LN Invests In Upgrades

LIVE NATION IS INVESTING heavily in its venues this season, wiring 90 venues for broadcasts and upgrading amphitheatres' sound systems, video screens, infrastructure and customer service.

At six sheds, LN is introducing curtaining systems.

LN has 36 U.S. venues wired for television, mobile phone carriers, terrestrial and satellite radio, and online use as well as for the Instant Live division, which sells recordings of concerts immediately following shows. By the end of 2006, LN expects to have a total of 120 venues wired.

LN also expects to have curtaining systems in place at a halfdozen outdoor venues. Curtains are nearly standard in enclosed venues these days, but until now have been rare, if not unheard of, for amphitheatres.

"They'll come down from the roof, blocking off the lawn," LN President of Global Venues Bruce Eskowitz told Pollstar. "It's a functional way for a band that wants to play to reserve seats only."

The curtains will reduce capacity to anywhere from 5,000 to 8,000 reserved seats, Eskowitz said.

Recipients are the Verizon Wireless Amphitheatre in San Antonio; Verizon Wireless Amphitheatre in Charlotte, N.C.; Ford Amphitheatre in Tampa, Fla.; Nissan Pavilion at Stone Ridge in Bristow, Va.; Cricket Pavilion in Phoenix; and UMB Bank Pavilion near St. Louis. LN has been working with engineers to design the systems.

"It gives us the ability to just go out and create a more intimate environment at an amphitheatre if that's what an act wants," Eskowitz said. "We're just trying to make sure our venues are as flexible as they can possibly be for the acts and the fans."

Sound equipment has been upgraded at several venues including Shoreline Amphitheatre in Mountain View, Calif.; UMB Bank Pavilion; NYC's Irving Plaza; Louisville Palace; Ford Amphitheatre; Detroit State Theatre; PNC Bank Arts Center in Holmdel, N.J.; and the Verizon Wireless sheds in Virginia Beach and San Antonio.

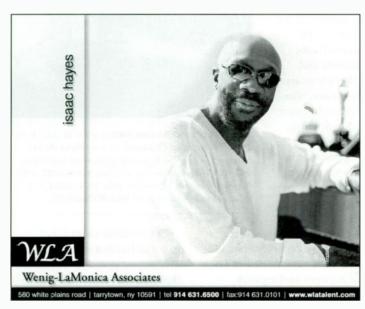

LN has also contracted a hospitality consultant, LRA Worldwide, after the LRA mystery-shopped various Live Nation venues and convinced the entertainment company it could improve the overall quality of its customer service. "We're training all of the thousands of seasonal employees who come in contact with all of our amphitheatres this summer," Eskowitz said. "This includes Aramark, security, guest services, housekeeping and box offices.

"We've created a single, standardized training manual, an employee handbook, mystery shopper programs to see how we're doing, and constant customer feedback. The program is rolling out next year to clubs and theatres," he said.

Screens have been upgraded for the lawns of the Tweeter Center in Camden, N.J.; Shoreline; Sound Advice Amphitheatre in West Palm Beach, Fla.; First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre in Tinley Park, Ill.; Nikon at Jones Beach Theatre in Wantagh, N.Y., and Nissan Pavilion.

This year, screens will be upgraded at Verizon Wireless in Irvine, Calif.; Verizon in Indianapolis; Ford; UMB; New England Dodge Music Center in Hartford, Conn.; and Boston's Tweeter Center.

The F&B prices have been rolled back at the sheds, including $5 beer and $3 bottled water. An energy drink – Red Bull – will be added.

"We're doing testing in '06 for rolling out in '07 wireless POS, where you can order food from your seat and have it delivered," Eskowitz said. "We're testing SMS text messaging to order food and beverage to your seat. We're also testing wristbands where you can embed a credit card number and swipe it onto a machine to pay quicker."

LN is also improving signage for Aramark, its main concessionaire, in eight buildings.

Several of these improvements are in the works at Shoreline Amphitheatre, along with two new elevated sections for patrons with disabilities, sushi and veggie wraps, remodeled restrooms and a re-paved plaza. Joe Reinartz

Concert Scam Not Isolated

SCAM ARTIST WHO BOOKED concerts by pretending to represent Alice In Chains and Axl Rose has preyed on several clubs since last year using various names.

Janna Elias, personal assistant to Poison's Bret Michaels, told Pollstar that Michaels and the group were similarly exploited. In one instance, a phony artist rep named John Bryant of Try-Star Entertainment attempted to book Poison for $7,500 at a Florida club in December.

"A club called Bourbon Street out of Port Richey, Fla., managed to contact me [through] our Web site," Elias said. "[A club representative] sent me an e-mail saying, 'Hey, we have this date here for Poison. My manager is out and I'm getting ready to write this gentleman a personal check for the deposit and I just want to verify this is true and correct.'

"I immediately e-mailed him with my phone number and said,

"Bret does do, in addition to Poison, some large events ... and some smaller, more intimate events," Elias said. "I think that's where these people are being taken advantage of."

Elias thought that was the end of it until she got a Pollstar e-mail alert on May 11th listing a solo Michaels show at Peccadillo's in Erie, Pa., June 1st. Elias let the club owner know the booking wasn't legit.

After comparing notes, Elias discovered the Peccadillo's show was pitched by a rep named Michael Robertson – the same name on the contracts for the bogus Alice In Chains and Axl Rose bookings – who is associated with Bryant.

Further research by Elias and associate Lance Surber of Long Distance Concerts in Las Vegas turned up a solo Robert Plant concert pitched to Annie's Entertainment Complex in Cincinnati for $7,500. The Axl Rose show at 307 Downtown in Louisiana was pitched for $5,000.

Copies of the contracts and related correspondence obtained by Pollstar show the same contract template used in the AIC and Rose scams with the pertinent info typed in and promises of promotion on a Clear Channel radio station. The "act of God,"

The names used by the phony artist rep include Robertson, Bryant, and Doug Goldstein, using various business names including Try-Star Entertainment, Michael

Some club reps were instructed to send a certified cashiers check for the deposit to a Carey Zermeno, or Zermino, at a Chicago address while others were to be sent to Robertson or Bryant.

Agency for the Performing Arts agent Troy Blakely, who represents Plant and Poison among others, said the reported scams aren't a new development and can be avoided.

"I've seen this happen for 30 years. There's always been someone out there scamming somebody about selling an act they have no association with," he told Pollstar. ACL's Greener Pastures

ZILKER PARK, THE TEXAS home of the Austin City Limits Music Festival, will no longer be called a "dust bowl" thanks to a joint effort by Capital Sports & Entertainment and the city to fund a sprinkler system for the park.

The three-year, three-phase project to install sprinklers and water fountains will be done in conjunction with the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

CSE's Charlie Jones said funding the sprinkler and irrigation system was an easy choice. The goal of the project falls in with the ideology behind the festival in general.

"The original intention ... was to create an event that would, in a sense, be owned by our community and have a long life span," Jones told Pollstar. "As we have all recognized the last four years,

[the event] has taken off and become fairly large and successful.

"We feel it's our responsibility to work with the Parks Department to make the park better than it was when we got it."

The sprinkler system installation is already about a year ahead of schedule and will be in use at this year's ACL Festival September 15-17. That means greener pastures for the thousands who flock to Zilker Park from around the world.

"The goal was to have it up and running by June so by the time August rolled around, the park should look like a golf course," he said.

