympics ad sales as prime factors for the increased costs.

The expense of the Winter Games didn't prompt ABC to cut back production costs, which were the highest ever for a Winter Olympics, according to Dennis Lewin, ABC senior vice president in production.

"We always knew our losses were going to be staggering," he said. Mr. Iger said that, from the outset, ABC was apprehensive about viewership with its plans for the longest Winter Olympics in history—16 days.

'There was an extreme fear on our part that broadcasting the Winter Olympics with as many hours as we were going to was a serious risk," he explained. "The Winter Olympics are fragile, and there are just so many things you can put on that people will watch.

But enough viewers tuned in to put ABC close to the 21.5 overall rating it guaranteed advertisers.

"We really expected the numbers to come in somewhere between the Lake Placid Olympics and Sarajevo games in '84," said Larry Hyams, ABC director of audience research. While the final number was nowhere near the record 23.7 average rating and 37 share (percentage of sets in use) ABC hit in 1980 at Lake Placid, N.Y., the 19.3 was a boost over the 18.7 average from the initial week of the Calgary telecast and the 18.3 average of the Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

But ABC came close enough to the mark to satisfy advertisers on the basis of the 10 percent margin tacitly acknowledged in the business, said Bart McHugh, senior vice president and media director for DDB Needham Worldwide, a New York ad agency

The final weekend of the Olympics tipped the scales in ABC's favor, when those 43 million viewers-the most for any Winter Olympics telecast-watched the Saturday night women's figure-skating confrontation. That translated to a 26.4 rating, the fourth highest for a Winter Games broadcast, and a 43 share.

The national numbers for the Feb. 28 closing ceremonies were 17.2/27.

ABC took care of make-goods for advertisers as the Winter Games went along, according to Jake Keever, executive vice president of sales for the ABC TV Network

"It appears that we made up the bulk of it in the Olympics," he said.

ABC did not add units during the Olympics telecast, according to Mr. Keever, who said late last week that the network did not have a firm figure on make-goods from the Games. He said the network has reserved inventory, primarily in weekend sports programing, to make up obligations to advertisers.#

MSOs to buy into Movietime

By JANET STILSON

NEW YORK-The Movietime cable network is expected to announce this week that it has sold a majority interest to a consortium of multiple cable system operators.

The potential investors include some of the nation's largest MSOs. According to sources familiar with the impending transaction, they are: Newhouse Broadcasting, Cox Cable Communications, Continental Cablevision, American Television & Communications, Warner Cable Communications and United Cable Television.

MSO representatives joined Movietime President Larry Namer in New York last Thursday to iron out what could be the final arrangements for roughly an 80 percent buy-in, sources said.

While top officials of most of the companies involved, including Movietime, could not be reached for comment, Robert Miron, president of Newhouse Broadcasting, confirmed his company is among those in the negotiations.

In addition to an infusion of capital, Movietime would benefit from the MSOs' service to a total of 11 million basic subscribers

The Los Angeles-based Movietime, now 7 months old and 4.5 million subscribers strong, could gain enough subscribers with the transaction to qualify for A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings reports, which in turn could benefit its drive for more advertisers

To date, Movietime's advertisers have mostly been movie studios

Mike Sobel, the channel's vice president of ad sales, said advertisers include the studios Paramount Pictures, Columbia Pictures, Orion, United Artists and Universal, plus Honda scooters and Nestle.

Movietime has been described as a cross between MTV and a 24-hour version of "Entertainment Tonight." In addition to Hollywood show business news, Movietime is developing system-specific schedule information on local theaters and cable systems.

With the deal, Movietime will follow in the steps of The Discovery Channel and other networks that have benefited from the money and distribution of MSO investors.

Movietime was launched July 31, 1987, with 2 million subscribers. It was started by Mr. Namer, currently its president and a former director of operations at Time Inc.'s Manhattan Cable system, and Alan Mruvka, its chairman, who had been a real-estate developer.

In addition to the $100,000 the two executives invested in Movietime, the company obtained $8 million in funding, with additional lines of credit, from the bond house Mabon Nugent & Co., Mr. Namer said after the channel's launch.#

Broadcaster makes concessions to FM challenger

By WILLIAM MAHONEY Staff reporter

A San Francisco broadcaster has agreed to hold annual fundraisers and make a $1,000 charitable donation to get a petition dropped that was blocking his purchase of a local radio station.

Jim Gabbert, owner of San Francisco's KOFY-TV and KOFY-AM, has been trying to buy KHIT-FM there, previously known to listeners as KKCY: The City.

The transfer was rejected by the Federal Communications Commission last month. Thomas Ballantyne, a San Francisco businessman petitioning against the transfer, had made earlier "proposals" suggesting he be paid cash by Mr. Gabbert to drop his petition, but last week the two parties agreed on other terms. Mr. Ballantyne, who runs Ballantyne & Associates, an executive search firm in San Francisco, told ELECTRONIC MEDIA he withdrew his petition after Mr. Gabbert agreed to hold an annual telethon for the next five years to raise $500,000 for a local charity. Mr. Gabbert also agreed to donate $1,000 to ARIS, an AIDS-related service agency. Mr. Gabbert conceded that the two parties had reached an agreement but would not confirm the specifics, saying it was confidential and Mr. Ballantyne had no right to make it public. In a recent taped telephone interview with ELECTRONIC MEDIA, Mr. Gabbert said that Mr. Ballantyne had suggested in a Feb. 24 letter that the broadcaster would have to meet the following terms before he'd drop his petition: • Payment to Mr. Ballantyne of $15,000 by

Mr. Gabbert for the expenses and legal fees the petitioner accrued in opposing the transfer

New York's WNYW-TV scored well in the sweeps with the syndicated "Diff'rent Strokes."

Syndicated fare, newscast battles heat up local sweeps

By ADAM BUCKMAN, RICHARD MAHLER and DIANE MERMIGAS ELECTRONIC MEDIA staff

While ABC's Winter Olympics telecasts dominated talk of the February sweeps, the top three markets engaged in heated battles in the areas of local news and syndicated fare.

Here are some of the highlights from the ratings books, released last week in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago:

NEW YORK

In local news time slots at 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., syndicated shows on New York's independent stations beat the news programs on the owned-and-operated stations during the sweeps.

For example, at 5 pm., "Diff'rent Strokes" on Fox Television's WNYW-TV received an 8.5 rating (percentage of TV homes) and an 18 share (percentage of sets in use), and "Facts of Life," which follows "Strokes" at 5:30 p.m., had a 9/18, according to A.C. Nielsen Co

Among the o&o's, WABC-TV's newshour had an 8.6/

18, WNBC-TV's "Live at Five" had a 7.3/15 and WCBS-TV had a 7.9/17 at 5 p.m. and a 7.8/16 at 5:30 p.m., Nielsen said.

According to Arbitron Ratings Co., "Strokes" received an 8.7/20 and "Facts" had a 9.7/21. Arbitron said WABC's 5 p.m. news had a 9.5/21, WNBC had a 5/11 and WCBS had a 6.6/16 and a 7.4/ 16

From 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., WNYW's success continued with "Three's Company" and "Family Ties." The two shows earned a 9.4/18 and a 10.9/20, respectively, according to Nielsen.

Of the local news shows, WABC's half-hour news at 6 p.m. had a 9.1/17, Nielsen said. ABC's "World News Tonight," which airs on WABC at 6:30 p.m., had a 9.8/18, Nielsen said. WCBS's 6 p.m. news had a 6.9/ 16, while WNBC had an 8.9/16, Nielsen said.

Arbitron said "Three's Company" had a 9.8/19 and "Family Ties" had an 11.4/21.

