

TD Told To Open Ears To Bop

By RALPH J. GLEASON

San Francisco—Woody Herman, Nat Cole, Mel Torme, and June Christy lashed out in no uncertain terms at those who talk against bop—Tommy Dorsey in particular—at a symposium held here recently on Jimmy Lyons' KNBC disc show. TD was put down by the quartet because of his recent activity in blasting bop in interviews and on the air.

Dorsey made six air appearances in one day in Los Angeles

when he opened at Casino Gardens ballroom and blasted bop on almost every one, prompting Woody Herman to hunt through the shops of San Francisco until he found a plaid coat with a belt in the back, which he sent to Dorsey, saying, "If he wants to play that way, he should dress that way."

Symposium the Result

The symposium took its cue from the Dorsey remarks. Here, in abbreviated form, is what was said.

Lyons: "We're gathered here to discuss something which we feel rather strongly about. One of the biggest band leaders in the country recently made air appearances and said strong things about bop. He called it lousy and said some other things that we don't think belong in the mouths of any of the leaders of American music. Let's have Woody to talk about it first."

Herman: "As you mentioned, Dorsey did become a little strong on the subject of bop. Socially, Tommy and I have had a beautiful friendship, and I'm sure it will continue, but musically we have not seen eye to eye on too many occasions. I, for one, feel Tommy isn't doing music justice by making statements like that."

Must Be Served

"That's because bop is the music of the youth, and anywhere youth is, it must be served. We'd better listen to youth because when we stop, we become doddering old men. And there is no place in jazz for doddering old men. The age has nothing to do with it. It's how you feel inside and what you put down."

Christy: "Well, I don't have much of anything to add, but I will say this about Tommy, or anyone else who puts down bop. Bop is the greatest new form of music we have. It grew out of all the other kinds of music—blues, Dixieland, and down the line—but most of the people who put it down haven't taken the time to understand it."

"You can excuse the public because many persons don't have the time, but persons in the music business owe it to the business to be interested enough to sit down and try to understand."

"No one can stop the progress of music. If Dorsey, and even the whole public, rose up to say bop stinks and it shouldn't be here, that wouldn't stop it from going forward, just like it won't stop science or other art forms from moving forward."

Preacher of Bop

Cole: "I am a preacher, so to speak, of be-bop. But I hate the word, as such. I wish they hadn't even thought of a name, just let the music come in. But now they've got something to say—be-bop—when anything sounds bad. And as soon as parents hear the word they say, 'I don't want my child associated with it because it spells juvenile delinquency.'"

"I don't know why that came into the picture at all, but it has been my main ambition to stop

Battle Jim Crow In Miami Locals

Miami—A series of jazz concerts touched off an argument here that has thus far involved the national AFM, the colored and white locals here, and prompted charges of "Jim Crow." It also caused the man who located musicians for the concerts to be fined $400 and to wonder when "people here will be able to hear the best in jazz and why there have to be two separate locals here from the same national organization."

The whole hassle started when the Sky Club started a series of jazz concerts in April. Op Bill Freyer had Earl Hodges, leader of a jazz trio at the club, locate talent for him. Hodges located a Dixie group led by Rollo Laylan, a bop crew from the University of Miami, plus his own trio and guests. Sessions drew crowds from the start.

Then Trouble

After the fifth concert, Nowell Cruz' bop trio, a Negro group, was recommended to Hodges and he scheduled them for the next concert. This brought Hodges a telegram from Roy Singer, president of Local 655, the Miami white union, which, according to Hodges, read:

"You have permission to use members of Local 655 only. Govern yourself accordingly."

At the concert, Hodges read the wire to the crowd to explain why Cruz could not play.

According to Hodges, his reading of the wire incensed officials of 655 and they dipped into Petrillo funds to put on concerts at two other clubs as competition to his bashas. One of these "jazz" concerts, Hodges says, featured a society band and a show band.

Didn't Blame Him

The other used Laylan's Dixie group. Laylan made the switch, according to Hodges, "because he was a member of 655 and he didn't want to stick his neck out, and I don't blame him." Hodges is a member of New York city Local 802.

The competing concerts started the week after Hodges read the union official's wire, and the same week Hodges started using Cruz' trio. He used the trio for two weeks. Then, Hodges claims, a member of the local liquor board visited Preyer and said to him, "You're not gonna have niggers here any more, are you?" This not too subtle hint, Hodges charges, ended the concert series. The competing concerts stopped at the same time, too.

Meanwhile, Hodges had been tried, in absentia, by Local 655 and found guilty of paying musicians under scale and intimidating Preyer. The local recommended fines of $400 for Hodges and $200 each for the other members of his trio. Hodges says the first charge is based on two concerts which ran a few minutes past 7 p.m., when scale goes up $5 an hour, while the second resulted from the fact that the concerts were billed as

Just A Fill-In

San Francisco—When Woody Herman's disc of Four Brothers was first released, a top rank bandleader came up to him on the street and said, "Man, who's that bass player? Where'd you get him? He's the most!"

"Oh," Woody replied, "that's just our manager, Walt Yoder. Just our manager. He fills in on bass when we need him."

Terry Tied

San Francisco—There was a big backstage celebration after the Woody Herman-King Cole concert here in August, to honor newlyweds Terry Gibbs and Donna Hartough. Herman vibist Gibbs and Donna were married in Los Angeles the afternoon of the concert and flew up for the date. Terry looks like he still can't believe it.

Strand Returns To Stage Shows

New York—Strand theater, which dropped stage shows early in July, brought them back again Sept. 2, with Xavier Cugat's band headlining. House tried a straight film policy during the summer with little success. Cugat is doubling from the Astor roof, where he has been held over until Sept. 10.

Return of stage policy, however, does not mean Strand will necessarily continue to book bands. Following Cugat will probably be the Salute to Gershwin show, which originated at the Sherman hotel, Chicago, last year. Theater's management figures on trying various stage policies so as not to be tied down to any one particular format.

Marsala May Have Hit Tune On Hands

New York—Joe Marsala, who has been forced to abandon his clarinet temporarily because of an allergy infection on his hands, has turned to song writing, with his first effort, Let Her Go, Let Her Go, Let Her Go, giving indications of hit potentialities.

Song was turned down by a number of publishers until Marsala got Frank Sinatra to cut it for Columbia. Sinatra waxing stirred trade interest and number has now been done by Gordon Jenkins for Decca, Johnny Desmond for MGM, Kitty Kallen for Mercury, and Juanita Hall for Victor.

Royal Leaves Woody

Portland, Ore.—Ernie Royal has left Woody Herman's band to form his own combo in Los Angeles. Buddy Childers, ex-Stan Kenton trumpeter, took over Royal's chair.

Dameron, Davis Woodshedding A 'Dream' Band

New York—Tadd Dameron and Miles Davis put an 18-piece band into rehearsal at the end of August. Band, which will be under the combined names of the pianist and trumpeter, will have a book entirely written by Tadd. He has been working on it since his return from Paris in mid-summer.

Davis-Dameron crew will have Red Rodney, Bernie Glow, Lammar Wright, Jr., and Davis on trumpets; Johnny Mandel, bass trumpet; Kai Winding, Matthew Gee, and two more trombones; Charlie Kennedy and Fats Ford, altos; Allen Eager and Zoot Sims, tenors; Cecil Payne, baritone; Dameron, piano; Nelson Boyd, bass; Johnny Collins, guitar; Shadow Wilson, drums, and Pancho Hagood, vocals.

Cyclist Diz Bruised As Auto Clips Him

Geneva, N. Y.—Dizzy Gillespie nursed a badly skinned right forearm as the result of being hit by a car while he was riding a bicycle here recently. The accident also caused an impromptu reunion of band leaders.

The bop trumpeter, in his own words, "was riding along, minding my own business, when—Bop!—I was hit from behind and was flying 10 feet over the handlebars."

"The motorist stopped and helped me up. Then who should pull up in a car but Erskine Hawkins, on his way from Saginaw, Mich., to New York."

The injury was treated at Geneva General hospital.

Concert Tour A Woody Lifesaver

Hollywood—The joint concert series presented in a string of west coast cities by Woody Herman and King Cole grossed almost $77,000, according to figures released here.

For Herman, the concerts probably were a lifesaver, as he was reportedly about ready to give up, either by switching to a supposedly more marketable type of music, or—like Stan Kenton—by dropping out for rest and re-orientation.

Gene Settles Down

New York—After several changes, the Gene Krupa band now lines up this way: trumpets—Roy Eldridge, Don Fagerquist, Ray Triscari, and Jimmy Markle; trombones—Irby Green, Frank Ross, Frank Rehack, and Al Townsend; saxes—Lenny Hambro and Harvey Cousin, altos; Buddy Wise and John Lucaek, tenors; Dale Keever, baritone; rhythm—Park Hill, guitar; Krupa, drums; Don Simpson, bass, and Joe Cohen, piano. Bill Black and Dolores Hawkins are doing the vocals.

Down Beat covers the music news from coast to coast.

Oo—o—h—h!

Pittsburgh—Now that you've gotten around to reading the caption, the young lady above is Marquette Knudsen, the most recent of flack Tim Gayle's promotions. A singer, she worked as Peggy Lloyd with Carl Hoff's band and with Joe Marsala at New York's Hickory House. Confusion resulted, though, as comedian Harold Lloyd has a daughter named Peggy, also in show business. So it's the real handle for Marquette, until Gayle gets another bright idea.

Raises Set For Some Musicians

New York—Bands playing with ice shows and traveling with theatrical companies are due for raises come Sept. 15.

AFM edict boosts scale for sidemen on ice shows to $150, and to $215 for leaders, a boost of $25. Both sidemen and leaders get $10 extra if the show plays more than one town in a week. Scale for Sundays will be upped $2 a man—to $20 for sidemen and $30 for leaders.

Bands traveling with theatrical shows will get $140 for sidemen and $205 for leaders, with similar raises for broken weeks and Sundays. New ruling also increases rehearsal rates.

Louis Might Make Europe Trip Again

New York—Plans are in the works for Louis Armstrong, currently at Bop City, to make another European tour later in the fall. Tour depends on whether he can get signed agreements for a minimum of 60 days.

Louis has been offered two weeks in the Scandinavian countries and four single dates in Switzerland, all in October. Offers include a $2,000 guarantee, plus percentage and an exchange agreement. Whether he takes the trip depends on other agreements coming through.

New York—Local 802 gave 125 free concerts in the Metropolitan district during August. Among them were a concert by an old-timers orchestra and a concert in memory of the march king, John Philip Sousa.

Reinhardt's, Sid On The Cover

Chicago's Jazz Ltd. has gained note, since its inaugural two years ago, as one of the country's top jazz spots. The same week it marked its second anniversary, owners Bill and Ruth Reinhardt celebrated eight years of marriage. On the cover, Big Sid Catlett snaps off a paradiddle or two to make the celebration a loud one, Bill thoughtfully fingers his clarinet, and Ruth displays the pulchritude that made her a dancing star for several years in New York.

Cruz' Crew Can't Show In Miami Concerts, Says J. Crow Via AFM

Miami—Embroidered in the union fracas here are all of these persons, and a good many others—about whom you can read in the Beat's exclusive story in this issue. Union (and Jim Crow) approved concert participants are shown in the first photo. Earl Hodges is on bongos; Hodges' drummer, Bill Ladley, is playing conga drum; Rollo Laylan, who heads his own Dixie unit, drums, and Buddy Satan, former drummer who now leads his own trio from

"Earl Hodges presents," thus by-passing Preyer.