CSE will put in more than $200,000 this year, with future funding determined as needed. Jones also said that helping to improve the location is more than just good business.

"It's not just Zilker Park where we're taking this approach. We're taking the same approach with the Parks Department in Chicago for Lollapalooza," Jones explained. "If events or promoters are going to use these types of spaces that are publicly owned, it's our responsibility to do this, and we're proud to do it."

Last year's "dust bowl" conditions – the product of a drought and "crazy atmospheric conditions" from hurricanes to the south – didn't hurt the three-day event's success. The ACL Festival earned the 2005 Pollstar Festival of the Year award.

This year's ACL lineup of 130 acts was announced May 17th and includes Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers, Van Morrison, Massive Attack, String Cheese Incident, Ben Harper & The Innocent Criminals, The Raconteurs, Goldfrapp, Wolf Parade, KT Tunstall, Thievery Corporation, Gnarls Barkley, Cat Power, Damian "Jr. Gong" Marley, Kings of Leon, and Aimee Mann. The Kings would make investment pitches to audience members during and after the gigs, asking for investments ranging from $1,000 to $60,000, according to the Secretary of State's office.

In one incident, a Minnesota resident attended a performance of the King's Country Show in September 2002 and noticed a flyer on the table that said those interested in investing in the show could meet with Larry King after the performance, according to the C&D order.

King allegedly told the Minnesotan a minimum investment of 5,000 shares was required at $1 per share. The money would help pay for the show and the investor would eventually receive a return on the investment in the form of dividends once the stock was issued.

The investor was informed in 2003 that Larry King had developed cancer, the C&D says. In 2005, the investor met with the Kings over lunch and was told the company was expected to be incorporated by November.

To date, the Kings' show has not gone public and the investor has not received a dividend.

The C&D chronicles several similar events that allegedly took place, with the Kings depositing investors' checks in their business account, then making withdrawals in equivalent amounts soon after.

Secretary of State spokesman Mike Seitz told Pollstar the Kings are scheduled to appear before the Commissioner of Securities May 25th, where they could be fined $10,000 for each violation of the Missouri Securities Act of 2003, or their case could be dismissed. Seitz said the Kings requested a pre-hearing conference scheduled May 11th but failed to appear.

Cardwell Hitches To New Star

EVEN THOUGH MUSIC MIDTOWN is on hiatus, Atlanta will have some outdoor music July 22nd. A one-day festival, organized by radio station Star 94, will mark a return of sorts for its producer, Marcie Allen Cardwell, who organized the city's free On The Bricks concert series.

The three-day Music Midtown, which is an annual fixture in Atlanta, had to be temporarily scrapped this year because of added costs and a need for a new location. According to Star 94 program director Dan Bowen, that decision was instrumental in organizing its upcoming event.

"We immediately thought it was important to create another music event that would not necessarily take [Music Midtown's] place but certainly help fill the void on some level," Brown told Pollstar. "We wanted to do an outdoor venue in midtown, if we could find it. We decided the ultimate spot would be one of the hottest new areas of town, which is Atlantic Station."

The festival is to have a main stage and a side stage for regional acts with a site capacity of 10,000. Star 94 announced the initial lineup May 17th that includes

INSIDER: News Briefs

Train, Pink, Nickel Creek, Mat Kearney, Aqualung, and The Whigs.

Star Fest is expected to be an annual event, Bowen said.

Star 94 was the presenting radio station for three seasons of On The Bricks and Cardwell was recruited to book talent for Star Fest. Other players from On The Bricks – Rick Whetsel and Tara Murphy – are on board for production and public relations.

Unlike On The Bricks and Nashville's Dancin' In The District, which could arguably be claimed as Cardwell's events, she is taking a subordinate role in Star Fest. Still, she has been out of the watchful eye of the industry for the year and a half since she left Mad Booking, the company she founded. On The Bricks continued with Mad's Laura Valente at the helm while Cardwell moved on to booking corporate events and negotiating sponsorships.

So, does this constitute a return to concert promotion?

"It's an interesting question," Cardwell told Pollstar. "It's one that's been posed a lot to me over the past couple of weeks from the industry after people heard we were going to be helping with Star Fest. The answer is yes and no. Yes, I'm obviously going to be doing festivals again but, no, it's not anything like I was doing before. Number one, I don't own the festival. It was Star 94's idea."

Cardwell's new company, MAC Presents, has coordinated corporate events for Cracker Barrel, Victoria's Secret, Chrysler, Coca-Cola and other companies. It is also responsible for promoting Cracker Barrel's CD series.

Meanwhile, she said Star Fest is a sign that audiences are shifting from traditional amphitheatres to urban outdoor events.

"People want an intimate setting or they want to be outdoors in unrestricted seats. I think that's one of the reasons why Star 94 picked Atlantic Station – it's in the heart of midtown, a billion-dollar, live-eat-work-and-play," she said.

"People are sick of commuting and there's an issue of traffic in Atlanta. Here, you have a place that has a movie theater, an IKEA, office buildings, townhouses, condos and 14 restaurants." Joe Reinartz

Nets' Proposed Digs Unveiled

RCHITECT FRANK GEHRY unveiled revised drawings and a model of what he hopes will be the future home of the NBA's New Jersey Nets during a May 11th press conference.

The $3.5 billion, 21-acre development in Brooklyn, described as a "mini-city," will feature an 18,000-capacity glass-enclosed arena, apartment towers, office space, stores and a hotel. Also in the plans are tree-lined walkways and a shallow pond.

Gehry proposes two levels of suites around most of the arena, though only one level would be in each of the corners, creating a more intimate atmosphere in an otherwise cavernous 18,000-seat space, according to the Bergen Record of New Jersey.

Gehry reportedly calls the design a "butterfly bowl." He proposes 120 luxury suites for the building.

The arena's floor would be below street level, allowing those walking past the arena on Flatbush Avenue to see the scoreboard during games, but not the games themselves.

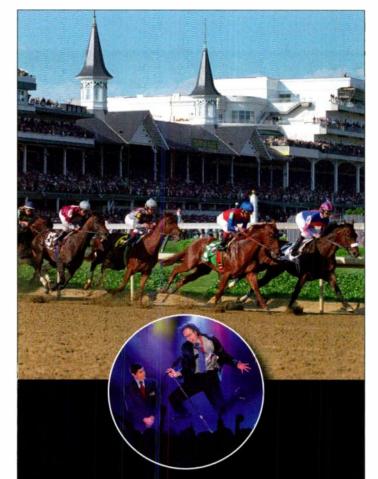

Tunnels linking the concourses to seats would be much wider than at most older buildings, making it easier for fans hitting concession stands to still see the action below.

The complex would cover 22 acres in all and include some 2,360 condominiums and 4,500 rental apartments.

"It's not an arena in a parking lot, like in the Meadowlands," Gehry explained. "What we are trying to do is create a skyline."

INSIDER NEWS BRIEFS

AN INDUSTRY VIEWPOINT

HREE YEARS AGO, AFTER the West Warwick, R.I., nightclub fire claimed the lives of 100 and injured about 200 more, Pollstar asked for commentary from tour management professionals.

With trials unfolding this year, we asked for further insight. Former Great White road manager Dan Biechele recently pleaded guilty to manslaughter charges and received four years in prison (with a minimum 16 months actual jail time). Upcoming are the trials of The Station co-owners, Michael and Jeffrey Derderian.

