After contacting the chiefs of Decca and the EMI Group who control the MGM, Parlophone, Columbia, HMV & Regal labels, and drawing a complete blank, I toured the smaller private studios in London of which there are a great many, and left each building with a negative answer. As the mystery heightened, I contacted Chappell, publishers of Nature Boy, whose tune was supposed to have been one of those recorded. Chappell was as anxious to discover the truth as I, so I set about making inquiries among band bookers and session men, only to end up where I started.

Since the situation was becoming serious, I contacted the general secretary of the musicians union, who expressed surprise that the session had taken place and session serious.

CHICAGO, JULY 14, 194

Within a few days of the paper's publication, reports began to come in and the truth became known. After assuming that American musicians had done the sessions and "passed the buck" across the Atlantic in order to divert attention from their own illegal activities, an assumption, that seemed only natural when all investigation proved fruitless, information came to hand which revealed the whole truth of how the Mercury sessions were convened.

Musicians Confused
In all, 20 musicians took part in the recording, which was held at Ebury Studios, a new studio near Victoria station, owned by noted radio scriptwriter Ted Kavanaugh.
Combination used was three clarinets, two bass clarinets, French horn, rhythm and string section.
The musicians were under the impression that the session was held with the full knowledge of the MU, so no check was made to verify Musicians Confused pression that the session was held with the full knowledge of the MU, so no check was made to verify the fact. They were also under the impression that the sides were to be pressed in Britain for export, as is done in the case of London recordings, whereas in fact only the matrix was sent to U.S. for dubbing behind singer John Laurenz. This has caused a spate of ill feeling in London musical circles and the entire matter has been placed before the musicians union. In the meantime, it is understood that other sessions have been held and there is too, are now being investigated. Owing to the seriousness the matter, all names of musiciare being kept secret.

The Mercury sessions were supervised by John Hammend, who was in Britain as a guest of E. R. Lewis, British Decca chief, who was interested in releasing certain items from the Mercury catalogue in the British Isles. The "scab" sessions were held without any knowledge of the Decca organization, who expressed strong feeling when the situation was exposed. A well known British band leader was also involved. His name, like those of the musicians working under him, is also being temporarily withheld.

Peggy, Jo For Supper Club'

Hollywood—As scooped by Down Beat's last cover picture, Peggy Lee and Jo Stafford this fall will be a team. They'll alternate the Chesterfield Supper Club with Perry Como.

Deal was set by Tom Rockwell here before returning to the east. As yet, the mechanics of the program have to be ironed out. Como will be in New York for the airings and one girl will work there with him while the other handles the coast chore. Sometime during the year the girls will switch.

Peggy, currently at Chicago theater with Dave Barbour, recently nixed an offer to dub vocals over background instrumentals waxed in England. Capitol had worked the deal with Margaret Whiting, but couldn't budge Peggy, who refused to cut vocals above Britishmade or a capella backgrounds as have Bing Crosby and Frankie Laine, the latter for a reason similar to Peggy's—he demands the backing of pianist Carl Fischer.

DeVol has asked the AFM for assistance in his beef.

Talent Search Heated As Tele Moves Ahead

DOWN BEAT

New York-Little by little, as television moves ahead at breakneck speed, music is taking its place in the new field. The Texaco variety program, which preemed with Russ Case and a large orchestra, was followed by CBS' challenge, "Toast and a large orchestra, was follow of the Town," featuring a 15-piece orchestra conducted by Ray Block.

The Columbia show, at its premiere screening, fell a little short of its predecessor on TV production, not quite having escaped from the routines of regular radio. Bloch, conducting his orchestra in the background, did it in radio studios style, wearing ear phones and conducting, for the most part, with his back to the performers. It may have been practical, but wasn't ideal sight production. Another shortcoming was the use of stand mikes, rather than overheads such as used by movie studios, thereby mass, rather than overneads such as used by movie studios, thereby keeping them from view, by songstress Monica Lewis and pianist Eugene List. It was hardly the fault of the performers that such "old time" equipment was used but it hardly flattered them or television.

The People program makes no effort to be television material, though light heavyweight champ Gus Lesnevich had to appear in boxing trunks in his bit, following regular radio formula, with the talent and guests reading from scripts.

Songstress Betty Reilly made her TV debut on the second Texaco Star Theater program and fared well, showing great promise for a future in the new realm of radio.

Ex-Ork Singer

Dawson, who does the romantic lead in High Button Shoes, his fourth Broadway show, is a Philadelphian with a background of early experience on WCAU, where he sang while Elliott Lawrence was serving his apprenticeship as a band leader. Though he nabbed a music scholarship for college for his vocal talents (he had another for football), he's favored popmusic over the long haired stuff for the last eight years. He sang on the old Al Pearce radio series in Hollywood and vocalized with the Bob Crosby marine dance band in the South Pacific while he was with the Leathernecks during the war.

Both Middleton and Dawson are husky good looking gents who'll get plenty of sighs from femme video fans.