These fines all are subject to execution by the national office, since Hodges is an 802 member. Also pending is a request to the national office to place the Sky club on the "forbidden territory" list.

Roy Singer, 655 president, said, "I gave Earl, who is a traveling member, permission to run the concerts. But I didn't give him permission to use members of any other local." (Ed. Note: Local policy seems to involve dividing Miami into sections, with each one staying in its own territory. But Down Beat could not find this anywhere in written form.)

Continued Singer, "We fined him because we caught him and his outfit cheating and for no other reason."

Denies Singer Authority

But Hezekiah Brown, president of Local 690, the colored musicians union, denied that Singer had the right to send the telegram to Hodges, saying that Local 690 is supposed to be able to work anywhere in town, according to the charter they got in 1946. And he added that he didn't see how Singer was authorized to give or withhold permission to play the Sky club to musicians who were members of the same national group as the white union.

Concerning the alleged use of recording and transcription fund money to promote concerts that would draw crowds away from the Sky club, Singer said, "It's ridiculous to think we'd try to get away with anything like running a public welfare project in a night club."

(Ed. Note: Jazz concert musicians may have thought they were paid from fund money because they got payments for the concerts through the union, a policy followed in Miami whenever there is a dispute. But Down Beat could find no one who had signed the fund receipts that go back to James Petrillo. If the union was doing as Hodges charged, all names would have had to been forged on the fund form.)

They Did Everything

Op Bill Preyer objected because "they did everything they could to make me stop my concerts. I'd still be running them but they got some pretty big boys to move in on me and I knew then I was licked." Preyer wouldn't name "the big boys," just said it was not the liquor board.

"Look," said Preyer, "how would you like to have a packed house for a concert and just before you pull the curtains have a union rep walk in and check cards for almost an hour? This happened two weeks straight. By then I had enough."

"I told them what to do with their local, fired all their members, and ran the thing with colored talent."

Had to Quit

"They couldn't touch me until they got something more impressive than a bunch of by-laws. When they got that, naturally I had to lay off."

"But they're cutting their own throats. I'd still be hiring 10 or 15 of their men a week if it hadn't been for their Jim Crow policy."

Hodges, "sick of the whole mess," still was determined to "keep hammering away at them whenever I can. I'm not going to

Huh? Bop In The Village?

New York—At August's end bop had begun to seep into Greenwich Village, longtime Dixieland stronghold and hold-out against the modern stuff. Coleman Hawkins took a bop-ping group into Cafe Society to replace Tony Scott, including Al Haig, piano; Johnny Collins, guitar; Nelson Boyd, bass, and Shadow Wilson, drums.

Requirements of Cafe Society, however, keep this from being a real bop session. Group plays for dancing and gets a couple of numbers during the show, one of them usually being Hawk's Body and Soul. For the most part, he is playing more in his style of the late '30s and early '40s, with little of the more esoteric blowing he was doing last year with the Jazz at the Philharmonic troupe. It's mighty pleasant stuff and a pleasure to hear a full-blown saxophone again.

Signed by Permission

"As for the charge that I was running the concerts myself, that's fantastic. I located the musicians, but so what? Preyer's no musician and you've got to have one to run a jazz concert. Any signing I did was strictly for him, by permission."

(Ed. Note: Down Beat checked the above statement and saw most of the contracts. Hodges signed only one and that by per.)

Use Hits Again At Compounce

Hartford—The name band policy is back again at Lake Compounce, amusement spot at Bristol, Conn. The policy resumed in August with Bobby Byrne and orchestra in at 85 cents top. Vaughn Monroe ork also there recently.

The Hotel Garde, local downtown spot, has been sold. Whether the new management plans a new policy for the hotel's Shangri-La room, formerly used as a night club, has not been announced as yet. In more recent times, the room has been strictly an eating spot.

—Allen Widem

Meadowbrook Shifts Policy

New York—Frank Dailey has slightly revamped his plans for dropping name bands at his Meadowbrook this season. Basic diet for the Meadowbrook, long one of the best known big name stands in the east, will be semi-name territory bands supplemented on weekends by radio and recording names. Name bands will be brought in for holiday weeks when Dailey expects to draw a heavy school and college trade.

Meadowbrook reopened for the season with Eddie Farley's combo. Farley's crew, first brought into the Meadowbrook at the tag end of last season, was the deciding factor in Dailey's determination to switch to the new policy.

Big Ones

He was booking name bands last season with many of them laying large, resonant eggs. When Farley came in, according to Dailey, he satisfied the customers more than any of the name outfits and cost a lot less.

Billy Bishop followed Farley on Sept. 6. Bishop is in for four weeks with a pair of two week options.

First of the weekend names scheduled is Frankie Laine, who goes in for three days on Sept. 9. No one else was set at presstime for the following weekends, but Patti Page and Red Ingle were under consideration.

A New Doris

Gregg Sings While Hoping For Harlow Role

Rockton, Ill.—Singer Gregg Sherwood, while waiting a possible call from the movies, has been singing with the band at the Wagon Wheel here. The combo, which has kept the Wheel spinning for 3 1/2 years, has Pete Zito, accordion; Cy Tellefson, guitar; Paul Liddell, bass, and Louie Northrup, violin. Gregg may get the part of Jean Harlow in a proposed film treatment of the late actress' life.

In and Out

The piano made its bow at the Deuces simultaneously with a change of bone men there. Kai Winding's Bopset went out and J. J. Johnson's Bopset came in. Strong point of Johnson's boppers is the rhythm section—Max Roach, drums; Curley Russell, bass, and John Lewis, piano. Section lays down a powerful background, with Lewis putting out some particularly thoughtful and musicianly piano solos.

Front line doesn't measure up to the rhythm. Stan Getz, tenor, and Fats Navarro, trumpet, blow hot and cold, ideas apparently being at a premium this season. Ironically, Johnson is the weakest element in his own combo.

Down Beat covers the music news from coast to coast and is read around the world.

Mindy Gets 5-Year TV, Radio Contract

New York—Following her unusually successful debut at the Copacabana, Mindy Carson has been tied up by the National Broadcasting company for five years on radio and television. Since she already has a Victor record pact, deal will give her a complete RCA buildup via radio, TV, and discs.

Her radio and video shows are due to start about Oct. 1. Couple of years ago she was a regular on Paul Whiteman's Stairway to the Stars airer, but the new series will be the first time she has had a show of her own.

Singer also has been signed for a second radio show by American Tobacco. No starting time has been set yet on this one.

Miss Carson made her New York bow at the Copa on June 28 and, after four weeks as a featured singer, was raised to star billing. She closed at the Copa Sept. 7.

Shaw Outlines Bopless Artistry

New York—Talking it over quietly are Artie Shaw, right, and Johnny Mandel, who is the new arranger for Artie's band. Shaw is expected to start on tour this fall with a large dance band, and confine his longhair experiments to solo appearances. Story on Shaw's latest plans in the adjoining column.

This Time Shaw Will Play As Dancers Ask, He Says

By JOHN S. WILSON

New York—The 1939 bobby sock followers of Artie Shaw who were accused of being "morons" by the maestro will hardly recognize their old flame if they catch him on the tour which he'll start Sept. 14 at Symphony hall in Boston. This time, he says, he'll play whatever the public wants. "I'll play enough of what I have to play to keep the band together," he said.

"If they want Begin the Beguine, I'll even play that. But I want to play something for kicks, too."

A Dance Band

Artie's new band, he says, will be primarily a dance band. They're set for a series of one-niters, theaters, and concerts through December. He's also lining up a series of longhair solo dates for himself during the same period.

"I don't want to get too far away from it," he explained, referring to his longhair work.

He plans to lay off a couple of weeks after the first of the year, and then may do a concert tour.

"But I vacillate so much," he admitted, "that it's foolish to say now what I'll do next year."

Old Stuff, Too

The band's book will contain both old Shaw standards and new material. Stuff from the old Begin the Beguine period, when Artie first hit the top, was written for instrumentation similar to that which he will carry with him now, and will be played from the old arrangements. Material from the Frenesi period, when he was using strings, will be rescored when it lends itself to rescoring.

The new material will not be called bop. His managers want it referred to as "new music," a tag which Artie was using some 12 years ago when he was billed as "Art Shaw and His New Music." His current billing, incidentally, is "The Artistry of Artie Shaw and His Orchestra." Artie denies that any bop phrases will appear in his new material.

"I don't like bop phrases," he said. "If somebody else is doing it, why should I?"

His coming tour is the first time that Artie has gone on the road with a band in years.

'I've Been Gone'

"I've been away long enough for a whole new crop of musicians to come up," he said. "I'll be interested to see what happens."

The band, a 17-piece outfit, had not been entirely set at presstime. Those definitely in the crew are: trumpets—Don Palladino and Dale Pearce; trombones—Chauncey Welsh, Freddie Zito, Porky Cohen, and Ange Callea; saxes—Tony Ragusa and Frankie Socolow, altos; Al Cohn and Joe Lagano, tenors; Danny Banks, baritone; rhythm—Dick Niveson, bass, and

Kenny Clarke's Brother Killed

San Francisco—Frank J. Clarke, 34, bass player with Jack McVea and brother of Kenny Clarke, was shot and killed Aug. 9 as he stood on the porch of a Sacramento rooming house.

Sam Chambray, 28, a Los Angeles postal clerk was arrested for the murder. His sister, Augustine, who owned the rooming house, and Clarke got into an argument over hot water facilities. She called Chambray about it and he flew in from L.A.

According to McVea, who was standing on the porch with Clarke, "there was no argument between Clarke and Chambray. Chambray told Frank to take his hands out of his pockets, and when he did so, pulled out his gun and fired."

Clarke was killed instantly. Wyatt (Bull) Ruther has replaced Clarke in the band.

Jimmy Raney, guitar. Vic Ford, trumpet, and Gene DiNovi, piano, still were tentative at presstime. A fourth trumpet and a drummer still were to be selected.

Vocalist will be Pat Lockwood, whom Artie terms "the first girl I've heard that I wanted." Arrangements are principally by Johnny Mandel, Ange Callea, and Al Cohn, with a few contributed by Gene Roland and John LaPorta.

Itinerary Set

Dates set so far are: Sept. 14, Symphony hall, Boston; 15, Providence, place unsettled; 16-18, State theater, Hartford; 21-24, one-niters in Canada, towns not definite; Oct. 1, Pla-Mor ballroom, Kansas City, Mo.; 4, Arkota ballroom, Sioux Falls, S. D.; 5, Tomba ballroom, Sioux City, Ia.; 6, Armar ballroom, Marion, Ia.; 8, Frog Hop ballroom, St. Joseph, Mo.; 9, Tromar ballroom, Des Moines.

Oct. 12, Kato ballroom, Mankato, Minn.; 15, State university, Iowa City, Ia.; 16, Eagles' ballroom, Milwaukee; 18, Nightingale ballroom, Kaukauna, Wis.; 21-22, Purdue university, Purdue, Ind.; 23, Inglaterra ballroom, Peoria, Ill.; 29, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis; 30, Electric Park, Waterloo, Ia.; Nov. 5, I.M.A. auditorium, Flint, Mich.

