New Men

Part of the credit must go to the new men in the organization.
Louie Bellson, with near perfect facility, has learned to relax and swing a band. He's great and should continue to improve with the freedom he's allowed here.

Willie Smith, a veteran of many years in sax sections, is playing the book as if he'd written it himself, and once more Duke has five sax men playing all the time.

Juan Tizol is back, too, and is already writing some new things, while other trombone addition Britt Woodman is an extremely capable jazzman and technician.

Indicator

Indicator

Opening tune gave an indication of what to expect. Duke, Wendell Marshall, and Bellson had the tempo going while the band was still tuning up. Suddenly Duke shouted, "Two! Three!" and the guys cracked into The Hawk Talks (a Bellson original) with thilling guts and precision.

Talks (a Bellson original) with thrilling guts and precision.

And that kept up throughout the evening. A Train, Perdido, Blue Lou, ballads, everything came out exciting and strong and got that great feeling so long associated only with Duke.

Solos? Harold Baker, a vastly underrated guy with a wonderful tone, was outstanding. Jimmy Hamilton was his impeccable self on clarinet, and Smith, Woodman, Williams, et al, chipped in with fine bits.

Paul Gonsalves, a bit too frenetic in style for these ears, nevertheless created a lot of excitement and drew cheers after his work on A Train.

Will Create Talk

This aggregation has to create a lot of talk. Every good Ellington band has done so before, and this is a damn good one. It has the power and skill to bruise and placate in alternate moments, has the spirit which obviously was lacking for too long, and has a leader who proved himself too wise and sound to have a mediocre band for very long.

As the guy said between applause, "It's good to hear him back, isn't it?"

Prado Denied Job With Band Here: Needs AFM Card

New York—Mambo king Perez Prado, who has been appearing at the Puerto Rico theater in the Bronx as a singer, has been denied permission to work with a band of Local 802 men during his visit here. Union officials ruled that to give him a card immediately would be unfair to other leaders, and that the six-month waiting period would be necessary. It is doubtful whether the Cuban pianist-singer will stay here six months, however. His theater appearance has been under AGVA's jurisdiction.

James Unruffled By Loss Of 3 Key Men

Hollywood—"I'm not making any radical changes in the 'style'—you know I don't like that word 'style'—of my band because I don't see any reason for it," said Harry James, as he prepared to pull out of here early in April for a tour of the midwest,

"We cut out all the wild stuff a long time ago. We're just playing a good solid jump style, a few more sweet numbers—we've put some waltzes in the book, too—but we'll continue to play music that has plenty of life in it."

An associate of James said:
"Corky is a great musician. We'll miss him. We'll be glad to have him back when he learns to take the job more seriously."

Though there is no radical change in the James band, there is something in the way of a new, or at least different, sound in the presence at Willie Smith's stand of Jack Ordean. Jazz Moving To N.Y.'s E. Side?

New York—Another indication of a possible trend to the east side in New York jazz was seen here in mid-April when Irving Alexander, best-known boniface of 52nd St.'s lushest wartime era, took control of the Jack Eigen Guest room at 53rd and Madison.

Although the plans were still pretty vague, Jack Eigen was out of the club at presstime, Alexander was considering new names for the spot, and the disc jockey setup had been supplanted by live jazz in the persons of the Sol Yaged trio. Yaged had Sherman Edwards on piano and Jimmy Dee on drums.

Hollywood—If a poll ever is conducted to pick the musician who has received the least amount of recognition in proportion to his talent and ability, the man most likely to win that musicians, would be Benny Carter.

Of course, everyone knows Benny Carter. Mention his name anytime in a gathering of professionals and the talk will go something like this:

"A wonderful alto man—and clarinet, too. Plays fine trumpet, piano, and even trombone. Good enough on any of them to record with the best in the business. An arcellent arranger; a conductor—the kind who can get more out of an orchestra with one eye than these phonies who wave sticks,

"We lived in a kind of section," he says, adding, with no apparent emotion, "the kind of section that in a smaller city would have been called nigger town. It was so tough that a kid didn't dare try to make those few blocks to school by himself. He had to wait on the corner until a few of the other kids had assembled for mutual protection."

Benny Carter never had a press agent, but some of the stories about him sound like it. There's that one, for instance, that he at-tended Wilberforce university and

But its first serious adventure with a musical instrument was on an old cornet he bought at a neighborhood hockshop with his own hardearned money when he was about 13 years old. Teddy Roosevelt's Visit A Great Event In Annals Of Hull House Band

Chicago—Former president Theodore Rossevelt, who was running against Charles Evans Hughes and Woodrow Wilson for election in 1912, was greeted during a campaign visit to Chicago by the Hull House boy's band. The band, drawn up in front of the old Auditorium hotel on Michigan avenue, is shown above. The small hoy holding

Some Of Top Jazzmen Got Start At Hull House

jazz in Chicago. Well, I happened to belong to a band that was also formed on the west side of Chicago, contained just as many kids who became noted musicians, and started a few years earlier. But I bet you've never heard of our band—the Hull House boy's band.

When I joined the band, in 1909, the members included Benny Goodman, Ben Pollack, Abe Lyman, Eddie Richmond, Caesar and Jimmy Petrillo, and the late Don Mangano. Also Jack Epstein, now with Toscanini; the late Louis Epstein, who was on the NBC staff in Chicago; Edward Benkert, secretary of Local 10; Al Armer, who played bass for Paul Whiteman and is now contractor for a pal of mine, Caesar Petrillo, who played bass for Paul White-man and is now contractor for Bob Hope; Johnny Considine, who owns the Saugatuck dance pavilion in Michigan; Frank, Joe, and Ernie Quartell, and the Schwartz family, Jack, Harold, Bernard, Marcus, and Charlie.

Not All Musicians

Not All Musicians

Three of the Schwartz boys are doctors, so you see that not all of us became professional musicians. However, a good percentage did. We got it the hard way, and my hat's off to all these boys. Some of them may have had outside teachers later, but they got their start at Hull House.

My parents came here from

Joined

In 1909 I became envious of the boys in the band at Hull House, so a pal of mine, Caesar Petrillo, took me down and introduced me to James Sylvester, who instructed both the big band and the beginners group. Sylvester was just 20 then, a big boisterous kid, but he knew how to handle boys.

He played trumpet, was an Italian, a Mason, and from the neighborhood. He had been a member of the Daily News band before starting the Hull House band in 1907, when he was 18. During the 28 years since the settlement had been founded by Jane Addams there had always been music groups and instruction, but no band.

The way Sylvester had organized it, group music lessons started when a kid was around six, if any that age were interested, or at any time later. When a boy was 16 he had to leave the band, to make way for younger children. There

School on Mondays and Thursdays.

Kept Off Streets

Uniforms, music, instruction, and summer vacations were paid for by Hull House as an inducement to stay off the streets. The ghetto district at that time was pretty tough. Pool rooms were like grocery stores, there were so many of them. In the thought to get us off the streets, the institution has proved a blessing to all of us, whether acknowledged or not. Of course, there were a small number who went the other way to become members of the Capone gang, and so forth.

I studied trumpet and graduated to the big band in about a year. Some of the other members of the band include Dr. Abraham Edelson, the Los Angeles brain specialist; Judge Bonelli of Chicago; Morton Leviton, former lieutenant of state highway police; Thomas Niemy, secretary to Alderman Beller, and many others. It's remarkable how many of the boys have gone to the top in business, professions, and politics, I think the band had a great deal to do with this fact.

Angelo Cavallo was in the band, worked right next to Petrillo. In 1934 he ran against Petrillo for the Chicago AFM presidency. That election was quite a thing, at the time. Those kids had guts. He's the only man I know of who ever ran against Petrillo.

Of course, we were rough kids. We'd punch our fists through the lockers where the wealthy boys kept their gym shoes. We'd soak toilet paper rolls in water and toss them from the Hull House roof at the pedestrians passing by below. And we organized the R and T club. Those letters stood for robbers and thieves. When we were found out we were only reprimanded. We used to like to steal. If it wasn't for that band we'd probably all have wound up criminals. Every Sunday morning we'd have drill practice—parade all over the west side in a sort of half-military way. We had boys in the band who liked to chew to-bacco and blow their horns at the same time, to the great amazement of the spectators.

