Goodman Lining Up Ork For Tour With Armstrong

New York-Benny Good New York—Benny Good-man is now lining as many as possible of the sidemen who made jam history as members of his crew for his new band, which will start a nationwide concert tour on April 15, booked by Associated and co-starring Louis Armatrong's combo. The new group will, like the one that catapulted him into national prominence, consist of three trumpets, two trombones, four saxes, four rhythm, a girl singer and Benny.

Gene Krupa and Teddy Wilson,

Benny's last big band broke up in 1949. Since then he has occasionally worked with a combo, and has assembled bands for record sessions only. The tour is expected to last six weeks.

Louis Armstrong's sextet, which will make the tour along with the Goodman band, is expected to undergo two personnel changes before then. Ralph Sutton is reported under consideration for Marty Napoleon's piano chair, and another clarinetist may replace Bob McCracken.

Zutty Singleton Returns From France Disillusioned And Bitter At Mezzrow

By LOUISE LA SALLE

Have you been hearing wondrous tales about living conditions for American musicians in Europe, and especially for Negro musicians in France? Are you by any chance one of those jazzmen who have seriously considered pulling up your stakes and going over there to live forever in ease and comfort? If so, you would be well advised to listen to the tale of Zutty Singleton and his wife, Marge, who have just returned, after 14-months over there, bitter and disillusioned about the situa-tion in general, and about two gen-tlemen named Mezz Mezzrow and Hugues Panassie in particular. Mezz is the musician described by Nat Hentoff in the Feb. 11 Beat as the Baron Munchausen of jazz.

Even Fight

"I used to think Mezz and I were friends," says Zutty, sadly.

"The day before he went to jail he ate at our home. The day after he came out of jail he ate at our home. I even used to fight with Condon and all the other guys who laughed at him and were against him.

Sure Enough!

CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 25, 1953

New York — Just shows you how much trouble a publisher will go to, for a plug on his tune. Letter from Redd Evans of Jefferson Music recently an ounced the following: "In order to bring to your attention our song No Moon 4t 4ll we have arranged for a total eclipse of the moon on Jan. 29, from 4:54 to 9:54 p.m. EST. This will cut a swath over the United States. I hope we will do as well with our song. Therefore, Jan. 29 has been pruclaimed National No Moon At All Day, by the National No Moon At All Foundation (supported and endowed by Jefferson Music Co., Inc.)"

Sure enough, the eclipse took place.

Hollywood — Frank Sinatra, whose ambition has been to become a serious screen actor, will have his best opportunity to date. He has been signed for the role of the Italian-American G.I., Maggio, in Columbia's forthcoming screen version of the James Jones novel, From Here to Eternity.

Sinatra drew the role, considered a "prize part," over competition from some 20 actors from the stage and screen. He joins a cast headed by Montgomery Clift, Deborah Kerr, and Burt Lancaster. Closest Sinatra has come to a straight acting role previously was his portrayal of the young priest in Mirrale of the Bellio.

The new pact calls for a guarantee of $4,000 for a five-night week and 50 percent of the weekly take over $5,000. It goes into effect March 11, when the Welk band returns from a vacation starting Feb. 22.

HERE IS another story telling you what the various dance bands are doing throughout the country. There are more throughout this and every issue of Doson Beat.

Welk will do his weekly KTLA telecasts from the KTLA studio theater during the layoff.

Welk's extraordinary following here is a direct outgrowth of the success of his bandstand telecasts, as the result of which an entirely new trend in danceband video shows was established here. But to date no other bandleader has been able to capitalize on it as successfully as Welk.

Benny Strong, who tried recently to emulate Welk with wackly telecasts from Horace Heidt's Trianon, had to give up after a three-month run. The Trianon, which had increased operation to five nights a week during Strong's stand, is back to Friday and Saturday nights only with visiting name bands.

Clooney, Like Peggy Lee, A Real Hit In First Film

By CHARLES EMGE

Hollywood-Last month it was Peggy Lee, making her screen debut in The Jazz Singer as co-star with Danny Thomas and turning in a highly impressive performance that set movie moguls to scrutinizing the music world harder than ever as a source of new talent. This month it's Rosemary Clooney who launches another potential screen career with release of The Stars Are Singing, in which Rosie, engaged originally as a supporting player, wound up with top billing over Anna Maria Alberghetti and Lauritz

Melchior.

The story: Rosie is ducking marriage with an up-and-coming young lawyer in favor of a career as a singer despite the fact that she is doing no better than dog food commercials on a TV show when the story opens. (One of her lines: "I'd rather have my picture on the cover of Down Beat right now than settle down and raise children.")

Anna Maria is a Polish orphan-refugee who jumps ship from an Iron Curtain vessel in New York harbor thinking Melchior, a once-great opera star now hitting the bottle, who was a friend of her parents in Poland, will be able to help her. Rosie perceives Anna's possibilities and sees a chance of advancing her own career by helping the little girl elude immigration authorities.

Comes Out Well

The tale and the telling are pretty far fetched, but thanks to excellent performances, m bright script and deft direction it all comes out in technicolor as what fan magazine reviewers can call "a heart-warming package of high grade family entertainment." And not without

The music: a set of new songs by Livingston & Evans most of which The music: a set of new songs by Livingston & Evans most of which are unlikely to register except as fair "situation songs" for this picture, though one, a rhythm number (Haven't Got a Worry in the World) might rate some attention as a promising pop hit prospect. Anna Maria, a crackerjack coloratura at 16, and Melchior take turns with operatic excerpts and standards. As a teenager, Anna Maria is undoubtedly a little gem, both as singer and personality. What she will do when she outgrows the prodigy class is the usual question mark.

A New Personality

Rosemary Clooney: In Rosie, Paramount, like Warner Brothers with Peggy Lee, finds itself with a singer who registers on the screen as an engaging new personality. In Rosie's case, she not only proves to be a self-assured, competent performer before the camera, but one with an unusual flair for handling sophisticated punch lines and a real gift for partomime.

In this line, note her great performance in the Come-On-A-My-House sequence, which is purported to be a recreation of the record session. She belts out the song with all the verve that made it—and her—an overnight sensation, while registering a picture of hopeless ineredulity at the thought that she should be forced to record such a ridiculous bit of nonsense.

But Rosie, unlike Doris Day who climbed to the top on a string of empty, bubbly musicals, will have to have the right kind of roles, roles tailored to develop her appeal to mature audiences escaping from television. Rosie has got it. It will be up to Paramount.

Stan talked about it during his Hi-Hat week in Boston. "I'm going out to the coast and when I return at the end of February, I intend to bring with me Gerry Muligan and Chet Baker. I agree with Gerry's no-piano theory thoroughly and I think with four horns, including my new trombonist, Bob Brookmeyer, and two rhythm, we'll really blow up a storm.

Sat In

"I sat in with Gerry last time I was on the coast and didn't miss the piano at all. You see, aside from what Gerry rightly says about the piano dominating a band's tonality and the piano making the soloist a slave to its whims, almost all the pianos around the country are so beat. You're never in tune from night to night, sometimes not from might to night, sometimes not from might to night, sometimes not from might to night, sometimes not from my won point of view besides, I've been getting tired of Studios?

An intrepid questioner asked Stan about his studio work, whether he was abandoning that for good. "Oh yes," expanded Stan. "Never again. At least not until I get so old that the young cats come on to the stand and cut me."

Since he is now at the advanced age of 26, Stan is unlikely to be heard in studio section work for some little time.

Dave Kapp, of RCA Victor, was responsible for drawing this song to my attention. He played me a demonstration record of it, and to tell the truth I thought he was kidding. I didn't see how the song could possibly be for me. But I found myself singing it, so I realized it must have something, and we hadn't had a really big hit in a year, so everybody was a little panicky, and we went ahead and made it.

Lota of Woes

I had an awful lot of trouble cutting that song right. Never had to have so much cueing on a song—because of the odd way it's constructed. I was sure the tune they put out on the back of it, Lies, was going to be the hit side. But that's the way it so often happens; the side you don't pay any attention to turns out to be the seller.

We had an unusual instrumentation on Stars, too—just four trombones, baritone sax, two guitars, piano, bass, drums and six guys yelling.

And now, to follow it up, we have this new side, Wild Horses, that looks as though it's going to do nicely too.

