Reggae Christmas curiosity

I'm probably not the only one who has asked about this, but I'm really curious about that reggae Christmas record you mentioned in your Letter From The Editor in the July 13, 2001, issue. Is it listed in the Goldmine Christmas Record Price Guide because it's a novelty item? Or is it worth some money, and if so, how much? I'd be interested in some catalog information on it as well. I'd like to see if I could chase that one down. Any help you could provide would be greatly appreciated. Thanks.

> - Pat Wong via e-mail

(Pat, the album is a hoot, that's for sure. It's called Reggae Christmas By The Joe Gibbs Family and was released in 1982 on Joe Gibbs Music 8077. It's worth $20 in near mint condition according to the Goldmine Christmas Record Price Guide by Tim Neely (available at our Web site, www.goldminemag.com, or by calling 1-800-258-0929). Not bad in my case for a $1 investment way back then. While not a particularly expensive record, it's depicted in the book in color because of its uniqueness. Some of the artists on the album are Sly & Robbie, Mighty Diamonds, Trinity, and Dennis Brown, among others. — Ed.}

Index to Goldmine articles?

I inquired two or three years ago about the creation of a Goldmine index. At that time there was a very simple listing of past issues, not too much in depth.

I see a need for record collectors and folks with many back issues (such as my 11 years' worth) to index. Would this be in your plans? If not, is it possible to grant permission for someone outside to complete the task and make it available? Thanks.

— Tim McDonnell via e-mail

[Tim, We actually have a detailed index for our entire history. The problem is we are waiting for our Web site update later this year which will, we hope, allow us to place it on our Web site. The index you were referring to in your letter was published in our 1998 Goldmine Annual (sorry, sold out) and basically contained a listing of cover stories, major features and columns up to 1997. Our associate editor Cathy Bernardy has been diligently updating our existing index in a more complete manner than what was previously published. We are hoping the index will be up and running on the site by the end of the year, but with anything computer-related, time frames for project completions usually become much longer than what anyone involved thought they would be. Just ask Bill Gates! - Ed.)

Don't trust reviewers?

In regards to the CD review of The Very Best Of Jethro Tull (Goldmine #547, July 13, 2001) - trust Michael Gallucci? You've got to be kidding. In all of our best interests, please quit sending him Tull discs to review. Thank you.

- Dok Webb via e-mail

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR Summer's here and the time is right...

Many of you reading this issue of Goldmine are reading Goldmine for the first time, as this issue is being handed out to attendees at the National Record Show™, cosponsored by Goldmine and The Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame in Cleveland.

For the information of those newcomers to Goldmine and any other recent readers, Goldmine has been published since 1974 and is the largest magazine for collectors of vintage records, collectible CDs and music memorabilia. The ads in this issue provide a good indictation of the type of material you have at your fingertips in each issue.

While we focus editorially a lot on rock. as with this issue on Queen, our coverage touches on every genre and era. For instance, this issue has a jazz column, which alternates every other issue with a country column.

We've recently covered artists as diverse as Bob Marley, John Lennon, Charley Pride, Fats Domino, The Cult, Richard Thompson, Muddy Waters, Dion, Humble Pie, Chrissie Hynde, Elvis Presley, and Vic Chesnutt.

review - Ed.)

Upcoming artists we will be featuring include Peter Noone of Herman's Hermits, Louis Armstrong, Prince, Stephen Stills, The Beatles, Poco, The Four Freshmen, INXS and many more.

Goldmine is a virtual musical smorgasbord, with coverage of popular and obscure artists with informative historical articles and current interviews. Plus, readers are able to purchase cool collectibles from these artists and thousands more from the reputable dealers and collectors who advertise every two weeks in our pages.

We hope that those of you attending the National Record Show are having a great time and will attend our event next year (Aug. 3-4, 2002). Summer's here, and the time is right to have a record show. Enjoy! - Greg Loescher

{Dok, we are hoping Chrysalis/Capitol won't release any more Best Of Tull packages in the future with the same material that's been on upteen reissues, which is the gist of Gallucci's

Original members the only real thing Just wanted to say that I agree with Greg Loescher regarding the original members of the classic groups, doo-wop or otherwise. No one wants to pay good money to see imposters, no matter how good they are. I have been bilked twice in the past when I went to see The "Marvelettes" in concert a few years back.

The first time, I was totally naive. I sat there saying to myself, "Well, if these women are the originals, they sure look good to say the least! Why is it, though, that none of them look familiar?" I thought that maybe it was my eyes at first, until, as the show went on and they introduced themselves, it became clear that they had never been original group members (or even replacements) and were probably in diapers when the original marvelous Marvelettes were belting out the hits that made them famous.

The next time I got taken was during a "Legends Of Motown" concert that I was sure wouldn't entertain bogus Marvelettes. After all, it was Motown, and I had seen this concert the previous year with The Four Tops, The Temptations, and Martha And The Vandellas, so I was sure that the lineup would contain some combination of Gladys Horton, Wanda Rodgers, Katherine Anderson, Anne Bogan, Georgia Dobbins, and/or Juanita Cowart, as Martha's Vandellas had included her and sister Lois (a verified Vandella) and that The Four Tops were all the originals minus the recently departed Lawrence Payson. Even the Temps had Otis Williams.

World Radio History

Wrong again. This time a totally different lineup of faux "Marvelettes" presented themselves and had the nerve to make statements such as "This was a hit for us in 1963," etc. Oh give me a break! These girls, while talented and capable, were not the real Marvelettes. It would have been fine if they were truthful and said that they were singing "in tribute" to The Marvelettes, but to claim they were the real thing was nothing but the lowest form of false advertising.

Yes, Mr. Robbins, the real artists do matter to the real fans. 1 for one would rather pay twice as much to see the original members (or even an original member with some stand-ins) entertain me than to watch people with no connection to the original group try to hoodwink the audience into thinking that it is getting the real thing.

You wouldn't pay good money to buy a brandname article only to find out you were getting a facsimile, would you? Then why does Robbins and his ilk think that fans want to pay to see people pretending to be who they are not? I was swindled twice, and it will not happen again.

Please let us know how we can support the people who are fighting against this type of consumer fraud. The original members do matter, and I for one am more willing to send my hard-earned bucks to EA.M.E. or some other organization that fights these liars than to spend another dime on falsely advertised musical groups.

> — Ralph Covino via e-mail

{In Wisconsin a few years ago, the state enacted a law that all frozen pizzas made with "faux" mozzarella cheese had to state so on the pizza packages' labels. Those manufacturers using real cheese were allowed to use a special logo that says "Real Cheese" on it. If it can be done with $4 frozen pizzas, it should be done with groups that people pay far more to see perform. To make a donation to F.A.M.E. (Friends Against Musical Exploitation), write to 154 Endicott Ave., Revere MA 02151; www.fameartists.com. - Ed.}

Jerry Lee Lewis a no-show at faux concert

Last year, Jerry Lee Lewis was headlining an "oldies" concert in Elizabeth, Colo., at Fiddler's Green with the fake Lovin' Spoonful (no John Sebastian after all), the fake Animals (with the real Eric Burdon), the fake Jefferson Airplane (some girl singing Grace Slick and no doubt "doing" Marty Balin - if you saw the VH-1 special, you know why I included that) and the fake Paul Revere & The Raiders (at least Revere was real, though he didn't actually seem to do much more than tell off-color stories).

After suffering through all the fakes, the announcer came out and informed us that Lewis had not been able to get a plane out of wherever he lives (too much alcohol perhaps?) — one has to assume that they knew much earlier that he wasn't coming. Sheesh. No refund was offered, but hey, we did at least get to hear Revere play his biggest hit - "We're An American Band!" (Maybe I'm getting too old for rock 'n' roll).

– George Krieger Elizabeth CO

{What, I thought Revere's biggest hit was "Stairway To Heaven!" — Ed.)

No statute of limitations on truth

I read with interest Peter Gutmann's Classical Notes columns about the Johnnie Johnson copyright case with Chuck Berry. I think Johnson's reasons for not coming forward sooner are irrelevant, and the only thing that matters is did he cowrite those songs (and can he prove it)? There should be no statute of limitations on truth.

The article in the June 29, 2001, issue (Goldmine #546) stated that Johnson's attorneys know of no other case where the plaintiff waited that many years before coming forward, but there is such a case: the 1994 court settlement that awarded Mike Love cosongwriting credit on 39 Beach Boys tunes (which were about 30 years old) and several millions of dollars. There's an eyewitness account of the court proceedings on the Web

Bobby Rush lights up the W.C. Handy Awards ceremonies.

Blues greats pick up their Handy Awards in Memphis

MEMPHIS — Unlike the Oscars, Emmys, and Grammys, there's no handicapping the winners of the W.C. Handy Awards.

The 22nd annual presentation of the coveted blues statues, held May 24, 2001, at the opulent Orpheum Theatre in Memphis, honored the idiom's veteran luminaries as well as its younger generation. B.B. King was named Blues Entertainer Of The Year in absentia (his underwhelming collaboration with Eric Clapton, Riding With The King, was dubbed Contemporary Blues Album Of The Year). Little Milton (on hand as both presenter and winner) was elected Male Soul/Blues Artist Of The Year (Etta James, his victorious female counterpart in the same category, was also absent), and the year's Traditional Blues Artists were harpist James Cotton and Chicago queen Koko Taylor (both absentees; it was Taylor's 21st Handy). Young belter Shemekia Copeland, away on tour, was another big winner - her Alligator CD Wicked was voted Blues Album Of The Year and she was also elected Contemporary Blues Female Artist. The North Mississippi All-Stars were deemed Best New Artists for their debut set, Shake Hands With Shorty.

Videotaped for national airing on public TV, this edition of the Handys may well have been the best yet. Laconic host Mac "Dr. John" Rebennack immersed his concise introductions in cool swamp lingo, and the musical content was an improvement on past years.

Texas great Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown and his swinging combo opened with the flinty blues "The Drifter" and a torrid "Honey Boy," Brown alternating between guitar and fiddle. Pianist Henry Butler and guitarist Corey Harris offered acoustic duets with a prewar flavor. Harpist Kim Wilson and perenoial pianist-of-the-year Pinetop Perkins sparkled within the 2001 Handy All Star Band. Southpaw Chicago guitarist Eddy Clearwater — resplendent in a turquoise suit — celebrated his win as Male Contemporary Blues Artist with the Chuck Berry-style rocker "I Wouldn't Lay My Guitar Down." Taj Mahal And His Phantom Blues Band parlayed their victory as Blues Band Of The Year into a rousing set.

Most heartening of all was Bobby Rush's bawdy segment. Though a recent wreck totaled his tour bus, killed one of his dancers and left him hobbled, Rush overcame the tragedy with an incendiary set mixing steamy funk with tough blues that gave no hint of his injuries.

But it wouldn't be the down-home Handys without a glitch or two. A heads-up to presenters that guitarist Mel Brown wouldn't be picking up his award for Comeback Blues Album could have saved several awkward minutes waiting for him to show up. More embarrassing was Chicago guitarist Son Seals' disappearance before his name was called as Traditional Blues Album winner; he was reportedly in the bathroom.

The fragility of the genre's elders was underscored by 86-year-old Robert Lockwood Jr.'s sly "What took you so damn long?" comment to Handy voters after his Telarc CD Delta Crossroads was named Acoustic Blues Album Of The Year. After presenters Rufus Thomas and Ruth Brown fought their way through some scripted repartee and were greeted by the equally canepropelled Dr. John, Thomas observed, "You ever see anything like this? Three people on three crutches!"

Beale Street and surrounding Memphis nightspots were hopping all weekend. Among the highlights: slide guitarist Freddie Roulette (three gigs at three clubs), Chicago saxman Eddie Shaw at King's Palace, Levon Helm & The Barnburners at B.B. King's, a Vanguard Records showcase for Lee Roy Parnell at the Gibson Cafe and the sweet soul of The Masqueraders at Blues City.

DVDs available now: New DVDs from Image Entertainment include hard-rocker Joan Jett And The Blackhearts Livel, with two bonus tracks and the band's take on the Tommy James & The Shondells classic "Crimson And Clover," as well as many of their own hits, such as "Bad Reputation" and "I Love Rock 'N' Roll"; The Jazz Channel Presents B.B. King is a 15-track concert including King standards such as "The Thrill Is Gone" and "Let The Good Times Roll," plus an interview; Louis Prima. The Wildest is a nostalgic look at one of the most original performers ever. Prima kicks on "Just A Gigilo," "That Old Black Magic" and "Jump, Jive An' Wail," with music scenes from New Orleans, New York and early Las Vegas.

On the bookshelf: Asia: The Heat Goes On by longtime Asia fan David Gallant is a band-authorized biography available through the band's Web site at www.asiaworld.com... The two newest reference works from Joel Whitburn's Record Research are Joel Whitburn's 2000 Billboard Music Yearbook, which has chart information on 10 Billboard charts plus Pop and Country annual ranking sections, and Joel Whithurn Presents Billboard Top 10 Singles Charts 1955-2000, which draws from each weekly Top 10 list from 1955 through 1958 and then the Hot 100 list, with listings of the weekly Top 10 from the Pop chart since its Aug. 4, 1958, debut on up through the end of 2000.

National Record Show M update: Goldmine's National Record Show at Cleveland's Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame Aug. 4-5 includes an outdoor acoustic concert with Ohio's own legendary psych wizard, Poobah. Poobah has been touring and recording since 1972, with Let Me In, their 1972 debut, valued at $600 in the Goldmine Standard Catalog Of American Records, 1950-1975 The band's newest album, Furious Love (Monsterrecords.com), contains the incendiary picking pyrotechnics of guitarist Jim Gustafson. The concert will start 1/2 hour prior to the Halls 10 a.m. opening on Aug. 4. Admission to the National Record Show is free: Rock Hall admission is extra. The National Record Show features many of the nation's top dealers and Goldming advertisers. Current temporary displays at the Rock Hall during the show include the John Lennon exhibit on loan from Yoko Ono, a Jimi Hendrix exhibit with live footage aired continually and Stuart Sutcliffe: From The Surfer magazine's 40th anniversary: In honor of the 40th anniversary of Surfer magazine, The Right Stuil/EMI has released in conjunction with the magazine, The Perfect Day: Music From 40 Years Of Surfer Magazine, a 17-track enhanced CD with surfing footage and Web links. The CD project was done in conjunction with the release of 40 Years Of Surfer Magazine, Chronicle Books' coffee-table tome about the venerable magazine. The CD tracks, which were handpicked - some from surfer movie soundtracks - by Surfer's editors and writers, range from classics such as The Beach Boys' "Surfin' USA," The Ventures' "Hawaii Five-O" and Jan & Dean's 'Ride The Wild Surf," to lesserknown surf tributes such as Robin Trower's Day Of The Eagle," San Diego's Sprung Monkey's "Bleeding" and The B-52's' "Rock Lobster." Pairing a surf music old-timer with a modern guitar superstar, Dick Dale and Stevic Ray Vaughan duel on "Pipeline." A limited edition "wet suit" version, packaged in a sea water-fulled slipcase, is sure to be a collector's item.

Odds and ends: The Louis Armstrong Centennial Celebration is taking place Aug. 2-5, 2001, at the University Of New Orleans and throughout the city, especially in the French Quarter. Walking tours of Armstrong's New Orleans, many concerts throughout the city, a club crawl, numerous educational jazz programs and conferences, parades, a Sunday-morning jazz Mass and even jazz-related activities for children are all on the docket (www.satchmo.com) . Queen is scheduled to add their star to Hollywoods Walk Of Fame sometime in the near future ... Two airports have been renamed to honor famous recording attists. Starting in August New Orleans will rename its airport Louis Armstrong New Orleans International Airport while further on down the (Penny) lane, in spring of 2002 Liverpool, England, will be officially cailing its new airport Liverpool John Lennon Airport. Scuse me while I kiss the sky.

Vocal Group Hall Of Fame gears up for Sept. 13 inductions

SHARON, Pa. — Fans of doo-wop and vocal groups are invited to attend The Vocal Group Hall Of Fame's Class Of 2001 inductions Sept. 13, 2001, at The Vocal Group Hall Of Fame And Museum in downtown Sharon, Pa. Goldmine readers voted for the new inductees last January with an official ballot inserted into the magazine.

As with last year's inductions, co-emcees will again be Jay Warner, president of National League Publishing and author of Just Walkin' In The Rain (see review on page 98) and Mary Wilson, one of the original Supremes, who were inducted into The Vocal Group Hall Of Fame in 1998, the first year of inductions.

At press time, 11 of the 14 groups to be inducted have confirmed their attendance to pick up their Harmy awards at the induction ceremonies, including The Pied Pipers (no

At press time, 16 groups with original members are scheduled to perform, including the Oak Ridge Boys, The Lettermen, The Memories, The Four Dots, The Marcels, The Orioles, and many more. The concert will be taped to appear on PBS at a later date.

"We are really surprised and pleased by the number of advance tickets we have sold already to the concert and inductions," said Tiffany Frank," executive director of the nonprofit Vocal Group Hall Of Fame. "Our event last year was very special and a lot of fun, and we are looking forward to the bigger and better September induction week coming up. Most exciting is the number of original members from the Class Of 2001 inductees already committed to coming to the event. It's going to be a very special time."

The Vocal Group Hall Of Fame And Museum Foundation is a nonprofit organization that depends solely on private and public donations and grants to run its museum and programs. For more information in general on the Hall, go to www.vocal halloffame.com.

Tickets for just the golf outing are $80 and for just the dinner are $50.

On Saturday, Sept. 15, the Keystone Record Collectors and Goldmine will be sponsoring a record show right in the Hall's museum. The reduced admission of $5 to the Hall that day includes admission to the record show. The Hall has displays representing more than 92 vocal groups.

sylvania, but many of its members and dealers expressed interest in seeing the inductions and the museum, thus the pilgrimage to the other side of the state (Sharon is located about an hour northwest of Pittsburgh, near Youngstown, Ohio). According to Phil Schwartz, an officer of the club, dealers will be heavily stocking their inventory for the record show with doo-wop and vocal group recordings. Dealers interested in setting up at the show should call 717-898-1246.

Hours the museum is open to the public during the induction week are Sept. 12 (Wednesday), 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sept. 13 (Thursday), 5 p.m. to midnight; Sept. 14, (Friday) 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sept. 15 (Saturday), 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The only change in regular museum hours is Thursday, Sept. 13. ### Elvis Sun 78 for $10, Vogue picture disc for 10 cents

My best find is an Elvis 45 on the Sun label. Being new to the hobby, I am still naive enough to believe that what I find at a flea market for a dollar has got to be the real thing, otherwise why would anyone go to the trouble and expense of counterfeiting a record that eventually sells for such a small sum?

After talking to a few collectors about my "find," it is apparent that a number of counterfeits do exist, for whatever reason. My "find" was not only a Sun Elvis, but an EP as well (not listed, but 1 had hopes). Additionally, it had a cardboard picture sleeve (similar to the first RCAs), which 1 came to find out was also never produced by Sun.

I am now resigned to the fact that I have a counterfeit of a record and picture sleeve that was never produced in the first place, but for a dollar, I at least have a good conversation piece.

As a sidelight, about a month earlier, I did buy an Elvis 78 on the Sun label that is excellent condition. It is Sun #210. I bought it at another flea market in close proximity to the one where I purchased the fake 45. The dealer knew he had something special, because instead of the $1 he was charging for the other 78s, he had placed a $10 price tag on this one. Also, he had it set aside under the counter for a regular customer of his, who had not shown up for a while to check the dealer's inventory. I suggested that he may never show up again and volunteered to pay his price if he would sell it to me. He agreed. In my two years of looking, this is the highest price I have paid for a record. I hesitate to pay collector prices, because I am still not that knowledgeable about the hobby.

As another sidelight, I recently bought a number of promotional 78s from the son of an old DJ who was tired of storing them. He had advertised them in one of the local throw-away newspapers. We agreed on a price of 10 for a dollar, and after lugging them home, I discovered a Vogue picture disc was part of the lot — a Vogue for 10 cents.

Flea markets, estate sales and garage sales are my main sources of finds, and it is surprising to me the number of records that are still out there. They sure made a bunch of them.

I really enjoy the chase, and judging by the results of my finds so far, I expect my perseverence will eventually be rewarded with a real Elvis 45 on the Sun label. It's just a matter of time.

— Jerry Kowalchik Friendswood TX

[Jerry, you certainly are living proof that there are still cool items out there that can be purchased cheaply if you are patient and dig around. Too bad about the bogus Sun 45, but wow, a Vogue usually starts at $40-$50 in near mint condition and that Sun #210, ("Good Rockin' Tonight") can fetch several hundred dollars depending on condition. Not too shabby. — Ed.]

Compiling an imaginary "ultimate boxed set" Interview with Brian May by Dave Thompson

It's the stuff that extraordinarily perverse dreams are made of. In late 1974, Sparks were the biggest band in Britain. Two albums and four singles had, in just eight months, catapulted them from the ranks of underachieving also-rans in their homeland to demigod-like household names in Europe. Frontman Russell Mael and his Charlie Chaplin-esque brother Ron were the most distinctive faces in rock, and they stared out from every magazine cover on the shelves. Russell's voice, too, was unmistakable, an effortless falsetto that rattled off Ron's quirky, breakneck lyrics with a style and grace that was unique.

There was only one shadow on the duo's horizon — they had just dismissed their guitarist. So, they did what any self-respecting superstars would do and began casting around for a suitable replacement. Someone well-known, somebody respected but somebody whose career was maybe on a distinct downward spiral. Somebody, the Californians decided, like Brian May.

It was the ideal solution. At that moment in time, there were just three guitarists in Britain who mattered — Mick Ronson, the arachnoid lieutenant to David Bowie's cosmic cowboy; Ariel Bender, the man who put the "heh" in Mott The Hoople; and Brian May, the wideboy foil to Freddie Mercury's epee, five-foot something of perma-perm style and glowering good looks, with a guitar sound that could make your heart race.

But his band, Queen, had shot their bolt. The press despised them — George Tremlett, author of the first-ever Queen biography, 1976's oddly titled Queen, reflected on the band's early years by remarking upon their "total rejection by the critics." Band publicist Tony Brainsby remembered being told by one heavyweight rock journalist that "he wasn't going to write about a load of poofters." Another paper even came up with a new category to lump them into: "supermarket rock." Nobody, the Maels determined, could be happy trying to operate in that kind of environment. So they popped 'round to visit him.

It must have been a tempting offer. "I did like the band," May reflected. "I loved 'This Town Ain't Big Enough For The Both Of Us.' Anyway, they came 'round, the two brothers, and said, 'Look, it's pretty obvious that Queen are washed up. We'd like to offer you a position in our band, if you want.' I said, 'Well, I don't think we're quite dead yet." And today — does he have any regrets? "No, not a lot."

The Queen story is, of course, a saga of supreme persistence. Perpetual critical disdain and the occasional commercial blip of course, are only to be expected in any band's life. Devastating illness and tragic death, on the other hand, are mercifully visited only on a handful. Aug. 9 marks the 15th anniversary of the last concert Queen ever played before Mercury's fading health nudged him into semi-seclusion; Nov 24 marks the 10th anniversary of his death, aged 45, from AIDS-related complications. That same week, six years will have passed since the release of the last "new" Queen album, Made In Heaven.

But the band's profile remains sky-high. Over the last decade, two compilations, one live album and a small fortune's worth of reissues and remixes have gone some way toward satisfying the demand for fresh product; a wealth of collaborations and solo projects have ensured the band and bandmembers remain firmly in the public eye, and the rumor mill seems to spend half its time conjuring up new possibilities for the musicians' future: They're working on a live anthology, they're re-re-(re-re-) mastering the back catalog once again; they're re-forming with George Michael/Trent Reznor/Robbie Williams/Kid Rock... OK, maybe not Kid Rock. Oh, and they're scooping up outtakes for a forthcoming box set to be comprised exclusively of unreleased material. May cast a weary eye over them all, but one out of four ain't bad.

The rarities box set is definitely happening and, though he cannot say when it'll be ready or even what will be on it, he does admit that "trawling the archive for any odd things that might be lying around" is only one of any number of approaches that can be taken toward what is, after all, one of the most significant canons in rock history.

"The regular back catalog is already out there. Hollywood Records have done a fantastic job in the States with it," May told Goldmine. "Tm amazed, really, all the more so since Capitol failed so hugely with it when we were signed with them a while ago. I think the difference was, Hollywood are rather intelligent and don't make a huge hoohah and get on with the job and do it pretty well. So that's taken care of."

Looking around at the mountain of material that comprises Queen's non-album output, however, there is certainly room for improvement, consolidation and even explanation. What was the thinking behind all those 1991 remixes? Why does the sound break up at the end of "Lap Of The Gods (Revisited)"? And whose great idea was it to team up with Williams? Adding yet another spoke to the already bristling wheel of wishful thinking that periodically rolls through Queendom, May agreed to pretend that the band's next project will be to round up all these funny little bits and pieces and give the entire ouvre a facelift. What would comprise the ultimate Queen collection?

Disc one — The best of

Despite signing a high-profile production deal in 1972, Queen were forced to wait close to 18 months before their debut album was released and six months more before they made their all important breakthrough with the hit "Seven Seas Of Rhye."

"It was frustrating," May reflected, "because we were already... there was no such thing as glam rock back then. We were just a band who liked theatrics. We thought of ourselves as a kind of Led Zeppelin who enjoyed dressing up. By the time things started happening, though, people like Sweet and Slade, great pop groups who were also dressing up, were huge, and what we originally thought of as a very original approach was suddenly the latest fashion."

It was not a role that the band relished. "Fashion, movements — really don't matter when you're a band. All you care about is what's inside you, and you really don't want to be fit into somebody's box. I'd much rather spend time finding out what the differences are between people than looking for the similarities."

Not that Queen made any conscious efforts to shake off the unwanted baggage — "mainly because we were much too arrogant and pig-headed to care." Indeed, the sophisticated decadence of 1974's Sheer Heart Attack album (and, in particular, the "Killer Queen" single) so effortlessly fit the mood of the time that even today the song is a deathless regular in glam revivalist circles. But May is equally adamant that that, too, was utterly unpremeditated.

"We just did what we thought was worthwhile; there really was a terrible arrogance about us! But what that really means is, you're creating from the inside rather than from an opinion poll. We never considered what people were saying as a guide to what we were doing. It doesn't mean we didn't care about our audience, because we cared deeply about them. But caring about your audience doesn't mean doing what they want you to do. It means treating yourself properly as an artist, so you are worthy of people's support. And if you're acting with integrity within yourself, your audience will understand that."