Out of Step

Out of Step

The drums would go arrrummph and half the kids would go down with their right foot. Sylvester would keep shouting "left" and walk through the ranks kicking the feet of those who were out of step. During one of these times when Sylvester was passing through the ranks a gangster-boy had something go wrong with his horn—the instruments were donated to Hull House and often battered and broken.

"Jimmy," the boy said, "with a tin can horn like I got, it's a wonder anything comes out," and with that he threw the horn against a building. Sylvester got him a

I had a little wooden hammer to discourage trumpet players, because everyone wanted to play trumpet. We needed peckhorn (alto) players, so I used the hammer to tap on their chests, looked serious, and told them they couldn't play trumpet. If they wanted to switch later and there was a vacancy, that was permitted.

I had three stripes on my red coat, which made me very cocky. I was the only one besides Sylvester to wear stripes. This gave me the power to call out the march when and how long I wanted to play it "Leather lips" was my nickname at the time.

GIRLS IN JAZZ

Mary Osborne: A TV Natural

New York-If ever there was an artist who could be called a natural for television, t would be Mary Osborne. A lot of people have told her so, a lot of agents have said so. Even people in television have said so, but nothing has yet been done

Mary Osborne, girl singer and mary Oscorne, grr singer and girl guitarist extraordinary, was born in 1921. She still has youth and beauty and talent, but it is hard to say how long those qualities will endure before she can be considered to have missed the ues will endure before she can be considered to have missed the gravy train forever. Of course she has enjoyed moderate success and recognition, but her work has never reached what might be called the "seller's market" category; in other words, she has never been in popular demand.

Now a Housewife

in popular demand.

Now a Housewife

Here is a girl who has been around the music business some sixteen years, has been pretty and gifted for at least the same length of time. Finally last year she gave up trying and became a housewife in her Long Island home while trumpeter Ralph Scaffidi, first with Ralph Flanagan and recently in the radio studios, brought home the bacon.

The story of Mary's career is an easy one to reconstruct, since she not only has an excellent memory but also a personality that bubbles over with volubility.

Mary's mother and dad moved to Minot, N.D., in 1917, and four years later Mary was born there, the 10th of 11 children.

"The first thing I remember around the house was a ukulele. Dad gave music lessons, but his own children were his worst students, and when he overheard me picking out tunes on the piano when I was barely 3, he said, 'Well, out of all these kids I finally have one musician.'"

Local Show

Six years playing violin in the school symphony led to a local radio show on KLPM, which Mary did twice a week from the age of 11 until she was 15, her payment consisting of Hershey bars.

Through a sister in Bismarck Mary met Mary Wood, daughter of the lieutenant governor of North Dakota and an aspiring musician herself. This led to the formation of a girl trio comprising Winifred McDonnell, leader and pianist (and official guardian of the 15-year-old Osborne gal), Mary Wood on bass and violin, and Mary on violin, guitar, occasional bass, vocals, tap dances, and anything else that came up.

Later the trio enlarged to a sextet and went to Montana. A musician there one night told Mary: "You've got to come home. There's a guitar player there who's the end, you've gotta hear him."

"You mean better than Django Reinhardt?" said Mary, awe-struck. "Not just better—I can't explain. You'll have to come home

Back to Bismarck

Mary returned to Bismarck, got a hotel job, and after the first night's work proceeded to a place called the Dome, where Al Trent's band was playing. As she walked in she seemed to near a tenor sax. "Where's this great guitarist?" she asked her friend from Montana. Aglance at the bandstand revealed that the tenor sax sound emanated from Trent's guitarist, a young man with an amplified box.

This was a turning point in Mary's life. From that point on there would be no doubling and tripling; all she wanted was to play an electrified apparatus like the young man with this band, whose name was Charlie Christian. Next day she went to the local music shop where the sign in the window advertised an electric guitar "As Featured By Charlie Christian At The Dome."

"I was young, dumb, and eager "After three months I quit

"I came back to New York, worked the winter with Terry Shand's band. Made my first records with him on Decca and had a sole on K-K-K-Katy. Then I worked eight months with Joe Venuti. He used me and the bass player so much, doing trio things with Joe's violin, that the bandhardly was used at all. Winchell ran an item saying that Venuti had finally found a replacement for Eddie Lang. When I wanted to leave, Venuti even said he'd give me Eddie Lang's old guitar if I'd stay."

Mary joined Bob Chester, but at a Cornell date a few night later found out she'd been hired to compete with Charlie Christian, who was with Benny Goodman's ousfit on the same gig. "Charlie was tickled about it, but I was embarrassed. That was the last time I ever saw him."

Marriage

Hanging around New York, Mary worked for a while as a single, then was married to Ralph in November, 1942. They went to Chicago with Russ Morgan; later, when the original Joe Mooney quartet was integrated into Morgan's ensemble, Mary was featured with Mooney, singing and playing. When Ralph entered the navy, mary did nine months with Gay Claridge's mickey band, ending at the Cher Paree. During that time she cut four sides with Stuff Smith's trio (Jimmy Jones on piano, John Levy on bass) but the records were never released. Warm Charm

If Mary could do nothing but sing she would rate her own show, for she has a warm, intimate charm in her voice that raises her above the level of most of the rocalists who currently have their own 15-minute video stints.

Again, if she could do nothing but play guitar, she would rate a TV break, for she is better looking than any guitarist you've ever seen on any channel, and more able than most. Her sound is not the cool Billy Bauer sound, nor is her time the modern legato time in some respects, but she gets a good, clean tone that has a touch of Christian in it, and she swings. Her best solos are Low Flame with the 52nd. St. All Stars and Low Ceiling (How High The Moon) with Beryl Booker, both on Victor.

Spring Election Shutters Several Chi Jazz Spots

By JACK TRACY

Blue Note's jazz-only policy slips slightly for the next couple of bills, as Bill Farrell opens tonight (May 4), backed by Ivory Joe Hunter's combo. That'll be followed on the 18th by the Orioles. Other half of that bill hasn't been set yet, but will, we trust, consist of music.

trust, consist of music.

Hadn't heard Lennie Tristano's combo in person for more than a year before they came into the Note recently (Lennie, Lee Konitz, Warne Marsh, trombonist Willie Dennis, bassist Buddy Jones, and drummer Mickey Simonetta).

And the most interesting development to us is that Warne has emerged as an individual in his own right, one whose improvisational ability now puts him right beside Lee and Lennie. He's gained noticeably in confidence on stand, takes charge completely when soloing.

Some brilliant things being done by this group, yet many persons are ignoring them because they have been scared away from listening by overzealous folk who paint the Tristanoites as supermen playing incomprehensible music. Complex? Yes. Music out of another world? No.

Chicago — A resounding Democratic victory wasn't the only result of the April mayoralty election here. Out on the south side, the precinct at the northwest corner of 63rd and Cottage Grove was voted dry, and such spots as the Grove Circle, Blue Heaven, and others with the selling something non-alcoholic.

So Horace Henderson, who was at the Grove Circle for about a year, took his band in hand and moved down the street out of the precinct and into the 6312 club for three weeks, where they continued to break it up.

Horace has Walter Leonard on tenor; Floyd Smith, guitar; Arthur Edwards, bass, and George Reed, drums and vocals. Right about this time they should be on their way to the Sportsmen's club in Cincinnati, along with trumpeter Hobart Dotson. From there they go to the Rossonian, Denver, for a month. SWINGIN' THE GOLDEN GATE

Never Rains, Just Pours On Frisco Jazz Scene

By RALPH J. GLEASON

San Francisco—Looking ahead into a summer that promises no talent to speak of, the Bay area had nothing BUT talent in April . but that's the way it always is. Stan Kenton's week at the Downtown theater proved at least one thing: the hand can do a very entertaining show and should be a natural for television if and when they get a chance.

Guya like Shelly Manne and Milt Bernhart are born clowns, and the strutting of Maynard Ferguson might prove attractive on a 12-inch screen.

Shearing Does Well George Shearing, who opened customers kept coming despite other distractions.