Culpability is subjective. One person who has defended Biechele is Jim Baron, columnist for The Pawtucket Times:

"He was the guy who pressed the button (or flipped the switch, whatever it is you do) that set off the pyrotechnics that ignited the foam on the ceiling and walls of the club. That was the extent of his culpability. He did not wrap the entire nightclub in extremely flammable polyurethane foam that flared up in fast-moving flame and choking smoke, emitting cyanide gas as it burned. He did not pack the room far beyond its capacity. He did not issue a fire inspection okey-dokey to a tiny woodframe building where the walls were covered with a substance sometimes called 'solid gasoline.' ...

"Biechele was a guy doing his job, as he had done it without incident hundreds of times before, in venues across the country, including, a few years earlier, at The Station itself. He didn't press the button from miles away, not knowing or caring what the result would be; he was in the building himself when he set off the sparks. He very easily could have been one of the people trapped inside, as Great White guitarist Ty Longley was."

Baron summarily explains how much went wrong that night, and in the months and years prior. But Pollstar asked concert industry insiders for their takes because they might view things differently than the newspapers, courts or public.

Hopefully, there will be no need to further examine the events of February, 20, 2003, unless it is in the context of what we can do in the future to secure our patrons and ourselves.

A little information about the respondents: Patrick Stansfield has toured Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond and The Rolling Stones. "Pyro" Pete Cappadocia is the pyrotechnician for The Rolling Stones and handled the explosive stunts on the first season of magician Criss Angel's television show. Karl Kuenning is a road-dog and moderator of Roadie.net. Ron Schreiner was tour manager for Great White band leader Jack Russell's solo tour. Stuart Ross is a tour director and tour accountant, and one of the founders of Lollapalooza.

Stuart Ross

I don't know Dan Biechele or anyone associated with Great White, so I have no dog in this fight.

Dan Biechele went to jail because he pushed the button, but he should have known better. You don't fire unlicensed pyro anywhere, especially in a club with a low ceiling. On the other hand, I don't believe it was his idea to use pyro on this show; it's likely that it was at the band's insistence. If my suspicions are correct, the band purchased the pyro charges, decided where in the set they wanted the explosion and where onstage they would stand in order to keep a safe distance. Regardless of how much you need a job, it's OK to say no to the artist's demands when they cross the line of safety or sanity.

The band, who directed him (in all probability) to load and set off these charges, should be culpable as much as, if not more so, than the tour manager. Biechele took the fall for decisions that were made by his employer. I don't think he used the "I was only following orders" defense, but that's exactly what seems to have happened.

The pyro supplier who sold the powder to these unlicensed buyers should also be held responsible. Whomever they purchased the supplies from sold them illegally. Pyro explosives are, I'm told, heavily regulated and only sold to licensed pyrotechnicians, none of whom were involved in designing this effect. If they couldn't easily buy the explosives, then this disaster wouldn't have happened.

The club owners, who put flammable foam on the stage walls, are also responsible. It's not just a pyro charge that can set off a flame. Club ceilings are crawling with high temperature lighting instruments, cables and connections, all of which have the ability to fray, arc and ignite. They saved a few thousand dollars by buying the cheap stuff and 100 people died.

Patrick Stansfield

The families' longing for justice is understandable. However, it is all too easy to lay the entire blame on the most obvious candidate available, Dan Biechele. It is true, however, that on production matters the buck stops at the tour manager's door.

He is the only person on the production side with the authority to stop the chain of events that may lead to unsafe conditions and, in this extreme case, tragic results. Artists certainly should prioritize safety to their crew in no uncertain terms. Some do, some do not. Certainly, artists – being an available deep pocket in the chain of liability – will give most of them, their managers and agents ample motivation to insist on safe shows.

However, the artist and the audience have the right to see the whole production as it was designed and paid for by both of those entities. The pressure to do a "full" show and the old "us versus them" outlaw rock 'n' roll mentality also may have been factors.

How many times have we seen fire aisles cleared and fire extinguishers placed for just as long as the fire inspectors are on hand? How many flame-proof certificates are out of date or simply stapled onto different material samples to pass a local inspection?

However, the spinning bottle also points squarely at the club's owners. If the building is poorly constructed or covered with flammable material, the stage is set for tragedy just as certainly as if they had bolted the fire exits against "pass-ins."

To say that anecdotes regarding municipal politics in Rhode Island support the "good ol' boy" theory of exoneration of local officials and the club's owners doesn't strain my credulity.

Justice is never perfectly meted, and four years is a long time if you're serving it. Guilt is lifelong and certainly will torment Mr. Biechele. The families may have wanted more time on his sentence – who can fault them? But the other parties involved seem to me to have gotten off with not even a reprimand. Where is the fairness there? Nobody wanted this to occur. Yet it did, and innocent people died in droves.

We must all take away the lesson that when the tough call needs to be made, the production team cannot rely on anyone other than themselves to "do the right thing."

Karl Kuenning

In my opinion, four years is a just sentence for Dan Biechele. The bottom line is that he was a professional that should have known that the pyro he set up was overshooting the room (15-foot gerb, 8-foot ceiling). When you are a professional (or have acquired employment based on the assertion that you are expert in the field of pyrotechnics) then your actions, or inactions, have consequences. For me, his greater sin was not having an adequate fire extinguisher at his side so he could have slopped this tragedy before it got started.

The band would be culpable if and only if the prosecutor could prove it willfully hired Dan Biechele having known he was not an expert in pyrotechnics.

Since Dan had a resume that included setting up and using pyro in his previous gig with WASP, I think that a reasonable person would assume he had the expertise to use pyrotechnics. Dan was the tour manager and that meant he was in charge of everything relating to equipment and logistics; that's why the band hired him. The artist can't be responsible for the details like testing pyro or making sure there are enough fire extinguishers.

Even if Jack Russell or the band had demanded Dan use pyro that night, it would be his responsibility to say "no" if it was unsafe. Those of us in the business know plenty of times when the crew has said "no" to the band in the name of safety.

We've all had our run-ins with overzealous fire marshals, but this tragedy is an example of why most of these officials take their jobs seriously. If any Rhode Island fire inspector can be found to be derelict in his duty, he should be fired and sanctioned. If any money changed hands for "looking the other way" then it would become a criminal matter, but I doubt that is the case.

Ron Schreiner

I was Jack Russell's tour manager in the fall of 2002 on Jack's solo For You CD tour. I think Dan got off way too easy. But make no bones about it, Dan's role was key in the events of that night, but he is not the sole cause of it.

As a tour manager, I can say yes, Dan should have known better. As for the fire codes and laws, they are there for a reason. They are there even moreso now. The TM works for the band, but a good TM isn't afraid to tell the record label, the band or anyone else no or yes when it is the right call to make.

What is the right call? That depends on many factors such as knowledge, experience, skills, laws, good judgment, etc. Fire me. Send me home. I don't care. But I'm not putting anyone's safety at risk. Period.

The club owners can or can't give permission all day long if they want to, but if it's against the law and against fire code, their word isn't worth much. Ignorance of the law is no excuse.

A defense witness at Biechele's trial said the owners were more responsible for the 100 deaths than the tour manager because they allegedly knew they had placed flammable materials on the walls as sound proofing. But this is part of the blame game tactic to avoid responsibility and accountability. What if someone had tossed a cigarette and the place started on fire? Would those companies be held liable?

Jack's not responsible and neither is the band. However, the alleged misconduct of certain official entities may warrant some looking into. Of course I don't have any proof, but an investigation by federal agencies would seem prudent. After all, who inspected the building and when? That's just for starters on some of the questions that need to be asked and answered truthfully.