That integrity took the band down some remarkable roads, of course — "Bohemian Rhapsody" is merely the tip of an iceberg of almost Brobdingagian creativity, audacity and, as May insisted, arrogance; you can stop off on any one of their albums to touch similarly scintillating heights.

Hollywood has already gifted fans with an album highlighting the heavier side of the band, the Queen Rocks compilation of skullcrushing riffs and tormented guitar solos (oh, and "Fat Bottomed Girls"), a set that May said he admires for the inclusion, for the first time on a Queen compilation, of "Tie Your Mother Down."

"That really should have been included on the original Greatest Hits album, and it wasn't because we were very rigid and pedantic about the contents. We said, 'It's got to be Top 30 and that's it,' and because 'Tie Your Mother Down' only got to #32, we couldn't put it on. Probably a bad idea."

Queen Rocks did well — #7 in the U.K. in 1997. {It didn't chart in the U.S. — Ed.} But a companion piece dwelling on operatics and conceits would be equally spellbinding — particularly as it's there, May acknowledged, that the group's sense of mischief really came into play.

For years, audiophiles have flinched through the closing moments of Sheer Heart Attack, as the soaring chorale majesty of the anthemic "Lap Of The Gods (Revisited)" builds to a massive finale and a heart-stopping explosion... only for the sound quality to simply crumble, the impact of the blast tearing the speakers (and the fidelity of the moment) to tattered ribbons. A faulty pressing? Faulty remastering? Cheap tapes? "No," May said, laughing. "The explosion's meant to break up. It's totally intentional. We said, 'The explosion will be too big for the studio, so tape saturation will be a part of the sound.'" What if the end result sends purchasers scampering to upgrade their album at every opportunity, hoping that some day a remaster will appear that doesn't sound like the woofer's gone tweet? "Sorry."

Another song wedged in the guitarist's heart is "We Will Rock You," recently revived for the opening to the movie The Knight's Tale and continuing to impress by its very ubiquity. (Plus this latest pressing sounds fabulous, with percussion that literally leaps out and slaps you.) Then there's "Flash." Perhaps the quintessential Queen single, the song certainly is one of their finest achievements of the 1980s — and, with all that in mind, astonishingly the closest a major hit has ever come to rotting on a shelf somewhere.

It was written, of course, for the soundtrack to Dino De Laurentis' Flash Gordon movie, but the director himself was dead set against having a pop group score his baby, as May recalled. "Really there had never been a rock soundtrack to a movie that wasn't about rock music before. Up to that point, it was considered impossible. Even Mr. De Laurentis said it'd never work. It was Mike Hodges. the producer, who brought us in to the project, and I think there was a fundamental gap between his view of the film and Mr. De Laurentis'. Mike Hodges really made it into a cult film by being very self-consciously kitsch, whereas Dino regarded it as an epic and not to be messed with. I'll never forget: He came to the studio, sat down and listened to our first demos and said, 'I think it's quite good, but the theme will not work in my movie. It is not right.' And Mike walked over and said, "A chat with you, Dino. You don't understand where this film is going to be pitched ....' But I had a really nasty moment there, 'Oh no, he hates my "Flash"... aaaahhaaaaaahhh, and it's going to go on the cutting room floor.'"

But if May does have an all-time favorite Queen song — at least during the 30-second pause that followed the question — it's "The Show Must Go On."

Taken from the group's 1991 album Innuendo, "The Show Must Go On" was released as a single in October 1991, an epic production that, at the time of its release, was regarded simply as that — an epic production, a typically grandiose Queen pronouncement, albeit one of their most memorably stirring efforts in years. It entered the U.K. chart on Oct. 26, meandering casually up to a #16 peak — and then Freddie Mercury died, and suddenly the song's imagery — "a clown at the end of his career, standing there with his makeup running," as May put it took on an entirely new meaning and one that very few people had even imagined.

Tabloid tittle-tattle notwithstanding, nobody outside of Queen's innermost sanctum even knew he was ill until Mercury himself issued a press statement acknowledging he had contracted the HIV virus. Nobody had the opportunity to speculate upon how serious it was because, within 24 hours, he was dead. Just like that. The show would not be going on, after all.

"It was strange, because none of us really thought he would die," May reflected. "It was unthinkable, although obviously you have the possibility in the back of your head 24 hours a day. It's the most unreal thing to go through with somebody you've been that close with for that long. Having 'The Show Must Go On' out as a single at that time, it was very bizarre, because the way the song came about in the first place was strange.

"For some reason, John and Freddie and Roger had been playing around with things in the studio and I heard one of the sequences they had come up with, and I could just hear the whole thing descending from the skies... almost in the form, sound-wise, that it ended up. It's something that came as a gift from heaven, I suppose. I did some demos, chopped things up, did some singing demos and some guitar and got it to a point where I could play it to the guys, and they all thought it was something worth pursuing.

"Then Freddie and I sat down, and I got out my scribblings and said, 'What do you think of all this?' It was a very strange and memorable moment really, because what I'd done was come up with something which I thought was the world viewed through his eyes. We didn't talk about it as such. We talked about in terms of the story ... it was very poignant at the time, but strangely, not precious in any sense. It was just a song and we just loved the idea of it. I was very pleased with the way it came out, especially the way Freddie pushed his voice to ridiculous heights. Some of that stuff I mapped out in falsetto for him, and I remember saying, 'I really don't know if this is asking way too much...' and he went, 'Oh darling, not a problem. I'll have a couple of vodkas then go ahead and do it.' And he did."

Discs two/three — Extended versions and B-sides

Albums were Queen's forte; singles were an enjoyable highlight, and B-sides, said May, "were a nice way to deliver stuff to the fans who like to hear everything, without having to say, 'Look, this is what we're all about,' when it isn't. They're a lost art now. It doesn't apply anymore. But at the time, Bsides had a validity all of their own."

That said, Queen did not deliver much in the way of exclusive B-sides. The 1970s saw just one non-album song make it onto wax; the 1980s a somewhat healthier but still skimpy eight. But there was another CDand-one-half's worth of non-LP 12-inch mixes, extended and alternate versions flooding out of the studio, some of which were solidly excellent reinterpretations of the songs in question. The band also rustled up a special Christmas single, 1984's "Thank God It's Christmas," for which May continues to profess "a deep affection." Few of these performances, however, would ever be considered among anybody's favorite Queen songs, with their general non-appearance among the bonus tracks on the Hollywood reissues prompting only a modicum of outraged handwringing.

More than one vision of Brian May.

One cut does stand head and shoulders over the remainder of Queen's non-album catalog, though. Indeed, "See What A Fool I've Been," the B-side of "Seven Seas Of Rhye," is significant not only because, as May said. "It was a little bit out of the scope of our main thrust," but also because "It really represented us on stage in the early days, doing bluesy things, which was a lot of fun." He continued, "From the beginning, we knew fairly clearly what our direction was, although it was argued about all the time. We always went for the maximum color and experiment and scope and breadth, and things like 'See What A Fool' didn't really belong in that.

"In fact, it was an adaptation of an existing blues standard --- you're going to ask me which one, and I don't know! I heard it on a TV broadcast. It was one of those things where... I remember hearing how The Beatles heard 'Apache' on the radio and wanted to do a version of it, but they weren't able to remember it properly so they put together an instrumental which became 'Cry For A Shadow.' It was the same sort of thing. I heard this song once on a TV program and remembered about a third of it and put together something which, in my mind, is the same thing. And I don't know how much accurately I did it because I still haven't found the original! It's funny. We were actually looking a few weeks ago to see if we could discover what the song was and who the original author was. I'd love to find out, because I'd like to pay the guy!"

Disc four — The remixes

Remixes are a tricky subject. They are, of course, de rigeur today, not only for those boldly thrusting new popsters who are seeking dance floor notoriety, but also among the older pack as well. Indeed, there's something about a classic-rock back catalog that artists and record companies alike simply cannot resist tinkering with, parceling out the greatest bits to whomever might be the flavor of the month and having them "update" them in the quest for a new generation of listeners.

And so it proved with Queen. In 1991, at the dawn of the band's relationship with the Hollywood label, their entire album catalog was reissued with fine remastering and occasional bonus tracks. But what oddities those bonuses were — alongside the occasional genuine archive find (a lost retake of "Keep Yourself Ahve" and the unreleased "Mad The Swine," both appended to the band's first album), lost B-side ("See What A Fool I've Been," incongruously plopped at the end of Queen II) and sundry 12-inch singles (it's what the 1980s were for), another album's worth of material was created then divided between the reissues via "1991 remixes."

The response from the fan base was predictable and justifiable disappointment. Even after a decade in which further remixes ("Another One Bites The Dust" shot up for the Small Soldiers soundtrack and "Stone Cold Crazy" dehumanized by Trent Reznor on a promo single) have more or less desensitized us to further such indignities, the 1991 visitations have few close friends. The band themselves, however, can be counted among them.

It was, said May, a group decision to go this route. "We contacted different people [and asked], 'Would you like to have a go at not a question worth asking. They were just something? What would you like to have a go at?' It was very informal. We'd suggest things. They'd suggest things back. As for why we did it, I think it's a good idea not to be too precious about things, and it was a good idea to give people who were state of the art at the time, producing and mixingwise, the chance to fiddle around and see what they came up with — to give it a little bit of a modern age. I think they were actually quite a good foil — they're something you don't have to listen to if you don't want to but are some interesting little escapades."

Neither is May swayed by the argument that one of the things that makes "classic" rock classic is the fact that it doesn't actually need a modern edge, that every possible component is already in place and mere exposure alone will bring new fans running.

"It wasn't a question of 'need' — it was a question of giving a little bonus, with the hope that some of those things might give a new angle to the songs, make people think of them in a slightly different way. Plus, one of the things we've always enjoyed is interaction, and the remixes were a way of interacting with some of the modern producers."

Mike Wagener, John Luongo/Gary Hellman, the RAK production company, and Jack Benson were among those charged with the task — May admitted, "I've forgotten all their names now. But certainly Rick Rubin [whose own chosen credit for "We Will Rock You" was "ruined by..."] was a worthy adversary, a very creative guy. I visited a lot of these people while they were doing their remixes, and it was really interesting just to see what they picked up on. Whether the new versions were improvements — that's not a question worth asking. They were just ### different and that's it."

Disc five — The collaborations

One of the least-documented areas of collecting concerns the band members' multitudinous collaborations with outside performers. As early as 1972, Roger Taylor was active outside of the family, when he performed on several tracks on the latest album by Al Stewart (then signed to the same production company as the band, Trident), Past, Present And Future.

Since that time, Taylor and May have proven extraordinarily prolific guests; Mercury and John Deacon somewhat less so. All, however, have played their part in some historic --- or, at least, highly sought-after --creations, beginning in August 1975, when the entire group descended to produce a session by orange-haired British soul band Trax. Nothing from this collusion was ever released, although that same month saw Mercury officially inaugurate Queen Productions Ltd. by producing the "Man From Manhattan" 45 for singer Eddie Howell (Mercury also supplies piano; Brian May adds some characteristic guitar). Both of these sessions, incidentally, took place at Trident, where the band were recording A Night At The Opera. People looking for the song today need look no further than the 10-CD, two-DVD U.K. Mercury solo boxed set.

The following year, during some downtime on the U.S. leg of their latest world tour, Mercury, May, and Taylor dropped by Electric Lady studios in New York to visit Ian Hunter — Hunter's old band, Mott The Hoople, of course, had given Queen invaluable aid in the early days, recruiting them to open their 1973 U.K. and 1974 U.S. tours. (Queen's "Now I'm Here," with its line about "down in the city, just the Hoople and me," remembers this memorable pairing.) The trio can be heard all over "You Nearly Did Me In," a cut from Hunter's All American Alien Boy album.

One of the most legendary of all Queen guest shots took place in 1983, when Mercury joined forces with Michael Jackson to record at Jackson's home studio. The pair recorded two songs together, "Victory" and "State Of Shock," but when the latter track made its public debut, it was Mick Jagger who took the co-lead vocal, with Mercury nowhere in sight. Mercury, apparently, had offended Jackson backstage at a Queen show soon after the original session, prompting Jackson not only to shelve the original tapes, but to abandon "Victory" altogether — the song titles The Jacksons' 1984 reunion album, but the song itself remains unreleased.

Mercury made only a handful of outside appearances; Deacon's extracurricular activities are even more minimal, although the hyper-funky "Picking Up Sounds," recorded with guitarist Robert Ahwai for release in 1983 under the pseudonym Man Friday & live Junior, is an excellent reminder that Deacon was the brain behind "Another One Bites The Dust." Three years later, this duo then reconvened as The Immortals, adding vocalist Lenny Zakatek to record three tracks for the soundtrack to the movie Biggles: Adventures In Time, a truly rip-roaring adaptation of the aviation stories of Captain WE Johns, which quite criminally failed to become one of the biggest movies of the year - it was certainly one of the best. Only one

Of all the band members, Taylor is the most prolific — one could make a magnificent box set from his outside work alone, its contents ranging from the 1975 session with Fox that produced the favorite "Survival," through dalliances with comedian Mel Smith and actor Jimmy Nail, hit singles with Gary Numan and Fergal Sharkey, and even a series of performances with Kansas during 1981/82. (He is heard but uncredited on the Vinyl Confessions album.)

May runs Taylor a close second in terms of outside activity, again with a stunningly diverse host of credits to his name, ranging from a 1979 session with British skiffle legend Lonnie Donegan, at which the stillunreleased "Rolling Stone" was cut (alongside a new version of Donegan's "Digging My Potatoes"), to an appearance on Fuzzbox's 1989 single "Self." Other notable appearances have included recordings with Judy Tzuke, Meat Loaf, Cozy Powell, Holly Johnson, Steve Howe, and Black Sabbath, while he also scored a U.K. #1 as producer of TV

Video review

FREDDIE MERCURY The Video Collection Hollywood (HR690089)

This 11-track collection brings together Freddie Mercury's solo videos, capturing Queen's charismatic singer at his over-the-top best.

The most restrained tracks are those from Mercury's Oct. 8, 1987, appearance in Barcelona with opera star Montserrat Caballe, performing, naturally enough, "Barcelona," "How Can I Go On" and "The Golden Boy." Mercury is completely in his element before a large and enthusiastic crowd, as fountains and fireworks explode around the duo. The studio version of "Barcelona" also tones down the glitz, though the performance is nonetheless dramatic, before a crowd drafted from the Queen Fan Club who hold lighters aloft en masse.

Elsewhere on Freddie Mercury: The Video Collection, "excessive" seems to be the operative word, most notably in "The Great Pretender." A straight-ahead performance video of Mercury performing the song in a shimmery white suit in front of the song's title writ large, with occasional cuts to the female backing vocalists (featuring Mercury and Queen drummer Roger Taylor in drag) would've worked nicely enough. But Mercury lets his imagination run wild and drops in re-creations of scenes from other videos - from Queen's "I Want To Break Free" to his own "I Was Born To Love You." Bear in mind those videos were pretty elaborate productions themselves. "Made In Heaven" has Mercury literally on top of the world, surrounded by a writhing mob inspired by Dante's Inferno; "Living On My Own" gives a glimpse into Mercury's private world, with footage shot at his 39th birthday party.

The final track, a 2000 remix of "In My Defence," is set to a collage of footage drawn from Mercury's career. It's a nice closing touch that every Mercury fan should find both entertaining and moving. — Gillian G. Gaar comedians Hale & Pace's "The Stonk."

Another project that lies extremely close to May's heart is revealed when, having already reflected on 1984's "Thank God It's Christmas," he revealed the story behind the other Queen Christmas record. Yes, the one you don't know about.

"Roger and I both came up with an idea for a Christmas single around July of that year. We went in and demo'd both of them, and we decided that Roger's was the best one. The other song, my one, became Anita's Christmas song a couple of years later, 'I Dream Of Christmas'" - Anita, of course, being actress Anita Dobson, whose starring role in the BBC soap East-Enders provoked first a smash hit vocal rendering of the show's theme, "Anyone Can Fall In Love." before she and May united (professionally and romantically) for her 1988 Talking Of Love album. He produced and played on the entire record and wrote three songs - all of which ("I Dream Of Christmas" included) were released as singles.

1989/90 saw May involved in four major charity operations — Rock Aid Armenia, Artists United For Nature, Rock Against Repatriation and one that he himself inaugurated, in aid of the British Bone Marrow Donor Appeal.

He conceived a new rendition of Queen's own "Who Wants To Live Forever" after hearing of the death from leukemia of Queen fan Denise Morse. Credited to Ian (Meeson) & Belinda (Gillett), two school children selected from more than 120 hopefuls, the single also featured Taylor and Deacon, establishing it as the first (but not the last) Queen single to star a vocalist other than Mercury. The distinction, sadly, did not help the record — despite a lot of positive publicity, poor distribution left the record stranded at the starting blocks.

Further charity recordings followed Mercury's death, with May contributing to two singles intended as tributes to Mercury and benefiting the AIDS charity the Terence Higgins Trust: Extreme's version of "Love Of My Life" and a collaboration with guitar legend Hank Marvin on an instrumental version of "We Are The Champions."

Queen as an entire band, meanwhile, scored one of the biggest (and most memorable) hits of their entire career in 1981, when they teamed with fellow superstar Bowie for the co-credited "Under Pressure" — a song that remains in Bowie's live set to this day.

"We hooked up with David via one of those lovely pieces of chance," May revealed. "He was in Montreaux. I think he was living in Switzerland at that time, his very early days there, and we'd just bought the studio because we liked it so much and it was a nice refuge away from the hurly-burly of England. And David just happened to be passing [by]. That's the truth. It wasn't any more planned than that. He came in and we said, 'Do you fancy kicking a few ideas around?' and he said, 'Yeah, what have you got?' and we just started playing in the studio and that's what happened."

"Under Pressure" was not the only song recorded that day; also taped at the session was a version of "Cool Cat," a Bowie-less version of which appeared on the group's next album, Hot Space. "That really oughtron said he is thrilled by the end result.

be on the rarities box set," May agreed. "We'll have to ask David what he thinks about it. Obviously we could never do something like that without making sure everyone was happy."

Since Mercury's death, of course, Queen have shared the stage with a number of performers, most notably at the Freddie Mercury Tribute Concert at London's Wembley Stadium in April 1992. There are, apparently, still no plans for the entire event to be released on CD, although a video of the event was issued. while several performances recorded on the day have also leaked out. A tip-top version of

Bowie's "All The Young Dudes" is included on Ronson's posthumous Heaven And Hull album, while Queen themselves scored a U.K. #1 during 1993 with "Somebody To Love," recorded that same day with George Michael. (Michael also performed "'39" and "These Are The Days Of Our Lives.")

Other memorable moments elsewhere in the event include Annie Lennox's reprise of Mercury's role alongside Bowie during "Under Pressure," Elton John and Axl Rese combining for "Bohemian Rhapsody," Paul Young's "Radio Gaga" and Robert Plant's heroic "Crazy Little Thing Called Love."

Since that time, Queen have made only one live performance, when they reconvened for the gala opening of French balle: legend Maurice Bejart's Le Prebytere N'a Rien Perdu De Son Charme Ni Le Jardin De Son Eclat, at the Theatre National De Chaillet in Paris on Jan. 17, 1997. Fronted by John, they closed the show with "The Show Must Go On" reprising one of the most affecting pairings and performances at the Tribute Concert and subsequently released on the admittedly oddball but nevertheless useful odds and sods collection, Greatest Hits III.

Over the last four years, the media has regularly raised the possibility of further Queen reunions/re-formations, with a variety of frontmen mooted as possible replacements for the irreplaceable. All, so far, have been revealed as little more than wishful thinking, but May does acknowledge, "It's something that we think about a lot, and as we interact with other people we find ourselves thinking, 'Hmmm, I wonder what if....'

"I don't think it will ever be re-forming as such. I think we can do certain things with certain people at certain times." The most recent of these, following Deacon's retirement from active involvement, saw May and Taylor alone accompany Williams on a version of "We Are The Champions," cut for the A Knight's Tale soundtrack under the old brand name and, while Deacon himself has already condemned their efforts as "rubbish," May sau he is thrilled by the end result.

A tour program from Queen's early days.

"We just got in and played it. It was a good experience all 'round because it wasn't synthetic. We actually did get in there and play it with him, and he sang it live like the trouper that he is. He's a good boy, Robbie. He's really turned it around. He comes from a place in [U.K. boy band sensation] Take That [that] I don't think any of us would admit had any worth, and then gradually you just had to admit that the guy has talent. I had a very strong feeling about him from a few years ago, ever since I saw a video of his performance at Slane Castle.

"He's one of the very few people today who can really entertain an audience. He can really capture them in the palm of his hand. He's very different from Freddie, but he has that common touch in common. He can send himself up, he can have a laugh, but at the same time he can gather the whole thing up and deliver a performance which is arresting."

Disc six - Broadcasts

One of the most eagerly awaited Queen album releases of the past decade was 1995's Queen At The Beeb collection, the first authorized examination of the vast corpus of material recorded during 1973-74 (and, surprisingly, in 1977) for BBC DJs John Peel and Bob Harris' shows. Portions of these sessions (most commonly the 1977 effort) have long circulated on bootleg, but the quality was never great. The Hollywood release, in common with other official BBC archive releases, promised breathtaking sound.

Unfortunately, that was about the only one of its promises that it did live up to even the sleeve's excited insistence that "These are versions of well-known numbers that you will never have heard before" was utter nonsense. Forget about bootlegs — what about anybody who actually heard the sessions at the time of broadcast?

The band's first BBC session took place Feb. 5, 1973 (for broadcast 10 days later), two months before the group signed with EMI and featured four tracks later to surface on their debut album — two of which, "Liar" and "Keep Yourself Alive," would be reprised five months later on July 25 for a Harris session. "Liar," "Son And Daughter" and, perhaps surprisingly, the then-unreleased slow blues "See What A Fool I've Been" were broadcast Aug. 13; "Keep Yourself Alive" was held over until Sept. 24.

Over the next 18 months, Queen recorded three further sessions (one for Peel, two for Harris), the first two highlighting the Queen II sophomore album and the third, naturally, previewing material from Sheer Heart Attack. It was the second of these sessions, together with the 1973 debut recording, that was selected for inclusion on Queen At The Beeb — a total of just eight tracks out of a possible 24, which left May musing, "There are tracks which aren't on Queen At The Beeb which I think will be contenders for the rarities box." Queen remained occasional visitors to the BBC over the next three years, appearing on Top Of The Pops in January 1975 (performing "Now I'm Here") and again during summer 1977 ("Good Old Fashioned Lover Boy"); BBC TV and radio also offered a simulcast (simultaneous broadcast) of the group's 1975 Christmas Eve concert at London's Hammersmith Odeon and filmed the following year's Hyde Park free concert. It was fall 1977, however, before the group again recorded exclusive material for radio broadcast, with a return to The John Peel Show.

It was, at the time, a surprising choice for the previous year, the bulk of Peel sessions had concentrated on either cult heroes of the prog rock past (Van Der Graaf Generator, National Health, and 801 also broadcast sessions around the same time) or the newly emergent punk scene that barely and rarely had any time whatsoever for oldtimers such as Queen.

At the same time, however, Queen do have a significant role in punk history — it was their last-minute withdrawal from an early evening television spot Dec. 1, 1976, that prompted EMI to offer the show's producers another of the label's rosters, a little known combo called the Sex Pistols. Utterly unaware of what the band represented, the show agreed — and that evening, viewers across London and the southeast sat transfixed as the Pistols assaulted host Bill Grundy with a stream of obscenities. In the emergence of punk as a mainstream musical style, the Today show remains one of the crucial watershed moments. And it was all down to Qucen.

Punk and the Pistols, of course, had no part to play in Queen's Peel session, as they got down to the serious business of re-creating four tracks from the then-newly released News Of The World album, and more than a few regular Peel listeners were somewhat mortified to hear the likes of "We Will Rock You" and the minor epic "Spread Your Wings" coming over airwaves more traditionally associated with The Lurkers, Skrewdriver, and The Subway Sect.

Peel sessions were recorded on just eight tracks at Studio 4 in Maida Vale, with bands allocated little more than half a day in which to get their performance recorded, mixed and delivered to the show's producer, John Walters. It is intriguing, then, to consider how a band such as Queen, relentless perfectionists as they were, contrived to knock out four remarkably accurate facsimiles of their original records in the same amount of time, and on the same equipment, as it took the most basic punk band to get down four of theirs.

"It's a strange thing," May reflected. "You work for hours and hours in the studio for days and weeks to put down the structure of a song, but once you have it, it's not too difficult to re-create it. It's doing it the first time which is the hard thing. So generally we recreated things quite quickly for a couple of tracks, because time was so short. Then we'd sort of stretch out a bit on the others." Almost gleefully, he reiterated, "You certainly couldn't spend all day in the Beeb because there just wasn't the time." He will not be drawn on the relative merits of the performances, however. "I think they were fun at the time, and it's nice to look at them again. They do have a roughness and a freshness which is enjoyable."

A promo deck of playing cards given out by Elektra in 1973. Band members' photos are on each card, and John Deacon's name is reversed, as it appears on the first Queen LP. The owner of the cards said that in his years of collecting, he's never seen another set.

Coming soon — The rarities

A pause in the conversation as we consider the fact that, in the eyes of the fanatical completist collector every visit to the Queen archive this decade can be filed under Ludicrously Lost Opportunity. Where are the B-sides? Where are the radio sessions? Where are the outtakes? Well, right now, they're all on a row of shelves somewhere in Queen Headquarters, being meticulously cataloged for possible inclusion on the band's next scheduled project, a box set stuffed to the gills with rarities. May warned, if you thought the recent Mercury box set was expansive - two DVDs and 10 CDs, including four of previously unissued recordings - "it is tiny in comparison with the wealth of stuff that Queen have done over the years, because Freddie's solo career was very much a part-time job most of the time. We spent the best part of 20 years doing nothing else but Queen stuff

As with the Mercury collection, the actual job of sifting through the hours and hours of tape belongs to Queen archivist Greg Brooks, and while May openly admitted that he hasn't yet stumbled across some utterly forgotten shimmering jewel, that's not to say he won't. "It's too early to say. There's mountains of material, and that's without even thinking about the live stuff. We're just concentrating on the studio recordings at the moment, and the problem is just fistening to it all and cataloging it, making decisions as to what's interesting and what isn't."