Vernon Alley, who opened at the Black Hawk the same night, was also packing them in thus tending to prove that this town will let you starve if you're by yourself, but if there are six things at once they all make money. The club, in a quickie booking, put chubby June Barton, a Kay Starr type, in opposite Vernon. Alley's group, it first steady location job in some time, has the benefit of a classy drummer in Roy Porter, which is going to make a lot of difference as soon as they've worked together a bit.

to make a lot of difference as soon as they've worked together a bit. The Black Hawk, incidentally, will probably continue it's name and no-door-charge policy thru the summer. They've got shots at a lot of talent. Erroll Garner does four weeks there starting April 27 and the Page Cavanaugh Trio comes in at the end of May.

BAY AREA FOG: Johnny Cappola (Frisco trumpeter lately with Charlie Barnet) has joined Kenton replacing Ray Wetzel, who is joining Tommy Dorsey. Firehouse Five Plus Two played a one-niter at Doc Dougherty's Hangover club and really jammed the joint... Local radio station engineers and stations are feudin' so almost all remotes are out. Longbar Showboat having trouble with the liquor license people after a couple of beefs in the joint. Eddie Hammond and the 4 Naturals still the house band... Illinois Jacquet played a couple of one-niters here but with the usual top-secret policy; no-body heard about it... Ruth Brown did pretty well at the Oakland auditorium in mid-April.

Betty Bennett, who was all set to open at Fack's early in April decided to stick with the Ventura band instead and canceled out. The Four Freshmen, who were there for a couple of months, had to leave a week early as one of the men got measles. Nick Esposito's trio came to the rescue and filled out the time before the Stylists opened. The last half of April looks to be as mad as the first, with Spike Jones, Armstrong, Muggay Spanier, and Erroll Garner all in town at once.

Billy Shuart cut out for Detroit after a couple of years here and a number of rough breaks. He'll go on east from there to New York... That Beat headline "Brubeck to Apple" should have been "Brubeck to Pineapple." Dave opened at the Zombie Room in Honolulu April 16 for two months, thus assuring Cliff Aronsen a trip to the islands. New 'Club 15 Vocal Find Takes Stardom In Stride

By HAL HOLLY

Hollywood-We barged in on the Club 15 CBShow rehearsal and broadcast at which Gisele (pronounced Geeshell!) LeFleche, now known to U. S. radio listeners as Gisele hell!) LeFleche, now known to U. S. radio listeners as Gisele MacKenzie (Down Beat May 4), made her debut as the new Monday and Friday star of the cross-the-board series. Jo Stafford, we understand, will continue, to hold the spotlight on the remaining days of the week.

We expected to find a young singer futtering with the jitters.

After all, she was supposed to be a complete unknown, coming in from nowhere to take never the featured singer's spot on a major network commercial radio show.

No Neophyte

No Neophyte

We found a self-possessed, self-assured young singer—Gisele is 24—who, we suspect was inward-lyamused at the implications that she was something of a neophyte making her first appearance in the big time.

She had arrived in Hollywood just a few days before, and had spent a few hours with Club 15 music director Jerry Gray, running over the songs she was to do. Jerry was the first to discover that she was a well-trained musician who would be with the band on every arrangement. "Man, was that a load off my mind!" said Jerry.

We were 'hatting with Gisele when the cue came for her entry. She said, "Will you excuse me a moment?" Then she strolled non-chalantly over to her place at the mike, read her lines from the script, sang her first song (1f), strolled back and said, "Now, as I was saying..."

Big Bill Broonzy Back For Chi Job

Chicago — Big Bill Broonzy, blues singing guitarist, has returned briefly to his old shouting grounds here. Broonzy took leave of his job on the lowa State university campus, Ames, Iowa, to appear in a special benefit performance of the "I Come for to Sing" concert group May 5 at Fullerton hall.

Other members of the unit, which has appeared before many college and club groups, are folk singers Win Stracke and Lawrence Lane and narrator Studs Terkel.

We asked her if she liked, or was interested in jazz. "Very much," she replied.
"And what does the word jazz, was interested in jazz. "Very much," she replied.

"And what does the word jazz, musically speaking, mean to you?" we inquired, explaining that it wasn't an attempt to put her on the spot, just a good honest question. She gave us a good, honest answer: "Benny Goodman."
Gisele, who is unmarried, arrived in Hollywood with her dachshund and her manager, Bob Shuttleworth, a former dance band leader who "discovered" her. She appeared briefly with his band as a singer; then (around 1945) Bob dropped the baton and became Gisele's manager. Any romance? Bob gallantly declines to comment, and Gisele says her professional career comes first right now.

Honest Approach

So we decided to break our rule on interviews with songwriters and went over to Paramount for a chat with Jay Livingston and Ray Evans. We found a couple of pleasantly relaxed guys who have what so many persons engaged in various branches of the musical profession lack—an honest approach to their job.

Their winning of the Motion Picture Academy awards for "Best Song" twice during the last three years (for Buttons and Bows in 1948, Mona Lisso in 1950) is something they accept with pleasure for just what the Academy awards are in this division. They're the badge of a business success, in which the element of luck plays large part.

Roy To Write Autobiography

New York—Roy Eldridge, who is interviewed in a story on page 1, has embarked on an auxiliary career as a writer.

As a result of the success of several pieces he wrote for the English - language Paris Post, some of which were translated and reprinted in Jazz Hot, Little Jazz has decided to write an autobiographical book, for which three French publishers have already made bids.

He has also promised to write some pieces for Down Beat.

some pieces for Down Beat.

songs for a now-forgotten picture, Swing Hostess, featuring Martha Tilton. This led them to Capitol records, where, though none of their songs were recorded at that time, astute Johnny Mercer perceived that Livingston and Evans had promise. He recommended them to the late Buddy DeSylva, who emgaged them to do the songs for the Betty Hutton picture Stork Club. But the first song on which they made money, something they both needed very much by that time, was Betty Hutton's Capitol recording of Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief.

That got them a contract at Paramount to write special material songs. Then they got an order to turn out a title song for exploitation purposes only (it was not used in the picture) for use with the Olivia de Havilland film, To Each His Own.

Pen for Bing

Pem for Bing
The importance of an Academy award in Hollywood is its effect upon the front office. Livingston and Evans' next assignment at Paramount was the songs for Bing Crosby's as yet unreleased Here Comes the Groom, an event reportedly marking the cancelation of Crosby's longterm contract with his longtime songwriters, Johnny Burke and Jinmy Van Heusen. Then they received their biggest movie job to date, 12 new songs for operatic baritone Robert Merrill and Dinah Shore to sing in Aaron Slick of Punkin' Crick, a heavy budget picture which marks the first big-time screen appearance of TV comedian Alan Young.

"How do you know when you have a satisfactory song?" we asked Livingston, who functions essentially as the composer half of the team. He said: "It seems to be in the title and opening phrase. When we get one that suits us both, we figure we have something. Then we spend about a week or so, working together, developing it and completing it."

Do they think they have any real hit songs in their two forthcoming picture jobs? "We can only hope," said Evans, "and keep our fingers crossed. Publishers can no longer control song exploitation as they did before the day of the disc jockey. We're not afraid or alarmed by disc jockey. We believe they have to please the public—like all of us."

Efforts Begin To Bear Fruit

Seems like old times again. Edward Kennedy Ellington came through Chicago, from the west and headed east, with a band that jumps more than any unit Duke has had for many years. This one has solid rhythm, every man on the band is happy and acts like it, the cats are making time, even for rehearsals, and as Jack Tracy points out in his review on page 1, the boys are even working out head arrangements on the stand during sets. stand during sets.

Woody Herman is in there, too. As we reported last issue, even at the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago, where clientele and environment place some limitations on a swinging band's performance, Woodrow and his musicians sound great, have all the earmarks of a crack dance ork. Reports from other sections indicate that Claude Thornhill's new crew also is Les Brown's outfit is fine, as it always has been. Harry James has begun a long tour of midwest dance spots. Tommy Dorsey's crew is leaping down in Texas, and his brother, Jimmy, rocking them up in San Francisco. Ray Anthony, Gene Krupa, Shep Fields, and many others are producing fine dance music, and we're beginning to get some of the same on the airlanes and on records.

And reports are that both NBC and CBS are planning to air many remotes from ballrooms all over the country this summer

It was just about a year ago that Down Beat planned and published its special "Let's Dance" issue, designed to revive interest in dance music as such. At about the same time Victor pressed and distributed its series of platters called "Here Come the Dance Bands Again." Other companies followed to dance records than to vocal items.

