HIS LAST STAND

(Written for The Billboard)

"Tell the convention at the circus-
And the streets were packed till the dawn
And the ticket was cut off!"

"And the ticket was cut off!"

In the dressing room was standing tall and “good-bye”

And glad as ever they to be getting away.

They closed the packing, and the tent was up.

And up the tent at the "King of the Air"—

Was a man who was very well known.

The serial fight he had seen, the

When the last act would come on,

On the platform was a man, who slept.

The climber fell on his knees to pray.

He bested the end of the year!

"See the "night of his life!" on the swinging trapeze—

And the thrill, the terror, and the fear in his eyes.

"That was the man who rode the seas!

But now he lies with his face in his hands.

And with his fingers trickled the tears

As he woke in his misery.

Softly the "siren" gathered around,

And the "siren" that was loud.

And the "siren" that was soft.

And the "siren" that was loud.

When you’re home again from the West!

"Every man in the dressing tent

A hundreds of girls had a "siren".

You may call it a Christmas gift.

You may call it a birthday gift.

And so, good-bye—"ill you ‘tis sad and well.

Back with the same year!"

He tried to tell them how good they were,

And the beauty of his eyes.

And all he said was, the lovely home

Of the "tangle" and the "tangle" back.

Far away from the one he loved.

"When the man in the sad amour,

That comes with the child of death!"

Out from the "siren" came the strains

Of the song of merry days.

"Tis a song that will forever linger there."

The words were lastly the song;

He tried to tell them all the songs

For he knew the story of the old song

Would never be played again."

Ope by one he chaped their hands.

A fleeting tear between.

The tears of wound were to die.

As gently as woe that raised him up.

And "sighed" with the best of the dead.

HATTIE WILLIAMS
INTRODUCTION OF THE DRAMA INTO AMERICA

By Dr. Judd.

The first known drama to be performed in America was "The Shortest Journey," by Henry Ossawa Todd, in 1821. It was presented at the Alexandria Theatre in New York. The play was a tragedy, and was so successful that it ran for several weeks. It was followed by "The Rover," by David Garrick, and "The Revolt of the Sixties," by Robert H. Park. These plays were all performed in the city of New York, and were attended by a large and enthusiastic audiences. The success of these early productions encouraged the growth of the American theatre, and paved the way for the later development of the American drama.
ANECDOTES

Sir Henry Irving

SIR HENRY IRVING was born Oct. 1, 1838, the son of the Rev. John Irving of Froghall, Staffordshire. His parents were both professional actors, and the boy was given his first lessons in dramatics by his father. He made his stage debut at the age of 15, and by the time he was 20 he was established as a leading man. His first important role was in "Romeo and Juliet," and he went on to play many of the great Shakespearean parts. He was a consummate actor, and his performances were always admired for their subtlety and depth.

ETTA FVYDE-BENCH

LIFE DANCE FOR SIDEBURNS

Sir Henry Irving was known for his love of侧边胡须. In fact, it is said that one of his most famous roles was a character named "Sidewinder" in a play called "Sidewinder's Dance." During the performance, Irving wore a full sideburn, and the audience was enthralled by his portrayal. After the show, Irving was approached by a young man who asked him for an autograph. Irving signed the autograph, then went on to his dressing room, where he began to tear his hair and throw it on the floor. The young man was shocked, and Irving explained that he was trying to rid himself of his sideburns, which he had grown tired of wearing.

MADAM SWEET

CLEOPATRA BICKELL

SIR HENRY IRVING was so enamored of Madam Sweet that he was said to have written her love letters while she was still his wife. He was known for his fidelity to his wife, but he could not resist the allure of Madam Sweet, who was a celebrated actress of the time. Despite the controversy, their affair continued for many years, and Irving was always careful to keep it a secret.

WILLIAM PAYNE

This man was known for his love of chocolate. He was often seen eating chocolate bars in the lobby of the theater, and it was rumored that he would take them to his dressing room to enjoy while he was preparing for his performance. Despite the rumors, Payne denied any romantic interest in the chocolate, and he claimed that he simply enjoyed the sweet taste.

THE LURE OF
THE LAIR

By CHAS. H. DAY.