No Big Band Or Bop Tag For Ventura

New York—Following his run at Bop City, which ended Aug. 24, Charlie Ventura is taking a vacation until Sept. 15, when he reopens at the Club Bali in Washington, D. C. Despite talk that he might come to a group tour will stay at its usual size, although there may be some personnel changes by then.

Singer Beverly Brooks left the band in the middle of the Bop City date and probably won't be back. She originally joined the group, replacing Jackie Cain, only two weeks after she had a child, which died. By the time Ventura reached New York, she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Her doctors advised her to take a rest for at least six months.

Wayne Also Leaves

Max Wayne, bass, also left the combo in New York when his father died. He was replaced by Red Mitchell.

One new face Charlie will unveil in Washington will be Jimmy Vanni, a singer from Jersey City. Charlie is particularly high on Vanni and has already cut one record, Honey, with him. Vanni will do ballads and Ventura wants to try some unison voice and horn experiments in a slow vein with him.

Charlie's current layoff is his first break in 156 weeks. He had planned to play only weekends during August, but the Bop City booking killed that idea. If it can still be arranged, he wants to play only two or three days a week for a while because he has a lot of new material which he wants to rehearse, but which he hasn't had time to get to.

As for the big band talk, Charlie says it isn't in the cards right now. For some theater dates which are being lined up, he may augment the band, but the extra men would just be fill-ins to play the show, with the current group doing most of the playing.

"I'd like to try a big band," Charlie said, "but with conditions in the business the way they are now I wouldn't want to risk it. If I had six months advance work for a big band lined up, I'd do it, but not otherwise."

Currently Charlie's trying to get away from being tabbed as a bop band.

No Connections

"I don't like to be connected with the word bop," he said. "I never was for it. The word became such a center of controversy. Victor insisted on that tag, 'Bop for the People,' because they wanted to get on the bop wagon. But I was against it. I wanted to call it 'Music of '49' and, next year, 'Music of '50' and so on. I just want to experiment and be up to date."

The "Bop for the People" tag has been dropped but the idea lingers on.

Scares Dancers

"We play a lot of dance music on one-niters," Charlie said, "and we've found that bop scares the dancers. They figure they can't dance to it and at first they just listen. Then when they find that we're really playing dance music, they start to dance. I try to adapt the band to the spot where we're playing. We can't afford to play just one type of music. You can't live on musicians alone."

"Getting tied up with the word bop tears down the selling points of the band. You can't jam things down people's throats."

Studio Arranger Drowns Canoeing

New York—Frank J. Guilfoyle, radio and television arranger, drowned Aug. 10 while canoeing on Truesdale lake, near his summer home at Lewisboro, N. Y. He was 52.

Guilfoyle wrote arrangements for Milton Berle's TV show, the Robert Merrill show, the Hit Parade, Hildegarde, and the 54th Street Revue. He was a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He is survived by his wife, two children, two brothers, two sisters, and his mother.

Granz Halts Disc Use Of JATP Sides

New York—Norman Granz has been granted a temporary injunction against George Erlinger and the Disc record company which enjoins Disc from using either Granz' name or Jazz at the Philharmonic in conjunction with the production, distribution, or sale of records. Platters in question are JATP albums volumes 2, 3, 4, and 5.

Erlinger, who founded Disc in 1947 with Moe Asch, took over the company from Asch in 1948. Granz claims the JATP platters released on the Disc label were made under a deal with Asch personally and he refuses to honor the transfer of rights to these masters to Erlinger. Granz charges that since Asch left Disc in 1948, Erlinger has been producing JATP albums in violation of his, Granz', rights. Granz says he is legal owner of the masters, wants them delivered to him, and wants an accounting from Erlinger and a permanent injunction against further production.

Granz has a $100,000 damage suit pending against Erlinger and Disc. The temporary injunction was granted pending trial of the suit. If he recovers the masters, Granz will probably turn them over to Mercury records, with which he now has a contract.

Bothwell Bird

New York—Jann Stevens has a sort of birdlike look, so it's no wonder to find that she's featured chirp with Johnny Bothwell's new band. Bothwell's unit is reportedly stopping bopping when it opens in New York in mid-September. Johnny has spent most of the summer with his own combo at the Paramount club in Albany, Ga.

Auld's Tin Pan Alley Blooms With Modern Music

New York—Opening night at Georgie Auld's Tin Pan Alley club, in the Markwell hotel here, seemed to be getting off to a roisterous start when this photo was taken. Herb Wasserman is the drummer; Dante Martucci, bass, and Barbara Carroll, piano. The audience too, is of interest to Beat readers. At the table, yakking, are Mrs. Sid Torin, wife of disc jockey-impressionist Symphony Sid; Monte Kay, who opens his own club on Broadway this month; operator Auld, and flack Virginia Wicks.

CHICAGO BAND BRIEFS

No, Them Ain't Hillbillies, It's Les Paul 'N Company

By PAT HARRIS

Chicago—There were times, during the night Les Paul's trio and Georg Brunis' band opened at the Blue Note, when anyone walking in the door could only gape and wonder, "is this the right place?" Les Paul has long been known for his formidable technique on the guitar.

But it's not the type of showmanship the Note is accustomed to. Paul and his group looked like a contingent from the WFL barn dance, and their relaxed friendliness, like a breath of fresh country air, put the at first unnerved audience at ease, then entranced them.

Neat Looking

With Les are Mary Ford, a petite, red-haired, demure looking girl who sings and plays rhythm guitar, and Warren Downie, formerly Hal Otis' guitar player, now playing bass. On stand uniform opening night consisted of blue work shirts, open at the throat, for Paul and Downie, and a plain black dress for Mary. Les' socks were of bright, multicolored plaid, clearly visible when he kicked off his shoes while playing hillbilly numbers.

Don't get the wrong idea. Mixed in with the fun was some fine music. How High the Moon and Lover were not neglected, nor tunes such as Out of Nowhere and Blue Skies. There were no set arrangements on the things they played. Paul says he prefers doing each tune differently each time. One song segues into another, and Les thinks nothing of stopping in the middle to say hello to a friend or to joke about what he and his group are doing.

Not Like Slim

Unlike Slim Gaillard's similar-sounding actions, Paul's unit gives the impression of constant musicianship, fast paced, yet with the ease mentioned before.

This is only the third nightclub Paul has ever worked in. He was on various radio stations here for more than a decade, leaving in 1942 to go west with Ben Bernie. In the early '30s he was known as Rhubarb Red, and played mountain music on WLS. But he hasn't seriously played that type of music since.

"If someone in the first row asks for Blood and Whisky on the Highway, we'll play it," Paul says. "We'll butcher four bars of it and tell him that's all we know, then ask him if he'd like to hear Lover." By this time, the character in the front row is so pleased he agrees, and probably thinks Lover is great. Which it is.

Les says he's never been quite so happy before. By the end of his two weeks at the Note it seemed probable that many of the persons who went down to hear him would say likewise.

Not Georg

About Georg Brunis' band, which alternated with Paul at the Note the same thing unfortunately cannot be said. Dixie trombonist Brunis didn't like the men he had picked out to open with him (the Sky Club unit went back east) and was not above saying so on the stand. In such a situation it would be unfair to say anything about how the individual musicians sounded. Brunis had Emery Granger on trumpet; Paul Jones, clarinet; Art Gronwall, piano; Earl Murphy, bass, and Freddie Flynn, drums.

Woody Herman was scheduled to open at the Note Sept. 5 for two weeks, to be followed by the Trenner Twins and probably Raymond Scott. Then Duke Ellington for three weeks early in October.

The persons responsible for booking bands into the loop Preview finally got around to hearing their off-night unit. And they flipped. So at presstime, Joe Petroselli, Reid Baker, and Skeets McWilliams could look forward to working six nights a week, for a change, in the loop spot.

Maybe Donegan

The northside Argyle reopened again last month, with new owner Jimmy Gannon bringing in the Three Loose Screws, a comedy unit, and an organist. It's possible that Dorothy Donegan, opening soon at the Flame in Detroit, will go in later.

Tune Toppers on their way back to Chicago after a date in Alaska. Four Steps of Jive at the Ranch; Dave Bold at the Vanity Fair, and Johnny Betts playing piano at the Taboo, which still has the Characters. Barrett Deems playing recently at the Crown Propeller, and word is that Red Coty is back in the music business again.

Three Years

Floyd Smith rounding out three years at the DuSable lounge, while Claude McLin's combo still is at the Morocco and Bill Pinkett at Jimmy's Palm Gardens, all on the southside.

Apologies to Floyd O'Brien, trombonist with Miff Mole, whose name was mixed up with pianist Floyd Bean's in a recent issue. Miff's band at the Bee Hive, will probably add a trumpet player as soon as school starts again at the nearby University of Chicago.

Batch Of Dates Set For Herman

Chicago—A string of 16 one-nights in the midwest was planned for Woody Herman, to follow the two weeks the band is sitting out at the Blue Note here. On Sept. 20 they play the Prom ballroom, St. Paul; 21, Terp, Austin, Minn.; 22, Surf, Clear Lake, Ia.; 23, Turnpike, Lincoln, Neb.; 24, Frog Hop, St. Joseph, Mo.; 25, Tomba, Sioux City, Ia.; 26, Legion pavilion, Breckenridge, Minn.; 27, Arkota, Sioux Falls, S. D.; 28, Tromar, Des Moines; 29, Armar, Marion, Ia.; 30, State college, Normal, Ill.

Herman continues in October, playing Oct. 1 at White City park, Herrin, Ill.; 5, Rialto theater, Joliet, Ill.; 6, Palace theater, South Bend, Ind.; 7, Pavillion, Fruitport, Mich.; 8, 9, Flint, Mich.

Herman is tentatively set to open Oct. 27 for three weeks at Pop City, New York.

Yippee-I-Ay

Hollywood—Vaughn Monroe dropped off the Camel Caravan show with the broadcast of Aug. 20 for a five-week hiatus, during which he will be at Republic studios making his debut as rhythm ruster in Singing Guns. The Monroe band will not work in the movie.

Rollini group (Capsule Comments, Aug. 26) applies equally to the Trio Clox' combo. Comedy, when your heart's not in it, is probably the most painful thing a musician can do, both for himself and discerning listeners. All right, so most listeners don't discern worth a darn, and a musician has to eat just like anyone else. But to take a good, musical, group and deliberately abandon music for clowning still is something we can't defend.

Frankie Masters' band held over at the Stevens' hotel's Boulevard room for the fifth time. Masters will be there until January, at least, piling up the longest run any band has ever had there—15 months.

Chicago—It's tough, when you're just 16 and want to run with the pack, to have to go it alone. Even tougher when what you want to do more than anything else in the world makes it necessary for you to leave home to get a chance.

That's part of Freddie Gruber's story. It's the story of a chair-seat drummer, a backstage pest, a hungry kid who had no place to sleep and no decent clothes, and who was constantly getting into everyone's hair.

The tale is that there's even a "hate Freddie Gruber" club organized in New York, of those who couldn't take the time to hear what sounds he would extract from those chairs, and who didn't like a smart kid standing around watching them like a cynical and unfed puppy.