Now it appears that all of this effort is just about to bear fruit. We haven't boxoffice figures at hand on all of the ballroom engagements that are being played currently. But we do know that Jerry Gray is breaking records at the Palledium in Hollywood, and things have been pretty tough out there. Now that we've got the ball rolling, maybe we can build up some momentum and everybody will be dancing again.

Teaneck, N. J.

To the Editors:

The profile of Les Brown in the April 6 issue was noted with interest, particularly the picture of the Duke Blue Devils.

My husband, G. Donald Mairs, is the trombonist in the top row, third from the left. The sax player to the left of him is Stuart Mackay. Contrary to the caption of the photo, both of these men have followed music as a career.

Mackay is an accomplished bassoonist as well as saxman. He has played with name bands through the years, his longest stay being with Eddy Duchin. He has recently been playing for Call Me Mister and Kiss Me Kats, in New York. His woodwind quintet with rhytlun section rehearses at Nola studios and is gaining popularity in the New York area.

Mairs is at present supervisor of music in the public schools of Teaneck. In 1943 he took a leave of absence from teaching and rejoined Les Brown, but then returned to New Jersey. He has been a member of the Schenettady and New Jersey symphonies, and for the last three years has conducted the Teaneck symphony. During the summer months he conducts the Teaneck community band in weekly park concerts.

Glad you finally got around to doing a story on Les. He's a wonderful guy—even takes time out to call up his old friends whenever he hits New York.

Turk Murphy's Combo Could Lead Coast Dixie

Chicago — We've just heard a Dixieland side that stands out by itself, a gem cut loose from an over-abundance of Dixie-revival records. It has simplicity, relaxed performance, and high melodic appeal. It's a Dixieland version of the traditional spiritual By and By, and is played by Turk Murphy's Jars Band on Good Time Jass 31.

The side opens with trombonist Murphy riding the melody with his muted horn. Time magazine once reported that Turk uses an empty gallon paint can for a mute. If he used it on this date, paint salesmen should canvas the nusic field. The full, gravel-like trombone sound is followed by a lively ensemble led by Don Kinch's trumpet.

Then comes the highlight of the side, a delicately melodic and well-phrased tuba solo by George Turk Murphy for many years held down the trombone spot with the Lu Watters Yerba Buena band, during the Dawn club and the Hambone Kelly's days. He is a large, good-natured type of jazzman and a native of California, having been born in Marysville, Dec. 16, 1914. It has been reported that he started on cornet before he was 12 but soon switched to a $7.50 trombone given to him by his father.

As Melvin E. Murphy, he was a sideman with Mal Hallett's orchestra, and also played, sang, arranged, and drove a bus for Merle Howard around the middlewest. His career with Howard is supposed to have terminated when he threw his trombone at the drummer for messing up the tempo for a vocal with which Turk was trying to sway the crowd.

Evolution Of Jazz

... he finished high school in 1927

Irving Fazola, born Irving Henry Prestopnik in New Orleans, La., Dec. 10, 1912, has long been classified as one of the finest instrumentalists to spring from the second jazz generation. Fazola's earliest instrument was piano, but he soon transferred his talents to alto sax and clarinet, studying with such teachers as Santo Guiffre and Jeon Poquay. He finished high school in 1927 and began working around New Orleans with such teachers as Louis Prims and Candy Candido. During the early 1930s Faz played with several home town crews including those of Roy Teal and Sharkey Bonano, and at the end of 1935 was heard and sharkey Bonano, and at the end of 1935 was heard and subsequently signed up by Ben Pollack while playing at the Roosevelt hotel, Fazola loured with the Pollack organization for several months and his initial taste of national recognition came while a member of that crew. The constant travel associated with the big band business did not appeal to Faz, and he soon tired of the nomadic life on the road and returned to New Orleans. After a short stint with Augie Schellang, he joined Gus Arnheim at the New Yorker hotel in Gotham, later moving to the Glenn Miller band until the end of 1937 when he returned home to work with his old boss, Pollack, during an appearance at the Roosevelt. Bob Crosby claimed the Prestopnik services next, and it was with this Dixie-flavored unit and the Bob Cats, Crosby's bandwithin-a-band, that Fazola really came into his own. He stayed with the Crosby clan for two years and them in January. 1941, joined Claude Thornhill for a year. At the beginning of '42, Faz secepted an overture from Muggsy Spanier and held down the clarinet chair with this group for three months before shifting to Teddy Powell. After leaving Powell, Fazola worked around New York at various Dixie retreats and then upset his loyal following by joining Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights. Heidt was the last of the large ork leaders that Fazola worked with. In 1943, upon the advice of his physician, he turned homeward once again, supposedly to retire from the rigorous routine of the road. He was not long for the quiet life, however, and was soom playing again. Until the time of his death, March 24, 1949, Fas was very active in N.O. jazz circles. He left behind a number of recordings, chiefly those made with the Crosby hand, that illustrate well his Rappolo-inspired, liquid-toned elarinet. In addition to the Crosby sides, Fazola also waxed with Sharkey Bonano, Pollack, Miller, Jess Staey, Thornhill, Spanier, and produced two albums of Dixieland under his own name.

Tristano Bows To Parker

By LEONARD FEATHER

Anyone who has talked at length with Lennie Tristano will attest that no musician in jaxs is more provocative, argumentative, and (generally) negative in his views. It is a pleasure to discuss music with Lennie because, no matter how much you may disagree with him, you have to respect his academic and technical knowledge and equipment.

Although Lennie recognized the artists on every record except the second, he deliberately refrained from mentioning any names. Following were his reactions:

The Records

1. This is what I'd call a nice swinging commercial jazz record. The reed section's fair; four step-brothers, you could call them. But it's all too obviously a commercial jazz record. No originality in the solos—the style for all the horns is a tossup between Pres and Charlie Parker, predominantly the latter. Everything seems to be predicated on how much they can sound like Pres, Bird, or both. Two stars.

both. Two stars.

2. I like the idea behind this; enjoy the contrapuntal idea very much . . . But there's not too much melodic originality . . . Too much repetition of small motifs . . . The interpretation seems to be almost classical. Except for the rhythm pumping away behind it, it could almost be a bunch of studio men. It doesn't swing, but it does show some effort.

Two stars.

3. This is just about my favorite jazz pianist. Fortunately I've heard him play a great deal, worked opposite him for weeks at a time, so I know he can do better than this . . The tempo is too fast for him . I've heard him play this tempo great, but here his playing sounds very compulsive, with an excessive repetition of one figure, where usually he shows a great deal of originality.

Where usually he shows a great deal or originally.
Vitality is the only part of his genius that shows here. I've heard nething on records that sounds like him in person; but because I know what he can do, and because of the tremendous vitality, give this three stars.

4. A very professional-sounding record, and a very good trombone player . . . A little too much vibrato to suit me, but a lot of personal warmth This is not the kind of thing I enjoy listening to; the schmaltzy melody leaves me apathetic.

Arrangement is a little clumsy; mostly vertical riting. All strings at one point, all trumpets; another. But it's very professionally executed ad makes a good commercial record. Two stars.

and makes a good commercial record. Two stars.

5. This sounds like Dixieland before the guys brought out the gin bottle... I've heard much better Dixieland. It lacks the vitality that good Dixieland sometimes has, and the three horns don't get a good blend. They all play with much too much vibrate and sometimes all in the same range; this shows a lack of subtlety, lack of musicianship and lack of listening to each other.

I've heard a lot of Dixieland. The trombone has an almost prescribed role to play in the ensemble. The instrumentation itself should preclude their running into each other as much as they do here. I like the piano, though; he gets a personal sound.

running into each other as much as they do here.

I like the piano, though; he gets a personal sound, which is one of the hardest things to do with a piano; that's one of the beautiful things about Tatum. Hines, too. This guy has nice command, but his octave tremolo seems to be an attempt to get warmth. You can't imitate a horn on a piano like that; It takes an artist, and warmth should be achieved without any psuedo-imitation of a horn. Mostly for the piano, I'd give this two stars.

