Victor To Release 6 Toscanini Sets, Plus Reiner And Munch

New York—Classical record buyers have a number of events to nok forward to in Victor's schedule of fall and winter releases. Chief among them will be six new Toscanini albums. One will be the eagerly-looked-forward-town odd of the total schedule of the total sched ranini, known for his rigid standards in permitting release of his records, said he was quite pleased with this set. "They all laughed logether," he noted.

Later in the season, Victor will release the Toscanini broadcast of the Masked Ball, the first Toscanini opera on which Victor was able to use its own microphones with "orthophonic sound." There also will be a Toscanini reading of "Schubert's Ninth Symphony. This album will include an essay on Schubert the man, commissioned from Andre Maurois.

A two-LP set of Wagnerian performances by Toscanini will include several new recordings. Another collection of the maestro's work will be a new version of Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, and the sixth set will be a collection called Toscanini Plays Your Favorites.

Victor also plans to release new

Asbury Park, N. J.,—An MCA package combining Les Elgart, the Crew Cuts, and Sunny Gale broke all weekend records at Convention Hall here July 17 and 18. Combined total for the two nights was 5,164, with a gross of $6,853.95. Previous weekend record was held by the Four Aces. The full sixnight attendance total of the package from July 16 to 21 was 7.800. Elgart was held over a second week to appear with Lou Monte. Elgart has been booked for the Palladium on the coast for Oct. 19, and there also is a possibility of a New York hotel engagement for the band.

Shows Set

Hollywood—Walt Disney's long-rumored and long-in-planning entry into television becomes a fact Oct. 27 when the "Disneyland" show, as it is titled, takes off on a one-hour weekly series via the ABC-TV network. Full details have not been revealed, but, as in Disney films, music will be heavily emphasized.

The Firehouse Five Plus Two, novelty Dixie combo headed by Disney's trombone-playing artist, Ward Kimball, is sure to be heard in at least several of the shows. Kirk Douglas, who stars in Disneys live-action film, 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, will make his debut as a singer. Dinah Shore and Peggy Lee are among the established singing personalities also on the roster.

The series will be filmed and is to be released at 7:30 p.m. simultaneously across the country.

Feud Is Over

Newport, R. I. — The long feud between Billie Holiday and Lester Young ended during the Newport Jazz featival when Lady Day was joined halfway through her set by the Pres.

Billie's early recording scenes were trying to be recreated by having Teddy Wilson on piano and Lester on tenor. The Presbalked because of the feud that started five years ago. Gerry Mulligan lugged his baritone on to the stage and provided some to the stage and provided some picturesque clusters of sound behind Lady Day. This was enough for Lester.

He shuffled onstage and once again was a part of a Billie presentation. They later embraced in the dressing room, and the feud was over.

Cadence Adds More Artists

New York—Cadence Records has added the Barry Sisters, the Top Hatters, Jack Gold and the Esquires, and Maddy Russell to their artists' roster. Gold is a publisher, songwriter, and also manages the Esquires. He cut a demonstration disc with them of two of his tunes. Archie Bleyer of Cadence liked the song, the group, and Gold's singing, and so signed them all. First two Gold sides for the label will be Ev'rything and A Kiss Should Mean We're Sweethearts.

Cadence, meanwhile, is also concentrating on building up its jazz department. Albums by Beryl Booker and Don Shirley are due within a few weeks, and the company is in the process of signing several other jazz artists. The plan, said a spokesman for the company, "is to feature progressive jazz only."

On the two evenings of Newport's first annual jazz festival (July 17 and 18), a combined attendance of more than 13,000 crowded into and around the center court of the storied Casino, proving that jazz concerts have comed fage.

This was the first music festival devoted entirely to jazz. Never before were so many of the major names in jazz gathered together for one brace of programs and never before was so comprehensive an attempt made to present jazz artists in the framework of a living history of jazz.

Narrator Stan Kenton did more than simply introduce the artists. He pointed out the particular contributions of each to jazz, and by the end of the second night, he had traced the evolution of jazz from its New Orleans-Dixieland beginnings to the contemporary explorations of Gerry Mulligan and Lennie Tristano.

Newport, R. I. — Many unusual things have happened at many unusual jazz concerts, but a new touch was added during the first part of Saturday night's program at the festival here.

A consistently absorbing Tristano group included Billy Bauer, Konitz, Warne Marsh, Peter Ind, and Jeff Morton. Then came the aforementioned Holiday set after which the concert and the festival ended spectacuiarly at 12:35 a.m. with the Gene Krupa trio.

"Next year's festival will, I hope, include many of the major artists who couldn't appear this year because of previous commitments—Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Art Tatum, and Sarah Vaughan, among others. But one this is sure—we'll be back next year and for many years to come."

The most abandoned members of the jam session were Gillespie and a drivingly uncool Mulligan. Both were instrumental in continuing the session after what seemed an initial ending. During the beginning stages of the session, Dizzy, with camera slung around his neck, was blandly taking pictures of the other participants when not blowing himself. ## Radio & TV

In 'Music' DJs Still (D)rule Air Waves

The television set, through which this column is supposed to view the wonderful world of television, shuddered, gasped and died about a year ago when we left the field of television to view the wonderful world of television, shuddered, gasped and died about a year ago when we left the field of television reviewing.

Resurrected for this Down Beat assignment, it was hauled away to a service shop for some new tubes, wires, knobs, and a pep talk. It going to be facing Liberace again pretty soon.

Meanwhile, we turned the radio button back to AM and listened. They're still playing the same thing. The disc jockeys have the air. It's still Kitty Kallen all the way, with the Crew Cuts and the Gaylords breathing hard behind her.

The radio networks are so close to complete surrender to television that they are a neglegible factor. News, sports, soap operas, and Arthur Godfrey are the mainstays of the nets. Godfrey still uses live musicians and some singers with an amazing range of capabilities, or lack of same. That will be treated in a separate essay.

We were aroused from a stupor in a hammock a few Saturdays back by some good sounding music coming from CBS. It was called Saturday Afternoon at the Chase, the Chase being a hotel in St. Louis. The term Dixieland has been abused, but the Chase musicians played some popular Dixieland with overtones of Freddy (Schnickelfritz) Fisher. It was live and fairly interesting, It is cited as an exception to the general run of midiocity that slops out of the loudspeaker.

The remainder of the air was taken up by the usual run of disjockeys. Some of them are operating on networks, but they talk a much that music is almost an incidental. Robert Q. Lewis has taken to insipid catering to teenagers, apparently under the assumption the the juveniles who make up the nation's fan clubs are representative every citizen under the age of 21. It ain't so.

Lacal diac jockeys are the big men in radio.

Most of them program by the record charts. Some stations have adopted a daring innovation and have asked their listeners to write a their personal Top Ten. There were some uneasy ulcers and If You Low Ma and Little Titlers Mears Let were static to a the program and If You L

Most of them program by the record charts. Some stations haw adopted a daring innovation and have asked their listeners to write a their personal Top Ten. There were some uneasy ulcers along radio row until the mail started arriving, and The Man Upstairs and If You Low Me and Little Things Mean a Lot were right up there.

The slavish devotion of the stations to the record charts is probably the greatest blight in broadcasting. Most of the disc jockeys will readily acknowledge that mass taste in records never has been more abominable. The rise of gurbage has coincided exactly with the rise in influence of the disc jockeys. It's a sort of inbreeding of musical tastes.

We listened the other night to one of the richest disc jockeys is the nation—a man who seldom deserts the Top Ten. We were moved by curiosity concerning his words—did they ever say anything?

There was always an abundance of words. But whenever he finally got through with them, we wondered what he had said. That's as goed an activity as any while you're listening to Sh-Boom.

A typical introduction ran along this line: "The next platter is current!y number ... on the big 10. Kitty Valli has made what I think it he standout disc of her brilliant career. She's backed by the fine voice of the Ivan Stupor singers, whose beat I think insures that eventually this record will rack up at least 750,000 sales.