First Real Job

Freddie is the drummer who has been working with Buddy DeFranco recently. He's using his first real set of drums, which some chick bought him, and for the first time really getting a chance to play with other musicians. "He'll be the greatest," Buddy says, "when he gets a little more experience playing with a group."

The only other band he's ever played with was Ben Ventura's short-lived venture early this year.

Freddie, who is 19, was left with only his drumsticks when a family fracas finished his drum set about five years ago. It was shortly after that that he started his nomadic existence in Manhattan, forsaking the troubled teepee in the Bronx.

Amazing Technique

But what he did with his drumsticks and assorted chairs gave Gruber a technique and facility that is amazing. His ability to play multiple rhythms, his constant playing behind the band, and what seemed like impeccable taste in his choice of what to play, mark him as a musician to watch closely.

Ulanov mentioned him in an editorial about two years ago; Henry Adler, whose tutelage he left when his money ran out, called him back and volunteered instruction any way, and one or two name drummers have listened and been kind enough through with hints and miscellaneous equipment, sandwiches, and carfare.

A Daily Wonder

Gruber, a small, stocky, bright-eyed boy who looks vaguely like Buddy Stewart (maybe it's the crew cut) and a bit like Mel Torme (might be the same air of satisfaction), knows he's got a way to go before he will be an honest-to-

Begin Judging 'Word' Contest

Chicago—As this issue of Down Beat went to press, entries to "What's the Word" were continuing to pour in with each mail delivery, and a staff of clerks already was busy sorting and listing the entries.

Early in September, all of them were ready for the judges, Stan Kenton, S. I. Hayakawa, Marshall Stearns and John Lucas, to begin their task of selecting the 26 most acceptable words submitted. These will be rated in order of excellence and the distribution of the 26 cash and merchandise prizes to the winners will be started.

Watch each forthcoming issue of Down Beat for further news about the contest.

'Mares Led Inspiring Crew'

By GEORGE HOEFER

Chicago—A glowing spirit of Dixieland music was extinguished with the death of the New Orleans cornetist, Paul Mares, on Aug. 18. Without Paul's driving cornet and his unparalleled enthusiasm, the real New Orleans Dixieland is going to be a less happy music to many people. The week before he died in his Chicago home he expressed the wish to be buried on Monday—because that was the musician's day off and they could attend the funeral.

Music and musicians have been foremost in his mind ever since he left the marines after World War I and came to Chicago. In 1920 he organized a band in the Windy city that was destined to become one of the most influential orchestras in jazz history. This band, the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, served as an inspiration to a list of musicians too long to include here.

Let it suffice to mention Benny Goodman, the late Bix Beiderbecke, and Ben Pollack as just a few of the names that constantly frequented the old Friar's Inn to hear and sometimes sit in with the N.O.R.K.

Mares was born at the turn of the century in New Orleans. His parents were well to do business people dealing in muskrat pelts. At 16 he was playing horn on Saturday nights at a resort on Lake Pontchartrain with the late Leon Rappolo (then a 14-year-old clarinetist), Georg Brunis, a banjo, and drums.

Ragbaby Stevens sent down for Paul to come to Chicago in 1919 to work at the Camel Gardens.

As soon as the cornetist arrived in Chicago he sent for Brunis. After a short stint at Bert Kelly's Stables, with the Kelly banjo ruining the New Orleans flavor, Paul and Georg left to join Dixon's band on the liner Capitol.

Reunion in Davenport

When the boat reached Davenport, the New Orleansians were reunited with Rappolo and they all returned to the Windy city where Paul was given the opportunity to line up a band for the Friar's Inn. Besides Paul, Rap, and Georg they had Elmer Schoebel, piano; Jack Pettis, saxophone; Louis Black, banjo; Steve Brown, bass, and Frank Snyder, drums. The unit was called the Friar's Society orchestra until they dropped the bogus leadership of Husk O'Hare on their second record date.

Husk had been instrumental in getting them their first wax session at Gennett but had never played with the group, much less directed them. The boys were perturbed when the labels on their records stated they were under the baton of O'Hare.

So Gennett was informed that the name of the band was New Orleans Rhythm Kings during their second weekend visit to the waxworks.

Plenty of Offers

The band attained considerable fame during their run at Friar's. Several offers, with better salary attached, came, but they turned them down to stick together for the fun and excitement that prevailed every night at the Inn.

Rehearsals were held right on the job and the crowd never realized the difference. Paul used to relate with glee the story of how they would put oil of mustard on each other's chairs, and when Jack Pettis fell asleep during the floor show, would wake him up by holding the oil of mustard to his nose.

Elmer Schoebel was the only man in the band who could read music so he made the arrangements. The band introduced many famous numbers, including Schoebel's famous composition, Nobody's Sweetheart. Mares helped work out several N.O.R.K. tunes, including, Farewell Blues, Milenberg Joys, Golden Leaf Strut, and Everybody Loves Somebody Blues.

Go Classical

The Chicago days of N.O.R.K. finally came to an end when the boss began to insist they learn to read so they could perform the Meditation from Thais. Rappolo and Mares went to New York and played with Al Siegal at Mills Caprice in Greenwich Village. Following this engagement, Paul quit playing and returned to New Orleans to join his family in the muskrat fur enterprise.

Music was too important a part of his life for him to ever give up playing all together, however. Shortly after his return to the Crescent city he got a band together for local engagements and some Victor and Okeh record dates.

When depression hit the Mares fur business, Paul returned to Chicago. He was heard sitting in with small groups here and there. In 1933, Boyce Brown first met Paul when the latter wandered into the Fort Tavern on Argyle street with his cornet.

Made It Click

Says Boyce, "Paul had the faculty to make a few notes say more than most musicians can say in a thousand. To me, each time Paul used one of his stock phrases it sounded new. His hot, spicy riffs were bound to make any group he played with click. He could play wonderful blues and his version of Trees with a hat over the bell of his horn was beautiful."

Brown went on to relate that his happiest days in the music-business were spent in 1934 with Mares and his Friar's Society orchestra at Harry Hepp's New York bar in Chicago. The horseplay and relaxed manner of working so prevalent at the Friar's continued on this job. The band was stationed on a balcony where their feet were not visible to the customers. Toward the middle of the evening Paul would go out for "some stuff."

When he returned, each member of the band had a pint of juice at his feet. Paul would then turn to the band and say, "All right, you so and so's, what shall we play?"

Between Ribs, Sessions

After the New York bar engagement, Paul was destined to spend the next decade playing in jazz sessions when he could get away from his Chicago restaurant business. Many noted sessions were held in the P&M Barbecue on Monday nights. The members of the Crosby band, Jimmy Dorsey, Jack Teagarden, and many others made Paul's place a headquarters on Chicago's near north side. When the boys brought their horns in with them, Paul would pull out his cornet, and the sound of his driving New Orleans horn would warm all hearts within range.

Paul's farewell appearance was made with his own Dixieland band at Tin Pan Alley a year ago.

London Leases 'Jealous Heart'

New York—Al Morgan's sleeper hit, Jealous Heart, on Universal records, has been taken over by London records. London leased the platter, along with several others, from Universal and signed Morgan to a two-year pact.

The larger record companies, fairly slow in the past in picking up on sleeper hits put out by small labels, are showing more ability to cope with Jealous Heart. Victor has a Bill Lawrence etching of it coming up and Decca is releasing a version by Jack Owens, along with a reissue of one made in 1944 by Jennie Lou Carson. Miss Carson wrote the tune then but nothing happened until the Morgan waxing came along.

in the August Capitol News—the tear jerker which bemoaned the loss of William Wrigley Jr., which categorized Catalina as a floating junkpile, and which inferred Garber's stay at the island's famed Casino was cut very short due to crummy surroundings, had biz, or something of the sort.

Jan, who was astonished and hurt on reading Dave's scathing article (which was written while Jan was playing Catalina), condemns its author as "a guy who hates my music and always has hated it. He loves himself, period." Further, the irate maestro refuted Dex's statement that Bob Crosby's band had received $7,500 weekly at the Casino 10 years ago.

Wrong on Figs

Said Jan, "The most money paid any band working summers at the spot was $5,500 a week, to the late Ben Bernie, in 1935. My band played there, eight-week stands in 1934, '35, '36, and '37, for $3,750, the second highest figure paid. Crosby's gang got $3,000 a week one year, $3,250 the following year, for three-week stints.

"About Dave's insinuation that we didn't draw this summer at Catalina, and that everyone was shopping for a lower-priced band while we were there... nuts. We were booked 10 weeks and stayed 11. When we boarded the plane at 7 a.m. the day after we closed everyone wanted us to stay on.

One of Biggest

"While there we did a $5,000 week from admissions alone. That was one of the Casino's biggest weeks. It was even more a record because there is no bar take to up the weekly gross. The Casino has no liquor. Also, though the previous admission figure had been between 25 and 40 cents, during our stay the sum was jumped to $1.20 a head—quite a difference.

"And, there wasn't a shred of advertising in either L. A. or on the island prior to the day we opened. We closed the Biltmore hotel May 25, opened May 27 at Catalina, and nobody, but nobody, knew we were there.

"Malcolm Renton, vice president of Catalina, asked me to return next year for a prolonged stay, possibly to open the spot. This year he planned on a 20 per cent drop in business, yet the drop has been only about 9 per cent."

Tried to Recall

Evidently Capitol execs fore-saw Garber's indignation and the possible wrath of others in the trade, for, according to an official Capitol source, Bob Stabler, assistant national sales manager, instructed Cap branchmen to "destroy all copies of the August issue and report to me by wire when they have been destroyed." However, most copies had been distributed to dealers and were beyond recall.

Garber, who was approached by Renton to manage the Casino next year, also commented at length on the remainder of Dexter's charges concerning the inept management of Wrigley enterprises in general, ball teams and Catalina specifically.

Jan explained how a welter of bad management, impending deaths, and inheritance taxes, etc., complicated the Wrigley holdings to a point where investment in modernization is currently out of the question.

Europe Tour Or Jug For Wingy: Waits A Decision

By HAL HOLLY

Hollywood—Wingy Manone, the "clown prince of jazz" who, wittingly or unwittingly, has given the music business some of its best laughs, was waiting at presstime to learn whether he should pack his bags for a jaunt to Europe or set himself for a spell in a cell. Joe Glaser was hard at work recently on a deal to route the author of Trumpet on the Wing in the direction of Sweden and points south.

But when a couple of Hollywood vice squadders broke up a little party the Wing was having with two girl friends in a Hollywood apartment, plans were delayed.

Sounded Straight

Wingy's story of the evening, when he finally got to the stand with it, sounded pretty straight. He had met the gals during the evening when they dropped in the Royal room seeking employment as waitresses. The gals evidently prefer to juggle trays to that good old two-beat, for they had applied for employment earlier at Sardi's Monkey room, where Pete Daily holds forth. Wingy stated that at quitting time he offered to give the gals a lift home, that they stopped at one's apartment for a few drinks, talked about books and music.

Two of L.A.'s vice squad (you've heard of L.A.'s vice squad, no doubt) operatives watched the little gathering through the venetian blinds. One of them, now under suspension for "conduct unbecoming an officer" in another case, gave some startling testimony as to what went on at the little party.