6. The trumpet is very noor. When Roy was in the piano, I'd give this two stars.

6. The trumpet is very poor. When Roy was in his prime, a lot of guys tried unsuccessfully to imitate him. This sounds like one of the poorer mitations, without Roy's vitality and conviction... This record doesn't come up to par as a commercial jaxs performance; it has a mincing, prisspeat in the rhythm section. These people, who can play a lot better, achieved only mediocrity. The bass player is very good, his line isn't refreshing but he has excellent command of the instrument and good time. One star.

7. Here is an example of somebody trying to milk

7. Here is an example of somebody trying to milk the melody. This sometimes becomes unpleasant to ma. Some people might enjoy it, so I wouldn't put it down and say it's trash... I just don't like it. It's a terrible distortion of the saxophone sound, and the sexuality involved is very deliberate. No

8. Let's talk about the saxophone player first... Even at this point in his career he shows that someday he will be great. His time and melodic line show some confusion, but the kid is original; he's trying to put something down that's expressive of himself. And he's getting pretty great right

I only know one other solo by this guitarist on scords. He has nice time and he swings; there's a Parker influence but no direct copying, it's very personal . . . Trumpet is fairly nice; not as outstanding as the saxophone and not as personal as the guitar.

the guitar.

The rhythm section seems to be trying for that old Basic rhythm sound . . . We almost have a forewarning of Shearing in that locked-hands stuff at the beginning, as we did with Milt Buckner and King Cole . . The whole performance is well executed and has some lilt, though it's a little tepid. For the alto and guitar, it's worth three stars.

9. George is one of the great commercial artists today; he's found out what the people want and knows just how to give it to them. As achmaltzy as it is, a lot of musicians enjoy the way he milks the melody. . . Sometimes he doesn't seem to have good time; he tends to exaggerate the emotional content. To me this number is a throwaway; a standard tune that people like to sing after a couple of drinks. It's not a good example of what he can do. George found a formula on a lower level than I like to listen to, but because I know him and think he's such a nice guy, let's give it two stars.

Afterthoughts by Lessie

Afterthoughts by Lennie

Afterthoughts by Leanie

I want to say something about Charlie Parker, his importance in the picture. As great as we all think Bud Powell is, where would he be if it hadn't been for Bird? He's the first one that should remember it—he told me himself that Bird showed him the way to a means of expression.

George Shearing shows a good deal of personality, but it's still a takeoff on Parker. You take Groovin' High, or pick at random any five records by well-known boppers, and compare the ideas and phrases. You'll see that if Charlie Parker wanted to invoke plagiariam laws he could sue almost everybody who's made a record in the last 10 years. If I were Bird, I'd have all the best boppers in the country thrown into jail!

Chicago—George M. Bundy, the onetime riverboat and circus clarinetist whose friendship with Alexandre Selmer developed into the establishment of the American division of the Paris instrument company, died April 5 in Elkhart, Ind. He was 65.

Bundy, born in Corning, N. Y., worked his way through business college by playing clarinet. He was studying with Selmer, then principal clarinetist with the New York Philharmonic, in 1910 when Selmer returned to Paris. Bundy took over the business of the company in this country.

He is survived by his wife, Irene, and two sons, George Jr. and Frank.

Was that, we asked, the story behind his decision not to work for a white band?

Back 10 Years

San Francisco—Shortly after Celia Nielson and Charlie Mingus were married here on April 2, bassist Mingus had to return to his job with Red Norvo's trio at the Black Hawk. There the new couple were toasted by Guido Cacitinti, co-owner of the spot, who's seated on the left, and Tal Farlow and Norvo, standing. The trio is now at the Surf club in Los Angeles.

DOWN BEAT

Mr. Anthony's Blues Cook's Tour

S Cook's Tour
Pat: Blues, as the name indicates, follows the old blues line with wah-wah trumpet garnishes.
Anthony makes like James making like Armstrong. The point of doing something like this in this day and age is pretty elusive. Tour features very low-register baritone sax, bass, and muted trumpet. A relaxed comp-chug number. (Capitol 1502.)

Ann Blyth and Ava Gardner

Ann Blyth and Ava Gardner
4 The Loveliest Night of the Year
3 How Am I to Know?
Pat: Johnny Green directed the orchestra backing these two film stars, and undoubtedly eased their lot tremendously. Ann, who sings Loveliest, shows a pleasing quality in parts, but does not have a trained singer's breath control or phrasing. Though generally uneven, her work is remarkable for a non-singer. Wayne King sax sounds on this. Ava's low, husky voice doesn't have the quality of Blyth's and displays even more faults. (MGM 30352.)

Les Brown

7 Blue Moon 6 Rod Sails in the Sunset

6 Red Sails in the Sunset
Jack: Moon is a warmly-voiced instrumental with a good beat and, as always with Brown, gets played precisely. There's a good Bill Harris-like trombone solo (from Ray Sims?) and bits from pianist Geoff Clarkson and guitarist Tony Rizzi. Fine dance music.
More tram on the reverse and a Sims vocal. (Coral 60424.)

Nat (King) Cole

6 Song of Delilah
5 Because of Rain
George: The new Cole presentation style, with full orchestral effects. Top side is opus inspired by DeMille's pic, Samson and Delilah.
Opens with echo chamber effect and of added interest later is a short interlude of Dave Barbour guitar working alternately with niano.

Rain is light ballad fare, with Rain is light ballad fare, with Les Baxter's orchestra opening with a storm effect and in conjunction with Nat's voice maintaining a misty atmosphere throughout the side. These new Cole sides are interesting. Although taking Nat far afield from jazz, they show considerable musical thought. (Capitol 1501.)

Perry Como

7 We Kiss in a Shedow 6 Hello, Young Lovers Jack: Kiss looks like another big one for Perry, as he sings it movingly and in his relaxed, ef-fortless style. He's a consistently fine singer. Good Mitch Ayres backing. (Victor 47-4112.)

Pat: Another of the Columbia Piano Moods series, this is not entirely blissful listening. It's not that Dardanelle does anything disturbing, but that she doesn't play the whole thing at her top level. When this Mississippi miss really let's go, as in S'Wonderful, Eyes, Tabu, and the central part of Mood, she shows a modern conception and warm feeling that the florid cocktail trills of much of the remainder hide. Still, backed by bass and guitar, some of this really swings . . . and she has a

Gray Greets Friends At Palladium

Hollywood—Jerry Gray's opening at the Palladium ballroom provided an alert audience with these little scenes. At the top, Jerry greets Betty Hutton and arranger Pete Rugolo who, as local columnists put it, are flaming for each other, or something. Dolores Cloché, in the lower right photo, says she'd rather be classified as an entertainer-comedienne than a singer. A new feature with the Gray band, Dolores does the nort of madrap routines with which Betty Hutton is identified. Tenor man Dave Harris is at the left, with Gray in the background. Dave was with Raymond Scott's quintet a decade or so ago, and from the way the opening night crowd shouted for Dave's Johnson Rag, it looked like Gray's adherence to the tried-and-true dance music patterns would pay off. music patterns would pay off.

5 Andiamo 6 Because of You

Pat: Plug side, Andiamo, is from MGM's Mr. Imperium, and is undoubtedly sung in that by Ezio Pinza. Deamond's big, robust voice treats it well. Better, in fact, than the tune itself deserves. Because, an acceptable song, finds Deamond a bit shaky on the low notes. Generally, though, he's quite singer. (MGM 10947.)

2 Play Ball 3 Theme for John and Marsha

Theme for John and Marsha George: First side is timely, otherwise a catchy nothing, and of interest only to the fanatic imbued with the baseball spirit. Consists mostly of a novelty vocal by Capitol's new discovery, Lindy Doherty, working with a quartet and DeVol's prehestral background. Second side is a musical sequel to Capitol's experiment in questionable taste (anything for a buck). Relation to the Freberg Johnny-Marshy conversation piece? It's an instrumental using the familiar soap opera version of Clair de Lune that's used in the background of J. & M. (Capitol 1460.)

ballads for the fans of the deepballads for the fans of the deep-voiced one, with adequate accomi-ment by Ruas Case and orchestra. Renditions are performed with a minimum of the Farrell vocal mannerisms. Bill still has a small fellowing that goes for him, a group that ardently dislikes his singing, and a great many who are indifferent. These sides will not change the picture. (MGM 16948.)