"I had Kitty on the show a couple weeks ago, and she said she think in this number she has one of the best things of her career. The arrangement was made by Max Munch, the afer man at Sticky records and one of the best in the business. Max also did the arrangement for the Ivan Stupor singers. A & R means artist and repertoire—the man who picks the artists and songs to be recorded.

"I hink Ivan and Max and Kitty have a big hit on their hands. Here it is, the record I predict will be No. 1—Three Wanderers in the Moorlight."

Some of these fellows aren't as stupid as they sound. But not many.

3 New Awards Set For Young Artists

New York—The National Federation of Music Clubs has announced three new awards for its 21st biennial young artists auditions, to be held next spring.

In conjunction with Inter-Allied Artist Corp., one award is open to an American-born lyric tenor between the ages of 23 and 28. The winner receives a recording contract and concert, plus open and radio appearances in Europe. Other awards include solo appearances with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra and with Thor Johnson and the Cincianati Symphony orchestra.

As in previous years, cash prizes of $1,000 will be given winners in the divisions of piano, voice vivilin, and chamber music with the option of a Town Hall debut recital. Full details may be obtained from the National Federation of Music Clubs. 445 West 23rd St. New York City.

New York—"My wife's got me into the recording busi-ness," grinned Jose Ferrer. He had just finished rehearsing the involved lyrics of a kiddie song that he and his wife, Rosemary Clooney, were to record that afternoon. Ferret's invasion of the film world is becoming equally thorough. He climaxed a series of impressive roles with a startlingly effective portrayal of Toulouse-Lautrec in Moulin Rouge. "The writers are reluctant because they feel that if the show is a hit, Cohan will get the credit, and if it isn't they'll get the blame. But maybe in the next year or two we can get going on it."

Ferrer's increasing interest in musical affairs is a logical development in view of the fact—not generally known—that Ferrer is a musician of considerable ability. "The piano is the only instruis a musician of considerable ability. "The piano is the only instrument I play at all well," Ferrer says. "I was known to play sax and clarinet in college, but I was never any good at it. I know the principles of several other instruments—like I know a few chords on the guitar, but I'm no professional on them.

Singing Lessone

Singing Lessons
"As for singing lessons, I've been taking them ever since I appeared in Brother Rat on Broadway. As an actor, I had to use my voice so much that taking singing lessons was life insurance for me on the stage. Now that I'm doing recordings and have worked in Deep in My Heart, I'm getting serious about it.
"I have sung in public several rious about it.

"I have sung in public several times before. There was a concert in Washington. (For a full account of this impressively informal recital, see Down Beat, June 18, of this impressively informal recital, see Down Beat, June 18, 1952.) Before that, I played in No. Nanette with the St. Louis Municipal Opera company in 1942, and it was in that same year, I think, that I replaced Danny Kaye in Let's Face It."

Ferrer's interest in music extends from direct participation to a wide-ranged listener's appreciation of classical music and jazz. "As far as jazz is concerned," says Ferrer, "I keep up with it so far as I can, but the output of modern jazz these days is so staggering, I don't know where to begin. By the time I begin to get to a record, people are already familiar with it.

Dreams Of Past

Shrike, Rosemary has completed White Christmus, in which she costars with Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye and Vera-Ellen.

Wants Another Musical
"I do keep thinking of doing another musical picture," says Ferrer, "and especially a musical on Broadway. And I certainly hope my wife will be in it. She can bring them in, and then they'd have to look to me.

"I don't have a book for a Broadway show yet, but I am negotiating again for a George M. Cohan property—10 songs of his that have never been published. He left a kind of skeleton structure for a book, but we need a writer to work it into a show. It's hard to find one.

'Don't Stay Long'

"The cool guys? They don't stay long enough so I can get familiar with their work. They're cool today and gone tomorrow. It's certainly a fast changing field. I did have a song of mine recorded by Pete Rugolo, and I suppose that's cool." Of his songwriting avocation, Ferrer said, "Well, you see, I started playing piano when I was 5 years old. So writing to me is a matter of sitting down and working something out on the piano, nothing formal. If I get a theme or someone also gives me a lyric I nothing formal. If I get a theme or someone else gives me a lyric, I like or an idea for a lyric, I develop it. I never write though unless I feel a necessity for it. Like some songs I've written recently because Rosie needed a song, I never sit down and say I should write some songs for myself.

"Nobody knows my songs because they haven't been released yet. Two of them, ballads, were recorded by Rosie. One of them is also being used as a theme song in a United Artists picture with Ginger Rogers. I wrote the song originally for a show I produced in

A couple of days after the interview, Ferrer's office called. Ferrer had forgotten to include Erroll Garner in the list of pianists he liked, and he wanted to make sure that Erroll was named. Another Ferrer blessing, as has been indipeople are already familiar with it.

Dreams Of Past

"Also, I guess, I live in part in my dreams of the past—the golden era of Bix Beiderbecke," Ferrer hamiled. "There are a lot of the ones still going that I like. Tatum, of course. And I'm crazy about the way Joe Bushkin plays. It's kind of a society jazz, but it moves me.

Music Trust Fund Aims At Increase In Classics

New York-The director of the Music Performance Trust fund is besieged constantly by devotees of symphonic and chamber music to increase the fund's contribution to symphonic performances. Samuel R. Rosenbaum, the fund's trustee, explains the 20 per cent allocation for this type of music by saying an increase in this field can come Samuel R. an increase in this ficial can come only gradually and in step with the general raising of public appreciation of symphonic works.

About $150,000 monthly now is apent from the fund—which is built in the public recording most lies.

To stimulate interest in the study of musical instruments, there's a student award plan in Pennsylvania. This plan was worked out jointly by the Pennsylvania Music Educators association and Rosenbaum. The trustee sets aside about $10,000 semiannually as incentive to students in their efforts to win a certificate of merit for effort and proficiency. The certificate is presented when the student plays at a school event and is supplemented by $10 from the trust fund.

Performances by musicians paid from the fund are made at a variety of locations—youth dances, veterans hospitals, concert and symphony stages, and armed forces

Impressive Record

Even though the demands on the fund's talent, time, and funds are many, its record on classical performances is quite impressive. In a typical half-year period, the fund presented more than 300 performances of symphonic or chamber music all ever the United States and Canada, employing 5,750 musicians at a cost of $99,000.

Approximately half these programs were given in high schools, grammar schools, or colleges. Possibly a quarter of them were given as performances to augment or

Recitals An Example

An example of these performance is the series of Sunday afternoon chamber music recitals in one of the galleries of the Los Angeles County Art museum, given under joint sponsorship of the county and museum authorities. The fund pays for 26 recitals, the county for 26, and the museum contributes the printed programs, the concert hall facilities and the publicity. The recitals are attended by ambiences of 500 to 800 and are broadcast on a local station.

Another outstanding project for which the fund supplies the musicians is the David Broekman's Cooper Union series of six concerts annually in New York—a series devoted to contemporary music.

The fund helps education by paying for performances in schools or colleges, usually in co-operation with the music educators in the institutions.

"I want to discipline myself by learning the rules so thoroughly that my fugues would be legitimate in construction. That's one of several reasons I'm doing a lot of studying this summer since I'm able to live at home during our long engagement at the Embers.

"I'm using a fine book, written some years ago by Stuart McPherson, a teacher in England. It's called Melody and Harmony, and is an accepted treatise on theory.

Don Shirley Cited

"I do know one pianist I think is very capable of improvising a fugue. That would be Don Shirley, who's been working out of Chicago for some years, recently played Basin Street in New York and is now opposite us at the Embers. He works with a bass player.

Hollywood firms can be credited with many important contributions to the jass scens.

