MEET US AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

LET US FURNISH YOU WITH A PROPOSAL TO FIT YOUR REQUIREMENTS AND BUDGET.

NO SPECTACLE TOO LARGE,
NO PROPOSITION TOO SMALL

FAIR SECRETARIES, MANAGERS, COMMITTEES

Advise us when your attractions committee will meet. We shall be happy to discuss your requirements in person at your convenience.

Direct from factory to you . . . thus you get more for less. We manufacture what we sell . . . thus you save.

Here's why those who know the best select INTERSTATE FIREWORKS every time!

GREATER DOLLAR-FOR-DOLLAR VALUE

1 As basic suppliers of fireworks materials, we make our own materials and manufacture practically everything that goes into our fireworks right from the ground up. Thus the larger scope of our manufacturing organization, plus our great buying power, enables us to offer you greater dollar-for-dollar value than any other company.

SHOWMANSHIP

2 There is a great deal more to putting on a successful fireworks display than just touching off so many fuses. Our Display Service can give your show real showmanship with just the professional touch it needs to make it a success.

EXPERT WORKMEN—AND WORKMANSHIP

3 All our displays are fired by expert pyrotechnists—men whose sole business is to see that you get the best show possible for your expenditure—a service that costs you nothing extra. Every Interstate Fireworks display is designed and built by experts—men who know exactly how to produce the effects and brilliant spectacles desired.

COMPLETE INSURANCE COVERAGE

4 Interstate Fireworks, as the largest concern of its kind, can and does provide complete insurance protection, an absolute necessity for any event. Thus, you take no chances, run no risk of "come-backs" when you let Interstate handle your display.

ASSURANCE OF SATISFACTION

5 It is always an assurance of satisfaction to deal with a big company—one you know to be thoroughly responsible and in a position to carry out its obligations to the fullest extent.

QUALITY

6 Highest standards of quality are maintained throughout every step of our manufacture.

WATER FOLLIES of 1951

World's Greatest Water and Stage Musical Revue

NOW AVAILABLE FOR 1951 BOOKINGS

1950 was our first year as the grandstand attraction for Fairs and we broke all records for attendance at the Oregon State Fair, Salem, Oregon; the Western Washington Fair, Puyallup, Washington, and the San Joaquin County Fair, Stockton, California. They have been using one type of entertainment for a great number of years. This is the first time they made a change and they were tremendously pleased with the amazing results (ask them).

Water Follies is ideal entertainment for sponsorship by leading organizations throughout the United States and Canada.

It is a 2½-hour musical revue in water and on stage.

We are now in a position to play two and three-day stands as well as for longer periods because of our new type of equipment.

Local newspapers are glad to support Sam Snyder's Water Follies of 1951 because it is the type of show that is different, entertaining and has loads of interesting material. The company of 50 gorgeous bathing beauties, swimming and diving champions, famous stage acts, water comedians, lines of dancing girls is loaded with items that make a reporter feel as if he is in Heaven.

A VITAL ROLE IN TROUBLED TIMES

By

CHARLES F. BRANNAN

U. S. Secretary of Agriculture

THOSE who have aided in the advancement of agriculture in the United States, including those responsible for the development of fairs, can take great satisfaction in the strong position of our agriculture today.

We have large reserve stocks of foods, backed up by the greatest capacity for farm production that we have ever known. Thru conservation measures we have stored up fertility in our soils for times of need. Our farms are highly mechanized, well stocked, in good financial condition and skillfully operated. They are linked thru farm programs and county-State-federal administrative machinery to move rapidly on any front and to shift production as the nation needs more of certain commodities and less of others.

While the nation gathers strength to resist aggression and works with other nations to create a foundation for a lasting peace, it is our job to keep on working as hard as we can for the further advancement of agriculture and for those things that provide a better living for all the people.

In the efforts toward this objective, I wish the fairs of the nation the greatest success in 1951.

By

RT. HON. JAMES G. GARDINER

Canadian Minister of Agriculture

AGRICULTURAL fairs are as old as recorded history. The first organized one in Canada was held at Windsor, N. S., in 1765. Since then fairs, predominantly agricultural, have spread westward until now there is an annual exhibition in hundreds of cities, towns and villages. They have made, and continue to make, an immeasurable contribution toward the solidarity and progress of Canada.

It would be an unusual town or city in which retail merchants did not display their wares in store windows. By holding annual fairs and exhibitions farmers, too, acquaint the public—in addition to their fellow farmers—with the products that come from the soil.

Agriculture becomes more scientific with the years, but the farmer cannot also be the scientist. It would seem then that agricultural fairs present an ideal medium thru which this scientific knowledge can be readily passed along to the farmer by visual displays, as often the written word is insufficient.

The increasing interest shown in agricultural fairs by the general public has been most marked during the last decade. This offers great opportunity to show thru exhibits something of the work of grading and standardization of food products, which in most countries is part and parcel of the everyday routine of meeting consumer requirements.

Agricultural fairs are now well-established features of community life. There seems no reason to think that they will lose ground; on the contrary, they seem likely to increase in strength and continue as valuable meeting places for farmers and as a means of acquainting the general public with something of the vital agricultural industry.

The Dallas Cotton Bowl's crowd of 75,000 is shown spilling out on the grounds after a game. Bowl exit faces the midway area, and grid fans are pictured as they jam into the fun zone. Big Saturday filled the bowl afternoon and night for top college games and enabled the fair to pile up a 289,307 attendance, the world's largest single-day gate for an annual exposition.

Grows Texas Style

Dallas Does Things in Big Way,
Fulls 'Em With King-Sized Events,
Eyes Toronto's Top Attendance

A POSTER of the Canadian National Exhibition carrying the line "The World's Largest Exposition" hangs in the publicity office of the State Fair of Texas. Before the '50 Dallas fair opened a Texas staffer had penciled in a revision, changing the description of the Toronto expo to read "The World's Second Largest Exposition."

This revision might be charged off to traditional Texas pride in things big and Texan or to the optimism of a press agent snooty for record attendance. More likely, tho, it reflects the belief in the continued growth of the Texas fair that grips its execs, staffers and patrons.

Final attendance figures this year showed that Dallas, with its 18-day gate of 2,178,519, had set a new all-time high for an annual exposition in the U. S. But the count was about 500,000 under Toronto's 14-day total. Texans persist, tho, in the belief that in some not distant year the Dallas gate will exceed Toronto and give Texas the distinction of having the world's largest annual exposition.

Progressive, imaginative management, plus the tremendous growth of the Lone Star State, is credited with the continued growth of the Dallas fair. Thruout the year department heads flush out possibilities and attractions, and once they decide on some they don't hesitate in the physical make-ready for them, or in pulling out all the stops in publicizing them.

Football in the Cotton Bowl, which is a part of the fair plant, accounts for a big slice of the gate. So does the sud attraction, this year South Pacific, which grossed $320,000 after taxes. And the ice show, which this year played to capacity or near capacity at all performances.

Those attractions, while the major ones, are but few of the many lures thrown out by the large-scaled Dallas expo. Almost every possible interest is played to. And almost every attraction is presented in traditional Texas fashion, large-scaled. Its science show of this year reflected that. The show was, indeed, huge, embracing among other things a king-sized replica of an atomic pile, a show—and a good one—in itself.

Mirroring the same large-scaled approach was the toy exhibit staged by a Dallas department store. The display, featuring miniature trains, was far and away the largest of its kind ever presented at any U. S. fair and it pulled—and held—adults and children in huge numbers.

This year the Cotton Bowl crowds exceeded in size those of previous years. On one day four undefeated college teams, three of which then were rated among the nation's top 10, clashed for a two-game attendance of 150,000 that sent the fair's gate soaring to a new single-day record high of 289,307. Thus the Dallas fair, tho it didn't outpull Toronto for the full run, bettered Toronto's all-time one-day gate peak by some 6,000 persons.

Program board, new this year, was built in the traditional Texas manner—giant-sized. It was impossible to miss seeing the board, which was changed daily. Large, easy-to-read letters were used to list the day's features, their locations, times, etc.

New feature this year was the Diamond Garter, reproduction of a Gay '90s cabaret, in which "The Drunkard's Daughter" and similar stage fare was presented.

Replica of an atomic pile was arresting high spot of atomic exhibit. Proportions of the replica are suggested by the relative size of the men shown.

Miniature atom smasher—Van De Graff generator—was part of the big American Museum exhibit at the science show. Atomic display was a repeat at the fair but was enlarged greatly over the previous year.

New feature of the Museum of Fine Arts was actual on-the-spot demonstration of wood-carving and other arts. Celebrated painting, "Washington Crossing the Delaware," borrowed from the Metropolitan Museum, New York, topped the exhibit.

Events such as the Old Fiddlers' Contest were televised live. Two Dallas stations and one Fort Worth outlet covered the fair, both live and via newsreels.

One of the top attractions was huge toy fair sponsored by Sanger Bros., Dallas department store. Display featured elaborate electric train layout and mechanical toys.

Scottish kilie band, obtained from Canada thru the sponsorship of the Plymouth division of the Chrysler Corporation, proved big hit. Unit paraded daily and also gave concerts at fair.

Daily parade around the grounds proved good attraction, but posed labor problem. About $5,000 worth of floats went into parade, but difficulty was getting volunteer personnel for floats.

LOS BANOS "MAY DAY" BUILDS

By SAM ABBOTT

California Event, Started in '78,
Continues To Gain in Stature, Pull
Under Direction of Vet Art Craner

The community goes all out to celebrate the bringing of water into the town. Floats like this are featured in the Los Banos children's parade. This float was entered by kindergarten students and won the 1950 first prize.

Getting the people into the spirit of the Los Banos celebration is given strong emphasis. Here is the Queen, with her court, being honored at a banquet. The event brought out 700 people for the dinner and show, yet the board lost about $1 on each admission.

Everyone turns out for the May Day Celebration, offices of which are set up in the City Hall. Left to right: Betty Rouff, office assistant; Elga Mastrangelo, city councilman and director of the May Day Association; Art Craner, public relations director, and Marce Janis Walth, executive secretary.

THE ANNUAL "It's May Day in Los Banos" California is an outstanding example of how a celebration can be made self-sustaining. It may also be cited as an ideal merchant-event tie-up, for this year the businessmen of the town were so enthusiastic over it that they over-subscribed their quota by 4 per cent.

With the exception of the war years, the celebration has been staged since 1878 by various organizations. Since 1938, Art Craner, who has been in charge, designates himself as "public relations director" for want of a title that better describes his responsibilities. He works under a board of 15 named in 1946.

Four Day Event

The event runs four days and invariably ends on a Sunday. While it is staged as near to May 1 as possible, this often causes complications when the calendar has not seen fit to make things come out exactly as the Los Banos board would like. However, it actually celebrates the bringing of water to the community by the Miller & Lux interests, and historians are reasonably sure that it did not happen at a certain time on a certain day. This gives the board leeway and keeps it historically authentic.