Arthur Godfrey-Janette Davis 5 When You and I Were Young Maggie Blues 2 Love and Devotion

2 Lose and Decotion
George: A streamlined interpretation of Maggie taken at a sprightly tempo set by Archie Bleyer's band. Novelty in duet style should interest a few who are not dyed-in-the-wool Godfrey listeners. It's bright, bouncy, and well performed, Reverse is Janette Davis alone in an asphalt hillbilly monstrosity. (Columbia 39326.)

Ted Heath

Ted Heath

7 Blue Skies of Cuba

7 Blue Skies March

Jack: The same Sidewalks cut by Woody a few years back, but this one has the bass man carrying the melodic line throughout, with the band playing mainly fill-ins. Bassist (Sammy Stokes) sounds mushy but gets around

The second eight of Blue Skies finds the trombones playing melody with a wandering alto man playing East of the Sun against them. Later, saxes play melody, the trumpets Sunny Side of the Sun Street. Then again, trumpets melody and trombones Stormy Weather. Strange people, those British. Band sounds beautifully rehearsed and the recording is up to the crack British standards. Rating is more for performance than content. (London 719.)

No One But You

Jack: Four sides this time from read around the world.

SPANISH GUITARS

Harry James 4 The Moon of Manakoors 3 Thems for Cynthia

3 Thems for Cynthia George: Moon is a lush instrumental so heavy it drags horribly. Against this background is trumpet by the leader that sounds as tired as Harry probably is of playing it. Cynthia another weary James disc. Too bad they didn't add a vocal so all the little Cynthias in the world would want to buy it. (Columbia 39289.)

Herb Jeffries 5 I'm Yours to Command 5 Love Me

Pat: Herb's highly stylized singing never seems to vary, and this monotony transcends all the good qualities about his voice and his backing. (Coral 60425.)

Herb Lance

Dream Awhile Don't Tell Me

Porem swhile Toom's Tell Me

Pat: Dream would be a great side if it weren't for the bad balance which makes a couple of unnecessary flutes more prominent than either the rest of the band or Lance. Don't, however, is scored as was Eckstine's Jelly, Jelly, with the same blue sax figure. Lance continues his duplication of the early Eckstine, and sounds tremendous. When he hit Chicago'r Regal theater a year or so ago, he was an impressive singer with only a little of the Eckstine tinge. It would be nice to hear that sound again, too. (Columbia 39291.)

Tony Pastor

5 Ida 5 Mary's a Grand Old Name

Jack: Ida gets the same treat-ment Tony's old Bluebird of Dinah did—slow, dragging tempo, with Tony playing tenor first then Tony playing tenor first then singing querulously.

Line from Mary: "And there is something there that sounds so square."

Tony? (Columbia 39290.)

Preacher Rollo and The Five Saints

4 When the Saints Go Marching

4 When the Saints Go Marching In Po You Know What It Means to Miss New Orleans?

George: Preacher Rollo is the well-known drummer Rollo Laylan, who apparently masterminded thia pseudo-Dixie session. Saints is more a novelty with vocal than a jazz record. Only feature of interest to the jazz fan is some fair Tony Parenti clarinet. Miss New Orleans features a long piano interlude by Sister Marie D. Marcus. Trumpet and trombone, Thomas B. Justice and Gerald F. Gorman respectively, are little known in Dixieland jazz. (MGM 10950.)

Edmundo Ros

4 Mambu Number Five 4 Reco-Reco Samba

4 Réco-Rèco Samba
Pat: Ros, according to this sample, is the British Cugat. His Mambo is very tame, a Lombardoized version. The band doesn't cut it as cleanly as Prado's did, and the recording adds to the mushy sound. Réco, written by Laurindo Almeida and Eddie Samandal and Eddie Samandal against franski, is a piano solo against trumpet figures and rhythm. Pi-anist Eric Spencer sounds strangely like a ragtime man, and someone with a more complete collection of ragtime records can probably find the same piano line duplicated among them. (London 924.)

Dave Rose

7 The Syncopated Clock 7 The Mask Waltz

George: Leroy Anderson's popular semi-classic novelty is impec-cably played by full orchestra with the rich Rose sound and a mini-mum of the cute clock musical tricks. Dave Rose's own Mask Waltz is likewise well performed, with a piano solo by Ray Turner, who is known for his Capitol re-cording work. (MGM 30353.)

Frank Sinatra

Frank Sinatra
6 Hello, Young Lovers
6 We Kinsed in a Shedow
George: These two ballads are from the new Hammerstein-Rodgers show, The King And I, and are the type of song one should see the show to appreciate. The lyrics are clever but the melody builds slowly in your mind. The more mature Frankie is subtler than his Nancy days, and consequently his loud juvenile following has dropped by the wayside, but the guy still sings with fine tone and phrasing. Axel Stordahl directs the orchestra on both sides.
(Columbia 39294.)

Jo Stafford

5 Mong the Colorado Trail 1 Make the Man Love Me

Pat: Jo squeezes out a modicum of warmth on Colorado, which lopes along easily with Paul Weston's ork and the Norman Luboff choir taking the route. The choir hums on Make, Jo hymns, and a single-note piano line sets it off. (Columbia 39301.)

Kay Starr

Kay Starr

5 Then You've Never Been Blue

6 Come Back, My Darling

George: Blue is the old Ted Fio Rito-featured number, revived with a Frank DeVol accompaniment that tends to dull the Starr musical vivacity. On the other side, where she makes a plea to the roving kind, the accompaniment is by Dave Barbour, and the side moves with a more Starr-like quality.
(Capitol 1492.)

Herbie Steward

7 My Baby Just Cares for Me 6 My Last Affair

6 My Last Affair
Jack: Dick Hyman, bassist Mert
Oliver, and Don Lamond back brother Steward on this pair.
Herb's phrasing is excellent, flowing, and he blows with a good beat on Baby. Hyman, however, sounds too formal and precise,
makes you feel he's playing an exercise. His entrances on both the solo and his break near the end are almost exactly alike.
The ballad is all Steward's for

The ballad is all Steward's for two choruses. The first is melody, the second not too far away from it. (Roost 525.)

Art Van Damme Quintet

Art Van Damme Quintet
7 The Continental
6 Pil Be There with Bells On George: The familiar Continental is performed in a musically interesting manner by this clever quintet led by accordionist Van Damme. In spots, Art's accordion sounds like a trumpet. In fact, the work of this group is amazing when you consider how they cover up all the objectionable sounds that usually emanate from an accordion. The reverse is a light tune featuring the vocal work of Keith and Sylvia Textor, formerly with the Honey Dreamers, and here working in fine accord with the quintet. (Capitol 1494.)

Sarah Vaughan

5 City Called Heaven 4 Ave Maria

Pat: Sarah, of course, has the ability to sing anything she chooses—certainly the best equipment of any singer identified with jazz or pop music. But her sudden shifts in range and timbre on Heaven, and her occasional coyness, are not as effective as a less mannered approach. The other side is even more distorted, both sound- and syllable-wise. (Columbia 39207.)

My Best On Wax

By Elliot Lawrence

I like several sides for different reasons. For the best ballad mood I'd select Once Upon a Moon. The whole feeling of the side turned out just right. I wrote the arrangement and we had Mitch Miller on abos and a Jack Hunter vocal.

er on oboe and a Jack Hunter vocal.

For spirit I liked Sympathy. They released the first take we made on it—we made several cuts afterward but they never achieved the spirit we got on the first one. It was a Frank Hundertmark arrangement, with Rosalind Patton singing.

For jazz, of course, I'll take Elevation, Gerry Mulligan's arrangement with solos by Phil Urso on tenor (he's with Woody now), Joe Techner on trumpet (he's still with me), and Vince Fraschett who's now with Hal McIntyre, on trombone.

Kenny Clarke In Return To States

New York — Kenny Clarke, former Gillespie drummer who has spent much of the past few years in Paris, was due back in New York last week.

Another former drummer with Dizzy. Kansas Fields, recently started a series of weekends at Bowman's Melody room in Harlem, using Mal Waldron, piano, and Earl Chaplin, bass.

Frances Wayne

Frances Wayne
6 He's Only Wonderful
6 FU Never Know Why
Jack: Good to hear Frances back on wax again in full voice and backed by Neal Hefti, though occasionally she's caught with her intonation showing.
The tunes aren't bad; just good enough, in fact, so that you'll probably hear very little of them.
(London 999.)