The bonus tracks appended to the remastered Queen 1 notwithstanding. fans have already been granted one glimpse into the backstage world of Queen, via Made In Heaven, the posthumous 1996 release that rebuilt a number of demos and otherwise incomplete Mercury performances into a full band record. It was a magnificent piece of work, and today, May acknowledged it is one of his favorite Queen albums. At the outset of the project, however, he was anything but enthusiastic.

"I was very resistant to anything like that for a long time. I was the bad guy in the sense of doing anything under the Queen banner. I was dragged kicking and screaming into the idea. I really didn't want to make it in the beginning. It was only when I'd heard what Roger and John had done that I rushed in there in my usual arrogant manner and said, "Stop! You're doing it all wrong.' And once I'd plunged in, it was just massive. It was a couple of years of total dedication to reconstructing and re-creating the Dead Sea Scrolls. "It was a terribly demanding job making that album because obviously your brief is to make it sound like it was no trouble at all. It was spun out of thin air and a few little snatches of tape. It was a projection, an extrapolation — what would it have sounded like if Freddie had still been alive and we were really here making this album? Because it wasn't only a matter of what we played, it was the construction of the songs because that never stays the same as you're working on it. A song develops, and if you develop it beyond the point where Freddie's singing, you're in big trouble. It was very tricky, but having found it very painful at the time and for some time after it came out, I now love it. I think it's a really good bit of work."

The new collection, on the other hand, will be almost completely unadorned. "We want to put it out fairly warts and all, 1 think. Where necessary there may be a bit of remixing and fiddling around in-house, as it were, but the idea is for people get a feel for what was behind the scenes."

Every fan, collector and observer will have their own idea of what should be included, although Queen studio outtakes are scarce, even in the world of underground tapes. However, May rushed to warn the world, "There's no pretence that it will be complete, because that would be so vast, it'd be just too much and it would take forever." As for what we can expect to find on it —

"Cool Cat" and the remainder of the BBC sessions have certainly been mooted, but beyond that. May cannot say, "We were very critical of what we were doing the whole time, and a huge censorial process was constantly going on. We chucked away loads of stuff - some of it with good reason, because you find you're going up a blind alley so you just stop and throw it away. But other times, it maybe wasn't the right time for a particular idea, in which case it might be revisited or it might not. And a lot of the time we were in the studio just messing around, and on a good day we'd find good things and get into a groove just spontaneously. So there's a lot of stuff that was heaved onto the shelves. But whatever happens, it'll be a glimpse into Queen behind the scenes at various times. We're really going to just pick the best of what we can find and make it an interesting and entertaining package."

hose who associate jazz with bebop's frantic pace or the intentional sexuality in swing and jazz-funk may find the concept of meditative jazz to be an oxymoron. Flutist Paul Horn not only gives credence to the coupling on 1969's Inside The Taj Mahal, but the album was wildly popular for a jazz release - and a solo flute venture, no less. The recording is uniquely beautiful for the uncanny acoustics Horn encountered while playing inside the 350-year-old tomb, almost leaving Horn's playing secondary to the layered echoes that last as long as 28 seconds. Though he'd been a jazz musician for years prior to the Taj Mahal recording, the album made him a major name among those attracted to his pensive, more introverted approach to improvising.

Over the decades that followed, the flutist associated himself with other regions of the world and various directions in jazz - all of the resulting recordings currently being reissued by Transparent Music. The first releases are Inside The Taj Mahal I And II (including a second recording from 1989), Brazilian Images and Africa. Coming later in the year will be Inside The Potala (solo Horn in a Tibetan temple), A Paul Horn Christmas: The Peace Album and a collection of classical music interpretations, Paul Horn Music. Horn currently resides in Tucson, Ariz., only several hours from Sedona, the capital of a new-age culture much indebted to Horn's groundbreaking musical input.

11 Questions For... Paul Horn by Dave McElfresh

Goldmine: What are your beginnings in jazz? Paul Horn: I was with the Chico Hamilton group back in the mid-50s. Chico was looking for a replacement for Buddy Collette. That was my big start. Eric Dolphy took my place when I left. Eric obviously changed the face of that group, being such a different player. That's when Chico started getting into the fusion thing. Then I started doing studio work out on the West Coast and stayed there for 15 years, recording with a lot of great people - Duke Ellington, Miles [Davis and], Nat "King" Cole, along with the movie and TV work and recordings with my own band. So I had about 13 albums out before I did the Taj Mahal one. Taj Mahal changed everything.

What was the response to the Taj Mahal album when it first came out?

It wasn't supposed to be an album. I was in India on a pilgrimage with the Maharishi in '67 and '68, producing a movie on the Maharishi that was never released. We had a 15-man crew over there with two soundmen. One of the locations was Agra, where the Taj Mahal is. I went in one night with one of the soundmen because I knew the place had a great echo, and I wondered if could get away with recording it. I had only intended to play the tape for some friends when I got back. I never intended for it to become an album, but friends were saying I should shop it around to some record companies. I met a friend who worked A&R at Epic Records and he asked if I had anything new for him to hear, and I said, 'Well, there's this,' and they went for it. It was successful because of the timing. Younger people were checking out meditation because of The Beatles getting into it with the Maharishi. So the kids were coming to understand the unique value of silence.

So it was a non-jazz audience for the most part? Yeah, most of them never knew I'd done jazz before that album. I had two different audiences, which presented a conflict for me. When I'd play a concert and people came who only knew me from the Taj Mahal album, they were wondering what I was doing up there with a jazz quartet. And the jazz people didn't get the new material. Little by little I incorporated some solo pieces into the concerts.

Are you familiar with Sonny Rollins' unaccompanied album called Solo?

You know, that album started me, in a way, even before it had been recorded. I remember a Downbeat article with Sonny where he said, 'Someday I'm going to do a solo album.' And I thought, 'That's the most far-out idea I've ever heard.' That idea stuck in my head. There's a lot of power in that. One is the most powerful number. And if you're going to do a jazz album, stick with take one. Miles taught me that. It's pure, it's improvisation. Don't do it again, because the feeling's not there for take two.

Is that because you've lost that pure awareness when you start thinking about what you're doing?

Exactly. For me, I can't get involved in what the audience thinks when I'm playing. My ego has to get out of the way. I can't be conscious of my playing and also think, 'Gee, I hope the critics like me.' All that has to go. And for me, meditation helps. Meditation makes you aware of everything around you. You get quieter and quieter and eventually get out of the way altogether. Then there's pure consciousness, pure awareness.

Do you think that the solo music you put out may be difficult for some listeners to get into because, as Westerners, we're not that comfortable with silence?

I think that both psychologically and physiologically people are ready for it. They're stressed out. I don't think anyone has to analyze it. Someone just says, 'That feels good' and puts the record on again. Sooner or later maybe they'll realize what's going on. While in the Taj Mahal, I couldn't play during the long spaces between notes because of the lengthy echo. It would have sounded jumbled and would have resulted in confusion. That probably gave people a meditative experience without them even knowing it, without them having to say, 'I'm meditating,' because there's nothing during that interval except the echo, which is what happens in meditation. It wasn't premeditated, it was just what happened.

What was different when it came to recording the second Taj Mahal album?

It was the 20th anniversary of the first one but a very different experience. The second one was recorded on digital equipment, which wasn't available in 1968. Also, I had other instruments with me, including the saxophone, to see how they would sound in there. And the second time it was difficult to get in. It wasn't as easy as the first time. The Prime Minister had to pave the way for me to make the recording. There was more confusion, a lot of military around, talk of vandalism and terrorism. It wasn't as quiet and peaceful as the first time.

Recording at the Taj Mahal, in the pyramids — is there some sort of initial interplay with each environment that allows you to situate yourself as far as what to play, where to seat yourself?

That's right. Playing inside the Taj Mahal comes out differently than playing in a studio on Vine Street in L.A. Surroundings influence the way I play at any given moment, to a great extent depending on the acoustics. I'll admit the sound of playing in the pyramids was less dramatic than in the Taj Mahal. Still, the greatest mystery of antiquity lies in the Great Pyramids. When making each of those solo recordings, I usually got to the site a few days in advance to hang out, become familiar with it the passages in the pyramids, for instance. The last recording in the trilogy [of locations] was done inside the Potala, a Tibetan palace. I had several days to figure out where I was going to situate myself if they allowed me to record. And that will be it. I'm not going to do any more solo albums. I don't want it to become gimmicky. These places I've recorded are very unique and special.

It seems like your Brazilian and African albums are tributes not to places but to rhythms, very visceral rhythms.

I'm an adventurer, and I like to see as much of the planet as I can. And not just musically — but to see people and places and have experiences that all contribute to the music, especially as an improviser. I'd toured Brazil several times, and I love the country's music. As for the African one, I've always wanted to do something from Africa. Sekou Camara Cobra, who's a legendary Griot and the oral historian of his tribe, was over in Montreal visiting his relatives. So I met him there and we did the album.

NEWS & NOTES

It's hard to be a jazz star unless you're at the top of the heap like Wynton Marsalis, an Old Lion like Herbie Hancock or, to a lesser extent, Wayne Shorter. But if you're right next to the top, you have to work the field continually, earning the support of your record label through club touring, festivals and, perhaps, academic outlets.

Take Joshua Redman, one of the key Young Lions of the last decade when he won the Thelonious Monk Institute saxophone competition. He signed to Warner Bros. in one of that label's only "pure" jazz deals and began to escape the shadow of his father, tenor saxman Dewey Redman. He's no longer a Young Lion; rather, he has arrived, earning heavy critical acclaim from some, skepticism from others.

Redman is 32 now, with eight albums under his belt. He's the kind of guy you want to praise, if only for his intent. He writes and performs authentic jazz, real in that it's undiluted. Redman and his quartet - Aaron Goldberg, piano; Reuben Rogers, bass; and the remarkable Gregory Hutchinson, drums - have been working Passage Of Time, his latest Warner Bros. album, this summer. I go back and forth about this record; it's long, it's complicated, it's frequently beautiful (pieces such as "Our Minuet" and "Free Speech, Phase II" eloquently embody Redman's interesting, if not particularly compelling, style) and it's serious. Too serious.

I saw the Joshua Redman Quartet in late June in Nighttown, a suburban Cleveland restaurant that doubles effectively as a jazz venue. People paid $30 a pop to see the Redman group; dinner this is slow, pricy food, by the way was extra. Redman and his band played well, focusing on Passage and its predecessor, Beyond. But it wasn't until midway through the first of two sets (the pattern on each night of this two-night stand) that he began to break free. From then on, the date was nearly inspired, particularly on "Enemies Within," one of the more aggressive Passage pieces.

What nags at me is Redman's approach. On earlier albums, he'd incorporate older styles and influences, from swing to The Beatles to James Brown. While such homages diluted his presentation, they also humanized him, much like his quartet's rendition of Cedar Walton's predictable "Cedar's Blues" did at the Nighttown gig. "Cedar's Blues" seemed to loosen Redman up, liberating him and, he claims, his interplay with his group.

He's writing ever more seriously these days, he told me, and playing seriously to match. That's a big part of what jazz is about. But jazz is also about swing and heart and sweat, qualities some say have been missing since bebop supplanted swing in the late '40s, substituting an era of Big Bands and public acceptance with one of small, introspective groups that inside dopesters appreciate the most.

There's no doubt Redman can play. Whether he can connect is another question. It's a question jazz hasn't been able to answer for decades, relegating the genre to small circles of friends in the know. I hope Redman breaks out more. I wonder whether jazz will let him.

THE PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT The Philadelphia Experiment Ropeadope records (93042)

The experiment part of The Philadelphia Experiments name refers to a marathon threeday recording session resulting in this selftitled jazz-funk album. The unlikely partnership of hip-hop drummer Ahmir Thompson, mainstream jazz bassist Christian McBride, and classical pianist Uri Caine conjures up a diverse menu, stretching from the latter-day Miles Davis-ish title cut to the slicker feel of "Grover," recorded in memory of the city is famous deceased saxophonist Grover Washington. A classy neighbor, guitarist Pat Martino, shows up on three cuts. While it's not the unadulterated, hard-core stuff that the jazz city's known for, it's certainly not pop fluff either - the unique niche bringing to mind the style of the '70s CTI label, which, if it was around today, would have been slobbering to sign these guys.

THE MODERN JAZZ QUARTET WITH LAURINDO ALMEIDA Collaboration

Label M Album Classics (495731)

The Modern Jazz Quartet played tuxedo jazz, with Milt Jackson's vibraphone and John Lewis' piano spinning off classical-influenced improvisation so sophisticated it became the polar opposite of the typically visceral approach found in jazz. No surprise then that they'd couple with a classically trained Brazilian guitarist prominent in the bossa nova scene, a pop music form just too damned elegant to remain merely pop music. On Collaboration, Laurindo Almeida and the quartet reshape a Bach fugue, move on to Antonio Carlos Jobim's "One Note Samba" and the up-tempo "Foi A Saudade," then combine Latin class with classical on a nearly 12-minute take of Joaquin Rodrigo's "Concierto De Aranjuez." The 1964 recording not only well represents the best of both collaborators, it stands as one of the most regal jazz albums ever.

ELIANE ELIAS The Best Of Eliane Elias Volume 1: Originals Blue Note (7243 5 31789 2 5)

Whether playing ballads or the most complex, up-tempo jazz, Brazilian pianist Eliane Elias billboards her status as the form's most sensual pianist - which may also account for why she's also the artist who's been with Blue Note longer than anyone currently on its roster. She's a crafty composer as well, as this sampling, The Best Of Eliane Elias Volume 1: Originals, from her last six albums attests. While the native Brazilian element is always present in her melodies and sultry scatting, so are the complex rhythms and tricky phrasing she's carried over from her days with the fusion band Steps Ahead. If this introductory disc grabs you, check out her two collections of Antonio Carlos Jobim interpretations.

PHIL UPCHURCH Tell The Truth! Evidence (22222)

and attack are so similar to Breezin'-era George Benson that fans of the album may have mistaken his sideman presence on the album for that of the G-man himself. While Upchurch has done the session thing with loads of others over the years - from Bo Diddley to Julio Iglesias - he has also released 20 albums in his own name since 1960 Not many of them are available now, which is unfortunate given the soulfulness of Tell The Truth!, which Upchurch called "the most honest record I've ever made." Though he's all over the place when it comes to compositional style - jumping from Steely Dan's "Jack Of Speed" to Neal Hefti's "Girl Talk" to Nat Adderley's "Jive Samba" - his powerful but relaxed feel makes them all sound like he deserves cowriter credit. Like Benson, he's a supremely confident player. which results in a strong sense of presence throughout - a rare and very attractive trait. - Dave McElfresh

You're a significant figure in the development of what came to be known as new age music. What are your feelings about that?

I think that the meditative element of Eastern culture that was on the Tai Mahal album has been maintained in some new age music and has even increased over the years. People have become more open to an alternative style of music. The recording industry has become crazy, denying the public the opportunity to be exposed to so much of the music that comes out. If you grow up just listening to the radio, you'll never develop an incentive to check out anything else It's holding back evolution, because music and art are what propel evolution. I was lucky I came on the scene when I did. I could deal with major record companies at the time and do what I wanted to do.

Do you think the Internet bodes well for the future of non-mainstream music, allowing artists to begin selling their work without having to rely any longer on the industry as the middle man?

Definitely. Nature has a way of balancing itself out. If it didn't, we wouldn't still be around. When things start getting too far one way, along comes the other. When new age music came along, for instance, that was because rock 'n' roll had become so strong and jazz had become so frenetic. Then, of course, new age music became commercialized. There's a lot of junk in it. New age isn't a complimentary title any more. It should be a nice word. I hope we're in a new age. The old age isn't working too well any more.

Chet Atkins

Chet Atkins, guitarist

Chet Atkins — the most-recorded solo instrumentalist in music history and the chief architect of the country-pop Nashville sound of the '50s and '60s — died June 30, 2001, at his home in Nashville, Tenn., after a long bout with cancer. He was 77.

Born Chester Burton Atkins June 20, 1924, in Luttrell, Tenn., he began playing fiddle and guitar as a child and had become an accomplished musician by the time he left high school in 1941. His first big gig at age 18 — was at station WNOX in Knoxville, Tenn., as fiddler for Archie Campbell and Bill Carlisle. By 1943, he was touring as a sideman with Kitty Wells and Johnny Wright.

In 1946, Atkins made his first appearance at the Grand Ole Opry, supporting Red Foley. That same year, he also made his first recording, "Guitar Blues," for Bullet Records. Steve Sholes of RCA Victor subsequently signed Atkins to a recording contract in 1947 as a singer and guitarist. In 1949, he was hired as studio guitarist for all RCA Victor Nashville sessions. The following year, he moved permanently to Nashville and appeared regularly at the Grand Ole Opry as a soloist and guitarist for Mother Maybelle and The Carter Sisters.

With the support of Fred Rose — one of the heads of the huge Acuff-Rose Publishing company — Atkins joined the "A-Team" of Nashville session players. His innovative session work would eventually include hits by Elvis Presley ("Hearthreak Hotel"). Kitty Wells ("Release Me"), Hank Williams ("Jambalaya"), and The Everly Brothers ("Wake Up Little Susie"). Atkins also had hits en his own, most notably "Mr. Sandman" (1955) and "Yakety Axe" (1965).

Sholes departed for New York in 1957 to serve as head of pop A&R, leaving Atkins as the manager of operations for RCA's Nashville division (he would become a vice-president upon Sholes' death in 1968). As a label executive for RCA, Atkins signed Bobby Bare, Waylon Jennings, Dolly Parton, Charley Pride, Jerry Reed, and Connie Smith and produced legends such as Eddy Arnold, Jim Reeves, and Hank Snow. He also built RCA Studio B, Nashville's most hit-laden recording studio.

Atkins' many accolades include 14 Grammys and nine CMA Musician Of The Year awards. He was also, at 49, the youngest living artist inducted into the Country Music Hall Of Fame, in 1973. Atkins is survived by his wife, Leona; a daughter; two grandchildren; and a sister.

Ernie K-Doe, R&B singer

One of the most colorful entertainers of the classic period of R&B, Ernie K-Doe, died July 5, 2001, after a short illness. He was 65.

K-Doe is best-known for "Mother-In-Law," a #1 pop and R&B record in 1961. He followed with several smaller hits including "Certain Girl," "Cried My Last Tear" and "Popeye Joe."

Born Ernest Kador Feb. 22, 1936, in New Orleans, as a youth he won several local talent shows. At the age of 17, he briefly lived in Chicago and recorded for United Records, but the session wasn't issued at the time. After moving back to New Orleans, K-Doe formed The Blue Diamonds, who recorded for Savoy Records. When their record stalled, he disbanded the group and embarked on a solo career. In 1955 he cut "Do Baby Do" for Specialty and three years later waxed "Tuff Enough" for Ember.

In 1960 he signed with the newly formed Minit label and debuted with the gospel-based "Where There's A Will There's A Way." His third Minit single, "Mother-In-Law," changed his career. After leaving Minit in 1963, K-Doe made stops at Instant, Duke, Janus and Sansu.

In recent years, K-Doe opened his own club, appropriately called The Mother-In-Law Lounge, and he entertained his patrons by singing along with the jukebox through the club's PA. He recently formed his own label, Big K, and recorded a CD single, "Black Boy White Boy" b/w "Children Of The World."

K-Doe is survived by a wife, Antoinette, and several children.

Susannah McCorkle, jazz and cabaret singer

Susannah McCorkle, the gifted jazz and cabaret singer whose repertoire included more than 3,000 songs and 17 albums, died from an apparent suicide May 19, 2001, in Manhattan. She was 55.

Born Jan. 1, 1946, McCorkle discovered jazz in 1970 while studying languages in Europe, after a friend played her a recording of Billie Holiday's version of "I've Got A Right To Sing The Blues." Subsequently, McCorkle moved to Great Britain, where she supported herself throughout the early '70s by singing in small pubs in London. After recording two albums in England, McCorkle returned to America, where she was eventually hailed as one of New York's finest nightclub singers. She continued to release albums as well, ultimately establishing a relationship with Concord Jazz, for whom she recorded for more than a decade. Her many honors included three Album Of The Year awards from Stereo Review

In addition to being one of New York's leading cabaret artists. McCorkle was an accomplished prose writer whose fiction appeared in Mademoiselle, Cosmopolitan, and The O. Henry Book Of Prize Short Stories. She also penned nonfiction for publications such as Newsday and American Heritage. McCorkle is survived by her mother, Margery McCorkle; two sisters, Margery Pinson and Kate McCorkle; and her ex-husband, Dan DiNicola.

AVAILABLE AT

hether you collect stamps, coins, records or anything else, you never forget your first time. No, not that first time. Get your mind out of the guttet. For record collectors, I'm talking about the first record we ever bought — the record that would eventually be the rock upon which our holy musical scriptures are built. Maybe your first record was an Elvis 45 or a Beatles album. Or maybe it was something more esoteric, such as Bruce Springsteen's Born To Run or Michael Jackson's Thriller or Walter Carlos' Switched-On Bach.

I recall my early childhood record collection was filled with kiddie 45s on the Disneyland and Cricket labels and some "sounds like the original artists" albums on the Ronco and Diplomat labels. Heck, this was even before my Grandma Betty added 45s to her flea market/yard sale search lists.

Under the Christmas tree in our house in 1975 was my first real phonograph, a beige General Electric Wildcat drop-changer with built-in speakers, four turntable speeds and a flip-over stylues that could play LPs, 45s and 78s. Now I didn't have to play my Disney records on the family phonograph, which pleased my stepfather to no end (and he made no bones about how many cans of Schaefers beer that it took to get "Cruella De Vil" and "Whistle While You Work" out of his head).

A few days after that Christmas, I visited the Blue Note Record Store in Albany, N.Y., which still exists today. Avram Pock, the man who stood between the cash register and a library-sized wall of 45s, asked me what I would like to buy. I had heard this one song on the radio, a song whose title the DJ had not mentioned in broadcasts — it sounded like an opera with guitars and had words such as "Nothing really matters" and "Any way the wind blows" and may have been by a group called The Queens.

Without hesitation, even though I provided Mr. Pock with only the slightest information on the record, he quickly went to the racks and pulled out "Bohemian Rhapsody." I remember it being in a greenish-white company sleeve with the words "Elektra/Asylum" on top, and that the record label contained a butterfly, which was certainly different than the dog-and-gramophone labels in my parents' record collection. I immediately paid my dollar for the record, received my change and a "have a nice day" from Mr. Pock and headed home to test out this new treasure.

For days and days, I played "Bohemian Rhapsody" on my Wildcat drop-changer, watching as the robotic tonearm swung out to the lip of the spinning 45, then dropped with a plunk to the outermost groove. A few crackles of surface noise, then I would hear those magic words, "Is this the real life... is this just fantasy...."

"Bohemian Rhapsody" quickly surpassed any of my previous Disney 45s in terms of popularity on my turntable. I would fiddle with the speaker balance, discovering the wonders of stereo separation as one chorus would appear in the left speaker, then the other would complement it in the right channel. I played the record at different speeds, imagining "Bohemian Rhapsody" as performed by The Chipmunks (on 78), the Sunday morning men's choir (on 33) and as unintelligible warbling (on 16 rpm). I was even able to determine that WTRY and WPTR, the AM radio stations that played "Bohemian Rhapsody" in our area, had a slightly different mix of the song - besides being in monaural sound, the end gong sounded louder on the radio than it did on my 45. And I also noticed that while WPTR's copy of the song matched my version in tempo, the WTRY version seemed a little faster, perhaps as if it were played at 46 or 47 rpm (perhaps they did this with all songs, to squeeze in another commercial at the top of the hour).

Of course, every time Queen had a new hit record for sale,

I would snap it up. My musical tastes were expanding as I listened to more radio stations, and eventually my record collection grew from a teenage smattering of Top 40–based 45s to the multidimensional, multiplatform, multi-this-and-that my collection represents today.

I also learned about the intangibles of record collecting through my purchases of Queen 45s and LPs. I discovered the wonders of Mobile Fidelity Sound Lab audiophile pressings when I spent $20 (a princely sum for an album in the late 1970s) to acquire an MFSL copy of A Night At The Opera. One of the first import 45s I ever acquired was a British pressing of "Under Pressure," the song Queen recorded with David Bowie. I learned about such tactics as releasing picture sleeves with differing images on them, so that a "true collector" would spend four times as much to get all four picture sleeves (in this case, Queen's "I Want To Break Free" exists as four different picture sleeves, featuring each band member separately).

Today, Queen's magnum opus is a fairly common and easy record to acquire. The most recent price guides list a near mint copy of the U.S. pressing of "Bohemian Rhapsody" (Elektra 45297) at $8 for the butterfly Elektra label, at $10 for a short-printed red label. A seven-inch reissue (Hollywood 64725), released to capitalize on the song's use in the Wayne's World movie, is reasonably priced at $4 in near mint condition. Even though Freddie Mercury has long since joined the Gates Of Heaven Community Choir, collecting Queen's music is as fascinating as collecting records by The Beatles, Elvis Presley, or The Rolling Stones.

I played the record at different speeds, imagining "Bohemian Rhapsody" as performed by The Chipmunks (on 78), the Sunday morning men's choir (on 33) and as unintelligible warbling (on 16 rpm).

Turn on a television and spin the dial, and you'll hear a Queen track somewhere among your DirecTV satellite hookup: the opening theme, "Princes Of The Universe," on an episode of Highlander; the classic "singalong" scene in Wayne's World; a Mountain Dew commercial that replicates the music video for "Bohemian Rhapsody"; the soundtrack to the 1980's big-budget Flash Gordon movie.

You can hear it in other artists' works — Grandmaster Flash slipped a snippet of "Another One Bites The Dust" into his megamix "The Adventures Of Grandmaster Flash On The Wheels Of Steel." Despite his protests to the contrary, Vanilla Ice's "Ice Ice Baby" musically photocopies the bass line from "Under Pressure." And you can hear it at the sports arena as the team rallies for another score, the stomp-stomp-clap of "We Will Rock You" blasts from the arena PA. At the first game of the season, your sports team's new championship banner is raised to the rafters, as the sounds of "We Are The Champions" plays in the background.

