Biz As Usual For Utsick's Euro Partners

WO OF JACK UTSICK'S EUROPEAN partners say they see no reason for the problems the Miami Beach-based entrepreneur is having with the Securities and Exchange Commission to negatively affect their operations.

Utsick's Worldwide Entertainment has a slice of the U.K.'s 3A and Willem Venema's Dutch-based The Alternative, but neither company expects his well-publicized problems with the SEC to affect his interests in them.

"We feel for Jack and hope his problems are soon sorted out but, as far as we're concerned, it's business as usual," 3A director Pete Wilson told Pollstar.

The SEC has charged Utsick, Worldwide Entertainment and two other partners with defrauding 3,300 investors out of $300 million, money that was supposed to be used to promote concerts.

MADONNA SWINGS THROUGH the Sahara Tent at the Coachella Valley Music & Arts Festival in Indio, Calif., April 30th. The two-day fest drew a record attendance, estimated at a combined 120,000. See "Scenes From Coachella Music Festival" on page 12.

The SEC found reasons to believe that instead of concerts, part of the investor funds went toward Utsick's two multimilliondollar condos in Miami and "a lavish lifestyle."

Utsick's lawyer issued a statement saying his client has not admitted or denied wrongdoing and a settlement has been reached with the SEC to sort out the financial mess and repay investors. But the federal securities regulators still sued for fraud in U.S. District Court in Miami April 17th.

The commission says Worldwide Entertainment, along with another Utsick company called Entertainment Group Fund, and American Enterprises and Entertainment Funds - both controlled by Robert and Donna Yeager committed the alleged fraud between 1998 and 2005.

WORK CONTINUES at the University of Central Florida's 10,000-capacity UCF Arena in Orlando. The Global Spectrum-managed multipurpose facility, which is being built adjacent to the current arena, is part of the university's new convocation center and is scheduled to open in fall 2007.

Utsick's company was placed in receivership in January after two investors filed a lawsuit against him. Now the SEC wants the court to place all four companies under receivership on behalf of investors and to authorize a full investigation into the companies' accounts.

Utsick set up 3A with Wilson and former Triple A directors Dennis Arnold and Martyn Stanger in 2003, after the latter company tanked because of money it was owed by its partner in a disastrous Star Trek exhibition in London's Hyde Park.

Triple A went down with losses of about £5 million, most of which was said to be money the company was owed by its U.S.-based Star Trek partner Special Entertainment Events. Utsick and the company's former co-directors put 3A together and rescued some of the shows the bankrupt company still had on the books.

Wilson wouldn't reveal Utsick's full stake in the company but emphasized that it's only a shareholding.

He also said that he had no reason to believe Utsick would have to liquidate it to raise cash to pay his disgruntled American investors.

Venema also shrugged off his U.S. partner's problems with the SEC and said, "I can't see how any of this affects the shares he has in my company."

Utsick invested in The Alternative a little more than a year ago, following the breakdown of WE Entertainment, an earlier Dutch partnership he had with Frank Van Hoorn.

Apart from the 3A and The Alternative deals, Utsick's Worldwide

Entertainment has boasted other international partners like Australian promoter Michael Chugg and Live Limited's Colleen Ironside in Hong Kong.

Chugg confirmed that his project-to-project partnership with Utsick ended last year, and declined further comment.

ment and The Seattle Theatre Group have entered into a preliminary agreement that will develop a new HoB venue with the city's downtown Paramount Theatre.

The planned House of Blues, slated to open in the first half of 2007, will be adjacent to the 2,800-seat Paramount Theatre, inside the nine-story Paramount Tower. Both are owned by the nonprofit Seattle Theatre Group, which also operates the city's Moore Theatre.

After a period of renovation, HoB will open a multilevel restaurant, Foundation Room and entertainment space for patrons within the tower. HoB will lease the tower space for an undisclosed amount from The Seattle Theatre Group. This House of Blues is unique because the Paramount Theatre will act as its stage.

"In all other House of Blues clubs, House of Blues is responsible for booking the stage 365 days a year," HoB Concerts Senior VP Jeff Trisler told Pollstar. "In this deal, The Seattle Theatre Group will continue to program the Paramount Theatre as they have for the past 12 years, which is a full array of different entertainment options besides just concerts and music."

Trisler said the House of Blues and Paramount Theatre will be right next to and on top of each other.

"When you come to the Paramount Theatre, the first thing you see when you walk up to the theatre is a nine-story tower – that's where the House of Blues club is going to be located," he said.

"There will be ways to connect through the House of Blues and the theatre space."

The project is still in the planning stages and more details, including renderings, will be available in the coming months, he added.

Vivian Phillips, who serves as VP of The Seattle Theatre Group board of directors, told Pollstar the Paramount Theatre will continue its agreements and arrangements with other promoters. Along with concerts, the venue hosts other events including Broadway shows, silent movies and dance performances, she added.

"House of Blues has been a partner with The Seattle Theatre Group for a number of years," Phillips said. "They have booked shows in the Paramount Theatre for at least the last six years."

The HoB restaurant will operate independent from shows in the theatre, which Phillips said will be an added amenity for downtown dwellers looking for a place to dine.

Another unique aspect of the venue is its convertible floors.

"We can essentially flip our main floor from rake theatre seating into a flat dance hall with a stage," she explained. "Or, the floor can extend from the stage at that level all the way back to the wall.

"We can essentially do a concert on the flat floor in a traditional House of Blues configuration on a Monday, and open a Broadway show Tuesday."

Trisler said HoB has looked at a number of different sites over the years and, in the end, the Paramount seemed like the best fit.

"Rather than building something new, we thought it was better to work together with The Seattle Theatre Group to make something that every fan of music and the arts would really appreciate," he said.

In addition to the new club in Seattle, HoB Entertainment announced earlier this year plans for a new venue in Houston, which will become an integral addition to the $200 million Houston Pavilion project slated for 2007.

Jazzfest Rises

Who said it couldn't – or even shouldn't – be done. But the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival returned to its traditional Fair Grounds site with a first-ever name sponsor, blockbuster lineup and deeply emotional performances. And not even an April 30th downpour could stop the music.

While no official attendance figures were available, festival director Quint Davis was quoted as saying advance ticket sales were about two-thirds of past years. The 2005 Jazzfest was estimated to have drawn about 400,000.

But for a city that has lost virtually all of its main industry – tourism – Jazzfest should provide an economic shot in the arm to New Orleans. And it was certainly a boon for music fans.

Main stage performers the first weekend included Bob Dylan, Dave Matthews Band, and Bruce Springsteen & The Seeger Sessions Band. Among the homegrown artists – many returning to New Orleans for the first time since Hurricane Katrina struck August 29th – were Dr. John, Galactic, the subdudes, C.J. Chenier & The Red Hot Louisiana Band, the Rebirth

Brass Band, the reunited Preservation Hall Jazz Band, and recent arrival Ani DiFranco.

New Orleanian Allen Toussaint brought along Elvis Costello and a Steinway grand piano for an April 30th performance. Dozens of Mardi Gras Indians were on hand, along with gospel choirs, children's performers, zydeco, Cajun, gospel and, of course, jazz bands.

More than 150 sets were scheduled the first weekend at the fairgrounds alone. Additional shows took place around the city, including at Tipitina's and Preservation Hall, which reopened for the first time since Katrina.

And there were unscheduled appearances, too. U2 guitarist The Edge, who spearheaded the Music Rising artist assistance program, dropped in on a couple of friends Sunday – first taking the stage with the Rebirth Brass Band and later with DMB.

Other than having been shortened by one day, it might have seemed like business as usual for Jazzfest, one of the most prominent festivals in the country. But considering the fairgrounds site was under several feet of toxic soup last September, and many of New Orleans' thousands of musicians displaced by Katrina, it is a major feat that it was pulled off at all.

Anschutz Entertainment Group returned to produce the festival along with the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Foundation, and together they made the decision in January that the show would go on – and go on bigger than ever.

Davis pulled together a starstudded group of artists, many of whom had given their time last fall for several benefit concerts including "From the Big Apple to the Big Easy" at Madison Square Garden in New York City. They also took on a first-ever name sponsor in Shell Oil Co., and dozens of other corporate sponsors supported Jazzfest.

BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN becomes a New Orleanian for a day as he looms over thousands of fans at the city's Jazz & Heritage Festival April 30th. The Boss, appearing with The Seeger Sessions Band, told the crowd, "I saw sights I never thought I would see in an American city" after he toured the area.

When Shell signed on, Jazzfest organizer Louis Edward told Pollstar that without such sponsorship, the event could not have been staged on the scale festivalgoers are accustomed to.

"[Louisiana has] a grand culture that deserves a grand event like Jazzfest," Edwards said. "And to do that – especially in a post-Katrina New Orleans – it takes all the resources we can pull together."

The New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival Presented by Shell was scheduled across its traditional two weekends, with artists including Jimmy Buffett, Paul Simon, Keith Urban, Irma Thomas, Little Feat, Koko Taylor, Ellis Marsalis, Angelique Kidjo, and Lionel Richie scheduled the second weekend.