New Sound?

Hollywood — Could Frankie Laine's latest recording session for Columbia provide the "new sound" everyone seems to be looking for? He was supported by an ensemble that consisted of soven guitara, bass, and drums (See Things to Come). Who directed the session? That old whip-snapper, Mitch Miller hisself.

Own Bands

Own Banda

Benny also fronted his own bands on several engagements, but was never able to make enough money with a band to support the kind he wanted. Betweentimes, he was getting acquainted and working with such musicians as Teddy Wilson, Roy Eldridge, Chu Berry, Sid Catlett, Cozy Cole, and Ben Webster, to name a few. This was all in the very early '30s, the period B.G. (Before Goodman). Fletcher Henderson, reliable authorities say, had yet to turn out a single manuscript. Benny Carter was rated by New York musicians who had worked with him as the most important arranger of "big band jazz," in fact, as the man whe avalved the form Benny

"big band jazz," in fact, as the man who evolved the form. Benny man who evolved the form. Benny is modest on the point. "There were others," he says, "like Eddie Powell and Herb Spencer. We all learned things from each other's work. Powell and Spencer both wrote for Fletcher as early as 1930, to my recollection."

And in Europe, particularly in France, where U. S. jazz music was already beginning to receive serious attention, Benny Carter's name was second in importance only to that of Louis Armstrong, thanks to the flowery, but accurately simed, literary tributes of Hugues Panassie and other European and English critics.

Recognition

Recognition

In his book, Le Jazz Hot, the first authoritative work of its kind and first published in 1934, Panassie devotes most of his discussion of jazz idiom arrangers to Duke Ellington and Benny Carter. There is no mention of Fletcher Henderson as a arranger, except in a son as an arranger, except in a footnote added for the U. S. edition published in 1936.

So we're back in late '34, and in New York Benny Goodman was preparing to launch, at Billy Rose's, the band that would revolutionize the dance hand business. lutionize the dance band business. The first man he called in to write his arrangements was Benny Car-The first man he called in to write his arrangements was Benny Carter — not Fletcher Henderson. Fletcher did not come into the picture until Carter sailed for Europe in early 1935, after recommending Teddy Wilson as the arranger to take his place. Wilson's work as an arranger, possibly because it is not well known, has not received much attention. His important part in the story is that Benny Goodman liked

Astor Quits Leading: To Work As Booker

New York — Bob Astor, the "hard-luck" bandleader who broke both legs in an accident 18 months ago, has given up bandleading for good and joined Billy Shaw's office as a booker.

It was Astor who turned over his library at one time to Lionel Hampton to assist in the formation of the first big Hampton band.

him so much as a planist that he became the first Negro musician to crack the color line and work class-A spots with a white band. (Down Beat, Jan. 12.)

The question as to whether Benny Carter or Fletcher Henderson deserves most of the credit for the development of the modern school of dance band arranging is a controversial one, possibly one that should not be brought up now, with Henderson seriously ill. Carter, himself, would never have brought it up. brought it up.

Spread Credit

Spread Credit

But it is impossible to discuss Benny Carter adequately without pointing out that there are many musicians who feel that Henderson, due to the powerful influence of the frequently biased John Hammond, has been given all the credit for the development of the "big band jazz" style of arranging that made Goodman's band famous. They feel much of the credit should have gone to Benny Carter, who was writing in that style years before Henderson wrote a single line.

The Carter supporters also point to the fact that while Henderson, unquestionably one of the greatest in his day, became dated by the late '30s, Carter in 1942 was writing skillfully and creatively for the larger combinations (up to six reeds and eight brass) that came in with the "progressive jazz" era.

Sailed in '35

Sailed in '35

Sailed in '35

Carter, as noted in the foregoing, sailed for Europe early in 1935, months before the Goodman band came into its own with that smashing success at the Palomar in Los Angeles.

Already widely known in Europe, Carter accepted an offer from Willie Lewis to arrange and play in his band at the Rue Blanche in Paris. Of the band, Benny says: "Just a cafe orchestra—very good for its days." His most important musical work was in the form of concerts, which he presented with specially selected jazz ensembles in the principal cities of France, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, and Sweden.

But one of his most important contributions was that he brought to European audiences an entirely new concept of the American jazz musician. Jazz journalist Nesuh Ertegun, who was there, says:

"European jazz authorities had pictured the American jazz musician as a completely unschooled, rough and rowdy individual who couldn't read music, oir read anything for that matter.

Scassical!

Semestional!

"When Benny Carter, whose appearance on the European music scene was a well publicized and important event, was found to be a polished, well-educated gentleman, by anyone's standards, it was a sensation. European jazz lovers thought of the music as almost of necessity associated with something primitive found only in the American Negro. After meeting and knowing Carter, they revised their entire concept of the music and the musicians who played it. It's unfortunate that Benny has become something of a specialist in that field. Pictures released during the last Benny Carter has never become as widely known and recognized "When Benny Carter, whose ap-in the same walks of life in the U. S. that he was in Europe."

After establishing himself as one of the leading musical figures in Paris, Carter went to England to become assistant music director and arranger with Henry Hall, music director and conductor for the British Broadcasting Company. When England's entry into World War II curtailed musical activity, Carter decided it was time to come home.

"I thought things were beginning to jump back here," he says. Not Without Honor...

Not Without Honor . . .

Not Withous Honor...

Well, they were jumping then (1938), after a fashion, but for Benny. Carter they never have jumped in the U. S. as they did in Europe. He's never had to search for a job, but neither has he succeeded in establishing himself in the position to which his unquestioned talent, ability, training and personal qualifications entitle him.

On his return to this country Benny kept busy in New York for the next few years mainly as an arranger. He even did a stretch as such on radio's Hit Parads show in the days (1942) when the orders issued to the arrangers directly from the tobacco merchant sponsor made the show a musician's nightmare. Carter, always first and foremost a professional who can do any job that comes along, just turned out his scores and took the money with no complaints.

"I really rather enjoyed it," he says of his Hit Parads stint. "For me that sort of thing was just a nice easy job."

For Listeners Only

Carter came to Hollywood that year, at the instigation of agent Carlos Gastel, and made his first major appearance here with a big, progressively styled band (see photo) at Billy Berg's Swing Club, then a small spot off Hollywood Blvd.

then a small spot off Hollywood Blvd.

It was the first time anyone had attempted to present "progressive jazz" for listeners only (there was no dance floor) in a small club. It was notably successful on this occasion. In fact that band, considering the number of changes in personnel in all bands during the war years, remained relatively intact and active. Benny appeared with it in a number of other Los Angeles spots, made tours, and also appeared with it in theaters until 1946.

Since then, except for occasional appearances with small groups, Carter has concentrated largely on arranging, organizing and conducting recording sessions, some songwriting work, and the scoring of special sequences in motion pictures.

'Stormy Weather'

Way Out, Edge of Doom, My Blue Heaven, I'll Get By, Sound of Fuey and, most notably, Panie in the Streets, in which he adapted Duke Ellington melodies for the numer-ous incidental sequences featuring Eddie Miller's tenor sax.

Loot

Benny doesn't brag about his work as a songwriter. The things he's knocked out, such as Hurry, Hurry (Savannah Churchill on Capitol), King Sized Papa (Julia Lee on Capitol), Rock Me to Sleep (Peggy Lee on Capitol), and others aimed at what the trade calls the "race" market, he capsiders just wince afforts aimed and others aimed at what the trade calls the "race" market, he considers just minor efforts aimed at turning a few honest dollars. On many of his songs he is listed as "Johnny Gomez." Only recently has it become known that he was with Gene DePaul and Don Raye on the writing of the Ella Mase Morse—Freddie Slack hit record that did so much to put the Capital record company in business—Cow Cow Boogie. Benny's name didn't appear on the early copies because of contractual commitments. But he got his royalty checks.

ments. But he got his royalty checks.

His more interesting credits as a composer include his Malibu, which he recorded with his own band on Capitol; Rainbow Rhapsody, recorded by Glenn Miller; Blue Interlude, recorded by Benny Goodman, and Lonely Woman, recorded by June Christy with Stan Kenton. A good many persons should recall his Blues in My Heart, written originally as an instrumental, but which, with lyrics supplied later by Mitchell Parrish, became a major hit song.