I have to do is sing, which is all I want to do. I walk out and feel right away that people are accepting me. When you've been singing a long time it's easier to get that acceptance. Some of the young singers coming up seem to feel they have to underplay or overplay to reach the audience. I just sing, and in this 15-minute show format it's all I need to do.

When I had a half hour show I died a thousand deaths. A half hour show calls for funny hats, and I'm not funny.

Yes, I guess the only thing I have to worry about at the moment is what to buy my son for a birthday present. Ronnie is 18—his voice is changing and he had to quit the choir. He plays a pretty good piano now, listens to Puccini and Bach and makes me listen to a lot of things he likes. But the main interest for him at the moment seems to be guns and everything connected with the wild weat. He's turning out to be a regular Italian Daniel Boone!

Benny Goodman Trio, Omaibus, CBS-TV

Jazz got a big boost when the Benny Goodman trio played on CBS' Omnibus in January. Benny, Teddy Wilson, and Gene Krupa were presented simply, in good taste, and with none of the offensive, psuedo-hip phrases usually thrown around by most emcess. The group had a simple setting, effective lighting, and was allowed to play its four tunes without any interruption other than Goodman's quiet introductions.

There was only one flaw in the interment—the trio sounded like three excellent musicians—nothing more or less. Benny was not the pulsating clarinetist we heard as recently as last summer playing with the sextet, Gene and Teddy were more glib than inspired.

But it was a good show, and a low bow to Omnibus for recognizing that jazz is as much a part of con-

Shavers and emcee Slim Gaillard
somehow mixed up in it all,

It was a little pitiful to hear Peterson, in a vain plea for silence, telling the crowd: "You'll notice we have no drummer in our group." It was useless; Buddy Rich, with Flip Phillips and Hank Jones, and Gene Krupa, with Charlie Ventura and Teddy Napoleon (tactlessly announced by Slim as the Ventura trio). were what these screaming, head-shaking, gyrating melophobes wanted, and Peterson, Kessel, and Ray Brown might as well have stayed home. Curiously, in the relatively intimate and quiet atmosphere of Birdland next door, where the sign on the wall says that occupancy by more than 273 people is dangerous and unlawful (the Band Box doesn't reach the stage of perilous illegality until 840 have squeezed in) business was excellent, too,

A Switch

By the time you read this, the Band Box will have switched to a music policy, with Duke Ellington's orchestra and Art Tatum. One wonders whether Bellson will take over leadership of Duke's band, and how long Tatum will endure the intermission pianist treatment suffered by Peterson.

It's good to see yet another spot in town giving employment to such fine musicians as the Band Box is using. It's too bad that if they played the fine music of which they are capable, the joint would probably fold overnight.

New Record Firm Brings Back Some Old Rarities

Louis Armstrong's more obscure records are again available on long playing discs. The collector's bonanza made possible through the controversial method called "bootlegging" came to an end about a year ago. Since then, Columbia and sible through the controversial came to an end about a year a Victor have put out m few LPse dedicated to the jazz fan, but these were sides not too hard to obtain or hear on the original 78 rpm issues. Recently m new label came upon the scene with an aim towards legally reissuing rare sides. The sides chosen are not lying around any more, not even in the usual places where collectors used to hunt.

The name of the legal reissue label is Riverside. Producing these LPs are Bill Grauer and Orrin Keepnews.

First Release

The first release is titled Louis Armstrong Pluys the Blues, a collection of blues accompaniments, including early blues choruses by Louis with the vocals of Ma Rainey, Trixie Smith, and Coot Grant and Kid Wilson. All the sides are rewarding jazz, but especially welcome is Ma Rainey's See See Rider.

Three more 10-inch LPs on Riverside are out. Two of them are on the Jazz Archives series. A collection of hard-to-obtain Johnny Dodds items makes up one of these releases. Tunes include Ape Man, Weary Way Blues. In the Alley Blues, Merry Makers Twine, Hot Potatoes, Oriental Man, Sock That Thing, and There'll Come A Day.

The other new Jazz Archives release is an eight-side collection of Ma Rainey's Paramount recordings, where the accompaniment consisted of Tampa Red's guitar and an unknown piano plus the Tub Washboard band on two sides.

Contemporary Sides

Contemporary Sides

To complete the early catalog is an LP on what is called the Contemporary Juzz series. The first release is by Bob Wilbur's Wildcate consisting of sides cut by the Wildcats and The Scarsdale Juzz Band back in 1947 and 1946 respectively. The issue on LP of the above sides was made possible through an arrangement with John Steiner of Chicago, who has the rights to Paramount. Some of the Louis and Ma Rainey sides were made from unplayed originals.

Future Items

Future Items

Riverside has acquired exclusive rights to reissue everything of interest from the Black Swan, Broadway, Famous, and Puritan labels, as well as from Paramount. Future releases will have jazz as played by Freddie Keppard, Ida Cox, Jelly Roll Morton, Muggsy Spanier, Frank Teschemacher, Joe Smith, Blind Lemon Jefferson, King Oliver, and Cow Cow Davenport. To return to the "bootlegged" sides mentioned at the beginning of this column, it is interesting to note that they have become collector's items in a short time. The two guys were Chuck Travis, the tenor sax graduate of the Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey bands, and now exactly a year later they're Johnny Coppola, stalwart trumpeter for Stan Kenton. Charlie Barnet, and Billy May.

They broke their backs trying. They broke their backs trying. They rehearsed. They promoted. They hustled around like crazy. They did a March of Dimes show that sounded great—air checks of their portion of the show got a lot of comment from a lot of people. They played a one-niter at Sweet's that was a swinger. For a while it looked like one or the other of a couple of small record companies was going to record the guys.

It was, believe me, a good band. Guys like Louie Be 130 ord that was eager and fresh and excited and cooperative. Even with no work they attended rehearsals. For awhile. Then the thing blew up in what seemed the tragic topper.

Coppola and several of the guys simply had to go to work. It was a terrible blow to Chuck and Johnny and everybody else, but that's the way it had to be.

THE PICKME-UP FOR FAG-GED-OUT SOUND. After that of the loudspeaker(s), the next most vital contribution to sounds really fit for your ears comes from the other end of the whole equipment-chain. It involves a stylus that must trace a fantastically tortuous "signal" path in disc grooves ... and a pickup that has to translate the minutest quiverings of that stylus into accurately corresponding voltage fluctuations ... which then are "equalized" (sometimes properly!) and amplified for the speaker's re-translation into audible sound waves.

Since both input and output ends of the equipment-chain function as translators or converters of energy (mechanical to electrical in the pickup, electrical to mechanical-acoustical in the speaker), they are named in engineering jargon transducers ... an apt name in more than a technical sense, for THE PICK-ME-UP FOR FAC GED-OUT SOUND. After that of are named in engineering jargon transducers... an apt name in more than a technical sense, for it's a cinch to be confused with araducers! And traduce (defame, malign, slander—to you) is just what both these all-important devices usually do to good sound!

Size Counts

The record-groove pattern in any well-made LP nowadays is not only unbelievably complex but amazingly clean. But right between it and the almost infinitesimal voltage waves your amplifier receives, things happen to the audio "signal" that shouldn't happen to a dog! If the stylus point isn't the right size (one mil, or thousandth of an inch in radius for LPc) it won!" the stylus point isn't the right size (one mil, or thousandth of a inch, in radius for LPs), it won' ride snuggly on the groove side walls.

If it's at all worn, it can't follow the faster, more microscopic (high-frequency) wiggles . . . if it's worn down with a "flat," it'll ruthlessly wipe the "highs" right out of the grooves forever. If it isn't perfectly centered (and undogged) between a magnetic pick-up's pole-pieces, it'll feed so much plain and fancy distortions into your amplifier—and speaker and ears—that the music can be heard only as an outrageous travesty in itself.

Need the Best

If you have a crystal pickup, of course you may be saving your pocketbook quite a few dollars, but you're gypping your ears of a but you're gypping your ears of a brilliance and realism you hardly can imagine a mere "machine's"

but you're gypping your ears of a brilliance and realism you hardly can imagine a mere "machine's" delivering until you've actually heard it. The crystal probably was the commercial savior of the phonograph industry awhile back, but with very few exceptions it has no place nowadays in any sound-reproducing equipment that genuinely aspires to wide-range fidelity.