Of the 6 p.m. news shows, Arbitron said WABC had a 9.8/19, WCBS had an 8.2/16 and WNBC had a 6.3/12. "World News Tonight" had a 10.4/19, according to Arbitron.

Media General vows to resist takeover effort

By DIANE MERMIGAS Staff reporter

Media General officials are vowing to fight Hollywood producer Burt Sugarman's bid to take over the company, an effort he began with a $1.7 billion cash merger offer last week

In a four-sentence letter to Mr. Sugarman, Media General President James S. Evans said the founding Bryan family, which owns a controlling interest in the company, deemed the offer unacceptable.

Mr. Evans stated that the family would vote against the proposal if put to a shareholder vote. He also said that "under the circumstances, no further action on the part of the board is appropriate."

"We are not interested in selling the company to anyone at any price," J. Stewart Bryan III, the firm's executive vice president and vice chairman, told ELECTRONIC MEDIA. "We want only to preserve and protect the integrity and independence of Media General."

Wall Street analyst Alan Kassan, of Shearson Lehman Hutton, who has long recommended Media General stock, says the management could be forced to consider taking the company private as a means of narrowing the gap between publicand private-market values.

But Mr. Bryan said, "We are not going to be forced to consider our options at the end of a gun barrel. We are constantly reviewing new opportunities for our company. But the time to consider those is not when we're under pressure from someone like Mr. Sugarman." He added, "Quite frankly, our biggest concern is that we will wind up spending all of our time fighting a hostile takeover and not managing the company's assets productively.

The Bryan family controls about 70 percent of the company's 560,000 voting Class B shares of stock and controls the board of the Richmond, Va.-based publishing, broadcast and cable TV company.

For his part, Mr. Sugarman said last week that he didn't intend to just go away.

His Barris Industries, which has produced "The Dating Game" and "The Gong Show," and Giant Group Ltd., a Beverly Hills, Calif.-based cement maker, hold 9.8 percent, or the largest single block, of Media General's 27.7 million shares of Class A stock.

Redstone, Kluge step up maneuvering for Orion

By DIANE MERMIGAS Senior reporter

The cat-and-mouse game between Viacom chief Sumner Redstone and billionaire John Kluge for control of Orion Pictures Corp. accelerated last week as both men moved their stakes closer to 40 percent.

Mr. Kluge's Metromedia Inc. told the Securities and Exchange Commission on March 1 that it had raised its stake in the company to an equivalent of 39.5 percent, from a previous 28.3 percent of the common shares outstanding. Metromedia, a closely held Secaucus, N.J.-based partnership, recently filed for clearance to buy up to 50 percent of Orion.

Meanwhile, sources last week said Mr. Redstone has also been cleared to increase his take in Orion to about 36 percent

Both men purchased shares of Orion common stock on the open market and exercised warrants. Messrs. Kluge and Redstone have steadily increased their holdings in Orion over the past several months.

One of the next logical moves could be for both men to request federal clearance under the Harte-Scott-Rodino Act to accumulate more than 50 percent of Orion's stock.

However, doing so would force the investors to be more specifie about their intentions. To date, Messrs. Kluge and Redstone have only said they believe the company represents a good investment.

Many Wall Street analysts last week speculated that one of the investors eventually will make a tender offer for the company of at least $25 per share.

"We do not want to be minority shareholders in a public company. We would not want to see our investment eliminated," Mr. Redstone told ELECTRONIC MEDIA in a recent interview

"We will do what we have to to escalate and protect our investment position in Orion, which we had a stake in before we acquired Viacom," said Mr. Redstone, who took over Viacom by similar means last year.

However, Mr. Redstone cautioned, "We have not yet made a decision to acquire Orion by ourselves or with others," he said.

Mr. Redstone said that if invited to take a eat on the Orion board as a princip holder, he would decline because Viacom takes up his time.

"But just like our investment interest in Orion, I'm not saying that a month or two from now all that might change," he said.

Industry analysts say Orion would be a logical fit for Viacom, which has long wanted to add a movie studio to its diversified holdings. Mr. Kluge, who last year sold off all his broadcast- and entertainment-related assets, has been less forthcoming about his interest in Orior He was unavailable for comment Orion executives have declined to comment publicly.#

anti-takeover provisions By DIANE MERMIGAS

Senior reporter

The MCA board last week strengthened its takeover defense against possible suitors, including real-estate magnate Donald Trump

In a special meeting, the board amended its share purchase-rights agreement so that MCA Chairman Lew Wasserman has the ability to lead a leveraged buyout for the entertainment company, thereby taking it private, or to accummulate shares of stock as an anti-takeover defense.

Specifically, the board agreed to exclude Mr. Wasserman and certain related trusts and associates from a "poison pill" plan into effect after me acquires 10 percent of the company's shares.

The board said Mr. Wasserman could be exempt from the 10 percent rule because it is unlikely he "would engage in any transaction that would be to the disadvantage of stockholders.'

No further acquisition by Mr. Wasserman of the company's securities, that would expand his current 7 percent holdings, will trigger the poison pill plan, the board said

Mr. Wasserman, 74, controls more than 15 percent of MCA's outstanding shares held by friendly institutions or other company officers

When MCA's board adopted its share purchase-rights agreement last July, it stipulated that the poison pill would go into effect if anyone acquired 20 percent of the company's shares.

The plan still entitles shareholders, among other things, to purchase 760,000 shares of new preferred stock "to guard against partial tender offers and other abusive tactics." The plan states that if a potential raider acquires 20 percent of the company, MCA shareholders would be allowed to purchase the company's common stock at a substantially discounted price.

Mr. Trump, who declined comment on disclosed last month that he owned 375,000 shares of MCA stock at the time of his filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission. He also disclosed that he might acquire as much as 24.9 percent of the company's 74 million common shares, which would represent about a $1.3 billion investment.

Industry sources say Mr. Trump has received U.S. Justice Department clearance to substantially increase his stake in the company. Financial analysts speculate the 41-year-old real estate tycoon may be primarily interested in MCA's land holdings.#

NBC seeks improved clearances

By DIANE MERMIGAS Senior reporter

NBC is adopting a plan, similar to one in effect at CBS, that will redistribute some of its affiliate compensation dollars to weak dayparts in hopes of improving station clearances.

NBC said it's creating a $5 million pool of additional compensation for daytime clearances-a daypart where the network runs third in the ratings-by standardizing its payments for carriage of "The NBC Nightly News.

The network announced the compensation plan at its affiliates meeting held during the recent National Association of Television Program Executives convention in Houston.

NBC will increase its current $35 million in daytime compensation by about 14 percent, retroactive to Feb. 1, according to Pierson Mapes, president of the NBC Television Network.

"The reason we did it is that for the past four or five years, all three networks have been begging their affiliates to improve their daytime clearances, especially in the morning, and that has done very little good," Mr. Mapes said.

"This additional money, coupled with the spiraling cost of first-run syndicated programing, could provide a 'make it or break it' incentive to some sta-tions."

Under the plan, all NBC affiliates, regardless of their size or market location, will be paid 10 percent of their individual hourly compensation rate for clearing the evening news. An hourly rate is determined by such factors as market and audience size.

NBC essentially will reduce its "Nightly News"-related compensation to about $2 million annually for its more than 200 TV affiliates.

The change will not mean a reduction in the overall compensation payment made to most NBC affiliates, because the additional $5 million from "The NBC Evening News" will be shifted to stations' daytime reimbursement, Mr. Mapes said.

However, the additional funds will be used as an incentive to stations that currently pre-empt parts of NBC's daytime schedule to begin clearing all of the network's programing.