If you're looking to either complete or begin a Queen music collection, one of the best discographies can be found in the book Queen: As It Began by Jacky Gunn and Jim Jenkins, (Hyperion, 1992). Besides having a complete history of the band, Queen: As It Began contains a discography of all Queen's American and U.K. releases, including any variations and updates (it also lists the bonus tracks on the first Hollywood CD releases).

I suppose my record collecting history might have been different if the first music I ever purchased was "Fly Robin Fly" by Silver Convention, "Run Joey Run" by David Geddes, or Lou Reed's Transformer album. But I kinda like the way my record collection has evolved over the years — and I'm proud that the first 45 I ever bought for myself was Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody."

Chuck Miller's first record, Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody," evokes good childhood memories. What was your first record?

Letters

I received a lot of response about my previous "discography compilation" {Goldmine #547, July 13, 2001} column. Richard Kaplan, a record collector from Metuchen, N.J. wrote to me about Capitol Records' quirky numbering system. "Capitol hit 5999 and had to do something, as their oldie (Starline) series started at 6000. Rather than skipping to, say, 7000, they went partially back. Labels do the darndest things! (WB going backward had to be the weirdest, but the Polygram numbering system is the most confusing. At least I decoded the London group system after it terminated its combined series at 9828.)"

Collector Gary Maiullo wrote in with his ideas for compiling a well-rounded discography. "There is one point I would like to focus on when developing a discography that may even make for a whole column. That is different versions of songs. For example, XTC released a song 'This Is Pop' (their second single, VS209) on Virgin Records in the U.K. Their first album also included the song, but it was a different recording. 'Ten Feet Tall' is another song released on their album Drums And Wires, but a different version was released on the B-side of 'Wait Til Your Boat Goes Down.' This is information that ally helpful!

would be really helpful!

"XTC also released a song in 1982 on an EP called 'Heaven Is Paved With Broken Glass' (B-side of 'Ball And Chain'). They shortly thereafter released an LP compilation titled Waxworks in the U.K., with a companion album titled Beeswax. There was a completely different mix of 'Heaven...' on Beeswax, which was exciting to have. However, when they finally began releasing CDs and the compilation Rag And Bone Buffet was released (with rare B-sides, etc), the Beeswax version was included. The original EP version is not available on CD anywhere. (at least, I haven't found it yet!) But find an XTC discography that makes that distinction; I haven't."

Finally, a request from Hawaii from Margo King-Lenson, who is starting her own record collection: "I just started collecting all the Hawaiian/Pacific Island record albums I can get my hands on... [and] now realize how obscure any info on them is! Where do you recommend I find recording history of Alfred Apaka, a popular and famous Hawaiian singer in the '40s, '50s and '60s? ...My folks used to listen to him a lot.... They're both gone now, and I'm getting nostalgic for their music and anything retro-Polynesian! Mahalo nui loa (Thanks very much in Hawaiian)."

If anybody can help Margo on this one, her e-mail address is tuicom@att.net.

So what was the first record you ever bought? Is it still in your collection? Is it a record you're proud to say to your friends, "This was the first," or is it one you hope nobody finds out ever entered your collection?

Pretty Things

I there's one eternal truth that sustains every record collector, it's that even the best-trodden paths are still paved with occasional gold. Doors freaks might never run out of newly exhumed live performances to drool over, Jimi Hendrix collectors know there'll always be another unheard tune-up to add to the thousands they've already horded. Syd Barrett fans can expect to be regaled with one more hitherto barely rumored doodle every time there's a new "best of" compilation to be sold.

Pretty Things fans are accustomed to all this. In fact, Pretty Things fans are probably accustomed to all of the iniquities that come with a catalog that now stretches back almost 40 years. Even before the band launched their own much-praised archive project a few years back, both overground and underground CD shelves were creaking beneath the accumulated weight of the Pretties' alternative history.

Lost BBC sessions, forgotten outtakes, incidental film music, live shows and demos — all musical human life is out there someplace, and the enterprising collector now needs a small room just to store the band's own releases in. Add in all the odds and sods that prove how vital the Pretties were to the development of British rock through the 1960s and 1970s, and you'll be needing an entire housing project.

Just last month, "Rosalyn," "Midnight To Six Man" and "Walking Through My Dreams" appeared on Rhino's oddly flawed but nevertheless compulsive Nuggets II compilation, a feast of psychedelic freakbeat oddities that leaves the 13th Floor Elevators grinding their gears in the basement. It's tragically ironic, then, that at around the same time as the box set hit the streets, we lost the rhythm guitarist whose ferocity (and immaculate slide guitar playing) established the earliest of those cuts, "Rosalyn," among the primal templates for all the noise and mayhem that followed. Aged 57, Brian Pendleton died of cancer at his Maidstone, England, home May 16, 2001.

The full scope of Pendleton's legacy will doubtless be revealed on some future Pretties anthology. If you want to talk about Holy Grails, though, you need to zero in on the seasons immediately following what history recalls as the Summer Of Love, a period during which the Pretties re-established their credentials as rock's favorite underground phenomenon with the legendary SF Sorrow, then continued burrowing from there.

Throughout the late 1960s, members of the band were present at the birth of The Pink Fairies, the psychedelic warlords who would plague society's underbelly for much of the next decade; they were bosom buddies, too, with Mick Farren And The Deviants, a burst of beligerent noise so nasty that Nuggets (and, indeed, any similarly themed compilation) would curl up its toes and die at the mention of their name. The Pretties also spent time with Philippe DeBarge, a young Frenchman who awoke one morning and decided it would be fun to make an album. So he did.

It was early 1968 when Pretty Things vocalist Phil May and drummer Wally Allen were first contacted by DeBarge, asked if they'd be interested in bringing his dream to fruition. According to May, "basically, he was a French millionaire who we met and a wannabe pop star, — a friend of the more slightly alternative French rock musicians, which is kinda weird. I mean, all French rock musicians are very showbiz. They wear black leather and Elvis haircuts, but really, they're entertainers with a big E. Anyway, he was a lovely guy. We got on very well with him, so we agreed to do it."

As ambitious as he was wealthy, DeBarge flew the duo to the family home in the south of France for a few days of preproduction. May continued, "It was a lovely place. We traveled 'round in vintage Rolls Royces, and we had a nice few days hanging out with him." Then DeBarge shipped the whole party back to Britain to make the record at Abbey Road. Well, if it was good enough for SF Sorrow, it was good enough for him.

Aside from his co-production duties, May was also hired on as a vocal coach. "I would work with Philippe on vocals, which were in French, coach him how to phrase lyrics and the timing of his delivery. I had to translate it myself in my head, see what the important words were, then we put the record together. He'd go home with a tape recorder of my treatments of the verses, sleep with it under his pillow, then come back and record it. It was very strange."

DeBarge's initial plan was for May and Allen to act as producers, with the actual musical grunt work farmed out to a supergroup of personally handpicked sessionmen. "The idea was, we'd see what the material was like, then get other musicians involved on a session basis. But when push came to shove, it was so much easier for us to work with the Pretty Things doing the stuff, rather than working with brand-new musicians."

The remainder of Pretty Things were rounded up accordingly and, if the sharp-eared listener can detect echoes of sundry future Pretty Things masterpieces rattling around inside Philippe DeBarge, that's because the band themselves put them there.

"The whole experience was quite beneficial for us because there we were in the studio doing stuff together," May explained. "That kind of work is not wasted when we come to do our own next record, because you develop all the time. It's like whenever you're in the studio, it's a learning thing anyway, so we were constantly trying new things out. You develop a lot of stuff in those side sessions, and any musician will tell you, it's better to be working than not. Playing in a pub is better than sitting at home in a mansion, and that's why so many 'popular' bands have a problem. They can only work every three or four years and, in between times, they go fucking mad."

May acknowledged, "We tried things on Philippe's album which evolved into things on ours," pointing out that around the same time as these sessions, the group were also recording the acres and acres of instrumental music that would subsequently spill out across the so-called Electric Banana album series. Those records, too, provided dry runs for a lot of the band's later work. "It was a way for us to again use the studio situation, songs we weren't using, developing different things. It was the writing thing going on parallel." *

But Philippe DeBarge's value goes way beyond the random insertion of future elements of Parachute... beyond its sonic (and spiritual) similarities to S.F. Sorrow. Having traveled from the acoustic and tabla-led opener, "Hello," through the soaring guitar solo underpinning "Eagle's Son" and onto the punchy lament of "They've All Gone Now," DeBarge returned to France clutching what ranks today as the unsung classic of the psychedelic era. And it never even got released.

Actually, that's not strictly true. According to May, "He had a deal. His father knew the head of Pathe Marconi, so it came out on that label in France. In fact, Wally then went down and helped him put a band together with journeyman musicians, French musicians, a very druggy bunch. He had a wonderful year in Bierritz, fell in love, and the band just rehearsed. They did one or two gigs with Johnny Halliday or someone. I stayed out of all that, although I did go down to see them in one of those places where the guy had the whole penthouse suite on the top of a hotel. All the band members lived in this hotel, things being brought in and out — it was terribly decadent."

The album did little even in France and swiftly disappeared from even the most eagle-eyed Pretties' fan's radar. Originally it languished in obscurity, an onscure backwater to the band's main story. But, as the 1990s progressed and the Pretty Things' own revival/reunion gathered speed, so a legend began to build.

In 1998, present-day Pretties manager Mark St. John promised to at least investigate the possibilities of adding the album to the then-ongoing saga of Pretty Things reissues — three years later, it remains in the vault, and fans' only realistic chance of finding out what they've been missing all these years is to seek out one of the scratchy archive acetate conversions that the bootleg world has slammed onto CD. Oh, and don't worry about the legal and ethical ramifications of this particular piece of piracy. The album's official unavailability is the only real crime that's been committed. Put bluntly, Philippe DeBarge is one of the most important albums to be lurking, in its entirety, in the CD-R domain today — bootleg scratches, pop and clicks included. If it sounds this good with the acetate's fuzzy flaws on board, imagine what the master tapes will be like.

May is less convinced of Philippe DeBarge's immortality. He has heard all the accolades, the comparisons with The Who Sell Out, Love's Forever Changes, The Beatles' Sgt. Pepper and SF Sorrow itself. But with the benefit of an insider's hindsight, he refuses to buy into any of them.

"The album itself has a lot of faults on it. There's a certain point where, if someone isn't an actual singer, you can only go so far. You can't get blood out of a stone."

But he acknowledged, "It wasn't a completely wasted exercise. It has its moments. I've been involved with other things where people want to pay you to produce something and you look at it and... well, it's just fucking not worth it. Philippe, on the other hand, genuinely wanted to make music. He worked very very hard in the studio. He worked his bollocks off with very limited experience. He tried very hard. And I know he was absolutely chuffed with the whole thing. It was probably one of the highlights of his entire life. Because, even though he was a millionaire, the feeling he got from physically making that record was something which all his money could never buy." Specializing in

VERYONE LOVES NEW ELVIS STUFF by Eddie Hammer

The King's power is like the eternal flame — it never ceases, as you will see by how many new releases we have this month. Please excuse the haphazard order of new titles, which is not as important as the product itself, in my opinion.

The Gospel Series is major news with the release of the first two titles (there will be three more) - He Is My Everything and Nearer My God To Thee. First of all, the cover art was used already on Love Collection and His Hand In Mine (back), which is a disappointing fact to say the least. In the last year or two, Elvis' gospel music has been on many albums, multi-disc sets and boots worldwide. If you're looking for new material, this is not the place to find it. Yes, I love Elvis' versions of "How Great Thou Art," "Crying In The Chapel," "His Hand In Mine," "Amazing Grace" and the two title tracks, but we all have them already. I think the project itself is intriguing, as it will be a set. You know we all must have the new sets, which is a very clever money-maker for RCA; I pat the company on its back for this strategy. The best part of this whole deal is that the CDs will only be sold in religious stores, not your local music shop or mall. Buy them, keep your RCA collection current and shop now because I believe there is a limited number pressed of these religious albums.

Now for a big personal recommendation: Totally Stung by the Madison Company, which naturally has no RCA affiliation. The release's back cover has a picture from an old Yellow Dog boot of Elvis playing the part of a catcher, and the front cover is lifted from the old German picture sleeve for "Wooden Heart" - a short-haired young star (minus sideburns) wearing that red and white knit shirt. This album is his best pre-army session (June 10, 1958 — Studio B, Nashville). RCA wanted to stock up some hits to release during Elvis' army stint. Excellent liner notes give the listener the necessary background of the importance of this recording and why his music caused a worldwide revolution. The album used first-generation tapes and mainly contains six singles that were released periodically -- "I Got Stung," "I Need Your Love Tonight," "A Fool Such As I," "A Big Hunk O'Love" and "Ain't That Loving You Baby." What we have here are all the various takes, outtakes and screw-ups during this session, which lasted for many hours that night. Elvis did not accept two versions of "Ain't That Loving You," and they spent many years in the can. This is a great album, and even though there was a whole album of "I Got Stung" years back, this set is a historically important session, and I can guarantee you'll treasure this CD because of the chatter between and during the recordings. I particularly love his renditions of Hank Snow's "A Fool Such As I," which was overshadowed by the flip's "I Need Your Love Tonight"'s popularity and chart success, and the "extras" "Lawdy Miss Claudy," "One-Sided Love Affair" and "I Was The One" (in my Top 10).

Everyone loves Elvis in Canada (so what else is new?), and the most famous of the Elvis-wanna-bes are Danny Fisher and Lewis Martin, who sent me their Elvis tribute albums, Elvis: A Legendary Performer and That's The Way It Was — very talented guys, much better than the usual impersonators. Keep an eye out for their "Memories Of Elvis" shows if you go for that sort of thing. You already know my feelings on this subject.

If you are living in the U.K. and bought two Sunday Telegraph newspapers, you could send in the contained coupons and receive a slip-cased Elvis: That's The Way It Is CD-ROM. It has four tracks with a press-release photo of the man in a beautiful print polyester shirt that I would love to have. The live performances include "Hound Dog," "Burning Love," "Ghetto" and "You've Lost That Loving Feeling." Also included are the trailer and footage from the revised T.T.W.I.I. Very nice piece but not rare. Quantity: 50,000 issues.

A boot from Chile! Hey, the guys actually did a nice job on Complete Dressing Room Session, with a picture disc and the obligatory "Not For Sale/Demo." The booklet-type cover folds out to a big "Kentucky Rain"-type photo and some shots from the '68 sit-down show. The album contains those infamous rehearsals in June 1968 on the Memphis Sound label with "Young Love," instrumentals of "Guitar Boogie" and "Peter Gun" (remember that show?), "Blue Moon Of Kentucky" and one line from "That's My Desires." Don't miss this one if you have an amigo in South America, or pick up the boot of this boot released two weeks later but without the fold-out cover.

An overseas CD advertised on TV is interesting but a "no buy" for collectors who are not crazy. 50th Anniversary Of Interesting Music has Elvis singing "Love Me Tender," Aretha Franklin, and Bob Dylan, along with Joe Jackson and The Clash!

Malaysia's new King Of R&R, with a gatefold-type insert, is only another "30 of his best," with a rockin', gold-jacketed Elvis on the back cover that is slightly different than any I have ever seen. Agreeable choices on this set are "Angel" and "Girl Of My Best Friend."

Poland's Gold Edition — Greatest Hits, a limited edition of 18 hits, has only "King Creole" from Elvis — a surprising choice. Also, pass on the Live Sessions. It has those same Hayride songs and a bonus (common) interview. It has a double-image cover.

The company who has released the Follow That Dream series now has Elvis 6363 Sunset, (which is RCA's address in Hollywood), another winner with '72 session alternates of "Always On My Mind," "For The Good Times," "C.C. Rider" and "Fool" (not as good as the final release), to name a few. These "Elvis On Tour" rehearsals naturally contain live songs, but for me, the antics, false starts ("Big Hunk O' Love) and being able to listen to Elvis and the guys discuss things and screw around are my favorite parts. A beautiful package and content makes this a "no-brainer" buy!

Brazil hit me with a new CD-ROM, which is graced by a moody-looking king (I've never seen this pose). The liner notes brag of a complete discography, filmography, more than 300 photos from Brazilian mags and hundreds of songs.

A Spanish company is still producing the El Rey Del Rock series (I'm now up to 28 CDs and booklets) with its issues of Elvis albums. Promised Land comes just before Elvis Is Back — clever! One commemorative has Elvis: The Concert. The booklets yield concert pictures, karate poses and Hawaiian vacation photos. I must admit this is a flattering and honorable series of our boy.

Europe's Elvis Live Greatest Hits is a hot seller because it has excerpts from '68 and those early Vegas openings. The unreleased version of "Wonder Of You" is just OK. Nice piece, but we really have it all already. Maybe save your bread for Malaysia's V-CD of Jailhouse Rock in color with my all-time favorite photo — the movie one-sheet picture of his perfect profile (you have to agree with me on that). Remember in the movie when Elvis had very short hair and he first went to jail? A pose from this part of the movie is in the insert, and the two CDs have graphics that look like the cover.

"Are You Lonesome Tonight" is a limited-edition European single (less than $10, so...). European companies have used this piece of Elvis history — "The Laughing Version" — many times before. Try to listen to it and not smile. Impossible! The single is in a red slipcase, and the cover pictures Elvis laughing — perfect.

Also out now is a numbered edition of Suspicious Minds, a three-song CD EP with two versions of the title track and that "Wonder Of You" that I have reported on already — but catch that strong Elvis cover, and you'll buy one (or three, which I did). I was also able to get a CD acetate, which I do not think your local Tower record store stocks, and the press release that was included from RCA/BMG is extremely interesting. If this single goes to #1 (Europe), Elvis would win back his King's crown, because both The Beatles and Elvis had 17 #1 U.K. hits.

On the homefront, Great Love Songs, a two-CD set, has "Love Me" (the first non-single to chart in the Top 10) and "Lonesome Tonight." But, finally, the other choices are excellent — the Southern Gentleman's (Sonny James) "Young Love" (and not that Tab Hunter guy, who is neither a good singer nor actor), Ricky Nelson's "Never Be Anyone," and the great Jack Scott's "Burning Bridges."

A new BMG Special Products job, Very Best Of E.P., a two-CD set with that same Louisiana Hayride pic, is a definite pass — ordinary contents and package.

The DVD of T.T.W.I.I. is now out there finally, as is Welcome Home Elvis, which is only that Frank Sinatra Special TV program (out for many years on video). The latter does contain an interview from when Elvis' army days were over, but that is also on old videos. We are all very familiar with this special — especially that "Witchcraft"/"Love Me Tender" duet and how great Elvis looked in that tuxedo (the cover pic). My favorite from the show is Elvis doing "Fame And Fortune." The high cost of this DVD will deter many folks, and I don't blame them, when the video version is about one-third of the cost. You make the choice on this baby, but don't go by my purchases. I buy each new DVD, which is part of my craziness because I do not have a DVD player yet.

Remember that Green Hill Company, which pressed a love songs collection a while back? They now have part two of their Legendary Masters Series — Elvis Gospel Songs, which is a very nice piece and deserves to be in your collection. Forget the contents, the cover alone is worth the price — a beautiful Elvis. Most of the songs were recorded pre-1973 except for 1974's "If That Isn't Love." Green Hill produces such a clean product that I wish they did more of our boy.

Now, listen to this. I was watching TV one night, and the commercial was from Wyndon International Hotels, whom I have never heard of. The commercial has a maid making up a room for a guest - she replaces a wall painting with a gold record award, blacks out the window, changes the sheets to some wild leopard jobs, etc. Then you see the concierge welcoming a guest and handing him the room key. The only part you see of the guest is his arm, clad with a multi-studded pinkish-white sleeve and gold rings on his fingers, and he utters "Thank you very much" - guess who? I called the Wyndon International corporate offices and raved about their ad, and within a week, they sent me the video of the ad. Nice people, but I always like people who like Elvis (at least the majority of them). Believe me when I say that if there is a Wyndon hotel in any city I hit, I'll be its guest, but I do not think all those amenities will be waiting for me.

New Elvis stamps come from the Falkland Islands, (a set that includes The Beatles, Bill Haley and a Loving You shot and a sheet of Elvis movies: L.M.T., Jailhouse Rock, Loving You, and a wedding pic). A film stars set from there salutes Elvis, Charlie Chaplin, Paul Newman, and Sam Alilane as well as a set of nine of Elvis and Marilyn Monroe — the best set of the month. Turkmenistan has stamps of teddy bears of Elvis, Charlie Chaplin, and one person I didn't know (a very weird set).

In Africa, Rwanda heralds influences of the century — Elvis (pose from '68), The Pope, Marilyn Monroe, and Princess Diana in one set and The Beatles, Elvis, and Walt Disney in another. Angola released a stamp with a Jailhouse Rock picture.

Our man holds the distinction of being the most popular U.S. commemmorative sold. I would just like to have the money spent for the stamps that are in collectors' albums and were never used — much dinero! ("More than 500 million were printed, with an estimated 124 million saved. This popularity gauge is based on annual surveys of 60,000 households that are asked what specific commemorative stamps they buy and do not use as postage in a given fiscal year," said Don Smeraldi of the United States Postal Service. — Ed.)

Let's go to Japan to see a tribute CD single by Aaron Narikiy. "Once More In A Dream" — nice Elvis outfit and a pic disc packaged in a long case. Not bad. A Japanese company also reissued Best Of E.P. with a Vegas background on the cover and even includes lyrics to all the contained songs.

Heartbreak Hotel (Oldies Volume 6) has Nat King Cole and Marilyn Monroe but also includes "Dirty Old Man" by The Three Degrees?!

There is much more to report on, but this is enough to choose from for one month — unless you're like that crazed Elvis guy l know.

Cub Koda The final interview On rockin', writin' and the sad state of country music by Phil Klink

ne of the most interesting stops on the rock 'n' roll timeline would have to have been Detroit circa the late '60s to early '70s when rock music entered its unruly adolescence. I jumped at the chance to interview ex-Brownsville Station frontman Cub Koda for The Toledo Glass Eye. During our 21/2 hour talk at his home office/studio/rock 'n' roll hideaway outside of Ann Arbor, Mich., we touched on all facets of his 37-year career, from his garage-band days with The Del-Tinos to the current reunion with his '80s outfit The Points. We also made stops in between to visit his eclectic solo career and his stint as Hound Dog Taylor's replacement with The Houserockers. Despite his high-energy stage presence, Koda is a very private person, so I was happy to find him open and willing to discuss his place in the Detroit music scene and the part he played in keeping guitar-based rock 'n' roll front and center for so many years - all served up with a dash of The Cubmaster's own unflinching views on life, fame and Shania Twain!

You've been doing this a long time now. Do you still get a charge out of going on stage?

Cub Koda: Yeah, you know I really do! Rock 'n' roll really means something to me, and getting on stage in front of an audience is still exciting.

Even after 37 years?

Oh yeah. I always said there are two ways I'll know when it's time to hang it up — when it's no fun any more or when someone walks away from a Cub Koda show and hasn't been entertained. You know, "Yeah, he was OK, but you should have seen him 25 years ago!" I don't try and present myself as a 25-year-old, unlike some guys who are still squeezing their 50-year-old bodies into Spandex®! If real rock 'n' roll means something to you, then Cub Koda music has a place in your collection. As many diverse areas as I delve in to musically, be it jazz, blues, country or doo-wop, I'll always play honest rock 'n' roll. I still love it!

Why, after 20 years, did it seem like the right time to get The Points back together?

We just all realized how much we missed each other, how much we really missed playing together. It definitely wasn't for the money.

Ever been any talk of a Brownsville Station reunion?

Look, the other guys in Brownsville see the band as a cash cow, you know, make a few bucks, and I'm not interested. One of the reasons we broke up to begin with was that we all wanted something different out of the band. I tried to introduce rockabilly and blues into the band many times, but pressure was kept on the band to be hip and produce more hits.The other guys wanted to be Led Zeppelin or Rod Stewart. I just wanted to do good music.

Do you ever get tired of fans requesting "Smokin' In The Boys Room"? You have to be sick of playing it.

Hey, let's get the "Smokin" thing out of the way right now. I'm very proud of that song. If you could write a song that's made so many people happy for 25 years, wouldn't you? And hey, The Points do a pretty damn good job on it too.

You guys recorded the new album [Noise Monkeys] in one day?

Yeah! We knew that if we• cut another studio disc, it would have to mirror our live show — spontaneous and just rockin' away! It was originally gonna be a live album culled from the reunion show in Fremont, but the rehearsals sounded so good, we used 'em! We just turned on the tape machine and went at it live in the studio. See, this band, unlike Brownsville, has a unified spirit. We play instinctively. We're all on the same page, so to speak. We like the same kinds of music.

The band was always kickin' live. You and guitarist Joey Gaydos always complemented each other musically.

Hey, I think Joey is one of the most underrated guitarists around, and you can really hear him wail on this record. Yeah, complement each other is exactly right. It never turns into a pissing match, just two guys who dig each other's style of playing. As you can tell, I'm really proud of this record for a number of reasons. First, because we got all the original members back together, and second, because this was the record and reunion that almost didn't happen. The week of the reunion show, I ended up in the hospital with congestive heart failure, and it was almost a year later that we finally got together. When you're laid up in the hospital with tubes coming out of you, you have a lot of time to think, and I came to the conclusion that everything I did from here on in, I wanted to really mean something, you know? To do something that will last, not hop the latest trend to sell records. God knows the last thing we need is another fucking trend! Pop music is cyclical, always has been, always will be. There will always be a market for cute teenagers singing innocuous pop songs, but if you wait long enough, the real thing always comes back around.

So how are you now, healthwise?

I'm doing great! I'm writing like a house on fire, and we may do some live dates soon.

Let's go back a bit. We recently lost Brewer Philips of The Houserockers. You played with him for a lot of years.

Yeah, and it's hard to even listen to that music now. World Radio History

Cub Koda performing at his last show, April 9, 2000, in Cleveland, Ohio.

Brewer was my mentor and my friend. He was like a crazy old uncle to me — mean as a snake. He took giving people shit to the level of an art, a sport, but he had a big heart and he taught me a lot about how you really play blues guitar. I had to literally unlearn all the things I thought I knew about blues guitar. Playing with Brewer was like playing with Jimmy Reed or the [Howlin'] Wolf — he was the real thing.

You still enjoy your writing career too, don't you?