Set to close Jazzfest on May 7th was Fats Domino in his first performance since Katrina, when he was rescued from the roof of his Ninth Ward home-turned-museum.

payments, which the company made May 2nd.

Venue operator Kit Kesey told Pollstar the situation was worrisome, but he had a plan to keep the 71-year-old theatre running if Geiger hadn't come through.

"I had put an offer on the building and I was prepared to buy it if it came up," he said. "I was willing to back up whatever happened with myself financially, as far as people being on the hook.

"[But] I was really comfortable that my lease would stand no matter what happened and I was in a position to purchase it if it came up for foreclosure."

The Eugenebased real estate company, which purchased the theatre in 1997 for $1.3 million, borrowed $1.63 million from BLX Capital in 2005 and used the McDonald as collateral. BLX later sold the loan to SPCP Group, according to The Register-Guard of Eugene.

SPCP Group started foreclosure proceedings in April, and prepared to put the McDonald on the auction block in June, after Geiger fell three months behind in payments.

Meanwhile, Kesey's business was put on hold as Geiger's financial situation was being worked out.

"Aggressively going out and seeking acts and booking shows was uncomfortable given the situation," he said. "This had nothing to do with me and my operation. This was strictly with the investment company that owns the real estate.

"[But] we're back to the status quo and I'll continue doing business as we have been."

However, a program developed primarily by the Entertainment Services and Technology Association has certified about 100 riggers in the past year.

ESTA developed its current program after conducting a feasibility study asking employers if they would encourage their workers to be certified in rigging and electricity, according to certification director Katie Geraghty.

"There were accidents happening and I think the industry felt that if it didn't come together and start making some changes, the government would," Geraghty told Pollstar. "If [companies] were going to be regulated, they wanted to be regulated by themselves."

of the major sponsors for the Entertainment Technician Certification Program. The first rigging exam took place in 2005 and the entertainment electrician exam is expected to launch in October.

The ETCP has two certs – arena and theatre. There is no field test; after consulting with test development firms, ESTA created a three-hour, 150-question computer-based examination, Geraghty said. The test can be taken at more than 150 AMP Assessment Centers across the U.S., many of which are located inside H&R Block offices.

The examination for the Arena Entertainment Rigger includes algebra, geometry, trigonometry, determining an object's weight, fleet angle and voltage, phasing and electrical connection verification.

T.I. Assistant Killed

MAN SAID TO BE THE personal assistant to Atlanta rapper T.I. was shot and killed in a gun battle along Interstate 75 in Cincinnati early May 3rd.

Three others were injured in the incident, but T.I., whose name is Clifford Harris, was not hurt, police said.

T.I. started a national tour April 21st and was to perform at St. Louis' Pageant May 3rd, but was forced to cancel the show because of the shooting. That gig was about to be rescheduled at press time, T.I.'s agent, William Morris Agency's Cara Lewis, confirmed to Pollstar. All other shows on the books were still a go.

Witnesses told police the fight began at a party for T.I. and fellow rapper Yung Joc at Club Ritz after they performed May 2nd at Bogarts, a concert hall near the University of Cincinnati.

A dispute with some locals prompted T.I. and his group to leave the party, and they were pursued by two dark sport utility vehicles. A gun battle ensued, with members of the rapper's entourage shooting at the pursuing vehicles, according to police.

Officers who arrived at the scene at about 3 a.m. found four people with gunshot wounds. They were taken to the city's University Hospital.

Philant Johnson, 26, described by a representative for T.I.'s Grand Hustle record label as T.I.'s personal assistant, was pronounced dead at the hospital. Bodyguard Ronald Hausley and driver Elijah Edwards were treated and released. Janice Gillespie was admitted in stable condition.

No arrests were made at press time. Police said the shooters were gone by the time they arrived at the scene.

T.I.'s King debuted at No. 1 on Nielsen SoundScan and sold more than 500,000 copies following its March release, according to the rapper's label. Mitchell Peters 4 founder Jere Harris and sound pioneer Bill Hanley are expected to receive the Parnelli Lifetime Achievement Award and the Innovator Award respectively at the sixth annual Parnelli Awards Dinner in Las Vegas October 20th.

Harris And Hanley Grab Parnellis

Harris has worked on morethan 500 major productions, corporate and special events, and trade shows. Technology he developed has been used in Broadway shows like "The Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables," and Universal Studios theme park attraction "Terminator 2 in 3D." Harris founded PRG in 1996, which now has 16 offices in North America and the U.K.

THE 17,000-CAPACITY 02 WORLD in Berlin is about to break ground after several years of preparation. See page 55 for further details.

Hanley twisted the knobs for The Beatles, Velvet Underground, Jefferson Airplane and other classic acts and also adjusted sound for the Woodstock and Newport festivals. He even coined the term "sound reinforcement."

The Parnelli Awards are named after production manager Rick "Parnelli" O'Brien. Last year's Lifetime Achievement Award went to famed road warrior Patrick Stansfield and the Innovator Award was given to soundman Bruce Jackson.

Pinnacle Posts IQ Profit

posted a profit for the first quarter of 2006, reversing a loss from a year ago.

The company attributed the reversal to L'Auberge du Lac, the new property on Lake Charles, La., that opened last May and its Boomtown casino in New Orleans that the company says continues to benefit from the rebuilding effort of the Gulf Coast.

Net income rose to $13.5 million compared to a $2.2 million loss in the first quarter of last year, and profits totaled $18.6 million. Revenue climbed 70 percent to $234 million from $138 million a year earlier.

The results beat Wall Street expectations, and stocks have climbed about $1 to approximately $30 after the May 2nd announcement.

Pinnacle has been in a bidding war for Aztar Corp., which owns the Tropicana casino resorts in Las Vegas and Atlantic City. The company expects to open two casinos in the St. Louis area in 2007 and 2008.

Aramark Takeover Bid

RAMARK CORP. CHAIRMAN/ CEO Joseph Neubauer and a group of investors May 1st offered to buy out the company and take it private for about $5.8 billion.

The news of an offer of $32 a share, said to be a 14 percent premium over its normal trading range, boosted the Aramark stock price by $5.79, or 21 percent, to $33.90.

Neubauer said in a statement the board has formed a committee of independent directors to look into the offer.

The investor group includes funds managed by GS Capital Partners, J.P. Morgan Partners, Thomas H. Lee Partners and Warburg Pincus. Under the deal, Neubauer and other senior management personnel would continue to run the company.

Equity funds managed by the four financial companies will be used for the buyout, plus about $6.5 billion in debt financing arranged through Goldman Sachs and J.P. Morgan Securities.

Aramark employs about 240,000 employees in 19 countries who handle food services, facilities management and uniform apparel at arenas, stadiums, hospitals and schools.

BOK Center Debut Stalled

THE OPENING OF THE BOK Center in Tulsa, Okla., will be delayed several months while its designers figure out what to do about $32 million in cost overruns.

Tulsa Vision Builders Project Director Bart Boatright told the Tulsa World that the April 2008 opening could be pushed back to August.

"The time frame is really dependent on the outcome of our analysis and what we end up recommending," he said. "If there's anything in our ability to reduce that delay, we will certainly do so."

To bring down costs, representatives of the arena's design team are reportedly discussing changes in the $141 million project's design, its construction methods or the materials used.

Bids were opened in late April for materials including concrete, masonry, drywall, glass, steel and electrical, mechanical functions and plumbing. Those bids reportedly came in at $101 million but engineers had budgeted $69 million, the World said.

Mayor Kathy Taylor declined to say if she'd seek additional public funds besides the Vision 2025 sales tax approved by voters in 2003 to finance the project.

"I don't think it's prudent to speculate on the success that they will have and the alternatives that they might present to the city," she told the newspaper. "I think we need to wait and act responsibly on the data that our professionals are going to provide us."

Taylor added that the design team had warned there could be cost increases of as high as 30 percent in materials, labor and equipment in the wake of last year's Gulf Coast hurricanes. Vision Builders projected increases between 4 percent and 7 percent.

Boatright said a list of options regarding the project's schedule, budget and design were being put together for consideration.

SMG will manage the 18,000capacity venue designed by architect Cesar Pelli once completed.

REPAIRS on the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans continue May 3rd. The Dome, heavily damaged by Hurricane Katrina, will be facing another hurricane season beginning in June. Mayor Ray Nagin has declared the venue will not be a shelter of last resort this time around.

shareholders and has unanimously rejected it."

Reports suggest EMI Group Chairman Eric Nicoli made the $28.50-per-share offer directly to Warner Chairman Edgar Bronfman Jr. during a conversation May 1st, Forbes said. Warner rejected it the next day.

"The board of EMI continues to believe that an acquisition of Warner Music by EMI would be very attractive to both sets of shareholders but will only pursue a transaction that delivers enhanced value and earnings accretion to EMI shareholders," EMI Group stated.

Sources told Forbes they expect EMI to increase its bid but would not be surprised if Warner makes a counterbid for EMI.

Of the Big Four major music recording companies, Warner and EMI are significantly smaller than Universal Music Group and Sony/BMG. A merger would give a new combined company a reported 24.7 percent of the market, putting it right between UMG and Sony/BMG.