One of the earliest, and most interesting, goes all the way back to the year 1922, when Andrae Nordskogg set up the first recording studios in this area and turned out what experts (not this writer) may were the first recorded examples of authentic New Orleans Jazz. These were by the Kid Ory band of the period, but were billed under the name of the Spikes Brothers. If you are familiar with them under the Sunshine label, you'll be interested to know they were originally issued on the Nordskogg label. The Spikes Brothers, who

But it was almost 20 years before another jazz company appeared here, and this one, too, made history. It was Jazz Man, formed in 1941 by Lester Koenig and Dave Stuart to revive a musical form that had become almost extinct (some wish it had) by issuing the first records by the Yerba Buens Jazz Band (Lu Watters, et al) of San Francisco. It was these records that, for better or worse, tipped off the "Great Dixie Revival" of a few years back. But Jazz Man is nevertheless one of the important documentary jazz labels now in existence. ## Grove To Launch New Dance Band

New Dance Band

Hollywood—For the first time in many years, the Cocoanut Grove will be the scene for the debut of a new dance band. Rex Koury, music director of KABC (American Broadcasting Co.'s Hollywood outlet), will unveil a new 15-piece orchestra there Aug. 25 featuring Koury himself at electric accordion of his own design, which he has been using with his KABC staff orchestra here.

Opening of the new Koury band will coincide with opening of Harry Belafonte for a return date as headliner of the new show at the Grove.

sociated with Paramount Studios and interested in jazz only as a hobby, next came up with his Good Time Jazz label, getting off to a big start with that phenomenal (in several ways) organization, the Firehouse Five Plus Two. To this day. Koenig has never admitted Firehouse Five Plus Two. To this day, Koenig has never admitted that the FHFPT, whose records are still selling to high heaven though the unit has disbanded, was not to be accepted as of important musical stature. And whether or not, Good Times Jazz has added a list of names to its catalog that for serious afficiences of their respective idioms are highly important. They include Turk Murphy, Armand Hug, Burt Bales, Paul Lingle, Bob Scobey, Clancy Hayes, blues singer Clair Austin, and the only available records by the late Benny Strickler.

Hollywood—Two famous figures of the past met and heard their stories dramatized recently on Ralph Edwards' This Is Your Life Tv show. They were W. C. Handy, and Gilda Grey, who, in the '20s shook herself into fame with her then-notorious "shimmy" dance. They are seen above with Edwards.

Then in 1951, Koenig launched his Contemporary label, first devoted exclusively to exponents of "modern classical" music, and now "modern classical" music, and now carrying names important in the "modern jazz" field—Shelly Manne, Barney Kessel, Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All-Stars, all with recording units containing top individual peformers. Koenig says his purpose with the new Contemporary label is, and we quote: "To produce outstanding examples of music representative of the new "Hollywood Jazz" school, and to show that there is no sharp line between 'modern classical' and 'modern jazz'."

Mulligan-PJ Split

Biggest news in independent jazz label operation in Hollywood during the past couple of years was, of course, that made by Pacific Jazz with the help of Gerry Mulligan, or vice versa. Gossip has it that the baritone sax ace who invented his "new sound" in jazz by subtracting the pinns became so carried away by his sudden success that he made impossible demands on the then struggling young company. Failing to receive them, he departed in a huff and signed with one of the majors (which were beginning to discover jazz again).

signed with one of the majors (which were beginning to discover jazz again).

Pacific Jazz has forged steadily ahead with new star (Down Beat, 1953) Chet Baker, and others.

Right now much interest is focused on Hollywood's newest jazz label, Nocturne. Co-owner Harry Babasin (one of our top-bracket bass men here) has made the most of the controversy surrounding the existence, or nonexistence, of a "new Hollywood jazz school" by putting out a "Jazz in Hollywood series with the Herbie Harper quintet, the Bud Shank quintet, Bob Gordon, and others. But by labeling their output as the "Jazz in Hollywood" series, Nocturne avoided committing itself to any direction, and will shortly come out with the first records by the much discussed Earl Hines "New Sound" combo.

But by labeling their output as the "Jazz in Hollywood" series, Nocturne avoided committing itself to any direction, and will shortly come out with the first records by the much discussed Earl Hines "New Sound" combo.

'Jump' Still Jumping

A label that should have been mentioned earlier in the chronological order is Jump, formed in 1944 by two Hollywood collectors, Clive Acker and Ed Kocher, mainly to catch up with the many famous jazz names who emmigrated to Hollywood during the war years and into the profitable limbo of film, radio—and now—television studios. For collectors who came of age during the Goodman and pre-goodman era, the roster of musicians heard on Jump records reads like a "Who's Who in Jazz"—Joe Venuti, Matty Matlock, Floyd O'Brien, Red Nichols, Chuck Ma-

Holiday (Jackie Cain).

A European talking on jazz means "distance." But distance is not always an advantage in an art which is so very much living as jazz is. That jazz lives, to me, is the most important thing about it. No choice among big bands, since mone of the best ones—Basie, Herman, Kenton—is as outstanding as Henderson, Lunceford, or Gillespie was in his day. "No choice" among male singers means Satchmo is only a "myth." Don't take Albert Mangelsdorff's unknown name among all these celebrities as a sign of German nationalism. Loving jazz means being sure against such things. But Albert seems to be the first one who plays a modern jazz trombone without "trumpeting" his instrument. instrument

I simplified this thing, for myself, anyway, by giving my first choice to those all-time greats, the pioneers who did most to advance the jazz idiom in their own individual fields of expression. It didn't work in the big band bracket, where so much is due Duke Ellington, and where there now is simply no other band to vote for except Prado. It follows, then, that my "new stars" (exclusive of last year's winners, ineligible this year), were chosen by the same formula applied to contemporary performers. Could anyone come up with a better alibi in 100 words?

New York — An anonymous patron has made possible for the third straight year a series of free Latin-American music concerts at the Harlem Meer in Central Park. The concerts were increased from four to six this season, and are given Tuesday evenings through Aug. 24.

The anonymous patron, according to the New York Daily News, "felt that the people living in the vicinity of the north end of Central Park should have concerts that were compatible with their cultural and ethnic heritage.

New Operas Set For Video

New York—The world premiere presentation of a new American opera by Lukas Foss, and the commissioning by NBC of a new opera by the American composer, Stanley Hollingsworth, have been announced by Samuel Chotzinoff for the NBC Television Opera theater. The Foss opera, still untitled, will be given in the 1954-55 season of the NBC opera series—its aixth complete season—expected to start in October. The Hollingsworth opera will be given when it is ready.

Chotzinoff also announced several other operas for the coming season's schedule, including Puccini's Tosca in a new English translation by John Gutman; a repeat of Menotti's Amahal and the Night Visitors; Ariadne Auf Nazos by Richard Strauss in the original version by the composer, and Mozart's Abduction from the Seraglio.

made in '39 and placed in Victor album P-25, the first boogie woogie set on the market in an album. Originally, that was all Yancey's contract called for at Victor.

A year later on Sept. 6, 1940, John Reid brought Sidney Bechet to Chicago to make Sidney's tune Blues for Johnny on a memorial record date put together as a tribute to the late Johnny Dodds who died earlier in the year.

The night before the session this writer took Reid out to the home of Yancey's sister, where Jimmy made a version of a new blues called Cryin' in My Sleep on a home recorder John took along. The next day John played the dies for Leonard Joy, Victor's a&r man at that time, who liked it and thought maybe they could cut a couple Yancey sides after the Blues for Johnny session. The late Jimmy Yancey, purveyor of blues and boogie piano, has more new LP sides out currently than Liberace has. This is the result of the discovery of "lost masters," the push on jazz reissues, and the rush back in 1951 to cut Yancey sides before it was too late. A little more than a decade ago, it was a rare eccasion when a jazz fan could hear Yancey's piano.

He piayed rarely, didn't have a piano of his own, and had made no recorded. You might eatch him if you were lucky in a gin mill around 55th and Dearborn on Chicago's size. Street Special and Five Oflook Blues are both the basis for bed beating it out more for his own amansement than for the customers.

These joints had ominous names like Bar Trap # 1 or belying amens like The Moonigh In and the Big Apple. If Jim were in the smood, he would take you over to his sister's flat around the corner and play generously for hours. These soins were unforgetable experiences.