Los Banos, located on the western edge of the San Joaquin Valley, has a population of about 3,500 and there is a like number in the township. With approximately 7,000 potential customers, the May Day event draws 50,000 on closing day alone. The attendance for the other three days runs upward of 30,000.

Sunday Big

The Sunday closing day is a big event in the valley. The civic parade this year had 270 entries with representative floats from as far off as Glendale and Santa Rosa, 300 miles away to the north and south respectively. Following the parade, more than 10,000 attended the chuck wagon barbecue dinner served Western style. This was prepared right on the grounds at the site of the olden days barbecue which was known as the largest and best in the country. However, two years ago in order to facilitate the work and keep costs down the barbecue was made into a chuck wagon stew that is tasty and deliciously prepared. The huge 100-gallon cooking containers handle both the stew and the ton of Spanish style red beans that are used.

The cost of serving one person is about 90 cents, yet the paying customers part with only 50 cents. Over 5,000 tickets are given to visiting dignitaries, parade participants and the press. The entire Western dinner requires in all about two and a half hours and is a model of efficiency. To take care of the tremendous crowd that swells the city almost to a bursting point, parking is offered free and the event's management spends about $200 for parking attendants.

By simple arithmetic the loss of 40 cents on each chuck wagon stew served and the cost of parking adds up to a loss. In fact, the loss has been somewhat curtailed in recent years by the nominal charge. For years everything was free and even today the entire festival comes closer to a free fair and celebration than anything in the country. It was not until food prices soared that the original policy was discontinued.

Then—where do the merchants come in? And how is a profit made each year when a visitor who eats at the barbecue actually costs money? These are logical questions.

First of all, no merchant carries too much of the financial load in donating. It is truly a community sponsored movement. The largest contribution is about $250 and the smaller firms give according to their ability. The men's and women's furnishing stores start doing business several months before the event when the townspeople purchase their Western garb. Grocery stores sell many times their contributions to picnicers who prefer to prepare lunches and spread them in the city park rather than stand in line at the barbecue. Gasoline stations do a rushing business with the visitors. When these advantages are known, the drive is well supported.

Queen's Contest

The prime money maker is the queen's contest and this is where Craner, who is a past master at handling these competitions, comes into the picture. These events have brought the celebration as much as $10,000 in a single year and are always good for at least $1,000 even in slow times, Craner declares.

In the years that Craner has been handling the queen contests, he has worked out a formula to keep most of the girls happy most of the time. They sell votes, which push the girl closer to the throne and give the purchaser a chance to win one of many valuable prizes. The winner is the one turning in the most votes—and the most money. She receives $300 in cash, a Western and a formal outfitting from head to toe. A trip to Hollywood, where she is winned and dined and featured on the coast-to-coast radio show, Queen for a Day, is also one of her premiums. This radio tie-in is an incentive for the girls to work harder—and it also ballys the event across the nation.

Pay-Off Laras

The next four girls placing in the competitive vote selling receive cash awards of $225, $150, $100 and $50 in that order. The second and third placers are given two-day all-expense trips to San Francisco. But the others are not left out in the cold. They receive 10 per cent of the money they have collected for votes. In this way each is paid according to her efforts.

The four runners-up become the queen's court and they are feted at a dinner on the celebration's Saturday night.

Publicity a Natural

The selection of a queen is most valuable to Craner, who must think up the publicity for the celebration. There's hardly a newspaper in the United States that will not print the picture of a pretty girl, especially if she is

• ART CRANER

Who he heads the annual May Day celebration in Los Banos, Calif., he calls himself "public relations director." He has directed the event since 1938.

a contest winner. Craner realizes this and has worked it so that the number of breaks in the Los Angeles and San Francisco dailies have been beyond the comprehension of many fair men closer to these cities and handling much larger events.

Craner starts his campaign early in January with a general announcement that the event will be held on such-and-such days in May. When this story has been placed, he begins to look around for a new angle to shoot for additional editorial breaks. The next step is a visit to editors to see what they are thinking about community events such as Los Banos. Should an editor want special stories, Craner fills the order.

By then it is February and time for a second story. This is usually based upon the coming queen's contest. Clippings of the original announcement and any stories released during the interim are by now on his desk. These are checked to see what is being used. The survey serves to guide him in the preparation of future press releases.

Concentrates on Weeklies

Craner concentrates on the weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in the area north of Bakersfield and up to Santa Rosa. These papers are given extra consideration, too, when the paid advertising on the queen's contest is inserted. The space runs about 20-column inches in each of the county's papers and contains a coupon with which prospective queens may enter the contest. Things then are rolling. Future stories generally give the history of the celebration and give the program. As soon as they are available, mats are sent out to the rural publications and 8 by 10 glossy prints to the metropolitan dailies.

When the celebration comes up, the publicity is carrying itself. It is then necessary to send out only news stories.

Some of the publicity today is based upon the Merced County Spring Fair and Livestock Show staged in connection with the Los Banos celebration since 1945. This year the fair had over 1,000 head of cattle and A. E. Snider, chief of the Division of Fairs and Expositions, proclaimed it the second livestock show in California from the quality of exhibits. The fairgrounds cover six blocks, having been set up in the old Miller Park which the city leased for 99 years. Buildings were constructed on a cost plus basis and include a dormitory for 800 juniors.

Banquet Draws

When the fair opens on a Thursday, the feature of the day is the queen's banquet. It is attended by approximately 700 persons, including city, county and State officials. A 90-minute vaudeville show, this year booked by the Bert Levey Circuit, San Francisco office, is staged. As the officials are guests of the board and the admission is $2 for a $3 dinner-and-snow, the banquet is a losing proposition, too. However, it gets the people into a festive spirit!

The second day features an old torchlight parade in which the clubs and schools participate. The torches are specially made by Patrick Lizza, of the Golden State Fireworks Manufacturing Company in Redondo Beach. The event, says Craner, brings people to town and they stay for the free dances and carnival. (Crafts 20 Big Shows were featured this year.)

The third day, a Saturday, has the children's parade in the early afternoon and the final livestock judging at the fair. The Rotary Club stages its annual barbecued steak lunch for junior exhibitors and St. Olis performs with his mule, Abner, for Golden State Dairies. The children's parade this year had 2,000 entries. Merchandise prizes donated by the merchants are awarded. First prize was a Doll's Dream House costing $600 and given by the Hammond Lumber Company, a State-wide organization. The rodeo is also a Saturday feature and attracts a night crowd.

Dances Featured

Dances are staged thruout the celebration. With the exception of the free dance following the torchlight parade, admission of $1, including tax, is charged. Craner uses local bands, so that the admission charge can be set at a buck and the ball makes money.

If making money is contagious, then the Los Banos event comes by it naturally. The town and the San Joaquin Valley were converted from wastelands by the ingenuity of Henry Miller, who amassed a fortune in land and cattle. Born Henri Kreiser in Brackenheim, Germany, he left home at an early age and landed in New York. After hearing of California, he wanted to make his home there. He had no money for passage and was unable to save it from his small earnings as a butcher. However, he met a friend, a shoe salesman named Henry Miller, who had a ticket but was unable to use it. Miller turned the ticket over to Kreiser, as he was then known, and the immigrant sailed for the Golden West. He decided to use the name of Henry Miller when he read that the ticket was non-transferable.

Once in California, Miller, began to annex all of the land that he could. His holdings ran north from Bakersfield to Oakland, a distance of several hundred miles. To raise feed for his cattle, he harnessed rivers and controlled floods. His achievement supplied Los Banos with water and the celebration of 1878 was a sort of Thanksgiving event. Miller's life is told in the book, 'The Cattle King,' by Edward F. Treadwell. Published in 1931, the book was recently put back into print.

Town Moves

However, Los Banos, where the celebrations are held today was not at its present location in 1878. It was near where the town of Gustine, Calif., is now located. When the Southern Pacific put down its tracks, the town of Los Banos moved to the railroad.

For years after the initial celebration the cost of the barbecue and other festivities was paid by the Miller & Lux Company. Charles Lux, Miller's partner, preceded him to the grave by several years. Miller died in 1916 and the American Legion took over the celebration and its financing. Later the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West conducted it for four years.

Craner had no idea of ever taking charge of the Los Banos event and it was not until Mike Krekos, owner of the West Coast Shows, approached him with the proposition that he gave it any thought. The Krekos organization has been playing the date for several years and the show owner felt that it could make much more money with good promotion. Louis Leos, secretary-treasurer of the shows, lived in the town, and for this reason the shows had a personal interest there. When Craner came to Los Banos from Winters, in Yolo County, where he was born, Krekos paid his salary.

Craner an Expert

Craner was experienced in promotions and knew his way around. A native of California, his father having moved West in 1853 in the quest for gold, Craner knew enough of the Los Banos history to appreciate the colorful background. In his hometown, he had cut his eye teeth on promotion by staging an interscholastic athletic meet before he was out of high school. From there he moved into Hollywood and produced "quickie" movies for six years. Returning to the outdoor field, he joined Hagenbeck & Wallace Circus on the advance. The Los Banos job offered him the type of work he liked—and without traveling. Each year his contract has been re-signed.

The number of events that lose money are overshadowed by those that are profitable. Just as water flowed into the town nearly three-quarters of a century ago, cash flows today all because the May Day celebration brings in such a large number of people. When they start pouring in, it's pay day in Los Banos.

SETS TUB-THUMPING PATTERN

Ray Speer Doubles as Press Agent for Minn. State Fair, St. Paul Winter Carnival, Clicks at Both

GET your copy ready early—weeks, even months in advance—but hold your fire until just a couple of weeks before opening day if you want an all-inclusive, successful publicity campaign for your State or county fair. What's more, such a program of publicity is good for almost any type of entertainment activity, especially the outdoor type.

This advice comes from Ray P. Speer, superintendent of publicity for Minnesota State Fair, who has done one of the most outstanding jobs in the fair publicity and promotion field.

Not only does Speer use this method for State fair publicity, but he also has adapted it successfully in his job of directing Northwest activities and promotion and publicity for the Ice Capades as part of the annual St. Paul Winter Carnival.

Outdoor Specialist

A professional publicity man for many years, a good share of them spent publicizing outdoor-type entertainment. Speer in recent years has confined himself to the two jobs, the Minnesota State Fair in the late spring and summer and the St. Paul Winter Carnival in the fall and early winter.

Speer has been told that his publicity program differs from that of any other major fair in the nation. That it pays off is evidenced by the fact that the Minnesota Fair this year set a new all-time attendance record of 905,563, even the fair officials and others looked for a box-office decline similar to that affecting other forms of public entertainment.

While the actual publicity and promotional campaign in the newspapers and over the radio for the Minnesota fair is confined to two or three weeks, starting in early August, the job of planning the campaign and collecting the material gets under way in mid-April.