Mostly Unexciting

Ex-band vocalists who have turned to radio have, for the most part, appeared unexciting in their delivery of songs. Most don't seem to know what to do with themselves, remain generally expressionless and don't know what to do with their hands. Vocally-inclined lads and don't know what to do with their hands. Vocally-inclined lads and lassies, either with dance bands or on their own, would do them-selves no harm in playing a few weeks of summer stock if they plan to make a stab at television. Movie studios, incidentally, often use that same method to get their new-comers into the awing of things.

Bop Satire Hollywood—Despite the AFM's refusal to permit musicians to make sound tracks for telepix, plenty of sound pictures are seen and heard on local television broadcasts. They range from musical shorts (cartoons, etc.) to features with musical underscoring on the sound tracks secured in England and over which the AFM has no control. and over which the AFM has no control.

American-made sound pictures are also being used. KTLA recently presented the full-length feature musical, Pot O' Gold, starring Horace Heidt and his band and based on the radio show of some years ago which put Heidt in the top bracket in the entertainment world at that time. KTLA people reported that the Heidt picture provided what was judged from audience reactions to be some of the best television entertainment the station had put out to date.

Union Against Films

Nobody here would inske any official commitments for the union as to the date when the no-television clause was added to the AFM's movie agreement but it was believed that the date was aslate as 1945. If so a scad of filmusicals unquestionably good enough for television revival are available, providing the tele people can come to terms with the producers and any others (such as the stars) who might have retained rights preventing reissue in any form.

Arthur Michaud, business affairs pilot for Tommy Dorsey and other musical attractions, is in the telemovie business. Michaud's firm is not Century Television as reported in some trade mags. Michaud says it is his own firm and he is merely using facilities of Century. Told Down Beat he plans to make telepix (as soon as AFM gives consent) featuring Tommy Dorsey, Charlie Barnet, Jack Fina, Ziggy Elman, singers Monica Lewis, Stuart Foster, the Clark Sisters and many others.

Floyd is playing excellent piano, clean, fraught perhaps with twenty-ish ideas, but never deviating too drastically from a same melodic line. Claude (Hey Hey) Humphreys' drums could be better, and according to other localities, were during his Raeburn days, But the real star is clarinetist Rudy Ross. In 25-year-old reedman Ross, Chicago, if it cares, can find every attribute heralded an belonging agelessly to Benny Goodman: a vibrato-less tone, a technical fluidity which makes the listener forget the desirability of technique. Of all touted contenders for BG's crown (Hank D'Amico, Peanuts Hucko, Stan Hasselgard), Ross has the most bona fide claim. Having played since childhood, and gained familiarity with his instrument during five years of symphony playing, Ross (real name Bubaio) is equally adept at bop phrasing (unusual for a clarinetist) and the music usually associated with Chicago-styled 88er Bean.

As for Eckstine, he seemed to be seesawing between the famous "blue" quality that has, rightly, become his trademark, and the depth and sonority identified with Herb Jeffries. He seemed to be forcing a resonance that he just doesn't have. Again, just a little more righteousness was the need.—net

Whatever the case, jazz sideman, too often given to slouching, talking and fumbling around when not actually playing, could take a leason from la femmes as to conduct for musicians on stage. Phil showed off his well trained ladies to a series of packed and receptive houses at the Paramsunt theater here. True, there wasn't much jazz played, the stage show, like its radio sessions, leaning a little to the long haired. But then you'd hardly expect any crew haircuts in the Spitalny band. An original by trombonist Velma Rooke gives the composer, trumpeter Anita, alto saxist Madeline and clarinetist. Muriel a chance to play a few licks, but doesn't score near as well as the heavier stuff performed by the ensemble. Janet McLean does a George Rockish trumpet solo on Minka. Most unusual spot is the playing of a Spitalny phonograph record of Rock-A-Bye-Baby, with the live performers joining in on the last chorus. Funny thing—the record goes over just as big as the other numbers in the show! -jeg

New York—By way of opening the stage show at the Strand, an off-stage voice introduced "Matty Malneck and his orchestra." It was Matty Malneck all right, but it wasn't his orchestra, It was Henry Jerome's, with Matty conducting. However, in press reviews, writers did refer to the band as Malneck's. Jerome was given featured billing in the ads and display boards. "Matty Malneck and Orchestra, featuring Henry Jerome," but had no opportunity to perform solo style at the show caught. The band opened with The William Tell Overture, then went into a medley overture, then went into a medley of tunes written by Matty, Stairway To The Stars getting the biggest response from the audience. From that point on, the band, attired in brown derbies and green tired in brown derbies and green sweaters, was used merely to accompany Ed Gardner and his Duffy's Tavern show. It seems the deal called for Matty to get the ork billing in the theater just as he does on the radio. It would have done the Jerome band, identified as such, little good had it worked under its own tag, but it should entitle it to a return crack, playing

New York—A sudden enthusiastic interest in jam sessions is being shown by operators of various nightspots in suburban Westchester county, with a small tavern, Nickie's, in the center of Mount Vernon, pioneering the move. For the past several weeks, this place, which holds no more than 100 patrons, has been featuring Sabbath sessions with Joe Marsala leading small groups of local and downtown musicians.

Two other spots, Hillman's in Hartsdale and Joe Lyttle's 6½ club, just north of the NYC line in Yonkers, are planning similar Sunday night sessions in early fall. Both spots are larger than the Mount Vernon oasis, but the fact remains it was the latter that broke the ice.