I recently received word that a giant manufacturer of audio equipment for home and commercial use is canceling its direct distributor-customer sales policy and is arranging what can the dealer do about this? He either can stay out of the hi-fi business and stick to radio and television set sales and service or he can become a factory-direct distributor as is the jobber.

These parts are sold at wholesale and are bought at wholesale without much difficulty, thereby virtually eliminating the dealer from the equipment and replacement parts business as far as high skilliv is concerned. adelity is concerned.

Obviously, he does not want to stay out of hi-fi, for it is too lucrative a field. But he also does not like to carry a large number of product lines nor keep the huge stock on hand as does the jobber. The dealer would prefer to buy from a local jobber, as his needs dictate, and keep a small stock on hand for immediate sale. Naturally, he must resent the current factory-distributor-customer arrangement.

Bell Sound Systems has developed a low-cost playback tape unit which works in conjunction with any single-play phonograph turntable and many automatic changers. The unit is especially designed to play prerecorded tapes, either recorded at 3% inches a second or at 7% inches a second. Reel capacity is 5 inches.

with the problem of choosing from an immense array of equipment.

Shows No Loyalty
He must deal with a seller who can show no loyalty to a particular brand, for he carries many brands and is often at a loss as to what to recommend to us. (Perhaps he will recommend a product that he is dropping from stock as soon as possible.)

Personally, I would rather trust the limited line of goods carried by my favorite dealer, in whose judgment and integrity I have confidence, than be forced to choose from a shelf containing a dozen versions of such things as loud-speakers and tuners.

There is not necessarily a saving in buying from the jobber, for manufacturer's and jobber's prices are higher when they must deal with so large a number of widely scattered smaller customers.

In addition, many jobbers are not prepared to give the proper service to the customer as far as educating him to hi-fi, installing the equipment, servicing and guaranteeing it, and adding to or changing it. I feel that in the long run we all will benefit from a distinct factory-distributor-dealer arrangement. I invite your comments in this respect.

Recorder Examination Without Hocus-Pocus

High Fidelity

Look at a tape recorder—any one will do. Also look at the specifications brochure accompanying the machine. How much do the two have to do with each other? Often they don't jibe. Middlesex Merlin may have been a conjurer of exceptional talent, but he would have to take a back seat to the spec-writing engineer and his electronic incantations.

The technical terms—decibel flat

The wringer action of the two rol-

The technical terms-decibel, flat response, de-emphasis, cross-over and the rest—are necessary in the laboratory as a standard from which to design, construct and construct and evaluate audio and other electronic equipment, but, like the technical vocabulary of the automotive industry, these specialized phrases often are used to mystify the buying public.

The well-versed "sometimes can

The well-versed audic "amateur" sometimes can talk rings around the highly specialized engineer, but the average music lover and audiophile is hypnotized by the descriptions of a 16-cylinder tape machine only to find later that he has bought a "one-lunger."

It is impractical to explain the meaning of these terms. Generalities can lead to even greater confusion; specific information of a technical nature is usually a matter of academic training. However, we can take apart and analyze any tape machine we wish.

can take apart and analyze any tape machine we wish.

Regardless of the quality of the tape machine, the basic mechanical principles must be examined first:

In order to obtain reproduction which is as close to the original as possible, the constancy of the tape speed through the recording track is of prime importance.

Recall Phonographs

You may recall the old windup phonograph and its variable speed control—a twist of the knob and the deepest basso became a nervous soprano. In some tape machines, soprano. In some tape machines, the same thing, to a much less exaggerated degree, occurs spontaneously. These faults are known as "wow" and "flutter," depending on whether their rate of occurrence is less on the beautiful the control of the same low or high.

low or high.

One source of this problem is the all-important revolving capstan and its idler drum. Playing the tape through this mechanism is like running the wash through the wringers of a washing machine. The capstan and idler drum must rotate exactly centered on their shafts.

If they are not carefully ma-chined in round, wow and flutter will result, as they also will in the case of an inefficient power trans-fer from the motor or an under-powered motor.

As the tape is pulled off the supply reel and through the recording track by the capstan and its idler drum rollers, the tape must be stored on the take-up real. The wringer action of the two rollers pulls the tape at a predetermined speed (3%, 7%, 15 inches a second and faster). The supply reel must resist this pull just enough second and faster). The supply reel must resist this pull just enough to keep the plastic tape against the magnetic heads, yet not enough to stretch the tape.

This correct tension is helped by a mechanical clutch or brake device attached to the supply reel. Failures in this system are evidenced in the reproduction as wow, flutter or chatter, which is caused by excessive friction of the tape against any one of the magnetic heads, producing a uniform tape bounce before the tape reaches the capstan.

As the tape is pulled through the recording track, it must be wound on the take-up reel with even tension. During the recording process, this reel is powered with sufficient speed to take up the tape.

Stop Machine

Tension on this reel is effected by a tension arm and roller on the better machines, and being spring-leaded, they will act to shut off the tape machine should the tape break or fail.

or fail.

A unique problem presents itself in the tape supply and take-up reels. As the tape is unreeled, the length of the tape taken off at each revolution grows less; hence the reel begins to rotate faster and faster.

revolution grows less; hence the reel begins to rotate faster and faster.

The take-up reel in turn must wind longer lengths of tape with each revolution and rotates correspondingly slower. Any variation from the normal speed relationship in either reel will result in the same problems brought on by variations in constancy.

Good machines have self-correcting reel speed mechanisms. When the tape finishes its run, the reels shut off, precluding the possibility of a whipping action of the end of the tape. A small piece of tape is ripped off with each revolution, and a complete reel of tape can be destroyed if this continues unchecked. checked.

Solenoid Brakes Used

Electric solenoid brakes are often used to stop the reels when the machine is turned off or when the machine is turned off or when the tape breaks or runs out. Broadcast quality machines must have definite limits of time necessary to stop tape motion (within 2 inches at 15 inches a second). Less expensive machines are not so precise and depend upon an attentive operator. In most moderately priced machines, rubber drive or idler drums are left against the sdjacent metal wheel when the machine is not in use. This causes wow-producing flats or dents in the rubber. Professional machines have mechanical systems where the wheels are moved away from adjacent surfaces.

Important factors in the drive

Important factors in the drive or transport mechanism are proper-sized synchronous motors, adequate tape tensioning devices, controlled supply and take-up reels and pre-cisely centered capatan, shaft, idlers, inertia and drive wheels and bearings.

When buying a tape machine, take along a prerecorded test tape (Dubbings ##-110, #D-111) to make sure your purchase will parform properly. The cost of the test tape can save you the cost of a poor tape recorder.

N.Y. Philharmonic Opening On TV

New York—The New York Philharmonic, like the Metropolitan Opera company, will televise its Oct. 7 opening night. Home viewers, however, won't be able to see the program.

It'll be a closed circuit presentation by Dor-Theater-Television to be shown in the theaters across the country. The same procedure was utilized in the Met's telecast of Carmen two years ago and will be used again on the Met's opening night Nov. 8.

So far 31 movie theaters have agreed to carry the Met opening and by November, according to Theater Network Television, the opening may be seen in 50 or 60 theaters with a capacity of 150,000.

a concert I shall do there when I'm on the west coast this summer."

Miss Steber is rare among song recitalists in that she not only uses but also introduced many songs by American composers in her pro-grams. Many singers, on the con-trary, stick to the standard Euro-pean repertoire.

Given A Rea

One reason, said Miss Steber candidly, that many singers don't experiment "is that when our American composers do write songs, they're really rather difficult to do. You've got to be sufficiently interested to take the time to learn to put the song over."

The Devil's Advocate

One of the most intriguing eve

One of the most intriguing evenings in this summer's series of Lewisohn stadium concerts in New York was a Monday night Program of Dance Music.
Danny Daniels (Devil's Advocate, May 19) was featured in the New York premiere of Morton Gould's Concerto for Tap Dancer and Orchestra in which the dancer is the sole instrument. Daniels and Carmen Gutierrez also danced to Stravinsky's Suites for Petit Orchestre, Nos. 1 and 2 with original choregraphy by Daniels.

chestre, Nos. I and 2 with original choregraphy by Daniels.