Not Serious Here

The judge believed him, and Wingy and his companions were convicted of something illegal but not serious enough to be rated as anything worse than a misdemeanor, at least around here. Wingy may get probation—or he may get a short sojourn with all expenses paid by municipal authorities.

DOTTED NOTES: A movie trade mag that likes to spotlight rulings by the local musicians union that could be in violation of Taft-Hartley, made much of the fact that when L.A.'s two pro football clubs (Rams and Dons) play here, each must employ a band of not less than 40 men at $20 a man. A spokesman for the Rams, slightly irked, stated: "Our relations with Hollywood—The seething undercurrent of political unrest which has been growing constantly among the 14,500 members of the AFM Local 47 since the end of the war, bubbled a bit recently as Marie McEdward, for many years employed as an assistant in the local business office, was fired for allegedly falsifying an entry in the official minutes.

The charge was brought before the board of directors by Maury Paul, whom Mrs. McEdward recently unsuccessfully opposed for the office of recording secretary. Paul was the administration candidate. Said Mrs. McEdward:

"I might have made an error, but I made no false entry. If I did, why did the board of directors approve those minutes the following week? I expected to be eased out of my job for opposing the administration's handpicked candidate—but I didn't expect to be kicked out without even a hearing."

Bing Short Back, On Locust Cycle

Hollywood—Bing Crosby, as he appeared in one of the early Mack Sennett shorts incorporated in the new Eagle-Lion release, Down Memory Lane. The band is composed largely of musicians from Crosby's first radio show, which was directed by Lennie Hayton. Guitarist Eddie Lang is the third from the right in the back row, and actress Toby Wing is the blonde in the white dress. Movie was made 17 years ago.

New York—Eileen Wilson, former Les Brown singer, has been signed as a single by Decca. Her first release, with Gordon Jenkins backing, will be Through a Long and Sleepless Night, number she did for the sound track of the film, Come to the Stable.

MOVIE MUSIC

Crosby Shines In Reissue Of Mack Sennett Shorts

By CHARLES EMGE

Hollywood—Have you ever been in one of those controversies as to whether the Bing Crosby of today is as good as the Crosby of his leaner and hungrier days of 1932? That was right after Bing (as one of Paul Whiteman's "Hulim Boys") took what seemed like an absurd step at the time in quitting Whiteman to work at the Coconut Grove as subsidiary attraction to Gus Arnheim's band.

A while back we went on record to the effect Bing was better than ever. Now we're admitting we were wrong on that one.

We recently heard Bing in portions of some 1932 Mack Sennett shorts which have been combined to make a very entertaining short feature, Down Memory Lane. Despite his little tricks of the period (tricks which gave him his individuality at the time, but which he was smart enough to eliminate before they grew too tiresome) Bing's voice unquestionably had more vitality and less smugness than now, besides being about three full tones higher in pitch.

Quite a Spell

But then that was almost 20 years and millions of gross earnings ago. And we still think he's apt to outlive, professionally, a dozen or so Sinatras, Comos, Eckstines, et al.

The instrumental music on these old Sennett shorts was supplied by a group led by Lennie Hayton and made up largely of the same musicians who played Crosby's first commercial radio show. It's extraordinarily good, both as to style and quality, and makes us wonder whether these lush, pretentious arrangements which singers now demand aren't rather silly.

Some Oldtimers

The band which recorded the music also is seen in a couple of old friends—and one famous musician of the period, now dead, whose name is part of the legend; one of the pioneers of what some still think of as the "golden era"—the days of Beiderbecke, Trumbauer, Mole, Venuti, and Schutt. It's hard to leave the guy's name out of that lineup, but just for fun we'll let you see if you can spot him in the picture, which was to be re-released early this month.

Music director Irving Friedman and Sol Kaplan (arranger-composer of the additional music) did a neat job on their part of the picture, considering the fact that it is really a sloppily cut and assembled hodge-podge that might have been much better. The clips are loosely strung together in an inconsequential manner as the story of a television producer (zany disc jockey Steve Allen) who finds himself showing the old Sennett films on a video program.

As a comedian, Allen hardly shapes up against such competition as that of W. C. Fields and those early Sennett clowns. He rates only a medal for trying.

SOUND STAGE SIFTINGS: Because pictures are usually re-edited after the sneak previews, they are scored for these preliminary showings with library soundtrack—with AFM sanction. MGM sneak-previewed Battleground with no underscoring except at the beginning and end. It went over so well it will be released in that form.

Skelton a Songster?

Song writers Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby are up for a biography at MGM, Three Little Words, in which they'll be portrayed by Fred Astaire and Ited Skelton.

Concert pianist Norma Drury is coaching Lauren Bacall for the sequence in Young Man with a Horn in which Lauren, as Amy North, plays her one and only musical accomplishment. In the book it was Debussy's Clair de Lune. In the movie it will be a Chopin nocturne, recorded by Norma.

New York—Buck Clayton, former Basie trumpet, and Wally Bishop, drums, will leave for Paris Sept. 24 to join a band being put together by Hugues Panassie for a concert tour. First concert will be held in Paris Oct. 15. Band will then make a four-week tour of France, move into Switzerland for six weeks, and return to Paris for more concerts.

Cheers For Charlie

San Diego

To the Editors:
Hats off to Charlie Barnet, who did a one-niter here Aug. 3 and knocked them out. Particular cheers for Maynard Ferguson, who plays Diz-type frantic trumpet and stands out in an all-star section which includes Ray Wetzel.

Barnet played to a poor house; one, because he picked Wednesday night, a dead one anywhere, and two, because Woody Herman played a concert date here the night before. In the opinion of many customers, including this one, he cut Woody's band on all counts, including variety, spirit, power, and freeness in the solos.

I wish to congratulate you on your recent article on Herbie Fields' new group. It is gratifying to see that he is finally getting some good publicity for a change.

Herbie has undoubtedly been given poor support by Victor records, inasmuch as they have failed to release any of his recordings in quite some time. If his latest recordings ever hit the market he will certainly be one of the country's top combos.

Recently we heard Spencer's Spencerian Theory and some of his others, and, though we consider ourselves semi-authorities on Stan and his music, could not distinguish the difference. We hope Earle's backers will take advantage of Kenton's retirement.

Now, About These Flack, Artist Fights

Every now and then there is a terrific fracas, usually winding up in court, between a band leader or singer and some business manager, booking agent, or publicity man, over who is responsible for the flow of gold—the talent or those individuals who help to develop and market it.

The music business has a reputation for being something of a cutthroat operation, although we occasionally have noted 'oyalties far beyond the call of current commissions. Many of these have been misplaced loyalties, we believe, kept alive because the artist has permitted himself to be shouted down by his representative.

It is much like the relationship in a family where father or mother become too impressed with their own importance and dominate the household with unfair and unreasonable dictatorships, or children step out of place to force their personal fetishes upon the rest of the family.

Everyone in a family has, or should have, his own duties and his own place in the household. The former should not be regarded as absolute obligations, nor should advantage be taken of the latter with demands for undeserved respect or allegiance. Respect is not something that can be pinned on an individual like a badge of office. It must be earned or won, which many commissioned officers learned the hard way in the last war.

It should be the same with musicians and/or vocalists and their business or press representatives. No one, except his natural parents, ever actually gives birth to an artist. He has talent or he doesn't, and his career happens or not. Often it happens without the benefit of shrewd management or flamboyant exploitation.

True, the average band leader or singer cannot book or sell himself to an advantage, though there are exceptions here, too. But we have met plenty who have a penchant for personal publicity and know how to obtain it. Publicity is such an intangible product that too few practicing press agents understand its intricacies.

The one thing we have noted about publicity is that it is most needed by new and young leaders or vocalists during the period they can't afford it, and that when they eventually attain the success that would permit them to spend the money for it, they seldom need it. Many have solved this by giving a piece of their future potential to the press agent who struggles for them early, but this has its repercussions also.

So the artist usually cannot book or publicize himself. But the booker or press agent almost never can lead a band or sing. And in the final analysis, it is the actual performance that brings the loot through the boxoffice and thus into the pockets of the artist and his aides. Each is entitled to his share, but only if and to the extent that, he has contributed time or talent to the operation.

will be around for a long time to come. I am not a professional musician, but your magazine is a must for me. I can see the bands when they come to this vicinity by reading your route charts. Evolution Of Jazz

by J. Lee Anderson

I

● Ragtime was the outgrowth of several varied conditions, not the least of which was the individual musician's desire to "do something different." This often underrated, but important development in the music of America has had a distinctly "different" character since its inception. It was the foundation of much jazz to follow, but even so, the men who originated and helped popularize ragtime have been consistently overlooked. Ragtime, too, was the product of the rougher element of society, but unlike the earliest improvised jazz, it soon became a favorite of both popular music and jazz audiences. With the overwhelming favor accorded ragtime, it would seem that succeeding stages of jazz development would meet with at least equal favor.

II

● This assumption, however, has not been realized to date. New Orleans and its kindred styles enjoyed a certain fame (and still do today), but with a limited audience. The same is generally true of later rhythmic fashions. Swing was the craze of the '30s, but its frantic devotees were dancers and jazz fanatics, rather than Mr. and Mrs. U.S.A. The current pop fad is, despite inspired press-agentry and a host of persons to spread the word, unpopular with John Public. Ragtime remains the only phase of true jazz that has enjoyed widespread acceptance among all factions of society. Born in New Orleans, this music attained fuller development in St. Louis, geographically a logical jumping off place for wandering musicians and miscellaneous entertainers.

III

● To the saloons and cafes of that lusty river city came the rag pianists to swap ideas and try to best one another in cutting contests. Many of the leading pianists of the rag era were Negroes, but there were also many white rag men of note, including J. Russell Robinson (later with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band), Charlie Hunter, Clarence Brandon, and Joe Fuchs. Among the better-known Negro artists were such men as Tom Turpin, Louis Chauvin, and the most prolific and copied rag composer of them all, Scott Joplin. Others who gained fame as pianists or composers were Scott Hayden, Tom Toliver, Sam Patterson, and Art Matthews. There were other men, famous in their day, who also deserve credit for their contributions to the rag idiom.

record reviews. I get good, honest, and fair dealings when I answer ads in your want ad section. And I get a lot of good, exclusive news I otherwise would miss.

The one feature I like is the listing of all records, or nearly all records, of some great or near great when he passes on. I think you could do this one better by devoting a page each issue to some living musician.

For example, I collect Lombardo records (I can hear you moaning now). I have 250 of his records and I understand he has made almost 400. Yet I cannot get a complete list of his records. I hope you will seriously think about adding this feature to your already great magazine.

No, Duke, No

Kitchener, Ontario

To the Editors: Please, Duke, don't say we hear only polkas in Canada. Don't you remember us kids from Kitchener?

Our Rhythm club has held four successful jazz concerts and Toronto has held any number of them. How about the Jazz Unlimited record show from CIBC, Toronto, which is two hours of all kinds of jazz every Saturday for almost 10 years now? This is only this district. I'm sure the Ottawa club and the other clubs and jazz lovers all over Canada are equally active. I'll admit there are a lot of polkas played around here, but please don't say all we hear in Canada are polkas.

Mike Levin?

Since I first started appreciating jazz and reading jazz criticism, some five years ago, it has seemed to me that Mike Levin was the one critic in this business who was both musically well-educated and still not out axe-grinding for his own particular point of view.