While Bennyshone individually on old standards that brought him fame better than a decade ago and still rates requests from his fans for the most part, his group bopped its way through the evening. The group doesn't come on in a manner that will scare any swing addicts, bop being predominately displayed in fine, if somewhat subdued, taste. Gray Excites Sensation of the group, and the real target of most applause opening night, was Wardell Gray, a bop tenor youngster who comes from Detroit via Hollywood. All Dance Tempi Red Rodney, little redheaded contender for the lightweight championship in the bop trumpet race, took charge of the one-man brass section. Billy Bauer on guitar, Mel Zelnick on druns and Clyde Lombardi on bass gave the unit a solid background. Incidentally, all numbers played were for dancing, no broken rhythm marring the evening for those who came to two-step, shag, Lindy or what have you. There are those who are of the belief that it's impossible to dance to bop. They probably brought this mix-up upon themselves by confusing Kenton's progressive jazz with bop as pracprogressive juzz with bop as practiced by dance bands such as those of Benny, Woody and Gene.

Musicians Supply Top Gag In 'Merry Way'

By CHARLES EMGE

mal title of "A Miracle Can Happen" and was pulled back by producer Benedict Bogeaus when it was discovered that the "Miracle" title led many to believe that his picture dealt with religious matters. Not wanting to attract ticket buyers under false pretenses, Mr. Bogeaus re-tagged it with its new and sufficiently meaningless title, and gave it a new start in life.

Judging by the many letters from music minded movie-goers concerning On Our Merry Way, I gather it has already been seen by quite a few of you. These letters were, as usual, mainly inquiries as to the identity of the unseen musicians whose solos highlight the sound track, but all bore out my own impression that here, at last, was a movie for those who, for the sound track, but all bore out my own impression that here, at last, was a movie for those who, for the present anyway, had had enough of the profound and were sick to the stomach with the pretentious. Either some of us don't laugh too easily these days or real comedy has been a lost art in Hollywood for a long time. Here is a movie that, they claim, has had even the ushers rolling in the aisles—and it could be true.

On Our Merry Way is a series of incidents encountered by a would-be "roving reporter" (Burgess Meredith). The best incident for me—and for many others, I'm sure—is that involving a couple of dance musicians, a trumpet player (Henry Fonda) and a pianist (Jimmy Stewart). The reporter's question: "What influence did a baby play in your life?"

The musicians tell him their sad story. "Baby," to them, was a buxom, beautiful lass who had barged in and broken up a hornplaying contest they had staged in hope of promoting a job for their band at a beach resort. The "contest" was framed (they thought) so that it would be won by the trumpet-playing son of the mayor of the town. The kid wasn't much of a trumpet player but their plan was to get around that by having Fonda hidden underneath the bandstand and provide the music while the kid merely went through the motions. But rival forces were also in action, And who do you think bobbed up to act as judge of the contest? None other than Harry James (Harry James), who, like most contest judges, also had some personal interest in the outcome.

Things were already going badly

Hauntin' Holm

Hollywood—Lealy Grey, above, is the latest addition to the Gabbe, Luta and Heller legion. The luminous Lealy, whose photo reminds us of singer-comedicane Celeste Holm, sings, they say.

Because so many reviewers beat me into print with reviews on this picture I take special satisfaction in reporting that the trumpet solo which Dorothy plays in the contest scene was NOT recorded by Harry James as several stated. Harry appears only as an actor, and, portraying Harry James as a not-too-interested, slightly bored person who would just as soon have been somewhere else, he is excellent.

That particular solo, according to the best information, was sound-tracked by Dave Schlegel. The reason there is some doubt is typical of the movie music business. Three trumpet players, Schlegel, Jerry Rosen and another I can't name because he was under contract to another studio and had no business there, recorded solo passages for the picture, sometimes re-making solos recorded by the others because those in charge changed their minds about what they wanted.

None had seen (or heard) the picture at this writing and knew their minds about what they wanted.

None had seen (or heard) the picture at this writing and knew for sure which tracks had been used in the final print. That fine trombone solo for Dorothy is definitely by Si Zentner. It is reasonably certain that Rosen did all of Fonda's solos. As I have reported previously, Skitch Henderson(his style is easily recognized) did the piano tracks for Jimmy Stewart, and incidently, did a capable job as music director (under difficult conditions) on the contest sequences. The same goes for Heinz Roemheld, who handled the underscoring, and Dave Chudnow, general music supervisor. music supervisor.

Kills Wife, Self

Kills Wife, Self

Hollywood—A local unemployed frummer, Eugene Manaray, pumpd five fatal shots into his beautiful, young wife, then turned the run to his head, taking his own life. The murder-suicide took place last month on a downtown Los Angeles street where hundreds of home-bound workers were witnesses to the tragedy. Manaray was walking with his estranged wife, Pauline, 25, and her sister, Mrs. Jean Brown, when he "pulled a gun" and fired it three or four times into the back and once, after she had fallen, into the head of his red-headed wife, who with her sister had just left her place of employment. Hollywood—This is the sum total of all the gags these guys could think up, which shows why they are musicians instead of comics. It's a new seven-piece combo (what did you think it was?) headed by Bill Williams, the trombonist. Others are, from left to right: Obie Johnson, trumpet; Jim Simonin, piano; Tino Isgro, sax; Bob Stone, bass; Matty Matlock, clarinet; Remo Belli, drums.