Sets Posters Early

When Speer reported for work at his State fair headquarters last spring in preparation for the 1950 annual, his first job was to get the poster material set, ordered and out of the way. That took a couple of weeks.

Next came the job of indexing the champions and grand champions of all departments of the 1949 fair, setting down their localions and working them into territories or zones similar to a prospect list worked up by a traveling salesman.

Then Speer actually turned traveling salesman. Starting the first week in May, he and a photographer spent two days a week out in the field, working zone by zone. Speer made it a point to complete contacting all prospects in a given zone before moving on to the next zone.

Prospects Routed

Prospects in each zone were routed, just as a salesman routes his customers in his territory. Before starting out on a trip Speer phoned each of his prospects to announce his forthcoming visit and make certain the person wanted was at home. This time-saving device enabled Speer and his cameraman to visit five or six prospects a day.

Speer talked with each prospect until he hit upon the idea he wanted publicized. Once he got his story, he turned his photographer loose to get the necessary pictures to go with the yarn. Sometimes as many as a dozen photographs were taken if Speer thought he had an unusually good feature story. The average yarn yielded from two to four pictures.

Back in his office after his two-day, countryside jaunt, Speer turned to preparing his copy, ordering the necessary photos, preparing the caption lines for the pictures and making the material easily available when needed. He doesn't believe in postponing the job until tomorrow, because he says that the opening date of publicity breaks comes too fast to take the chance of trying to catch up on material which still is in note form.

Stocks Features

Thus when Speer was ready to start his 1950 fair campaign he had more than 100 feature stories on file, complete with photos, ready to go. Not only does he prepare the illustrated material as he gets it, but he also works up the no-art stories and the column comment material which he has picked up on his field visits, all ready weeks in advance, against the time when it is most needed and time itself is precious.

This system, Speer contends, permits him to concentrate all of his efforts in placing his material, instead of preparing it, when he is ready to shoot his publicity fire for public consumption. Thus there is no time lost.

The plan also permits Speer to follow what to him, and to newspaper editors across the State, is an important policy: each story is exclusive and there is no duplication of features. Editors prefer exclusive yarns and knowing how Speer works, they are certain he takes care of them—with the result that they take care of him in playing the stories to the hilt.

Plugs Plentiful

When the 1950 fair opened, Speer had so much stuff prepared and on file for future use that for once he thought he had gone overboard and would be left with the equivalent of "overset." But by the fair's opening day he was digging for stuff in the bottom of the barrel and his files were bare by the time the 10-day annual closed.

Speer contends that his method of operation, in addition to all of its other good points, enables him to assemble material which is the most readable in the newspapers. They include such yarns as success stories about breeders of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, rabbits, pigeons, dogs and cats, all properly illustrated; success stories of women in sewing, baking, canning and allied endeavors; men, women and children competing in agriculture, horticulture, bee culture, 4-H Club activities, dairy, education and other departmental activities.

"There is a world of this material available, just waiting for us to catch up with it," Speer said. "I have no doubt that we have passed up a great many top yarns just because we are unable to get around as much as we want to. Even the time already spent from May on digging this stuff out isn't sufficient to permit us to do a completely rounded-out job."

Radio Coverage

Just as the needs of the State's newspapers are taken care of weeks and months in advance, so Speer makes certain that the radio stations are well protected—and in advance, too. Starting 10 days or two weeks ahead of opening day, Speer prepares a mimeographed news summary of the fair, each item complete in itself and each containing 50 to 100 words. He works up 100 to 150 such short "takes" and mails copies to every radio station in the State, as well as to all daily papers outside the Twin Cities proper.

Speer found that these summaries, the only ones of their kind prepared by any fair in

America, are used widely by radio stations starting the week before the fair opens, being fitted into news programs and feature periods as they lend themselves. One radio station news editor told Speer this year that he flipped the dial of his radio to each Twin City station within a matter of minutes one morning and caught State fair publicity on every one.

"This was the only time he had ever known where the State fair, or anything else for that matter, had gotten 100 per cent coverage by Twin Cities stations at the same time," Speer beamed.

Initial Flack Break

The 1950 fair publicity program began the first Sunday in August—after the Minneapolis Aquatennial festival was over. The initial break consisted of an advertisement, an introductory story in the general news section and a sports story in the sports pages of Minnesota's Sunday papers. The rest of the week Speer placed only one or two other stories in the daily newspapers.

The real strike came the following Sunday, less than two weeks in advance of the fair's opening. From then on everything went, as Speer began feeding stories—each one exclusive—to the newspapers. Each story was fresh and readable and he received much comment from city editors.

Meanwhile, the campaign in the country weeklies began the first week in August. Radio fire was withheld until 10 days before the fair opened. Copy in the out-State daily papers was under way by August 10.

Times Publicity

"We do not use any publicity prior to this time because we think it not only does us no good, but actually harms us," Speer explained. "First, the public does not remember the early material. Second, it rubs the bloom off the later campaign which is far more important because it is closer to the date of opening. In these modern days no publicity campaign should be for a longer period than two to three weeks, and 10 days to two weeks would be better. That is why we do not seek and really do not want any fair publicity used ahead of our own scheduled date."

By following this procedure Speer finds that he is able to get fresh copy into every department of a newspaper, very often simultaneously, with the peak coming two or three days ahead of the fair opener. This comprehensive campaign—instead of one dragged out all thru the year—has played a major role in the success of the Minnesota State Fair, he believes. Even if he weren't sure of it, he has been told as much by fair directors.

Altho Speer took over as publicity superintendent for the Minnesota fair in 1945, it wasn't until 1947 that he could show what he is capable of doing. The 1945 and 1946 fairs were called off, the first year by the war and the second because of a polio epidemic. The 1947 fair attracted 902,693, a record for the 10-day annual, far more than fair officials had anticipated. The fact that it was the first State exposition since 1944 and that 10 good days of weather helped swell the crowd was taken into consideration. But it still was better than the previous high of 762,228 paid set in 1941.

Attendance Increase

Minnesota's 10-day run was inaugurated in 1939 with an attendance of 706,619. The average yearly attendance from 1939 thru 1944 was 596,052, so the 1947 figure of 902,693 was almost 50 per cent greater than the six-year average.

In 1948 fair officials looked for a sharp decline in attendance, yet everyone was surprised when the final figures showed 855,011 payable entry thru the gates to planned. "First, the public does not remember the early material. Second, it rubs the bloom off the later campaign which is far more important because it is closer to the date of opening. In these modern days no publicity campaign should be for a longer period than two to three weeks,

Yet, despite this, attendance was 830,060, with the net profit more than $180,000.

In preparing for the 1950 fair managers were certain it was to be the drop-off year. Yet, despite the fact that both grandstands were lost the first Monday due to rain and attendance fell off and despite the shutting down of gates to vehicular traffic for more than an hour on both Sundays, a record of 905,563 was set this year. Thus, under Speer's publicity regime, the average four-year attendance from 1947 thru 1950 is 873,334, considerably above the average of the six years preceding the time he installed his new publicity set-up.

His Uniform Gate

"It is significant that during the last four years attendance seems not only to have attained a new and higher level, but to have hit a level that is quite uniform, despite changes in weather and business conditions," Speer said. "Each year we have honestly believed we would suffer a setback in attendance. The peculiar thing is that attendance has been quite constant."

For the St. Paul Winter Carnival Speer has used his State fair techniques to good advantage. As director of Northwest activities for the Winter Carnival, his principal task has been to handle the outside queen promotional work. In the last five years the carnival has been conducted on a far larger basis than that of any other organization in the country, with the exception of the Atlantic City Miss America fete.

In 1948 the Winter Carnival entertained 96 girls who had been chosen in actual local, community or regional contests in as many municipalities. In 1949, to mark the Minnesota Territorial Centennial celebration, Speer organized the State-wide Centennial Queen contest with more than 200 Minnesota communities holding legitimately sponsored and organized contests for the selection of queen candidates. This, he contends, is the largest specially organized venture of its kind ever held in America.

Traveling Salesman

Here, too, Speer turns traveling salesman as he visits each community, setting up the promotional and publicity campaign for the contest and enlisting support for the Winter Carnival. In connection with his task of promoting and publicizing the Ice Capades, which are part of the carnival program sponsored by Saintpaulites, Inc., he moves from one town to another lining up organized groups to attend the show in a body in St. Paul Auditorium. In 1950 he brought in 50 such units following contacts with local Chambers of Commerce, commercial clubs and other civic units. His 1951 goal is organized tours for 100 such communities in Minnesota and Wisconsin, as well as unified groups within the Twin Cities.

As with the State fair work, Speer starts his Winter Carnival work early, reporting on the job the last week in September. By early October he is out on the road, making his contacts, building up his feature stories and pictures as well as all other promotional activities. His 1951 goal is a complete Ice Capades sell-out.

Speer started his newspaper work after being graduated from the University of Wisconsin school of journalism in 1910. The first two years he was night editor of The Eau Claire (Wis.) Daily Leader, coming to the Twin Cities in 1911 as a reporter for the old Minneapolis Journal. He quit in 1912 and enrolled at Minnesota College of Agriculture to prepare himself for farm paper work, and was graduated in 1914. While attending college he worked as editorial and feature writer for the old Farmer's Dispatch, issued twice a week in St. Paul.

Publicity Director

Following graduation, Speer was offered the job of publicity director for Minnesota State Fair. That was in 1914. He accepted the post and stayed with it thru the 1930 fair. In 1917, he originated and developed a poster and newspaper advertising service for State fairs and expositions. That year he also became official representative of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions in Washington, working out plans for the Federal Food Administration headed by Herbert Hoover, to permit the nation's leading State fairs to co-operate with the government in furthering America's role in World War I.

Speer was out of fair work from 1930 until 1944. He operated as a free lance publicity director for the first three years. In 1934 he became head copywriter for the Stack-Goble Advertising Agency, Chicago, then one of the 10 largest agencies in the country. He was placed in charge of institutional advertising for Swift & Company, one of the agency's largest accounts. Tiring of this work in 1939, he returned to Minneapolis and publicity work.

Aquennial Fleck

During his first two year's back, Speer was associated with the Padell Publicity Bureau and in 1940-1941 was in charge of the publicity campaign for the Minneapolis Aquennial summer festival. In 1941 he became publicity director of the Minneapolis Arena where he remained until 1945. There he was in charge of publicity and promotion for the Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies for four seasons as well as Minneapolis Millers hockey promotion. Among his other tasks was publicizing the Skating Vanities at the Arena and the annual competitions of the U. S. Figure Skating Association.

As a side venture in June, 1944, Speer joined in publicizing the visit of the Dionne quintuplets to Superior, Wis., for the launching of five ships built by the Butler Ship Building Company.