I was back in 1916. I had just purchased a fine horse and brought her to Long Island. She was a magnificent animal, not only in appearance but in performance. I had trained her well and was proud of her. I decided to take her to the stables nearby to show her off to the other riders. As I approached the stables, a group of riders gathered around, admiring her beauty and grace. I invited them to come for a ride, and they accepted. We rode around the property, admiring the scenery and the horses. It was a perfect day for riding. As we returned to the stables, I noticed a rider approaching. It was a young man, dressed in his best riding gear. He introduced himself as a local businessman who had ridden for years. He asked if I would like to take a ride in his carriage with him. I agreed, and we set off. As we rode through the countryside, we talked about horses and riding. He asked me about my horse and I told him about my training methods. He was impressed and asked if he could buy my horse. I hesitated, not wanting to part with my beloved steed. But he persisted, and I eventually agreed. The following day, he came to my property and took delivery. I felt a sense of loss, but I knew that he would take good care of her. I continued to ride, but I felt empty without my horse. I realized that I had become too attached to her. I decided to sell her to a rider who would value her as much as I had. The new owner loved her and treated her well. I visited her occasionally, but it was not the same. I had learned a valuable lesson: to not become too attached to anything. I continued to ride, but I never forgot my beautiful white horse.
The Author's Story

By WILLIAM LYNCH ROBERTS.

SAT., White, what are you going now? The weather was a weird, eerie, misty, gray morning, which promised to be a cool, gloomy day. The sun was just rising above the horizon, casting a hazy light across the sky. The air was thick with moisture, making the world seem a bit surreal.

"Uh, I'm going to get some eggs," answered White.

"Why are you going to get eggs?" asked the man next to him.

"I just need some eggs,"
explained White.

The man next to him smiled. "Well, if that's what you need, then that's what you'll get. But, you know, you could always just ask me to buy them for you."

White nodded, understanding the man's offer. "Okay, thank you,"
said White.

The man smiled again.
"Anytime," he said.

White continued on his way, making his way through the city's crowded streets. He saw people moving about, going to work or running errands. The sounds of the city filled his ears, creating a symphony of noise.

As he walked, White noticed a small girl standing outside a store. She was holding a basket filled with eggs.

"Hey, White, what are you doing?" asked the girl.

White looked at her.
"I'm just getting some eggs," he said.

The girl smiled at him.
"Oh, cool," she said.

White continued on his way,
heading towards his destination.

The sun was now fully risen, illuminating the world with its glimmering rays. The sky was now a vibrant shade of blue, with the clouds scattered across
it. The air was fresh and crisp, making the world seem more clear.

White arrived at the store, where he promptly bought the eggs. He then headed back to his home, feeling satisfied.

As he walked through the city again, White noticed the man next to him.

"Hey, White," he said.

"Hi," White replied.

The man continued.
"So, what did you do yesterday?"

White thought for a moment.
"I just stayed home,"
he said.

"Oh," said the man.

"Yeah," White
agreed.

They walked on, talking about various topics. The sound of the city carried on, creating a backdrop for their conversation.

As they reached their destination, White turned to the man.

"Thanks for the eggs,"
he said.

The man smiled.
"No problem," he replied.

White continued on his way, feeling grateful for the man's act of kindness.

The day had ended, and White returned home,
feeling content.

READ WHAT THE BILLBOARD SAYS ABOUT THE

United States Tent & Awning Co.

On the first page of this issue are reproduced the photographs of the directors of the United States Tent & Awning Co.

The United States Tent & Awning Co. is not an old name, but the men at its head are old in the business, having practically spent all their lives in it. That they have been successful goes without saying. Their space has been steadily increased, and their capacity for work augmented by a growing demand upon their production. The company is now doing an immense business. They make canvas for many of the principal circus and carnival companies, and that they enjoy the confidence of their patrons is evident from the constant increase in their business. Their aim is to give satisfaction, to turn out work promptly, and as ordered, all orders being given equal care and consideration, irrespective of their magnitude.

The Billboard does not hesitate to recommend this enterprising up-to-date progressive firm to the attention of its readers.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR RICHES BECKONS YOU

When riches come to your door and knock don’t depend upon the time-worn latch-string that is always hanging out, but open the door yourself, bring her in, and don’t let good fortune get away. That’s the way I feel about this “Fairytale.” I’m offering the privilege people of this country the greatest park proposition in your life, and if you want a good thing and are not afraid to work when you ring up May lat, you’ll always come back with regret as to “What might have been.”

JAMES L. GLASS, : : : : General Manager Fairyland Park, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Singer Bros. have also announced that they will soon begin the manufacture of a new model of sewing machine, which will be introduced at the annual convention of the National Sewing Machine Association, to be held in Chicago next month. The new model is said to be more durable and easier to use than any other model ever produced by the company.

TO THE PROFESSION:

I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of your efficient services in behalf of my three songs, viz: "It's The Irish", "Imagination" and "All For Country, Home and Mother", and wish to thank you for it, as I well know it has contributed largely to their present success.