As noted by Forbes, a merger between EMI and Warner would make sense for both companies, which hold solid ground in the U.K. and the U.S. respectively, but not in each other's territory.

"Today's announcement highlights the difficulties in putting together such a deal, particularly with respect to valuation and management," Numis analyst Lorna Tilbian said.

EMI shares closed 4 percent lower on the London Stock Exchange May 3rd. Warner shares rose 71 cents to $28 in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Jitterbugs Burns Down

HE 1,700-CAPACITY JITTERBUGS nightclub in Nacogdoches, Texas, burned to the ground April 30th after passing motorists discovered the blaze that morning.

Club co-owner Robert Y'Barbo described that Saturday night as Jitterbugs as "a slow night," and said he had no idea what might have caused the fire, according to the city's Daily Sentinel.

"One of the biggest problems with nightclub fires is trash cans," Y'Barbo said, meaning that club patrons often toss cigarettes into them. "We're really careful about that. We throw out the trash every night."

When asked if they planned to rebuild, Robert and Bubba Y'Barbo were reportedly at a loss for words.

"We'll see," Robert Y'Barbo told the paper. "Just about every major act in the country has played here. A lot of performers played here before they hit it big."

The club, which was built in 1993, had at least two shows on the books – Jason Boland & The Stragglers on May 4th and Jarrod Birmingham on May 12th. Cross Canadian Ragweed sold out the club last year and some of its visitors in the mid-'90s include Willie Nelson, Tracy Byrd and Merle Haggard.

Reports of white and black smoke coming from the large metal building sent firefighters from the Nacogdoches Fire Department and volunteers from throughout the county to battle the blaze.

"There was heavy smoke when the first engine arrived on the scene," NFD Captain Terry Westmoreland told the paper. "We made an attempt at an interior attack, but once two crews went inside, we saw that the fire had already advanced, and we couldn't put enough water on it. We had to pull out and make a defensive attack and fight from the outside."

He added that the metal structure of the venue made the fight difficult.

The cause of the fire hadn't been determined at press time, but Westmoreland reportedly said there was no initial information or evidence to cause authorities to believe the blaze had been intentionally set. No injuries were reported.

Westmoreland said routine inspections were made at the nightclub at the owners' request.

"The state fire marshal regulates codes in the county," he told the paper. "But once a month, we inspect all clubs and high-occupancy restaurants in the city, and at Robert's request, and as a courtesy to him, we would stop out here.

"With a place of this size, and with as many people as this building could hold, they did a good job. ... Robert kept the business right in line (regarding safety)."

TARBUCKS IS DELVING FURTHER into the entertainment business by hiring William Morris Agency to seek music, film and book projects to market and distribute from its stores.

The Seattle-based coffee retailer recently promoted the film "Akeelah and the Bee," which opened April 28th. Starbucks' goal is reportedly to have one book in its stores this year and at least two or three movies on DVD to promote by next year, according to The New York Times.

Starbucks entertainment staff is reportedly moving from Seattle to Southern California to be closer to the industry, the paper said.

The company has a successful track record promoting and selling CDs by Ray Charles, Bob Dylan, Herbie Hancock, Antigone Rising and others, which WMA CEO Jim Wiatt said was key.

Promoter's Football Blues

SOUTH DAKOTA INDOOR football team has been sued for $19,000 by Full Throttle Productions for nonpayment after the company promoted shows on the team's behalf.

Mike Ballard of Full Throttle Productions alleges that Howard Neal, owner of the Rapid City Flying Aces, asked that his company promote concerts for the team, according to the Rapid City Journal.

The suit alleges that the owners of the team pocketed gate receipts and 20 percent of the bar sales for a March 8th Jackyl concert at Venue 8 in Rapid City and failed to make a down payment on a scheduled Firehouse show that was to take place a few weeks later, according to the Journal. Full Throttle paid $19,000 for the bands and equipment, the suit claims.

The suit also charges that the Flying Aces has taken in an estimated $140,000 in five weeks, but hasn't paid up.

But team co-owner Paul Brennan, in a statement to a 7th Circuit Court of Appeals judge, said the allegations are false and that Full Throttle actually owes money to the team. He said Full Throttle never presented a written agreement regarding the concerts.

The newly formed team was off to a 6-0 start and has drawn crowds averaging 2,800 per game to the city's Rushmore Plaza Civic Center, according to the Journal, but the problems with Full Throttle aren't the team's only ones.

Team GM and coach Dan Maciejczak told the paper that Flying Aces owner Neal left town in mid-April, leaving "the community high and dry" with as much as $50,000 in unpaid bills. Maciejczak said the team is trying to work out a repayment schedule and is looking for local investors.

Even the players, staff and cheerleaders are waiting for payments, according to the coach. Meanwhile, other teams are making offers to unpaid Rapid City players.

Mike Ballard also owns Full Throttle Saloon in Sturgis, S.D., which is reportedly the biggest biker bar in the world.

Lolla's Schwag Swag

LOLLAPALOOZA PRESS conference in Chicago's Washington Park April 27th included a press table with a special promotion - rolling papers inside packages with the festival's moniker.

The rolling papers were on a press table a few feet from a playground and advertised the sevenstage Lollapalooza fest as "fully baked rock and roll," according to the Chicago Sun-Times.

This year's Lollapalooza will feature more than 120 artists, including Red Hot Chili Peppers, Kanye West, Wilco, Death Cab For Cutie, and The Flaming Lips. It will take place August 4-6 in the city's Grant

J RECORDS CHIEF CLIVE DAVIS digs deep to pay for 1,000 Krispy Kreme donuts for Pearl Jam fans, who spent 48 hours in line out front of an NYC Tower Records store to get the new PJ record May 1st along with tickets to a secret show.

Fresh and Clean Media, said the rolling papers were part of a South by Southwest promo "survival kit" that contained earplugs, big Lollapops and stickers.

"This was very tongue-in-cheek and meant to poke fun at rock and roll clichés and to offer something different than traditional promotional schlock," Fresh and Clean Media said. "It was meant for that limited audience."

The PR company added that the papers were briefly left out on a work table and a reporter on site, before conference check-in, helped himself to a package of papers, then wrote a story about them.

Both Mitchell and Lollapalooza organizers called the offer of rolling papers in a city park a mistake. The Lolla press conference, while in Washington Park and promoted by the park district, was organized onsite by Fresh and Clean Media.

Capitol Sports & Entertainment's Charlie Jones was initially taken aback by questions regarding the papers, according to the Sun-Times.

"Is there something wrong with them?" was his response.

Jones later phoned the Chicago Sun-Times with a mea culpa, calling the promotion "a horrible mistake."

"It's not the way we want to be represented," Jones told the paper, adding that the festival is "very family friendly" and the rolling papers were "a joke."

Concert officials and Mitchell said the papers will not be distributed at the two-day fest.

Meanwhile, Lolla organizers announced at the press conference that they expect this summer's fest to raise $600,000 for the Chicago Parks District - $200,000 more than it raised for the park district last year.

Anti-Bush Shirts Stop Show

N AFRO-BEAT GROUP'S set was stopped short because shopping mall security at Cleveland's Tower City Center didn't approve of the anti-Bush shirts the group was wearing.

Mifuné, which was playing as part of the Tri-C Jazz Fest, was about 20 minutes into its set when mall security pulled the plug.

"They said we either remove the shirts, turn them inside out, or get off the stage," group leader Jacob Fader said. "I said that doing so would be against our core principles and free speech."

The crowd reportedly booed when Fader tried to explain without the use of the P.A. why the show was being cut short. Pictured on the shirts was the face of George W. Bush crossed out.

Tower City GM Lisa Kreiger told Cleveland's Plain Dealer that "the band's attire was distracting and inappropriate."

Fader said security officers were then brought in to keep order among a murmuring crowd that had gathered near the Tower City water fountain, according to the paper.

He also managed Gladys Knight & The Pips, and The Temptations, among others. No further details were available at press time.

He said the group's performance came to a halt during the song "Supercrush," which he described as a "song about how the Bush administration separates the wealth, causing the elimination of the middle class."

When Fader's father said it was wrong to silence the act, a security cop told him to "shut up," according to Fader. "My dad said he had the right to free speech and the security guy said, 'Not in here you don't."

Hollywood Eyes Anschutz

AJOR MOVIE STUDIOS have reportedly set their sights on buying part of Philip Anschutz's family-oriented movie company, Walden Media.

Anschutz Film Group CEO
David Weil recently told Forbes magazine that Hollywood interest in Walden had gone beyond
"the casual discussion phase."
But he didn't specify which studios were interested or how much a deal would be worth.

Anschutz's foray into the movie biz began with the bomb "Around the World in 80 Days" in 2000, but Walden is said to be a hot commodity today since the success of "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, The Witch and The Wardrobe," which grossed $739 million worldwide, according to the paper. The only movie to gross more than that in 2005 was the latest "Star Wars" installment.

The billionaire also had a hit with "Ray," which has grossed a reported $124 million worldwide. Upcoming projects include "The Giver" and "Nim's Island." Walden is also committed to turning the "Biblionauts" comic book into a movie, the Denver Business Journal said.

A partial sale would solidify Anschutz's reputation in the movie business and lead to millions more in capital for Walden, movieindustry experts told the Journal.