Henry J. Lund, Minnesota State Fair publicity director, was anxious to go with the St. Paul Mid-western Club as executive secretary, and in 1944 he brought Speer back to the State fair organization as assistant publicity director. In 1945 Lund resigned and Speer went back to his old job as State fair publicity director. On leave of absence from the Minneapolis Arena, he intended to return there in the fall of 1945. However, by then Saintpaulites, Inc., was ready to revive the Winter Carnival and Speer was induced to handle Northwest activities and Ice Capades promotion and publicity.

Thus he had created for himself a situation where he had but two accounts to handle. Also, it gave him a far greater net return for his efforts. The two jobs have worked out well and Speer is fully content with this set-up.

BIG RALEIGH PLANS IN WORKS

$8,000,000 Program Is Launched; Legislature Provides Initial
$2,000,000, Plus 25 More Acres

Working plan for the North Carolina State Fair plant is shown above. Twenty-five acres of additional land, provided recently by the State, plus the acreage of the present ground, will be used.

The unique design of the 9,500-seat amphitheater and the suspended roof of the grandstand are depicted in this ground-level view of the working model of the $8,000,000 rebuilding program of the North Carolina State Fair.

AN $8,000,000 program, destined to make the North Carolina State Fair, Raleigh, the most ultra-modern presentation among North American annuals, is in the projected planning stage.

With the solid backing of the State, sparked by Gov. Kerr Scott, whose pronounced interest in the State's annuals, and the State Fair in particular, stems from his tenure as commissioner of agriculture, Dr. J. S. Dorton, fair manager, has launched the project which he has long fostered and which he has guided slowly with the express purpose of ultimately achieving the unusual and distinctive, without sacrificing the practical.

$2 Million Grant

A $2,000,000 grant by the last Legislature, plus the addition of 25 acres of State-owned adjoining land to relieve the cramped quarters of the present site, made it possible to embark on the full-scale program. The program, according to plans and models, will result in a complete rebuilding of the plant, with only the present principal exhibition building being retained. The present grandstand will be used as a starter for a much larger unit.

The unorthodox design of the 9,500-seat amphitheater and the grandstand, which will be enlarged from its present 3,000 capacity to 10,000, and will be covered by roofs resting on steel cables suspended from huge concrete arches or pylons, is the work of Matthew Nowicki, who was killed two months ago in an air crash in Egypt. A Polish native, Nowicki is best known for his work in connection with the rebuilding of war-gunned Warsaw and for having helped to design the United Nations building in New York. At the time of the crash, Nowicki was returning from Punjab, India, where he helped design a national capitol. He was acting head of the North Carolina State College School of Architecture.

Dorton Heads Fair

In Dr. Dorton, who has headed up the State Fair for the Department of Agriculture under the reign of Commissioner L. Y. Ballentine since before the war, the planners had a willing collaborator. The State Fair, which annually caters to some 400,000 patrons in a five-day period, has long been one of the most successful annuals in this respect. However, its plant reflected little of the glory of its popularity.

Dorton, who also operates the Cleveland County Fair, Shelby, and the Southern States Fair, Charlotte, first demonstrated his liking for streamlined modern design, supplemented by tasteful landscaping utilizing natural terrain and greenery, when he built the fair at Charlotte. At all of his events Dorton gained the reputation for constructing eye-appealing features of a decorative nature out of available materials at little or no cost.

Use Inequality

At Raleigh, for instance, he erected a number of flag poles which served to outline the mall area and which were merely peeled pine poles painted white. Each year the flag poles would be erected at a different angle and this simple maneuver served to create an entirely different effect from the year before. Also at Raleigh, Dorton constructed a waterfall using simple framing and sheet metal with the necessary pumping equipment. The comparatively small cost involved was more than justified by the sustained interest which the unit earned.

With millions of dollars now available to pay for the ideal presentation that Dorton has long planned, there will be no slanting or cutting of corners. The amphitheater will be surmounted by a flexible roof resting on steel cables suspended from two huge concrete arches. The design provides for perfect viewing of the arena from all sides. The arena floor will be elliptical in shape, measuring 220 by 128 feet.

New Grandstand Design

The existing grandstand will be enlarged to seat 10,000. There will be no obstructions for the audience since the new roof will be suspended by steel cables from two steel towers. Included in the grandstand will be a huge exhibit hall extending the length of the structure.

Elaborate landscaping plans have been drawn up for the infield area. These call for a series of pools joined by cascades leading to a small lake which will be bordered by gardens. New racing stables will be located on the far side of the track, directly opposite the grandstand.

A complete remodeling of the present main exhibition hall is also scheduled for completion in time for the 1951 event. The exterior will be altered to conform with the architectural pattern of the new units. New livestock barns and modern quarters for exhibitors and judges will be erected close to the amphitheater.

All of the foregoing improvements will cost an estimated $2,000,000. The next step in the building program calls for the erection of a huge restaurant overlooking the race track, an industrial exhibit building, a youth center, covered walkways connecting all of the principal buildings and a 100,000-seat stadium.

While the operation of the fair

The unorthodox design of the proposed 9,500-seat amphitheater and the grandstand which will be enlarged to seat 10,000 are shown in the working model of the North Carolina State Fair. Also included are other unusual features, such as the covered walks which will connect all principal structures and provide protection in all weather, and the landscaped infield area with its pools and cascades. In the upper right hand corner a portion of the proposed 100,000-seat stadium is visible. The midway is planned for the top center area.

has been profitable for a number of years, it is likely that additional State funds will be needed for the completion of the program. Altho Governor Scott has expressed keen interest in the stadium, which would be one of the largest in the country, there is the possibility that its estimated $4,000,000 cost may have to be assumed by private business interests, if it is to be built.

With schools in football's major league to draw upon, such as North Carolina, North Carolina State and Duke, all of which number their fans in the thousands, there is little doubt that the capacity of the proposed stadium could be taxed on numerous occasions.

Sylvan Setting

The enlarged grandstand, overlooking a sylvan setting, the new amphitheater and the proposed stadium would give Dorton unexcelled show places for the presentation of large-scale pageantry and other features.

Included in the additional 25 acres of ground which the annual has acquired, are the Highway Commission workshops. These will be remodeled into livestock exhibition buildings. The extra land will also make it possible for the continued expansion of the annual without cramping for some time to come.

Midway Site

The midway area will be pushed back to border close to the highway. It is designed to prevent the congestion always prevalent in the past and also to eliminate the interference of the manufactured noises with the presentation of grandstand attractions.

The annual is admirably situated on U. S. Highway No. 1, only about three miles from the heart of the city. The acquisition of land formerly held by the Highway Commission gives the fair considerable additional highway frontage. Annual's location, both in relation to Raleigh and to the State's thickly populated centers, is considered ideal for the planning and presentation of State-wide events in view of the scheduled facilities.

Architect for the project is William Henley Detrick, Inc., with Nowicki doing the design and Severude-Elstad-Krueger, engineers. Landscape architects are Edwin G. Thurlow and Lawrence A. Enersen. Architects for the youth center and bars are Hallway, Weber & Reeves.

NO! STILL VERY MUCH ALIVE!

Alive . . . and still performing the world's highest aerial act! But . . . one never knows when something may happen—so it is best to be prepared!

That's the way it is with showbusiness—best to be prepared. Every successful manager knows that—best to contract with good shows, plenty of concessions, good exhibits and thrilling, sensational acts.

That's why many engage the highest and most sensational of them all—Selden, the Stratosphere Man—a: the feature attraction of their programs. In 18 years this act has thrilled 20,000,000 people—the largest single crowd at the Chicago Tribune Show in Chicago, June 11, 1947—300,000 excited, awe-stricken people jam-packed to witness his sensational performances.

MEET SELDEN AT THE CONVENTION

- Located in Deepdale Cemetery, Lansing, Michigan. Selden's tombstone is ready and waiting.
- It was designed by Arzeno Selden himself during the off season last year.
- Made from red granite, one side illustrates the act and the other side describes the act in detail.

On May 7, 1950, when Selden presented his act in the City Park, a feature of the Lansing Mid-Century Festival, this memorial was unveiled under the rigging before a crowd of 20,000 interested spectators. Immediately after the unveiling ceremony, Selden performed his act while Paramount made a news-reel which was released internationally.

Allentown Up-Dates Plant

Sturdy Pennsylvania Event Heads Into Long-Range Modernization Program Under Prexy Singmaster

Cutting down a few trees almost anywhere would signify little change in the scheme of things. On the grounds of the Great Allentown (Pa.) Fair, however, the tree chopping denoted a new era and the beginning of a revitalization program that can in time rejuvenate the event.

For many years Allentown has been a trite presentation which resisted change. Notwithstanding this, the annual never wanted for popularity since crowds, with fair weather prevailing, continued on a par with the best in the past. Even with bad weather, the annual did not flounder and in good years increases in attendance and business were registered.

Refurbish Plant

But the results in modern times do not represent the potential for this annual which has one of the finest locations in the land. It is with this in mind that the present exec started this year to refurbish and modernize the plant.

There wasn't much time before the September running of the annual and not enough money to launch the whole program. But a significant start was made, principally by chopping and wrecking. There are still plenty of trees left on the grounds, but the 90 or so that were eliminated enlarged the midway and concession area about a third. The streets, which on any good day in the past rapidly became as crowded as Times Square on New Year's Eve, were widened eight feet.

Singmaster Heads Fair

The clearing of midway space was just a starter for President Howard Singmaster, who was elected to the top executive post last winter in a contest of great local interest. Singmaster, a native of Allentown, earned considerable wealth in the foundry business, staffed his plant so that the enterprise runs with clock-like precision, and set his sights on running the Allentown Fair. It was his intention to turn the big annual picnic, which 332 stockholders and many thousands of patrons attend, into a streamlined modern presentation without sacrificing the intrinsic values which have endeared the fair to the public. The co-operation received from the press and public denotes approval.

Singmaster lost little time after his election before heading for other annuals to see what he could pick up in the way of ideas. Just three weeks before his own gates opened he was in Ottawa at the Central Canada Exhibition. The special Kiddieland section established there a year ago looked good and he decided to adopt it. Space for the moppet spot was allotted in the grove, which might normally have earned additional concession revenues. Rides and benches were provided for the small fry and their parents apart from the bustle of the major midway zones. A special decorative front dressed up the area.

A covered grandstand stage was also decided upon for this year's annual. The decision was a wise one, since the weather for the run was bad. The canvas topping saved the annual an estimated $25,000 this year and more than paid for itself. Work on the covering continued right up to the last minute and its operation was not perfect, but execs are confident that all of the bugs will be worked out by next year.

Grandstand Stage Covered

While Singmaster describes the grandstand change covering as the principal change made in time for this year's annual, the demolition of the old horse barns might run it a close second. Delapidated stabling designed to house 127 horses was torn down. The buildings were beyond repair and it was thought that replacing the structures would be an unnecessary expense since the fair operates for only five days each year. The use of tents, begun this year, will be continued in the future. The tents are rented and the supplier carries all of the necessary insurance and supplies all of the needed protection for safeguarding the animals.