"Stations will now have to think twice before committing to a syndicated product that they may not make much off of. This is as much a defensive as an offensive mechanism," Mr. Mapes said.

Jim Sefert, NBC affiliate board chairman, said stations probably would consider taking advantage of (Continued on Page 38)

The George R. Brown Convention Center was the site of the 1988 NATPE convention. MTM breaks 'St. Elsewhere' silence

By WILLIAM MAHONEY and MARIANNE PASKOWSKI ELECTONIC MEDIA staff

HOUSTON-The 25th annual National Association of Television Program Executives convention brought the television industry together from Feb. 23 to 29 for business and fun. Here are some of the highlights and snippets of the action:

After a NATPE Saturday session, during which executives discussed "Hours, Minis and Movies: Making Them Work for You," panel member and MTM Distribution Group President Joe Indelli broke his long silence on the status of syndicating "St. Elsewhere.'

Mr. Indelli said MTM had only sold the series to about 20 stations, about half of which were allowed to buy the show on a one-year commitment instead of the standard four-year deal.

He said an unspecified cable network, believed to be Lifetime, had shown strong interest in the series, but not until after MTM had made some cash deals with stations and therefore had precluded itself from making a cable sale for the off-network series.

During the session, Mr. Indelli defended hour-long shows in syndication and insisted that there's a misperception in the marketplace that hours are not effective.

Pierson Mapes, president of the NBC Television Network, pleaded with the network's affiliates to stop pre-empting prime-time programs with syndicated specials. The forum was a closed NBC affiliates meeting during NATPE. Mr. Mapes later briefed the press.

According to Mr. Mapes, LBS Communications' "Return to the Titanic . . . Live," which was carried by many affiliates in prime time on Oct. 28, 1987, created a combined 2.7 rating drop, or $1.5 million loss in ad revenue, for all three networks.

Mr. Mapes also said that Multimedia Entertainment's Oct. 31 prime-time special, "The Search for Houdini," caused a combined three-network 2.2 rating loss, or about $1.3 million worth of ad revenue.

* * * Meanwhile, the seven NBC owned-andoperated TV stations gathered at NATPE to reiterate their policies regarding the use of fee, promotional, and video billboard items in first-run syndicated shows.

Like the NBC Television Network, the NBC-owned stations are engaged in an "anti-clutter" movement, said Wes Harris, vice president of programing for the station group.

The NBC stations will not buy first-run shows that carry fee or promotional items, except for game shows where the items are clearly associated with the production of the show. For example, a fee item on Pontiac would be allowed if the show was giving away a Pontiac to contestants, explained Mr. Harris.

On the matter of billboard announcements, the NBC stations will allow billboards on barter shows if the advertiser has already purchased two commercials within a half-hour show.

Mr. Harris said that none of the guidelines was new, but that the stations felt there was a need to summarize and formalize existing policy.

* * * Donald Trump, whose most recent acquisition target appears to be MCA, was seen in and around the convention. Mr. Trump was trailed by a crew from ABC News that captured footage for an upcoming Barbara Walters profile on "20/20." * * * First-run product was nowhere to be found at the Columbia Pictures Television booth. When asked about the status of such projects, a staff member shrugged and said, "Management still hasn't decided what to do about first-run syndication.'

Columbia Pictures parents Coca-Cola and Tri-Star dissolved Coca-Cola Telecommunications on Dec. 31 and have kept mum about the new unit's first-run plans. * * *

NATPE attendees seemed to have little enthusiasm for the Democratic presidential candidates' debate held at the convention on Feb. 28. The debate yielded little news, and some attendees expressed disappointment that candidates Michael Dukakis and Dick Gephardt were noshows.

Instead they watched the four other Democratic hopefuls-Jesse Jackson, Albert Gore, Paul Simon and Gary Hartshoot it out. In the end, though, it was Linda Ellerbee who won the most praise for her fearless manner as moderator.#

TCI President Malone denies large United Cable stock buy

By JANET STILSON

Staff reporter

NEW YORK-Reports that Tele-Communications Inc. is interested in buying another chunk of United Cable Television are exaggerated, says TCI President John Malone.

Mr. Malone told an analysts meeting here recently that TCI had filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission to increase its 24 percent stake in United Cable to as much as 49 percent.

However, Mr. Malone said that under an agreement between the two companies, TCI is allowed to increase its shares proportionately if United Cable issues additional shares to other parties.

TCI wants to narrow a gap of about 900,000 shares, or roughly 1½ percent of stock, that had occurred, he said. That would push its holdings past the 25 percent level, requiring SEC approval.

"That filing was made six weeks ago," Mr. Malone says, "before the merger discussions between United Artists (Cablesystems) and United Cable were reinitiated We can't buy anything right now because we're insiders on all these transactions."

United Artists, which is 65 percent owned by TCI, and United Cable have been discussing a merger in recent weeks, after breaking off a combination agreement after the stock market crash. A UCT-UA merger would give TCI a 46 percent stake in the combined company. The SEC filing is one of several recent occurrences affecting the size of TCI:

• On Feb. 23, two partially owned TCI companies, Western Tele-Communications and Marcus Communications, merged to form WestMarc Communications, subject to shareholder approval. The following day, TCI increased its 50.7 percent stake in the new firm to 57 percent.

• Comcast Cable Communications executives told a recent analysts meeting that the company plans to exercise an option to acquire a 20 percent holding in the TCI-owned Heritage Communications properties, pending resolution of certain tax problems.

 An agreement by a consortium of multiple cable system operators, including TCI, to purchase the Storer Communications properties for $1.65 billion fell through Feb. 26. Kohlberg, Kravis & Roberts, which owns Storer, terminated the agreement when the parties failed to re-solve the MSOs' dispute over liabilities that were unforeseen when they reached an agreement Dec. 24.

"Beauty is in the eye of the beholder," says Mr. Malone in explaining the termination. "I think the sellers felt like we weren't doing everything they wanted us to do, and the buyers felt that some of the things they represented to us weren't quite accurate and we wanted modifications and/or (liability) indemnities to make their representations accurate."#

Shelley Duvall, TBS reach programing deal

By JANET STILSON

Staff reporter

NEW YORK-Shelley Duvall's recently formed Think Entertainment reached a programing agreement last week with Turner Broadcasting System

The financial details and number of programs have yet to be worked out, says Gerald Hogan, president of TBS's entertainment network. However, the shows probably will be made-for-TV movies or miniseries, he says

"It might be 18 to 24 months before (the first Think program) Mr. Hogan says, "and it could be a prelude to (the planned debuts." network) TNT. But we don't have a firm go on that yet."

Think's productions are also slated to premiere on superstation TBS, he says

The Turner executive added that so far Turner and Think have exchanged program ideas, but haven't decided what will be produced. Jim Mullany, chief financial officer and vice president of finance at Think, says the company has reached agreements with other cable networks, but those deals haven't been announced yet.

"There's one (production) beyond the idea stage that could lead to a multiprogram deal," Mr. Mullany says.

Rights for the syndication aftermarket will be negotiated with networks on a program-by-program basis, he says

Ms. Duvall formed Think in January with the backing of several multiple cable system operators. The company plans to produce a wide variety of programing exclusively for cable debuts.#

CNN tackles Antarctic obstacles in filming expedition

By EILEEN NORRIS Special to ELECTRONIC MEDIA

CNN's science editor, Charles Crawford, considered his three-man crew extremely lucky to encounter a temperature of only 25 degrees below zero when their Navy-driven C-130 cargo plane landed at the South Pole.

The warm November temperature—it's typically minus-55 degrees Fahrenheit during the "summer" months, and that's not including the wind-chill factor—meant fewer technical problems for shooting CNN's remote reports from the ice-covered region.