I get something from my writing that I could never get out of playing. I get to tell the story. Like the grizzled old guy sittin' around the campfire tellin' how it used to be. I can do liner notes, reviews, work on compilations, and rest assured that future generations of fans know what really happened from someone who lived through it. I didn't read about it or hear about it from an older brother or something, I lived through it. I was there at the birth of rock 'n' roll. It was inspirational music. It was never a "retro" thing for me, it's what I believe in and what I've lived for.

Anything new in the works?

The most dramatic change in music taste in history: the emergence of rock 'n' roll

by William Ruhlmann

This article is the sixth in a series describing the history of recorded music in the 20th century by decade.

hough it marked the middle of the 20th century and the beginning of what would turn out to be the century's decade of greatest change in popular music, the year 1950 seemed in some ways a throwback to past trends rather than a harbinger of new ones. According to chart researcher Joel Whitburn's analysis of the Billboard Best-Selling Pop Singles chart, the year's #1 recording artist was Bing Crosby, a 46-year-old who had made his first recording in 1926 and ranked as the leading record seller of the first half of the century. Crosby's big hits included "Dear Hearts And Gentle People," inspired by 19th-century songwriter Stephen Foster; "Chattanoogie Shoe Shine Boy," a pop cover of a country hit originally recorded by Red Foley (the year's #1 country artist); and two songs

Crosby recorded as duets with his eldest son Gary, a revival of the 1914 Irving Berlin song "Play A Simple Melody" and "Sam's Song (The Happy Tune)" — both clever novelties with counter-melodies. Typically, Crosby had managed to triumph by employing varied material, old and new, mainstream and genreinspired. In at least one action, the appropriation of a country song for the pop market, he was looking ahead. But as popular music became increasingly diverse and balkanized, there would be less room for a generalist such as he was. In 1951, he tumbled to 12th place among recording artists, and that was the last time he placed in the top 20.

The biggest hit of 1950 was another country appropriation, Patti Page's cover of "The Tennessee Waltz," which had been a hit in the country charts for Pee Wee King, who cowrote it with Redd Stewart, in 1948. A sweet-voiced Oklahoma native, Page had debuted in the Pop charts in 1948, but it wasn't until 1950 that she hit #1, first with "All My Love (Bolero)," then with "The Tennessee Waltz." Recorded in her trademark multitracked vocal style, the disc spent 13 weeks at #1, longer than any single since 1947. Right behind "The Tennessee Waltz," also racking up 13 weeks on top, was an even more unlikely hit, "Goodnight Irene." This single was credited to Gordon Jenkins And His Orchestra and The Weavers. Jenkins was a conductor at Decca Records. The Weavers were an urban folk quartet led by Pete Seeger. And "Goodnight Irene" was an adaptation of an old folk song by the thenrecently deceased folk and blues singer Lead Belly. The Weavers would flourish for the next couple of years, scoring two more Top 10 hits, but they ran up against one of the prevailing forces of the politics of the early 1950s — a militant anti-Communist sentiment that devastated the careers of many left-leaning entertainers. An informant who branded some members of the group Communists later recanted his claims, but not before forcing The Weavers to disband. Yet "The Tennessee Waltz" and "Goodnight Irene" ranked as the two biggest chart hits of the entire 1950s, and no record would reign at the top of the Billboard Pop Singles chart for as long as 13 weeks for another 42 years.

In addition to folk and country trends, 1950's most popular music continued a fashion for extremely lighthearted material that had begun to come to the fore in the late 1940s. The year's biggest hits included such novelty fluff as "If I Knew You Were Comin' (I'd've Baked A Cake)," recorded by Eileen Barton; "The Thing," recorded by Phil Harris; "Music! Music!," recorded by Teresa Brewer; "Rag Mop," recorded by The Ames Brothers; and "Hoop-Dee-Doo," recorded by Perry Como with The Fontane Sisters.

Beyond questions of musical style, various technological and business issues drove popular music in 1950. If the singles chart was getting sillier, one reason may have been that there was now an increasingly divided market for music. The introduction of the LP and the 45 rpm single in the late 1940s had begun a division in the record-buying public in which adults tended to buy the more expensive albums (most of which were still in the 10-inch format), while young people, with less money to spend, bought singles. In contrast to the singles chart, the LP chart for 1950 was dominated by the 1949 original Broadway cast album of South Pacific, with other #1s including the original soundtrack album of Three Little Words, a film biography of songwriters Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby starring Fred Astaire and Red Skelton, and Harry James and Doris Days album of songs from the film Young Man With A Horn, all adult fare.

Broadway and Hollywood may have driven album sales, but other media fueled the popularity of singles. Radio was changing from a varied live medium dominated by variety shows and serials into one that played records picked by increasingly influential DJs. Its place as a broadcaster of narrative material was being taken over by television; in 1950, there were already four million TV sets in the U.S., a number that would mushroom quickly. Some recording artists, such as Como and Dinah Shore, had made or were about to make transitions to the new medium. The move to more country and R&B material was fueled by the rivalry between the song licensing agencies ASCAP (American Society Of Composers, Authors And Publishers) and BMI (Broadcast Music, Inc.). ASCAP, by far the older of the two, was dominated by Tin Pan Alley, theater and film writers, who had dominated popular music since the beginning of the century. Rival BMI, founded in 1940, was forced to look elsewhere for clients and ended up encouraging the country and R&rB writers ASCAP had always ignored. This was a major factor not only in the increased success of country and R&rB in the early '50s, but also of the rise of rock 'n' roll, which effected a marriage between the two genres.

Another major factor in changing the sound of popular music was the advent of tape recording. Actually developed by the Germans during World War II, tape recording was brought to the U.S. after the war and encouraged by Bing Crosby Enterprises, the entertainer's corporate entity. Soon, the process of recording had changed drastically and become much easier, which encouraged the founding of more small record companies that began to compete with the majors - Columbia, RCA Victor, Decca and Capitol. According to show business historian Robert C. Toll, the number of recording companies jumped from 11 to 200 between 1949 and 1954. Like BMI, the new independents tended to look for talent in places not already tapped by their better-established rivals. They became niche producers of genres such as jazz, classical and folk music, stimulating the popularity of these marginal styles.

Tape recording also made possible overdubbing like that heard on Page's "The Tennessee Waltz" and paved the way for the top recording act of 1951, Les Paul And Mary Ford, who had three gold singles during the year with "Mockin' Bird Hill," "How High The Moon" and "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise." (It should be noted that, though the Record Industry Association Of America [RIAA] was founded in 1951, it did not begin certifying gold records until 1959, so all earlier designations are unofficial.) Paul, an engineering genius as well as being a talented guitarist, overdubbed his wife's vocals in a manner similar to the Page recordings and also made multiple passes on his guitar to create full-bodied recordings. The year's secondbiggest recording artist also emerged for the first time at the end of 1950. He was Guy Mitchell, the first of a series of protégés of A&R executive Mitch Miller at Columbia. Miller moved to Columbia from Mercury, where he had overseen the success of Page and Frankie Laine (1951's third-biggest recording artist, who had quickly followed him to Columbia). A classical oboist with a keen ear for the pop music of the day, Miller enjoyed stunning success at Columbia in 1951. In addition to Mitchell, he scored hits with newcomers Johnny Ray (the year's #1 song, "Cry"), Tony Bennett (the year's #2 song, "Because Of You" and "Cold, Cold Heart") and Rosemary Clooney ("Come On-A My House"). Miller recognized the popularity of country music, which accounted for 40 percent of all sales of 78s in 1951, and strove to incorporate it into mainstream pop. Hence, he encouraged his artists to record songs by Hank Williams, such as "Cold, Cold Heart" and "Half As Much," which Clooney took to #1 in 1952. The impact of this infusion of new talent made 1951 the first year that records grossed $200 million, on sales of 186 million copies.

That figure inched up to $202 million in 1952 and $205 million in 1953, but these were surprisingly modest increases that indicated all was not well. When we analyze the volcanic eruption of rock 'n' roll that took place in mid-decade, no doubt the most remarkable shift in the nation's taste for popular music that ever occurred, one of the factors that needs to be considered is the relative weakness of pop in the years immediately before. The trend toward novelty music, while it produced many isolated hits, tended to reduce the loyalty of music fans rather than strengthen it. At the same time, it tended to drive out better-written material, which continued to be composed for the Broadway stage and even the diminishing number of movie musicals but which turned up less frequently in the hit parade.

In looking at the popular songs of the years just before the onset of rock 'n' roll, we are hard-pressed to find standards that hold up as even remotely familiar half a century later, unless they were from the country or R&B realms. From 1952, "Don't Let The Stars Get In Your Eyes," "The Glow-Worm" (the music for which was written in 1907). "Hi-Lili, Hi-Lo" and "I Believe" (though the year also produced the memorable country songs "It Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels," "Jambalaya [On The Bayou]," "Your Cheatin' Heart" and "You Win Again," as well as the R&B songs "Lawdy Miss Clawdy" and "Night Train" and the folk song "Wimoweh"). For 1953, "Angel Eyes," "Baubles, Bangles, And Beads" and "Stranger In Paradise" from the Broadway musical Kismet, "The Doggie In The Window" (a novelty that epitomized the era), "Ebb Tide," "That's Amore" and "That's Entertainment" (while country provided "[Now And Then There's] A Fool Such As I" and R&B "Hound Dog"). For 1954, "Fly Me To The Moon (In Other Words)," "Hey There" from the Broadway musical The Pajama Game, "The Man That Got Away" from the film A Star Is Born, "Three Coins In The Fountain" from the film of the same name, and "Young At Heart," the last two associated with Frank Sinatra (the year also producing the R&B songs "I'm Your Hoochie Coochie Man" and "Sh-Boom"). Of these, only "The Glow-Worm," "The Doggie In The Window," "Don't Let The Stars Get In Your Eyes," "Hey There" and "Three Coins In The Fountain" topped the charts.

Admittedly, the list is subjective, but there was a general consensus that great songs on a par with those of the classic pop songwriters of the 1920s, '30s, and '40s, people such as Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, Cole Porter, and Rodgers And Hart, were not being written in the early '50s. It's no wonder that Sinatra, who mounted a remarkable comeback during this period and began a string of 18 consecutive Top 10 albums with 1954's Songs For Young Lovers, did so largely by reviving the work of those songwriters of a generation earlier in striking new arrangements by Nelson Riddle and others. Sinatra commissioned the occasional new song by his personal lyricist, Sammy Cahn, but for the most part he relied on the catalogs of people who had been writing songs during his youth. Sinatra was hardly alone in his taste for music of the recent past. The top of the LP charts in 1952-54 included titles such as the soundtrack to An American In Paris, which consisted of the music of Gershwin: Mantovani's Music Of Victor Herbert, recalling the early 20th century operetta composer; the archival album Benny Goodman 1937-1938 Jazz Concert No. 2, a follow-up to Goodman's 1950 Carnegie Hall Jazz Concert album of his famous 1938 performance; and the soundtrack to The Glenn Miller Story.

But it is a truism in the music business that new music and new artists are the lifeblood of the industry, and relatively few important new artists were emerging in this period. It shouldn't be surprising, therefore, that record sales actually declined in 1954, with total revenues dropping back below $200 million for the first time since 1951.

The obvious thing to say here, of course, is that rock 'n' roll rode in at this point and rescued popular music, and in many ways that's true, even if established people in the business didn't see it that way at the time. But it's also worth examining the circumstances that allowed the rock revolution to occur. We have already noted the increasing incursions of country and R&B music into pop, and the institutions that benefited by encouraging those incursions. It is also true that a new audience was growing in the baby boom generation emerging from World War II, a generation that hadn't yet put on its dancing shoes and for which the Big Bands and the dance halls of the 1930s and '40s no longer stood ready. That audience was more affluent than its parents had been, which made it a natural target for the music business. At the same time, certain developments in the media also prepared for a growth in the industry. By the start of 1955, the LP market had expanded such that, increasingly, 12-inch records were pushing out the shorter 10-inch discs to become the standard. Television, which had increased its coverage and its viewership remarkably during the first half of the 1950s, stood as a dominant medium by the middle of the decade and was becoming a natural means of promoting music. The movie business had been rocked both by television and an antitrust consent decree that separated ownership of the film studios from the theater chains. That helped lead to the rise of cheap, independent films intended for market niches, not the broad audiences traditionally addressed by the major studios. There had always been B-movies (though they were being replaced by television); now there were exploitation movies.

If MGM's The Blackboard Jungle, which opened in February 1955, wasn't quite an exploitation movie, it wasn't far from the definition. Director Richard Brooks' adaptation of Evan Hunter's novel about the experiences of a teacher in an inner-city high school, it was one of those films in which the nominal message may reinforce traditional values, but the surface conflict over whelms that point. Today, we remember it not so much for Glenn Ford's decency as the teacher as for Vic Morrow's aggression as the rebellious student. But, of course, the main thing we remember it for is "(We're Gonna) Rock Around The Clock."

The song had been recorded by 28-year-old Bill Haley and his backup band The Comets on April 12, 1954, and initially released by Decca Records on May 10, when it failed to reach the charts. Haley was a Northerner, born in Highland Park, Mich., who led a series of western swing bands in the late 1940s and early '50s before he hit upon the idea of combining his buoyant style with R&B. Switching his band's name from The Saddlemen to The Comets, he first reached the charts in May 1953 with the Top 10 hit "Crazy Man, Crazy" on Essex Records, then moved to Decca, one of the majors. After the failure of "(We're Gonna) Rock Around The Clock" in 1954, he covered "Shake, Rattle And Roll," recently a #1 R&B hit for Joe Turner, and took it into the Pop Top 5. "Dim, Dim The Lights (I Want Some Atmosphere)," "Birth Of The Boogie" and "Mambo Rock" all peaked in the Top 20 in the first quarter of 1955 before Decca re-released "(We're Gonna) Rock Around The Clock" to tie in with the success of The Blackboard Jungle. It became a massive hit, topping the charts in July.

Various recordings dating back into the 1940s have been cited as the first rock 'n' roll record, but there is no dispute about what the first really successful rock 'n' roll record was. Yet "(We're Gonna) Rock Around The Clock" was not alone in 1955, as a number of records led the way to the new style. In many cases, they were songs that originated with black R&B performers and were covered by white pop performers, later a sore point among rock fans. While not entirely without justification, this resentment should be tempered by an understanding of common practice in the music industry up to this time. Simply put, the business had been founded and, even at this point, continued to rest on the song rather than the singer (or the record) as the primary unit of creativity. The initial dominant force in the music business was song publishing, and singers and their records were viewed primarily as vehicles for selling sheet music. Hence, as a song became popular, it was not unusual for there to be several cover versions released by different record companies, a practice encouraged by the publishers. Initial charts such as that of the Your Hit Parade radio series ranked songs, not particular recordings of them. The proliferation of new record companies in the late 1940s and early '50s exacerbated the tendency toward multiple versions of popular songs. For example, there were seven different versions of "The Tennessee Waltz" in the Billboard singles chart in 1950-51.

Of course, the matter of covering a country or R&B hit to achieve pop crossover was a slightly different phenomenon, but the principle was the same. As R&B and country music began to achieve broader commercial success in the early 1950s, record companies naturally looked to capitalize on that success. with a tried-and-true method. The Penguins' recording of "Earth Angel (Will You Be Mine)" on DooTone Records entered the Billboard R&B chart on Dec. 18, 1954, and rose to #1 on Ian 15 1955 A week after its appearance on the R&B chart, it broke into the Pop chart. On Feb. 5, it rose from #13 to #8; the same week, a white group, The Crew-Cuts, entered the chart with their cover version. The Penguins' recording stalled, while The Crew-Cuts' record surpassed it and reached #3. That spring, LaVern Baker's original recording of "Tweedle Dee," an R&B Top 5 hit, was outdistanced on the Pop chart by Georgia Gibbs' cover, and later in the year, Fats Domino's R&B chart-topper "Ain't It A Shame" (a.k.a. "Ain't That A Shame") gave way on the Pop chart to a cover by Pat Boone. Songwriters and publishers had no reason to complain. even if the R&B artists felt slighted. Of course, they ultimately benefited from the exposure, not to mention the comparison.

What was clearly needed, however, was something that fell in between the authentic R&B sound of the originators and the pale imitations of the cover artists. The two major artists to emerge in the early days of rock 'n' roll were a black man who could sing with careful articulation of the concerns of teenagers and a white man who could sing R&B convincingly. One black act who did not suffer from the pop cover syndrome was Chuck Berry, who topped the R&B charts and reached the Pop Top 5 with his first hit, "Maybellene" in 1955. Though he recorded for Chess Records, a bastion of Chicago blues, Berry early on mixed R&B and country into rock 'n' roll; "Maybellene" was based on "Ida Red," a western swing song cut by Bob Wills. Just weeks before it hit the charts, a performer unlike any country music had known reached the country charts for the first time when Elvis Presley's double-sided single "Baby, Let's Play House" (a cover of an R&B hit for Arthur Gunter)/"I'm Left, You're Right, She's Gone" made the listings on the way to a Top 5 placing.

With such artists, 1955 was a turning point not only in the decade, but in the century. Not surprising, record sales, having dipped in 1954, took a big jump in 1955, rising 16 percent to a new high of $227 million. All that marred that rosy picture was that, from the major labels' point of view, the wrong style of music was selling and, even more important, it was being produced by the wrong companies. Of the 331 records that made the Billboard Pop Singles chart in 1950, 246, or nearly 75 percent, were released by Capitol, Columbia, Decca or RCA Victor. Of the 246 singles that reached the same chart in 1955, only 119, or fewer than 49 percent, were released by the big four. These figures do not count major label subsidiaries such as Decca's Coral and Columbia's Epic, but they are still impressive.

Clearly, it was up to the majors to either join the teenage rock 'n' roll revolution or ignore it, and of the four only RCA took the former path wholeheartedly and in a typical manner — by buying an act who had shown promise on an independent label. RCA bought Elvis Presley's contract from Sun Records for $25,000 on Nov. 20, 1955. Thereafter, things happened rapidly for the young singer from Tupelo, Miss., by way of Memphis, Tenn. On Jan. 5, 1956, he entered RCA's Nashville studio and recorded "Heartbreak Hotel" three days before his 21st birthday. RCA released the single Jan. 17; it was not an immediate success. But the record company and Presley's manager, Colonel Tom Parker, hit upon a crucial promotional concept, inducing Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey to put Presley on their live Saturday night variety program Stage Show, broadcast nationally on CBS, for six consecutive weeks, starting Jan. 28. Presley didn't sing "Heartbreak Hotel" the first week or the second, but he finally did the song on Feb. 11, and that got the ball rolling. The single broke into the charts for the week ending March 3 and hit #1 for the week ending April 21.

This set a pattern that lasted through the year. Presley appeared on a succession of television shows including The Milton Berle Show, The Steve Allen Show and The Ed Sullivan Show, and his records dominated the charts, hogging the #1 spot for 25 of the year's 52 weeks with "Heartbreak Hotel," "I Want You, I Need You, I Love You," "Don't Be Cruel"/"Hound Dog" and "Love Me Tender." He even made incursions into the LP charts, hitting #1 with Elvis Presley and Elvis. In all, he sold more than 10 million records in 1956, more than any single recording artist had sold in a single year.

Neither was Presley the only rocker racking up big record sales in 1956, as Bill Haley & The Comets and Domino also figured among the year's top 20 artists, joined by newcomer Little Richard, while Memphis also gave the world Johnny Cash and Roy Orbison. Little wonder that the record industry's gross revenues jumped from $227 million to $331 million, an increase of more than 45 percent. 1957 was more of the same. Now making movies instead of appearing on TV, Presley was at #1 for 26 weeks in the singles charts with "Too Much," "All Shook Up," "(Let Me Be Your) Teddy Bear" and "Jailhouse Rock" and at the top of the LP charts with Loving You and Elvis' Christmas Album. Meanwhile, Ricky Nelson, The Everly Brothers, Jerry Lee Lewis, and Buddy Holly & The Crickets made their chart debuts, and gross revenues crossed the $400 million mark.

As quickly as rock 'n' roll had achieved songs starting with Sing Along with Mitch, this success, however, its initial wave began to recede. Despite the unprecedented sales climb, but the rate of increase slowed. At $438 the new musical style brought to the induct information, gross revenues were up 9.5 percent try, the music business - at least the major labels that still dominated it -- didn't really support rock 'n' roll. They did recognize, however, that it had ushered in a whole new, young audience that could be exploited. All along, non-rock music had still been selling. If 1956 was the year of "Heartbreak Hotel," it was also the year of Gogi Grant's "The Wayward Wind," Dean Martin's "Memories Are Made Of This," and Nelson Riddle's "Lisbon Antigua." It was also the year when the LP charts were dominated by Harry Belafonte's Calypso, which foreshadowed the folk boom, as well as the original Broadway cast album of My Fair Lady and the motion picture soundtracks to the musicals Oklahoma! and The King And I. Boone turned away from covering rock songs to scoring hits with ballads such as "Love Letters In over the previous year.

On Feb. 3, 1959, Holly, Ritchie Valens, and The Big Bopper were killed in an airplane crash, an event that became symbolic of the decline of rock 'n' roll, remembered by Don McLean nearly 13 years later as "the day the music died." And on Dec. 23, 1959, Berry was arrested for violation of the Mann Act, which prohibited taking a minor across state lines for immoral purposes. That set in motion a series of legal complications that effectively would put him out of action until his release from prison in 1964.

In its continuing efforts to turn back the tide of rock 'n' roll, the music industry set up the National Academy Of Recording Arts And Sciences (NARAS), which, on May 4, 1959, awarded the first group of Grammy awards to recording artists for recordings

What was clearly needed, however, was something that fell in between the authentic R&B sound of the originators and the pale imitations of the cover artists. The two major artists to emerge in the early days of rock 'n' roll were a black man who could sing with careful articulation of the concerns of teenagers and a white man who could sing R&B convincingly.

> The Sand" and "April Love" in 1957, and he inspired a wave of clean-cut pop singers such as Johnny Mathis, Paul Anka, Connie Francis, and the film stars Tab Hunter and Debbie Reynolds. A signal moment in this trend occurred on Aug. 5, 1957, when DJ Dick Clark took his local Philadelphia TV show Bandstand national, and American Bandstand began airing every weekday afternoon, promoting a softer, more conventional style of music. On Oct. 12, 1957, in Sydney, Australia, rock 'n' roll suffered its first of a series of casualties when Little Richard renounced his musical career and announced his intention to become a minister.

> Rock 'n' roll really began to collapse in 1958, however. On March 24, Presley was inducted into the U.S. Army, which didn't end his run at the top of the charts - he still managed to be the #1 recording artist of the year — but did slow him down. In May, Lewis' career was wrecked by the scandal surrounding his marriage to his 13-year-old second cousin. Meanwhile, the year's artist debuts included Frankie Avalon, Dion And The Belmonts, Jan & Dean, Bobby Darin, and Neil Sedaka, continuing the trend toward softer music. The Kingston Trio's "Tom Dooley" heralded the start of the folk boom. The soundtrack to South Pacific became the biggest-selling LP of the second half of the 1950s, and other chart toppers among albums included the original Broadway cast album of The Music Man; the soundtrack to the movie musical Gigi; the first greatest hits album, Johnny's Greatest Hits by Mathis; and two Sinatra albums, Come Fly with Me and Frank Sinatra Sings For Only The Lonely. But the major new trend in LPs was Miller's series of choral records of traditional songs starting with Sing Along with Mitch, released in May. Record sales continued to climb, but the rate of increase slowed. At $438 released during 1958. Henry Mancini's The Music From Peter Gunn was named Album Of The Year, while Record Of The Year and Song Of The Year went to "Nel Blu Dipinto Di Blu," written and recorded by Domenico Modugno. The closest thing to a rock 'n' roll nominee was The Champs' "Tequila," which won the Grammy for Best Rhythm & Blues Performance. For years to come, the Grammys would lead the charge against rock.

Finally, in November 1959, New York district attorney Frank Hogan subpoenaed the financial records of several recording companies in an attempt to investigate their involvement in payola, setting off a national scandal that led to Congressional hearings and ruined the careers of many DJs, among them Alan Freed, who had been an early advocate of rock 'n' roll. Though the scandal exposed illegal practices in the music business, it was also a vendetta against rock ---the implication being that the music wouldn't sell unless teenagers were forced to listen to it. Of course, payoffs for the promotion of popular music had been going on as long as the music industry had existed, but the payola scandal was used against rock.

As the decade came to a close, teen pop continued to flourish, with Fabian and Bobby Rydell among the year's new artists. But 1959 also saw the Pop chart debuts of Chubby Checker, The Isley Brothers, and The Miracles, acts who would provide exciting music in the early 1960s. At very least, popular music had become far more diverse in the 1950s and in so doing expanded its audience, with sales crossing over the halfbillion mark by the end of the decade. That, of course, was only the beginning.

Next up later this year: The 1960s.

Radiohead

RADIOHEAD Amnesiac Capitol (2435-32764-2)

Burdened by extreme expectations after delivering three consecutive masterpieces, including last year's Kid A, Radiohead's Amnesiac is bound to disappoint by comparison. In addition, the thirst for new Radiohead simply isn't as great as when Kid A was released after a three-year layoff, giving Amnesiac even more to live up to given its rather low-key emergence.

The album was recorded at the same time as Kid A, and it's tempting to consider Amnesiac not as the band's next album proper but as leftovers from those sessions. This is especially true since it continues in the same vein as Kid A (which itself was vastly different from all of the band's other releases), albeit with a much warmer overall glow compared to the coldly mysterious aura conveyed by Kid A. As such, Amnesiac breaks little new ground and seems like baby steps compared to the giant leaps taken by its predecessors.

Judged solely on its own merits, however, Amnesiac has several outstanding highlights. "Pyramid Song" delivers bright and lovely atmospherics, "You And Whose Army?" starts slowly but soon surges with a symphonic power, "Knives Out" is quite simply one of the band's most beautiful songs yet, and "Dollars & Cents" contains striking multi-tracked vocals from singer Thom Yorke. Elsewhere, however, the band delivers too many dreamy mood pieces that work best as background music and abstract (not to mention murky) electronica experiments. The fact that the admittedly gorgeous "Morning Bell" is reprised from Kid A suggests that new ideas were harder to come by on this collection (or that they had already been used up on Kid A), a point that's reinforced by "Hunting Bears," an also-not-quite-necessary instrumental interlude.