Other recent studio transactions have been worth millions and even billions. Disney's purchase of Pixar Animation Studios cost a reported $7.4 billion, with Lions Gate Entertainment Corp.'s acquisition of Artisan Entertainment costing a reported $210 million.

Studio partnerships have become more common as production costs have risen. Hollywood movies cost an average of $70 million to produce, according to Business Week magazine.

Pay Me My Money Down

For as long as they have chased after copyright bandits, the record labels have put one talking point in front of the public making sure artists get paid.

Now it appears that at least two bands have a problem with what a label defines as "getting paid."

Law firms Labaton Sucharow & Rudoff 11 P and Probstein & Weiner filed a classaction lawsuit on April 27th on behalf of The Allman Brothers Band and Cheap Trick, claiming that Sony Music is not paying bands and artists the contractually obligated 50 percent of net licensing revenue resulting from sales of digital downloads.

Instead, the lawsuit alleges, Sony treats each download as a sale of a physical "phonorecord."

This means the label pays on 85 percent of a sale after deducting 15 percent for "breakage," even though there's nothing to break when you're dealing with computer files. The label then deducts a 20 percent fee for container/packaging charges as well as a 50 percent "audiofile" deduction. End result? The artists eventually get about 4.5 cents per download.

The lawsuit claims that Sony is treating digital downloads of songs by Cheap Trick and The Allman Brothers under the terms of distribution agreements instead of licensing agreements, which call for the 50 percent artist's share. Evidently, downloads of songs by veteran performers are treated as distribution because record company contracts with such bands and artists predate legal online music sales.

Most online music services sell individual tracks for 99 cents, of which about 70 cents goes to the label while the remaining 29 cents is supposed to go to the artists.

The suit claims the Allman Brothers, Cheap Trick and many other bands have "been damaged in the amount of millions of dollars through the loss of royalty payments which Sony Music has retained for its own benefit in breach of the applicable contractual record royalty provisions."

"Sony Music is presently engaged in a widespread attempt to underpay its recording artists," said Brian Caplan, one of the attorneys representing Cheap Trick and The Allman Brothers Band in the suit. "With the technological advancements in the music industry, where many people download songs to their iPods and other portable devices, it is essential that artists receive the royalty income to which they are entitled."

A Wireless Fixation

▶ There will be a whole lot of messaging going on when Shakira hits the road in the U.S. this summer.

That's because tour sponsor Verizon Wireless is providing the foundation to ensure that every Shakira fan will be well-connected when the Latin superstar's Oral Fixation tour rolls into town.

It all starts with a personal video invitation customized for each city that will be sent out to fans using Verizon Wireless phones. Along with the invite, fans will be able to text or click through to purchase, or maybe even win, tickets. What's more, some fans will also receive multimedia message barcode tickets via phone, allowing entry to the shows.

But it doesn't stop there. Verizon users will also be able to text in the songs they want Shakira to perform during the tour, and some lucky fans will even receive passes to see all the action going down backstage.

"As an artist, I am always looking for new creative mediums," Shakira said, "The Verizon Wireless V CAST service gives me a unique platform to offer different musical expressions that fans can access instantaneously through their mobile phones."

Free Napster?

► That's what those banner ads have been trumpeting all week. Free Napster, just like the old days when the original Napster didn't cost you a single penny.

Of course, the original Napster was the mother of all file-swapping networks. That is, until the recording industry won an injunction that forced the company offline.

But that was during the good old anything-goes days of the Net. The current Napster is a legitimate online music service that charges 99 cents a pop for, well, pop, as well as country, rap, jazz and other genres.

So, free Napster? What's up with that? Simply put, it's a new way to grab customers. It's an ad-driven service where you can listen to any song in Napster's inventory for up to five plays. After five, you'll have to pay.

When you think of it, giving five free plays is a pretty good way to introduce people to new music. It's a chance to take a song out for a drive around the block before you decide to buy. Of course, Napster is hoping that you'll buy from them instead of going across the street to iTunes.

Along with the free listens, Napster also has two other new services.

Napsterlinks works with the free spins, allowing music lovers to link directly to Napster songs via e-mail, instant message, blogs and Web sites, thus encouraging music fans to "spread the word" about their latest favs as well as partake in a little viral marketing on behalf of Napster and the labels.

The other new feature is called Narchive. It's an online depository for music fans to contribute whatever they feel is relevant in regards to their personal music experiences, such as stories, photos and memorabilia. Napster is referring to Narchive as the "People's History of Music." Narchive is expected to debut in beta form shortly.

"With all the progress the digital music industry has made over the past few years, a digital music model that fully satisfies everyone - fans, artists, labels and rights holders - has yet to surface," Napster chairman and CEO Chris Gorog said. "We believe we have taken a significant step toward achieving this goal and are grateful for the cooperative support of the record industry in making this a reality."

INTIMATE RADIOHEAD

➤ Radiohead has announced a U.S. tour in addition to its summer festival dates.

The performances will take place in smaller-than-usual venues and will feature appropriately scaled-down staging and lighting design, creating a suitably intimate environment for the debut of several new songs.

The theatre/amphitheatre run begins June 1st with a two-night stand in Philadelphia. In fact, all of the band's tour stops are two-nighters with the exception of the June 17th appearance at Bonnaroo.

Setlists for the shows will draw heavily on newer material the band has been working on in recent months.

The U.S. dates will be preceded by a similar tour of Europe and the U.K., followed by a string of U.K. and European festival dates, including the already sold-out V festival August 19-20, with others TBA.

It's interesting to note that, while Radiohead will be performing new material, a new album isn't expected to be released this year.

The band last toured in 2003.

STILL HOT

➤ It has been a few years since Red Hot Chili Peppers have spent quality time on the road. But when the band tours, it tours hard. So it's no surprise to see the group announcing the "first three legs" of its North American jaunt.

The arena trek runs from August to November in support of the band's new album, Stadium Arcadium.

The Mars Volta, who played with the RHCP on a big chunk of the 2003 tour, will open on all dates.

The tour starts with a West Coast run, beginning August 11th in Portland, Ore., and ending August 27th in Fresno, Calif.

Next comes a Canadian stretch from September 14th to October 1st.

The third leg will launch October 17th in East Rutherford, N.J., traveling down the East Coast into the South and back up to the Great Lakes region. The itinerary includes a headlining appearance at the Voodoo Music Festival in New Orleans October 28th

The last date on the books is a November 5th St. Paul show at the city's Xcel Energy Center.

The band has played some one-offs and special events in the past couple of years but its last major tour wrapped in 2003. That worldwide outing played 53 dates in North America alone.

BE CAREFUL, KEEF

Far be it for us to offer Keith Richards health advice; the guy seems virtually indestructible. But he could ease some worried minds by keeping his feet on the ground.

The guitarist suffered a mild concussion while vacationing in Fiji in late April and was hospitalized in New Zealand as a Media reports in Australia and New Zealand said Richards hurt his head when he fell out of a palm tree at the exclusive Wakaya Club resort.

"Earlier this week Rolling Stone Keith Richards suffered a mild concussion while on holiday in Fiji," according to a statement from a Rolling Stones rep. "Following treatment locally and as a precautionary measure he flew to a hospital accompanied by his wife Patti for observation."

No further details on the 62-year-old rocker's condition were made available.

The Rolling Stones played an April 18th concert in Wellington, N.Z., as part of the "A Bigger Bang" world tour.

Of course, the British tabloids could not leave it at that. Gossip rags claimed Keef fell from a rope swing in a tree but seemed all right. Four days after the accident, he reportedly blacked out and was flown to a New Zealand hospital.

It is not the first time Richards has fallen to Earth. In 1998, the band had to delay a tour after he fell off a ladder while retrieving a book in the library of his Connecticut mansion.

The Stones' next scheduled concert is at the Olympic Stadium in Barcelona, Spain, followed by 34 more dates across Europe.

New Tours

➤ Sonic Youth crosses the U.S. in June and July.... "American Idol Live" spends the summer in arenas..... Phil Lesh & Friends do a theater and shed tour ..... Suzanne Vega takes on Europe, the U.K. and more U.S. shows..... Coheed and Cambria spend a month in Europe..... The "Nashville Star' tour starts in July..... Bo Bice has scattered fair and festival shows ..... Also watch for Dennis DeYoung, Regina Spektor, We Are Scientists, The Wonder Stuff, The Dickies, Ronnie James Dio, Katherine Jenkins, Virginia Coalition, Reverend Horton Heat, Cougars, and Bardo Pond.

🦰 cotland's KT Tunstall couldn't believe her eyes. On her first visit to San Francisco as an emerging U.K. star, she opened a benefit concert sponsored by a local radio station and found herself in front of a sold-out Masonic Auditorium that was going nuts for her.

"Everybody was just going wild, and people were actually standing up and dancing," Tunstall told Pollstar. "At the end, I got a standing ovation from 2,000 people.

"Usually, I'll go offstage and back to the dressing room. But I was peeking through this curtain at this auditorium full of people, in this place I'd never played before in my life, having no idea how much KFOG had plugged me. I thought, 'What on earth is going on?' I was totally confused and amazed and delighted. It happened in a truly organic way with radio."