Conductor Thomas Scherman and the stadium orchestra completed the program with readings of the waltzes from Richard Strauss' Der Rosenkavalier and Bach's Suite No. 4 in D Major (each movement of an 18th century suite was in the character of a dance).

This is one example of the creative programming that has become characteristic of the six-week stadium concert season. Major artists and conductors are engaged; the musicianship is of a consistently high level; ticket prices are low.

Ulysess Kay's Concerto for Or-

Ulysess Kay's Concerto for Orchestra recently has appeared a records for the first time (Reminton LP R-199-173). Kay, one our more vigorous young composer is perhaps best known through his film score for the Quist One. The other side of the LP has two interesting configurations by Norman Lockwood — Concerto for Organ and Brasses and the organ solo, Quiet Design. Young Marilyn Mason is the organist, and she again demonstrates remarkable skill and the depth of spirit of a major interpretive artist.

GOOD COMMERCIAL BETS

These are the records received for review which seem most likely to achieve excellent sales because of their broad appeal and the probability that they'll be pushed strenuously by disc lockeys.

Patti Page—I Cried (Merc)....Automatic good sale is assured; could bust open with some luck.

bust open with some luck

George Siravo—Showin' Of (Decca)... A sleeper that needs only air-play for strong sales response

VOCALISTS

Tony Alamo—You're the Sweetest Sweetheart in the World/ You're the One in My Heart (Majar)...Former Sammy Kare band vocalist makes an impressive start with these ballads

Tony Benefit—Take Me Back Again!

Cinnamon Sinner (Col)... Take is in the old sobbing vein, but Sinner has drive that might make this the ace side Judy Garland—Here's What I'm Here For!

The Man That Got Away (Col)... For should sell, mainly because of the sock choral work; the other's over-dramatic of the sock choral work; the other's over-dramatic

Eydie Gorme—Chain Reaction/
Sure (Coral)... Eydie switches styles with Reaction, a bouncing novelty; Sure's on the ballad side

Merv Griffin—Much Too Young to Die/Giel with a Figure Like an Hour-Glaze (Col)... Merv turns to the country and western field with Die and does a right pass'ble job

Shirley Harmer-Nobody's Lonesome For Me/

Venezuela (MGM)........Lonesome has a double-voice gimmick Louis Jordan—I Didn't Know What Time It Was/Only Yesterday (Decca)....Louis proves once more he can sing pop ballads with the very best of them

Lancers—So High, So Low, So Wide/ Live and Let Live (Trend)....HLW has a swingy spiritual sound, almost like Dry Bones in round style

Roberta Lee—True Love and Tender Care/ When the Organ Played at Twilight ("X")....True Love has a country-swing to it.

Ella Mae Morse—I Love You, Yes I Do/
Money Honey (Cap)......Ella gives Love, the oldie, a good ride
Kay Penton—That's You, My Love/
Why Don't You Be Good? (Merc)....First side another example of Kay's fine feeling for a song
Andy Williams—Why Should I Cry Over You?/
You Can't Buy Happiness ("X")....Pleasantly-jumped versions of these new tunes by a new singer

COUNTRY & WESTERN

The best country and western sides received for review for this issue

Eddy Arnold—This Is the Thanks I Get/ Hep Cat Baby (RCA)....Thanks to Eddy for one of the best ballads he has ever waxed

Gene Autry-I'm a Fool to Care/
A Broken Promise Means a Broken Heart (Col)....Cut in Nashville, these two sides bring back the old Autry. Good, too

Leon McAulife Sh-Boom/ Smooth Saiking (Col)... More western than country but a good juke-box bet

McCormick Bros.—Red Hen Boogie/
Banjo Twist (Hickory).... New talent on this up and coming label.
Sides could gain prestige for both

Chuck Read—Golden Anniversory Waltz/
Don't Put Your Heart Up For Sale (Merc)....Because of its sentimental value, the Waltz side will get action from both jocks and box

ommy Sands—Don't Drop It/
A Place For Girls Like You (RCA)..... A Texas offering with a lot of potential

Al Terry—House of Glass/
Show Me That You Love Me (Hickory)...Glass could break wide open. Both sides feature-fine steel work

Billy Walker—Going, Going, Goney
I'm a Fool to Care (Col)... Watch this artist with continuing sides like these, he'll be a big name in the coming year.

Bobby Williamson—Sh-Boom/
Love March (RCA)... Texas boy could cover a lot of space with these sides

Count Basic hith Cherry Point

Neal Hefti's Cherry Point is a simple, relaxed largely antiphonal original that's played with robust swing by the Basie band. Right On is by a man named Green (Ben-On is by a man named Green (Ben-ney?) and is the most powerful re-corded example yet of the current Basic dynamo. The rating is not so much for the casual, riff-built tune, but rather for the amazing pulsative impact of this band when recorded right. Solos are by Joe Newman and Frank Wess, I think, on tenor On both sides the Count on tenor. On both sides, the Count and his rhythm section lay down a foundation that would rock a city block. nam's work on Kuby, and his lyrical ability to extend and refurbish the lines of such pop tunes as the three included here (especially Be My Love). Kenny also has the ideal speed to cope successfully with fast-tempo modern jazz originals. Reason for the middling rating is that Kenny's only other horn support, Jimmy Heath, isn't sustainedly valuable enough. Jimmy handles his limited written baritone lines adequately on three of the tunes, but his tenor solos strike me as undistinguished.

Another defect are the lapses on Dream (Kenny's unsure intonation on the tune and his too obvious inclusion of As Time Goes By after Bishop's pleasant solo). I get the general feeling that if more takes of most of the sides had been made, a better LP woud have resulted. Kenny has long merited his own

The brisk rhythm section is composed of drummer Billy Schneider (a former Lennie Tristano student), pianist Paul Moer (now working for a masters degree in composition at the University of Southern California), and the always first-rate bassist, Joe Mondragon (a member of the Warner Brothers studio orchestra).

The five originals and all eight arrangements are by Montrose. His writing is marked by a concise, often witty linear skill and I like his crisply intersecting lines here better, in general, than I did on the Chet Baker Ensemble set (Down Bact, July 14).

As a writer of originals, however, Montrose has somewhat the same problems as, let's say, Russ Freeman. His tunes are clever, but as of these two LPs, they don't show too wide a range of mood and not much developmental maturation. And there is often too similar

Al's choice of chordal natterns from fragile. I note from some of Al's choice of chordal patterns, especially on ballads, that his liking for Debussy is still operative. Choice of tunes is good; it's particularly pleasant to hear Alamo and Wind again. #### Johnny Hodges

*** Easy Going Bounce

Johnny's personnel for this recording included Emmett Berry, Arthur Clark (tenor), Lawrence Brown, Leroy Lovett, Ray Brown and J. C. Heard. Bounce is a Lovett original, a thematic skeleton for a swinging Hodges solo followed by shorter choruses by Berry and Clark. The riffs behind and between the solos, however, could between the solos, however, could stand overhauling (or retirement to pasture). The all-ensemble last third of the side is built on tired lines and voicing that indicates Lovett may have written this one in a hurry.

Indiana, too, is encumbered with Indiana, too, is encumbered with intrusively routine ensemble patterns. There are open spaces for Hodges, Brown, Berry, and Clark that make the side worthwhile, but surely it must be possible to provide a fresher framework for the solos. The band is still a romping one, however, with a large amount of vitality despite the writing. (Norgran 113)

Dizzy Gillespie

and end. The rest is Dizzy. His choruses swing and are technically dexterous, but he doesn't finally build anything worth the effort on this one. I wonder why he chose to record the tune.