"Pyro" Pete Cappadocia

I could take either side and argue the hell out of it.

I do flame tests – when they give me material and even though there's a flame certificate on it, I'll still do a test. I've lit backdrops on fire, bands' signs on fire.

Any pyro guy who says he hasn't lit anything on fire is a liar. It happens. It happens all the time.

Whether a fan threw a T-shirt onstage and you didn't see that it was halfway in front of a pyro device or whether somebody laid a backline or a towel over an amp and it was right next to a flame device, or if they open the load-in door and the wind blows the curtain the same time you're shooting pyro and the curtain goes in front of the device – it happens.

It's just that when you're a pro and you have a pyro crew you can put it out when it's still small and nobody even knows it happened.

But I didn't start off doing the Stones. I started off pretty much illegally, doing pyro for bands who couldn't afford to do it the right way. That could have been me 20 years ago. It could have been, I dunno, 80 to 90 percent of the pyro guys today.

I don't know what Dan's background is. I don't know where Dan got the product. In California, if there's an incident and they found the product, they'll trace that piece back to who bought it legally – and the last person who owned it legally is also responsible for it because he was the one who was responsible for either using it responsibly or destroying it.

My question was, whatever happened to that end of the legal system? Did they not care where he got it from? Care how he got it? That's one end of the trial I was actually looking forward to, seeing how they would deal with that. Obviously, they chose to just not deal with it.

It was easier to blame the guy they had than to see where he got it from and whoever gave it to him shouldn't have given it to him, and whoever gave it to him shouldn't have. It seemed that, "Hey, we got this guy, it's going to be his fault, let's go to trial now."

There's still kids out there and magicians out there buying a couple of flashpots. If anything got adversely affected (by this tragedy), I hope that's what got adversely affected.

If I was to detach myself, he got off pretty light for the number of laws that were broken, for the number of things that he did. He broke interstate commerce shipping, he broke DOT trucking laws, he broke local and federal transportation laws, he broke local laws for the usage, federal laws for the usage. All that got swept aside for the 100 counts of involuntary manslaughter.

If they went after every independent violation – storage, usage, transportation – he might have gotten a longer sentence.

Is he a scapegoat? Yes. You had asked me, "Should he as a road manager know it takes more than permission of the venue to bring pyrotechnics into a club?" As a road manager, his knowledge of pyrotechnics should be limited. The question should have been, "As a pyrotechnician, should he have known?"

That's the other thing. If he was a pyrotechnician, he should have known. When a band hires me, I don't expect the road manager, the production manager or anybody to be as up on all the laws as I am or my company is.

He should have known. Him pressing the button, it was his responsibility.

Anybody who's been in the business for any amount of time knows they can't just ask the club owner for permission. It's like asking, "Can you serve me a bunch of drinks and can I drive home drunk?" That was all finger pointing and Band Aids.

The blame should have been a little more spread out. Everybody got to play dumb and point at the guy who pressed the button. Did he get off light? Yes and no. If you lost a loved one, he got off very light, but no one wants to spend four years in prison.

If it was Dan's Pyro Company and they hired him, he would be 100 percent at fault, but it wasn't like that. They said, "Hey, we want some pyro" and it was all done under the table. And you've seen foam at every recording studio on the planet, so when you see it, you assume it's the right stuff. *****

AN ARTIST RENDERING displays the Frank Gehry architectural design proposed for a $435 million New Jersey Nets arena, already nicknamed "Miss Brooklyn," to be built above the Atlantic rail yards in New York.

New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg and Gov. George Pataki agreed March 3rd to authorize $100 million toward the project, which is expected to create 12,000 construction jobs and 8,500 permanent jobs.

Bruce Ratner, president and CEO of Forest City Ratner Cos., owns the Nets and wants to move the team from its current home at the Continental Airlines Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., to Brooklyn for the 2007-08 season.

The arena has come under fire by neighborhood preservation groups – as well as celebrity critics including actors Heath Ledger and Steve Buscemi – who say the project is simply too huge for low-rise Brooklyn.

It must pass environmental review and discussion at public hearings before the city will give Ratner the green light – and the approval process is believed to be some time off yet.

Premium Seating In Boston

BOSTON'S TD BANKNORTH Garden is planning to revamp its high-end "premium" seating this summer to target three groups that are often overlooked: young professionals, small businesses, and life sciences and technology companies.

The 19,600-seat home to the city's Bruins and Celtics will install a sports bar on one end, and a private club area called the "Boardroom" in the other that allows members to choose which games to attend.

Fans who buy tickets to the sports bar will also get a membership to the Garden's "Premium Club," which comes with perks such as access to concert ducats, according to The Boston Globe.

Membership to the Boardroom is reportedly limited to 75. But members will be guaranteed tickets to all shows and games they choose. They will also receive golfing privileges at two area country clubs. Two memberships will cost $15,000.

Sports bar memberships, targeted at young professionals, will start at $2,000 – roughly one-seventh the cost of a regular premium seat, the paper said. The starter package includes 10 games instead of a full season ticket, but there is an option to purchase more games.

The overhaul of premium seating reportedly comes as other sports teams around the area are also targeting the wealthy. Garden execs call the new areas "lifestyle choices" because they stress flexibility.

While large firms can enjoy premium seats for years at a time that grant admission to every event, those options might not be practical for smaller companies. A luxury suite at TD Banknorth Garden goes for as much as $420,000 a year, according to the Globe.

"It's saying, 'Come when you want to come, and be a part of the Premium Club," the arena's John Wentzell told the Globe.

There are reportedly plans to sell naming rights to both the new areas.

UMG Agrees To Record Settlement

UNIVERSAL MUSIC GROUP, the world's largest record company, on May 11th became the third to settle "payola" allegations leveled by New York Attorney General Eliot Spitzer against record companies and radio chains, and in so doing set a new record-high payment of $12 million.

Sony's music arm has already agreed to pay $10 million to settle with Spitzer, and Warner Music agreed to a $5 million settlement.

Spitzer alleged that UMG provided vacations, electronics and other bribes to increase radio play for its artists including Nick Lachey, Ashlee Simpson, Brian McKnight, Big Tymers, and Lindsay Lohan.

UMG agreed to hand the cash over to charity, along with $100,000 to cover investigation costs, and to adopt particular reforms, Spitzer said. The $12 million payment will be distributed through Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors to nonprofit groups in New York to fund music education and appreciation programs.

Without admitting guilt, UMG acknowledged "various employees and independent promoters acting on behalf of the company" engaged in illegal practices, Spitzer said.

"UMG has illegally provided radio stations with financial benefits to obtain airplay and boost the chart position of its songs," Spitzer said in papers filed in state Supreme Court along with the settlement.

"[The company] has obtained airplay for its songs through such deceptive and illegal practices as bribing radio station employees, on occasion, to play UMG songs, providing a stream of financial benefits to radio stations, to assist with stations' overhead costs or to provide promotional support, on condition that UMG records receive airplay," the AG said. Universal was also accused of "engaging in fraudulent call-in campaigns to increase airplay."

Spitzer laid out his case against UMG in the filing. In January 2003, a WFLY-FM program director was provided use of a Miami hotel room for playing "Shoulda, Coulda, Woulda" by Brian McKnight and putting it on the New York station's playlist, he alleged.