Singmaster said that plans call for a coliseum that will seat 12,000 and cost $3,000,000. The building will have facilities for a farmer's market in the basement. The arena will be suitable for conventions, ice hockey, basketball, horse shows, indoor circuses and other events on a year-round basis. It will have a completely equipped commissary department.

The addition of the proposed coliseum would make the fairgrounds even more of a focal point than it is today. The plant is situated less than a dozen blocks from the heart of the business district. The city has grown up around it and the regular scheduling of events other than the fair has made it well known to everyone for miles around.

A comparatively small improvement like the paving of the paddock area in front of the 8,000 seat grandstand won considerable favorable comment. So, too, did the installation of a modern rest room in the FFA building and the general brightening of the interior of exhibit buildings which had been allowed to become dowdy.

Old Bins, To Go

The improvements accomplished to date, while considerable in view of the lethargy of the past, have merely sparked the imagination of Singmaster and his associates. According to plan, the future will see the elimination of all antiquated exhibit buildings and erection of new units. Trees beyond redemption will be removed but the grove, where thousands of family groups have rested and picnicked, will be preserved.

Also charted is the removal of the annual's old office building at 17th and Chew streets in the business section. It will be replaced with a beautiful ornamental memorial gate to the grounds and all offices would be located on the grounds. Currently the downtown office and the office on the grounds are only about 12 blocks apart. With the operation of the fair each year it becomes necessary to move all of the equipment to the grounds and then back to the other offices at the completion of the event. This obvious inefficiency ruts Singmaster, a good business man, the wrong way.

Next year the grandstand is slated for some renovating which it hasn't had for too long. The exhibit area under the stands will be refurbished and it is likely that the present auto exhibits will be relegated to tents to make room for a better variety of display. Drinking fountains and more modernized toilet facilities are planned.

The annual is owned and operated by a non-profit sharing organization with 332 stockholders. Altho the stock has a par value of only $10, a share of stock today could not be bought for less than $375. All the stockholders get, other than their pride in this community event, is $15 worth of gate admission tickets and the same amount in grandstand tickets annually.

A Family Affair

The 48-acre plant, which would probably be entirely inadequate except for its location which enables most patrons to leave their automobiles at home, will be retained. The 230-acre tract which the association owns on the outskirts of town is bordered by two main highways and bisected by a railroad. In the future it may be disposed of as industrial sites.

No matter what changes are engineered at the Allentown Fair, it is unlikely that the annual will ever lose any of its character. The annual is a family affair and the public just wouldn't let it happen.

President and Mrs. Howard Singmaster daily roam the length of the Allentown fairgrounds to inspect and supervise every phase of operation.

Principal midways on the grounds of the Allentown Fair have been widened about eight feet to provide patrons with considerable room, as pictured above.

Grandstand patronage at the Allentown Fair is one of the annual's principal sources of revenue. The night show is generally a sell-out after opening night, with standing room offered in the paddock and folding chairs on the race track.

The elimination of some 90 trees, such as those visible in the background, have made it possible for midway units to be erected properly for the first time, also the show again had to cut its usual four Ferris Wheels to two.

NEW, OLD BLEND IN N. MEX.

Distinctive Adobe Architecture Gives Albuquerque Plant Unique Appearance; More Expansion Set

Entrance to the New Mexico State Fair introduces visitors to the unique architecture of this growing Southwestern event, which this season invested $200,000 in new additions.

ADOBE architecture and modern needs are blended superbly in the plant of the New Mexico State Fair, Albuquerque.

And the powers that be intend to keep it that way.

This year, additions to the distinctive grounds included a $225,000 youth building, a $25,000 air-conditioned administration building, a $98,000 grandstand entrance and additions to the grandstand and paddock — all in picturesque Southwestern architecture.

Built along low, straight lines, the glistening white buildings adhere closely to the style of adobe houses of early Indians in the New Mexico area. Yet, they embrace all of the latest conveniences for their respective needs.

Unique Money Room

As novel as the fair's architecture is its system for routing admission coin to the coffers. A counting room is located below the entrance and tubes leading from the turnstiles route the money directly to the basement room. There sacks are attached to the tubes to receive the money. Mechanization of the monetary system was doubly important this year, when crowds inserted coins into the fair's stikes at a record rate.

The new Youth Hall provides dining facilities for feeding 1,000 at tables or 1,200 cafeteria-style plus sleeping accommodations for 600 boys and 600 girls. These quarters are for youngsters who bring ranch and farm exhibits to the fair. In addition, the new building contains a large auditorium for youth activities. In all, it contains 37,760 square feet.

Rodeo Fills Stands

As might be expected in New Mexico, the fair's rodeo is a major attraction that draws outstanding crowds. For this season, the expansion program included increasing the grandstand capacity by one-third. However, rodeo fans still filled all seats for the nine-day run.

Similarly, the expanding annual was unable to meet the growing demand for space for school exhibits this year, and as a result the management has added plans for a Hall of Education to the list of improvements scheduled for next year.

Adobe design is used throught the New Mexico plant, which is highlighted by gateways, patios and walls typical of early Spanish-Indian days of the State.

Counting room makes for efficient handling of coins at Albuquerque. Pipes route money from turnstiles directly to sacks in the basement room.

Youth hall at New Mexico, new this year, provides quarters for 1,200 youngsters as well as a large auditorium. A hall of education is scheduled for construction next year.

Landscaping project has added much to the appearance of the New Mexico layout. The streets and parking areas were paved as a part of the 1950 improvement project.

Relatively few column supports give patrons practically unobscured vision. Roof is hung on cantilever trusses supported by small number of steel columns.

CNE--Show Place Plus

Whopping $1,200,000 Grosses
By Night Shows in Three Years;
Houses Eateries, Exhibits, Too

THREE years after its completion the 22,000-capacity $3,500,000 grandstand at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, remains as outstanding as when it was dedicated.

If anything, it is even more notable, for its grosses have been fabulous. Within three years night shows at the CNE have grossed close to $1,200,000, a remarkable total for 42 nights of operation.

The first year the night show, headed by Olsen and Johnson, grossed more than $350,000; the second year the show, again headed by Olsen and Johnson, amassed $395,000, and this year the Danny Kaye-headlined bill grossed a whopping $415,000.

Actually the night show on most nights at the CNE plays to more than 22,000, as seats placed on risers in front of the stand has enabled the seating of more than 28,000 in all for many performances.

The productions offered are built to massive proportions; they have to be. The stand is 800 feet long, with a height of 75 feet. The stage is of proportionate size, 350 feet wide, 132 feet deep, with a circular front. Scenery is mounted on 70-foot trucks which move on rails.

Vision from the grandstand is practically unobstructed, the roof being hung on steel cantilever trusses and supported by only a few narrow steel columns. Lighting facilities are enormous, power-wise and numerically, and brilliant lighting effects are achieved and are easily discernible from even the remote corners of the huge stand. Similarly, the sound system is superb, conveying sound from the stage with great fidelity to the far upper ends of the stand.

The massive stand is far more than a show place. Under its rising tiers are two large dining halls, each capable of seating 1,000; an exhibition hall with 15,000 square feet of floor space, a permanent storage room, one story off the ground, that runs the length of the building, plus five dressing rooms for contestants, plus a battery of lavatories.

Commodious eateries, large exhibit area, storage space, and rest and dressing rooms are provided underneath the rising tiers of seats. Portion of stand's front pictured shows an entrance to exhibit hall.

Brilliant lighting effects for the lavish night shows are provided by a huge battery of lights mounted beneath the stand's roof. Scores of lights are used for color shading, with eight big spots used to highpoint numbers.

SQUARES FOR GATE HIKES

By JESSE SAFLEY

The Nashville Banner Farm Editor

Tenn. Fairs, Nashville Newspaper
Square Dance Tie-ins Up Opening
Day Turnouts; Hypoos State Event

THE LARGEST first-day attendance in the history of the 45-year-old Tennessee State Fair turned out this year—and the only new attraction was a square dance contest.

Featuring the nation's oldest form of group recreation and executing the dance steps used by participants' grandfathers and grandmothers, a dozen dance teams performed before over 8,000 spectators in the grandstand. The new feature was sponsored jointly by the fair board and The Nashville Banner, afternoon newspaper.

This event was more than just a contest; it was the grand finale run-off of a square dance contest program which had been conducted by county fairs earlier in the season. Teams participating at the State Fair finals were those which previously had won their county fair competitions. It was The Banner which instituted the program.

Roosts County Fairs

County agricultural exhibitions everywhere in Tennessee needed a shot in the arm, something to increase interest and attendance at the annual events. Earlier in the year The Banner had featured 11 all-free square dance contests thruout Middle Tennessee. Climaxing the three-month competition was a grand final contest, which was staged with success.

In its own contest, The Banner had offered some $3,500 in cash prizes with a $500 grand prize. A similar amount was spent for promoting and staging the various district contests and finals. It was free in all respects, and 112 teams participated. Over 40,000 were estimated to have seen one or more of the programs.

The idea developed that square dancing might be the answer county fair officials had been seeking.

The Banner contacted fair officials in 22 counties and, as a result, initiated 19 county fair contests. The three fairs which did not add square dancing were those with free gates and they had found attendance was not a problem.

Despite a rainy season for the county fairs, the dance ventures proved highly successful. Many annuals experienced their largest attendance on the night of their contests. Most of the competitions were conducted on opening night or on the night which in the past had proved weakest from an attendance standpoint.

Almost without exception fair officials reported success. Typical comments included: "The largest opening night's attendance in history." It provided us with a crowd on the night we needed it most." "We never realized the possibility of such a venture." "With a little more effort this will be a big thing next year."

Officials of the Tennessee State Fair were in a similar frame of mind after the attendance for the State event boomed 25 per cent ahead of its previous opening-day total to overcome much of the first day's weakness.

Dance Draws Heavily

They—like a good many of the county fair officials—had hoped the square dance event would be successful. But thruout the fair's advance publicity campaign most of the attention had been given to other activities. Square dancing seldom got into the publicity spotlight.

Despite this, fairgoers knew of the dancing program. The result was that on the night of the contest finals a large percentage of the crowd was on hand at the grandstand to watch the contest and support the teams from their home counties. On the same night, attendance at other attractions on the fairgrounds was smaller.

Participating teams contributed color as well as attendance to fairgrounds. Most teams—or squares—appeared in bright costumes of gingham and jeans.

Exhibitions Continue

Completion of the contest finals and presentation of the awards did not wind up the square dancing at the State Fair. After the Monday night event, each night for the remainder of the week the recreation hall at the grounds was open for dancing. This phase, too, was sponsored jointly by the fair board and The Banner, with the paper handling direction.

Each afternoon square dance music was played at the hall from 2 to 4, and each evening from 8 to 11 there was more dancing.

At the nightly sessions during the remainder of the fair week, from one to three dance teams, consisting of from 12 to 20 persons each, were featured in special exhibition dancing. Some teams came from within the city of Nashville while others came from as far away as 120 miles to take part in the exhibitions and see the fair.