In short, if you honestly want to hear what the best of today's recordings can sound like when they're faithfully reproduced rather than traduced—you've got to ante up for a first-rate magnetic pickup and a damond (nothing less) stylus. But once your ears flap open to what a transformation these can make in everything you hear from discs, you'll realize you're made one of the most profitable—both immediate and long-range—investments of your life. And this well may be the first payment on your permanently reserved front seat on the better. payment on your permanently re-served front seat on the better-audio bandwagon!

Some Tips On The Care Of LP And 45 RPM Discs

Modern vinylite records used on slow playing systems are far more delicate than the older 78 rpm shellacs. They require much more care in order to derive maximum listening and scratched.

Vinylite is highly susceptible to static charges through the least friction on the surface. The friction cannot be eliminated. Every time a record touches the turntable or even the cardboard cover in which records are sold and should be best when not in use an electrobe kept when not in use, an electrostatic charge is built up on the record surface. This charge re-mains there until it is neutralized or drawn off by a charge of opposite polarity.

A record electrostatically charged acts as a magnet to dust particles and lint. If you rub a vinylite 33% or 45 against your coat sleeve, then hold it about a quarter-inch away from a small pile of cigaret ashes, you'll see these ashes jump right to the record pleasure. The new reproduction setups are primarily planned to give a higher fidelity result and to give a higher fidelity result and to give a higher fidelity result and so give a higher fidelity result and so give a higher fidelity result and skip grooves, sometimes causing the needle to scratch all the way across the record and ruin the disc. A slight scratch on a record used on high fidelity equipment can completely spoil performance.

So here are some simple pro-cedures to follow regarding record

Take the obvious precaution or covering the record and putting it away in a dust-free place. Do not leave a disc on the turntable or uncovered on a table. To store them in a horizontal position is preferable, but they can be racked vertically if on a shelf upright with other records, the way books are usually kent.

with other records, the way books are usually kept.

And watch the condition of your needle. At the sound of the slightest wear, replace it. Discs must be kept a good distance from heat and places of excessive dryness. The weight of the tone arm should be checked to be sure it is right ord.

And if the surfaces get covered with dust and are then played, the grooves get filled with dirt that ultimately gets ground into the bottom of the groove.

Uncared-for vinylites can get so filled with dust that the light playing arm will jump out of the track clean off the dust, as you just blow particles into the grooves and moisten the surface. And DON'T stop the turntable while the needle is on the record, as it could chisel out a groove and injure the needle

Accessories Available

Accessories Available

For those who want to buy accessories to help protect the life and performance of their collection, there are several products on the market. One is a static eliminator, of which there are two types —a magnetic brush and a chemical preparation which forms a thin film on the surface to take off the electrostatic charge. When used correctly, the brush will completely eliminate the charge for a short time, but it should be done at frequent intervals.

Be careful about purchasing

Be careful about purchasing chemical preparations. Some of them will cause more damage to the surface than static electricity. the surface than static electricity. They act as solvents or leave a residue that will eventually harden in the grooves. It is wise to experiment with liquids until you find one that does not leave a greasy or

You can clean records easily yourself by washing them in lukewarm water to which a slight amount of detergent has been added. Rinse under running water until all the soap has flowed off, then dip in a pan containing warm water and stand upright in a rack and let them dry in the air. Place the rack in as durffree a place as and let them dry in the air. Place the rack in as dust-free a place as nossible

If you'll take the above precautions, you'll get maximum per-formance from your records for a good many years.

Hi-Fi Flashes

A splendid booklet on high fidelity that is directed to the layman has been put out by Radio Craftsmen. Edited and written by Deems Taylor, noted classical critic, A Sound Approach to Better Listening at Home tells the whole story of high fidelity—why it's important, what it means, the functions of the various component parts, how to assemble a hi-fi set, and in a special section answers some very commonly-asked questions about hi-fi und systems

Here, for example, are a few of the queries about hi-fi that it handles.

Here, for example, are a few of the queries about ni-n that it nancies.

Is high fidelity the same as high frequency?

No. High fidelity literally means "extreme faithfulness, or accuracy" of sound reproduction. While a high fidelity system must be capable of reproducing the high frequencies (and the low), the really important thing is that the music be undistorted.

Is high fidelity equipment dangerous or delicate to handle?

Under normal handling and assembling conditions, the answer to both questions is "no." You wouldn't touch an exposed live wire; and for the same reason you shouldn't undertake to explore the "innards" of your high fidelity units. As for delicacy, they are—like a fine watch—protected by a rugged housing.

Can I really install these units myself?

That depends upon your own skill and experience. If your installation is a simple one and you can follow the very concise instructions that accompany each of your units, you can really install your set yourself.

yourself.

With a modest budget, what should I buy first?
The basic units: tuner, amplifier, speaker, and record player. You can equip yourself with an excellent system quite reasonably.
The booklet is available for 10 cents to cover the cost of handling by writing to Dept. CC, The Radio Craftsmen Inc., 4401 N. Ravenswood avenue, Chicago 40, Ill.

The Audio Fair in Chicago will be combined with the 1953 International Sight and Sound Exposition to be held at the Palmer House Sept. 1, 2, and 3. It will be the only public high fidelity and audio-video show held in the midwest in 1953, is expected to attract more than Roust onen that rockin chair, On-Timer, and quit drippin' nostalgic tears into your hot rum toddies! After a year or so of rank neglect, the bright LP youngsters have remembered grand pappy's tales of heroes and they've brung back a passel of those idols of the dear, dead days when a needle was just a needle, not a stylus ... when a record really spun, not loafed, around ... and all true discophiles minds ran in the same connoisment.

Of course, not all the one-time demi-gods can survive the perils of resurrection. Certainly whoever ransacked the Columbia mausoleum dug up mostly dry bones that no abracadabra incantations ever can bring back to life. When Mitropoulos butchered Beethoven, Franck, Mendelssohn, and Tchaikovsky in Minneapolis, they stayed dead! Stock's Schubert C major, Petri's Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto, and Barlow's "rediscovered" Strauss remain imposing mummies for museum display only. In the whole Entre list the one authentic miracle is the Handel-Harty Water and Fireworks twins (RL3019), which still boast the prodigal vivacity, graciousness, and strength that electrified us so rapturously in the early '30s!

Couldn't Find It

In the very first piece I wrote for this family journal, I warned that "all that glitters ain't Golden Treasury" ... and couldn't find too much in the then-current RCA Victor "Immortal Performances" series likely to impress today's new and grownup listeners as the original Great Caruso's colossal bull-hawls stunned the quasi-musical series likely to impress today's new and grownup listeners as the original Great Caruso's colossal bullbawls stunned the quasi-musical yokels in naiver times.

But either I'm slipping back to second childhood or momentarily suckered into a golden memoryglow, for some of the latest "Treasury" revivals seem to still sound, if not great, at least mighty pleasant.

The most valuable certainly are if not great, at least mighty pleasant.

The most valuable certainly are Schnabel's Beethoven Society Vols. I & II of 1932/3, which have been out-of-print ever since. The former (LCT1109) includes Sonatas 24, 27 and 32; the latter (LCT1110) Nos. 9, 13 and 30. And if Arturnever was quite the unique master many hailed him, he did bring unmatched expressive warmth and expansiveness to this music—especially the smaller but endearing Nos. 24 and 27.

Nevertheless, the truly incomparable treasures here are the unaccompanied Bach cello suites by Casals—among the mightiest of all phono-musical monuments. Nos. 2 and 3 now reappear on LCT1104 and every young as well as old-time genuine connoisseur surely will share my hope that the other four will follow.

Mariam Best

Marian Best

Maybe some of you will welcome the return of Heldentenor Melchior, with Flagstad in Lohengrin and Paraifal scenes (LCT1105) . . . . but for me he was past his prime even by 1940 and Kirsten's pageboy MacArthur was a Wagnerian (or any other) conductor in her dreams only. The singing I best re-enjoy is Marian Anderson's in the more recent Bach Arias to Bob Shaw's fine orchestra, and the famous 1941 Songs of Faith, which are even better vocally if less noteworthily accompanied (LCT1111). I haven't been sent all the rest.