Hollywood—Movie makers have dabbled with operatic ideas for a long time (Columbia is making a long string of operatic features via its Italian subsidiary) but, with many discriminating music lovers ready to admit opera is an antiready to admit opera is an anti-quated form of entertainment, best ready to admit opera is an antiquated form of entertainment, best approach to the subject seems to be found in a series of three-reclers in production by Amalgamated Pictures at the Hal Roach lot in Culver City.

Vice-president, idea man and music director of Amalgamated is Thomas Peluso, radio conductor who did a series of streamlined operatic airshows for an oil company a few years ago. Peluso's pictures, like his airshows, are condensed (around 27 minutes) versions of standard operas. The dialogue, which carries the little bit of story essential to an opera, is in English, and is spoken, not sung. The principal arias, for most people the only real excuse for opera, are sung in the original language

Peluso's biggest improvement on opera is that in his movies he is using young, attractive, competent actresses and actors for the visual jobs. They perform the spoken dialogue and "fake" the arias, sound-tracked by competent singers (Emily Hardy, Frank Tavlione, Giovanni Zavatti and others) in the usual movie manner. This is a refreshing idea to those of us who are inclined to think of opera in terms of a small, pot-bellied tenor making love to a huge, heavily-buttressed soprano.

Whiting Drops Booking Work

Hollywood—Art Whiting told Down Beat at press time that he was dropping all action as an agent and hereafter will devote all his time to personal management, the operation of his studios and the direction of his studios and the direction of his band.

Whiting has turned the active management of the studios over to Ace Hudkins, who has been conducting his musicians' finishing school from the studios. Whiting is negotiating the transfer of artists previously booked through him to MCA.

Hudkins is working two bands, each made up half of veteran musicians and half students, thus giving the students an opportunity to work side by side with schooled sidemen. Hudkins has found that young musicians, regardless of their knowledge of their instrument, are unable to take a chair in a section and play properly. He has acquired scores from many of the major name leaders and is using them as textbooks. He finds that the young students need most experience in conception, breathing and reading.

Hudkins, with the assistance of clarinetist Bob Keene, is forming a four rhythm, four saxes, six brass band with which to jov. A girl vocalist will be added later.

How Dizzy Did It

Brussels, Belgium

In your April 7 issue, There're aome few words about Dizzy Gillespie's concerts in Belgium which call for an answer. I am in the right position to give it, for I have been playing a great part in Dizzy's appearance over here.

First, in your Charles pearance over here.

First, in your Chords And Discords a certain Mr. Nelles, from Antwerp, criticizes the advertising of the concert for which the Hot Club was responsible. You must know that: (a) the Hot Club was asked to organize two concerts in Belgium, ten days before the arrival of the band; (b) The Hot Club had to pay in advance, all the expenses for location, publicity, etc. More than $1,000 were paid in that purpose.

and we did our best: advertisment and we did our best: advertisment campaign in newspaper, radio programs (by myself), publicity on the walls, etc. We can't help if Mr. Nelles is blind or deaf. He did perhaps read in Down Beat, two months before the concerts, that Dizzy was coming to Belgium, but the fact is that the contract was signed only ten days before his concerts.

Second, in the same issue, Billy Shaw, Dizzy's manager, tells everything about the troubles they have had in Europe. It's true, but to be fair, Billy Shaw should have added some details.

some details.

As I told, Dizzy's concerts in Belgium were made on a benefit basis, the band being to collect the money after the two concerts, and after deduction of expenses paid in advance by the Hot Club.

This contract was signed between a representative of the Swedish manager (who's in jail) and the Hot Club. I made the contract myself.

When we met Dizzy at the station, two days before the concerts, the whole band was broken, "beaten to their socks." We gave Dizzy 20,000 francs (a Belgian Franc is to their socks." We gave Dizzy 20,000 francs (a Belgian Franc is worth slightly more than two cents) in advance, just to take him and the boys out of the jam.

The day of the first concert, in Antwerp, we gave 20,000 francs more, again in advance. After the concert, we had quite a rough time, for Dizzy and the boys said they wouldn't play in Brussels. the next day unless we gave 44,000 francs! Of course, they said they had nothing against us, we were nice guys, etc., but they just wanted the money the Swedish manager was owing the band. After a long talk, they agreed to play, to make us a favour, if we would pay 25,000 francs the next day, at noon.

We did pay and the band played OK.

I want to point out that I have nothing against Dizzy or the boys. They just were defending themselves, but, in fact, if the contract had been respected, they would have received less than 65,000 francs altogether. According to our contract,

→ So Today We Are— MARCHES ON Fourteen Years Old!

The first hundred years are the toughest, they say, won't know about that for a few decades, but we are sure the most of our regular readers will agree, as Down Beat ente its fifteenth stanza, that its fourteenth year just conclu-was about as rugged as any this periodical has strugged through.