The fact that so many of you are using them with such splendid results pleases me very much, and I trust that they have merited the verdict you have given them.

I am glad to say that the list of those using my songs continues to grow daily, and that, if you want to be "numbered with the live ones" let me hear from you, and your name shall be placed on the "Roll of Honor".

If you are not using them, but desire to do so, kindly drop me a line enclosing stamps and your latest program, and I will promptly mail you professional copies and orchestrations in any key.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

I remain,

Yours respectfully.

MOTION PICTURES DURING THE YEAR 1905

In attempting a short review of developments in motion picture matters during 1905, the first striking fact lies in the tremendously increased feature films produced. Although no single film has appeared that equaled the popularity of the "Great Train Robbery" in 1903, nearly every week has passed that did not give birth to some very popular film. Films are showing a higher average of photographic quality than ever before.

The film in greatest demand during 1905 has probably been "The Moonshiners" among sensational subjects; in comedy, it is difficult to decide between "Personal" and "The Lost Child," while "The Adventurous Automobile Trip," "The Man of Two Worlds," "The Man Who Loved," "Dust," and "The War of the Worlds" are all well back in the rear rank.

The demand for feature films has increased, and in our judgment there is, in actual use twice as many feet as at this time last year.

Our estimate of the total quantity of films sold in the United States in 1905, based on somewhat unsatisfactory data, is approximately five million feet.

The "dipping" of films has decreased greatly, and is dying a natural death, due to the great supply of desirable original subjects and reasonable prices. Nowadays the theatre-going public is accustomed to a "dipped" film on the screen.

No radical improvements have been made during the year in motion picture mechanics. The machine that produces films with absolute steadiness and without any film or splices is still an unknown twin brother to a perfect motion picture machine. We have heard of them, but still linger in Missouri.

In the matter of accessories and attachments, the departments of electricity of the larger cities have become more insistent in demanding safeguards against fire. It is the interest of everyone concerned in moving picture work to use every precaution. Regulations sometimes are irksome, and may appear unnecessarily burdensome and expensive, but it is better to go too far than to risk some great disaster by evading wise precautions. The danger lies in engaging inexperienced operators, although an accident may happen to the best of them. We know of a manager who paid his manager $50 weekly, with privilege of seeing the rest of the show free. After the fire occurred this manager will miss his manager.

Exhibitors who use gas-making outfits will be interested in a new chemical similar to oxylith, which generates oxygen when it is wet. It is called Oxone, and is made in the United States. Oxylith is a French invention, imported from France.

Among improvements which we have seen have been offered during the year 1905, we select two of great importance.

One of them is shown in the accompanying illustration as a part of dissolving stereopticon. It consists of a device for raising and lowering the upper body of the stereopticon by means of a fine adjusting screw, and a similar arrangement for right and left motion. The object of the invention is to regulate the instrument in such a way that the views projected by the upper and lower lenses cover the same spot on the screen, the movements admittance of the finest adjustment to a fraction of a millimetre. Our attorneys inform us that the patent office has passed favourably upon its application, although patent has not yet been issued. The invention is that of our Mr. George Klein.

The other important new product is a motion picture lamp, also developed by Mr. Klein. Its purpose is to retain the highest possible illumination, without sacrificing definition. This is called the "New Form," which is and is valued at $2.00. In so much as it accomplishes its purpose by means of one of our accomplished friends, we can assure you that the lamp will be obtainable at the best that can be obtained with the calcium light before.

We extend the greetings of the season to our customers, many of whom have become our intimate friends, and whose continued good will and encouragement make it possible to maintain our position as the leading firm in the business of the United States, a position which will not be lost so long as square dealing and efficiency can maintain it.

THERE’S A REASON WHY

VITAGRAPH FILMS

(At 12 Cents a Foot) ARE SO MUCH IN DEMAND

_READ_ The answer is in the January (1906) issue of The Cosmopolitan Magazine, in which an intensely interesting article describes just how we made our great film, “The Escape from Sing Sing.”

Vitagraph Films are full of action, realist with originality—show great attention to detail, and consequently give universal satisfaction.

_WHEN_ our exhibitors begin to show their juries by “locking” our films in print.

_WHEN_ a standard magazine (The Cosmopolitan) devotes seven pages to describing in detail how we made “Sing Sing.”

_WHEN_ every exhibitor is eagerly buying every film we make, “layered” in your Twist, “asking for more.”

WE REALIZE—and other people realize—there’s “Something Doing.”

A NEW LAUGHING HIT: MAN WANTED! A Comedy Film full of scenes.