Dizzy blows well on his own ballad (which has echoes at the beginning of They Didn't Believe Me). But he's hampered by routine support. I'm curious as to how different this might have sounded with, let's say, the Peterson trio behind Dizzy. As it is, Dizzy is the only one worth careful hearing. (Norgan 116) (Norgran 116)

If a whole Vladimir Horowitz concert can be recorded, why not an entire George Lewis recital? This is the complete record of a concert by the Lewis band al Ohio State university March 3 of this year (title of the album is Jazz at the Ohio Union). With George are Jim Robinson, Lawrence Marrero, Alcide (Slow Drag) Pavageau, Alton Purnell, Joe Watkins, and Avery (Kid) Howard. Watkins and Purnell do the vocals. The fluctuating balance could have been much better. (There is no reason why a live performance no reason why a live performance can't be balanced as well as a can't be balanced as well as a studio session if you know what you're doing.) But the recorded sound is more or less serviceable, despite considerably less presence than could have been obtained, plus an often overrecorded banjo. The label says it's "Hi Fidelity" (define your terms).

There are some rough spots in execution throughout the session, but it all moves along with rocking integrity and abandon. High points (Turn to Page 14) in that number—when the sins go marcing in").

Both in recording fidelity and consistency of excitement, this isn't up to the George Lewis LP on the Jazzman label (Down Beat, May 19), but it should be quite a feast for insatiable traditionalists and would make quite a present for one.

Touching is Lewis' simple finale in which he says to the shouts of the crowd, "I don't know what to say . . I wouldn't expect to find a lost tribe like this in the first place." As he's discovering, there are thousands of members of that wishe in the midwest colleges he's are thousands or members or tribe in the midwest colleges he's been concertizing at, on both coasts, and in Europe, Meet another mem-ber. A valuable find in the Label "X" reissue series. The Missourians were composed mainly of men who later became the Cab Calloway orchestra in 1930 when a booking agent got the idea of having Cab front the band. Originally a midwest group (most of the men were from St. Louis), the Missourians had been influenced by Benny Mosaba by Benny had been influenced by Benny Mo-ten played the vaudeville circuits, had been the first "Cotton Club Orchestra," had toured with Ethel

The 23-year-old Most, who has not been well served on his few previous recordings, finally has an LP that sets off his flute and clarinet work with good fidelity and in reasonably interesting arrangements. Dorough wrote two of the originals and arranged Rhapsody and Day. Mettome arranged There'll Never be, and Most wrote the original dedicated to the man who did the notes. High point is the intelligently imaginative flute-piane interplay on Rhapsody. Rest of the writing didn't gas me, as the saying goes. On the sides on which they appear. Green is fine and Mettome is effective but slightly erratic. Rhythm section is first-rate. Pianist Dorough, a veteran of New York sessions and currently Sugar Ray Robinson's accompanist, indicates from his brief solos here that he could profitably be heard more often on records. Dorough wrote two of the original often on records.

Most plays good flute and could become a leading contender for the top jazz clarinet position. He has warmth, interesting conception, and he swings. His style so far is somewhat eclectic, but the notes say he doesn't expect the culmination of his powers to occur until 1958. It might even happen before then. (Debut DLP-11)

There Will Never Be Another You; While We're Young; Jorsey Bounce; Summer Night

Rating: ***
Red's debut for "X" could have Red's debut for "X" could have been more impressive. Its not Red's fault—he sounds as young and creative as ever. But someone chose to record him as the only soloist backed by a large band. The resultant lack of variety isn't helped by Shorty Rogers' rather routine, though lightly jumping arrangements. You is perhaps the best scored. Though these are good dance records, they're not top-flight jazz. There is little real attempt to work out freshly contrasting lines between vibes and orchestra. It would have, in any case, been It would have, in any case, been better to use some of the first-rate sidemen on hand for complement-ary solos.

Label doesn't list full personnel, Label doesn't list full personnel, so this is it: Bob Gordon, Jimmy Giuffre, Bud Shank, Bill Holman, Oliver Mitchell, Bob Enevoldsen, Conrad Gozzo, Don Fagerquist, Marty Paitch, Curtis Counce, and Shelly Manne. Those sounds in Jersey Bounce and the beginning of Summer Night aren't overly resonant crickets or a crack in the onant crickets or a crack in the EP. It's Red using slap-hammers.

EP. It's Red using slap-hammers.
On second thought, this probably isn't Shorty's fault either. He probably was asked to write this innocuously so the records would "sell" better. Actually, in jazz, the smartest commercial approach is to let the men play and write as they want to. Otherwise, the session sounds too controlled—as this does. I hope Red has more freedom on his other "Y" sides And I'd bet I hope Red has more freedom on his other "X" sides. Teddy Hill, Paul Barbarin, Luis himself on piano, and either Charlie Holmes or Albert Nicholas on tenor, among others. Personnel on the Chicago dates are unknown, but on the last two tunes, among those present were Dave Nelson, Jimmy Archey, James P. Johnson, Don Frye, and Freddie Moore.

There is nothing startling here, but several of the solos by Oliver and his associates are of interest, and to this listener it is always absorbing to hear the man who most directly influenced Louis and whose own earlier records with the Creole Jazz Band remain among the most startlingly alive of all jazz

If this is a hi-fi recording, as the label blandly states, I will trade in my ornate set for a windup portable and a hearing aid. Actually, the fidelity on this apparently on-the-scene recording is of disturbingly small size and there is surface noise. But the music is good, solid, energetic Dixieland which is why the rating.

Wild Bill Davison heads the band that included Eddie Condon, Cutty Cutshall, Edmond Hall, Gene Schroeder, Bob Casey, Cliff Leeman, and Buzzy Drootin. Other strange word misadventures occur in the notes but space limitations preclude my dwelling on them. Wild Bill and Ed are the two outstanding soloists. On the first four, Joe adds four strings to a basic jazz quartet: Gus Oberstein and Jules Modlin, violins; Mike Bartun, viola; Sid Kassimir. cello; Joe Puma, guitar; Ish Ugarte, bass, and Harold Granowsky, drums. The writing for strings is more in the jazz context than is usual, but it still doesn't make it. Though the writing has possibilities, the execution by the make it. Though the writing map possibilities, the execution by the strings is stiff, however well-intentioned. Joe is fine as are the few Puma guitar solos, and Paula Castle has a promising vocal on Planthing

The engineer on these was Rudy Van Gelder whose work is usually first-rate. Here, however, the balance on both sides could have been better. Vibes and strings are overly shrill; on the quartet sides, the excellent Pettiford bass solos especially lack presence. But I would guess the pressing is more at fault than Rudy, and these are not especially good surfaces. (Savoy LP MG 15034)

One of the most frequent questions received at the offices of music magazines and jazz disc jockeys goes something like this: "I am a high school (or college) student and am writing a paper (or thesis) on jazz. The list of books and articles on jazz that I can consult?"

Three Sections

The listing is divided into three sections—books on jazz (foreign as the most comprehensive one yet. Contained in a well-designed pamphlet called The Literature of Jazz, the list is available from the New York Public Library, 5th Ave. and 42nd St., New York City. The cost is $1, postage prepaid.

The Literature of Jazz has been compiled by Robert George Reisner, an art reference librarian by profession. Reisner is also curator and librarian of the Institute of Jazz. Studies whose executive director, Marshall Stearns, provided the introduction for the pamphlet. Another book tries to fill another long-term need, and doesn't succeed nearly so well. partly because the task is more difficult, and partly because the approach could have been wiser. The book is A Guide to Longplay Jazz Recordings by Frederic Ramsey, Jr. Published by Longplayer Publications, Inc., New York City, the book is available in a paper cover edition at $3.50 and in hard covers at $4.50.

The Guide does have a number of advantages. Ramsey has listed some 1,500 jazz LPs, a listing available nowhere else up to now. In addition to the usual index of artists, there's a valuable index of song titles so you can find out quickly how many different versions there are of a tune and by whom.