That was December 3rd, more than three months before her eponymous debut album was even released in America. But in San Francisco, the Scots-Chinese singer/songwriter already had a fan base, thanks to the niece of a program director at KFOG-FM who had returned from a visit to Europe with Tunstall's record in hand and raves for the music.

With that pitch, the first single from the album, "Black Horse and the Cherry Tree" went into regular rotation and word spread to stations in Los Angeles, Seattle, San Diego and Boulder, Colo. According to Tunstall, when one program director called Virgin Records' New York headquarters to congratulate them on signing her, the label had to check with the London office to find out who she was.

That's all changed. When Pollstar spoke to Tunstall from her flat in London, she was preparing for a virtually sold-out return to the States. She'd also just learned her album was certified gold, though it was already platinum five times over in the U.K. where it was released in 2004.

Though Tunstall might seem an overnight sensation in the U.S., it's been a long time coming for the 30-year-old, who still bristles at the resistance she got from record companies early on as she made the rounds in London for, as one reviewer put it, being on the "wrong side of 25."

"It was basically the attitude I encountered, which I just found incredible. It wasn't like I was begging, 'Oh please sign me, please change your mind.' To me, if you think like that, I do not want to be on your label," Tunstall said.

"They've got a great blueprint with Sheryl Crow, one of the biggest selling artists on the planet. She did her first album at 34. Or Patti Smith, Horses came out when she was 27. Why not cash in on an already proven plan? And now I'm laughing at them, with a bottle in one hand and my album in the other."

She laughs a lot these days. In addition to her American success, she won the Brit award earlier this year for best female artist and is now up for an Ivor Novello award for songwriting.

"The Ivor Novello nomination is an exciting and really important one for me," Tunstall said. "It's the proper 'Do It Yourself' award for songwriting. It means you're actually an artist. So it makes me very proud to be recognized as a writer as well as a performer."

Her London-based manager, Simon Banks of SB Management, was also named manager of the year at last month's Music Managers Forum, sharing the Roll of Honour Awards stage with such legends as U2's Paul McGuinness.

"It's so nice the same year I get my Brit, he gets his manager of the year award - which is voted on by managers so it's a real great award for him," Tunstall said of Banks, who's been guiding her career for seven years since bringing her to London from Edinburgh, Scotland.

"Both of us approach what we do with a very similar attitude and it's one of making good music and doing it in a way that you can respect yourself for," she said. "We've never fucked anyone over to get somewhere. We haven't done anything we aren't proud of, even in a business that can be pretty cutthroat."

Tunstall is just as effusive of her agents, Mike Greek of Helter Skelter in London and Marty Diamond of Little Big

"Very early on, when I was playing for 100 to 150 people in the U.K., I started working with Mike Greek, who was so convinced by the show he said, 'I don't ever want you to support anyone. I want you to headline.' Within a year we were playing to 2,500 to 3,000 people and every last gig sold out from the beginning."

Greek introduced Tunstall to Diamond, who took the same approach albeit in a creative fashion when it came to introducing KT to her first Ameri-

"He started me off doing a couple of total guerilla gigs at South by Southwest last year, and I wasn't even on the bill," she said, laughing. "He was just kind of sneaking me in to bizarre little venues, where I'd play in a restaurant and then Bloc Party would play outside.

"I think a few people he wanted to have see me did see me and it kind of got the ball rolling. And he said if you don't need to be supporting anybody, don't. And he's right. We're back and playing for 1,500 people per gig, now."

She'll be playing for more than that, as she hits a few festivals this summer - before returning Stateside for another tour in the fall - including another show for KFOG, in what she now calls her "second home" of San Francisco.

Has Tessa Made A Mess Of It Again?

CULTURE SECRETARY TESSA JOWELL'S speech at a summit meeting on ticket touts has drawn a mixed response from the live music industry.

Although she told the April 26 gathering at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) that she's going to "battle to stamp out ticket touting," many say she isn't going forward fast enough and others think she might even be going backward.

"It's a very watered-down strategy compared with the way that I thought that we were going forward!' Rob Ballantine from the Concert Promoters' Association (CPA) told Pollstar after Jowell had failed to come up with any measures to deal with the rapidly growing number of "bedroom touts."

Ballantine, a director of the Manchester-based SIM Concerts who has led the CPA negotiating team with Geoff Ellis from Scotland's DF Concerts, also said he's "personally dismayed" because efforts to get eBay and the secondary ticket agents to include seating information on their adverts appear to have failed.

"Why won't eBay agree to this? If they did, it would eradicate 'futures' selling immediately and assist in the war against fraud," he argued.

"EBay could insist that the seller gives a full description of the ticket on sale, including the block, row and seat number. Ebay would simply make this a 'required field' to fill in when the seller enters the ticket details," he said.

At press time, eBay head of public affairs Alasdair McGowan hadn't replied to Pollstar inquiries.

. Ballantine's also concerned that the minister is inviting the secondary market to show that it can legitimise itself. He and Ellis - and the CPA - would rather see it outlawed.

He insists the artist, agent and promoter should fix the ticket price. He said re-selling for higher prices - because the market will stand it will lead to a situation where the industry will "fleece this generation and kill off live music for the next."

The culture secretary has said, "I want to see ticket agencies squeezing ticket touts out of business to protect genuine fans from being frozen out of the market." But Ballantine is concerned that the "bedroom tout" is the biggest problem.

A couple of weeks before the summit meeting, Madonna's European tour producer John Giddings reacted to her tickets being advertised on eBay within an hour of going on sale by saying, "The Internet has made touts out of us all."

The day after the meeting, an article in The Times also said genuine concertgoers are turning tout in order to cover their own costs.

It quoted See Tickets managing director Nick Blackburn saying, "It's not uncommon now for fans to buy four tickets for a show when they only need two. They then attempt to sell the extras on eBay to pay for their own tickets."

If secondary sellers are ever outlawed, the legislation would need to be worded in such a way that a "bedroom tout" wouldn't be able to sell an act's T-shirt for £150 and throw a free ticket to see them into the deal.

Jowell said, "We need to strike a balance between stamping out organised touts who buy in bulk and the real fan who for one reason or another decides they can't go to an event and need to sell on their ticket."

But her plan to limit each customer to a maximum of four tickets - which most promoters already do for a hot show - doesn't help solve that problem.

The industry has taken steps to combat the secondary agents who pose as authorised agents, even canceling the tickets that appear on their sites. But monitoring the hundreds of pairs of tickets that are showing up on eBay is a much more arduous task.

Many promoters believe legislation banning the re-selling of concert tickets, or even selling for more than face value, is the only effective

According to The Times piece, an eBay spokesman said the list of new principles drawn up by the secretary of state - which will be discussed again in July - still "recognises the secondary market as a legitimate one."

Ironically, some of the "genuine fans" Jowell wants to protect from "being frozen out of the market" have created a new secondary market of their own.

Since the minister still appears to recognise the secondary ticket agencies as having some sort of legitimacy and doesn't seem to have picked up on the growing nuisance of "bedroom touts," many in the live music business have voiced the opinion that she's in danger of attracting as much criticism as she did when she represented the government during the early stages of the Wembley Stadium development.

She came in for similar flak when she introduced what came to be called the "tax on fun" part of her equally-criticised revamp of the licensing laws for alcohol and entertainment

Last summer, The Observer said she was leading the calls within the cabinet for a ban on the unauthorised re-selling of tickets.

Apparently "stunned" by the number of touts she saw operating outside Cardiff Millennium Stadium before last year's FA Cup Final, she was reportedly looking to extend the ban on re-selling soccer tickets to other sports and live music events.

A similar story appeared in News of The World under a heading that said "Tessa To Oust Touts."

Fearing that the minister is now swaying toward seeing the secondary market as a legitimate one, and obviously aware of the appearance of such new organisations as the Association of Secondary Ticket Agents (ASTA), Geoff Huckstep from the National Arenas Association (NAA) is backing Ballantine's views.

Huckstep, who succeeded Wembley Arena GM Peter Tudor as NAA chairman in February, said, "I'd read the report from the November meeting and, as a relative newcomer, left the April 26 meeting feeling disappointed because it seems to have gone backwards."

He said what concerns him most is that secondary ticket sellers still won't have to seek the permission of the ticket owner - which remains as the venue or promoter until the show has actually happened - before moving the ticket on.

"I think that was an important point to include in the code of practice and it seems to have disappeared from the earlier draft - that's the one that should have been implemented," he explained.

When asked if he thought the government allowing the secondary market into the discussion process is, essentially, offering it an opportunity to legitimise itself, he said, "I'm not sure why they're there. They're not stakeholders in the live music business, they're just a by-product of it.

"They're sucking money out of an industry that can ill afford it and that can't be good. The more people have to pay for tickets, the fewer tickets they'll be able to buy.

"That doesn't help us. Arenas are expensive places to run and we need to be hiring them out to promoters as often as we possibly can," he said. "We have legislation that says it's illegal to re-sell a football ticket and so why can't that be extended to all tickets?