CNN made the trip at the invitation of the National Science Foundation, which each year selects one TV network to visit Antarctica. CBS, for example, went in 1986.

Despite warnings that their equipment might not be able to take the extreme cold, the CNN team made the most of its trip by filming a series of seven reports without incident.

"We were told our tapes would freeze and the lenses would fog up, but we only had minor problems, like tapes flaking a little and a slight problem with the zoom lens," said Ric Blackburn, cameraman and editor in the CNN Science and Technology unit.

Sony loaned CNN two of its Betacams, which house the camera and recorder in one unit. The crew needed two cameras in case one failed in the cold, said Mr. Blackburn.

"There was no time to waste because we only had 24 hours at the South Pole, and the plane was waiting to take us back," he explained.

"Back" meant the 750-mile ride to McMurdo Station, situated in a region of the Antarctic that has milder temperatures. It's also where the U.S. Navy base and National Science Foundation are based. At McMurdo, the temperature remained a balmy 30 degrees during the crew's 10-day stay.

CNN's trip had been a long time in the making, and the preparations were painstaking. The crew, including cameraman Tyrone Edwards, even packed camera covers heated by a battery belt.

But the covers, which resembled dog sweaters, got in the way when a crew member was changing the tape in the Betacam, so they weren't of much use, Mr. Edwards said.

And lighting was never a problem because the frigid region had around-the-clock daylight until last month, when total darkness sets in for six months.

Mr. Crawford, for example, remembers doing one story at

11 p.m. so the sun would be in the right position to catch him and Mt. Erebus, an active volcane, with head-on lighting.

The story was on the global transport of pollutants: Since the region has no pollution, scientists can track air particles from its source of pollution, the volcano, fairly easily.

CNN also did a story on how the Emperor penguin can dive 1,000 feet and stay under water for up to 16 minutes and then shoot straight back out of the water. Scientists researching the penguins attached sensors on the birds' backs to help them gain a better understanding of the penguins' underwater abilities.

The science unit did another piece about a man catching fish at a depth of 1,100 feet.

The unit had to whittle its "wish list" of stories from 16 down to seven reports because of time constraints and because some of the scientists had finished their research and were back in the United States.

The crew's four months of preparation began in August, when the National Science Foundation notified CNN it had been chosen, along with a couple of print reporters, to visit Antarctica around Thanksgiving. In October, Mr. Crawford flew to Washington for an orientation session and to get an idea of what scientific research projects would be in the works when the crew was there.

"We're always looking for fresh, new material because at CNN we have 'Science and Technology Today,' a report that airs three times each weekday and a weekly review show as well," says Mr. Crawford, who visited Antarctica in 1979 when he was a science correspondent for CBS.

After passing intense physical exams, the CNN crew left Atlanta the day after Thanksgiving.

Some 30-plus hours of air time and several planes later, they arrived in New Zealand, where the National Science Foundation has a support force. There, they were outfitted with the proper clothing before they made the trip to McMurdo Station.

The crew members were each given a survival bag with extra layers of clothing in case they were caught in an ice storm, which, they were warned, could blow up any time.

Because the crew ate in a mess hall and slept in a dormitory with the scientists and military people at the base, CNN was able to hold expenses for the trip down to about $8,000, and that was mostly for air travel.

Entertainment at McMurdo consisted of grabbing a beer at the Navy officers club or tuning in to K-ICE, a closed-circuit TV station that airs old movies and an evening newscast.

"One night we watched a two-week old Monday night football game on video that someone's wife had sent," Mr. Blackburn said.

K-ICE is pretty small, so it couldn't have supplied CNN with the kind of film footage of the Antarctic the network was looking for, said Mr. Blackburn.

"Our science unit is very specialized, and it would have been impossible for (K-ICE) to get the stories we were after."

Says Mr. Crawford, "Only 10,000 or so people have visited the Antarctic in the history of the planet, so there's a lot of fascination out there with that part of the world.

"The feedback to the station has been incredible," he adds. "People want to see more."

CNN is planning to answer that interest. In the works is an untitled, half-hour special to air March 19 and again March 20 that will give viewers the "more" they've been asking for. Mr. Blackburn said the special will have little narration— "we'll just let the pictures and natural setting tell the story."#

Cox Cable, telephone firm running PPV project

C&P Telephone, a Bell Atlantic company, and Cox Cable Hampton Roads are running the country's largest trial of pay-per-view TV supported by a telephone company through automatic number identification. The yearlong project, which began in January, is offering about 90,000 Cox customers in the Virginia communities of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach the PPV service, called "First View Connection." The service is entirely automated, allowing impulse buying, and it's compatible with rotary or touch-tone dialing. Equipment in C&P's central offices will read the number dialed and the number from which the call was placed. That data will then transmit the calling-number data to the cable franchisee's computer, which then fills the order. Cable customers will be charged on their cable bills for PPV programing, and C&P will bill Cox Cable for completed PPV calls.

* * * NBC has ordered 20 Cyphers, several Paintboxes, Digital Library Systems and "Harry" digital editing systems from Quantel for graphic support when it covers the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. The equipment, which will back up the network's existing Quantel equipment, cost $3 million. The new Cyphers—the largest part of the order—will be used as the principal character generators at the control areas and at the sports venues during the Summer Games. In addition, they can integrate with the "Harry" systems to manipulate 3-D picture cutouts.