More Memory-Joggers

More Memory-Joggers

Not strictly reissues, yet still definitely memory-bookish for me are Iturbi's Concertox for solo piano, K. 466, and two pianos (with sis Amparo), K. 365, which I'm sorry to say I find even less Mozartian in these remakes (RCA Victor LM1717) than I did in their 1941 predecessors with the Rochester Philharmonic.

And I'm far more sincerely sorry that one of my all-time favorites, the Handel-Beecham Great Elopement of 1947, wasn't transferred in place of his new Royal Philharmonic version (LHMV1030) that omits some of the most delicious bits and doesn't seem to have the same riotous gusto. However, it's still mighty special music and has the added attraction of a glorious, if rather over-blown (and with an inexcusable interpolation) Mozart Second Divertimento, K. 131, that never was given 78-release in this country.

Even some quite recent LP's can't resist climbing on the reissue bandwagon! For here are Tebaldi's big Aida and Faust arias (London LD9017), lifted from her thrilling debut on LL142 of 1950—and still mightly thrilling.

Also the grandeurs (and rather long winded pretentiousness) of Schubert's E fist Mass, by energetic Viennese forces under Moralt, which has graduated from two 1950 ten-inches to a far more convenient single twelve (Vox PL-7840).

Listening In Reverse

Boston—Bach to Bartok is a regular sustainer on WMEX in Boston. One of its features is the playing of at least one contemporary work a week which is identified only after is it played.

Reason is, says the conductor of the program, "most people listen with their prejudices rather than their ears."

with their prejudices rather than their ears."
When Bob Graettinger's House of Strings was played recently under this arrangement, listener guesses ran the modern gamut from Bartok to Schoenberg.
Program is handled by Down Beat staffer Nat Hentoff.

• Scintillating Ravelian wit and defeat ingenuity in ortheatral tone creation never flowered more luturisally than in this one-set musical farce, Sponish Time. Happily the ancient Columbia 78's at lest are replaced by a vivaciously same, even more vivaciously played, and notably brightly and cleanly recorded LP that lacks only one essential—a libratio. Be sure to get that elsewhere if you want to relish the full entertainment here.

B The BBC now takes us on an extursion to Llangollen, Wales, for the real McCoy in an Eisteddfod . . . a camp-meeting clambahe of folk-singers and dancers, and choral clubs from all over the world. Everybody gets into the act, but m. e. Jack Barnoff's suave announcements keep up posted on all the fantastic variety of turns—the likes of which you've naver heard before:

WAGNER: Ring & Partiful Es-corpts; 4 Overtures, Munich Op-ers Orch.—Konwitschny, URANIA 7065 & 7069.

© Currently celebrating the 25th anniversary of his American debut, Vladimire the Great seems exceptionally mellaw in a batth of Chopin favorites (including Etuke No. 3 and Nostures No. 15) he's never recorded before. I'ndoubtedly hit devout public will a lot more postry than I can in these fluent but phono-munically quite unremarkable readings.

• Renato Tehldi not only is the heroise Aids here, but the outstanding attraction of the whole work. Del Moneso as Rhadamas isn't very convincing, but the rest of the rast (Nigasani, Corena, et al.), and Erede's well-handled chorus & orrh. provide better support for the star. Her brilliance and the peedle overall atmosphere make this a first-choice phone didd.

O The LP-mooting of Wagnerians is easing up! It's like old times to hear high units of Siegried and Coetterdommerung, Partifal Prolute and "Spall" . even the Dutchman and Rienat Overtures. plus exhumations of Die Feen and Das Liebarrerbat. Konwitschny's Musencheners give both bomband and postry the full treatment and fine recording adds a rich, final polish.

Brahma's muscular platy is brawnier here than in any other plano work—and no LP-Rier yet seems able to raisle it to a fall. Where Katchen (London LSSS2, Beat-reviewed Sept. 10) was emotionally diffuse, Istomia is irily precise... but he can't supply the vital grand momentum either.

• For Corollian Conductor of the year: Dean Erhertsen! Remembering the Old Moster's 300th hirthday comes Fah. 12, he's really habed a cakes—the first complete phono-set of Op. 6, of which only the "Cheletman" Concerte la widely known. Six of the 12 are individual discriptor, but all of them are circully now in unflagging expressive and imaginative life! And if relocate (Guilat, Barhmann & Miller), main string group, and conductor press a bit at times, they're always admirably apparies and Japoraus.

■ A real big-based, hairs-chrested singer for a change! Fastured in London's recent complete operac, young Corene has a solo field-day here . . . romping to shows triumphs in all the haffa dash events, failing only to lift the hanyweight hars of In direct heligen lidles. With the voice and serve that distinguish most of these performances, he's a sure coming champ!

O A Mozarian tone-paradise of sternal bliss for all good wind players! The West-roast 13 here (plus a string-hase degging the double baseconist's party) hymn its fellcities with undue restraint... and while Steinberg avoids Koussavitsh's mannerisms (and cuts), I wish he could have fired his men to more of the Viennese toetlers' rost and concerty in Vox PL7470—Seat-reviewed last Oct. 10 and still my first shoice for this superh music.

Cold-time reliertors of the historical treasures Boulanger contributed to 78% will have an existic selection for this first of her now LP series featuring much the same little group of singers (sometimes doubled by instruments) is chancom, pealms, etc., ranging from sheer tene-sport/veness to devotional fervor, and topped perhaps by Jannequin's enomatopoetic Chant des Ovecaux. Natin's authoritative annotations are added attractions.

Still they come—and this ain't all that's been crammed into my "opera, for immediate attention" file-warehouse, As fast as I shovel 'em out (and if writing about them doesn't ery-man's big dray-horses, hitched to an erstwhile beer-barrel van, are clumping outside with a ton or two of new supplies. I'm beginning to get obsessed with the old vaudeville tag-line: "Don't worry about the coal, Mamma... Daddy's coming home with a load!"

First, there's Lakmé... and surprisingly enough you can like her for more than the Bell Song alone. Mado Robin sounds overly little-girlish at times, but demonstrates remarkable high-wire vocal dexterity, in the title role... Nilikantha is magnificently sung by Jean Borthayre... the rest of the cast is reasonably competent... and Geo. Sebastian's conducting, while uneven, is never sloppy at its worst and top-notch at its frequent best. This is the first time the complete (well, substantially so) opera has been done on any kind of records and I'd guess that the chances of it's being matched, not to say beaten, aren't worth serious consideration.

the agonizingly long hours of the agonizingly long hours of westminster's edition. Yet, for all its high spirits and Poli's virtuosity as Dr. Malatesta, I prefer the better control and integration of the Quardi version.

London's Tosca represents a quite effective compromise among the more unbalanced qualities of other complete recordings. It lacks some of the blood-and-thunder dramatic impact of the RCA victor and Cetra versions, but it's better sung than Westminster's, and has for distinctive attraction Tebaldi's magnificent performance in Act II. If she were as good elsewhere and if Erede conducted less erratically throughout, this would have been an outstanding set. But even so, there are many things in its favor.

Vocals

Cathy Carr ** Half-Pint Boogle ** Heartbroken

Miss Carr sounds like too talented a girl to have to resort to the suggestive lyrics on Boogie and the pseudo-Johnnie Ray style on Heartbroken (which strangely, comes out sounding just like Broken Hearted). (Coral 60907)

Karen Chandler ** The Old Sewing Machine
** I Hear the Music Now

With her Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me still a hot item, Karen follows with this likely coupling. Music is reflective, Machine has folksy flavor that makes it a natural Patti Page type tune. The latter looks like the best bet. (Coral 60911) 60911)

Don Cherry

*** 4 Lover's Quarrel

Sarah Vaughan got the jump on Quarrel and the singing golfer will be hard putt to keep within shouting distance even though his rendition is a juke box natural. The ricky tick Grady Martin Slew Foot Five and the suave Mr. C. make an incongruous pair, however, especially on Changeable. (Decca 28548)

Freddy Cole the Love Me Tender

Tender is a wonderful song, and Freddy gives it tender and loving care. While Nat need not worry about competition from his brother yet, Freddy proves conclusively that there is no monopoly on talent in the Cole family.

Grass features Freddy in whispering, sly form. The strings aid

Perry Como **** II ild Horses

Horses is a powerful follow-up to on't Let the Stars and keeps Per-assured of a hit parade entry.