There is also an interesting sec-

Gumina Makes Sides On Own

Hollywood—Tommy Gumina, the Harry James accordion "discovery" who recently signed a three-year contract with Century Records, took the instrument into new fields on his first session here. He did a jazz album backed by a group that included Louie Bellson, drums; Tommy Todd, piano; Buddy Hayes, bass; and Johnny Callefie, guitar; and followed that with session in which he was supported by concertstyle unit including 12 strings, French horn, woodwinds, rhythm, and harp. Henry Russell conducted. It also marks first time on records for a new model accordion made especially for Gumina and containing a devise of his own invention which he says "gets away from the old-fashioned accordion sound."

provision can be made for regular supplements to keep the discogra-phy up to date. There is no indica-tion that Ramsey or his publisher phy up to date. There is no indication that Ramsey or his publisher plan this.

Second, there are a number of omissions that were available while the book was being compiled.

Third, I get little impression of there having been much thorough research into recording dates or personnels. I know from the problems Hannah Altbush and I have every two weeks in preparing Down Beat's jazz record reviews that this data can be obtained if you're stubborn and relentless enough. I doubt if Ramsey tried very hard in most cases.

The fact that Ramsey states in his preface that this is not intended to be a "definitive" discography doesn't excuse him for the scanty listings of personnel on so many of the LPs. It would have been much more valuable to have as full personnel as possible instead of Ramsey's opinions of the records and his essays on topics like "cool jazs" and "the Dixieland revival." I am glad, however, that he pointed up the important case of Bucklin Moon (Page 204).

Point Of Book

Point Of Book

This book apparently was designed to present a comprehensive listing of jazz on LP, not for more essays. And there are simply too many gaps in personnel and date listings to make this more than temporarily valuable as a guide. It will do until a better one comes along—and at least two long-term projects, Ramsey indicates in his brief bibliography, currently are being prepared by others.

It's too bad Ramsey haan't equaled here the standards of his previous excellent work in jaxx history and research.

The Blindfold Test
(Stredenist Reg. U.S. Pot. Off.)

Louis Still Lauds Guy, Digs Turk But Not Bird

In his first Blindfold Test (Down Beat, Aug. 11) Louis Armstrong praised records by Jelly Roll Morton and Duke Ellington, reacted mildly to Lee Brown, decided that Shorty Rogers and his ilk were ruining the music business, and allotted high ratings to sides by Roy Eldridge and Chet Baker.

The following comments, like those in the previous installment, were tape recorded and are quoted here verbatim. The Records

1. Clifferd Brown. Cherekee (Bien Neel).

Well, you know now, just like everybody digs me, I dig every body. That's the only way to keep it rolling; a matter of opinion. Well, I've heard trumpet solos from 1908 up to the present day—Herbert Clark and all those boys that really used to blow them horns and it sounds like it was recorded gesterday; now a solo such as that one you just played . . . well, my buddy Dizzy lives right around the corner—I think you ought to call him up and ask him about this one!

I don't know what they're play-ing. I to the present day—are and the corner—I think you ought to call him up and ask him about this one!

I don't know what they're playing . . It reminds me of a guy with a mouth full of hot rice; got is have hot lips to blow that stuff—like he put it to his lips then pulled away, a fever blister or sump'n . But if he'd put it right there and hold it there and let about four good notes come out, with a beautiful tone, it would be much nicer . .

Now you take my boy, Bobby Hackett—he puts my tune on a record—"Some Day da da da dumede". . Oh, just them few pretty notes! Worth just a whole of these hotmouth notes.

Rate this? Well, you've got to rate him—he's got nerve! If he sint in the hespital vet, with chop trouble! Just that friction of the mouthpiece—he can't keep that

4. Maynerd Forguson. Take the "A" Treis (Capitel).

The solo is good for the trumpet player, but he reminds me of a cat that's leaning on something. That's the kind of playing that sends you to the hospital; and I know that if he had to play right behind that a solo like my Dear Old Southland, I know they'd carry that poor sonof-a-gun out on a stretcher.

Any man in the section can do what he's doing—just put it up there and play any . . . thing that comes out. So it's not an outstanding solo, by no means. Two stars.

A guy plays a 13 chord, and you know ... well there ain't another thing he can put in there. And one of these ... will put one of them bad notes in there. The saxonhone player on this—nothing but variations!

I still don't know the name of the tune. The trumpet, muted or open, any way he played it, it would have been bad ... nothing but variations. Joe Oliver stopped me from doing that back when the red light district was closing down. When the law started clamping down on places like Pete Lala's, and they had to close at 12 o'clock on Saturday ... Joe'd come up and watch me play, and I was making all that kind of stuff just to warm up on a tune. I'd play about eight bars of lead, and then I'd wander off, and he'd say, listen, boy, you play some more lead!

Well, let's make 'em feel nice, 'cause they were very active ... Give 'em two stars.

When I was young and very green, I wrote that tune Sister Kate, and someone said that's fine, let me publish it for you, I'll give you 50 dollars. I didn't know nothing about papers and business, and I sold it outright.

But I just keep this within myself, and I still play it and enjoy it. And I like this—anything Dixieland you can put down five stars for me.

The family moved to Jersey City eight years later, and Roy found lots to interest him. He studied art and did well enough at it to get some of his work hung in galleries. He did some amateur boxing and munaged to win six while losing only one heavyweight bout. He even learned electronics well enough to hold down a job in a television factory.

The voice wasn't ever entirely neglected because in Jersey, as in Georgia, there was a church with a choir. Roy was featured with the one at Central Baptist church. Hymn singing wasn't his only musical interest, he developed a fancy repertoire of songs from the semiclassics, specializing in tunes from operettas, and he found time to gig around some neighborhood bistroa trying his talent as a pop singer. One such gig paid off.

The first step was an Epic record contract; the next a few hundred thousand copies of You'll Never Walk Alone.

Hamilton's "big" voice is something new to the blues field. Knocking out a concert artist's supply of octaves with a beat is a new kind of gimmick in this field. Aside from the inevitable recordwise, the next big thing for Hamilton is a star spot in the Rhythm and Blues Show which Gale is putting on the road this fall.

which Gale is putting on the road this fall.

Another star in that troupe, will be Faye Adams, who used to sing in Jersey choirs, too. Her latest, It Hurts Me to My Heart by Charlie Singleton, promises to move her onto the pop charts.

This arbitrary pop chart distinction, incidentally, is slipping away, it seems. Selling 800,000 copies of a record seems evidence of popularity, but the addition for an R&B tune that hits that mark is added on a different ledger. How much longer can such statements as "and here are the Crew Cuts with a 'pop' version of the rab' hit Sh-Boom" hang on, we wonder.

Gipsy Markoff Likes the Looks-Plus of Her New La Tosca

Gipsy Markoff and Gretsch-La Tosca

Courage is the added ingredient that makes beautiful, talented, internationally applauded Gipsy Markoff a VIP in everybody's book. The story of her triumph over disaster after her World War II plane crash is show-husiness history. We're proud that Gipsy plays and praises the new 70th Anniversary Gretsch—La Tosca accordion. Gipsy thinks her La Tosca to tops for the spotlight—in tone as well as appearance. "Vital that I have an accordion I can depend on," says Gipsy, "The La Tosca reputation and performance are so reassuring." Whatever your needs, there's a La Tosca to satisfy them, at a price you can afford. See your dealer or write us for details, on the luxurious new La Tosca line. Fred. Gretsch, Dept. Queen City Quips

Cincinnati—Two well-known country artists visited here during the last couple of weeks—Bill Carlisle and Arlie Duff. Bill said his group is working mostly on weekends, and he's catching up on his fishing on the days off. It was pleasant talking with Duff again. The former schoolteacher still is amazed that his first effort in songwriting, Y' All Come, was such a hit.

More ado about the 45 rpm situation. I talked to Murray Nash of Acuff-Rose Publications and Hickory records who are conducting a pool among disc jockeys and stations as to this situation.

Murray tells me that the boys want 78s or 45s. This stand will apply to both Hickory records and Acuff-Rose Publication disced on other labels and to this we say, "Amen."

The entire record industry could learn much from this venture, and we'd guess that this situation is going to do much toward furthering the friendly relations between Acuff-Rose and the nation's platter spinners. Acuff-Rose and Hickory records are going to be getting many spins on the nation's professional turntables. But I still want nine on 78 rpm.