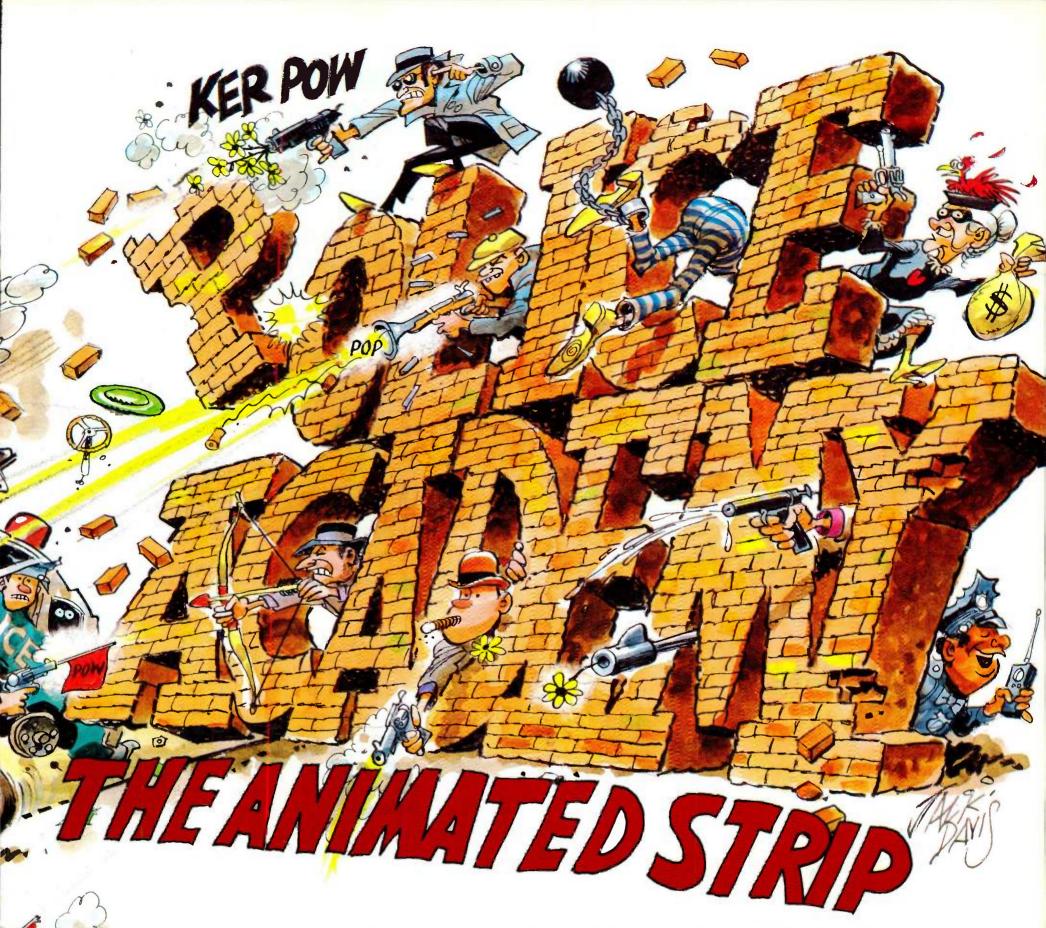

Bennett Productions, a video post-production facility, has opened in Los Angeles. The facility, at 5950 Wilshire Blvd., features a ¾-inch editing bay. The fully equipped offline bay has two Sony BVU-800s, a Convergence 195 edit controller and extensive list management support. In addition, the facility offers an eight-inch Greco disk drive that can store an outputted CMX 300 series EDL for on-line auto assembly. The entire facility is offered for $45 an hour, which doesn't include an operator.

Walters & Steinberg Productions of Lafayette, Ind., now has a 3-D animation service. Using a Cubicomp system, the company offers affordable 3-D animation, in addition to its regular video and post-production services.#

WASHINGTON—The broadcasting industry's support for the elimination of the fairness doctrine is "short-sighted and could be disastrous" for broadcasters, a key congressman said last week.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said the Federal Communications Commission, by eliminating the doctrine, has damaged the justification for regulations that the industry supports.

Among those regulations that he said are undermined are must-carry rules, which the industry has been lobbying Congress to reimpose, the prime-time access rule and network syndication restrictions.

Rep. Dingell, whose committee oversees communications matters, made his remarks at the National Association of Broadcasters' state leadership conference here last week.

The congressman vowed that Congress' fight to get the fairness doctrine reinstated "is not over

"If the Congress does not reinstate it this year," he said, "it will next year. If not the next year, then the year after." Rep. Dingell said the FCC's fairness decision has undermined the "scarcity argument," which holds that broadcast content rules are constitutionally justifiable because not everyone who wants a broadcast license can get one due to limited spectrum space.

If the courts buy the FCC's argument, other agency rules based on the same logic would be vulnerable, the congressman said.

And, he said, that's the way the Department of Justice is interpreting the FCC's fairness decision.

Among the rules he sees as being vulnerable is the prime-access rule, which requires network affiliates in the largest markets to set aside time in the early evening for non-network programing.

Network syndication rules bar the major TV networks from syndicating programing.

He also warned that the broadcast industry's support of the doctrine's demolition could work against the effort to get additional spectrum for high-definition TV.

The day after Rep. Dingell's remarks, the NAB executive committee said it had agreed to earmark $6,000 to support the FCC's elimination of the doctrine in the courts.

"There's some things we don't back off from, and one of these is our First Amendment rights," said NAB executive committee member Ted Snider.#

"Nov.87 NSI Reports no Jan 86 baia successor," Mr. Ballantyne stated in the letter, according to Mr. Gabbert.

Cash donations by Mr. Gabbert of $10,000 each to two separate charities.

Fundraisers by Mr. Gabbert's stations that would generate a minimum of $500,000 a year for charities in their service area.

Mr. Ballantyne refused to confirm the specifics of that letter, but he acknowledged stating what he termed "proposals" at Mr. Gabbert's request.

He expressed shock that Mr. Gabbert made supposedly confidential material between them public.

Mr. Ballantyne called the conditions "purely theoretical" and said the letter was "worded very specifically as a proposal" and "was supposed to be the beginning of a negotiation process."

Despite the petition's withdrawal, the FCC at press time had still refused to give Mr. Gabbert another multiple-ownership "note of exception" to allow him his third broadcast license in San Francisco, arguing that such a move wouldn't be in the public interest. The FCC's stand could have serious ramifications for Mr. Gabbert, who has agreed to pay Seattle-based Olympic Broadcasting, KHIT's owner, $1 million if the $11 million deal doesn't close by April 17.

Mr. Gabbert, who was in Washington last week lobbying for a successful repeal of the decision, met with several FCC members, including Mass Media Bureau Chief Alex Felker, who wrote the letter denying the transfer.

Until Mr. Gabbert persuaded Mr. Ballantyne to drop his petition—the second and last petition against the transfer—such contact with the FCC was prohibited. Two weeks ago, Mr. Gabbert persuaded the

Two weeks ago, Mr. Gabbert persuaded the Coalition to Save the City, an organized group of listeners who were loyal to KHIT when it was dubbed The City, to drop its petition.

He said he would restore the eclectic music format the group is trying to resurrect.

The group had Mr. Gabbert read the new agreement in principle live on his TV station and secured signed legal documents to prevent him from changing his course again, said Gaynell Rogers, a coalition board member.

Ms. Rogers, who told ELECTRONIC MEDIA her involvement in the coalition was "a labor of love," later confirmed that music recorded by her husband, Roy Rogers, was played by disc jockeys under the old format but is no longer used under the station's current regime.

Mr. Gabbert's latest strategy to push for FCC approval by the April 17 deadline comes on the heels of an earlier approach that apparently backfired.

Shortly before the FCC denied the transfer last month, Mr. Gabbert told ELECTRONIC MEDIA that he would lose the $1 million in escrow only if the FCC didn't act one way or the other by April 17.

"That was the story Jim was giving out," says his attorney, Roger Metzler. "It was always clear to me that if (the FCC) said 'no,' his money was in danger."

Asked about the discrepancy, Mr. Gabbert said: "Maybe it was misunderstood, miscommunication on my part. I don't know."

But sources close to Mr. Gabbert say he went to the press with this to pressure the FCC to act, believing it would approve the transfer.

Mr. Gabbert will say only that he was surprised by the commission's denial.

The commission had granted an exception to Mr. Gabbert in 1986 to purchase his AM station on the grounds that it would help the UHF outlet he already owned.

However, the FCC questioned how buying KHIT, which was losing more than $100,000 a month under its old format, would improve the financial picture of KOFY-TV.

Mr. Gabbert documented that KOFY is losing $1.2 million to $3.2 million a year.

However, Mr. Gabbert contends that if time on the AM and FM stations was sold together, they could generate billings of at least $6.5 million a year instead of the $1 million they'd earn separately.

Meanwhile, sources say the paperwork in the appeals process at the FCC will take at least 60 days; it's not known how long it will take the commission to act on the matter after that. The 60-day period takes Mr. Gabbert through the end of April, just shy of the May 17 date when he actually has to come up with the $1 million owed Olympic.

Says Mr. Gabbert, "We're running it to the wire."#

Local sweeps heated up by news battles

(Continued from Page 4) In prime access, WABC's "Jeopardy!" was the market leader at 7 p.m. with a 16.4/28, according to Nielsen, and a 15.2/27, according to Arbitron.

At 7:30 p.m., WCBS's "Wheel of Fortune" was the leader with a Nielsen score of 16.1/26 and an Arbitron rating of 14.8/25

WABC's 11 p.m. news benefited from a nightly Winter Olympics lead-in to lead the market's late-night newscasts. WABC's 11 p.m. news received a 12.5/25 for the Nielsen sweeps period of Feb. 4 to March 2.

WNBC's late-night news had a 10.9/22 during the sweeps, and WCBS had a 10.6/21, Nielsen said.