The hotel room was listed as a "contest prize" for accounting purposes. Spitzer included internal UMG e-mails in the filing, including one that shows a station program director asking the company to provide him with a flight to Madrid to see U2 perform last year.

The request required assigning the better seats to the program director and less expensive seats to contest winners, according to the court filing.

"Consumers have a right not to be misled about the way in which the music they hear on the radio is selected," Spitzer said. "Pay-forplay makes a mockery of claims that only the 'best' or 'most popular' music is broadcast."

Spitzer claimed UMG used interns, employees and "outside vendors" to pose as listeners requesting UMG songs. In July 2004, UMG started pushing "Rain on Me" by Ashanti through its Island Def Jam label, paying $3,500 for six weeks. IDJ also allegedly hired another group to drum up airplay for Ludacris" "Stand Up" at several radio stations.

Spitzer launched his payola investigation in 2004, alleging wrongdoing by music and radio companies. Earlier this year, he sued Entercom Communications, accusing its execs of running scams to trade cash for airplay of songs. Entercom has denied the allegations. The Federal Communications Commission is also investigating "pay-for-play" practices among major radio companies.

Vegas' Hard Rock Sold

OTEL operator Morgans Hotel Group has agreed to buy the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas for $770 million in cash.

The sale of the 647-room hotel and 30,000-square-foot casino on 41 acres, near the Strip and not far from the city's airport, will net Hard Rock founder and chairman Peter Morton more than $731 million, he said May 11th.

"It was just time to take the chips off the table," Morton said. "I'm looking to do some different things in my life. That was it."

The Hard Rock sale must be approved by Nevada gaming authorities, The Wall Street Journal reported. Morgans Chief Executive Ed Scheetz reportedly said the hotel operator would team up with an established company in Las Vegas to run the gambling operations.

Morton said he will no longer be affiliated with the property once the sale is complete, according to the WSJ. The sale of the Vegas property doesn't affect the Hard Rock Café chain.

Morton co-founded the Hard Rock brand in 1971. In 1996, he sold his chain of Hard Rock Cafés to London-based Rank Group for $410 million. He opened the hotel-casino in 1995.

Morgans Hotel Group, an owner and manager of luxury boutique hotels, runs Hudsons, Morgans and Royalton hotels in New York and the Delano in Miami, among other properties.

ALICE COOPER SHOWS OFF his key to the city of Alice, N.D., population 60, during a May 14th ceremony a day before Cooper's concert at the Fargo Civic Center. About 1,000 people cheered as the shock rocker's limo pulled into town. The key is said to open the town's fire station, feed store and bar.

Richard Gomez of Green Diamond Entertainment was arrested and charged May 4th on suspicion of grand theft and violation of parole on forgery charges after would-be concertgoers called city officials about the event.

At least 19 people purchased VIP tickets to the "Festival of Legends" concert scheduled to be held at the Epicenter Sports and Entertainment Complex in Rancho Cucamonga, Calif., June 10th.

Gomez applied for a business license but allegedly didn't complete the application process, according to the San Bernardino County Sun. He was told by city officials he couldn't sell any tickets until he completed the required paperwork.

The application was denied in late April when officials found Gomez had sold VIP tickets to the event in March, the paper said.

In addition to the license problem, Gomez reportedly claimed he could attract 20,000 people to the Epicenter, home to the Rancho Cucamonga Quakes minor league baseball team. The city limits concerts at the venue to 5,000 people.

"Gomez just seemed to be on his own agenda at that point and insisted that he could make 20,000 people in that venue work," Detective Mike Landavazo told the paper.

The "Festival of Legends" concert is advertised on Green Diamond's Web site as featuring "over 50 legendary acts." Sha Na Na, The Surfaris, The Tokens, and Brenton Wood are just a few of the acts listed on the bill. Landavazo said the acts investigators talked to weren't scheduled to perform there.

The Surfaris' founder and guitarist Bob Berryhill told the Sun he was leery of doing business with the promoter because of a previous experience with him regarding a Reno, Nev., gig.

"He made several promises; I don't know what the deal is with him," Berryhill told the paper. "Why would a guy go to all the trouble to get all the permits and try to put something on and never consummate any deals with people?"

Beach Boys Collector Sues

COLLECTOR HAS COUNTERsued The Beach Boys in a fight over who owns band memorabilia, including original sheet music for hit songs and contracts.

Florida resident Roy Sciacca claims he purchased boxes of the band's memorabilia at multiple California liquidation sales in the 1980s. The Beach Boys' tour manager was present during the sales and approved everything that was sold, Sciacca's lawsuit said.

But Sciacca said the band wrongly stopped the sale of the memorabilia last year. He's seeking damages of $20 million or the right to sell it, according to the federal suit against the band's corporate entity, Brother Records Inc.

In January, BRI sued Sciacca and the owner of a North Hollywood warehouse where the memorabilia was stored. The California lawsuit claims the photos, recordings and other band memorabilia were stolen from the warehouse.

Veterans Arena Upgrade

ACKSONVILLE, FLA., ENGINEERS and SMG officials are putting their heads together so patrons of the city's Veterans Memorial Arena won't find water dripping on theirs.

Inspectors have identified condensation issues in the SMGoperated building, built in 2003, and recommended some fine-tuning of the air conditioning system.

SMG's Bob Downey, GM of the 15,000-capacity facility, said officials requested an inspection of areas in the arena where the chilled water cooling system could create condensation.

but something we wanted to address," Downey told Pollstar.

"Their determination was that some additional insulation in the ducts that feed the cool air into the building and some added insulation in the upper building [is needed].

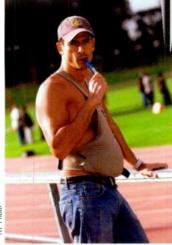

The GM said the facility's chilled water cooling method, supplied through an external plant, requires burning gas to heat the air and remove the humidity that can cause condensation to form. The new insulation will make that process more efficient and help keep costs down.

The city inspector's report also notes that there is no insulation in the exterior walls, and water is seeping into the walls of the elevator shafts, according to the area's First Coast News. The report also claimed that doors left open during load-ins help create condensation problems inside when the air conditioning is Θ n.

The city is currently accepting bids for the job, which is estimated to cost up to $100,000.

"We're really just tapping into money left over from the [arena] project in getting the city to make these adjustments," Downey said. "We've lived with it for two years and we haven't had an incident of anybody getting dripped on."

IF THIS GUT was wearing a shirt, it would be pretty tough to tell his gut was really 80 ounces of beer. The Beerbelly could cause headaches for facility managers as well as suds-swilling concert fans if it catches on.

The New Beer Belly

NEVADA-BASED COMPANY has developed a new way to smuggle beer into concerts and sporting events: the Beerbelly, a removable "bladder" that can be concealed underneath clothing.

Considering the price of beer at many venues, it's not too difficult to imagine the enterprising concert goer finding such an alternative to the beer line very attractive – and one more thing facility managers and security crews need to look out for.

The contraption, which can be ordered online for $34.95, straps to the midsection with a sling, giving the appearance of a massive gut.

But it's really a polyurethane bladder that can be filled with a beverage of one's choice. The removable spare tire holds 80 ounces (about a six-pack) of liquid that can be consumed through a hose, similar to that of a hydration backpack – or a beer bong.

Developers Michael Chiapperini and Paul Goode, of Reno-based Under Development Inc., obtained a design patent for the contraption in 2000, and trademarked the name "Beerbelly."

They set aside plans to market the product after September 11, 2001, because of tighter security measures at public events, according to the Boston Herald.