Many years of participation in selle

Many years of participation in polls, from both the voting and tabulating ends, have made me cynical. Neither my own votes nor anyone else's can fail to be colored anyone else's can fail to be colored by the extent to which we have been exposed to this or that artist. The man you plump for after a few impressive hearings might have turned out to have lips of clay if you'd caught him on an off night. The man who's spent the past year buried in a traveling hand (Clark Terry Henry Color night the past year buried in a traveling band (Clark Terry, Henry Coker, acores more) is bound to suffer subjugation to one who has been on the N. Y. or L. A. scene making the N. Y, or L. A. scene making endless records.

Dept. of Amplification: Terry Pollard is the gal with Gibbs, and just as deserving of a vote on piano. Benny Powell and Wess are the boys with Basie (and I dig Bud Shank's flute, to boot). Collins is the cat with Nat (and there a real case of submersion for you). Since I find it hard to take male singers seriously in a jazz poll, I bow low to Mr. Kirby whose imitations of everyone from Armstrong to Hibeveryone from Armstrong to Hib bler attest to a rare talent.

In the absence of an arrangers' division, may I also use this space to pay homage to Messra. Ellington, Burns, Quincy Jones, and Shorty Rogers?

With the restrictions of not voting for last year's New Star winners, you're kind of limited. Virile as jazz is, it doesn't spawn new stars every 365 days.

I've tried to pick some different ones this time: Artie Shaw, for instance, just because he's so often overlooked and shouldn't be; Bob Manning, just because he's a good singer who isn't a jazz singer and we need more of his kind; Cal
Tjader because he's good; Bob Collins because he's wonderful, and Dick Collins because he plays the pretty stuff but does it with guta; Marion McPartland because she gets better all the time. But for pretty stuff but does it with guta; Marion McPartland because she gets better all the time. But for every New Star and old fave selection made, there are a baker's dozen left out who are just as qualified. How can you overlook Mongus and Pettiford. yet who can deny Ray Brown? That's why I think polls such as these, in essence, have less in them than meets the eye. Bill Grauer Jr.

Ella Fitzgerald (no choice).

This has been an exciting and interesting year for jazz, I think. I'm sure most of the others replying to this poll will be emphasizing the new "modern" movements, but some of them at least might agree with me that it's healthy for jazz as a whole that there are continuing aigns of the vitality and growth of groups playing in what is called either traditional, or New Orleans, or Dixieland styles. Bands like the Dixieland styles. Bands like the Dixieland Rhythm Kings, like Turk Murphy's, like a number of other groups in various parts of the country, are gaining increasing acceptance, are proving that the old music, the old beat—when it's played with skill and understanding—continues to contribute importantly to what is after all, one ing — continues to contribute importantly to what is, after all, one music: Jazz.

I have a certain amount of hesi I have a certain amount of heaitation in answering your poll. The French critic doesn't have at hand the elements that make for an objective judgment. Don't be astonished, therefore, if I omit answering most of the questions you pose: what "new star" in the bass or vibraphone divisions could I really vote for? Besides, certain instruments (the clarinet and the baritone saxophone) do not seem to be represented at present by soloists of a class equal to—in so far as their solo ability is concerned—the leading soloists in other categories. And even this way I run the risk of being very unjust by omitting musicians of the finest ability that I have not had the opportunity to hear in the best conditions. nity to hear in the best conditions.
My vote, therefore, can be to a vote, therefore, can have only sense of an indication.

It will be clear from my choices and the gaps among the New Stars that I have not been able to hear what many of the outstanding jazz musicians are doing lately. For that reason I am unable to include Coleman Hawkins, for instance, or Kid Ory, or any of the New Orleans combos that appealed to me a few years ago.

with the older forms of jazz than with recent experimentation. But I'd like to note that some more recent developments are beginning to seep through to me—which strikes me as perhaps an object lesson of sorts, indicating that, given enough time, even the most New Orleans-riented jazz lover will come to recognize and intelligently evaluate for himself the newer forms. He may not like them all—I know more about what I dislike in modern jazz than about them all—I know more about what I dislike in modern jazz than about what I like or am apt to get to like, but at least this is a step beyond the blank stare I gave in the recent past. I do at least know that Mulligan interests me, that many others annoy me, that I enjoy Erroll Garner and am impressed by an up-coming young pianist named Randy Weston I've heard recently. I still prefer Jelly Roll and early Louis and Ma Rainey, and prob-ably always will, but . . .

Fitzgerald (Mary Ann McCall).

When two editors of a Swediah jazz magazine get together to choose the musicians for your 1954 poll and come out with three of our own boys among the American stars, we feel it might be necessary with a small comment. Lare Gullin and Bengt Hallberg are of course well known from their records released in the States, and we simply haven't heard any other new stars on baritone and pians who can match these two. Sams goes for lesser known Putte Wickman, whose lovely sound and fresh ideas in our opinion puts him in a class above younger American clarinet players that we have heard in person or on records.

Selecting New Stars is hard for a European—that's why some of the gaps appear in my list. In two cases I solved the problem by naming musicians playing in Europe, Lars Gullin and British Jack Hawksworth (or Ted Heath's band), who should rate high in any poll.

Some of the New Stars selected aren't so new after all high videous profiles and the selected aren't so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are not so new after all high videous profiles are new after all high videous prof any poll.

Some of the New Stars selected aren't so new, after all—but I decided to include their names, anyway. because they are just now gaining wide recognition.

Tatum, Teagarden, and Cole (not to mention Louis) are old standbys, but their crowns still glitter—and deserve a shine.

I have too many favorites at this point, what with so many great trys blowing such fine stuff in various ways these days.

However, the list of new stars is much more selective, and, what's more, I think that it's important to encourage as many of those you feel deserve recognition as you can many list, therefore, is devoted to new stars, not all of them brand new, but all of them musicians who I think deserve even more recription than they have been getting.

Fitzgerald (Carmen MacRae).

The resurgence of Lester Young and Roy Eldridge was a highlight of the year, and so was the emergence of Bud Shank as an altoist of stature. Pianist John Lewis has a brilliant musical mind, bassist Max Bennett (with Sauter-Finegan) will be heard from a lot in years to come, and though Conte Candoli has been around awhile, he never has achieved the recognition that is his due. You wouldn't know Sonny Igoe as the same drummer that was with Woody Herman three years ago, so great has his improvement been. No choices in new star clarinetists or male singers simply because the field is too barren.

Here are some interesting side-lights on Down Beat's second an-nual Jazz Critics poll. Highest vote total went to Count Basie's band, which for the second Basie's band, which for the second consecutive year contributed the New Star tenor man in Frank Ween. Last time it was Paul Quinichette . . Critics expressed a marked disinterest in voting for persons in the New Star singers and clarinet sections, suggesting perhaps a paucity of talent in those fields . . The tie between Buddy DeFranco and Benny Goodman for the clarinet chair marked the first time this has occurred in the major divisions in two years. the major divisions in two years ow if someone could arrange a ayoff between them . . ! Though it doesn't sound logical, Though it doesn't sound logical, the person who probably will be most pleased at Art Tatum's piano win is Oscar Peterson, who took honors the last time around. Oscar's first words last year when he was notified of his victory were, "It should have been Art". Biggest upset victor title probably should go to guitarist Jimmy Raney, not nearly so well known as the other winners. Odd quirk about his win is that though both he and Tal Farlow came into prominence with Red Norvo's trio, Tal preceded him in the group and has been around longer. Yet Farlow is the New Star winner. One man the New Star winner... One man to obviously keep an eye on in the jazz drumming field is Art Blakey. Last year's New Star champ, he nearly unseated Buddy Rich this time in the major division.

Though some of the members of Newport's socialite families objected to the introduction of jazz to the town, others attended and listened with enthusiastic interest.

The representatives of the 400 and their friends were seated in front line boxes. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Louis P.