On the Arbitron scoreboard, which covered Feb. 3 to March 1, WABC had an 11.8/25 for its late news, WCBS had an 8.3/18 and WNBC had an 8.4/18.

LOS ANGELES

ABC-owned-and-operated KABC-TV here remained the local news ratings leader during the February sweeps, edging out NBC-owned KNBC-TV in key time periods and finishing well ahead of CBS-owned KCBS-TV.

KABC's local news even beat the network evening newscasts on both KNBC and KCBS at 6:30 p.m. At 11 p.m., according to Nielsen overnight numbers, KABC drew a 10.3/25, ahead of KNBC's 8.4/20 and KCBS's 6.4/16. According to Arbitron, KABC is on top for the 11 p.m. newscast with a 10.5/28, followed by KNBC's 7.5/20 and KCBS's 5.8/16. For these and other earlier local newscasts, KABC generally posted modest gains over the same period a year ago, while KNBC lost some ground and KCBS held firm. Among shows on independent stations, "Wheel of Fortune" remained dominant at 7 p.m. on KCOP-TV with an 11.5/18 in Nielsen and an 11.4/19 in Arbitron, although both reflect a slight decline from February 1987.

King World's other high-rated game show, "Jeopardy!," remains strong on KCOP with an 11.2/17 in Nielsen and an 11.4/19 in Arbitron.

From 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., KTLA-TV's reruns of "Magnum, P.I." generated a dominating 9.3/16 under Nielsen, while Arbitron reported an 8/15. Arbitron gave the time period to the off-network sitcoms "Three's Company" (8.6/16) and "Too Close for Comfort" (9/16) on KTTV-TV.

At 7:30 p.m., KNBC's sitcom checkerboard was defeated by KTLA's similar lineup, but both stations were behind KABC's in-house magazine "Eye On L.A." (11.3/17 under Nielsen, 8.5/14 by Arbitron) and KTTV's "M*A*S*H" (10.4/16 Nielsen, 9.1/15 Arbitron).

In the 8 p.m.-to-10 p.m. independent movie race, KTLA finished first under Arbitron, with slightly higher averages than last year, while both second-place KTTV and third-place KCOP made gains over 1987. According to Nielsen, KCOP finished ahead of KTLA, with KTTV in third place.

CHICAGO

longtime dominance of the February sweeps here. CBS-owned WBBM-TV generally maintained second place in early evening and afternoon local newscasts, with NBCowned WMAQ-TV running third.

However Nielsen and Arbitron ratings disagreed on which of WLS's rivals placed second in the important 10 p.m. local news race: Nielsen had WBBM in second place, while Arbitron had WMAQ in second.

In the 10 p.m. weeknight local news race, Nielsen reported WLS averaged a 17.9/29, to WBBM's 14.7/24 and WMAQ's 12.9/21. Arbitron said WLS averaged an 18.6/31, to WMAQ's 14/23 and WBBM's 12.9/21.

WMAQ is the only one of the three network-owned Chicago TV stations that still subscribes to Arbitron, although a number of local ad agencies still rely heavily on the service.

WLS's strong winning margin, which sometimes doubled the ratings of its competitors, held for each of its afternoon, early-evening and late-night newscasts.

The station's syndicated programs also continued to overshadow the competition: "The Oprah Winfrey Show" earned a 45 share weekdays at 9 a.m., and "Win, Lose or Draw" got a 33 share and "Jeopardy!" got a 34 share coming out of ABC's nighly rated afternoon soap operas.

The local independents' syndicated off-network series reruns, such as "Family Ties" and "Cheers," continued to outrank the half-hour 6 p.m. local newscasts on WBBM and WMAQ.

With a boost from the Winter Olympics, ABC averaged a 21/31 in prime time in Chicago during the February sweeps. WLS's 10 p.m. news generally lost several ratings and share points from that unusually high lead-in.

Both Nielsen and Arbitron said they would publish a second set of February sweep reports that will exclude Olympics-related numbers.

However, most local broadcasters said that, regardless, February could not be considered an ordinary ratings sweep period.#

about 35 telephone calls it had received. NATPE responded last week by sending out a questionnaire to its members, although it had originally locked in the February dates for 1988 and 1989 based on a similar poll several years ago.

NATPE says it can meet next year either the last week of January or the third week of February at Houston's George R. Brown Convention Center.

"The January dates condense the selling season, which begins in late fall, and reflects the availability of overnight data from a dozen markets," says the letter accompanying the latest poll.

"The February dates spread the buying season by an additional 30 days and makes demos available from the 21 markets which have January ratings books."

Some small syndicators at this year's convention say they were especially hurt by the late date because, unlike larger companies that can send sales representatives around the country, they rely heavily on selling on the exhibition floor.

Big syndicators say the late date gives them less time to boost their clearance figures before the upfront barter market opens.

And distributors say the fact that the convention fell during the February sweeps also slowed down business. "It's absolutely ludicrous to hold NATPE in the middle of the ratings sweep," said MGM/UA's Mr. Cignarelli. "You go in there as a public relations gesture because the stations have a bona fide reason to wait" to make a decision.

Besides the overall timing of the event, NATPE is also considering whether to have the convention over a weekend again or to schedule it entirely on weekdays next year.

Some NATPE-goers speculated that attendance dropped off dramatically on Sunday because executives left Houston to be home with their families.

NATPE officials had predicted as the convention got under way that atten-dance would hit 8,000, but it fell nearly 500 short of that mark.

Cable key topic at meet

By WILLIAM MAHONEY Staff reporter

Two key words kept coming up at this year's National Association of Television Program Executives convention: cable and international

More cable representatives than ever before were shopping for offnetwork series and first-run shows at the meeting—and hawking their own programs for syndication and negotiating co-production deals.

Linda Kahn, vice president of ac-quisitions for the Nickelodeon basic cable network and moderator of a convention panel, called 1988 a "wa-tershed year" for her industry at NATPE.

But at press time, syndicators said few deals had materialized in this area despite cable's increased visibility.

NATPE's biggest cable-related syndication deal involved Nickelodeon, which joined with Viacom Enterprises and Fox Television Stations to announce that the cable-ori-

In another move, NATPE has again approached the Association of Independent Television Stations about merging their exhibitions. But INTV again has refused, according to a NATPE board member who asked not to be identified. INTV's annual convention is slated for Jan. 4 to 8 at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

NATPE would also like to get involved in the screening groups that are held in December, although antitrust considerations may be a factor. Most major distributors and stations in the top 35 markets currently participate in the sessions, hosted by station groups and rep firms.

Other news coming out of the 1988 NATPE convention included:

• Four broadcast groups announced the "handshake" formation of a large ad hoc TV programing network of 17 ginated strip "Finders Keepers" will begin airing on the seven Fox-owned stations in September.

Nickelodeon will produce 130 first-run episodes of the daily children's series to be distributed on a barter basis.

Other efforts weren't as definitive. MGM/UA, for example, talked to some cable services at NATPE about producing new first-run episodes of "Sea Hunt" and "We've Got it Made" for cable, but nothing was finalized.

Meanwhile, the NATPE organization took note of cable's growing importance last week, naming David Kenin, USA Network senior vice president of programing, to the NATPE board for a one-year termthe first cable executive to be named to the NATPE board.

On the international front, the group last week also appointed its first overseas board member, Vivien Wallace, the London-based chief executive of Granada Television International.# stations. The stations, from the MCA, Chris-Craft, Westinghouse and Gaylord broadcast groups, together cover 35 percent of the country. The yet-un-named group said it will focus on breakthrough event programs, such as miniseries or specials.