The entire attraction was a free event. No charges were made for hearing the afternoon music sessions or to see the dancing in the evenings. The seats in the recreation hall were free as long as they lasted.

3,000 Participants

Spectators came and went as they pleased. While some stayed for part of the demonstration dancing, others stayed for the entire evening and some returned on several evenings. At least 3,000 actually participated in the dancing.

As an additional feature for fairs, both large and small, square dancing, Tennessee style, proved to be popular entertainment. The event developed as a part of a recent return of great popularity for square dancing thruout the country as well as Tennessee.

Today there are over 125 square dance teams in Middle Tennessee which are actively promoting and enjoying his kind of community recreation to a degree heretofore not seen. That the teams are popular in cities as well as in rural areas and among children and adults of all ages was illustrated by the turnouts for the Tennessee fair contests.

About 8,000 persons filled the Tennessee State Fair grandstand to see square dance contest finals. About 40,000 saw demonstrations later in week.

Afternoon music and evening demonstration dancing kept the event operating to big crowds all during the week. Entire event was free to spectators. Teams came from a 120-mile radius to participate.

Dance teams wore colorful costumes which drew attention on the fairgrounds. Here's one of the winning teams.

Interior of the recreation hall was scene of dancing after opening night's contest finale. More than 3,000 dancers took part.

Yolo Thrives on Co-Operation

Secretary-Manager Stuart Waite
Harnesses Efforts of Many To Rear
Strong Annual Near Woodland, Calif.

CALIFORNIA'S Third Annual Yolo County Fair and Sugar Beet Festival was at its height, when the door to Stuart Waite's office opened and in walked John Rogers and Phil Collins.

First, Rogers directed a question concerning the livestock exhibits, then Collins asked something about a financial arrangement that had been made. The questions answered, they returned to their chores around the fairgrounds.

Ordinarily there would be nothing unusual about two men questioning a secretary-manager. However, this particular incident was interesting, for Rogers, in addition to serving as a director and livestock superintendent, is a member of the Yolo County Board of Supervisors and at one time operated a large cattle ranch. Collins also serves on the fair board and is mayor of Woodland, Calif., near which city the fair is held. Both men have plenty to keep them busy, yet they find time to serve the fair—without pay.

While the activities of the two are noted here, their work is matched by several others in the county. The success of the Yolo event can be directly attributed to the co-operation given by outstanding countians.

Co-Operation Results

The Yolo County Fair is an example of what combining energy and co-operation can accomplish. Located just outside Woodland corporate limits, the grounds cover 55 acres, 40 of which were in the original tract. Last year 15 acres more were purchased and these and 10 of the initial plot were used for automobile parking.

As success of a fair is gauged by attendance, the growth here is interesting. In 1948, the first event following the war, Yolo pulled 16,000. Last year the mark was 35,000, and in 1950 the run was extended from three to four days and pulled 40,000 visitors.

As there is no admission charge and Yolo is designated as a "free fair," the interpretation of this extends further than the front gate. Some of Waite's departmental heads serve without pay and are people with wide experience. This manager considers himself fortunate for being able to obtain such know-how—and at no cost.

Enters Fair Biz

Waite and Yolo entered the fair business at the same time in 1940. He had been teaching school in Modoc County and had moved to Colusa to take charge of the fair there when the manager's post was open. He directed the annual for two years for, like other fairs, its schedule was interrupted by the war. In 1946 Waite was named to the secretary-manager post of the Siskiyou County event in Yreka. He staged the fair that year and the one following. In the fall of 1947 he went to Yolo and began working on the 1948 attraction.

When Waite acquired his first fair job, Yolo also acquired its site. It was located just outside the city limits on a plot owned by a man named Blowers. He was a friend of Luther Burbank's and the first Emperor Grapes in California were planted on this farm. The new secretary set to work to build a fair plant which is rated as one of the best in the State today.

Believing that Woodland, located in the nation's richest farming section, should have a fair in keeping with its agricultural standing, Waite set to work to effect the parallel. Sewer lines were installed along with lights and water. These were put in with the idea of making the grounds a year-round community center. At no time during the planning did Waite expect to make it anything but a strong, well-rounded affair. It was not to be an exposition.

Building Goes On

Today there are 20 buildings and another started the day following the close of this year's run. In all of the structures, there is a total of over 75,000 square feet. The new exhibit hall has a floor area of 24,000 square feet and seats 5,000 for basketball. Other sports events are to be held in it. During the 1951 fair, commercial exhibits will be housed.

The completion of the construction falls right into Waite's plans for 52-week use of the grounds. This fall the area was used by five different organizations for their outings and celebrations. These included the county employees, Mexican and Portuguese groups.

To stimulate interest among the town people, Waite purchased four kiddie rides that the organizations may use during their affairs. They are rented to the sponsors and have been used to help defray the cost of the day's activities. When the devices are not in use, Waite installs them in Woodland at some prominent spot to rally the fair or other resident-supported project.

Never Misses Bet

Yolo is only 25 miles from Sacramento, the scene of the California State Fair. The Woodland event is held only a matter of days before the State's big event. To some this may be a disadvantage. Waite has never looked at it in this light. He meets this asserted competition by making his annual a hometown affair. To do so he never misses a bet.

Last June when the Korean war started and grocery shelves were being raided for sugar, Waite capitalized on the situation. With the Spreckels Sugar Company, one of the largest operators in the section, and many growers being supported by the sale of sugar beets to this firm, the tie-up was a natural. Waite secured a large amount of sugar and had the queen of the fair give it away on her trip to Hollywood that she won as one of her prizes. The free sugar pointed up Yolo's million-dollar industry and proved there was no sugar shortage.

The secretary-manager of the Yolo County Fair believes in giving concessionaires a break. When but weather slashed rodeo matinee attendance, he staged one for free so concessionaires could sell beer.

Close co-operation between the fair and industry works in another way. With sugar beets a principal crop, Waite extended the event's title to include Sugar Beet Festival and created a friendly looking but comical character that he appropriately named "Senor Sugar."

Establishes Scholarship

The Spreckels Company entered wholeheartedly into the co-operative plan and established a scholarship. The refinery was also thrown open to visitors during the weekdays of the fair.

Waite, no doubt, has as many problems of operation as any secretary-manager. However, there is one thing certain, he takes them in their stride. On the Saturday afternoon of the 1950 fair, when the thermometer was hitting around 106 degrees, it was entirely too hot for people to sit in the 2,500-seater grandstand and watch the rodeo. The crowd was small and the prospects for a profitable audience at the Sunday matinee were not too encouraging. A suggestion was made that the performance be canceled. Waite countered with the solution: the rodeo would be free. The heat would sell beer; the arena's concessionaires would have a good opportunity to make some money.

Also the fair runs only four days, there are 51 weekly planning meetings. Another enthusiastic worker is Leonard Payne, Chamber of Commerce secretary. During the event, he and Mrs. Payne handle the ballyhoo for the rodeo and also are active in the staging of the events. Because of Payne's position and his interest in Yolo, ideas for making the next annual bigger and better than ever were discussed.

Everybody Attends

Woodland has a population of 15,000 and the city and county have 40,000. As the fair draws this latter figure, just about everyone in Yolo attends. Waite makes every effort to get them there.

This is done in various ways. In Woodland the fair is discussed by the townspeople each morning following the Chamber of Commerce meetings. A story on the Chamber's session appears in the local newspaper and nearly always includes some mention of the fair. This year The Woodland Democrat issued a 90-page special edition on the annual. In addition to the regular subscribers, the supplement was mailed to 7,500 box holders on the rural routes. Everyone in the area knew there was a Yolo County Fair.

California's Yolo County Fair and Sugar Beet Festival, near Woodland, has a 55-acre plant, uses 25 acres for parking cars. Operated on a free-gate basis, the event has grown steadily since World War II, and it continues to add to its facilities. Immediately after the close of the 1950 event, construction was started on a new building, to be used for commercial exhibits during the fair and for sports events in the off season. The structure provides seating for 5,000 at a basketball game.

Facts and Figures

The Billboard's annual Statistical Directory of Fairs long ago proved its great worth as a guide not only to concessionaires, exhibitors, attractions, etc., but to fair management.

Each year since its inception the Directory has grown in size, reflecting the mounting value placed upon it by fairs who respond to survey requests from The Billboard.

Coupled with the compilation of Still-Date Facilities, presented elsewhere in this issue, the Directory is extremely valuable in obtaining attractions for events other than at fair time. Concessionaires, attractions and show people generally use the two listings in determining still-date possibilities. And, those concerned with showing, working or performing at fairs, find it important in assaying the relative strength of fairs.

To fair execs, the Directory serves as a guide, too. It throws out possible suggestions on how to operate, suggestions gleaned from the operations of other fairs as presented briefly and statistically in the Directory.

The compilation of the Directory is but one of the many features presented in The Billboard, not only in the Cavalcade, but each week throughout the year as a service to fairs of the U. S. and Canada.

NEW COLISEUM FILLED TO CAPACITY

The Arkansas Livestock Show and Rodeo after eleven successful years is now readying for 1951 when the brand-new suspension-roof Coliseum seating 10,000 Rodeo patrons will be completely finished.

This year's record number of 6,000 livestock exhibits again proved that Arkansas' per capita income is rising much faster than the rate for the whole nation.

And it proves that the Arkansas Livestock Show is the biggest thing of its kind the Wonder State has ever seen.

Famous the World Over!

America's Model Fair Iowa's Biggest Event

For over 90 years the Iowa State Fair has been the big show of the year for the richest agricultural State in the land. But it's more than an Iowa show now. The Iowa State Fair, celebrated in story and song, motion pictures and magazines, belongs to the world.

This is the original "State Fair" . . . the original of Phil Stone's fictional masterpiece . . . sung and celebrated in two smash-hit movies . . . more often featured in popular national magazines than any other event of its kind in the country.

And next year, on a grander scale than ever before, the Iowa State Fair will be the capital of the amusement world from August 23 to September 3.

Thanks for Your Patronage in the Past

Fireworks picture above represents two mammoth Gerandoles or large Flying Saucers produced at Los Angeles Coliseum July 4th American Legion Show, the largest fireworks display in America. We have produced this grand display for 15 years. We also supply fireworks to Centennials, Exposition Celebrations and Fairs, including the California State Fair. We specialize in events such as "The Battle of Midway," "Hellzapoppin," "The Taj Mahal," Sulky and Running Races, Fountains, Flying Saucers and many other special sets, changing program nightly. No price too large or too small for us to handle, and no distance too far from our factory to your location.

Your request for catalog will always receive our prompt attention.

SCOUT SHOW A "NATURAL"

Covered wagon was the central attraction for one Boy Scout exhibit at the Michigan State Fair this year. About 200 youths took part.