Conjess is almost as good, a ballad sung tenderly, convincingly. (Victor 20-5152)

Harry Cool

*** Ace in the Hole *** A Cottage for Sale

Cool, the former Dick Jurgens vocalist and handleader, is back on wax with this pair of standards recorded on a minor label. Backing is by accordion and bass, and we're most happy to see someone reopen the lovely Cottage. (Fredlo 52066)

Buddy Greco

*** And So Goodbye

** I'll Always Love You Some

Coral keeps trying the same approach with Greco—he and some girls singing together. Someday this guy is going to come over on records as he does in person and a new star will be in our midst. These are both routine, with Goodbye the strongest. (Coral 60001)

Dick Haymes

*** Let's Pall in Love

Dick opens the old standard by singing the bridge as an introductory, then moves into an expressively-sung and beautifully-phrased chorus and a half. It's his best record in many, many moons. Know is equally well done and a fine song to boot (by Al Stillman and Peter DeRose). More material like this and Dick can't miss hecoming a ton beRose). Mor and Dick can't miss be ning a top seller again. (Decca 28540)

Dick Krueger

** I'm Alone Because I Love You

Krueger is a semi-lyric tenor whose voice is well-suited to these songs, both of which could easily get lost in the shuffle. (Victor 20-

Julius La Rosa **** Anywhere I Wander

With full band backing from Archie Bleyer's orchestra, Arthur Godfrey's boy does a rich vocal job on the Hans Christian Andersen tune and a surprising hit performance with the coupling, a tune by Boston disc jockey Sherm Feller. Julius' recording career and the career of this brand new label both get off to m rousing start. (Cadence 1230)

Peggy Lee

** I Hear the Music Non ** This Is a Very Special Day

Two tunes from The Jazz Singer. The latter is the better of the two and also gets spirited singing from Mrs. Dexter. (Decca 28565)

Roberta Lee-Gordon Jenkins *** Say It Isn't So *** Dear Joe

Look out for Miss Lee. The gal could break out at any time with her strong commercial style and way of putting a lyric across. Either of these, for example, could become sellers. (Decca 28541)

McGuire Sisters

*** Picking Sweethearts
*** One, Two, Three, Four

As the story on page 11-S points out, this is indeed a good girl trio. But the material here is very hokey, ideally suited for the Dinining Sisters. The record might make some sort of splash in the hillbilly field. (Coral 60917)

Bette McLaurin

*** Do You Know R hy? *** My Dreams of You

Little Bette belts emphatically and promisingly on Why and You, showing some traces of Dinah Washington and also some ideas of her own. A young lady to watch. (Coral 60906)

COLUMBIA'S NEWEST singing discovery is Felicia Sanders, a pro-tege of Benny Carter, who intro-duced her to Mitch Miller. The label is excited about her.

The Modernaires

The Modernaires

**** New Juke Box Saturday Night

*** Runnin' Wild

The Mods have had some good releases in the last year or so, but this could be the one to put them all the way over the hump. Their impersonations of Don Cornell, the Four Aces, Les & Mary, and Mr. Weepers are remarkably accurate and bitingly funny, might make Juke Box as big as their original one with Glenn Miller. Wild is like their Bugle Call Rag, etc. (Coral 60899)

Ella Mae Morse

★★★★ Good ★★★ The Guy Who Invented Kissin'

A rough, powerful Ben Webster-ish tenor man and smacking Nel-son Riddle band backing pushes Ella along on Good, an authorita-tive etching that'll get a lot of listens.

And so will Kimin, a calypso that brings back the same tenor man and a high-note trumpeter (Pete Candoli?). (Capitol 2343)

Trudy Richards

** 4 Fool *** Go'll ay from My Il indon

A Fool and his heart are soon parted, shouts Trudy, then implores her man to go away from her window as Elliot Lawrence leads the studio band through a Cow Cow Boogie-type background. Nothing here out of the ordinary. (Decca 28564)

Peggy Lee combine to make this album from the new Crosby-Hope film. The boys do numbers one, two, and four, the trio works over Merry-Go: Bing sings See You, and Peggy gets Moonflowers. The Bing and Bob sides lack the spontaneity of their earlier efforts, but pick up wonderfully when Peg loins them. ins them.

Hope is more atrociously out of tune than ever throughout, but Bing handles See You neatly, the only song in the set that appears to have possibilities. Chicago Style also is worth a listen or two. (Decca A926)

Jack Smith-Lawrence Welk

Sarah Vaughan imitating Patti

The Weavers haven't had a big record in a long time, and they show the pressure here. Valley is as close to Old Smoky as they can get without repeating it; Mexico is the throwaway, but more relaxed and rousing. (Decca 28542)

Two more painless pieces, style Shaw circa 1940, in which the qualities that made Buddy emerge from the pack as an individual stylist are not apparent. Pleasant though his work and Dick Maltby's accompaniment are here, there's nothing in his performances that couldn't have been done equally well by any of the top studio musicians, or most of Buddy's 10 favorite clarinetists. *** How Do You Speak to an Angel? *** I Feel Like I'm Gonna Live Forever

The tunes are from Broadway's Hazel Flagg. Angel is already almost the sole property of Eddie Fisher, but Kenny Martin's singing of it here will assure some Lombardo action. Forever is in great dance tempo. (Decca 28523)

Charlie Spivak

** Bloodshot Eyes

There's a boppy, shuffle rhythm arrangement and an interesting tenor man on Eyes, and the band plays cleanly, but the novelty is a bad tune that gets just a fair vocal from Paul O'Connor. Eileen Rodgers sings Waiting, Charlie plays a few pretty bars. (King 15219)

Edmundo Ros

*** Marching String ** Ecstasy

String. a march in dance tempo, comes off fairly well, could catch a lot of response. It and the flip (a tango) are both played professionally, if somewhat dutifully. (London 1277)

Hexitation is the Hugo Winter-halter composition that is executed precisely by England's Squads, hut it isn't too well suited for this dance arrangement. Waltz is just dance arrangement, Waltsplain dull. (London 1284)

Misc.

They're both delightful, tongue-in-cheek take-offs on the Whitemans and Isham Jones', etc., of the '20s. Yet they could become big commercial hits simply because most people won't realize he's kidding.

Linger has Al Gallodora flitting about on alto sax and the late Mike Pingitore on banio. Very funny music (Victor 20-4716)

Ben Light

** Do You Ever Think of Me?

Pianist Ben and rhythm backing do the expected here—straight melody with an occasional flourish and an "I can teach you how to play in six easy lessons" feeling. Very good juke box fare in some areas. (Capitol 2346)

Sashayin' Round

Selecting one person as the most outstanding in any particular field isn't an easy thing to do. Squabbles result when you try to pick a winner from a group of talented contestants. This holds true whether a Miss America is being chosen or we are trying to decide which is the pretiest apron in the county sewing contest. But when we come to folk music (and in this column we always do) most of us agree with poet Carl Sandburg when he names Burl Ives as "America's Mightiest Ballad Singer."

It is through the haunting voice of Burl Ives that the whole world knows the folk music of America. Wonderful songs that we grew up hearing. Those of us who have a special yen for ballads feel that such music and songs are as much a part of America as the Washington Monument and Yellowstone Park. For in truth, throughout the years of singing not only do we know that many of the people about whom the songs were written were actual people but we feel that we knew them personally.