Publisher Glenn Burrs might disagree, recalling a rather rocky weather in the first two or three years of Den Beat's existence, when he was nursing this lusty infapublication into a reasonable facsimile of maturity. Those we growing pains, of course, and we strangely encountered the again last year (see the editorial in September 10, 1947 issue

It was just a year ago this month that we came face face with what we blithely called our "metamorphosis." Se of our friends had other terms for it, but the fact rema that we did go through a period of change, licked the proble with which we were confronted, and emerged in February ing like ourselves again.

Many weird tales have been circulated (some still a being whispered) about this period in Down Beat's history. There was no mystery about it. We told our readers the facts honestly and frankly, in our editorials on July 30, September 1981. 10 and again on February 25 of this year. Some folks are ju suspicious of the truth.

Before this piece begins to sound too pessimistic, let state here and now that the future never looked brighter for Down Beat at any time in its fourteen years of life. been promising you a weekly newspaper for so long that we refuse to strain your credulity by repeating it now.

But we do know now how and when it will be launched!

All But BBC House Bands Strike July 31

London—With all remote broadcasts (those not played directly from BBC studios) already banned by the musicians union, the executive committee has now issued instructions that no broadcasts may be undertaken by musicians other than those employed in house bands by the BBC after July 31. This ruling means that no symphony, salon or dance bands may air after that date and the only broadcast music permitted will he by RBC symphony, revue, varair after that date and the only broadcast music permitted will be by BBC symphony, revue, variety and regional orchestras. The dispute will also reach a high point if the corporation tries to bypass the issue by increasing the ratio of record programs allowed by the union.

The remote broadcast ban is on until BBC raises the wage scale for an outside airing to that of a atudio broadcast, while the new ban seeks to raise that rate of $10.00 per three-hour session to $12.00. to bring it into line with rates paid by film and recording studios. This, of course, is a minimum rate, but BBC never pays more than minimums.

The union has been pressing for this increase for two years with little result. It is, therefore, with regret that they have had to call the strike, which will cause grave ill feeling among the listening public who have to support the monolistic BBC out of their taxes.

The following statement was issued by BBC soon after the union announcement: "In general, the BBC's minimum studio fees for musicians are the same as those fixed by the musicians union for public concerts, and were last increased at the end of 1943, side by side with the union's increase in concert rates. Since that time, the union has tried on various grounds to get the BBC to increase these minimum studio rates still further. The BBC objects to the union's new claim that fees for a studio broadcast should be higher than those The BBC objects to the union's new claim that fees for a studio broadcast should be higher than those fixed by the musicians union for a public concert, especially as it does not hesitate to pay higher rates to specialist players. This principle has never before been advanced by the union in the whole history of its dealings with the BBC. The BBC rejects it and has told the union so."

New York—Suburban Glen Island Casino will switch to a name singer-unknown dance band policy following the current run of Buddy Moreno July 20, with Vic Damone coming in as tee off man.

The policy is similar to that adopted by Frank Dailey at Meadowbrook last fall (he used Perry Como, Andy Russell, Martha Tilton and others), although Frank had name bands also. Casino management hopes the vocalures will draw crowds as in days of old.

draw crowds as in days of old.

A Bit High

The Casino's current policy is more expensive for patrons than when the spot first clicked with local kiddies and became the rage of the east about 15 years ago. In those days, including the depth of the depression. Eddie Doran ran Glen Island with a $50 music charge plus a $1 minimum. The younger set leaped at the bargain, discovered such bands as Ozzie Nelson, Casa Loma and the Dorsey Brothers, and created enough excitement to draw in their money-loaded parents and Main Stemmers from New York. Today both tabs are doubled, and when taxes and tips are added, it comes a little high for the kids.

Dailey, who was operating his New Jersey roadhouse with a policy the same as the original Glen Island deal, turned the spot into a summer theater, after which he'll return to the band and dancing policy. However, he states he'll not use name bands next season, rather return to his original plan, and that originally used by Glen Island and bring in an unknown, give it wires and promotion and build it, over a period of three or four months, into a name attraction.

Chicago—In response to popular demand we have been doing ocasional repeat columns using new musical examples. This time we have chosen Nat Cole whose initial column appeared in Down Beat. October 1, 1941. At that time Cole and his trio were doing a six week engagement at the Capitol cocktail lounge—at a renumeration not too much above scale Everyone agreed that Nat had a fine musical aggregation and naturally he was ambitious for accelerated activity. To achieve this end he shifted his recording activities to the then newly formed Capitol organization, placed himself under the managerial guidance of Carlos Gastel, and began featuring more prominently his "intimate" style vocals. Nat uses a sequence of C-7, A-7 with augmented fifth and added dissonant tone (lowered third), D-minor-7, G-7 plus the sixth, followed by the delayed tonic with added sixth and ninth.