Comfortably Settled

Fi

Gr

Ha

Comfortably Settled
Today, Benny Carter is making a good living. He has an upper-bracket type of home built on a hillside back of Hollywood, where he lives with one of his sisters and a police dog. Like other successful Negro musicians here and elsewhere, he's been involved in a couple of controversies over his right to live where he chooses. He seemed amused rather than bitter over the fact that some years ago the chief objector among his neighbors, when he moved into his present home, was said to be a fellow-musician of some repute.

It's generally believed that if Benny Carter were white he would be holding down a top job as a conductor-composer-arranger in a motion picture studio here, or with one of the networks. But some believe that Benny Carter's "handicap," if it could be called such, is nis absolute unwillingness to flourish the matter of his color as do some notably successful Negro professionals. Benny Carter, himself, is so completely devoid of race-consciousness that the most race-conscious persons feel completely at ease with him.

It's pretty clear that he feels the music of which he is a part has progressed to a point where its racial origin is no longer the all-important factor.

By LEONARD FEATHER

New York — Benny Carter spent almost three years in Europe from 1936 to 1938—three of the happiest and most successful years of his amazing career. He had originally gone over to Paris to play trumpet in Willie Lewis 12-piece hand, and was playing with Lewis when I approached Henry Hall with the deal of bringing him to Lamdon.

Hall, the leader of the house dance band at BBC, reacted warmly to the idea of adding Benny as a staff arranger, and Benny as a writer but not as an instrumentalist. The deadlock between the British and American unions had already been in effect for two or three years.

Between the happiest and most successful years in the conversing in musicians' high could discuss so many subjects aside from music, and could make himself at home in any kind of company and in two or three large as of conversing in musicians' high could discuss so musicians. Here are n few oddities that should be of interest to Carter fans, especially those concerned with his natrumental versatility:

Wrote Steadily

During his first few months in London Benny spent most of his time in hotels, writing rapidly without the aid of a piano. At first he turned in four or five arrangements a week, rehearsed the band painstakingly, and made it sound amazingly good.

Later he sent for his wife, Inez, and their little daughter, Barbara, whom he sent to school near London. He took an apartment and settled down to a quieter, more regulated life than he had known in years.

getted down to a queter, more regulated life than he had known in years.

Benny's only opportunities to play came when he sat in at some of the little after-hours night clubs in Soho, and when he made records for the English Vocalion label. For these sessions we would assemble the best British talent, and Benny played tenor for the first time on records on his first release, a beautiful tune of his own called Nightfall.

Later we made the current hit song written by two Englishmen, These Foolish Things, on which he played trumpet, alto, and clarinet, and soon after that he did a great arrangement on There's a Small Hotel, for which he wanted to take the vocal himself.

Disagreement

Disagreement

Benny and I disagreed a little this date; I didn't dig him as on this date; I didn't dig him as a ballad singer and wanted him to play the melody on alto. We finally cut two takes, one with his vocal and one with an alto solo, and released both. But the alto version fooled a lot of people; it wasn't Benny playing. He didn't wasn't Benny playing. He didn't want to play this number and assigned the chorus to the late Freddy Gardner, who did a remarkable job of making people think it was Benny.

After awhile Benny became rest After awhile Benny became rest-less about not being able to play, and landed at a hotel in Scheven-ingen, Holland. For this he lined up what was probably the most truly international jazz orchestra assembled. Among the 11 ver assembled. Among the 11 nen were English, Scottish, Dutch, 'rench, Jamaican, Trinidad, and French, Jamaican, Trinidad, and American Negro.

Benny had a ball in Holland, showing, as ever, his ability to fit into any kind of social setting.
The Dutch are great bicycle users, and one of my fondest memories of Berny is the sight of him magnificently equipped in white tie and tails, the tailcoat flying in the breeze as he cycled across town to work.

What They Say

HORACE HENDERSON (pian-"HORACE HENDERSON (pian-ist, leader, arranger): "Benny Carter's a genius. As far as ar-ranging, conducting, and re-hearsing a band go, he's the great-est. Before I knew Benny, I thought Don Redman was tops. Carter's kept up with music, though, and he's still my favorite musician.

though, and he's still my favorite musician.

"I first heard Benny in Pittsburgh, and got him, Roy Eldridge, and Rex Stewart to join my band. At that time he'd listen to Fletcher's records and think the arrangements were a shame. Even then he was writing beautiful things.

arrangements were a shame. Even then he was writing beautiful things.

"But Benny didn't do most of the arranging for Fletcher's band after he joined my brother. Bill Challis, who arranged for Whiteman, did a lot of Fletcher's arrangements on the qt. Charlie Dixon, the guitarist, Coleman Hawkins, and Russ Morgan also did a number of them. This was in the Roseland ballroom era of Fletchers' band. Benny was lazy at that time, and Fletcher had to beg him to do arrangements.

Benny took a 15-piece band into the Arcadia ballroom in New York, Russell Procope was with him, and after Russell took a solo, Benny really had to play!

EDWARD POWELL (arranger-composer, 20th Century-Fox stu-dios): "I first met Benny Carter 20 years ago when he was the dios): "I first met Benny Carter 20 years ago when he was the outstanding instrumentalist of the great Fletcher Henderson band. His has been an enviable achievement—to have grown in stature through each successive phase and style of jazz music and also to have become one of the very best arrangers in the business."

Movie Musicians Invade Dance Field

Hollywood — Modifications of Local 47's highly controversial and still-muddled work-restrictive regulations, adopted at a general meeting last month and in effect April 23, will see a flock of film studio musicians invading the casual dance date field.

Under the new regulations of conversing in musicians' hip talk, could discuss so many subjects aside from music, and could make himself at home in any kind of company and in two or three languages. Very few musicians, British or American, before or since have made so many friends in their continental travels.

His arranging ability and his artistry on all his instruments have developed through the years to a high degree. He is also a great guy."

PAUL VILLEPIGUE (arranger and teacher): "As both an instrumentalist and a writer, here is a man who has contributed possibly more than any other to the so-called jazz idiom; and unlike many another, he continues to progress."

PHIL MOORE (composer PHIL MOORE (composer, arranger, conductor, vocal coach):
"One of the finest gentlemen and musicians it has ever been my pleasure to know. I have only the greatest admiration for all he's meant to the music industry. He has been a true inspiration to me as well as many of my colleagues."

SPUD MURPHY (arranger teacher): "In my opinion Benny is the finest all-around musician of our time. As a composer he is great; as an arranger he is terrific; and as an instrumentalist he is tops."

SHORTY ROGERS (arranger, SHUNTI ROCERS (arranger, trumpet player): "Benny Carter has always been a great instrumentalist, arranger, and pioneer in jazz. He was one of the first to enhance his natural talent with acquired knowledge, and in turn helped to raise jazz to a higher level."

FRANK DE VOL (arranger, FRANK DE VOL (arranger, radio conductor, bandleader): "I have always been an admirer of Benny Carter's talent as an instrumentalist and arranger. Years ago his foreign as well as American records gave me the urge to emulate him on alto and trumpet. My admiration for him has not diminished. I think he is great."

Jerry Gray Again Pulls The Rabbit New York — The Rabbit ran head-on into the Bird April 21 at Uline's arena in Washington, when both Johnny Hodges and Charlie Parker were featured, along with June Christy, in a Symphony Sid jazz concert presentation. Palladium From Slump Hollywood—Though Jerry Gray's first week at the Palladium did not quite equal total of Stan Kenton's first total of Stan Kenton's first Along Alon dium did not quite equal total of Stan Kenton's first week, steady building to the Pallaing in more than 5,500 paid admissions.

Gray isn't trying to make musical history with his band; arrangements still carry heavy flavoring of the Glenn Miller manner, but he's added a wide variety to his offerings, even includes a Dixie unit built around Charlie Teagarden.

The kids seem to go for Dave Harris, tenor saxist who made his appearance on the music scene with the Raymond Scott quintet some 12 years ago and whose style of jazz soloing is well within the ken of the dance-minded patrons for whom Gray has made a direct and successful play.

Another good crowd-pleaser is singer Dolors Cloché, whose lively interpretations of rhythm numbers are not unpleasantly reminiscent of the Betty Hutton of Vincent Lopez days.

Make Up Mind