All of which makes me think that, like U2, perhaps it's time for Radiohead to deliver a back-to-basics guitar-based album. For, despite its often fascinating layers of electronic sound that even die-hards will need to listen to several times in order to fully appreciate, Amnesiac offers little that the band hasn't already done better before. It's still a good and intermittently great album, but I can't get past the feeling that Amnesiac is but a placeholder release until the band's next brilliant reinvention.

THE GO-GO'S God Bless The Go-Go's Beyond/BMG Music (BY-78182-2)

Among the more worthwhile musical memories of the early 1980s are The Go-Go's, the distaff California five-piece that served up a unique mix of punk-influenced power chords and perky exuberance in the course of charting sunny hits such as "We Got The Beat" and "Vacation." Since the group disbanded in 1985, the possibility of a fresh batch of tunes has come up several times in the wake of reunion tours and greatest hits packages, but God Bless The Go-Go's is the band's first album of new material since 1984. The best flavors of years past are rediscovered more than once over the course of the set, but just as often the results feel forced and forgettable.

Lead singer Belinda Carlisle gamely fronts the material in familiar ways, segueing between breathy ease and a blaring ring atop the grinding grouchiness of "Automatic Rainy Day." The slight ragged edge that occasionally slips into her delivery seems natural amid the breakneck punk-pop lines set by guitarists

Postmodern fusion of a highly engaging and largely appealing order, Action Figure Party is as arch, and nearly as addictive as its concept. Vocalist Greg Kurstin's idea, apparently, is animating action figures — figures which, of course, are still lifes until they break free of their bases. Kurstin has blended all sorts of jazz idioms — the sanitized blues of Lewis is the most obvious model, the swirl of Weather Report's Joe Zawinul is another — with turntable-ism, percussion, both synthetic and organic, and lyrics that span the superficial (the title track) and the insightful ("Clock Radio").

Sparked by the frequently brilliant keyboards, witty lyrics and less-than-memorable vocals of Kurstin, Action Figure Party spans the fusion of "Everybody's Ready," the bright riffing of "Pong Baby," the slinky

Indie label spotlight

voodoo of "No Sleep" and the watery, mysterious "Geffem," one of the album's most successful tracks. Kurstin is good at pacing, too: Separating the marbleized "Geffem" from the pushy, funky "Clapper" (the album's most Ramsey Lewis-derived track) with the dreamy "Green" was inspired.

The textures are nuanced and intense, the musicianship spirited and unexpected. Kurstin, who has worked with Red Hot Chili Peppers, bop vibraharpist Bobby Hutcherson and in the promising alt-rock band Geggy Tah, has assembled a motley, diverse crew spanning Peppers rock, Cibo Matto's idiot-savant worldbeat and the salty, eccentric funk of Soul Coughing. His coworkers here include Sean Lennon, Buckcherry guitarist Yogi, and Peppers bassist Flea. There's nothing strained about this product, even though there are times it's a bit too clever for its own good. Some tunes are more successful than others; "Flow," the Chick Corea-like song that caps the album, is more about influence than originality. It's clear the musicians of AFP like working together. It's also clear it might be another album or two before they generate warmth commensurate with their cleverness. — Carlo Wolff

Just out: Ike Turner & The Kings Of Rhythm's Here And Now (IKDN Records) is a triumphant return to center stage for Turner, who delves into his blues roots on this new album, even returning to the King's 1951 smash "Rocket '88," considered to be the first rock 'n' roll song. Liner notes were contributed by Goldmine writer Bill Dahl... Joe Flood, whose songs have been covered by The Band, The Bottle Rockets, and Laura Cantrell, just released Cripplin' Crutch, which features half of Steve Earle's current touring band ... The Waterboys' A Rock In The Weary Land (Razor & Tie) is being released in the U.S., long after its release last year in Europe ... Patti Austin's 15th album is On The Way To Love (Warner Bros.)... Guitarists Paul Barrere and Fred Tackett, 25-year-plus veterans of Little Feat and session guitarists for everyone from Bob Dylan and Bonnie Raitt to Taj Mahal and The Wallflowers, just released Live From North Café (Relix Records), a collection of Little Feat songs and covers done with a twist ... Harp player and multi-W.C. Handy Award winner Rod Piazza & The Mighty Flyers newest is Beyond The Source (Tone-Cool) ... Neil Zaza, ranked alongside fellow guitarists extraordinare Steve Vai and Joe Satriani, just released Staring At The Sun (Nuerra), which includes Journey drummer Steve Smith and Journey bassist Ross Valery .. Speaking of Satriani, the guitarist just released the double album Live In San Francisco (Epic), recorded during concerts at the fabled Fillmore West in San Francisco... Gordon Downie, lead singer of The Tragically Hip, just released a solo album, Coke Machine Glow (Zoe).

Coming up: Aug. 6 is the release date for roots-rocker Mary Currufello's Songs From The 6, her first album in two years. The album was recorded live on a cassene player in room 223 at Motel 6 in Goodlettesville, Tenn. The album is being released on her own label (25 Story Drop, Box 667097, Houston TX 77266; $15). Due Aug. 21 from Glenn Hughes is Building The Machine (SPV) ... Slayer's next album, God Hates Us All (American Recordings), is due Aug. 28... Also due Aug. 28 is blueswoman Rory Block's I'm Every Woman (Rounder) Jazz sax giant Charles Lloyd's new Hyperion (ECM) album is due out this September. Among other notable achievements, Lloyd's 1966 classic Forest Flower was the first jazz LP to sell more than a million copies; he was the first jazz artist to play at San Francisco's legendary Fillmore West (in 1966. with Muddy Waters and The Paul Butterfield Blues Band also on the bill); and he also recorded with The Beach Boys on their classic Surf's Up and Holland albums. - Greg Loescher

VARIOUS ARTISTS Washington Square Memoirs: The Great Urban Folk Boom (1950-1970) Rhino (R2 79787)

Were the '60s folkies commie pinkos or merely rebels from middle-class conformity whose youthful dreams of world brotherhood (when that wasn't a sexist term) accompanied a retrenching to simple old musical styles with more lyrical substance than Chubby Checker hits offered?

In New York City, Greenwich Village's Washington Square Park became a carnival of pickers - skilled and otherwise digging up old jug-band tunes and penning their own ditties. The authoritative three-CD, 72-song Washington Square Memoirs: The Great Urban Folk Boom (1950-1970) box set starts with the folk inspiration of Woody Guthrie's "Hard Travelin'" and closes with his hippie son Arlo's comic rap "Motorcycle Song" and "School Days" by Loudon Wainwright III, whose "venomous little songs... satirized the image of the folkie as the morally superior entertainer," read perceptive Barry Alfonso's delightfully candid notes.

On the set, we find all the major players: the blacklisted Weavers (their stalwart tenor Pete Seeger as a solo), booming Odetta, "rebel with a million causes" Phil Ochs, earth mother Judy Collins, charttoppers Peter, Paul & Mary and The Kingston Trio. Little-remembered talents include bluesy Judy Roderick, North Georgia's Hedy West (author of "500 Miles") and subtle Paul Siebel. Pure-voiced Canadian Bonnie Dobson says in the notes that the post-H-bomb film On The Beach inspired her "Morning Dew," a future Grateful Dead cover.

While The New Lost City Ramblers treated trad styles with reverence, the brain-addled Holy Modal Rounders goofed with them on "Euphoria." The Rooftop Singers updated Gus Cannon's Jug Stompers' 1929 "Walk Right In" to a #1 hit.

As for future popsters, we hear the Lovin' Spoonful's John Sebastian in The Even Dozen Jug Band, Mama Cass Elliot in The Big Three, Papa John Phillips and Scott McKenzie in The Journeymen, and Barry ("Eve Of Destruction") McGuire in Barry & Barry. From Seeger's expatriate half-sister Peggy, the soft "First Time Ever I Saw Your Face" (penned to her by husband Ewan MacColl) predates by 10 years Roberta Flack's 1972 hit cover.

The urban bluegrass revivalist Greenbriar Boys and a few more acts here actually played in Washington Square. Others, such as Joan Baez, only visited the city.

Arranged more or less chronologically, --- no surprise --45 percent of the tracks are from Elektra (which, like Rhino, is now owned by Warner Brothers) and Vanguard. Fans with programmable CD players might experiment with switching tracks 12 and 15 on disc two so Baez's somber "There But For Fortune" aurally flows between her protégé Bob Dylan's "Boots Of Spanish Leather" and Jesse Colin Young's quiet "Four In The Morning" instead of dampening the exuberance amid a jug-band set.

As we moved out of the President Eisenhower years, folk music was, in Alfonso's words, "the dirt hidden under the fresh new linoleum," but it was also thought to be a linchpin in forging a better world. Dylan's "Blowin' In The Wind" and "The Hammer Song" offered simple messages (some would say simplistic), but for an idealistic moment at least, American youth was hungry for them.

THE ORGONE BOX The Orgone Box Minus Zero (MZR-05) (U.K. Import)

Here's the history behind this one: a British chap called Rick Corcoran penned and released a pulsating little pop-psych track (under the name Orange, on U.K. Chrysalis Records) titled "Judy Over The Rainbow" during 1994 and promptly disappeared from the scene for a bit. Apparently, The Orgone Box was originally a collection of demos and was released in 1996 (in Japan only, yet) and quickly vanished, but the good folks at Minus Zero somehow unearthed it and are giving it a much-deserved second life.

The Orgone Box showcases the substantial talents of Corcoran, who manages to blend some of Robyn Hitchcock's quintessentially British psychedelic quaintness with a smattering of current indie-pop heroes Cotton Mather's thick guitar sound, along with a splash of John Lennon-esque vocals. The results are absolutely mind-blowing when everything clicks, as it does on just about every track.

"Judy Over The Rainbow" is the centerpiece of The Orgone Box and it's quite a delightful confection, with a "She Said, She Said"-like verse that glides effortlessly into a soaring, impossibly perfect chorus. As powerfully enticing as it is, it's merely the tip of Corcoran's songwriting iceberg: the trippy "Hello Central... Give Me Ganymede," the forcefully rockin' "World

Out now: Spencer Davis Group's Gimme Some Lovin' (Sundazed) includes the hit title cut, "Somebody Help Me" (#47) and "Keep On Running" (#76) plus eight bonus tracks, many previously unreleased in the U.S. Available for the first time on CD, the album also includes an exclusive interview with Spencer Davis and liner notes with rare pictures. The band's #7 smash title cut features the vocals of a then-teenaged Steve Winwood, of Blind Faith and Traffic fame, as well as a major solo artist in the '80s and '90s. Sundazed also reissued the group's I'm A Man album, featuring the title cut from 1967 a #10 hit - and eight bonus tracks, many previously unreleased in the U.S, plus another Spencer interview... On 180gram vinyl from Sundazed comes the rare 1969 self-titled psych album by The Music Emporium. It is the first-ever legitimate reissue of the double album, which features five bonus tracks, the original die-cut gatefold cover, rare photos and interviews with the entire band ... The first-ever live album released by '80s MTV heavies Loverboy, Live Loud And Loose (1982-1986) (Columbia/Legacy), is being supported this summer by a limited tour. The set includes Loverboy's hits such as "Working For The Weekend," "Lovin' Every Minute Of It" and "This Could Be The Night," among others ... The Best Of Pablo Cruise ("Love Will Find A Way") is out as part of A&M's continuing series, The 20th Century Masters: The Millennium Collection ... even hip-hoppers get nostalgic: Coolio. Fantastic Voyage: The Greatest Hits (Tommy Boy) covers the artist's decade-long run of hits from three successful albums... The only albums released by Matching Mole, a self-titled 1972 debut and Little Red Record (the latter produced by King Crimson's Robert Fripp) are back in circulation, thanks to Cuneiform Records. Matching Mole was formed by early prog band Soft Machine's Robert Wyatt.

Coming soon: Collectables' Aug. 14 releases include three Sergio Mendes bossa nova albums on two CDs: In Person At El Matador!, Pelé and Sergio Mendes' Favorite Things. The label is also reissuing 14 Herbie Mann albums as two-CD sets, except the two-fer single disc with The Beat Goes On/The Herbie Mann String Album. The double-discs include Turtle Bay/ Discotheque, Waterbed/Surprises, Bird In A Silver Cage/Fire Island, Right Now/Latin Fever, The Roar Of The Greasepaint/ Today and Mellow/Hold On I'm Coming ... Rhino will be releasing deluxe reissues of Elvis Costello's entire catalog, beginning Aug. 21 with My Aim Is True, Spike and All This Useless Beauty. Every title in the reissue series will be a double disc but priced at retail as a single disc. The first disc will be the album as it was originally released, with alternate takes, B-sides demos, etc. taking up disc two. The albums will be released thematically rather than chronologically ... Aug. 28 is the release date for Dean Martin's 16-song Italian Love Songs compilation. The album comes on the heels of the DVD/VHS release of Martin's That's Amore, featuring highlights from the nine-year run of the television variety show, The Dean Martin Show ... Due Sept. 11 from EMI is the David Gilmore-produced Best Of Syd Barrett: Wouldn't You Miss Me. EMI will also reissue the Blondie catalog in the near future... Miles Davis 75th Anniversary projects have new street dates, according to Columbia/Legacy; Live @ The Filmore East (3/7/70): It's About That Time is moved from July 17 to Aug. 21, The Complete In A Silent Way Sessions moves from Sept. 11 to Sept. 18 and The Last Word: The Warner Bros. Recordings (1985-91) moves from September to October (no exact release date given) ....

Collectors still digging for 45s — Top 10 list worth more than $121,000

The recently published Goldmine Price Guide To 45 RPM Records, 3rd Edition, by Tim Neely lists more than 70,000 45s from the past 50 years, including 10,000 new listings and many never-before-seen titles. And eight-page color section is also new to the updated edition. Goldmine editor Greg Loescher caught up with Neely to ask him about the new reference book and the state of the 45 collecting hobby.

Goldmine: In doing your research for this new edition, what kind of trends in 45 collecting have you noticed since the last update?

Tim Neely: I think the most important trend is that the 45 remains the most collectible recording format, even though the average person hasn't even seen a new one in more than a decade. I sense that many new collectors are entering the field, even younger collectors. They're drawn by several things: Their parents still have some, perhaps even some records the kids have heard on the radio on their classic rock or oldies station or in a movie. Some current hits are available only on 45s, and they're still less expensive than other formats (assuming, of course, that you can find the 45s). You can build an impressive collection of just about any kind of popular music from the past 50 years on 45s without spending a lot of money if you don't want to. However, because many of these new collectors grew up listening to music without surface noise, the condition of the records becomes even more important than ever.

In some of the Market Beat column responses from dealers we've published in Goldmine this year, '70s funk records have been hot. What can you tell us about these records as far as hot funk artists and price changes in funk 45s since the previous edition?

The kings of funk are James Brown and Parliament/Funkadelic. Their common records are, well, common. I'm seeing, though, that even common records from the 1970s are starting to creep up in price. Some of their non-hit material — Brown, especially, recorded prolifically, and not every one of his singles was a hit — is quite hard to find.

We've had a few major deaths in the music

Frank Wilson's rare "Do I Love You (Indeed I Do)" 45 on Soul is worth $20,000 in near mint condition.

field this year, such as John Lee Hooker, Perry Como, and Joey Ramone. Some of Hooker's 45s are in the $1,200 to $1,500 range, while Como and Ramone (as a member of the Ramones) are far less collectible, with the highest prices being in the $25-$30 range. How much will their deaths play a part in the collectibility of their 45s?

With Hooker, I think even with some discs in four figures, some others could join them there. Most of his 45s were not popular when they were issued, and thus they're rather tough to find today, especially in high grades. For Como, a few unusual items, such as the 10-EP box set from 1957, may go up. But he's not held in that high a regard by collectors, and his death isn't likely to change that. With the Ramones, I see plenty of potential for growth. They could be a 1970s version of Velvet Underground, a band that sold no records except, so the story goes, to people who later formed their own bands. As they never had a real hit single, at least not one that made the Top 40, all of their 45s are harder to find than the values indicate. Especially if the Ramones make The Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame (they're eligible on the next ballot), look for their 45s to rise.

You mention in your introduction the rising popularity and collectibility of The Rolling Stones, who have always been overshadowed by their British Invasion brethren, The Beatles, but now are ranking right up there with them. Why the long delay in getting to that level? After all, the Stones are still (basically) intact and have 30 more years of recorded and touring history under their thumbs.

That may indeed have been the problem with their collectibility — many people took them for granted. The same was true with The Beatles in the 1970s; at the time, many of their items were definitely undervalued compared to their rarity, even though they'd broken up and kept saying they'd never get back together. It took John Lennon's murder for people to realize that, indeed, the dream was over. There was never really that sense of urgency with the Stones; after all, unlike The Beatles, the Stones have lost key members during their years of fame — Brian Jones, Mick Taylor, and most recently Bill Wyman — but simply replaced them and kept going. Finally, I think many collectors realized just how staggeringly rare some of their items are; the competition for those few copies that hit the market is intense.

Let's talk about the cream of the crop those Elvis Presley Sun 45s. What's been happening to their prices and collectibility?

Elvis Suns never seem to fade away. In fact, with relatively few near mint and even VG-plus copies out there, collectors are starting to scarf up VG and even lower grades for unheard-of prices, just to be able to say "I've got an Elvis Sun." Another interesting facet to Elvis Suns is that, for some people, obvious signs of wear add to their legitimacy. After all, most counterfeits and reproductions tend to look "too good to be true." A well-loved Elvis Sun is far, far more likely to be the real deal.

What artists, genres or eras have you noticed picking up in collector interest since the 2nd edition, which was published in Spring 1999?

We've gone through most of the obvious ones. I think I ought to mention that picture sleeves are a pretty hot area, too. Many sleeves, especially from the 1950s and 1960s, are much more rare than previously thought, and some of the pricing remains pretty unstable on those items. In other words, you might have to pay a lot more than the listed value for some of those obscure sleeves.

You added a record label identifier to this edition. Why?

Many 45s have been reissued with the same label and number over the years. Not every label created a "golden oldies" or "back to back hits" series, in which two popular songs, previously issued separately, were paired on the same disc. Some labels kept the same pairings with the same numbers in print for years, even decades. If a record came out in 1955 but it has a 1960s style label, it's going to be a reissue, and in most cases it sells for a lot less than the 1955 pressing on the earlier label. In most cases, the original labels are the most sought-after because they're the originals. What is unusual in a way is that many of the reissues are much more rare than the originals, but because most record collectors seek the original editions, those are the ones that have value. Thus the label identifier guide.

What advice would you give to someone just starting to collect 45s, especially a younger person?

Collect what you like. Even if your 45s aren't in perfect shape, and even if they aren't truly rare, they'll still give you enjoyment when you put them on your turntable. Very few people ever get rich collecting records; even big-ticket items are not that big compared to many other areas of collecting.

One piece of advice, though: If you like current pop, R&B or country and a 45 exists of that title, get it. They cost $2-$3 each today, but they won't cost that little in the future. Oh yes, another recommendation: Get the best condition you can afford.

Any final thoughts on the book, your research or the 45 market?

For the first time, the 3rd Edition of the Goldmine Price Guide To 45 RPM Records has an eight-page color section in it, including many rare and unusual picture sleeves, some colored vinyl 45s plus a color label identifying guide for one of the major labels — Capitol. We hope to publish an identification guide to at least one label in each new edition — a good reason to save them once a new edition comes out!

me musically. Hey, it's pretty obvious that I believe in what I do. I'm really proud of my solo stuff. I'm thinking of doing a jazz record and a hillbilly record yet. That's hillbilly, not country — I don't do country! What I like bears no resemblance to the crap Garth Brooks or Shania fuckin Twain does! I just find those two highly offensive. Garth has destroyed more country records than a raging warehouse fire!

I talked with Gaydos a while back, and he told me that compared to the first [Points] record, you loosened the reins a bit and gave the band some freedom as far as the production and stuff. He mentioned that since your hospital stay, you seem to have mellowed a bit. A kinder, gentler Cubmaster? Was this one of those near-death life-changing things?

Oh yeah, very much so! I realized I didn't have to do everything myself. I had my guys to help me out, you know? Like I said, we're all on the same page musically. The Points are just another link in the long chain of Detroit rockers. We still live by the old saying, which reads, in its entirety, "Kick out the jams, motherfuckers, or we'll get someone up there that will!" And now that we're older, we seem to play with more abandon than ever. We don't try to hide, our age — we revel in it! The "gotta be cool" factor has been replaced with the "don't give a shit" factor! Some people will never get this music. Fuck 'em!

Thank God there are still a few bands keeping the Detroit sound alive!

Hey, the whole Detroit thing is about attitude. The [MC]5 didn't sound like the [Amboy] Dukes, SRC didn't sound like Frost, Third Power didn't sound like Brownsville, but they all shared the attitude. It was whoever rocked the house the hardest [who] was the best until another band came along and could do it better. It was a very competitive scene, yet we all supported each other.

You've had quite a career: musician, writer, producer, historian.

Hey Phil, I've been blessed! I've lived a charmed life! I've never had to get a "real" job. I've had the opportunity to do exactly what I want. The way I look at it is, hey, every day is a gift. I've realized after all this time, that what I do affects a lot of people and that a lot of people really enjoy what I do! I have an extremely devoted bunch of fans.

Many of whom live in Fremont, Mich.!

Yeah, I never could figure that out! I could show up there with nothing but a piano and a Schick™ electric razor, and they would still come out to see me! God bless 'em! You know, I just kinda realized lately, that there are people who look at me the same way that I look at someone like Link Wray or Jerry Lee [Lewis], people who really dig what I do, and I'm amazed! I guess I just never pictured myself that way. It's something that makes me want to do the best quality music I can do, ya know? Ya gotta play from the heart anything less and you're cheating the audience.

It doesn't sound like you're slowing down any. No, I just wanna keep doing what I do and do it as well as I can. I may not have a million dollars in the bank, but I think I've done some damn good things over my career, and doing this thing with Joe, Pete, and Fred was real important to me. And after this last year, I've come to realize that a lot of people care about me. I was really touched at the support I had. I write for the All Music Guide on the Web. I have the respect of my peers, the freedom to play what I want. I've got my toys [gestures to the many guitars hanging on the walls], been married to the same woman for 25 years — I couldn't be happier! And looking back, if I made someone happy, just made 'em forget their problems for a while by playing guitar and singing, then I did good. I did all right.

Just a few short months after sitting for this interview, the first he had given in a long time, my good friend Cub Koda was gone. I had known him for 20 years and was numb when I heard the sad news. I had talked with him just days before his death, and he was upbeat and anxious to get back on stage again. Eerily though, the day after the interview. Cub e-mailed me and asked me to add that he had always hoped to be remembered like one of his idols, Carl Perkins, one of the most humble and genuinely nice guys in the business. He told me that he always had difficulty reconciling his humble "Carl" side with his egotistical "Jerry Lee" side, but he was working on it. I can't help but think that somehow, he "knew." As an inexperienced writer for a local music paper, his advice to me was invaluable. Koda always told me to write from the heart and try to find positive things to say - it's much too easy to tear something down. During the interview, I had a sense that he was desperately worried about how he would be remembered after he was gone. After attending his funeral and reading the numerous testimonials written in the trade publications, I can honestly say that he'd had nothing to worry about. I am truly honored that Koda considered me a friend, and I am gratified that I provided him with an outlet to say what he felt needed to be said. Shortly after this interview, Koda told Gaydos that it was the best interview he had ever done. I hope it gives those who didn't know him a little glimpse of the man his friends knew as The Cubmaster. We will all miss him very much.

Bargain In Haggle.com

What's the difference between online auctions and online gambling? On some sites, not one thing.

On bargainandhaggle.com, you're not dealing with an auction site. You're actually dealing with a person. That's because bargainandhaggle.com lets the seller and buyer work one-on-one. Once a seller posts an item with an asking price, a buyer makes an offer. Then they negotiate, during which time either side can accept the terms of the sale, make a counter offer, or move on. So whether you're buying or selling, you can be sure about one thing. However you play it, it's still your deal.

Everything from 45 and album covers to sheet music, magazines and the records themselves have easyto-use framing products that allow for quick changes. Left: Phonographics' products. Right, Rock Art Picture Show's 45 and album sleeve frames come with mattes.

Don't store your albums, frame them!

Ibums, 45 sleeves and sheet music are more than just treasured memorabilia or forgotten items gathering dust in the basement. They can make great wall displays as well. We all have at least one album cover (probably many) we like because of its historical significance in our personal lives or the fact that it's a rare "trophy" item such as The Beatles Butcher Cover album. It doesn't matter if the albums are worth $1 or $5,000 — seeing them framed on the wall beats having them in a box somewhere.

Many recording artists and record labels spend a lot of time designing their sleeves and use fine artists to produce lasting works of art. Examples of artists who employ great artwork include The Moody Blues, Yes, Passport and others. Head shots of solo artists also make great framed wall displays. Fans can even place copies of all of a favorite artists albums in chronological order on a wall, giving viewers an idea of how an artist has progressed (or in some cases, regressed!) over the years. Picture discs are always fun to display, whether they are Vogue Records picture discs of the 1940s, heavy-metal discs from the '80s or anything inbetween.

While exploring the various framing options available in this article, keep in mind where you would like to place your albums, how much you are willing to spend and how permanent you want the framing to be.

Many of the newer framing products make it easy to switch items, unlike conventional framing where there is no turning back after the item is framed.

One record company executive called Goldmine recently, asking advice on his label's plans to frame all the albums the label has released so kar, which in this case was several hundred. He also wanted to have some of its

If you're not sure how you want items framed, maybe buy one each of several different types of frames and then decide which ones fit your needs. gold records displayed, and those obviously needed a more upscale look. The way to go when displaying a lot of albums, sleeves or sheet music is to purchase the less-expensive models made of acrylic or the more moderately priced frames discussed in this article. Go the high-end route only when you have something of extreme value (and have the money to pay for the framing!).

One note before you frame your items: take the records out before framing the covers. Buy some generic white cardboard sleeves from used record stores or mail-order dealers such as Bags Unlimited (see their ad on page 3 of this program) to place the records in for safekeeping while the covers are on display.

There is a wide range of framing products available to collectors and music fans, ranging from inexpensive (from $6-$25), to expensive (up to $70) to extravagant ($200 and up for custom framing with archival-quality matte board). Be aware that some of the less expensive models do not have enough room for thicker double and gatefold album covers.