The unique aspects of the melodic variations are augmentations of the fundamental harmony (examples, measures two and six of section B) and the use of chromatics that create their own temporary tonality without direct relation to the basic harmonization (examples, measures seven and eight). New York—Bob Crosby brought five key men east from Hollywood for his Strand theater engagement which began a few weeks ago, adding local men for the other chairs. Complete line-up for the presentation consisted of Johnny Beat, Bernie Privin and Chuck Genduso, trumpets; Murray McEachern, George Arus, and Walter Mercurio, trombones; Wilbur Schwartz and Johnny Rotella, alto saxes; Ted Nash and Al Klink, tenors; Danny Bank, baritone; Alvin Stoller, drums; Sam Bruno, bass; Bob Curtis, piano, Jerry Gray came along as conductor. The Clark Sisters, formerly TD's Sentimentalists, and Bob handled the vocals.

New York — Dizzy Gillespie wound up a smash two week bop at Broadway's Royal Roost, being replaced by the International All-Stars, a group made up of Georgie Auld, tenor sax; Bill Harris, trombone; Chubby Jackson, bass; Shelly Manne, drums, and Lou Levy, piano. — Ray Bare ——Ray Bare ——Ray Bare bled up tenoring on Body is some of the best that he has set down on wax and from over here that is saying a mouthful. The piano isn't of the best and who likes drum solos even from Gene? But if you don't get a charge out of the guts, drive the melodic line that emanates from the former Krupa reed man on this side you'll not agree with most of this column's opinions. Both these are reissues, of course, but Savoy gets too cute with its tempo change (to waltz time yet), rhythm stops and whatnot to add up to much more than novelty. However, add to your list of those to be mourned the once proud combination of Krupa and Ventura. It was a good one. (Columbia 38214)

Album rating—JJJJ

It's a darned shame that you'll probably never get to hear 19-yearold Andre Previn over a couple of bottles of Schittz in somebody's joint because, although his style is far more diversified than that remark would indicate, it would be the ideal atmosphere in which to explore the many, many facets of his musical personality. The guy is really good. At first glance you think he's more like Tatum than any other stylist and yet while he undoubtedly has been influenced by him in many respects he has a spontaneity of ideas that is quite often directly opposed to Tatum's carefully plotted and sometimes over complicated harmonic patterns. For one thing, his playing is young and virile with the sureness of execution and intent such as Goodman has always displayed in his improvisation. Previn's playing ranges from a full, even tinkly cocktail style to hard driving jazs.
One minute he's combining Tatum and Waller, the next he kicks like Hines used to and through it all there's a touch of bop though just enough to season rather than dominate. But is played ballad style with some easy changes of pace midway and a brief guitar solo.
Can't is one of the best sides and displays Previn's metallic touch and incredible ability to get around.
Mad has more guitar and Should I is a trifle boppish and a trifle too showy. Hallelujah is up tempo and Shining has some interesting pianoguitar work. Things is first fairly straight melody then jam. The exshowy. Halletujan is up tempo and Shining has some interesting pianoguitar work. Things is first fairly straight melody then jam. The excellent rhythm section has Jackie Mills on drums, Al Viola, guitar and Lloyd Pratt, bass (Victor Album P-214)

So far m= I know there's not a single side in this Joe Mooney album that hasn't been released before. Several like September and Gigolo have been played so much as to make their place in the album me liability. However, to those Beat readers who through some miraculous happenstance know nothing about the tasty Mooney foursome, this is practically a complete package of everything they've done on record. The unfortunate thing about Mooney's wax for Decca is their understandable but unfortunate effort to make him another aspirant to the crown of a King Cole. All but one of these sides are mostly vocal which leaves most musicians panting for more, much more, of the interesting instrumental things that this quartet puts out. There's not much point in re-reviewing any of these individual sides which Mike Levin has so authoritatively commented on before. It is sufficient to say individual sides which Mike Levin has so authoritatively commented on before. It is sufficient to say that if you don't have them and would like a pretty red and gray album to put them in plus a shot of the boys in action, it's a buy, boy. (Decca Album - A-651)

JII Keen And Peachy
JII Foo Got News For You

It may be only an illusion born of hope but Woody's rhythm on Keen sounds as live and solid as the old Herd's did—well, almost anyhow. And the principal reason is Don Lamond's slam bang but accurate drumming. The Ralph Burns original is characteristically a bopper and although it falls Here is Tatum's first release for Victor and although it's good piano it's not topnotch Tatum. Nevertheless there are always ideas aplenty to be heard on practically any record of his and this coupling has a fair quota, particularly on Ain't Burns original is characteristically which is a rhythm side and has a beat all its own sans the rhythm section that so many pianists as more on the Some gets more rubato treatment and sports some beautiful changes that Tatum peanuts. We hear these sides were supposed to be part of a piano to food the supposed to separate for the supposed to suppose for the supposed to separate for the supposed to suppose for the suppose fo band bop and the second a punchy brass in back of reeds. Follows tenor, tram and baritone spots and an ending that will put a choke in your throat for its sheer guts and bite. News is a shout for Woody with a set of lyrics that will hand a laugh to carriers of the card. The phrased as chorus with Lamond's background accents is nice, too. (Columbia 38213)

Claude Thornhill III Anthropology III For Heaven's Sake

Diz' Anthropology sounds a little incongruous emanating from the polished manner of the Thorahill horn men—you keep waiting for somebody to muff one, but no-body does. Claude opens it, and after the ensemble there are fair tram and tenor solos and a crisp and more lengthy guitar effort. Fram Warren, who gets better with each listening, gives a sensitive performance on Sake, which isn't a bad tune. (Columbia 38224)