"How are you going to sneak beer into a stadium after 9/11?" Chiapperini told the paper.

Apparently, the Beerbelly feels like a legitimate gut. But police reportedly say it could violate open container laws.

Business Of Comedy Central

URING THE PAST FOUR YEARS, Viacom-owned Comedy Central has transcended beyond cable TV, launching its brand into other lucrative ventures including a record label and even tours.

In 2002, the channel branched into tour management. It has run tours for comics such as Dave Chappelle, Wanda Sykes, Dave Attell and Drew Carey.

In some cases, the tours have fed into other Comedy Central operations, as was the case with Attell, The Wall Street Journal said. A video production of the comedian's tour became a special that aired on the channel and was later released on DVD.

Comedy Central has also built a label that has reportedly sold more than 2 million CDs. Since 2002, Comedy Central Records has gradually increased the number of releases to about 10 a year. Apparently, the low number limits risk.

"We make money on 80 percent to 90 percent of our releases," Jack Vaughn, head of Comedy Central's label, told the WSJ.

Comedian Carlos Mencia initially resisted Comedy Central's offer to release a comedy album of his work on the channel's record label, figuring he could make more money on his own. Mencia has since changed his mind, now saying he eventually expects to sign with the company for an album. He'll also be starting a tour backed by the channel, according to the paper.

The company is also exploring the growing world of digital downloading.

"A guy can tell a joke Sunday night at the comedy club," Comedy Central President Doug Herzog told the paper, "and we can deliver it to our audience in six different ways the next day." Excerpts from Comedy Central shows – such as short segments from "The Daily Show With Jon Stewart" – are among the most downloaded items on iTunes and the channel's own Web site, WSJ reported.

This year, Comedy Central expects to take in about $150 million in ancillary revenue, which would top what it takes in from cable and satellite operators in subscribers fees, people familiar with the network's operations reportedly said.

Nearby, University of Minnesota fans were holding a rally in support of the new outdoor university venue. The state's House and Senate have passed bills calling for new stadiums for the school, the Twins and the Vikings.

$201.25 tickets, the paper said, and 64 premium tickets have been sold.

The result is a 4 percent increase in attendance this season, but a 12 percent increase in box office receipts. The demographic might have shifted, too: Buyers of premium tix are now people who want great seats at the last minute, people with expense accounts, people who are not regular theatregoers looking for a special occasion and folks who just want to buy expensive ducats for the fun of it, industry insiders told the Times.

Fall Out Mom

ANGRY MOTHER SENT AN e-mail to Fall Out Boy's label, Island Def Jam, complaining about foul language and "personal political testimony" onstage during the band's May 2nd show at Charlotte, N.C.'s Cricket Arena.

Accompanied by her daughters at the show, the mad mother was outraged by bassist Paul Wentz's words in particular.

"Charlotte is not the demoralized city that liberal San Francisco and other cities across the North and West are. ... This was a concert, not some liberal homosexual rally," she said, promising to contact national media and other venues where FOB is touring.

Wentz posted the letter and fired back with a response of his own on falloutboyrock.com, saying, "... it is not a liberal homosexual rally but at the same time it will never be a Ku Klux Klan rally." He said he encourages young FOB fans to " become good people and change the world."

Pros On The Move

Facility vet Michael Enoch has been named GM of the Coors Amphitheatre in Chula Vista, Calif., by House of Blues Entertainment. He takes over for David Swift, who was promoted by the company to VP of business development for House of Blues Concerts. Swift had been serving simultaneously as VP of the San Diego region for HoB Concerts and will continue to oversee the San Diego region. With the promotion, Swift will also oversee casino accounts, rentals and other business opportunities on a nationwide basis.

Nebraska State Fair Executive Director Rick Bjorklund announced his resignation last week and is taking a similar position with the Tulsa State Fair in Oklahoma, effective June Ist. The Tulsa fair is scheduled to run September 28th through October 8th. Bjorklund's assistant at the Nebraska State Fair, Joe McDermott, will handle his former duties on an interim basis until a replacement is found. It is uncertain if the succeeding executive director will be hired before the next state fair takes place August 25th through September 4th.

Skyline Music's Northeast agent Patrick May will move to the company's newly renovated office in Portland, Maine, effective May 22nd, joining Skyline's VP of development Mark Lourie. The company's Burlington, Vt., office will shutter. "We're consolidating our offices," May told Pollstar. "It just increases the synergy on all levels." He is responsible for acts including Toubab Krewe, Lez Zeppelin, and Vorcza. As of May 22nd, May can be reached at 207-878-2330.

Live Nation Sr. VP of Southeast Facilities Wilson Rogers told Pollstar he is acting as interim GM of the Alltel Pavilion in Raleigh, N.C. Previous GM Bob Klaus and LN have gone separate ways, according to Rogers. A search for a new GM is under way.

One Smokin' Ramada Inn

S LEEPING TRAVELERS WERE rousted from bed May 12th when smoke from an '80s hairband tribute show in a Kearney, Neb., Ramada Inn's bar circulated through the 209-room motel.

The Omaha-based band 3-D was on stage at Maxwell's Live Lounge when police said one of the members used a torch to light alcohol above the dance floor. According to the Kearney Hub, singer Alan King was known to regularly "blow a fireball" near the end of shows.

The small fire reportedly torched some ceiling tiles but was quickly put out by a bar manager with a fire extinguisher. However, smoke still made its way into a metal air duct above the stage and then circulated through the motel.

As many as 44 firefighters and law enforcement officers responded to the 12:22 a.m. call, according to the Hub.

When the source of the smoke in the main building, which includes a large dome that covers a swimming pool and putting green, couldn't be quickly identified, the entire motel was evacuated.

Maxwell's wasn't immediately identified as the source of the fire because it was apparently the only room that wasn't full of smoke.

No one was injured during the mishap, though the Ramada Inn sustained an estimated $2,000 in damage.

While the show had all the elements of a Spinal Tap-ish parody, it turns out the motel apparently did not have a policy regarding indoor pyrotechnics that covered fire-breathing cover band frontmen.

"No other band that performs here does anything like that, and if I had known this band did it, I would have put a stop to it before they performed," Ramada Inn manager Ben Buchanan said.

Kearney Fire Department administrator Ken Tracy also said he doesn't think the city has any ordinances restricting the use of pyro indoors, either.

Buchanan told the Hub that there is one now, at least at the Kearney Ramada Inn.

"No fire, no fireworks or anything that could lead to a fire will be allowed," he said. "The safety of our customers, as well as the entertainers we hire, comes first."

King was reportedly asked by Buchanan not to comment on the incident.

Hear It. Click It. Sue It.

▶ Imagine a gadget that allows you to record songs off of the radio, yet will not allow you to transfer those songs to other devices or burn the tunes to CD. Imagine the same gadget having the capability to record the entire song even though you hit the record button halfway through the tune. Then imagine the same gadget being able to sync itself with Napster so that you can purchase any recorded song that strikes your fancy.

Now, imagine the RIAA launching one of its patemted, high-profile copyright infringement lawsuits.

The gadget is called the Inno, and is manufactured by Pioneer for XM Satellite Radio. The whole idea behind the Inno is to record songs from the subscription radio service for later listening, much like VCRs and DVRs record TV programs for later viewing.