If you're not sure how you want items framed, maybe buy one each of several different types of frames and then decide which ones fit your needs. You may find that a mixture of frame styles is the way to go. Contact info for each company is listed at the end of this article.

Two of the least-expensive frame styles come from Phonographics and Rock Art Picture Frames. Both companies' products are made of heavy-duty acrylic. Phonographics makes 45, LP and sheet music frames, while Rock Art Picture Frame has 45 and LP frames.

With the Phonographics frames, items slide into place from the side. The frames feature a nifty computer-routed mount centered on the back that makes it easy to hang up on the wall, and it can be taken off the wall quickly to change the piece in the frame. The pre-cut mount just needs to hang from a small nail. Phonographics' retail prices range from $5.99 for the 45 sleeve frame, $6.99 for the sheet music frame and $7.99 for the album cover frame.

Rock Art Picture Show's frames come with a black mat (unless requested otherwise — white and gray are also available), a packet of acrylic polish and an Album Trivia Card. Like Phonographics' frames, Rock Art's frames also have side-openings to slide in the item to be framed. The firm's album frames ($17.98 retail) work for album covers as well as 10-inch and 12-inch picture discs. Its 45 frames ($11.98) fit both 45 sleeves and seven-inch picture discs. Gary Frieberg, the coowner of Rock Art Picture Frame, has a patent for his firm's frames, which were originally designed on a paper napkin. His company's frames were selected by the new Orlando Hard Rock Hotel and the Smithsonian Institute for exhibit purposes. They are also sold at the gift shops at Graceland and The Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame.

Monarch Frame Corp. has come up with a concept that, retailing for $29.95, is priced in between the less-expensive models and the higher-end wood and metal frames. The firm's record album frame (it also has a comic-book frame) is a wooden frame with an acrylic insert. The insert can be removed in seconds, and collectors can quickly replace one album with another in the acrylic portion of the frame. Album covers slide into the acrylic sleeve. The frame just needs a nail to hang from the wall.

"Top-loaders" are a new development in the album framing business. These frames are more moderately priced, and they provide a higherclass look compared to the less-expensive acrylic frames. The instantaccess concept makes these styles of frames a nice alternative to framing's higher-priced products. Displayframe.com has top-loading LP frames that range from $24.95 for the basic black anodized metal frames, to $34.95 for silver anodized metal, $39.95 for cherrywood and $39.95 for blackwood and mahagony.

Before going the full-blown framing route, which is expensive and should be reserved for archival-quality framing only, there is one final step collectors can take. The Cadillac of easy-access frames are displayframes.com's Swingframe products.

The nicer features of displayframes.com's products include the ease of changing items, real glass rather than acrylic and the higher-end look of the metal frames. The front of the Swingframe (see picture on page 21) swings open and a new item can be quickly inserted and the frame closed shut in seconds. These frames are screwed into the wall, so they don't have the portability of the less-expensive models. There is a locking option (for more money, of course) available for these frames as well to keep sticky fingers from swiping your valuables.

The range of products in this lineup, which originally were limited to 45 sleeve and album cover frames, has expanded greatly. LP and 45 "spindle" shadowbox frames allow collectors to place their precious vinyl in a swinged frame. "Combo" frames for 45s and albums display both a sleeve and the actual record (on a spindle).

There are also frames for magazines, including tabloid-sized ones to hold magazines such as Goldmine. If your favorite band made the cover of a music magazine over the years, why not display the magazine rather than keeping it boxed up in the attic. Displayframes.com carries a magazine frame with a similar swing-opening frame as it has for albums and 45s. These frames retail for $69.95.

Don't be daunted by all of these options in frames. Take your time to research which ones will work best in your situation. Cost, style, longevity, and accessibility all play a part in the purchase of frames. Also keep in mind the possibility of adding more items to your office or home walls in the future. Buying extra frames now means you'll have the same style for future expansion, unless you don't mind the mix 'n' match look. Regardless of how you approach your framing project, the important thing is you are making use of your record collection for both audio and visual reasons.

Greg Loescher

able in anodized black or silver metal, cherrywood, blackwood and mahagony. The top side of the frame easily pulls off for access to the album cover, which can be changed quickly. Glass is used here rather than the acrylic used in most of the lessexpensive frames.

WHAT ARE UNIT SPACE ADS?

Unit space ads are an affordable option for the small dealer or for the private collector who has a few items to sell. They are based on 8-1/2 x 11 sheets that you create. They are "camera ready," in other words, the ad will look in print exactly how it looks when you send it in, only smaller. We will reduce the sheets to fit the ad space. Optionally, at no extra charge we can create a heading for your ad. We will typeset your name, business name (if any), address and phone/fax numbers on your ad if you so request.

- The two types of ads are: 1. Set Sale - Items are sold at the price listed.
- 2. Auction Items are sold to the highest bidder.
- FOR A BETTER UNIT SPACE AD . . .

Use white paper.

- 2. Have a new ribbon on your typewriter or printer; avoid low toner on a laser printer.
- 3. Make sure the paper is vertically oriented. We cannot publish a horizontal unit space ad unless you want the reader to turn the magazine sideways to look at it. Most readers won't bother to do that
- 4. Mail it to us; don't fax it. Faxes can leave unwanted markings that make your ad hard to read.
- 5. Clearly identify whether your ad is a set sale or auction.
- Avoid mixing the two in the same ad; if you must, have separate sections for set-sale and auction items.
- 6. Include your name, address, and telephone/fax number (and when you will be available to take calls on the ad) and all ordering information, including postage and shipping tees.
- Put your listings in a logical order. If you have several formats in the same ad (LP, CD, 45, etc.), group your items by format. You also may wish to group items by type of music. As for the listings themselves, alphabetically by artist usually works best.
- 8. If you have any questions on how to set up your ad, contact anyone from the Goldmine advertising staff.

SET SALE GUIDELINES FOR BUYERS

- First, make sure you are replying to a set sale and not an auction. If an ad mentions minimum bids and deadlines, it's not a set sale.
- 2. Follow the advertiser's directions on how to reply. If the ad says to write first to reserve an item, do it. If the ad says that money orders only are accepted, don't write a personal check. And never send cash through the mail!
- 3. If you write or call to reserve an item and the advertiser still has it in stock, send your payment for the item promptly
- 4. Set sale ads are "first-come, first-served," so the sooner you reply, the more likely you are to receive what you order.
- 5. If you receive the item and it is not as advertised, don't hesitate to complain. Reputable advertisers take complaints seriously and try to do right by the customer. But don't take advantage of this, either; complain only when you have a legitimate reason for doing so.

SET SALE GUIDELINES FOR SELLERS

- 1. Only advertise items you have. Because of ad deadlines, some dealers will assume they will have new material based on release dates given by record companies. In the long run, it's better to wait until you actually have an item to put it in your ad.
- 2. State all your policies in the ad. Examples include method of payment, whether (and at what times) you will accept telephone calls, and whether to reserve items or send money immediately
- 3. Send the items promptly after they've been paid for. Federal Trade Commission regulations state that you must ship your items within 30 days.
- Charge only what you pay to send the package. Or charge everyone the same amount, knowing you will lose money on large packages, but will make up for it on smaller ones. If your stated postage rates are unusually high, state why! (Insurance, special handling or packaging, etc.)
- 5. Take complaints seriously. An unresolved problem is usually a lost customer.

Auction Guidelines For Buyers

- 1. First, make sure you are replying to an auction and not a set sale. Note the minimum bid, and don't bid less than that. Also, don't say "I will top all bids" unless the auction allows it and, of course, you really mean it.
- Mail in all bids unless the ad says phone-in bids are acceptable. 3
- Remember the deadline. If none is stated, then the auction closes one month from the date on the cover. For example, if the auction is in the GOLDMINE dated October 15, the sale closes November 15.
- 5. If mailing bids, allow 1-2 weeks for your bids to arrive. And after an auction ends, allow 1-2 weeks for notification. If you haven't heard 14 days after the end of an auction, assume you won nothing unless the ad says that all bidders, win or lose, would be notified.
- 6. Honor all winning bids! If you are notified that your bid has won the item, send the money for your items within a week. Bidders reneging on their winning bids is the No. 1 complaint from those who run auction ads. If you can't honor your bid, at least have the courtesy to notify the advertiser.
- 7. Allow 2-4 weeks for your winnings to arrive.

AUCTION GUIDELINES FOR SELLERS

- 1. Set minimum bids on any item you won't sell for less. You also can set an auction-wide minimum; different minimums on different parts of the auction; or no minimums at all. Avoid "Ridiculous bids will be rejected" or similar phrases; you can't assume that everyone knows what a "ridiculous bid" is. Instead, take the time to set minimums.
- 2. Run an honest auction. Don't advertise items you don't have; don't artificially force bidders to bid more by claiming there's a counterbidder when there isn't one; don't overgrade your items; and sell all items that meet your published minimum and are the high bid, even if the bid is far below "book" value.
- 3. Notify winners within the first week after your deadline passes.
- 4. Send the winners their items promptly upon payment. (It's OK to wait for checks from unfamiliar customers to clear, which takes no more than a week. If it takes longer, get a new bank.) Federal Trade Commission regulations state that you must ship your items within 30 days
- 5. Don't use your auction as a way to compile a mailing list unless you state that in your ad.
- 6. In sum: Treat your customers as you would want to be treated if you were the one bidding.

ane Wiedlin and Charlotte Caffey in "La La Land." Carlisle's ocals fit just as snugly among the lush chorus sway of the reezy "Vision Of Nowness." Drummer Gina Schock's bouncy ace-setting infuses undeniable energy into the catchy romp Unforgiven," and the group's sweet harmonies peek out from ehind the jagged electric borders of "Apology."

Fraying around the edges is visible when the group employs heir typical formula with no particular flair, such as in the hugging but generally charmless "Kissing Asphalt." The band akes a shot at message music in "Throw Me A Curve," the acing, Susanna Hoffs-penned case against women seeking to pe rail-thin. More prevalent though is the flighty banality of Superslide" and the repetitive spitballing of "Insincere." No one's looking for The Go-Go's to become profound, but a little nore wit and fun wouldn't do them any harm.

CARL VERHEYEN Atlas Overload Provogue Records (PRO 71272)

In a sense, we've heard much of this before --- the sizzling retwork, the frenzied rhythms, the reflective instrumentals. But that doesn't mean veteran guitarist Carl Verheyen lacks passion or purpose. An accomplished soloist, session player, sideman and sometime member of Supertramp's latter-day ineup, he has a prowess that recalls the firebrand virtuosity of Kenny Wayne Shepherd, Stevie Ray Vaughan, Johnny Winter, and even, on occasion, Jimi Hendrix.

On Atlas Overload, his fifth solo outing, Verheyen frequently porrows from these and other well-worn references, rarely veering from a trail already traipsed by his high-profile predecessors. He works within the framework of a typical trio, a medium sufficiently suited to run the gamut of the album's blues-based repertoire. On the blustery "9:05," their relentless railings bring to mind the halcyon days of Winter and his earlier ensembles. The blues 'n' boogie grind of "Stand Up" recalls vintage Lynyrd Skynyrd. The mournful "Find Her Way" puts them in Bad Company territory, while the tangled blues of "Chinatown" basks in the Hendrix halo. Note the similarity in sound to Average White Band's "Pick Up The Pieces" in the shuffling, aptly titled instrumental "Funkadiddy"; both move to the same groove.

Still, influences aside, Verheyen's playing is agile but assertive, particularly when it comes to songs such as 'Revival Downs," "Confident Lie" and "Wasted Blues." Similarly, his absorbing instrumental showcases — "Mumba" and "Nordenham" — demonstrate his ability to mix finesse and ferocity in equal measure.

While Verheyen and company clearly contain themselves to certain parameters, their performances are both credible and compelling every riff of the way. (www.mascotprovogue. com) — Lee Zimmerman

NICK CAVE AND THE BAD SEEDS No More Shall We Part Reprise (48039)

Nick Cave's gloomy, baroque world just keeps getting more melancholy. On No More Shall We Part, the 11th album from Nick Cave And The Bad Seeds, the perplexed Australian singer/songwriter still grapples with basic moral issues, spiritual doubt and eventual redemption. But unlike the subtler unfolding of themes on his past few albums, No More Shall We Part finds Cave (backed by harmony-spouting folkies Kate and Anna McGarrigle, of all people) sinking more visibly into the pit of his own despair.

Just a glance at the album's titles --- "Hallelujah," "God Is In The House," "Oh My Lord," "Gates To The Garden" gives one a pretty clear picture of what's going on within. Cave, in his own way, needs the religion he chastises throughout No More Shall We Part; yet, he continually asks for salvation while turning his back on its offerings. It's a multifaceted trick, one that requires Cave to be both straight-faced and ironic. He gets all righteous tearing down Fundamentalists and, on the sweeping "Oh My Lord," swings from the pulpit of the bad seed. Cave is torn here, and no amount of pretty ballads and haunting piano will save his soul.

Sacred issues notwithstanding, No More Shall We Part is merely an extension of Cave's exploration of love, God and murder. But where, say, Johnny Cash covers similar themes with more delicacy, Cave comes on like a possessed madman at times, feverishly recounting tales of death and decay like an unreliable narrator in a gothic novel. Only the mournful "As I Sat Sadly By Her Side," piano tinkling away at Cave's side, makes proper use of the grand subject matter. The rest is Cave, at the dark altar, preaching to the glum, downhearted and already converted.

ELECTRIC LIGHT ORCHESTRA Zoom Epic (16677)

Before recording Zoom, the first Electric Light Orchestra album in 15 years, frontman Jeff Lynne sat down and had a talk with himself. He didn't bother to include any former members of ELO in the conversation (although it's pretty much given that Lynne was ELO once Roy Wood exited the band early on anyway, so what would be the point?). Neither did he even consider releasing Zoom as a solo album. Lynne was determined to rev up the ELO machine once again, critics and general apathy be damned!

Handling all vocals, guitars, cello, piano, keyboards, bass and drums, Lynne, needless to say, is all over Zoom. But one is pressed to find any personality on it. Or any reason for its existence as an ELO album. Ex-Beatles George Harrison and Ringo Starr make brief appearances, but Zoom, like Lynne's

PAUL CARRACK
Satisfy My Soul
Compass (7 4300 2)

As the voice behind Ace's "How Long" and Squeeze's "Tempted," Paul Carrack has over the years remained true to his trademark blue-eyed-soul sound, and his latest, Satisfy My Soul, finds him dispensing with outside producers and placing himself in charge, including playing most of the instruments himself.

Recorded at his home studio in Hertfordshire, England, Carrack's songs boast an intimate feel with grooves so smooth the effect is seamlessly fluid. Even the lyrics, which stick to unabashed declarations of love, don't disturb the generally tranquil flow of things. The 11 originals here (some of which Carrack cowrote with Squeeze lyricist Chris Difford) are by and large easygoing concoctions, but thanks to the uncommon strength of the melodies, blandness is never a problem.

Highlights include the lush ballad "The Only One," the languid title track and the sublime "Together" - all perfect examples of Carrack's easy-on-the-ears brand of songcraft. On the other hand, the soulful strut "Better Than Nothing" and the pure pop of "Running Out Of Time" (a wistful look back at younger, more carefree days and driven by a hypnotic guitar figure) prove that Carrack knows how to shake things up when the spirit moves him.

All told, Satisfy My Soul exudes the supremely contented vibe of a man at peace with himself and his world, and the effect is wonderfully soothing.

MIKE ESTES AND BRAVE NEW SOUTH Brave New South Brave New South (112800)

Mike Estes has been playing some mighty fine Southern rock guitar for a number of years now, having received oneon-one lessons from one of the best - the late Allen Collins. When the young Estes was taking notes on the playing of the Lynyrd Skynyrd guitarist, he had no way of knowing that he would one day be a member of that very same band. Ah, fate is indeed a cov mistress.

While Estes pulled out all the stops as a rebel rocker while with Skynyrd, he turned slightly left in later years toward country music and NASCAR with his band Drivin' Sideways.

official solo album, 1990's Armchair Theatre, is pretty much Lynne waxing nostalgic all by himself.

The "orchestra" part of the band's moniker is pretty much gone by now. Like the last few ELO group albums from the '80s, Zoom is a studio-generated, electronics-heavy exercise to make ELO relevant in the modern world. It didn't work 15 years ago, and it certainly doesn't work today. Even the album's best songs, such as the throbbing "Alright" and "Lonesome Lullaby," have neither the vitality nor the hooks of ELO's most enduring tunes (as cheesy and bombastic as even they could be). This is misguided marketing: Lynne believing an ELO album will sell better than a solo disc on name alone. Either way, it's a pretty listless listen.

Short Takes

The fact that Kevin Johnson can release five albums of superb songs - both solo and with his back-up band, The Linemen - and still go unnoticed is a sad statement about the lack of attention given independent artists. Johnson is a formidable talent, one of those rare musicians who can write unassuming songs and make them resonate with dramatic dialogue, heartfelt conviction and affecting emotions. True to form, his latest album, Sunday Driver (Sam Records 005), offers 12 examples of how his insightful songwriting strikes a chord through simple but assured arrangements, craft and credibility. (www.samrecords.com) ... After a decade of grinding it out in clubs and coffeehouses, Nashville's Floating Men have yet to gain widespread acclaim, but then you'd hardly have guessed that based on the polished performances gracing their pair of new releases. Their latest studio set, Heroes, Felons And Fiends (Shade LLC, SDCD3003) effectively expands on their seductive sound, with songs such as "New Orleans," "The Usual Trees" and "Better Days" providing the perfect showcase for singer Jeff Holmes' flawless phrasing and the trio's immaculate, articulate arrangements. Live At The Belcourt Theater Bootleg IV (Shade LLC SDCD3002), the latest in a series of outtake and captured-in-concert performances, features the band - aided and abetted by several guest musicians and an adoring crowd - providing stellar performances of such Men milestones as the smooth and supple "Rocket To The Moon" and the resilient, resolute highway anthem, "East Of The Sunrise." It also features a bonus CD-ROM of live material for the truly devoted. (www. floatingmen.com). Eddie Hardin's biggest claim to fame may have been his tenure in the second incarnation of The Spencer Davis Group, following the departure of Steve Winwood. Aside from a brief stint as co-leader of Hardin And York, little has been heard from him since. Now he has resurfaced with Just Passing Through (Eddie Hardin Records), a collection of lushly produced, pure pop ballads featuring cameo appearances from Zak Starkey (Ringo Starr's son). Denny Laine (The Moody Blues, Wings), and Spencer Davis colleague Ray Fenwick. While Hardin's classic Brit-rock approach sounds slightly dated - and occasionally a bit too pat and postured - using The Beach Boys as a blueprint on such effervescent entres as "Situations," "Now Or Never," "Caribbean Nights," and "Wait Til Summer" makes these tunes all but irresistible ... When The Clown's Work Is Over (Captivating Music CM-9150), the Ray Mason Band's fifth album (11th if you count the homegrown cassettes Mason recorded in the '80s), continues to show his evolution from a ruminating singer/songwriter to a well-versed pop pundit. Mason's music covers an especially wide spectrum this time out, from an uncanny replay of Neil Young, circa his Harvest era (the title track), and pretty acoustic ballads ("You Sold Me On A Joke") to quirkier communiqués ("Disposable," "86'd"). However, the songs that truly stand out - and make this Mason's best yet - are the ones with the riveting rhythms, among them, "Harold's Been Feeling Down," "Up But So Loose," "Everly" and "Personal Last Call." (raymasonband@hotmail.com).

These days, he has been known to pop up as a member of The Artimus Pyle Band as well as The Southern Rock Allstars. His latest record, however, features Brave New South, a band comprised of members of Drivin' Sideways and other friends, and is offset with terrific guest artists such as original Skynyrd guitar man Ed King and Greg Martin of The Kentucky Headhunters.

Go ahead and make a note now. This is not your father's Southern rock album. Brave New South leans more toward outlaw country with a rockin' "Travis Tritt meets Hank Williams Jr." vibe. Still, there are a couple of seriously Southern rock cuts here, including the smokin' "Snake Bit," a tune cowritten by Estes with Barton Campbell and Skynyrds Gary Rossington.

That's right, Gary Rossington. The opening cut, "When The Goin' Gets Tough, The Tough Go Fishin'," has all the earmarks of a country-rock hit. Let's hope nationally syndicated radio wild men John Boy and Billy get a hold of this one. It could be their theme song.

"Second Base" is an introspective look at growing up, and "Country As It Gets" could easily be a cut covered by Tritt. One of the best "word plays" on the album is "(There Ain't) No Present Like The Time," and the lyrics to "Politically Incorrect" are a real hoot as well.

Estes and his band dish out an impressive 10-song set that pulls from all of his varied influences. It is blues, Southern rock and country all rolled into one. This is an impressive, personal vision of one life furnished in early Southern decor. Truly, a Brave New South. (Order from www.bravenewsouth.com) ing Roger must have known the risks, so what was going on inside his head?

With a career that has spanned more than 20 years, beginning with The English Beat, then General Public, and finally Special Beat, one could confidently predict that Roger would instead travel the tried and true musical route. And one would be wrong.

Inside My Head is a fusion of all that has come before and all that has happened since. Taking all his musical loves rocksteady and punk, dancehall and electro - the singer has soldered them seamlessly together; not since Thomas Dolby's "Blinded Me With Science" crossed over from new wave to hip-hop has music so effortlessly slipped through the chinks between genres.

Roger enlisted the aid of longtime cohort bassist Horace Panter, ex-English Beat-er and former Fine Young Cannibal guitarist Andy Cox, and drummer Fuzz Townshend, but Roger provided all the songwriting, programming and production.

Horn sections bolster bass and drum rhythms, ambience swirls across dancehall, African influences color pop, and rocksteady swings around techno. The electronics actually add to the music's natural feel, with an organic sound suggesting these songs have long been germinating in Roger's head. Now they've burst into bloom, and Inside is indeed a rare specimen to behold.

IEFFREY GAINES Always Be Artemis Records (751 071-2)

His songs are loaded with vivid swirls of lyrical imagery built to fit whichever character's tale he's telling, but no one will ever accuse Harrisburg, Penn., native Jeffrey Gaines of beating around the bush. As full as his fourth disc Always Be is with straightforward expressions of feeling amid its sturdy and soulful blend of folk and pop rock, it's clear that he's unafraid to embrace and treasure emotions of every variety.

His penchant for mellow acoustic grooves does not impede the positive energy of his lyrics, whether they seep from the measured and plain-spoken romanticism of the title track or burst from the hopeful inward searching of "Hero In Me" atop a sinewy guitar line. The message is much the same in his faster-paced numbers, from the entreaty to embrace love that soars from the chorus of "Fall You Fool" to the flurry of encouragement he growls amid the upbeat electric grind of "Shake It Off." He occasionally plods in his quest for restraint on tunes such as the breezy stroll "Happy That," but his surehanded delivery is never entirely bereft of charm.

Gaines' take on Peter Gabriel's "In Your Eyes" has been a popular staple of his live shows for several years - a fact acknowledged by the inclusion of two versions of the tune on the collection. One version is a slick studio blend of acoustic and electric sounds that captures the elegance of the original while offering distinction of its own. His cover of "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face" is also right at home as he envelops its lyric in his throaty vocal warmth, its dreamy nostalgia a perfect fit amid the many similarly wistful tunes of his own creation that define the set with sincerity and easy charm.

LIMP BIZKIT

Chocolate Starfish And The Hot Dog Flavored Water Interscope (069490759)

Fred Durst sure likes to bitch. The Limp Bizkit frontman. on his band's most recent album Chocolate Starfish And The Hot Dog Flavored Water, spends nearly the entire 75 minutes whining about one thing or another. He likes to hear himself shout, particularly the word "fuck" as loud and as often as possible. "I'm a crazy motherfucker," he declares, defiantly, he thinks - a little too forcefully, we think. Now 30 and roughly double the age of the band's core audience, Durst thinks he has something to prove and believes the best way to get there is by yelling "fuck" and rebelling against whatever is thrown in front of him.

To say that Chocolate Starfish sounds hollow and the Bizkit mechanical on this, their third album, should come as little surprise. Rap-metal, while still a viable commercial force, has run out of ideas (however limited they were initially). Durst and crew are simply making the best of it while it still matters (even enlisting hot hip-hoppers DMX, Method Man, Redman, and Swizz Beatz on "Rollin' [Air Raid & Urban Assault Vehicle]"). That the album offers absolutely nothing to the genre is inevitable - this is for the kids, not the critics or naysayers, as Durst reminds us again and again. This is pissed-off music for a pissed-off generation ("My Generation," as one song claims, copping Pete Townshend with little flair) fed up with ... well, anything and everything.

That very large canvas is explored with little inventiveness. Guitarist Wes Borland tosses off some decent licks (check out his subtle builds on "Take A Look Around"), and the band is a pretty tight, rockin' unit, but Durst, with his weedy voice giving way to an occasional annoying squeal, is more image than flesh and blood. With his backward-flipped baseball cap, finely trimmed facial hair and baggy wardrobe, he looks the part one would expect from a guy who uses the f-word as often as most people use common nouns. But that's all Chocolate Starfish is, an image of the rebel as product. Almost 50 years ago, Marlon Brando's biker character was asked in The Wild One what he was rebelling against. His reply: Whaddya got? Ask Durst the same question, and the answer's liable to be the same. Although this time it doesn't mean nearly as much.

WEEZER Weezer

Geffen Records (06949 30452)

With air-guitar-worthy hooks and songs about Buddy Holly, KISS and sweaters, Weezer's 1994 self-titled debut was a geeky power-pop gem that went double platinum. When the darker, anguished follow-up Pinkerton went bust by comparison, Weezer went away, while bassist Matt Sharp left for a full-time gig with The Rentals.

Last year Weezer launched a low-key but surprisingly successful comeback tour, selling out medium-sized venues without any promotional push - proof positive that there's always an audience for good music. Now Weezer returns with new bassist Mikey Welsh and 10 sparkling new tunes on Weezer, a.k.a. The Green Album.

This third album returns with a sunnier disposition that recalls the band's debut. Though pleading lyrics such as "give some love" and "I'm lost without your love" hark back to the angst of Pinkerton (an underrated album, by the way), the lyrics on the whole are deliberately less meaty, as Weezer focuses instead on fun and hook-filled melodies rather than self-loathing introspection.