If Levin has one outstanding fault it is that he is a little inclined to assume all his readers have his comprehensive knowledge of the technical side of music and to write in technical terms that frequently go over the heads of us non-musician music lovers.

He has always made a practice of considering both sides of any problem and has steered a middle course between the hate-everything policy of one of his chief competitors and the love-everything policy of his immediate predecessor on your record review page.

Despite the above virtues, during the last 1½ months we have been subjected to a flood tide of invective and personal calumny unequalled since the last political campaign. This would not have been so bad were it not almost unanimously aimed at Levin as a person, with no attempt made to discredit his arguments. With the exception of Charlie Barnes' rebuttal on the Ellington situation, no one has had the courage to face Levin's ideas on their own merits rather than taking the simpler course of attacking his personality.

However, though I shall continue to read with glee the comments of such pundits as Ulanov and Frazier to see whom they have decided to hate this month, for an unbiased view of the music picture I shall continue to read with avidity any comments Levin cares to make.

THE HOT BOX

You've Got To Do More Than Count The Receipts

By GEORGE HOEFER

Chicago—Frank Holzfeind, manager of Chicago's Blue Note, operates his jazz haven with a sly sense of humor, a considerable sprinkling of night-life-spun philosophy, and a good deal of nervous energy. He is possessed with a talent for handling unusual situations with equanimity. Jazz artists have an affinity for hassels that outshines any other professionals' aptitude for creating problems. Holzfeind has faced and successfully solved many such quandaries.

There was the night Billie Holiday's ever-present gardenia for her hair was not delivered. She wouldn't think of appearing without it. This one was unraveled by suggesting she have a creme de menthe along with her usual double brandy. The mood changed rapidly.

An army colonel once refused to pay a rather large check because the billed attraction had not put in an appearance. It happened to be one of those nights that Eddie Condon was leading his band in absentia from a ringside table. Matters were cleared when Frank had Eddie wave his wand from the colonel's table for a set.

Check, Double Check

Teenagers have to be checked carefully to avoid violations of the age limitations. Mel Torme's engagement brought a bobby-soxer prancing down the steps swinging a yo-yo. Tact was needed to turn her around.

Holzfeind looks enough like Miff Mole to be his twin. On the Blue Note's opening night in October, 1947, with Muggsy Spanier and Miff featured, a record collector dashed up to Frank with, "Great, great, great. How long you going to be here? I've got all your records." Frank simply answered, "A long time I hope."

Frank has pet peeves as well as his favorite artists. He is a sincere jazz fan and avidly studies each new attraction brought into the spot.

Always Yacking

His number one peeve is the garrulous gal who carries on a rapid fire conversation in high C at a ringside table during a performance. She sets up an iron curtain between the performers and everybody within 10 tables of the stand—and inevitably applauds for all she's worth when the song she didn't hear is over.

Autograph hounds give Holzfeind a hard time, and he has them typed in four categories. (1) The remorseful type, who wants an autograph to offer his wife as a peace offering. He asks to have it signed "with love," as the artist is his wife's favorite. (2) The eager beaver type, who takes everything on the table, including the ash tray, and carts it up to the stand to have it autographed to himself, his girl, or to his landlady. (3) The professional type, who approaches the star with his autograph book invariably opened to a filled page so that the victim can see that Benny Goodman or Cardinal Spellman has already been captured. Therefore the honor about to be bestowed on the star is not to be belittled. (4) The dubious type, who comes up to the artist with great humility and adoration. He slips the star a blank piece of paper to be signed with name only.

The Jerk

The Holzfeind definition of a jerk is the guy who asks to meet all the members of the band. He will then usually buy a round of drinks for the band, thereby entitling him, he thinks, to a membership in the American Federation of Musicians, which in turn means that he can appear on the stand before, during, and after each set. Furthermore, it is his belief that the band would enjoy his directing them and handling personally all requests.

So after two years of such experiences, Holzfeind was able to cope with Slim Gaillard's two-day late arrival for an engagement without finching.

JAZZ MISCELLANY: Hank Magner has been presenting jazz concerts at the Hunt club, 6615 West Roosevelt road, Berwyn, Ill., on Sunday afternoons. The last one featured Chet Roble and his Barefoot Bunch, with a personnel consisting of Bill Tinkler, trumpet; Johnny Lane, clarinet; Floyd O'Brien, trombone; Bill Pfeifer, drums, and Roble, piano.

The Inside Story

Earl Hines, writing in the September issue of Ebony, tells some of the inside story of the prohibition era night clubs that featured topflight bands such as his own, Duke Ellington's, Cab Calloway's, etc. The revelations are mainly about the Grand Terrace in Chicago and the Cotton club in New York city. Both of these famed spots were controlled by gang syndicates.

COLLECTORS CATALOG: Lars Thornquist, Box 906, Kapelle, Uddevalla, Sweden. A Woody Herman collector exclusively. Wishes to correspond and trade records with an American Herman enthusiast. His greatest ambition is to win the Herman band in a contest and have them at his disposal in Sweden for a night.

Knocky Parker A Jekyll, Hyde Of Music Biz

By Sharon A. Pease

Chicago — Paradox records has released Gay Old New Orleans, an album of refreshing rags, blues, and stomps that features the artistic interpretations of one of the outstanding contemporary masters of these styles, Knocky Parker.

Parker's activities are so diverse they bring to mind the dual personalities of the fictional Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. As Dr. Jekyll he is Associate Professor John Parker, head of the department of English at Kentucky Wesleyan college, Winchester, Ky. As Mr. Hyde he is pianist extraordinary, Knocky Parker. Contrary to the fictional characters, Parker, in his dual role, is a modest, mild-mannered fellow, with a friendly smile and pronounced southern drawl.

Chronological Development

Earlier this year, while Parker was teaching in the department of English and completing residential work on his doctorate at Columbia university, he took part in numerous jazz concerts. One such concert, outlined to demonstrate the chronological development of America's dance music, was given at the University of Virginia.

The first section, devoted to music of the ragtime era, included Clarence Williams' Michigan Water Blues, Jelly Roll Morton's The Crave, Dead Man Blues, and The

Knocky Parker

Pearls, and a group of Kansas City stomps. The second section moved on to compositions recorded in the '20s and '30s, including Pinetop Smith's Jump Steady Blues, Hershell Thomas' Suitcase Blues, Meade Lux Lewis' Honky Tonk Train, Joe Sullivan's Gin Mill Blues, Bix Beiderbecke's In the Dark, and George Gershwin's Preludes II.

The final group progressed to more modern stylings such as the late Bob Zurke's rendition of Tea for Two and Art Tatum's creations on Humoresque. The performance of this versatile program was an extremely difficult task in itself. However, when one considers that most of the selections were painstakingly copied from phonograph records, the feat becomes an outstanding example of the integration of energy, ambition, and talent.

Dug Piano Roll

Parker, who is now 31 years old, was born and reared on his father's cotton farm near Palmer, Texas. He began playing the piano when 4 and learned his first pieces by listening to player piano rolls. Later he added to his repertoire from the recorded works of Cow Cow Davenport, Clarence Williams, Jelly Roll Morton, and other leaders of the ragtime era. Knocky says, "The study of those records was as thorough and diligent as the research I later devoted to Geoffrey Chaucer and Francis Bacon. I also picked up valuable material from the itinerant workers on our farm. The music they played, though rough and harsh, was accentuated by the strong fervent beat characteristic of South-western blues and stomps."

His formal music training began in his teens and continued throughout the time he attended Texas Christian university, from which he received his B.A. degree. During this period he worked with various dance bands, including the well-known Light Crust Doughboys. He also did considerable radio work in Dallas. Knocky was with the army air corps from 1942 to '45 and, following his discharge, attended the University of Southern California, where he later received his M.A. degree. While enrolled at USC he played solo piano and worked with several combos in the Los Angeles area, including one headed by Zutty Singleton. Parker taught for a year at the University of Nevada before transferring to Columbia last year.

As a piano style example, Knocky has chosen the first chorus from Crazy Kid Blues, one of the numbers included in his previously mentioned Paradox album. The musical qualities follow the plaintive formulas characteristic of the ragtime era. These characteristics can be isolated into a few specific devices, such as the four-beat rhythm in march tempo, frequent use of minor thirds and minor sevenths (dominant) for blues exposition, and the "break" section, which concludes the first period. Breaks used in music of this era were rarely played as written.

Named After Nomad

In fact, the original spontaneous creativeness used in these break sections later grew into the more elaborate improvisations that often extend throughout entire choruses. (The optional break, indicated in reduced size, is taken from the second recorded chorus.) Crazy Kid Blues is primarily a composite of thematic material used by Cow Cow Davenport, Jelly Roll Morton, and Clarence Williams. Parker put this material together and named it after a popular piano playing nomad he heard during his childhood.

It is especially interesting to observe that folklike musical expressions flow with a satisfying naturalness that defies scientific analysis for proof of effectiveness. For example, rhythmically reiterated tones and constant bouncing arpeggios usually sound like piano developmental exercises. Still, these same techniques, when capably captured from the heartfelt creations of these early self-schooled performers, give the listener an exhilarating and enjoyable experience.

John Parker has directed his talent and ability into a worthwhile contribution toward the present enjoyment and future development of American music.

Symposium Raps Dorsey

folks from saying bop is a low type of music. A few guys wore berets and goatees, but it was just a fad. If you'd strip away all the fads, people would see the wonderful music.

"Speaking of Dorsey, I don't know what to say about Tommy. I should think a man who has lead the way like he has would be glad to see something new come along. Even my father, who is a minister, doesn't know what it is, but he at least sits back and says, 'Well, if that's the way it is, let's go.'"

"I think Dorsey should be the same way. Anyone who professes to hate bop to the extent he does just doesn't know anything about it, I think."

Signed Obit

Torme: "I think Tommy kind of signed his music obituary when he rapped progressive jazz. I agree, however, that bop has its faults. Recently I heard Lenny Tristano's trio. Technically and musically I have no faults to find with the group. I think they're wonderful and play some fresh and original ideas. But I can see why people would turn away from bop with the attitude musicians on the stand have.

"I can be enjoying music fully, but when a guy sort of looks down his nose at the public, when the musicians on the stand have a tremendously bored, 'we can't stand this commercial aspect of jazz' attitude, I don't blame anyone for walking out of the place.

"That's one of the reasons I think Nat, June, Woody, and a few others I could name are such tremendous commercial successes but still playing the music they want to play. After all, Dizzy is playing what he wants.

COMBO JAZZ

Charlie Ventura

Just F.Y.I.
A.M., P.M. Song
Done in the days when Roy Kral and Jackie Cain still were with the group, this release is lots better than some of the unit is dishing out now. F.Y.I. has a vague resemblance to Candy. Side has good Ventura and Benny Green trombone. P.M. is Charlie's old big band, with singing by Marianne Dunne and Jack Palmer. (National 9087.)

Kai Winding

Just Bop City
Wallington's Godchild
This is the little band with Winding, trombone; Brew Moore, tenor sax; Wallington, piano; Curley Russell, bass; Jerry Mulligan, baritone, and Max Roach, drums, that worked Bop City, and later, with Red Rodney, trumpet, was at the Three Deuces. On City you get some indication of what Moore can do, as well as the freewheeling drumming of Roach. Neither for solos nor ensemble sound does Godchild stack up to the Miles Davis Capitol waxing. (Roost 500.)