Detroit Boys Org Stages Double-Feature Exhibit to Draw Throng in Third Year at Michigan Fair

INDIAN dances were an important showmanship factor in the Boy Scout activities at Michigan State Fair at Detroit this season. The authentic dances by Scouts in homemade costumes were scheduled early in the three-day shows because of colorful regalia and sound of the tom-toms served as bally to draw and hold the crowds.

Up to 2,500 persons caught each of the hour-long shows, which featured what Scout leaders called the "circus or vaudeville side of Scouting." Equally interesting displays were included in the ground section of the Scout event. The twin bills attracted an estimated 15,000 persons in three days.

Widespread family interest and the fact that many male fairgoers formerly were Boy Scouts themselves make the Scouting show a "natural" for the fair.

Third Year at Mich.

Having a Scouting encampment on the grounds is not a new idea and has been used by other annuals, such as Wisconsin and Illinois, for some time. At Michigan, the activity was in its third year and thus was beyond the trial stage. It was limited to three days because of the conflict between the latter part of the fair with the opening of school.

The exhibition is presented entirely by the Scouts and their leaders and has been remarkably successful in view of relatively light special promotion given to it. The entire event was directed by Frank B. Specht, district Scout executive.

The ground section of the show was continuous and included demonstrations of Scouting tools and techniques, ropemaking, various crafts and troop activities.

Rope-Making Show
One troop demonstrated ropemaking with a machine its members had constructed. They went thru the stages from light binder twine to ropes of one and two-inch diameters.

A group of Explorer Scouts (age 14-18) did "wilderness cooking" on the grounds. A diversified menu was prepared each noon and evening. One day the menu called for flapjacks and after the Scouts prepared them over an open camp fire they were passed out to persons watching the demonstration.

A Negro troop exhibited handicraft work of a fine order, including ash trays, lamp bases and letter openers made of steer horns. The stage shows included skits by the Cub Scouts (age 8-10), and another group demonstrated square dancing. Sea Scouts, oldest age group in the organization, presented special ceremonies. The 11-14 age group showed drill formations and signalling methods.

Explorer Scouts' demonstrations of firemaking techniques utilized true showmanship in a process for throwing a spark about eight feet into a pile of tinder.

Boys were from the Detroit area for the most part because of their proximity to the fair and the limited budget with which the operation was carried out. About 200 youths took part and about 40 camped overnight on the grounds. Future plans call for a larger camp site.

Costumes and tom-toms for Indian dances served to draw crowds for the Boy Scout shows three times daily. Up to 2,500 persons attended each of the shows.

Scouts prepared their own meals on the fairgrounds. When flapjacks were on the chuck wagon menu, fair visitors shared in the feast.

D. Moines Adds 428G Dorm

Structure Houses 550 Girls;
Fills Long-Time Need, Dream
Of Late President J. P. Mullen

UNTIL this year, Iowa State Fair, Des Moines, long distinguished, among other things, for its vast youth program was handicapped by lack of housing facilities for its young exhibitors. However, a new $428,000 girls' dormitory completed prior to the '50 fair, filled in this gap and gave added impetus to the broad-scaled youth participation.

Completed after two years of construction, the building culminated 12 years of planning and fulfilled the dreams of the late J. P. Mullen, member, president and president-emeritus of the fair board for 36 years. A bronze plaque in his memory now hangs in the main lobby of the building.

Houses 550

The big 277 by 113-foot concrete and steel three-story structure is U-shaped with two dormitory wings running back toward the cutaway hillsides on each side of the light court. At capacity it houses 550 girls, 40 to a room. Each room with its double-decker beds has two baths, both well equipped; built-in dressing tables, drinking fountain and a sick bay. The multi-windowed dormitory is fully insect-proofed by copper screening thruout. No dining room facilities were incorporated due to the spacious cafeteria in the nearby boys' 4-R building. This huge dining hall feeds 700 boys and girls at one sitting with a complete meal served for the low price of 50 cents.

In addition to the girls' living quarters, accommodations for county extension agents, who previously lived off the grounds during fair week, occupy the space over the lobby on the third floor.

Dedication of the building and delivery of the key by H. L. Pike, fair president, to the girls in blue was one of the highlights of this year's youth program at the annual.

Venus-Apollo Contest Draws

New Detroit Competition Sparks New-Group Interest, Leads Trio of Press Deals

NOVEL "Venus and Apollo" contest at the Michigan State Fair this year served to build interest among new groups for the Detroit annual. It was one of three new contests inaugurated this season, each being operated thru a tie-in with a different Detroit newspaper.

Open to anyone over 14, the event drew 110 entries—most of the males being under 19 and most of the fems 17 or less. One grandmother of 58 took part.

Not a beauty contest, it was operated with rules similar to those for the Mr. America competition. Each contestant prepared his own routine. Baton twirling, trampoline act, weight lifting, acrobatics, dancing and singing were among those seen.

In judging men, up to six points were given for symmetry of proportions and muscular development and one each for general appearance, pose, face and skin. Except for omission of the muscular development factor, women were judged on the same basis.

Judges were selected from city recreation department, YMCA, sponsoring newspaper and the fair management. High caliber of contestants was illustrated by participation of a "Mr. Michigan," a State "best built amateur athlete" titleholder, an Olympic champion weight lifter and a State champion baton twirler.

About 5,000 persons were on hand for the senior division program. In competition to all other events on the fairgrounds.

Venus contestants included a State champion baton twirler. A total of 60 women and girls participated.

Aspiring Apollons were judged for symmetry and muscular development. Variety of routines ranged from trampoline act to singing and dancing.

TURNER BROS.

A NOVEL exhibit in the national advertising class, sponsored by the Kaiser-Frazer Corporation, was presented at a number of the nation's principal fairs this year. The showmanlike presentation consisted of a main umbrella-like structure surmounted by a revolving tower plugging the Henry J, the company's newest motor car product, plus a smaller, similarly shaped unit, with portable fencing marking off a demonstration area.

Six such units, costing $40,000 each, will have toured 28 States by the end of February, 1951, and estimates based on State fair attendance figures indicate that more than 15,000,000 persons will have had the opportunity of viewing the exhibits.

Colorful

The entire units were fabricated from lightweight metal pipe and spectacularly dressed in red, white and blue canvas. The canvas panels in the fencing and the unique sidewalking of the big top are laced in

A large amount of space, 350 by 150 feet, is required for the exhibit since at least four automobiles were kept inside and seven or more were available for demonstration in the enclosed area.

A huge aluminum saucer atop the tent is functional as well as ornamental, serving to air-cool the interior by directing the flow of warm air up and out thru the top.

It was found on several occasions that the inside temperature was decidedly lower than the outside atmosphere. In addition, the sidewall louvers can be manually operated to cope with weather conditions.

The exhibit won blue ribbon awards at the Oregon State Fair, Salem, and the Washington State Fair, Yakima, as the top exhibit on the grounds.

Each unit contains a public-address system for attracting attention and explaining the features of the Kaiser-Frazer products. In exhibiting at fairs, Kaiser-Frazer joined an ever-growing number of national concerns using this medium for dealing with potential clients first-hand.

Du Quoin—Fair Beautiful

Illinois Plant Ranks With Nation's Showplaces; Once Was Eyesore Mine Area; Developed Largely as Hobby

Grandstand ranks with best in the U. S., seats 8,500—500 more than the population of Du Quoin. Large exhibit space is provided under the stand.

BILLED as one of America's show places, the Du Quoin (Ill.) State Fair not only lives up to its billing but continues to push projects designed to maintain its position.

Privately owned, the Du Quoin institution is unique among the nation's fairs on several counts. Its owner, W. R. Hayes, whose life story has all the ingredients of a Horatio Alger epic, started the fair over 20 years ago on what was 1,100 acres of coal strip mines.

The eyesore has since been transformed into a beautiful fairgrounds, lush with lawns, spotted with over 3,000 trees and broken by 128 miles of red gravel roads.

Grandstand Seats 8,500

A grandstand seating 8,500—or 500 more than the population of Du Quoin itself—was built. Lavish horse barns, 10 of them of striking design, ranging up to one 520 feet in length by 60 feet in width, were erected. A one-mile race track—one of the best in the country—was built. So, too, were a livestock pavilion, arresting entrances, not only to the grounds but to the mid-way area; an open air horse show area and a picnic grounds.

This year's new improvement was a covering for the grandstand stage. Of permanent construction, the steel-supported stage roof rises 49 feet above stage clearance, extends 103 feet from the end of the grandstand to a point over the back of the stage and has a width of 148 feet.

The covering is designed to safeguard against the loss of night grandstand performances to rain. And, the fair has need for such safeguards, as it spends generously for talent. This year, for instance, it had Bob Hope at $10,000, Hambletonian Stakes at Goshen plus other talent for a one-night performance.

Father-Sons Team

Owner Hayes's two sons, Eugene and D. M., join their dad in the operation of the fair. The sons have their own large homes on the fairgrounds. Like their father, they share the joy of fair operation—and also of harness horse racing. In the latter field, the Hayes also have much to be proud of, for this year, a Hayes entry—Lusty Song, was winner of the 1950 section.

Tho the Hayeses have either made money or appreciated the value of the investment in harness racing and the fair, racing and the fair are largely their hobby. And, in the process of their enjoyment, they have added vastly to living in Southern Illinois. In the process they have upped the sales of Coca-Cola. In the bottling of which they have for years cut this year, a big figure and profit in that

Steel framework for the grandstand stage covering erected this year. Fair spends liberally for top talent; paid Bob Hope $10,000 for one-nighter this year.

STILL-DATE FACILITIES

A Way to Bigger Income

An increasing number of fairs are turning to year-round utilization of their facilities as a means of bringing in added revenue. Attractions, too, are showing a greater awareness of the money to be made by playing at fairgrounds at times other than during the actual operation of fairs.

The Billboard's second annual compilation of fairgrounds facilities reflects this. The number of fairs responding to questionnaires concerning the availability of their facilities for still-dates this year far surpassed that of last year.

The listing proved of vast importance to attractions last year. Its greater completeness and added information this year will make it a more effective working tool than before. Attractions are urged to save the listing and to make use of the information it contains in routing or booking.

PLACE YOUR CHIPS ON A SURE THING

ALERT TO
the needs of America's great Fairs, Expositions and Celebrations for more than 50 years

DOWN THRU THE YEARS...

the greatest name in show business

For more than five decades those who have placed their "chips" and their confidence with the Johnny J. Jones Exposition have found it was no gamble. Always the leader—the pioneer of innovations in the outdoor amusement world, our organization has just concluded another season of furnishing midway attractions for America's GREAT celebrations and fairs. Another year—another record of confidence-inspiring performance. A performance that earned the satisfaction and gained the praise of the able, foresighted men who manage these fairs and celebrations. These men, backed by years of experience, know they "place their chips on a sure thing" with the Johnny J. Jones Exposition.