The 1994 Criminal Justice Act made an exception for soccer matches because of the risk of one set of fans buying tickets for a section of the stadium that had been designated for the other team's supporters. The law was based on avoiding soccer violence rather than stamping out touts.

It will also be illegal to re-sell tickets for the 2012 London Olympics, but that's a result of stipulations laid down by the International Olympic Committee, not government action.

Huckstep, who runs Nottingham Arena, says he'll be going to the next NAA meeting with every intention of recommending that the organisation gives its full backing to Ballantine, Ellis and the CPA. The meeting is at The Point in Dublin on May 18.

Among those who took a more positive view of the meeting with lowell was world famous concert promoter Harvey Goldsmith. He told BBC News, "We are edging toward coming up with a code of practice that everyone in the industry can subscribe to in order to control ticket touting."

Live Nation U.K. managing director Stuart Galbraith, another CPA member and a vociferous opponent of all ticket touts, said the government is showing a clear commitment to regulating the secondary market that will ultimately lead to legislation.

He acknowledged that progress may have appeared to have slowed, but insists it's still moving in the right direction. "Politics and government take a long time," he said.

He said he pins great hopes on the code of practice that Jowell's department has produced.

What she's saying is here are the draft guidelines - now the industry must discuss how it will measure up to them.

"The secondary market won't be able to legitimise itself. It can't achieve that. It can't meet the criteria," he told Pollstar.

Galbraith, who estimates that as many as 20 percent of the tickets for a "hot show" are re-sold on the secondary market, also used the meeting to draw the government's attention to the fact the touts don't pay any VAT or PRS out of their profits. The government loses on one count and the artist loses on the

He said that, after several requests, he has now received a current list of ASTA members, so it's possible to monitor if any of them are breaching the DCMS guidelines.

At this year's ILMC, ASTA's Marc Melander attended Tudor's panel on ticketing. There he produced the newly formed organisation's code of practice and explained how it would regulate itself.

Galbraith and Ellis were visibly annoyed when he failed to give full answers to their questions regarding the markup on the tickets and the selling of futures.

On the second point, he was keener to explain the association's refund terms rather than promise not to sell a ticket that he doesn't have in the first place.

Ballantine is intent on seeing some sign of government action, sooner rather than later.

"If we don't get anywhere in July, then we're wasting our time. We've attended a lot of meetings among ourselves and with the DCMS and, if we're still not capable of making ourselves understood, then perhaps we should all go off and spend all this time doing something else."

Following the April meeting, Jowell's department made it clear that the government has no current plans to make touting illegal. But it is looking to identify "practical mechanisms that will make it unattractive for ticket touts to operate."

Between now and the currently undated July meeting, which will also be held at the department's offices in London's Cockspur Street, the principles that Jowell and her civil servants have drawn up will be tested by the live music industry in general and the primary and secondary ticket agents in particular.

After that, all concerned will be expected to sign up to a set of principles that will make up the final code of conduct.

Among the other guidelines drawn up by Jowell and her department is the drawing up of a blacklist of known touts.

The purpose is to refuse to sell to those who regularly buy in bulk. But at ILMC, Wembley box office manager Lyn Dicks told Tudor's ticketing session how much abuse she already gets for doing just that.

To have any realistic chance of getting the legislation the CPA and NAA want, the promoters and venues will have to establish an effective returns policy for fans who bring back tickets because they can't get to the show.

IN CELEBRATION of the Kaiser Chiefs smashing the NIA Academy attendance record by drawing more than 13,000 to the arena in Birmingham, England, April 26, director of arenas Linda Bull presents the band with a silver plaque and champagne.

In the future, the administrative costs of refunds could become part of a show's financial breakdown.

It's also Jowell's intention to ban the sale of "futures" and require secondary sellers to provide better information regarding the position of the seats they're offering.

Any earlier references to the seller needing the permission of the promoter or venue to re-sell are, much to Huckstep's annoyance, noticeably Jowell has also called on fans to boycott sellers or sites that deliberately set out to either defraud them or charge them exorbitant prices.

Others who attended the DCMS ticketing summit include Ticketmaster, Live Nation, Mean Fiddler Music Group, the Agents Association, the FA Premier League, Society of London Theatres, See Tickets, Live 8, the Rugby Football Union, England and Wales Cricket Board and the All England Lawn Tennis Club.

Glitter Says He's Innocent

IN REGARDS TO THE BBC'S STACK OF complaints for allowing Gary Glitter another platform to proclaim his innocence, a BCC spokesman told The Times, "His intention to return to the U.K. and inability to acknowledge his crimes are clearly matters in the public interest and ones that the BBC has a duty to explain."

"I haven't done anything," the 61-year-old former glam rock star told the station's main evening news programme. He claims he didn't abuse girls and said he only travelled to Vietnam because he's interested in its geography.

More than 100 people complained after the BBC screened an interview with Glitter - real name Paul Gadd from a Vietnamese prison cell where he's currently serving a three-year sentence for sexually molesting two young girls.

Roadmender Still Stuck in A Pothole

A MONTH AFTER THE VENUE WENT into liquidation, official administrator Ian Cooke is still hopeful of selling Northampton Roadmender as a going concern.

He said he's already in talks with a couple of interested parties but will be more than happy to hear from anyone who wants to discuss buying the two-room venue.

The future of Roadmender was thrown into doubt after the Conservatives won control of the local Northamptonshire County Council and decided to pull the plug on funding the venue.

Apparently, it was time it stood on its own two feet.

As The Arts Council had already said it couldn't provide further grants beyond April 2006, the loss of the council money meant Roadmender was suddenly stripped of about 44 percent of its subsidised income.

On November 30, it went into administration with debts of about £250,000.

Three of the major creditors, believed to include brewer Carlsberg Teltley (owed £95,000) and Northampton Borough Council (£65,000), were happy to wait to see if a rescue package could be put together, so the first creditors' meeting was

The Borough Council had also been supporting Roadmender. But when the county council pulled out, its funding alone wasn't enough for the venue to continue. It's now set to lose about £60,000 that it's already put in.

By January 9, these major creditors were happy for Cooke - who works for Northampton-based Business Recovery Insolvency to delay winding up the company's affairs until the idea of a rescue package had been fully explored.

By March 23, when the creditors met again, it was obvious that without the Arts Council grant and the Northampton County Council funding, the venue was stuck in a financial hole.

The irony of the Roadmender's situation is that the end came just as the venue showed signs of controlling its losses.

Up to March 31, 2005, its annual trading loss showed at £70,920. But after Andy Wright's Leicester Charlotte took over the booking and made more use of the venue, the downside for the next six months dropped by half to £17,778.

Apple Won't Satisfy 'Greedy' Record Co.'s

APPLE COMPUTER CHIEF EXEC STEVE Jobs has won his battle with the major record companies to continue to sell songs through his iTunes digital store at 99 cents each.

The company announced May 1 that it had renewed contracts with all the major record companies, although the agreements weren't signed until there were months of wrangling.

Last year, it became so acrimonious that Jobs publicly called the recorded music industry "greedy."

The coverage in the U.K. press, including the front page of the Financial Times, said the new deals are a defeat for all the music companies that had been pushing for flexible pricing.

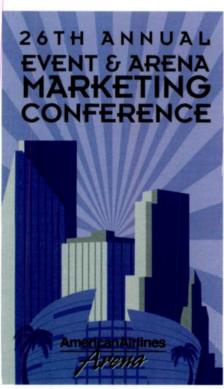

Since iTunes launched three years ago, Apple has charged U.S. consumers 99 cents for each track a uniform price Jobs said he favours because of its simplicity.

Warner's chief executive Edgar Bronfman Jr. and senior executives at EMI and Sony have supported variable pricing because it would allow them to charge more for new material from top artists.

However, the record companies have little leverage over Apple. Its iTunes accounts for about 80 percent of the U.S. digital music market.

THOM YORKE and Johnny Greenwood of Radiohead get some practice in at the Big Ask Live benefit concert at Koko in London on May 1. Radiohead's tour starts in the U.S. in June, with European dates following in the summer.

someone played him the new official World Cup song by Embrace.

Unfortunately, and perhaps like all the English candidates lined up for the top soccer job, Embrace's record isn't creating much of an impression with the English soccer fans.

If Scolari, a Brazilian who's currently managing the Portuguese national team, didn't like the band's "World At Your Feet," then his opinion isn't pretty much in line with the vast majority of the country.

What the FA doesn't seem to understand, apart from how to oversee the building of a new stadium or how to appoint a new manager, is that the very idea of an official World Cup song is a nonsense in itself.

Ultimately, the official song is whatever the gathered masses on the terraces - full of national pride and several pints of lager - decide to sing at the time.

History shows that, if the team is having a decent spell, it's likely to be "Three Lions on a Shirt," the official anthem for the 1998 World Cup.

It was written and performed by comedians David Baddiel and Frank Skinner, with Ian Broudie from The Lightning Seeds.

It had two spells as the country's No.1 single and, according to The Sun, is due for re-release before the World Cup starts in Germany on June 24.

If the team is having a particularly good spell - it's drawn a game or is unassailably close to doing that - then the terraces are likely to opt for that old favourite that involves inserting a third syllable into the middle of the word "England" and chanting (three times) what sounds like the name of a Swedish lady called "Inga Lund, Inga Lund, Inga Lund."