Stan Kenton

| | | Interlude | | | How High The Moon

With everything else that goes on in the Kenton band, the reminder doesn't appear often enough that the industrious Stan is a pretty fair country pianiat. Rugolo gives him a whole side to demonstrate the fact on the Interlude side, which is one of his more melodic originals. There's no high brass or, in fact, any disturbance of any kind throughout, though the trombones lend some support and color for the last half of the first chorus. It's pretty, simple and a refreshing contrast to the more typically rowdy Kentonistics. first chorus. It's pretty, sample and a refreshing contrast to the more typically rowdy Kentonistics. June Christy joins the rapidly growing list of girl singers (Ella, Anita, Ginnie et al) who have done a partly lyric, partly bop version of Moon and in so doing sings on top of a Kenton that comes about as close to being a (you will pardon the expression) swing band as he will get nowadays. It sounds good, too. The band has some very solid moments and there are fair trombone, better trumpet and best alto choruses along the way. If this is reaction let us make the most of it—and better still, let us make some more of it. (Capitel 15117)

Billy Butterfield

Billy Butterfield

Is I Malaguena

Is Afternoon In August

By now you have probably perceived that Herrick is definitely a Butterfield fan and those who are not will have to subtract a note or two from the above rating to arrive at a more equitable score. There's nothing spectacular about the brand of jazz that Billy and his Capitolmen wax but these ears are in love with that fat Beriganeaque tone of his, with the now uncommon four-four of more conventional swing band days and with the clean and wholly musical tenor of the arrangements. Billy cadenzas to open Malaguena and then after brief saxes and ensemble takes over for most of the balance of the record. His playing with only drums to coast on is superbly punchy. There are a few honest clinkers along the way but nothing serious. Afternoon is a pretty Billy Stegmeyer original and would have been a three-noter save for a slightly erratic performance from a cold-lipped Butterfield. (Capitol 15127) to be far less than it could be with too little attention paid to dynamics, balance, or precision which after all, are worthwhile qualities even in a bop band. But most depressing of all is the quality of the instrumental solos, which lean too much towards showmanship and too little in the direction of good improvization. Hampton is a great jazz musician as he demonstrated first with the Goodman quartet and second with his early hand, which was a well rehearsed, gretty and only slightly less enthasiastic aggregation than his present one. There are some good moments in this album—even some good sides, as for example the to be far less than it could be with good sides, as for example the weirdly beautiful Midnight Sun, which is top drawer in any league, Blue Boy, which has some en-semble moments, Cherokee and memble moments, Cherokee and Re-Bop with a good trumpet and piano and throughout a large slug of the Hampton vibes. Johnny Desmond JIPS. I Love You

JII Wonder Where My Baby Is Tonight

Desmond and four rhythm which include a good fill-in pianist make for a potently intimate combination except when he hugs the mike too close. Johnny, who is another bug for getting the words across, does laudable work with both songs but the old Baby is too old and crochety for today's stylist. (MGM 10225)

Ronnie's True, But Then, To Who? Peer Music Co.,

Philadelphia—Baby, I'm True To You, sings Ronnie Graham, and he isn't serenading Buddy Greco. Whether Ronnie, who holds forth at the Hotel Senator here, meant blonde Toby Deane, former Bob Eberly chirp now on her own, or Senator singer Edna Guber, on the right, we don't know. Greco introduced Graham's ditty on a Musicraft disc.

Album rating—JJJ

The relatively few, mostly musicians, who invested in some of the Paul Whiteman "sectional" records on Decca a number of years ago in which PW put his various orchestral sections on display, may have wondered who the alto man was who pretty well dominated the reed section sides with his gorgeous section sides with his gorgeous tone, amazing technique (he's one of the few who can literally double tongue on a reed instrument) and belongs under "Concert," since five of the sides are straight piano and orchestra but accent appears to be on his brand of dry humor and hence the classification. Borge's battle with the English language is moderately funny on wax and though he plays piano commendably, it's not a heck of a lot letter than most top studio men. He's at his best when performing brilliant and melodious works like the Rachmaninoff Concerto—at his weakest on populike Stardust, where his style is overbearing and heavy. Carmen, Unstarted and Inflation are the comedy sides. (Victor Album - C-161)

Victor Young

Arizona Sketches Manhattan Concerto Travelin' Light In A Notember Garden Album rating-#$

Album rating—If
This pleasant, not too heavy concert music in the movie sound track style of maestro Young who wrote the four works and conducts the stringfull orchestra in its performance. Arizona and Manhattan both take two sides of the six sided 12-inch discs while Travelin' and November are shorter sketches. The main trouble with this type of Americanese concert is that it's difficult to tell where one begins and the other leaves off. Pianist Harry Sukman is featured in great profusion throughout the Manhattan deal. (Artist JY-11)

John Sebastian

Street Corner Concerto Poeme

Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1 Album rating-JJJ

Album rating—J/J

It's still an amazing experience to hear someone play really difficult musical works on a harmonica and not only make them sound good but logical. Sebastian plays well in both Kleinsiger's Manhattanish Concerto and Enesco's Rhapsody, but where he really shines is in parts of the extremely difficult Poeme where the accidentals and awful intervals fall thick and fast. He also made the arrangements for all three works. Russ Case accompanies and the backing is no less mpressive than if Elman were on the date. (Victor Album - DC-43)

Mexican Society Called Chiselers

Mexico City—An effort to discredit the Mexican composers society has been attempted in the local press of the Aztec capital. Officers of SMACEM (Sociedad Mexicano of SMACEM (Sociedad Mean de Autores, Compositores y tores de Musica) have been acci of misuse of funds.