But we live in a digital world, and the Inno is hardly the same as rolling a tape on your favorite terrestrial radio station. Slightly larger than an iPod and costing about $400, the Inno can parse each saved song, thus allowing you to pick and choose which songs you want to hear, as well as the order in which the songs are played. What's more, the Inno can record up to 50 hours of XM programming.

XM's slogan for the Inno? Hear it. Click it. Save it.

The unofficial slogan for the recording industry's reaction to the Inno? Massive copyright infringement.

Filed in New York on May 16th, the lawsuit seeks $150,000 in damages from XM for every song copied by the company's subscribers using the Inno.

To be sure, the Inno isn't the first device for recording music from satellite radio services. XM competitor Sirius markets a radio, the S50, which pretty much does what the Inno does. But the difference between the S50 and Inno is that Sirius eventually capitulated to recording industry pressure and agreed to pay record labels an undisclosed amount for every S50 sold, according to The Wall Street Journal.

And that seems to be the brouhaha between XM and the record labels, with XM claiming the Inno is perfectly legal as it is, and the RIAA slamming the device as one of the major signs of an impending copyright apocalypse. That is, unless XM stands down and agrees to a licensing agreement similar to what online services such as Napster and iTunes operate under. Then everything will be hunky-dory.

Is the Inno similar to those online services? Unlike Napster, iTunes or Rhapsody, songs cannot be transferred from the Inno to other devices. Once the Inno records a song, it stays there until it's deleted to make room for more songs. In comparison, songs purchased from online music services can be copied to a limited number of computers as well as burned onto CDs. Clearly, if your goal is to inflict massive copyright infringement, you could pick a better device than the Inno.

"These are legal devices that allow consumers to listen to and record radio just as the law has allowed for decades," XM said. "The music labels are trying to stifle innovation, limit consumer choice and roll back consumers' rights to record content for their personal use."

Meanwhile, RIAA logic doesn't see much of a difference between XM and online music services.

"Yahoo!, Rhapsody, iTunes and Napster all have licenses," RIAA's chief exec, Mitch Bainwol, said. "There's no reason XM shouldn't as well."

While the RIAA put its best litigation face forward in the hours following the announcement of the suit, various consumer and tech groups issued their own statements regarding the latest legal action.

"The lawsuit announced yesterday is a brazen effort by the labels to strong-arm more money from a successful technology industry startup," said Michael Petricone, VP of the Government Affairs for the Consumer Electronics Association. "XM Radio already is the largest single payer of digital music broadcast royalties. More, the record labels receive royalties on every XM recording device sold as provided by Congress under the Audio Home Recording Act."

Zen And The Art Of Patent Maintenance

▶ You may not be aware of it, but there are plenty of devices on the market that do everything that iPods do — except play songs purchased from iTunes. But that's due to Apple's refusal to license its proprietary digital rights management system.

One of the companies making devices to compete with the iPod is Creative Technology. Recently, the Singapore-based Creative filed Continued On Page 39 suit against Apple, claiming the iPod infringes upon one of Creative's patents.

Specifically, Creative is charging that Apple's iPod infringes upon the company's "Zen patent," named after Creative's line of Zen media players.

Creative's complaint isn't so much about technological secrets hidden deep inside its players. Instead, it's about what appears on the display screen. Specifically the navigation system used to organize and select songs.

Creative was granted a patent for its navigation system in 2005. However, the company had applied for the patent in 2001 and had demonstrated its system as early as 2000.

The complaint claims that by 2001, both companies were conducting meetings in an effort to work together, and that Apple asked that it could license Creative's technology. The complaint also claims Apple offered to invest in a possible spin-off company resulting from Creative's music player business. However, Creative rejected both proposals.

Then, before the year was over, Apple launched the iPod and proceeded to conquer the digital music world.

Along with filing suit in federal court, Creative also filed a complaint against Apple with the U.S. International Trade Commission requesting that the Commission launch an investigation of whether Apple had violated a section of the Tariff Act of 1930.

However, Creative's complaint is contingent on the company winning its patent lawsuit against Apple. It is calling on the Commission to determine if Apple had violated Section 337 through its importation of iPods and iPod Nanos that allegedly infringe upon the Zen patent.

Creative is asking the Commission for both an exclusion order and a cease-and-desist order against Apple that would prohibit the company from selling iPods.

Considering that Apple brought its iPod to market in 2001, you just have to wonder why Creative waited so long to launch both the patent lawsuit and the trade complaint against the company. Well, maybe not.

There once was a time when both companies were pretty much on the same footing when it came to personal players. Kind of like two horses standing next to each other at the starting gate. Now one of them, through marketing and product positioning, has more than 72 percent of the digital player market while the other's market share is in single digits.

Guess it's not too difficult to figure out why Creative is suing Apple after all.

Feelin' The URGE

There's a new hombre in town. A new online music service packing both a big corporate label and an entertainment brand name known throughout the world. Its purpose is to unseat iTunes as king of the music download hill.

It's called URGE. And it's brought to you by MTV Networks and Microsoft.

Touting "seamless" integration between the service and Microsoft's Media Player II platform, URGE promises to build upon "MTV Networks' renowned music heritage, offering rich handcrafted programming, first-rate editorial and innovative music discovery features" such as Informer music blogs written by "leading voices in music," custom-made playlists, feeds that update playlists, auto mixes, radio and "channel hubs" that draw content from MTV, VHI and CMT.

Yeah, okay. But what about the actual music?

So far, URGE resembles Napster and RealNetworks by offering both subscription and a la carte options. The URGE "All Access To Go" option costs $14.95 per month ($149 per year), and allows you to play or download 2 million songs and tap into 130 commercial-free radio stations. Like other subscription services. you can transfer those 2 million songs to compatible portable music players, but canceling the subscription will bring an end to all that music.

World Radio History

The Concert Hotwire . MAY 29, 2006

URGE All Access costs less than URGE All Access To Go. Priced at $9.95 per month ($99 per year), URGE All Access gives you just about everything URGE All Access To Go offers with the exception of the "To Go" part. You can still listen to or download 2 million songs. However, the songs stay on your computer and cannot be transferred to a portable device.

Then there's URGE By The Track, which pretty much functions as the name implies - 99 cents per song.

Like iTunes and Napster, you own the tracks you purchase and you can transfer them to portable devices or burn to CDs. You also get access to 20 free radio stations and various bells and whistles offered by the other two options such as editorial features, profiles, interviews and blogs. No monthly or yearly subscription plan necessary.

Right now, URGE is in beta and you can sign up for a 14-day free trial.

MTV backing certainly can't hurt. The music channel is one of the best-known entertainment brands throughout the world. What's more uncertain is whether the Microsoft connection will be enough to lead the charge up iTunes Hill.

Sure, Bill Gates and Company bring plenty of technological know-how to the URGE table, and the company's Media Player is included in every copy of XP. However, Microsoft isn't exactly the corporation everybody loves. But if someone could topple Apple from its perch atop the download kingdom, you'd be hard pressed to find two companies more capable than Microsoft and MTV Networks.

RACONTEURS RANT ON

▶ Indie rock all-stars The Raconteurs have announced their first tour of North America.

The group, featuring Detroit singer/ songwriter extraordinaires lack White and Brendan Benson along with Jack Lawrence and Patrick Keeler of The Greenhornes, has just released its debut album, Broken Boy Soldiers, and will play shows this summer across the U.S. and Canada.

The tour kicks off July 16th at Denver's Fillmore Auditorium.

All the members remain committed to their separate careers but they insist The Raconteurs is a real band and not a side project. And they think they can convince skeptics by touring.