Critics Won't Swallow Elton's Pill

THE BROADWAY debut of Sir Elton John's vampire musical "Lestat" was given the thumbs down by the critics, with influential New York Times writer Ben Brantley calling it "a musical sleeping pill."

The best notice the show seems to have came from USA Today, which said "it isn't nearly as bad as you may have expected."

Pointing out that vampire musicals don't work on Broadway, "Dance of the Vampires" lasted just a month in 2003 and "Dracula The Musical" only did five months in 2004, Brantley told New York Times readers that "Lestat" is "unlikely to break the solemn curse that has plagued the genre."

The show – which stars Hugh Panaro as Lestat de Lioncourt, an 18th Century French nobleman who becomes a vampire – is based on the novels of Anne Rice.

Co-written by Sir Elton's songwriting partner Bernie Taupin, "Lestat" opened at New York's Palace Theatre April 25.

It's the first time Sir Elton - whose stage credits include "Billy Elliot" and "The Lion King" - has written a musical with his long-time collaborator.

It will face box office competition from "Tarzan," the Phil Collins musical of the 1999 Disney cartoon film, which was set to open May 10.

AEG Pushes Dirt At Last

IT MAY BE HAPPENING AROUND THREE years later than company president Tim Leiweke predicted, but AEG is finally going to start building a new arena in Berlin.

His guess that "we will probably be pushing dirt in Berlin sometime in the summer of 2003" turned out to be wide of the mark. But after announcing a strategic alliance with O2 telecommunications group, it seems AEG will have construction under way by the end of this year.

Even three years overdue, the news is confirmation that AEG has finally won the battle to build a new arena in the German capital. More than four years ago, and around the time that Leiweke had forecast the 2003 starting date in a Pollstar interview, it was far from clear who would build the city's new arena or even how many there would be.

It seemed as if Harry Harkimo's Helsinki-based Jokerit HC Arena Holding Oy (JHC) had the lead on AEG.

The Finnish company, which had just opened its new Colorline Arena in Hamburg, had the local Spandau council's provisional go-ahead – the equivalent of outline planning permission – to develop what would have been an 18,000-capacity "Siemensstadt."

JHC had bought the 100,000square-metre site from Siemens and it'd also been pretty well agreed that the electronics giant would get the naming rights to the new building.

"We're still negotiating, but the project should soon be operating under a name like Siemens Arena," Dieter Hortreiter from the company's property management department told Berliner Zeitung.

Meanwhile, AEG's proposed development across the city at Friedrichshain was bogged down with planning disputes involving local authorities and some sitting tenants.

What made the battle more intriguing was that the rivalry to build the arena was matched by the rivalry to dominate ice hockey.

What set it on a knife edge was that it was far from certain if Berlin authorities would ultimately sanction the building of two arenas.

Harkimo, who has a major share of Helsinki's Hartwall Arena and the hockey team that plays there, was reported to be in discussion with the Berlin Capitals with a view to bring the team to the new venue.

Anschutz, with hockey interests that included London Knights (which used to play at Docklands), Germany's Munich Barons, HC Prague in the Czech Republic and Switzerland's Geneva Eagles, also has his own Berlin Eisbarens. If his development got the go-ahead, the arena would become the team's new home.

When it became clear the city fathers were likely to settle for having just one new arena, JHC decided the risk was too great and pulled out.

"In the end, it was decided that one arena was enough and we pulled out because we couldn't be sure it would be ours. Of course, it cost money but sometimes that happens in business. The decision not to go ahead was sensible risk management," JHC's Mika Sulin told Pollstar at the time.

"We said we will build the arena when we are certain that the company that will give our arena its name, its face, and its spirit, is a partner who will work with us to transform a dream into a specific vision and, from there, a reality. O2 Germany is this partner," Leiweke said in a statement, although a major part of the three-year delay was down to the initial problems with the site.

O2 World, as the new arena will be called, is being built on land between the Ostbahnhof railway station, the Oberbaumbrücke bridge across the River Spree, and Mühlenstrasse.

It's expected to open its doors to the public in 2008.

Its most impressive feature will be the 1,800-meter LED wall that will turn one outer facade into a gigantic video screen. It's reported that it will be even bigger than any of the advertising spaces at New York's Times Square.

The cost of the 60,000-square-meter, 18,000-capacity arena is estimated at close to euro 150 million (US$189.25 million).

About That Loan...

ALTHOUGH MOST FINANCIAL ANALYSTS were predicting that Bertelsmann would float to pay off its other major shareholder, a May 3 report in the U.K.'s Financial Times suggests the company might borrow the money to buy it out.

The German publishing giant faced a choice between an IPO or borrowing about euro 5 billion (US$6.1 billion) to buy the 25.1 percent stake held by Belgian financier Albert Frère and his Groupe Bruxelles Lambert (GBL).

Three months ago, there was uncertainty over which way the company would jump, with Bertelsmann chief exec Gunter Thielen refusing to rule out selling off assets to fund the acquisition of GBL's stake.

However, at the same time, he also told the U.K.'s The Guardian that the company had "made the necessary efforts in the last years to prepare for a possible IPO."

Since then, a couple of major Bertelsmann execs have hinted that the IPO would be the most likely way forward. But now it seems Liz Mohn - the matriarchal head of the family that owns the other three-quarters of the company – is reported to be digging in her heels and mulling over borrowing the euro 5 billion instead.

ABBA Star Appeals Tax Demand

FORMER ABBA MEMBER BJORN Ulvaeus will appeal against a US$11.6 million tax demand, according to Swedish daily Dagens Nyheter.

Ulvaeus lawyer Sven Rygaard told the paper that he was "pretty convinced" that he'd win.

"We will explain to the tax authority how this was done. I don't think they have managed to understand how this has worked."

As far as the Swedish tax authority is concerned, the way it has worked is that Ulvaeus signed a series of contracts before moving to England in 1984, handing over the rights to his royalties from ABBA songs and the musical "Chess" to different companies.

But the tax inspectors say the contracts are a sham and that Ulvaeus still had access to the money. And he should have included it in his returns as personal income.

The tax authority ruling concerns returns filed between 1998 and 2003.

Ulvaeus was part of the Swedish group in the 1970s and 1980s, and has since written several musicals together with fellow ABBA member Benny Andersson.

Luxury Camping

DURING HIS "TALKING SHOP" session at ILMC 2005, Carl Leighton-Pope joked that added value for the customer would lead to festivals offering luxury camping.

It seems like Denmark's Roskilde Festival has taken him at his word.

For this year's gathering, Roskilders can buy a pitched tent in an area where they'll also get a sort of room service that includes free breakfasts, festival papers, free luggage storage, recharge service for mobile phones and a bonfire area with a grill.

The cost for what Roskilde describes as "a brand new and totally exclusive festival experience" is 500 Danish kroner (about US$85). The tents are numbered and easy to find. Those who sign up get to keep the tent as a festival souvenir.

The "Get A Tent" area, which is seven kilometres from the site and served by shuttle buses around the clock, has space for 500 two-metre square tents which, as the festival press release points out, is "plenty of room for two people."

It also says people can share their tents with another person, but the guest isn't entitled to the services or the showers. This raises the question of whether it would be wise to extend the same hospitality to a friend for all four days.

"Come to Roskilde Festival when it suits you. You will not have to lug your tent and look for an available spot in the tent-packed area. A spot has already been reserved for you, and your unique Roskilde Festival tent is already pitched and ready to be used," says the advertising blurb.

Those camping in luxury at this year's Roskilde June 29 to July 2 can enjoy a lineup that includes Guns N' Roses, Bob Dylan, Morrissey, Kaiser Chiefs, Roger Waters, HIM, Placebo, Seeed, Franz Fedinand, Deftones, Clap Your Hands Say Yeah, Arctic Monkeys, and George Clinton.

Zinzi Tries To Help Snoop Out Of Jail

EVEN THE HELP OF NELSON MANDELA'S daughter Zinzi wasn't enough to get U.S. rapper Snoop Dog out of a London police station in time to play the April 27 People's Celebration Concert in Johannesburg.

"I think they sent a letter but I do not have the details," Big Concerts' Lara Cohen told local media after Snoop and five of his bodyguards had been arrested at Heathrow Airport after allegedly hurling bottles of whiskey and arguing with staff.

British media reports said the group started smashing whiskey bottles on the floor of a duty-free shop after they were refused entry to British Airways First Class lounge.

The incident ended with a punchup with the airport police and a "mini-riot," according to a couple of the U.K. tabloids.

William Morris agent Brent Smith offered a decidedly different view of the incident.

"I was personally with Snoop when this happened but can't officially comment because this is a current legal matter," Smith said. "I can however say that media accounts of the event are a complete joke. The good news is there were video cameras everywhere and the truth will be told soon enough."

Snoop and his entourage were released within hours, but not in time to make the show at the 40,000-capacity Johannesburg Stadium. The audience was left to settle for a supporting bill that included Sean Paul, Pharrel Williams, and Mario.

Getting the word out on time and offering full refunds immediately, Big Concerts owner Attie van Wyk was delighted that 32,000 still showed up for the 10 hours of entertainment that was still offered.