BAND JAZZ

Count Basie

Just Shoutin' Blues
Did You See Jackie Robinson Hit That Ball?
Shoutin' is the best side Basie has dished up for a while. However, it's one of the weirdest melanges you've heard. Superimposed on the Basie tradition of sax riff repeated, broken up with brass figures and piano tinklings, are bop figures and harmonic approaches. Man, I'll be a schizoid, yet! However, the band does sound a little happier in its work than it has recently. Flopover is by Buddy Johnson, about a man who well deserves the accolades coming his way. The song isn't much, has a trumpet solo much like Eldridge in his better days. (Victor 20-2513.)

Les Brown

Just a Gigolo
Cross-Town Trolley
This band certainly gets what used to make the old Ozzie Nelson and Ray Noble bands so pleasant on records: a warm, full-room sound. Gigolo is a straight song version done at much the tempo Joe Mooney plays the tune, with Butch Stone idly tossing around some bop. Geoff Clarkson's piano bits, as usual, are good. Trolley is the usual novelty structure, better done here than on most discs. (Columbia 38536.)

Cootie Williams

Slidin' and Glidin'
Let 'Em Roll
It's hard to understand how a trumpet player who played the magnificent muted horn that Cootie did with Duke and the tremendous open horn stuff he got off in the Goodman 1941 band should sound as completely mundane as he does here. The band is as mediocre. (Mercury 8143.)

Harry James
Tuxedo Junction
(Parts I and II)

These days, very few big bands spend their time and wax on instrumentals. It's been a long time since a name of James' stature put out six minutes of unvarnished solo efforts. And I hope it's a long time before he puts another one out like this. The two sides start and end with the Tuxedo theme, then move on to double time jump. Willie Smith, James, and other sidemen have solo shots.

If a leader is going to do an instrumental, why not put a little thought into it instead of allowing a mess like this to come out? Then, when it doesn't sell up to expectations, everybody nods his head and says sagely, "You see, such music doesn't sell." Mebbe the James name and Tuxedo will sell this one, but that's about all that will do it. (Columbia 38526.)

Howard McGhee

Cubop City
(Parts I and II)
Sections of Machito's band, with McGhee's trumpet and Brew Moore's tenor, playing one of the show closers they used at the Roost and Bop City. Unfortunately, neither Moore nor McGhee play as well as they can, while the band doesn't build to a climax. (Roost 502.)

DANCE

Frankie Carle

The Naughty Waltz
The Missouri Waltz
Put in a nickel, and out comes Mr. Carle. He has a knack of putting 4/4 rag into things, which makes his style completely distinctive. Naughty is not a waltz, neither is Missouri. Somebody long about now is going to yell for his nickel back. (Columbia 38529.)

Jan Garber

Catalina Bounce
Makin' Love Ukelele Style

charm. It sounds like a bad version of Chabrier's Espana Rhapsody. Simplicity is certainly a word unknown to Morton. At the same time, I would like to hear him occasionally use a few moving voices, suitably voiced, in woodwinds. His technique is to use a trick rhythm bass figure and then throw sections, one by one, at the palate in big splashes. It is musical cheapness of the worst sort, without even the resourcefulness for sound effects that Kostelanetz' scorers have.

Some of you may wonder why we're so hard on Morton. It is simply because he is shabby in a most pretentious fashion, which makes it difficult for younger and less

VOCAL

Frank Sinatra

Just I Only Have Eyes for You
Just It All Depends on You
You is sung faster than Sinatra used to do it, a relief from some of the feet-draggin' tempos he has used. The boy still knows how to phrase and make it sound personal. Billboard says that on Depends, FS uses Frankie Iaine-isms. No carping intended, but I've heard Sinatra do this many times before, and, as a point of fact, they both derive from a much older style. Listen closely and you'll hear derivative Louis-isms, without much question. Aside from that, it isn't too comfortable a style for Sinatra. His voice sounds better on Eyes. (Columbia 38550.)

Margaret Whiting

Whirlwind
Dime a Dozen
Whirlwind, which sounds like a Chopin Nocturne that never gets started, is the latest epic by Stan (Riders in the Sky) Jones. It's by a hit writer, has a silly lyric, a simple melodic line, and a chance for lots of sound effects. It should be a hit. Dozen is another outburner. This certainly should be a bumper year for fiddle and uke

Jo Stafford

Just Ragtime Cowboy Joe
Just The Last Mile Home
Joe is done in fast shuffle time. During it, Jo leads the vocal group, proving once again what a good group singer she is. Follows bar-house piano, with Bob Willa riffing by Miss Stafford. If this kind of stuff has to be done, I certainly prefer the Capitol approach as epitomized here. There is at least as much music as can be crammed into the formula. (Capitol 57-710.)

Frankie Laine

That Lucky Old Sun
Got Sentimental Over Nothing
Sun was sent out to reviewers with a long letter from Frankie about the tough time he had getting started, and the fact that this song expressed what he went through. It's a curious side, a combination of many things. It opens with ukelele-like feeling and

Song is a better chance than Jeffries has had up until now to demonstrate his wares on Columbia. Arrangers Cry At New Pact By AFM, Studios

Hollywood—A new over-all agreement between the AFM and the major film producers was signed, sealed, and delivered in New York while many musicians out here were still talking about the kind of terms they thought they wanted.

The new pact, which was to go into effect Sept. 1, expiration date of the previous one, is for one year only, and is essentially the same. Its principal feature is the same—agreement by the majors to employ contract staff orchestras, members of which are guaranteed a minimum of $6,900, on a basis of 520 hours (play or pay).

'No TV' Clause

The "no television" clause on recorded sound track is still there, but this was expected, inasmuch as the movie makers are anything but anxious to release their product to telestations until they find a way to make money out of it.

Only real kick on the renewal of the deal came from arrangers, who thought they were going to get an agreement saying an arrangement made while under employment to a studio could be used in one picture only, like recorded sound track.

Case in Point

A case in point is the recently released Jolson Sings Again, some sequences of which are clipped directly from The Jolson Story. Columbia had to pay the instrumental musicians who did the sound track in full for re-use of the music. But the arrangers got nothing extra—and they feel very strongly that they should.

The agreement with the majors does not include independent producers, who were ready to start haggling with the AFM at this writing.

ready evident. Columbia has moved Bob Crosby from the Columbia label to Harmony, where he joins Eddy Duchin, Pearl Bailey, Jerry Wayne, and Rosemary Clooney. Varsity, the original cheap label which now sells for 35 cents, is in the market for names for the first time. And Harmony has the first cheap label hit in Pearl Bailey and Lips Page's The Hucktebuck.

Parenti Cuts Album

New York—George Buck, 20-year-old record collector, has started his own label, Jazzology, to issue Dixieland and blues. He is sole owner of the label. First sides will be an album by Tony Parenti's New Orleansians (see Things to Come, page 11). Album will be limited to 500 copies on break-resistant plastic, will sell for $2.75 plus tax.

Dial Adds Longhair

New York—Dial records, previously bop specialist, is adding longhair material to its list. Classical stuff will be primarily work of contemporary composers. First release is Bartok's Classical Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion, features William Masselos and Maro Ajemian, pianos, and Saul Goodman and Abe Marcus, percussion.

BEATS AND OFFBEATS

By ALAN ABEL

Columbus—We spent a most interesting day in St. Louis recently, as a guest of the Drummers club. The club is composed of a group of St. Louis drummers who are constantly searching for more and better ideas about modern drumming.

Gene (Moe) Lemen, president, is typical of the ideal drummer we all think about: that is, he is a well schooled drummer who can handle anything from a symphony concert to pop.

Two hours spent with the club uncovered many problems that are probably commonplace with most of us. In fact they are the same old problems we have mentioned time and again in this very column. Such things as developing a fast hi-hat beat, a fast foot, and a strong left hand were tops on the list of "what's the answer?"

Basic Problems
When the final bell sounded, we reached the opinion that all of these problems, once analyzed, were basically problems of drumming that every drummer faces at one time or another. Good, clean, and satisfying drumming can only be brought about through many hours of concentrated practice. A short cut just doesn't exist.

The drummers who are presently behind sets and find they lack the powers of speed and control will have to backtrack to a point of rigid and consistently concentrated practice. Only then can they build up a reserve of technique and stamina that will allow for free and easy playing.

Meet and Talk

It might be a good idea for some of you drummers with the time, energy, and interest, to meet once a month and share your drumming abilities with each other, such as the St. Louis club is doing. If you are interested, drop a line and we'll give you some hints on getting started.

Below is that 32-measure solo we promised. Work it out slowly. See you in next issue. We'll talk about Don Lamond.

(Ed. Note: Send questions to Alan Abel, 22 15th Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope for personal reply.)

National Signs Pittsburgh Vocalist

Pittsburgh—Down Beat correspondent here, Bettelou Purvis, ran across a singer recently whom she thought sounded great—18-year-old Don Washington.

So she had him cut some test records, some of which she played on her local disc show, Here's Jazz. Within 20 minutes she received 87 calls from listeners who wanted to know more about the guy.

Bettelou sent the sides to National records and they signed Washington to a five-year contract immediately. Also scheduled a recording session for Labor Day.

Says Bettelou: "Don has never had a lesson, but sings with the depth and maturity of Eckstine. The kids he's sung for at dances really went for him. So if it's the kids that are buying the records..."

Memphis Theater Sets New Policy

Memphis—The W. C. Handy theater here, formerly strictly a Negro show house, has established a new policy that enables white fans to see name attractions. The city administration recently gave the theater permission to have a separate day and night show for whites.

First attraction to play under the new policy was Nat Cole, followed since by Erakine Hawkins and Lucky Millinder.

Orchestration Reviews

FATHER KNICKERBOPPER

Published by Mills
Arr. by Tiny Kahn
Father is one of Kahn's newer compositions. Saxs break loose at

A in unison for one full chorus, with brass punching through in the background. The first solo work is taken by piano or vibraphone. A baritone solo is next, written optional for third alto, and tenor follows up with the next 24. First and second trumpets and alto also get their share of the solo work. All solos are supported with excellent taste. Fine pop opus.

MONDONGO

Published by Mark
Arr. by Rene Hernandez
Mondongo is a new Latin-American tune introducing the new rhythm, mambo. This new rhythm was developed by combining American swing and Latin-American rhythm. The results are very interesting. Repetition of a two-measure phrase, with changing harmonies furnished by saxs, serves as a sub theme and harmonic support for brass through most of the first half. Saxs soli at E, while counter muted brass furnish the counter melody. Saxs return to the subtheme with brass atop. The last is for ensemble.

TWO LITTLE NEW LITTLE BLUE LITTLE EYES
Published by Morris
Arr. by Jack Matthias
Don't let the title of this one fool you. This 16-measure melody moves along very slowly and sweetly and little disagreement is found between harmony and melody. Fragments from the main theme serve purpose for a fine intro. First trumpet solos for the first eight, saxs take the four-measure bridge, and trumpet returns. Saxs soli for eight on the repeat and brass fill in with hats. Brass soli at the bridge and saxs return. On the special, muted brass furnish color, while second tenor and reeds—with clarinet lead—alternate the melody. A, written in trumpet solo, flows nicely on the bridge. The finale is both rhythmical and full.