Why there are folks in Virginia who can show you the very place where "John Henry" and his little woman lived. All railroad engineers on the Illinois Central have learned the "true story" of mighty Casey Jones. And I've even heard tell that sure nuff there is a Big Rock Candy Mountain. Burl Ives has roamed all of America gathering his ballads and songs and gathering a following of loyal fans along the way. Although he was born in Illinois, his ramblin' days started early in life. When he was a junior in college with banjo under his arm and 15 cents in his pocket he left to hobo eastward. In New York's Greenwich Village he settled down briefly but only to study music and make a name for himself on Broadway. The kind, bearded ballad singer became known to everyone as "The Wayfaring Stranger," a title that has known to everyone as "The Way-faring Stranger," a title that has since become synonymous with his name and a title which he was to later use for his autobiography. Then, visiting New York to investigate rumors that several radio stations were located here, they were helped by Barry Wood, one-time Hit Parade singer and now a producer, who got them an audition with Ted Collins, Kate Smith's Prince Consort. #### Rolf Ericson with Perdido

The Tizol standard and the Ericanon original were both arranged by Gosta Theselius, who played tenor on this date. Lars Gullin's baritone, Domnerus' alto, and Reinhold Svensson's piano have spots in Perdido, and Ericson blows some anguestacular but right trumpet in Perdido, and Ericson blows some anapertacular but right trumpet. Moderate pace is a change from the endless up-tempo versions of the tune, but the side still loses a star because the theme has become so hackneyed. The same soloists, plus neat ensemble work, make Miles a far more attractive side. (Discovery 1732)

Stan Getz

Album Rating: ****

Playing in Boston's Storyville club, with Al Haig, Jimmy Raney, Teddy Kotick, and Tiny Kahn, Stan was just right on the night they taped these sides. His work is a brilliant blend of freedom and rebrilliant blend of freedom and restraint, technique and taste, as are the solos of Haig and Raney. Though Stan is no Martha Graham and Jimmy no Cezanne, despite the printed comparisons (we are shocked at the polysyllabic pretentiousness of the liner notes) the apirit of a modern jam session has seldom been better caught. Parker 51 is a good title, because although the changes are Cherokee and the voice of the Bird is nowhere heard, Stan's style flows as freely as the famous fountain pen. (Rooss RLP 407)

Stan Getz

trita Lullaby of Birdland

Stan plays pleasantly on the Lullaby; the Jimmy Raney and Duke Jordan bits sound a little unrelaxed. Leaves has some very good Gets, but somehow his sound doesn't have the intimacy of, for instance, the Storyville LP. (Rooss 562)

The Blindfold Test

ave's Raves Are Tatum, Jelly Roll

Dave Brubeck is a typical representative of the new generation of jazz musicians in several respects. He is literate and articulate, thoroughly grounded in all fields of music and every branch of jazz.

Because he is one of the numerous young pianists who have achieved jazz prominence in the last couple of years, I concentrated the blindfold test mainly on other pianists who have enjoyed a similar rise in recent years.

Dave was given no information whatever about the records played for him, either before or during the test. However, after it was over, I identified the artists whose music he had heard, and some of his afterthoughts were a result of my disclosures.

The Records

1. Oscar Peterson. Nameless (Mercury). With

1. Oscar Peterson. Nameless (Mercury). With Major Holley, bass.

I haven't heard much Powell . . . but I have heard Peterson play like that. Sounded a bit like Shearing toward the end, where he used locked hands; Powell wouldn't do that. I liked the way he used both hands in unison; and it sure swung. I'd give it four.

2. Hampton Hawes. Thou Swell (Discovery). Shelly Manne, drums.

Nice chords at the end. The only thing I could possibly guess would be some very early Shearing that I never heard before. The only thing I really didn't like on the record was the drummer, playing right on the beat. Thump, thump, thump... why doesn't he do something that isn't going on—like playing against the bass? If this was made recently I'd give it three; if it was made four or five years ago I'd give it four.

3. Horace Silver. Thou Swell (Blue Note). Art Blakey, drums.

Only guy I could guess is Bud Powell. Is it? I preferred that of the two versions. Nice groove . . . he gets more out of the tune. I liked the drummer almost all the way through. It's the way Cal Tjader used to work once in a while; reminded me of Cal. I'd rate this

4. Van (Piano Man) Walls. After Midnight (Atlantic).

(Atlantic).

That reminds me of when I first started working. We used to play the blues all night, man! Out of tune piano . . . this wasn't out of tune, but it had that same quality. What was that, a Hawaiian guitar on there? How'd he get that sound? I have no idea in the world who it is on piano. You know, there's nothing I'd rather hear than a good artist play the blues and it's not done often enough. Get Tatum to play the blues and you really hear something. The blues like that is a feeling that's just wonderful. I've heard blues played better than that, but it's still worth three.

5. Bernard Peiffer, Slow Burn (Roost).

It's Garner—for the first time I'm really positive I know who it is. It's real relaxed, swings a lot. The effect is like you've got a guitar man playing on the beat, only it's the pianist's left hand. If that isn't Erroll, some-body sure picked it up well, I'd rate it four.

6. Oscar Levant. Gershwin: Prelude II (Co-

That's got to be a composition—it wasn't improvised. Somebody like Gershwin, because of the use of the seventh and minor thirds; somebody that was struck by the use of those notes in early jazz and wanted to write a composition on it. Compositions like this never come up to the real feeling; but it's very well played. It's too dangerously close to the idiom, without quite making it. I'm going to rate this as a composition. For Gershwin, give it four, because he was important in makwithout quite maning its in genthwin, give it four, because he was important in making the American people aware of composition in jazz. There's a million arguments whether he did a good job or not, but he certainly started the ball rolling.

7. Art Lowry. Studio One Concerto (Columbia).

That's the closest thing to a piano concerto with a dance band. It's probably well done, but it wasn't worth doing . . . There has to be good businessman bounce music in the United States, you've got to get used to that; but there can be a little integrity in that field too, and I didn't hear much sincerity here. I have no idea who it is, but it has to be one of the most commercial bands in the business. This is strictly out of my field; for what it was, I'd strictly out of my field; for what it was, I'd say it was a three; but for what I think it is, it's a zero.

8. Lennie Tristano, Yesterdays (Capitol).

Tristano could never have played that bad, could he? In the early beginning.? It's either early Tristano, when he wasn't doing all the great things he's doing now, and was striving to do them, or somebody that can't do now what Tristano is doing. You've got to be more careful than that with counterpoint. You can't have clashed that go against the grain of hundreds of what's right and what's wrong. I do like it, in a way, for the same reasonal dislike it; they're striving for something that I don't think they made, but it was certainly a noble attempt. For trying, four; for not making it, three.

9. Ralph Sutton. Love Me or Leave Me (Circle).

If that isn't Fats Waller, it's somebody who's used everything I identify with Fats. Fats was so important—you hear Fats in Tatum, in Garner—he's one of the most important piano men of all time. You can even set the beginning of the modern turnaround—instead of the usual 2, 5, 1, he took in down a step, like an E flat 9th if you were in F. A lot of the things that are commonplace now, somebody had to seek them out, and Fats definitely started a lot of them. If it's early Fats, give this five. If not, a four.

10. George Wallingon. Escalating (Prestige).

I don't like that record. It never did acttle down and swing; the guy's left hand did nothing but pound out the root. It had a tremendous right hand, but he goofed a lot; yet there's a heek of a lot of ideas there . . . I think it was a side that didn't make it, from a pretty good artist who sounds a little like Bud. I've released records where I didn't think any of us made it; the same way, I feel nothing came off from beginning to end here. Give it two.

Afterthoughts by Dave

My favorite pianists—Tatum, of course; Jelly Roll and Fats. If you wonder why I include Jelly Roll, listen to a thing called New Orleans Joys. If you want to hear somebody play behind the beat further than anybody's played behind the beat—you have to just sit there and count, and beat your brains, and he comes out. I like Tristano, Bud just at there and count, and beat your brains, and he comes out . . I like Tristano, Bud Powell, Garner, Shearing, Peterson; and I don't listen to any of them—as little as possible. I think Marian McPartland's a great comer, and also George Wallington. Now that you've told me that last record was by Wallington. I newton the point out that lington I particularly want to point out that when he and I were working at Birdland I was fascinated by him; he's great, tremendous.

I more or less like the people with a style; Mary Lou Williams, Teddy Wilson—all the great originators. I can't see guys throwing their time away imitating somebody.

I would like to see more emotional scope from every guy instead of each one getting on a separate segment in developing himself; a guy can get stuck with his own style. I know myself that I want to be able to play a good ballad, be able to swing, play pretty, play with guts—cover the whole field. We all feel everything, yet we're too often stuck with one with guts—cover the whole field. We all feel everything, yet we're too often stuck with one thing. I made some records at Storyville for an album, and because the bass player wasn't there I found myself playing entirely differently. I don't ever want to get into a rut!