· King World formed a joint venture with four station groups, Gillett, Scripps-Howard, Midwest Communications and Post-Newsweek, to test a limited number of first-run episodes of proposed shows before attempting national rollouts by the syndicator. King World has allocated $6 million for the effort

• NATPE established the new position of chairman and appointed Joseph Weber, associate director of programing for MMT Sales, to fill that post. Former NATPE Executive Director Phil Corvo was boosted to president.#

Media General to resist takeover

a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission last week, that he would consider waging a proxy fight at a May 20 annual meeting for three available seats on Media General's board, if the company rejected his offer to pay $61.50 cash for both Class A and B shares.

Also, the acquisition of 51 percent of Media General's Class A stock by Mr. Sugarman and his companies would entitle them to three of the media concern's eight board seats.

Among the other options Mr. Sugarman is considering are making an outright tender offer for the company or filing a shareholder's lawsuit.

"I will be meeting with my associates in the next several days to determine what to do," Mr. Sugarman said last week. In his SEC filing, Mr. Sugarman said if he was successful in taking over the company, he would merge Media General into an entity owned by Barris and Giant Group. He said he would likely sell some of the publishing and broadcasting firm's assets and would review the management. Mr. Sugarman declined comment on how he would finance such a buyout, except to say that he is "highly confident the necessary financing could be obtained" and that he has re-tained Bear, Stearns & Co. as a financial adviser.

Any merger of Media General would require approval from two-thirds of the Class B stock, which also elects a majority of the Media General board. Under Virginia law, a board cannot vote to merge a company if 70 percent of one class of its stock is opposed to it, Mr. Bryan said.

A 1987 family trust absolves the Bryans of having to consider tender offers for the company-something Mr. Sugarman says is "a violation of shareholder rights."

Mr. Sugarman said he objects to the dual class of stock, which Media General adopted as a takeover defense in 1966, because it gives the Bryans the ability to "deny other shareholders the unlocking of millions of dollars of investment value that rightfully belongs to them.#

NBC seeks to boost clearances

the new plan as their existing annual contract cycles for syndicated daytime programs expire by summer. Many NBC affiliates currently pre-empt some portion of the network's morning schedule with syndicated fare, including talk shows.

Affiliate clearances for morning game shows and other network variety programs dip to the low- to mid-70 percent range at all three networks, "which brings us closer to the point of not being able to justify providing a national service in that daypart," Mr. Mapes said.

Network sources estimate that if NBC's new effort succeeds, the network could realize an additional $30 million to $50 million in national ad revenues due to improved clearances

At CBS, Anthony Malara, senior vice president for the CBS Television Network, said the redistribution of compensation money for daytime and late night has been successful in improving clearances.

However, the collective improvement in national clearance for the dayparts has been marginal—only 1 percent to 2 percent.

"It's proven a very effective way of working with the stations to address the clearance problem we all face," Mr. Malara said.

For its part, ABC has no plans to follow the other networks. "We have considered engaging in the same kind of redistribution of compensation dollars, and we've decided that it is just not an effective way of improving clearances," said George Newi, ABC affiliate relations senior vice president.

ABC, instead, is resorting to continuous conversations with affiliates underscoring their responsibility to each other.#

October launch seen for TNT

That milestone, which some cable networks have taken years to reach, is vital in attracting significant advertiser interest. TBS sources close to the plan say systems will not be charged a per-subscriber rate during the first year, but would pay 15 cents per subscriber in 1989, 20 cents in 1990 and 25 cents in 1991. Concerning the debut date, Mr. Hogan says, "There are probably 20 different reasons why we chose Oct. 3, but most importantly, the Olympics will be over."

A three-step programing strategy has been planned, he said, which will ultimately see the inclusion of high-profile programing "that drives new subscribers and enhances current customer satisfaction."

That has been the goal of Mr. Turner, who told the Atlantic Cable Show in October that TNT would attempt to grab rights to such TV heavyweights as the Grammy Awards, the Olympic Games, "all of baseball" and "anything else we can think of."

Says Mr. Hogan: "Initially we'll rely on our library of acquired product. But at this first stage we'll also be engaged in the development and hopefully the production of new programing."

That period, expected to last 18 months to 30 months, will be followed with a schedule integrating new, original programing.

"But whether it will be breakthrough programing or not, I don't know," Mr. Hogan says.

The final step, about five years away, will see a prime-time schedule dominated with original fare—"250 nights a year would be original, including live sports," Mr. Hogan says.

In the battle for channel space on cable systems, TNT is expected to try to replace superstations in some markets.#

ings on the cable industry for March 30

● BRISTOL, CONN.—ESPN has formed a Japanese TV distribution firm with Mitsubishi; Saison Corp., a Japanese department store company; and Movie Television, a Japanese distributor, according to Andy Brilliant, ESPN's senior vice president of international and legal affairs. The venture will rely heavily on productions from ESPN's own schedule.

• NEW YORK—CBS and ABC news reports last week strongly hinted that a media crackdown in Israel could be forthcoming following a "CBS Evening News" broadcast of footage showing Israeli soldiers brutally beating Palestinian demonstrators.

• NEW YORK—Negotiations between Jane Wallace, formerly with CBS News, and GTG Entertainment have dissolved, according to a source, who did not want to be identified. Ms. Wallace was the leading contender for the remaining anchor position on GTG's "USA Today," which launches in syndication in September.

• NEW YORK—Recovering from surgery and respiratory failure, CBS founder William Paley last week wrote a brief tribute to "60 Minutes" that was read by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger at an International Radio and Television Society awards dinner last Thursday in New York. Mr. Paley remains hospitalized in serious condition but is said to be slowly improving.

• WASHINGTON—President Reagan has tentatively agreed to appear at the National Association of Broadcasters' annual convention on April 10 in Las Vegas, Jim McKinney, a former FCC official and current White House aide, said last week. President Reagan has never appeared in person at an NAB convention. NAB President Eddie Fritts said the association planned to present President Reagan with a "major award."

• WASHINGTON—William Lilley III, a former senior vice president at CBS, has announced he is forming Policy Communications Inc. here. The company will provide policy analysis, communications and lobbying services to corporations. From 1980 until his resignation in 1986, Mr. Lilley served as a spokesman for CBS as it fought a libel suit by Gen. William Westmoreland and a takeover attempt by Ted Turner.#

(Continued from Page 1) president to visit Joplin. So KODE carried live a speech Mr. Bush gave while he was in Joplin, a town Ms. Grzelak described as the "belt buckle of the Bible Belt." But 25 minutes into the address, KODE cut off Mr. Bush and returned to network programing.

"He'd already talked about a chicken in every pot," Ms. Grzelak said.

When the Rev. Jackson went to Hazard, Ky., it created a lot of excitement for the community and CBS affiliate WYMT-TV, a station Mr. Turner calls "the only ball game in town."

"A lot of school kids had taken off from school," he said. "His visit gave the community a lot of pride."

With 20 states and nearly a third of the delegates to the national nominating conventions at stake, Super Tuesday is the closest thing to a national primary in the United States.

Yet the sheer size of it has stretched some stations' resources to the limit.

"Texas is a big enough state already, but when you add in the region from Virginia to Oklahoma, you've really got some territory to cover," says Wendell Harris, news director at KDFW-TV in Dallas.

To tackle the territorial problem, KDFW lined up TV stations in each of the states holding primaries and caucuses to report on how the election is sizing up. Also, three KDFW reporters have been assigned to follow the presidential candidates on the campaign trail.

For many stations, Super Tuesday coverage has allowed them optimum use of their satellite uplink trucks.

Richard Ray, a KDFW reporter who has been following presidential candidates around the country since October, says, "Satellite technology has changed the business so much. You're starting to see the locals do things only the networks would do."