The end result is 10 instantly enjoyable songs, most of which match Beach Boys-inspired vocals with grungy but melodic power chords. Though I'm tempted to pick favorites, such as the mellower Hall And Oates-ish "Island In The Sun," after a while that becomes a daunting task, given the overwhelmingly catchy hooks and singable choruses dispersed throughout the album. There's simply no excess fat here, and though at 29 minutes some fans might feel shortchanged, Weezer simply make their points in spectacularly concise fashion and move on. Welcome back, Weezer!

THE KENNEDYS Positively Live! liffviam (2001)

The fifth album by Pete and Maura Kennedy offers the husband-and-wife duo's first live release, following an unerringly engaging series of records in the style they once dubbed "coffeehouse pop" - acoustic-based music rising out of folk tradition but perfectly willing and eager to incorporate the jangly virtues of pop music in the rock 'n' roll era.

Positively Live! showcases the comfortable ambiance of The Kennedys' delightful live shows, wherein Pete and Maura's friendly, unassuming demeanor combines with their impressive musical prowess to warm the heart, thrill the mind and make the ol' toes go tippety-tap.

Positively Live! includes material from each of The Kennedys' first three albums (though, unfortunately, nothing from their brilliant fourth album, Evolver, which was one of the best albums of 2000). Their third album, 1998's Angel Fire, is the best-represented, giving rise to speculation that these live recordings may have been done while The Kennedys were touring in support of that record (liner notes list no dates).

In addition to selections from The Kennedys' own cavalcade o' hits, we're also treated to material from Pete's solo instrumental albums, a cover of Robert Johnson's "Come In My Kitchen," a folk medley of "Cross The Big Sandy"/"Black Mountain Rag"/"Orange Blossom Special" and a new song called "Run Red Lights," a rollickin' tune that would have made Dave Edmunds and Nick Lowe proud.

The album opens with "Life Is Large," the title tune from the second Kennedys album, and it remains a convincing, uplifting statement of intent, propelled by its instrumental quoting of "Jesu, Joy Of Man's Desire" as its hook. (That particular Top Pop Blast-From-Your-Past hit from J.S. Bach is also offered here separately, in its entirety.) The Kennedys make frequent, canny use of such quotes, with a snippet of "My Favorite Things" appearing in their version of the traditional tune "The Coo Coo" and a bit of The Who's "Pinball Wizard" riff playin' a mean pinball in their own "Sirens," which itself segues neatly into a reprise of "Life Is Large.

While such quotes may seem overly cute on paper, in the hands of The Kennedys they are merely further evidence of the sheer joy of music, the joy that The Kennedy themselves so obviously feel, and the joy they so capably share with their audience. Positively Live! serves as a lovely introduction to the music of The Kennedys and as a lovely addition to the canon for those of us who are already fans. Life is indeed large. RAISINS IN THE SUN Raisins In The Sun Rounder (11661-3177-2)

Call them an unknown supergroup, if you will. Raisins In The Sun's rather impressive lineup is comprised of singer/songwriters Chuck Prophet and Jules Shear (the latter has penned songs for Cyndi Lauper and The Bangles), Harvey Brooks (who played bass on two certifiable classics, Bob Dylan's Highway 61 Revisited and Miles Davis' Bitches Brew), session drummer Winston Watson, producers Sean Slade and Paul Q. Kolderie (who've twisted the knobs for alternative acts such as Juliana Hatfield, Hole, and Radiohead) and producer Jim Dickinson (Big Star, The Replacements).

They secluded themselves in the Tucson desert for 10 days and, working from scratch, came up with a collection of songs that can only be described as a godsend for those longing for a little old-fashioned, bang 'em out sloppiness (the one-two punch of "Stringbean" and "Post-Apocalyptic Observations" are robust concoctions in the best garagehand tradition).

Shear and Prophet handle most of the lead vocals, which is probably for the best - when Dickinson takes over on the somber "Nobody Loses," his strange-sounding baritone creates an eerie distraction from an otherwise fine tune. Overall, the sheer directness of the Raisins' casual approach creates a genuine combustible magic, the propulsive popsoul piece "Candy From A Stranger" being arguably the best of the lot.

August 10, 2001

Though many of these lyrics have a tossed-off quality to them, the record's ballads offer more emotional depth: Old Times Again," with its gently ringing guitar fills adding a particularly beautiful touch, is a wistful look back at lost love.

All told, if there isn't anything especially original about Raisins In The Sun's spontaneous roots-rock approach, it is nonetheless a sound that never really gets old.

LUCINDA WILLIAMS Essence Lost Highway (088 170 197-2)

With 1998's long-delayed Car Wheels On A Gravel Road, Lucinda Williams established herself as a premier roots rockess. A relatively short two years in gestation, with Williams and Car Wheels guitarist Charlie Sexton coproducing, her follow-up, Essence, rocks far less, as subdued textures turn languid in Deep South heat.

Only late in the album does she cut loose with a juke-joint boogie to recall "Joy" and it's telling us, "Get Right With God," just as the late Mississippi Fred McDowell brings a slide guitar's knife edge to the holy word.

Compared to her gorgeous "Angels Laid Him Away" on Vanguard Records' new Avalon Blues: A Tribute To The Music Of Mississippi John Hurt, her voice on Essence sounds raw and a bit ravaged. Emmylou Harris, who has covered Williams' songs, has said that Williams' voice could tear the chrome off your bumper. Only here, Lu The Drifter isn't on the road until "Bus To Baton Rouge" returns her to one of many childhood homes, whose ghosts she won't name, which whets our imagination and curiosity.

"You can't be afraid to deal with your demons. You've gotta go there to be able to write," she has said. On the title track, she sounds like an obsessed stalker with junkie metaphors for her carnal passion. Ending the album quietly with nearly church-like backup, she says the blood of Christ will heal the "Broken Butterflies" of yet another illfated love. Alas, we find no catchy hooks such as "Passionate Kisses" here.

FRANK VIGNOLA Blues For A Gypsy Acoustic Disc (ACD-43)

Packaging is always a challenge when you're dealing with the debut album of a relatively unknown artist. True, Vignola enjoys a pretty good rep around jazz insiders, but to the larger marketplace he's still Frank Who? So the nice folks at Acoustic Disc found an engaging theme around which to package this disc: Blues For A Gypsy. The cover features a street scene complete with a dancing bear. The press release begins "Feed your gypsy soul" and ### it goes from there.

The truth is a little simpler. This is a grand solo guitar album in the finest tradition of Acoustic Disc. Clean, skillfully performed and recorded — everything you'd expect from the label. But Vignola — born in Long Island, N.Y. — is no gypsy, and this ain't the blues.

Disc found an engaging theme around which to package this disc: Blues For A Gypsy. The cover features a street scene complete with a dancing bear. The press release begins "Feed your gypsy soul," and the direction of Diango with Les Paul, who, in his earlier years, also offered more than a passing nod to Reinhardt. But no one ever confused ol' Lester Polfuss with a gypsy, then or now. Neither should Vignola suffer that pigeonholing fate.

More than anything, this album reminds me of two LPs recorded around 1958 by Washington guitarist Bill Harris (issued on Emarcy). These unheralded gems also feature tasty acoustic guitar recorded starkly solo (albeit with a bit too much echo). Ironically, Harris showed more of a bluesy edge to his playing than Vignola, despite the album title. Vignola is a hotter player, faster than Harris tried or needed to be. There are some dazzling single-note runs here that will open eyes, but when Vignola isn't playing for the band, he's laying down some very listenable and accessible music.

Along with five originals, there are plenty of familiar tunes here, including Errol Garner's "Misty," as well as standards such as "I Surrender Dear" and "Limehouse Blues." Vignola even takes on Charlie Parker's "Donna Lee." Some gypsy.

Other than the needless packaging hype, this is a fine debut effort. If all the gypsy overkill gets Vignola a wider audience, better sales and more airplay, so be it. The artist himself is worth the attention.

Collectables continues its commendable two-fer series combining two vintage Atlantic LPs onto a single CD, bringing back a pair of La Vern Baker albums from 1958-59 plus '57-'58 LPs from Joe Turner — two of Atlantic's most powerful vocalists in the early years of R&B.

Precious Memories: La Vern Baker Sings Gospel/La Vern

Booming alto Baker (1929-97) had first hit it big with 1954's "Tweedle Dee," condemning herself to teenybopper-among young Atlantic's oldest acts. In fact, the label rescued him from career doldrums with the 1951 lament "Chains Of Love" after his much earlier work with Pete Johnson, Art Tatum, and Count Basie as well as John Hammond's landmark 1938, Spirituals To Swing Carnegie Hall concert.

No less assertive a singer than Baker, on Joe Turner/Rockin' The Blues Turner roars through "Corrine Corrina" and the lecherous "Shake, Rattle & Roll," whose cast-off extra verses became "Flip, Flop & Fly." Even "Honey Hush"'s warning, "Don't make me nervous 'cause I'm holding a baseball bat," becomes infectious fun.

From 1953, "Oke-She-Moke-She-Pop" has lines Atlantic would soon recycle in The Drifters' "Bip Bam." As a single CD of Turner's '50s gassers, Collectables' 28-song Joe Turner/Rockin' The Blues has 12 more tracks than Rhino's

TOM PETTY AND THE HEARTBREAKERS Damn The Torpedoes MCA (088 112 399)

Hard Promises MCA (088 112 400)

Long After Dark MCA (088 112 446)

When Tom Petty And The Heartbreakers released their first two albums at the end of the '70s, their jumpy, guitar-driven folk-rock was so much more jittery than their contemporaries (Bruce Springsteen and Bob Seger come quickly to mind) that they were erroneously dumped, however briefly, onto new wave's lap. Of course, the spastic glam punks had no idea what to make of Petty's traditional songcraft and tales of blue-collar redemption. With 1979's Damn The Torpedoes, Petty finally became a rock 'n' roll star. With its two followup albums — 1981's Hard Promises and 1983's Long After Dark he became a rock-radio fixture.

The recent reissues of these three legacymaking albums boast superior sound and improved graphics, but the collective material's cutting through the stylistic chains of the era is what matters (think of other heartland rockers' attempts at defining the sound and culture at the time; most fell on their workscarred faces). There are bumps along the way — the albums subsequently lessen in artistic value — but picking and choosing gathers the very best Petty and his band had to offer in the '80s.

The '80s started for the band a year before, with '79's Damn The Torpedoes, still one of the finest working-class rock albums ever made. There's hardly a dud among its nine songs. "Refugee," "Here Comes My Girl" and "Don't Do Me Like That" are rightfully classics. It's formula rock, but with enough verve and punch to spark the genre.

Hard Promises, delayed because of Petty's refusal to release the album at the record company's increased price, is a compromise of sorts, part familiar territory, part development. Still, "The Waiting" is one of his bestwritten songs, and the band is even sharper here than they are on Torpedoes. Long After Dark is even more of a concession, and, at times, even lazy. But Petty and the band are pretty close to being one of the best rock bands in the world by this time. The songs ("You Got Lucky" is the highlight) merely show off their hard-earned talents.

All three albums stem from Damn The Torpedoes' solid ground (which sounded little like its predecessors). Hard Promises was followed a few years later by Southern Accents, Petty's attempt to rewrite revisionist history through song and synthesizers. Petty would return a few times to the core combo radio rock perfected on Damn The Torpedoes (his solo album from '89, Full Moon Fever, remains his most consistent work and is a continuation of the evolution started with Torpedoes); those searching for the basics should start with these three rock 'n' roll archetypes.

Johnny Bragg CD and book reviews

JOHNNY BRAGG

The Johnny Bragg Story: Just Walkin' In The Rain Relentless (M2R2 1999)

More amazing than fiction, illiterate Johnny Bragg's life involved childhood blindness followed by an unexplained miracle recovery, a 594-year prison sentence on six dubious rape convictions, penning 1953 R&B hit "Just Walkin' In The Rain" for his aptly named group The Prisonaires and eventually singing — and behaving — his way to a 1959 pardon from Tennessee's reform-minded governor Frank Clement (whom he salutes here on a revised folk-blues song).

Culled from sessions with The Prisonaires on Sam Phillips' Sun Records, with The Marigolds and Solotones (on Excello) and solo (on Decca and Elbejay), this strong 22-song 1953-69 retrospective shows a chameleon-like singer moving from Louis Jordan-style comic jump-blues to dreamy gospel harmonizing to doo-wop jive. The hymn "Softly And Tenderly" — so often sung conservatively becomes a polyphonal jubilee shout.

After elocution lessons from teenaged Sun wannabe Elvis Presley, The Prisonaires gave the title track a quietly sad reading inspired by The Ink Spots. In 1956, Johnnie Ray's histrionics took a white cover to the Pop Top 10.

Released concurrently with this CD is compiler Jay Warner's Bragg bio Just Walkin' In The Rain (Renaissance/St. Martin's) which tells of justice miscarried. Bragg's ability to survive and the late Governor Clement's religious-like passion for redeeming lost souls. It's a one-of-a-kind story.

- Bruce Sylvester

JUST WALKIN' IN THE RAIN by Jay Warner Published by Renaissance Books (256 pages, $24.95, hardcover)

Sometimes a miracle begins its life as a tragedy, a misfortune or even an injustice. So it was with Johnny Bragg, whose life is chronicled in Jay Warner's book, Just Walkin' In The Rain, named after the Johnny Ray hit that Bragg wrote.

The book explores the depth of Bragg's life — being born blind, having his mother die during his birth, growing up in extreme poverty, and, most harrowing of all, a false accusation of rape by a girlfriend that led to convictions for six rapes and six 99-year sentences to be served in the Tennessee State Prison.

Yet it becomes clear through the book that only by reaching those depths was Bragg able to reach the heights he did — performing with some of the greatest names in music, singing for a long, long list of celebrities that included former and future U.S. presidents, writing one of the biggest hits in Columbia Records' history and beginning his own recording career — while in prison! (Truth be told, Bragg probably would never have had the opportunities he had for success in life had he not been in prison.)

But the thread running through the book is the incredible number of "coincidences" that seemed to guide Bragg's life to a better place — Bragg inexplicably regaining his sight in his youth; a music publisher who came to the Tennessee State Prison looking for another writer only to discover Bragg's group. The Prisonaires; that same music publisher (Red Wortham) having a cousin (Jim Bulleit) who was a co-owner of Sun Records; and Tennessee having a First Lady who once aspired to a career in music and influenced her husband to include musical performers in the functions at the Governors mansion.

That man in the Governor's mansion. Frank Clement, was another miracle in Bragg's life. If not Bragg's savior, he was certainly his most untiring, steadfast advocate. Clement was what is now a nearly extinct political animal — a liberal Southern Democrat who could get elected. He was dedicated to prison reform and used The Prisonaires and their success to prove that men could be rehabilitated. His belief of the basic good in man in general and in one man, Bragg, in particular is the moral underpinning of this story.

Just Walkin' In The Rain is built on a foundation of the popular music of the era and many of the best-known names of the day. Ike Turner played on sessions for The Prisonaires. The group performed on stage with everyone from The Clara Ward Singers to Margaret Trunan. There was also the young man who helped Bragg with his phrasing as The Prisonaires recorded "Just Walkin' In The Rain" at the Sun Studios — a pre-fame Elvis Presley.

The story plays against the most shameful aspects of American racism. (Being white and reading about the discrimination, the violence, the outright terror Bragg had to endure as a black man in the South in the '50s, '60s, even the '70s alternately filled me with fear and turned my stomach.)

But Bragg has outlived the worst times of Southern racism. He has outlived the other Prisonaires. And, sadly, he has outlived Clement and his dear wife Gail.

Ultimately, Just Walking In The Rain is a story of redemption and triumph, with a deep faith in God being the ultimate end product of all of Braggs successes and tragedies.

Considering the wasted lives that have piled up in rock's first half-century, a story such as Bragg's is a rare bird, indeed.

For people — myself included — who are suckers for any tale that shows a God involved and earing, gently manipulating our lives and leading us to make the right choices and to live better lives, Just Walkin' In The Rain offers its readers one of the best of all gifts — hope.

CARLOS MALCOLM AND HIS AFRO-JAMAICAN RHYTHMS Skamania

Ruff Stuff Records (RSR-0020)

Best-remembered today for their frenetic "Bonanza Ska," Carlos Malcolm And His Afro-Jamaican Rhythms had a number of other instrumental hits in Jamaica in the early to mid-1960s, while Malcolm himself arranged all the local music used in the James Bond flick Dr. No.

Like The Skatalites, Malcolm brought a number of influences to bear on his sound. American jazz was one, of course, but he was equally taken with mento and other Caribbean styles, Afro-Cuban rhythms, calypso and the bossa nova. His Rhythms were all graduates of the Alpha Boys School, Jamaica's premier training ground for musicians, and included vocalists Boris Gardner and Lascelles Perkins, and saxophonist Carl Bryan, with Malcolm on trombone and percussion.

Shamania was the group's second album, and it simply simmers. The album has been remastered and sounds as crisp and clean as the group themselves. As the group was less Big Band-inflected than The Skatalites, The Rhythms don't so much swing as bop, and from the first dizzying trumpet blast that opens the album, the excitement just curls 'round the grooves. The title track is a miniepic in itself, more than five minutes of sizzling, skanking ska, with mento to the fore, punctuated by exuberant horn solos. The pace never lets up, even as the musical blends shift across the records, with the covers as creative as the originals, whether adapting a psalm or paying tribute to a black western movie star on the clomping-along "Hopalong Skassidy." Then there's "Bonanza Ska," the most whacked cover of all time, which starts as a skankified version of the Bonanza TV show theme song, shifts into "Lone Prairie" and ends in an exhilarating burst of The Willium Tell Overture.

In a genre that bubbles with energy and ingenuity, it just doesn't get any better than this. — Jo-Ann Greene

DION Sit Down Old Friend/You're Not Alone Ace (791)

Back in '70 and '71, following Dion's slide from doo-wop's godfather into the social consciousness of "Abraham, Martin And John" and just before the Christian albums and status as Springsteen's mentor, the poet laureate of New York City released two albums of surprisingly solid, hippie-laced folk music. While peer Bobby Darin could only muster up a denim outfit and a name conveniently clipped to Bob Darin to validate his folkster status, Dion, on these two albums, unveiled a rougher, grassroots side of himself at least as legit as the music that put him on the pop charts. The now-enlightened, long-haired singer bounced effortlessly from unique interpretations of Beatles tunes ("Let It Be," "Blackbird") and visceral acoustic blues ("King Con Man," "The Stuff I Got") to self-penned visions of utopia ("If We Only Have Love," "Peaceful Place"). Dion proved to be quite the guitarist, too, flashing an acoustic style that sounds like rootsheavy, contemporary Italian folk music that would be quite at home backing a scene in The Sopranos.

As a bluesman, he's superb, whacking the guitar on the beat one bar and off the beat next time around throughout the complex "Jammed Up Blues." His intricate arrangements for solo guitar are outright touching on "Sit Down Old Friend" and "Josie," leaving the listener not only wondering how he became such a deft axe-handler, but also why he so quickly shelved his impressive chops on future albums. Dion fans will find themselves in heaven listening to this British two-fer reissue, the stripped-down music (especially on Sit Down Old Friend) revealing far more of Dion's own talents and personal sentiments than nearly anything that came before or after. Essential stuff, without a doubt.

BILL BLACK'S COMBO

The Best Of Bill Black's Combo — The Hi Records Years Hi/The Right Stuff (72435-27836-2)

ACE CANNON The Best Of Ace Cannon — The Hi Records Years Hi/The Right Stuff (72435-27837-2)

Long before Willie Mitchell assumed the production reins at Hi Records and crafted soul magic for the ages with Al Green, Otis Clay, Syl Johnson, and Ann Peebles during the early 1970s, the Memphis label thrived as a prime outlet for catchy, rock-solid instrumentals, thanks to Bill Black's Combo and saxist Ace Cannon. After being overlooked for much too long in the domestic CD reissue sweepstakes, both of these perpetually underrated musicians now have their own 18track hits anthology, thanks to The Right Stuff.

Dion

Black vigorously slapped an upright bass behind Elvis Presley during the King's amazing rise to power, but when Black assembled his instrumental juggernaut in 1959, he switched over to a more modern electric model and basically stayed out of the way, content to keep the rhythmic pulse steady. Black's formula for rock 'n' roll success was simplification personified; no matter what the song (his taste in covers was eclectic), he and his cohorts stripped it down to its barest essentials, a sax or keyboard stating the melody in rudimentary fashion over a tight, bluesy groove that betrayed no h of the band's color (it was no accident that Black's many albums were usually photo-free).

The personnel of Black's combo fluctuated as the yea passed and the hits rolled on. Quite a few of Memphis' lea ing session aces came through the ranks, and even Bla exited well before his 1965 passing from a brain tumor. ( his first smash, "Smokie — Part 2," in 1959, Black was ab ted by guitarist Reggie Young, saxist Martin Willis (so supplanted by Ace Cannon), pianist Joe Louis Hall (Ca McVoy took over keyboard duties shortly thereafter), ar drummer Jerry "Satch" Arnold.

The Best Of Bill Black's Combo — The Hi Records Years cu a swath through the late bassist's personal hit parad "Smokie — Part 2," "White Silver Sands" (their biggest sell in 1960, McVoy abandoning his usual 88s to tackle th organ), souped-up revivals of the ancient "Josephine," "Bh Tango" and Ole Buttermilk Sky," and a 1960 recasting Elvis' "Don't Be Cruel" (Black played on Presley's original The cooking "Movin'," "Twist-Her," "So What," McVoy's "E It — Rat Now," and the Willie Mitchell-penned "Comi On," all recorded from 1961 to 1964, cut loose just a bit fro the Combo's self-imposed restrictions, driving noticeab harder but still avoiding extraneous solos or fancy riffin Making the set even more of a joy: the crisp stereo i evidence throughout and Colin Escott's insightful liner notes

In addition to blowing his muscular sax with Black combo, Cannon had a gargantuan Hi discography of his own though it's sometimes tough to discern his concise instrumental juke box favorites from those of Black; their bas approaches were understandably similar. The Right Stuff The Best Of Ace Cannon — The Hi Records Years provides solid 18-track overview of the saxman's 1961-1971 activitie at the Memphis company (all but one an instrumental opening with his eternal calling card and greatest hit, th greasy slow-grinder "Tuff." Unfortunately, a bit of its teasin intro has been clipped off, and it's here in a slightly lowe pitch than usual, the 1961 hit single having been sped up for release (but it is in stereo). Its rockin' flip "Sittin' Tight reveals Cannon to have been a honker of considerable power

Like his labelmate/bandmate Black, Cannon reached fa and wide for suitable material, digging into The Coaster "Searchin'," Willie Nelson's plaintive "Funny (How Tim Slips Away)," and the hoary folk standards "If I Had a Hammer" and "Cottonfields," stamping each one as a distinct tive instrumental vehicle. By 1969, Ace was getting down right funky on "Soul For Sale," while "Moanin'" showcase him in a cool jazz mode.

Further, his gruff, loopy vocal update of Jimmy Liggins boozy jump "Drunk" is enough to knock anyone for a loo who's only aware of Cannon from those long-ago TV ad where he drearily serenaded his fans while attired in some o the most hideous leisure suits ever manufactured.

nen mentioning the greatest entertainers of the 20th century, Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong is at the top of the list. Armstrong had a huge impact on making jazz popular in America and influencing thousands of fellow musicians. The advent of rock 'n' roll in the mid-50s quickly pushed jazz to the sidelines. Despite that, just as The Beatles stormed the charts with two #1 hits, Armstrong's signature song, "Hello, Dolly!," bumped them out of the #1 spot in early 1964. This time period in Armstrong's career is often diminished by music historians, but Goldmine writer Bill Ruhlmann explores the strength of Armstrong's career in the last years of his illustrious life. Goldmine celebrates the 100th anniversary of Armstrong's birth with this special tribute.

It doesn't mention the year of the case (1994) but that's available at other sites such as http://music.excite.com/artist/bio graphy/579191.

I think this case is an excellent precedent for Johnson. If his attorneys aren't aware of it, I hope you can bring it to their attention. — Ioan May Sonoma CA

{Peter Gutmann replies: "In a perfect world where witnesses live forever, evidence never is misplaced, memories never dim and time never nudges our recollections toward wishful thinking, there would be no need for a statute of limitations (or any laws, for that matter). But laws are needed for the real world in which these problems do exist.

Before trashing the statute as a sad symbol of legal form over substance, picture this you're happily retired when one day an official summons arrives claiming that some cruel remark 50 years ago sent someone into a tailspin, causing him to forego a career opportunity that would have earned millions. He claims to have a witness. How would you defend yourself? The statute provides some important protections.

As for the precedent of the Love/Wilson case, I would certainly hope that Johnson's attorneys have researched their position, or they'll face a far easier lawsuit of malpractice. But please understand - I never said (nor meant to imply) that the statute of limitations is an absolute bar to bringing an old claim. Rather, once expired, it shifts the burden to a would-be plaintiff to demonstrate that delay in bringing suit was justified - and that, in turn, depends on the specific facts of each case. I do wish Johnson well, but I continue to believe that he'll have a very tough time convincing a judge that throughout a half-century of working as a professional musician he remained totally oblivious to the commercial realities of songwriting. But he won't have to convince me - just the judge.")

Two points off Springsteen Live review

I am reading Scott Floman's review of Bruce Springsteen And The E Street Band, Live In New York City (Goldmine #546, june 29, 2001), as I watch the HBO Special of the same name. While it is generally a good review, I have to take exception with of few of Floman's comments.

In the review he wrote, "Prove It All Night' is next, and like many of the songs here this one is extended for the stage and has added guitar muscle, with the best bits handled by Nils Lofgren."

I would be the last person to argue against Lofgren's guitar command, but if the above statement is saying that the best guitar parts of "Prove It All Night" are Lofgren's, I think Floman is mistaken. Bruce Springsteen plays all the solos on "Prove It All Night," with Nils handling rhythm guitar, along with Steve Van Zandt.

The next paragraph states that "Atlantic City" has a brighter mood than the original, as it's transformed into a stately, accordion-led waltz." While this version may be more dramatic than the original version on Nebraska, I don't agree that it's brighter. But that is my opinion. What it definitely is not is a waltz: A waltz is in 3/4 time while "Atlantic City" is in 4/4 time.

But other than those two points, Floman convincingly conveys the power and the glory of Bruce Springsteen And The E Street Band, Live In New York City.