Hans Koller Quartet *** Beat ** Up from Munich

There's a double aptness in the title of Beat; the beat is definitely there, but in a tired, languorous, beat sort of way that gives this side a delightful mood. Koller's Getz-like tenor and Miss Hipp with her hip piano make this as effective a quartet side as any of its U.S. counterparts in recent months. Up, which uses a different chord pattern from the usual stale routines. tern from the usual stale routines, is a series of good up-tempo choruses, including eight bars of Munich-style bass. ## Jeepers Creepers

Sweden and England don't have a monopoly after all. A Frenchman who feels jazz is as rare as snow in April in Paris, but here's the in April in Paris, but here's the exception who proves the rule. Helped by bassist Joe Benjamin and drummer Bill Clark, who were over there with Lena Horne, this Parisian pianist gives a good account of himself both on the jump side and on the Billy Moore Jr. opus. Ideas aren't original, Jeepers being Billy-Taylor-made and Burn a Garner impression, but the flattery is at least sincere. (Roost 563)

The record was played (on station WERE, Cleveland) by disc jockey Phil McClain as a gag to pacify the demands of Bernie Hersh (a friend of How-ord). The result was a deluge of requests from throughout Cleveland. Jack Gale, who is a disc jockey on station WSRS is a talent scout and representative for Triple A as a gag. It was he who induced the Triple A corporation to negotiate with the young artist and press the record on the Triple A label.

In the first three weeks, Oh. Hap

In the first three weeks, Oh. Hap py Day sold 28,000 copies in Cleveland. New York publishers Bregman, Vocco, and Conn flew Ira Wegard to Cleveland. D. J. Bob Clayton in Boston spun it (and it sold 15,000 copies in the first 10 days.) Dave Miller of Essex Records flew to Cleveland, leased the master for his own label, pressed 1,000 copies, and had them flown to the key deejays in the country, all in a matter of hours.

The remark that the song is an "electronic monstrosity" has never been made by the recording company, Triple A records, who feel instead that "a million Americans can't be wrong." In the first three weeks, Oh. Hap

(Ed. Note: The Down Best story quite reserve pointed out that the "electronic monstreadty" remark was not attributed to any member of the Triple A firm.)

Disbelief

Talladega, Ala.

To the Editor:

To the Editor:

I am very sorry I did not vote in the 1952 Down Beat band poll and I would now like to take the opportunity to cast my protest ballor since I am extremely dissatisfied with the outcome.

In fact, I would like to go on record as challenging the authenticity of the '52 poll, because to mecircumstantial evidence indicates it was not a poll at all but a grand fraud and hoax perpetrated upon the music public. I believe the editor of Down Beat simply made his own selections and proclaimed them winners of the alleged poll.

them winners of the alleged poll.

The most ridiculous result of all is the so-called selection of Maynard Forguson as the world's greatest trumpeter. To think of it strikes me dumb and I can say no

Tony Papa Waxes For Mercer Label

Chicago—Drummer Tony Papa's band out of Elkhart, Ind., cut three sides here recently on Duke Ellington's Mercer label on which they were augmented by seven Ellington sidemen and vocalist Betty Roche.

The 20-piece group waxed Love You Madly (Roche vocal), C-Jam Blues, and a new Billy Strayhorn tune Coffee and Kisses. Ellingtonites on the date were Clark Terry, Quentin Jackson, Britt Woodman, Juan Tizol, Paul Gonsalves, Russell Procope, and Jimmy Hamilton.

Brunswick Signs Jim McPartland

New York—Jimmy McPartland has been signed to a term contract with Brunswick Records.

McPartland's only recordings in the past year were for MGM's Hot Vs. Cool album opposite Dizzy Gillespie, due out next month. His first assignment for Brunswick will be an album of Bix Beiderbecke compositions.

Marian McPartland, Jimmy's wife, continues under contract to Savoy.

Glen Gray To Regroup

New York—Glen Gray, out of the dance band business the last few years, began rehearsing a new band early this month. Group will have four brass, four reeds, and three rhythm, with Gray fronting only and not playing.

Included in the band are trumpeters Bill Moore and Billy Oblak, saxists Max Perkins and Johnny Hayes, and singer Dick Ruhlin. Bill Chasen will manage.

Kenton Inaugs New Palladium TV Show

Hollywood — Palladium has announced a new series of bandstand telecasts via the local CBS outlet, KNXT, which was scheduled to start Jan. 24. Time is 9:30-10 p.m.

Stan Kenton was up for the first two shows, with Ralph Flanagan, opening at the Palladium Feb. 3, taking over with telecast of Feb. 7.

Playing good, solid dance music has paid large dividends

Playing good, solid dance music has paid large dividends for Tommy Cunningham, who started his professional career singing with Eddy Duchin and then Anson Weeks and their bands, graduated to motion pictures and night clubs, then organized his own band. Stressing music which would be primarily danceable, Tommy went to work almost immediately breaking in the crew, then was booked into the Adolphus hotel in Dallas.

What started as a routine date at the Texas hostelry wound up as a record run of six years and eight months; all because the customers kept coming back to a room where they could enjoy listenable music with their meals, and danceable tunes with their partners.

Phil Mullen, formerly a member of Henry Busse's band, also one of the country's top groups when it comes to playing for dancers, is now personal manager for Tommy. Just a few days ago Henry and Tommy got together at the Keystone Room of the Texas hotel in Fort Worth with Phil, and the result of the confab was a decision by both leaders to get behind the Howen Beat "Get 'Em Dancing" program. And Andy Anderson, host at the Keystone Room, said the bands who will work his room dur-ing the coming year will all do the same.

Buddy Koster, Union City, N.J., bandleader, has just completed his second tour of duty with the navy and is now reorganizing his band, using 13 men in the new group. Buddy also has joined the parade of leaders who are going to stress dance music in their books during dance music in their books during the coming year.

Going back a few years, Buddy suggests that dances similar to those held at New York's Manhattan Center be resumed. Buddy points out that at these sessions, several bands were used each night, playing continuous dance sets. And as a result of these affairs, many teenagers were introduced to dancing.

Feather's Nest

By LEONARD FEATHER

A couple of months ago, while the Down Beat poll was in progress, I idly started filling out one of the ballots. The job remained unfinished, for reasons that will be explained in a moment, but I saved the partly-filled form since it seemed that these selections might be of interest as the selections of someone who, ever since adolescence, has been writing about music, and also writing it, for a living. They are the product of many years of constant listening to just about everything of importance that goes on in the areas covered by the poll.

The Duke. Of Course

The band vote, as any fairly steady reader of this pillar might guess, went to Ellington. Not that this is consistently the greatest band; but the few times I heard it during 1952 the conditions were right, and Duke showed eloquently why all the other leaders would themselves work for him.

vote for him.

Among instrumental combos there was little to choose from. Assuming it was only fair to vote for music I had heard in person or on TV during the year, I decided that Gibbs had provided the most genuine small-band jazz excitement; and remembering those will nights at Le Downbeat and the vibes duets with Ion Elliott, I entered Terry's name on the list. Vocal groups? None seemed to achieve any Vocal groups? None seemed to achieve anything of musical merit enough to warrant a vote. Most of them are no better than the material they sing, and their material, of necessity, is the lowest.

Among the male singers the same situation applied; with the girls, Billie Holiday and Ella Fitzgerald rose far above the level of the songs furnished them, and, since Billie is never prevailed upon to sing mediocre has an unparalleled emotional content, she gets my for the past 15 years.

Gibb

Gibbs is never prevailed upon to sing mediocresongs and still has an unparalleled emotional content, she gets my vote as she has for the past 15 years.

A healthy corps of superior trumpet talent displayed itself during the year. Dizzy, in his non-comedy interludes, provided some thrilling moments, as did McGhee, Conte Candoli, Charlie Shavers, and several more. Duke's Clark Terry seemed the most talented and versatile of all modern trumpeters, but for consistency of performance and good taste, Basie's Joe Newman remained tops in my book.

It was a powerful year for trombonists, too. Rosolino and Benny Green were out of earshot too much of the time, and of those I heard extensively Woody's two soloists, Urby Green and Carl Fontana, seemed to deserve a split vote.

The opportunities to hear Charlie Parker were all too rare, but on those few welcome occasions he ratified the Down Beat readers' perennial selection by performing as impeccably as ever.

Since I still lean toward the antiquated school of thought that believes a tenor sax sounds best when played like a tenor sax, I got my biggest kicks in 1952 from Quinichette, with Coleman Hawkins a close runner-up, Stan Getz and Arno Marsh leading in the cool school.