With shows as with men, birth may lay the basis for character and worth, but life contributes, too—tempers and toughens and molds for growth and maturity. Fifty-two years of faithful service to the amusement-going public, to city officials, fair managements and allied trades have crystallized and developed the outstanding character of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition.

Through sincerity of purpose confidence has been earned. This confidence will be kept—will be nurtured—will be expanded into an inspiration to do better things for 1951.

INDEPENDENT SHOWMEN

"Place Your Chips on a Sure Thing"

We offer a proven route of outstanding still dates and fairs to a select number of independent operators who have attractions in keeping with our standard for the 1951 season.

SHOWS—

1951 Will Be Our 43rd Anniversary Tour!

35 RAILROAD CARS 35

FAIRS and CELEBRATIONS:

For the 1951 Season we promise you a better, more sound and beautiful Show than ever before. Before contracting for your 1951 Events contact us and see what we have to offer. We can definitely promise you some New Sensational Attractions for the coming season.

SHOWMEN and CONCESSIONAIRES:

Because we are augmenting our Show for the 1951 Tour, for which we already have a string of top Fairs and Celebrations contracted, we are open to book several high-class Attractions. These must be new and different, and we will finance any such new Attractions handled by responsible parties. Also have opening for several Legitimate Concessions, with some exclusives.

Lure to Femmes Is Hypoed

Milwaukee Intros Department Store

Display Technique, Holds Exhibits

Of Top Five in Each Classification

Blue-ribbon winners gave daily demonstrations of their culinary prowess in the modern kitchen-theater.

DEPARTMENT store display technique adopted by Wisconsin State Fair, Milwaukee, this year proved one of the event's outstanding new features, highlighting the complete up-dating of the women's department.

Shunning the traditional method of displaying all entries in the various women's competitive classifications, the fair first selected the best five in each division, then displayed them strikingly and effectively by adapting the methods of department stores.

Much of the needlework, lamp shades and draperies were displayed in glass-enclosed picture frame showcases, recessed and indirectly lighted. Other handicraft of this type was in set-in displays, wrapped in cellophane and screened by diagonal ropes.

Foods Colorful

Canned goods were an eye-catching galaxy of color, set up in single rows on open shelves with lights shining thru the glass jars. Perishable foods such as pastries, butter, cheese and salads were cellophane-wrapped and exhibited in deep-freeze units of the type found in a modern self-service grocery store.

Most popular and well-attended feature of the new program, according to Manager Jack Reynolds, was the daily home economic demonstrations held in the women's theater. Each day during the fair, blue ribbon winners came to the fully equipped kitchen to show how they made their entries.

Setting for the new program was one with definite feminine appeal. The old Commerce Building was completely renovated, wall-board partitions installed and the interior repainted in a pastel color scheme. The exterior underwent a face-lifting that included construction of a new yellow and green modernistic front complete with a huge blue "Women's Building" lighted sign. Inside the building was a women's lounge where the weary fair-going females could rest in easy chairs and sip soft drinks from vending machines.

Plans for 1951 are to further enhance the beauty of the structure. A lower ceiling will be constructed to shut off the building's skylights and all exhibits will then be illuminated by artificial means.

Glass-paned shadow boxes, indirectly lighted, added luster to the top-ranking handicraft entries.

An outstanding example of modern department store technique, a set-in display screened by diagonal ropes.

A SHOWCASE for demonstrating functions of various Illinois State government departments was unveiled in the form of a luxurious building costing more than a million dollars at the Springfield fairgrounds this year.

Unusual in design, the structure was given the deluxe treatment by the State Legislature in answer to striking success of the State's "Your Illinois" road show which has made county fairs in recent years and previously was shown under sprawling canvas top at the Springfield event.

The building includes a huge exhibition hall, where the departmental displays were arrayed; an auditorium for motion pictures; a roof garden area equipped with garden-type furniture and large display windows opening outward in the department store manner.

Outstanding at Night
Display windows, which combine with multi-surface walls to give the building an outstanding appearance when illuminated at night, were used this year for a "Pioneer Display," showing how early settlers lived and worked in Illinois.

Also in the display windows were the official State Fair trophies and prizes for the State Fair Queen contest. This marked the first time the trophies had been placed on public display.

Documentary films depicting the work of Illinois departments and such official State films as "Lincoln in Illinois" were projected at the 500-seat auditorium. Cartoons and other comedies were interspersed to balance the program. Fair officials estimated that about 40,000 persons attended the shows during the ten-day free run.

Hall for Conventions
On the Roof Garden, above the exhibition hall, were benches, tables and garden sets equipped with sun umbrellas. Flower gardens decorated the roof area and at night were illuminated with a built-in lighting system. The Roof Garden provided a convenient spot for fair visitors to rest.

Between fair dates, the building will be used as office space. The auditorium will be available for such events as conventions and for educational work.

Much glass walling was utilized in construction of the new building, particularly at the front entrance. From the Roof Garden fair-goers enjoyed an unobscured view across much of the fairgrounds. Included among the exhibition hall displays to acquaint the public with Illinois were such things as an Indian chief and a teepee from the tribe at one of the State's parks.

Roof Garden of Illinois Building provides good sightseeing vantage point.

Night view of building illustrates modernistic design and lighting.

Displays of governmental departments filled large hall in the new structure.

Sen. Byrd — Ark. Sparkplug

Little Rock Livestock Show, Other
Annals of State Grow Under Plan
Of Selen To Spur Cattle Industry

Open-sided Coliseum at the Arkansas Livestock Show and Rodeo, Little Rock, is to be enclosed and its equipment installed, under present plans. Building seats 5,975.

Sen. Clyde E. Byrd, shown in a characteristic pose, is a persuasive speaker on behalf of fairs and livestock development in Arkansas.

FEW fairs have progressed in recent years as has the Arkansas Livestock Show and Rodeo, and the story of the development is really the story of Clyde E. Byrd, the closest approximation of a human dynamo in Arkansas.

At the age of 21, he became major of his hometown, Smackover, Ark. (Pop. 3,000). In turn, he became county clerk, county judge and, in 1939, St. senator. He's been a senator ever since and almost everybody hails him by that title.

En route in his career, he put depression-hit Smackover back on its feet, transforming the muddy, oil-boom town into one with paved streets, garbage collection, sewers, water, a fire-fighting department and law and order. Too, he took the county, which was so badly in debt that its $1 script was selling at 80 cents, and righted it financially.

During the same time, Byrd, who is convinced that the livestock industry eventually will prove a boom to Arkansas, brought in the first herd of registered Herefords into his county, revived the defunct fair at El Dorado, Ark., as a means of stimulating interest in livestock and, in addition, found time to study for and be admitted to the bar.

In '39, he was named secretary-manager of the Arkansas Livestock Show Association at a time when the show was almost in hopeless condition, with a debt of $27,000, no buildings, nor any permanent facilities. He has held the post as secretary-manager ever since, and the fair's facilities and financial standing are a testimonial to his effective management.

Now the fair has a permanent 72-acre showgrounds, and seven buildings including a 5,975-capacity Coliseum, four cattle buildings with a capacity of close to 800 head, and a swine building with a capacity of 800 hogs.

Earmarks Tax for Fairs

It was Byrd who succeeded in selling the State Legislature on earmarking 33-cents-a-gallon tax on liquor to the advancement not only of the State show but also of county fairs. Since, the State from this and other sources has appropriated a total of $1,500,000 for the State show. Other shows have benefited greatly, too. In '39, each of the district shows received $50,000 and each of the county fairs averaged $500 toward premiums.

As a result, not only is the Little Rock show gaining on its own, but also because of the feeder system set up by the lesser shows of the State. All of which fits into Byrd's idea of developing the State's fairs and the livestock industry.

Hams in Act at Syracuse

Amateur Radio Ops' Fairgrounds
Outlet Relays Patrons' Messages,
Sends Out Invitations to Press

A "HAM" radio station operated by members of the Syracuse Amateur Radio Club at New York State Fair this year transmitted messages thru-out the country for fair visitors. The innovation on the list of educational exhibits drew widespread attention from visitors at the State's 104th annual exposition. Visitors to the grounds were invited to send messages free of charge to any point in the country. The amateur operators, most of whom also own their own transmitters, were on duty at the fair from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. to send messages and demonstrate uses to which the station could be put. Call letters K2NYS were assigned to the fair by the Federal Communications Commission.

Adding further interest to the exhibit and accentuating the widespread use of amateur radio transmission was the fact that many foreign visitors, licensed radio operators in their own countries, visited the fair's station and identified their own call letters posted on a large bulletin board near the transmitter.

In addition to messages relayed by the "hams" from the fair to their fellow amateurs in other parts of the United States for delivery to friends of fair-goers, were messages sent to Alaska and to countries in South America and Europe.

Families and friends of personnel in the 10th Marine Battalion, which had departed for Camp Pendleton, Calif., shortly before the fair opened, made use of the "ham" radio set-up to relay messages to the marine officers and enlisted men from New York. Reports from the West Coast to K2NYS showed that the messages arrived before the marines and were delivered to the servicemen upon their arrival at the camp.

Broadcast Invitations

Prior to the opening of the fair, 298 amateur operators in the Syracuse area co-operated in sending nearly 500 invitations to newspaper and radio news editors, city and State officials and other civic leaders asking them to attend the New York State Fair.

Amateur radio operators at the station explained to visitors how their networks have been used for emergency service during storms and other events which disrupted normal communication services.

Ham radio ops' station at the New York State Fair, Syracuse, was busy this year, and it clicked. Hams relayed fairgoers' messages thru-out nation and sent out pre-opening invitations to press.

Showmanship Spurs Sales

Farm Equipment Companies Take
Cue From Midway Ops, Use Carnival
Gimmicks, Set-Ups in Bid to Buyers

THE ADAPTATION of show business methods to the sale of farm machinery was never more pronounced than at 1950 agricultural fairs. Forced by keen competition to seek new methods of glamorizing unglamorous machines, the manufacturers in many cases took their cue from outdoor showbiz, using a Side Show atmosphere to attract, entertain and put over their sales message.

Some outstanding examples of this were demonstrated at the huge 80-acre display of farm machinery at the '50 Minnesota State Fair, where over 200 lines and more than 500 individual units, ranging from small garden cultivators to huge combines and valued at close to $5,000,000, make up the St. Paul annual's top exhibit, both space-wise and from the attendance standpoint.

Most representative of professional showmanship was the International Harvester exhibit at the fair. Housed in a 90 by 250-foot circus-type tent, complete with a multi-color five-panel carnival show front, the concern used outdoor amusement attractions to pull in the farm folk.

The pitch to children was strong. A Farmall tractor provided the youngsters with free rides just outside the top, while on the inside the kids were further entertained by a puppet show and a circus clown.

Adult entertainment features included animated displays, a photo gimmick where snapshots could be taken riding a paper-mache tractor, and one of the most popular attractions, Harvey the talking refrigerator, who answered the questions of the farm wives.