ARRIMATE CARINITO

Published by Peer International
Arr. by Horacio Diaz
Carinito is another tune based on new mambo rhythm. After an eight-measure intro, brass take lead for the first 16 of the split choruses with saxs in support. Saxs play the release and brass return for the last eight. The repeat is in reverse order. After an interlude of eight measures, similar to the intro, trombones and tenors pick up the main theme for the special. The rest is done in fine taste. Nice arrangement.

Ruth Brown Added To Basie Package

New York—Ruth Brown, singer who drew a Beat rave on her first New York appearance at Cafe Society, joined the Count Basie-Charlie Ventura show at Bop City in August for the last week of its run. She's currently on a theater tour as part of a package with Basie's band. Tour started on Sept. 4 at the Howard in Washington. She has signed with GAC.

McKinley Tours

New York—Ray McKinley winds up a tour of his native Texas with dates at the Lackland army air base, San Antonio, Sept. 7 to 14, and the Lake Worth Casino, Fort Worth, Sept. 16 to 18. He then moves on to Bob's Night club, Faraday, La., Oct. 6; Mississippi State College, Starkville, Miss., 8; and Iowa State college, Ames, Ia., 14 and 15.

ARRANGERS' CORNER

By SY OLIVER and DICK JACOBS

New York—This time out we're going to discuss the formation of the widespread embellished chord which gives the sound of the big ensemble voicing that is so popular today. Here is the procedure: Wherever possible, all interval distances should be a fourth or larger. If this is not possible, no two chordal tones (roots, thirds, fifths, sevenths) should be placed next to each other.

This can be accomplished by using an embellished or altered tone next to a chordal tone. Roots or fifths must be used in the bottom voice. The preferred position for the three lower voices from bottom to top is as follows: root, fifth, and third; root, fifth, and seventh; or root, seventh, and third.

Hip Jock Educating Virginia Listeners

Richmond, Va.—In a section of the country largely regarded as absolutely uninterested in jazz and its progress, it is noteworthy when a disc jockey or anybody else goes all out to bring jazz to the public. Such is the endeavor of WXGI's Harry Curran, heard here daily.

And his comment on new trends in music apparently are understood by his growing audience, judging by a constantly increasing number of requests for pop discs. Being the only record spinner in the area of any great importance, his influence is evident on juke boxes, late-hour request shows on radio, and in the conversation of local musicians and fans.

Others, Too
The station also features music of Hank D'Amico, Buddy Weed, Erroll Garner, Joe Mooney, and John Kirby each day at noon.

With nearby Virginia Beach drawing the bulk of the name band seekers, things in town have come to a near standstill. However, Lewis Butler and his Dixielanders continue to draw heavily at Tilly's club, and more than adequately supplies his fans with things like Muskrat Ramble, Ostrich Walk, and Limehouse Blues.

The Butler men, practically all local products are: Lewis Butler, leader and drummer; Homer Porter, tenor; Charles (Cat) Bullock, piano; Herbert Cowardin, trumpet, and Sam Cheadle, guitar.

Flops With Big Bop Band, Tries To Sell Combo

Milwaukee—Holder Jones, local trumpeter, opened with a combo at the Big and Little club recently. Jones, despite frequent squelchings, has long been attempting to sell local bop to our operators.

His well-rehearsed big band which folded two years ago because of its unsalability, was, Holder feels, something Milwaukeeans weren't ready for at that time. Its largeness and bop construction proved disadvantageous.

Might Be Easier

So most of his activities since then have been centered around arranging and composing. With the resultant tunes ready to go, he's looking for a plugger. Holder says, "It's been a hard grind trying to get something to happen, but with this combo things might be easier."

The group consists of: Everett Clark, piano; John Graham, bass; Leroy Hawkins, tenor; Willie Stokes, alto; Jones, trumpet and arranging, and Earnest Truitt, vocals.

Kral, Cain In

The Jackie Cain-Roy Kral combo opened at the Stage Door Aug. 22 for two weeks. Op Jerome Di Maggio has Eddie Heywood and June Christy following, each for two weeks.

FOAM: Ken Harris and his orchestra opened at the Empires room Aug. 16 for three weeks. . . Carol's trio in at the Blackmoor room. . . Fresh from Las Vegas, Lorry Reznick, pianist, opened at the East Town Aug. 17.

Deejay Bon Bon Spots Savitt Wax

Philadelphia—Bon Bon, remembered as the original vocalist with the late Jan Savitt's band, will memorialize the music of the maestro in conducting The Bon Bon Show, on station WDAS here. Turning disk jockey with an hour-long show of his own, Bon Bon, whose real name is George Tunnell, is featuring a Jan Savitt recording on each day's program.

Bon Bon was featured on almost 100 sides made by Jan Savitt for the Victor, Bluebird, and Decca labels, and in recent years recorded as a solo singer for the Joe Davis label.

Skitch's Kids Feeling Better

Harrisburg, Pa.—Recovering from injuries received in an auto accident near here on May 12, two members of the Skitch Henderson band are interviewed by WHP showman Dick Redmond. Drummer Eddie Stein and singer Nancy Reed talked with Skitch on the show, though the leader was piped in from a dude ranch near Denver. Sidemen James Swallow and Sante Russo were also injured in the crash, which caused the death of tenorman Harry Davis.

SWINGIN' THE GOLDEN GATE

Christy Proves She Still Sells Sans Stan Support

By RALPH J. GLEASON

San Francisco—June Christy proved one thing during her August run at Ciro's, and that is this: She is a music personality in herself and is not dependent upon the Stan Kenton band for support. Dutch Nieman, who has since sold Ciro's back to the original owners, signed June for the date a couple of months ago. Then he went to her opening at the Casbah here.

He came back screaming he'd been robbed, that June wouldn't sell in his club. So resulted a big hassle, with AGVA and just about everyone else involved. The upshot was that despite Nieman's protests, June's contract was good and she had to open.

Handicaps—But far from having to worry, Dutch did very well indeed with June. Despite the handicaps she was working under—no advertising, a cold, and competition from the Cole-Herman concert and Mel Torme—June wound up her two weeks in a blaze of glory, with good business from opening night on.

June also did a five-minute stint at the Cole-Herman concert and was pretty wonderful. With infinitely more stage presence than she had in days gone by, she is going to be a first-class solo act. Maybe it will take the recitals she wants to do to put on the finishing touches.

Ciro's booked in Nick Esposito

Phoenix Musicians Start Bop Sessions

Phoenix—Group of musicians here have organized sessions known as Adventures in Bop, held bi-monthly at the Sombrero playhouse. Lack of publicity has hampered attendance thus far. Concerts are strictly bop, with personnel as follows: Harvey Rogers guitar; Larry Reeves, drums; Vic Malone and Bob Dunkel, alternating on bass; Don Wickliffe, piano; Mickey McMan and Vern Kiel, trumpets; Eric Clark and Darrell Macy, tenors, and Buddy Weber, vocals.

Joey Lee band playing at the Green Gables since it reopened. Lee plays remarkably like Joe Venuti, rest of the band is very versatile. Group plays light classics during the dinner period, switches to excellent dance and swing music later.

BILLY ROSSER, all is forgiven, come home. Smokey Maggard, The Dog Patch Nite Club, Newport, Ky.

collector, is well-known in New York radio and music circles as a deft tunesmith, a player of charming piano, and one of the most deft singing commercial writers in the world. This last may be opprobrious, but it also brings forth lots of jack. As his partner, I can certify that brother Johnson's ability to wheedle large amounts of moo out of industrialists who never buy a phonograph record, just so they can hear one of his inimitable little efforts on the radio is amazing.

Classical

But what few people know is that in his wild-often days in London, before he became Gertrude Lawrence's accompanist (this is one pianist who came up via salon rather than saloon), Ginger was a student at the Royal College of Music in London.

It seems he had several classes with the great English composer Vaughn Williams, but on pleasant spring days was given to wandering into an empty classroom and playing a gentle four on the piano rather than working out three different inversions of the quartet formation on the chord of the 7th.

Right Next Door

One day he was purring along playing some bad show tunes with the windows open when he realized with some horror that the class he was skipping was next door, and that the voice floating through the window was that of Williams, himself, lecturing. He stopped playing, but, before he could get up from the piano, Williams' shaggy leonine head shoved around the door, wagged sadly for a moment, and said, "Most unacademic, young man, most unacademic," and exited.

It is the same charming sense of humor at 73 that enabled Williams to turn out his Sixth Symphony during the worst days of World War II. Sense of humor because, despite the often tragic quality of the music, there is an underlying quality of restraint and lack of Wagnerian bathos that could come only from a man-of-Williams' temperament.

He is, in my humble opinion, one of the four great living composers of today; ranked along with him are Prokofeff, Stravinsky, and Hindemith.

Joyful

Here is a man who could write an oboe concerto that simply leaps with joy, and again, when a septuagenarian turn out a work of such dramatic force as to be quite remarkable. Listen to Shostakovich's Ninth Symphony and see how puerile large chunks are compared to the writing in the Sixth Symphony (recorded by Stokowski and the N. Y. Philharmonic for Columbia—MM 838).

Even at 73, Williams picks up on new effects. Listen to the last part of the first side and you will hear as tasty use of shuffle rhythm against back-beat brass as you could ever want from a Kansas City band. It's a style I don't recall in any of his other writing.

Even more indicative of the force of his musical beliefs is the epilogue to this symphony. Sound showmanship (there is just as much commercialism in symphonic writing as there is in jazz, only of a different genre) requires that a final movement should be as forceful as possible and end up by bowing the customers off their plush pews.

Statement of Beliefs

At the end of this symphony he has a long epilogue which is, according to the program notes, a statement of Williams' belief in a peaceful and ideal future. It is a long dual passage between strings divisi and woodwinds, also split. In no way could it be called an appeal to any of the movie climactic elements in music. It is a restatement of Williams' essential belief in the lyric in music. You will get another aspect of this if you play the Fantasia on Greensleeves, the last side of the album. Williams always has been interested in English folk music, here gives a 15th century song enduring treatment.

So far as I know, Verdi is the only other major composer who turned out a major work after reaching 70 (Falstaff). This symphony is certainly a capstone in a magnificent career. I hope Williams lives long enough to turn out others like it and better. A man who likes to sing songs above all is too good a musician to lose.

The Ultimate in Mouthpieces!

The first to be made of the famous
SHEFFIELD STAINLESS STEEL

Berg Larsen

"SPECIAL"

Truly a revolutionary mouthpiece, the Berg Larsen "SPECIAL" features the famous double tone chamber that is unequalled for center tone, easy blowing and extra volume.

As with all Berg Larsen's, a choice of four tone chamber settings for each tip opening makes it possible for you to have a mouthpiece tailored to your own specifications.

In addition to having extraordinary playing qualities, the "SPECIAL" is tasteless, hygienic and has no plating to come off.

No wonder it is the favorite of Charlie Parker, Sam Donahue, Wardell Gray and other top sax stars.

Note: Berg Larsen precision machined, solid hard rubber mouthpieces are available for clarinet, alto, tenor and baritone. Like the "SPECIAL," these mouthpieces are available in four tone chamber settings for each tip opening. Ask your dealer.

If in New York, drop in. Dealer inquiries invited.