On haritone, as readers apparently observed, there was nobody last year in the modern field whose all-around musicianship challenged the throne of Harry Carney. Harry was emphatically a V.I.P., both in the Ellington record of that name and in the field of jazz virtuosity.

On clarinet Buddy DeFranco was, as usual, hors concours in person, and belatedly well represented on records. The pianists who brought intelligence, inspiration and excitement to their keyboards during the year were almost numberless and the process of elimination a foolish task; but with Bud Powell out of action through the year there was not even the slightest excuse to oust Tatum from his throne.

Ran Well Behind

Ran Well Behind

task; but with Bud Powell out of action through the year there was not even the slightest excuse to oust Tatum from his throne.

Ram Well Behind

My choice on bass is the man who ran sixth in the poll. It seems to me that none of the five who outnumbered him can bear comparison with Oscar Pettiford for both solo and rhythm supremacy.

Of the numerous guitarists who lent their potent presence to combo rhythm sections in 1952, several provided major kicks: Kessel, Johnny Smith, Jimmy Raney, and Johnny Collins especially (Tal Farlow was a year-long absentee). Because of his wonderful quintet work on radio and records, I'd give Smith a slight edge. The drum ballot was easier to fill—Louie Bellson, the Ellington Rock of Gibraltar, was in a class of his own.

My vote went along with the People's Choice in the vibes department. Terry Gibbs has all the qualities of technique, beat, and excitement that make for greatness on vibes. Hamp and Norvo were out of town, Milt Jackson provided the next best moments, with Don Elliott not far behind.

In the miscellaneous instrument division there were, of course, innumerable Hammond organists available for election, of whom Bill Davis seemed the likeliest; but my choice, for the second time, was Oscar Pettiford, as phenomenal a cellist as he is a bassist, and still unique in this department despite the tentative efforts of one or two potential rivals.

Most male singers with bands failed to provide this jaded listener with any particular thrills. Duke's Jimmy Grissom impressed me as the most able and versatile, scoring with dual effectiveness on ballads and blues. In the female department, a huzzah for Grissom's stablemate, Betty Roche. Betty, I was delighted to observe, was not entirely overlooked by readers, landing in eighth place with 49 votes. If Duke will take her off that stupid pseudo-bop A Train routine and let more people hear her magnificent interpretation of Mauve from Black, Brown and Brige, possibly hundreds will vote for her next year.

Zutty finally got a job with Hot Lips Page and a Belgian band in Knocke for the summer, then returned to Paris and went on a concert tour with Bill Coleman, an American trumpet player who has been eking out an existence in Europe for several years.

Were Envied

When Zutty and Marge finally planned their return trip, they were the envy of almost every Negro musician stranded in France for want of the fare home. "Most of the guys are living poorly. Even well known musicians like Don Byas, Bill Coleman, and Nelson Williams (the trumpet player who used to be with Duke) are just about getting by. Panassie's agents and Mezz and his frienda know that they can get these guys to work for whatever they want to pay them, because they have no choice. DOWN BEAT

By NAT HENTOFF

I should like to inaugurate a jihad against the appalling lack of responsibility in much of the purported writing about

Part of the problem was incisively summarized by an unnamed writer in the English Jazz Journal. He wrote: "Jazz music has been around quite some time now, long enough to have achieved some sort of artistic standing, and for the musician to have acquired a certain amount of the dignity that goes with achievement. One would wish that jazz critics and criticism had reached as high an artistic and literary standard as the music itself.

"Even at its best, the literature of jazz is subject to the faults of romanticism, exaggeration, and pre-occupation with either the immediate present or the distant past, neither of which are so important as some jazz writers would have us believe. At its worst, jazz writing has reached such banal and euphuistic (Oxford for phony) extremes as to make one doubt completely the ability and knowledge of the writers."

One Prime Example

One Prime Example

Hear! Hear! By the way, one roaring example of what the writer talks about is a book by an Englishman named Rex Harris, selling here now in Pelican pocketbook. It's called Jazz, and has such illuminating insights as this one: "as long as Ellington continues to be identified with jazz, both Ellington and jazz are the losers." (Page 163, if you think I'm kidding.) The book is selling well in the college towns, and Mr. Harris has now done his bearded bit to add to the home-grown labors of Blesh, Mezz, and the other troglodytes.

Harris, however, is less reprehensible than another species of jazz writer, the kind that so often writes for the slick magazines. Harris at least is sufficiently interested in the art to have done some musicological research and in a recent column in the Jazz Journal, he allowed rather abashedly that maybe he'd better listen to some more modern jazz before sending up any more square rockets.

But let us take the case of one Russell Roth, who wrote an article for the December Mademoiselle with the anguished title, "What's Happened to Jazz?" This article is almost a caricature of the kind of shouting nonsense that every once in a while appears between lingerie and Cadillac ads in some of our "better" magazines.

Anyway, the framework of his academic folktale is a beery tribute to a band Art Hodes brought briefly to St. Paul last year. Roth, first of all, does considerable disservice to Hodes, Floyd O'Brien, and the others, because they are serious and competent musicians in their field of jazz. But by romanticizing them into figures out of F. Scott Fitzgerald by way of A. A. Milne, Roth makes them into one-dimensional animal crackers.

A. A. Milne, Roth makes them into one-dimensional animal crackers.

Some Examples

That, though, is minor compared to the harm Roth does to jazz as a whole. I would guess that more than 90 percent of those who read Roth's article know very little about jazz and most are probably curious to learn. Here are some examples of what this expert (who is now, may Zeus protect us, working on a book on jazz) has to say. The italics are his:

"Bop . . turned out to be a desperate attempt, largely on the part of Negroes as typified by Dizzy Gillespie, to advance rather than retreat to the creative freedom last found in the jazz of the '20s. This means that the boppists did not want to abandon any of the 'masculine' techniques of the '30s—the instrumental brilliance by and for themselves. "So the movement collapsed. It was built on a contradiction. All that was really new in bop was absorbed by progressive jazz (Stan Kenton, et al.)

which was nothing more than the continuation of a swing. It was all a matter of arrangers, now, of big bands—eight hassesses in model.

a matter of ar rangers, now, of big bands—eight brasses, six reeds four rhythm—of chrome-plated pol-ish; about as hu-man as the side of a new refrigerator—if the refrigerator could shriek!"

The Objection

Now that's a direct quote. As you can see, my objection is based on more than just a subjective disagreement on taste. Here is a man who writes on jazz and obviously knows nothing whatsoever about contemporary developments in it—nothing about Getz, Mulligan, Parker, Brubeck, Davis, Powell, Roach, Tristano, Domnerus, etc. His use of terms like "bop" and "progressive jazz" is not only sematically schizoid but based on no empirical reality whatsoever.

The cat is just completely irresponsible. Now if someone equally irresponsible wrote for Mademoiselle on electronics or psychology, his article—if printed—would immediately be answered by cogent rebuttals. But jazz in the slick magazines is generally at the porcine mercy of any square who wants to make a quick dollar out of it. I can hardly wait for Mr. Roth's authoritative book. I assume the preface will be by Cornad Janis with illustrations by Grandma Moses.

Seaweed walls Actually Improve Your Cle

Actually Improve Your Clarinet Tone!

In all the world there is probably no other room like the little room where the fine Mozambique Grenadilla wood used in making your Selmer (Paris) C-T Clarinet is slowly aged and seasoned. For the walls of this room are built of Seaweed Blocks! Long ago, the House of Selmer discovered that seaweed, compressed into blocks which form the walls of the Aging Room. exercised an amazingly exact control of the room's humidity and temperature...as important to the proper seasoning of the Grenadilla wood as to the proper aging of fine champagne.

A little thing? Some may think so. But it indicates the infinite wealth of care and thoughtful attention to even the smallest detail of design, manufacture and workmanship which has made Selmer (Paris) instruments the World Standard of Comparison.

Where your talent and reputation are concerned You Can't Afford Anything Less Than a Selmer C-T Clarinet

No other clarinet will do so much for your playing. This you can easily prove. Visit your Selmer dealer, play the C-T Clarinet and check the results, then and there. against these four major points:

- ▼ The tone is one of classic purity . . . rich sound, beautifully centered around a core of intense tonal color.
- √ Tonal "spread" is completely eliminated. √ Blowing resistance is exactly right.
- √ Sound starts instantly, without effort even at pianissimo dynamic level.