According to Gabriel Luna de because of a chiseling contract

SMACEM has with Peer of New SMACEM has with Peer of New York City, which is about to be broken by the Mexican government. This can be done legally because SMACEM has recently been changed from a "sindicato" under the ministry of labor to a "sociedad" under civil law and is now affiliated with international society of composers in Paris.

No Royalties Paid

SMACEM, a performing and rights organization, has a five-year contract to run until 1950 with Peer, Nothing has been paid to the society since the first of this year. Señor Luna claims that one of the wealthiest men in Mexico and owner of two large radio stations is in partnership with Peer. Neither of his stations, with a chain of outlets throughout the country, have paid royalties, either, and there has been mo law, heretofore, to compel payment.

With the Mexican government now formulating plans for future contracts, SMACEM will receive its due income. Another factor in its favor is the new Mexican copyright law in which rights of authors and composers are more clearly stated and better protected.

Officers Receive Percentage

Officers Receive Percentage Membership in SMACEM, estab-lished in 1939, is about 300. Presi-dent, secretary and treasurer do not receive salaries, but instead, re-

Reaction inside SMACEM to the bad press (which is easily bought in Mexico) has been expulsion of seven members, followed by a vote of confidence to its officers.

Guitarist Gray Quits Ray For Dardanelle

Ray For Dardanelle

Detroit—McKinley's crew and genial maestro Ray both miss guitarist Johnny Gray. Ray admitted you can't replace men like Johnny overnight—'in fact he's irreplaceable." However, despite Johnny's desertion for the quieter life of cocktail lounges, and inclement weather, the McKinley band was heard and appreciated by substatial crowds of Detroiters. They left Eastwood Park for a two week run at Cincy's Coney Island Park after which Ray was hoping to get away for a bit of loafing and shooting in Canada—up around Tobemory in the Georgian Bay country.

McKinley's loss was Dardanelle's gain, when she added Johnny Gray to her outfit. Currently her trio makes some of the finest musical sense in town despite the quietly un-hip surroundings of the pleasant Burgundy Room. So many folks are willing to part with the minimum there that the operator is staying open long after his usual late spring closing date, and begging the trio to stick around all summer. Even musicians are paying that minor matter of a minimum to hear the girl and her guitarist. Sure, there's a bass too—Louis Ott, another McKinley alumnus. Incidently Ray McKinley recently received the degree of Bachelor of Entertainment from Mississippi state college during his third band date there. state college during his third band date there.

McHugh Defies 8-Note Formula, And Succeeds

Hollywood-Famous song writer Jimmy McHugh, in celebrating his 25th year as a tune cleffer, offers a hint or two for young writers. First, says Jimmy, who started out in the early '20s with his still-famous "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," to become a successful songwriter, one must write and write and write. It's not like writing a book, he declares, for an author can become a success with just one book, i.e., Dale Carnegie and his very successful How To Win Friends And In-Dale Chines to Win Friends And Influence People. Song writing is different. Successful song writers today write from two to six flops before hitting with one successful tune, McHugh claims.

Defies Formula

"There's a popular theory among publishers," Jimmy said as he chipped ice in the bar of his plush Beverly Hills home, "that in order for a tune to become successful its melody line must span no more than eight notes, and that it must be kept quite simple. I don't believe that and have never made an effort purposely to keep any of my songs within such limitations.

"I've written some songs with a span of as many as 14 notes. In fact, Exactly Like You has 14 notes; Sunnyside Of The Street has 10; Don't Blame Me has nine. I notes; Sunnyside Of The Street has 10; Don't Blame Me has nine. I follow a theory of bigness of sound. Tollow a theory of bighess of sound.

That's elementary. If a melody sounds good and big, I think it will appeal to singers, and the public alike. I always try to inject a musical phrase where the vocalist will have phrase where the vocalist will have a feeling of going out after it—a challenge. Singers like an opportunity to get a bigness out of their voices. They like the chance to see their voices as an instrument. As a result, when writing, I always try to keep the vocalist in mind. That's most important."

Message Subordinate

Message Subordinate

Jimmy continued, explaining that the message of a song is not as important as the sound and flexibility of the tune. It is in this, he says, that a singer gets a chance to prove his ability.

McHugh for the last eight years has confined his song writing to the movies. As mentioned in the previous issue, he wrote The Music Stopped, I Couldn't Sleep A Wink Last Night and This Is A Lovely Way To Spend An Evening for Frank Sinatra's first film, Higher And Higher, That was in 1943.