WPLG-TV in Miami will be hooking up tomorrow evening to a halfdozen remote sites in Florida through the Florida News Network, says Steve Wasserman, the station's vice president of news.

Some network affiliates have borrowed footage and information from the major networks, while some have helped to supply such things to the networks.

When Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., made a recent campaign stop in Waco, Texas, news footage of the event shot by Waco's KXXV-TV was aired by "ABC's World News Tonight," said KXXV News Director Don Marion.

"It was a big buzz for the station," Mr. Marion said.

Fort Hood, the largest military training base in the country, employing about 85,000 people, is located near Waco, so Rep. Gephardt was quizzed by KXXV reporters about his stand on military spending.

"Military spending has a big impact on the area," Mr. Marion said.

Calling the community "politically savvy," the news director said, "Those candidates who ignore central Texas are ignored by central Texans."

Local TV reporters on the Super Tuesday beat say the greatest difficulty has been nailing down a schedule of the candidates' whereabouts as they scramble from one state to the next.

"A lot of the candidates aren't committing beyond 36 hours in advance," says Mason Granger, news director at WMC-TV in Memphis, Tenn. "Finding out where they're going to be has been much more problematic than in the past."

The large territory the candidates must cover for Super Tuesday has forced candidates to schedule brief airport appearances, often several in a single day, to hit as many media markets as possible.

Calling these airport appearances "controlled environments," WBTV's Mr. Foy cited a recent stop in Charlotte by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., that coincided with the local mid-day newscast.

"We don't have the chance to ask the hard questions when he comes into Charlotte at 11:40 and leaves at 12:30," Mr. Foy said. "And you can't expect to get into the meat of issues with 20 other reporters there."

Many network affiliates have sent reporters to tag along with network correspondents on the campaign trail. But that has led some broadcast journalists to question whether there's a need for all of the local reporters chasing the candidates.

NBC News anchorman Tom Brokaw recently told ELECTRONIC MEDIA: "It troubles me that every local station is sending off lots of their own people to do basically the same kind of coverage that the networks are providing.

"I worry about what is not being covered in detail, about the many important local issues in these campaigns that are getting lost in the national press shuffle."

However, because Super Tuesday puts a spotlight on the South and may prove to be a do-or-die situation for some candidates, many news directors say they sense more interest in this election than the public has had in past presidential primaries.

"People get sick of politics and then they get excited by politics," says Jack Hodges, news director at KSLA-TV in Shreveport, La. "This time, there's a lot of interest in the candidates."

Not surprisingly, news directors say there's greater interest in Super Tuesday in the home states of the presidential candidates.

"When you have a native son running for president, that's an important story any way you look at it," says WMC's Mr. Granger, whose station is located in Democratic Sen. Albert Gore's home state, Tennessee.

Carol Rueppel, news director at WTKR-TV in Norfolk, Va., said her station has been focusing on the candidacy of Republican candidate Pat Robertson. The Christian Broadcasting Network, which Mr. Robertson founded, is based near Norfolk, in Virginia Beach.#

Radio fearful of 'payola' fallout gave drugs to program directors. The fourth person indicted—George Wilson Crowell, 59, of Denver, who is known in the radio industry as George Wilson—was general manager of KIQQ-FM in Los Angeles until July 1985.

Described by one radio executive last week as a "legendary programer," Mr. Crowell is accused of accepting "in excess of $100,000 in 1984 and 1985 stemming from illegal undisclosed cash payments," according to a U.S. attorney's office press release.

The term "payola" was first coined in the late 1950s when it was discovered that radio disc jockeys were accepting money from record companies in return for playing records on the air. When radio programing is paid for and such payments are not revealed to the public, the practice violates both federal law and Federal Communications Commission rules that prohibit "undisclosed payments."

According to FCC spokesman John Kamp, the commission has not been involved in a two-year payola probe by the U.S. Justice Department. Early on, the Justice Department sternly told the commission to stay out of the investigation, Mr. Kamp said.

The recent indictments accuse the four charged individuals of violating federal income tax laws as well as payola laws.

Specifically, the indictment papers say Mr. Tashjian and his wife, Valerie, principals in Ralph Tashjian Inc., made illegal payments of drugs and money from 1980 to 1985.

The indictments say the Tashjians paid $40,000, plus cocaine, to John Lee Walker, former program director at KYNO-FM in Fresno, Calif., and currently operations director and morning air personality at KCLQ-AM/FM in Fresno; $18,000, plus cocaine, to Robert Brulte, former program director at KAMZ-FM in El Paso, Texas; and cocaine only to Edward Carey, former program director at KMGX-FM in Fresno, who currently works as a program director under the name Carey Edwards at KFIV-AM/FM in Modesto, Calif. None of those named individuals was available for comment last week.

Record promoter William Craig, whose Detroit-based Bill Craig Enterprises specialized in servicing black-oriented radio stations with new records, is accused of making illegal cash payments from 1982 to 1986. Those alleged payments include $22,700 to Sidney Kennedy, former program director at WCIN-AM in Cincinnati; $31,300 to Odell Rice Jr., who was said to be on leave last week as music director for KPRS-FM in Kansas City, Mo.; and $61,500 to Larry Tinsley, program director of WAOK-AM in Atlanta, who the station said was on leave.

Also named was Chris Turner, who the government says accepted $97,150 from Mr. Craig while he was a program director at WLOK-AM in Memphis, WGIV-AM in Charlotte, N.C., and WJAX-AM in Jacksonville, Fla.

Mr. Turner, who is currently program director at WTMP-AM in Tampa, Fla., told ELECTRONIC MEDIA last week: "On the advice of my attorney, I'm making no comment whatsoever."

Ralph Tashjian, the only one of the four who had surrendered to authorities at press time, faces a maximum penalty of 23 years in prison with a total of $1.5 million in fines, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

The office said William Craig faces a possible maximum prison term of 18 years with a $1.64 million fine; Valerie Tashjian could be sentenced to up to 15 years in jail with a $1.5 million fine; and Mr. Crowell faces a possible three-year sentence with a $75,000 fine.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney in Los Angeles said Ms. Tashjian, Mr. Craig and Mr. Crowell were expected to surrender by week's end.

Radio program directors interviewed last week said payola schemes are the result of intense competition among record companies to get records added to radio station play lists, especially if those stations report their play lists to record industry trade publications such as Billboard and Radio & Records.

One major market program director, whose Contemporary Hit Radio station reports its record air play to Radio & Records, said the published play lists are "very influential."

The program director, who asked not to be identified, said that when a record is added to a major market play list as many as 70 to 80 non-reporting radio stations will add the record in their markets.

The program director, and others familiar with the radio and record industries, estimated that an independent promoter could earn $2,000 from their record company clients for each record added to a major market play list.

Some major market contemporary music stations add three or four new records per week, they said.

Radio executives contacted say they ceased working with most independent record promoters several years ago, when it was first learned that the federal government was investigating the alleged payola.

But most of the executives agreed that the current system of play list reporting has the potential to be abused.

"When you have an individual—a record promoter—who seems to have wheelbarrows full of money and he's talking to people who make $15,000 a year, there's potential for abuse," commented Robert Sieloff, vice president and general manager of KMGX-FM in Fresno, where Edward Carey worked when he allegedly accepted payola from Mr. Tashjian.

In general, the government's payola indictments revealed what some program directors have suspected all along: that some payola exists in the radio and record industries.

"I've never seen it up close or know about specific incidents, but I've heard stories for years from lots of people," said Mike Colby, program director at Boston's WZOU-FM, a CHR station.

However, Mr. Colby still feels that payola doesn't characterize the way business is usually transacted.#