"We took a loss on it, particularly as we had to schedule another Johannesburg show, but Attie felt it was important to keep the audience happy," said Big Concerts' Michael Anetakis, after the company had managed to schedule a May 3 show in the same stadium.

"We're expecting about 15,000 tonight," he told Pollstar, following an announcement that un-refunded tickets for the original show were still valid.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

Once Snoop arrived in South Africa, he played shows at Durban ABSA Arena April 29 and Cape Town Greenpoint Stadium on May 1.

"We have a few more grey hairs but it looks as if it will all happen in the end," Anetakis said on the morning of the re-scheduled May 3 Johannesburg show.

As for Zinzi's efforts? "When we heard Snoop Dog was being held at Heathrow, I think Attie called everyone he knew who might be able to help get him here," Anetakis explained.

Although a spokesman for South Africa's Department of Foreign Affairs confirmed that it had been approached to help get Snoop released, Anetakis is playing down any behind-the-scenes moves that might have hurried things up.

'My information is that ultimately there were no charges laid against him," he told the daily Cape Argus April 28.

'Dirty Dancing' Heads Stateside

JACOBSEN ENTERTAINMENT PLANS to stage the "Dirty Dancing" musical in the United States in 2007, to coincide with the 20th anniversary of the Patrick Swayze/Jennifer Grey movie. Sydney-based Jacobsen owns the world licensing rights to the musical.

It intends to launch the musical at the Aladdin Casino in Las Vegas. Jacobsen managing director Michael Jacobsen said up to 20 American companies have shown interest in being the U.S. partner for the venture and that negotiations will begin later this year.

"Dirty Dancing" has been a success story elsewhere on the globe, and is predicted to gross $1 billion outside America.

The German season in Hamburg set a new record in Europe for advance ticket sales, totaling A$32 million.

The U.K. run in October, at London's West End, also set a new record when advance ticket sales exceeded £4 million.

It will play in Holland, France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Russia and Poland. Jacobsen's European partner is Dutch-based Stage Entertainment.

Shows in Israel, Brazil, Hong Kong, Japan and Singapore are confirmed, with plans for runs in South Africa, the United Arab Emirates and other parts of Asia.

Capitol Aims At Music

HUMAN NATURE'S THREE-NIGHT stand at Sydney's Capitol Theatre in May marks a return of acts to the 2,000-capacity hall.

The venue's operator, Arena Management, says that its run of blockbuster musicals at the venue, including "The Lion King" which had a two-year run, "Footloose" and "West Side Story," is over for at least

It is marketing the venue to promoters of mid-sized tours.

Sherbet Reunite

SHERBET, ONE OF THE BIGGEST Australian pop acts in the 1970s, reformed to play its global hit "Howzat!" at the television industry's May 7 Logies awards in Melbourne.

The band is tipped to be on the bill of Frontier Touring's mid-winter "Countdown" tour, a musical tribute to the influential TV show of that name in the 1970s.

Sherbet was managed by Roger Davies, who later moved to Los Angeles and looked after Tina Turner, Joe Cocker and Olivia Newton-John. Coincidentally, another of Davies' clients, Pink, also performed at the Logies.

WA Announces New Deal For Clubs

WEST AUSTRALIA'S NEW LIQUOR Control Act allows nightclub owners and patrons to breathe a little easier.

The new rules insist that three unrelated people have to lodge noise complaints against a live music venue before authorities can take action. Prior occupancy must be taken into consideration by the licensing authority.

It makes it easy for under-age gigs to be held in licensed venues. It also means that the 3 a.m. lockout will not be introduced in the state. A push to restrict weekend hours from 6 a.m. to 5 a.m. was unsuccessful.

The West Australian Music association has been giving itself a well-deserved pat. Many of the recommendations put forward by its Venues Protection Committee were adopted by the government.

Oricon To Count Downloads

JAPANESE MUSIC INDUSTRY AND chart magazine Oricon announced that starting this fall it will include Internet-related data in its compilations for rankings.

The magazine, which was established in 1967, currently only counts retail sales from Japan's 2,900 record stores when making lists of top albums and singles.

However, with the fast growth of music download services such as iTunes, the company says its present music charts do not reflect reality.

Oricon's move seems to be in response to the establishment of a new company called Net Ratings. which compiles data about Internet sales and activities.

Net Ratings recently announced that it is now carrying out research into music downloads and will start publishing its own rankings this September.

In the beginning, Net Ratings will use a conventional Web-type questionnaire to compile sales data about downloaded songs.

In addition, Net Rankings will develop a data collection system that will use specially developed Internet software to automatically compile data as songs are downloaded.

The 41 companies that belong to the Japan Record Association reported that between October and December of last year, 82 million legal downloads were recorded.

During the same period, 103 million CDs and DVDs were sold.

Boomers Ready To Rock Again

TICKETS WENT ON SALE LAST MONTH for a joint outdoor concert featuring folk music veterans Takuro Yoshida and Kaguvahime. It will take place in September at Tsumagoi Field in Shizuoka prefecture, south of Tokyo.

The festival-like event will recreate a famous concert featuring the same two artists that took place in the same location in 1975 and drew a record 70,000 people.

Organizers expect to sell 50,000 tickets priced at 15,000 yen (about $130) apiece. Most of the tickets will likely be purchased by people in their late 50s who grew up listening to the two artists, which may explain why each ticket comes with a seat cushion.

The event highlights the increased level of attention that so-called "dankai no sedai" - the "mass generation" - has attracted recently.

Though often referred to as "boomers," this demographic is narrower than its American counterpart.

The DS generation was born between 1947 and 1949, after which the Japanese government actively tried to limit the birthrate because of continuing hardships in the aftermath of World War II.

As its name indicated, this is a huge group. More importantly, it was the first generation of Japanese to embrace American-style consumerism.

Music remains the most prominent identifier among DS boomers, who will begin retiring in 2007.

In one questionnaire survey conducted by advertising giant Hakuhodo, the top three answers to the question: Which term best describes "dankai no sedai?" were "group sounds" (Japanese rock groups of the mid-'60s), "folk music," and "The Beatles."

Evidence of a resurgence in music-related interest is the growth of "folk taverns," bars where DS boomers go after work to sing and play folk music from their youth.

Oyaji Band Competitions have also become popular. "Oyaji" is Japanese slang for middle-aged men, and the competitions have directly fed the increase in electric guitar sales.

Analysts say the generation's idealism was nipped in the bud by the reality of joining a company and starting a family. They say that with retirement, the DS boomers intend to pick up exactly where they left off.

Udo Sticks To Classics For Summer

VETERAN JAPANESE CONCERT promoter Udo Artists is organizing its own summer rock festival this year amidst a very crowded field of outdoor events.

Udo's main rivals in the foreign artist concert promotion game, Smash and Creativeman, run Japan's two biggest and most established festivals, Fuji Rock and Summer Sonic, respectively. There are about a dozen other summer rock festivals featuring local artists that bring in huge crowds.

Two years ago, Udo presented a two-day stadium festival in Yokohama. Although it featured Aerosmith and the belated Japan debut of The Who, it didn't do as well as expected.

The promoter has decided to go with its main strength this summer, which is its longtime relationship with many of classic rock's heavyweights.

The Udo Music Festival will take place July 22 and 23 simultaneously at the Fuji Speedway near the foot of Mt. Fuji and at Izumiotsu Phoenix in Osaka.

The headliners are two of Udo's most reliable ticket-sellers: Santana and Kiss. But the roster includes other Udo standbys Jeff Beck, The Doobie Brothers, and The Pretend-

The lineup is filled out with the likes of Nuno Bettencourt, Audioslave, The Pussycat Dolls, Godsmack, Morningwood, Rhett Miller, Teddy Thompson, and Fourplay. More acts will be added in future weeks.

Asikan To Sponsor Festival

ASIAN KUNG-FU GENERATION, one of Japan's most popular punk bands, that only three years ago played the Rookie A Go Go stage at the Fuji Rock Festival, will be sponsoring its own rock festival this July.

Asikan, as its fans call the group, launched the Nano-Mugen Festival at Tokyo's tiny Shinjuku Loft rock club in August 2003.

"Nano" is the mathematical term for one-billionth, while "mugen" is the Japanese word for "infinity."

The festival, which mostly featured underground punk and hardcore bands, was so successful that the 2004 version was held in Budokan hall.

Like last year's edition, the 2006 festival will be held in Yokohama Arena, one of Japan's biggest venues.

As THE JAPANESE "boomer" generation reaches retirement age, they're setting aside time to rock out. Oyaji band competitions, with "oyaji" being slang for middle-aged man, have become extremely popular in the country, causing gear manufacturers and department stores to take notice.

The dates are July 16 and 17, with Asikan headlining both days.

The lineup includes every major Japanese punk and hardcore band and most of the minor

Among foreign artists scheduled to appear are The Rentals and Silver Sun. 🕊

Road Recovery Believes...

That not everyone who drinks is an alcoholic and not everyone who dabbles with drugs becomes addicted. But for some, it takes just one time - one experiment following another, leading to a painful and often catastrophic end.