"The only way to defeat that [perception is to play live in front of everyone," White said.

"I think we're seeing that wherever we go playing live, we're getting a fair chance. The more you keep pushing and keep going with it, the less and less people think side project, because side project usually means some flippant thing - you're not even paying too much attention to it."

KORN'S UNIQUE SYNERGY

▶ This year's Family Values Tour featuring Korn and Deftones, Stone Sour, and Flyleaf - is putting the emphasis on the "value" aspect of the trek.

Through Korn's partnership with tour producer Live Nation, lawn tickets for the tour are being offered for $9.99 with value priced seating available at every outdoor amphitheatre stop on the summer trek.

'Ten great bands for $9.99, plus reasonable pavilion seats, that's the kind of thing we were shooting for when we did our new deals," Korn's Jonathan Davis said.

This year's 30-city trek through North America will launch July 27th in Virginia Beach, Va., and will feature Korn, Deftones, Stone Sour, Flyleaf, and Dir en grey on the main stage.

Second-stage acts will be announced in the coming weeks.

Along with the lower ticket price announcement, the mainstage acts did special preview appearances in various cities around the country in advance of the first ticket on-sale date May 20th.

The fan-friendly promotions are part of Korn's new approach to business. The band has forged some unique alliances in the past several months, basically offering investments in its future to their record company, EMI, and Live Nation.

Korn signed a two-record deal with EMI for $25 million last year; in return, the record company got a reported 30 percent share of the band's overall profits for the duration of the contract.

Live Nation bought into the Korn business in January in hopes of a profitable return at the end of the deal, which is to last as long as EMI's - two records.

"There's basically a pot and all the money goes into the pot. Then profits are distributed, like investing in a restaurant," entertainment attorney and deal architect Gary Stiffelman told Pollstar when the deal was announced.

While Live Nation has a vested interest in solidly promoting its Korn dates, the deal structure also gives it revenue no matter if the show is in a Live Nation venue or a competitor's facility.

"The reason this makes sense is that the alliance, all three companies, believe the total will be bigger," Stiffelman said.

CHRIS BROWN'S JOURNEY

▶ Just weeks after wrapping his firstever headlining tour, Chris Brown has announced plans for more than two months of North American concerts.

The shows will take place at amphitheatres and arenas, a significant step up from the theatres Brown hit on his spring trek.

Prior to the amphitheatre outing, Brown will play a series of June radio festivals, including the WQHT Summer Jam at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., and the B-96 Summer Bash at Chicago's Bridgeview Stadium.

HOT STAR

hey'll be playing for an hour and 15 minutes this time. It's the longest set in their 12-year history by a good half hour. They'll be on their longest tour ever: almost a whole

L-R: Aslag Guttormsgaard, Kristapher Hugh Martin Schau & Egil Hegerberg month from June 6th to June 25th, with one day off for every two shows.

This is not a sweetheart deal. Hurra Torpedo needs downtime to heal its muscles.

Onstage, stoves are destroyed, refrigerators tipped and deep freezers slammed. It's a shtick that has made the band a top draw in Norway and an Internet sensation in North America. The three band members, Aslag Guttormsgaard, Kristopher Hugh Martin Schau and Egil Hegerberg, are cut-ups, and a series of videos of their first visit to the U.S., which can be viewed at thecrushingblow.tv, has turned them into the online Spinal Tap.

Hurra Torpedo came to the U.S. for the first time last year with the help of the worst booking agent ever, Gabe Frazzelblatt. The first gig on American soil was a kids birthday party, quickly followed by a show at a Texan steakhouse. At one point, Hegerberg had to yell at their manager while in a Western ghost town, picking up a handful of dirt and asking, "Is this the road to success? No!"

Internet afficionados followed the tour as the videos were posted. The tour got better, culminating with a triumphant night at The Roxy in Los Angeles. That got some heads a'scratchin' because somebody booked the show and it wasn't a cartoonish fictional character like Frazzelblatt. In fact, Pollstar communicated with Monterey International's Kevin Daly and Jerry Lima wondering just that: did Hurra Torpedo have U.S. representation in the real world?

The magazine was already on the case and had talked to Roxy talent buyer Nikki Sweet, who sent us in the direction of the Ford Motor Company. Turns out, the Hurra Torpedo "tour" was part of a marketing campaign for the Ford Fusion. The band was real, though, and real manager Mads Martinsen – who is not yelled at – was working behind the scenes in Norway.

Now, Hurra Torpedo is back for its first authentic tour of the U.S., booked by Daly and Lima. The strategy is to take the band to right-sized rooms, ones that will easily sell out, including cities with colleges, Internet hipsters and, in one instance, a significant Norwegian community.

The tour kicks off in Spinal Tap's least-favorite city, Boston – not a big college town. "I think we picked 100 percent right-sized venues," Lima told Pollstar. "We chose the venues that we chose because the promoters on them are really great. It goes hand in hand with getting the right rooms and having them be in the right place at the right time."

The deep freezer usually makes it through the tour, according to Hegerberg, who is the one person in the band to play an earthly instrument (guitar). But the stoves are destroyed by the end of every show.

"It's like a marathon," Hegerberg said of the extended set. "After a while, you build up the muscles."

Hurra Torpedo is a supergroup of sorts, formed by "a small bunch of people who play in a huge amount of bands," Hegerberg told Pollstar. The band became an online meme when someone posted a video of them playing Bonnie Tyler's "Total Eclipse of the Heart" on a Norwegian variety show circa 1995.

"We just played a big festival in France," Martinsen told Pollstar. "The Frenchmen were laughing their asses off and having a good time. They played on the mainstage for about 5,000 people."

Martinsen, who is also a booking agent, had to turn down several major European festivals in order to bring Hurra Torpedo back to the States. Such is the price of breaking a new market. Likewise, the percussive Schau is a television star who will need to juggle the tour and Norwegian festivals this summer with his filming schedule in the fall.

The band had about three big-time agencies to choose from for this tour, according to Martinsen. All were good but Martinsen went with Monterey International because he liked their ideas and because the company was one of the first to contact him.

"Luckily, we didn't have to fly over," Lima said. "I called Mads and had been all over the thecrushingblow.tv and had seen all the videos a huge amount of times. I think I knew the lines better than he did. ... I got into absolutely everything on every one of the videos on the Web site and he saw that I got it. I think we just connected on it." When asked why

Monterey was chosen, Hegerberg didn't bullshit.

"It mainly went through Mads," he said. "We had our say but it really didn't matter much to us, actually. We were like, 'Whatever. It sounds good.' ... I just went along with what Mads thought. We're very much pleased with the results, of course."

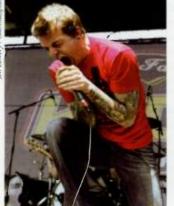

The band isn't changing anything for this tour except for adding tunes. The famed costumes – classic Adidas-style jogging outfits with low-hanging pants – will be in full regalia. A reunion with The Roxy takes place June 24th.

There is, by the way, talk of bigger things for Hurra Torpedo – much bigger things – but Pollstar isn't talking.

It's like a marathon.

After a while, you build

UNITED KINGDOM

Major Daily Hits At Stones Show Backers

THE COMPANY RESPONSIBLE FOR overseeing the smooth running of the Rolling Stones' July 5 show in Zagreb has been accused of corruption by the Croatia's biggest-selling newspaper.

Two mid-May reports in the daily Vecernji List say Koncertna Direkcija Zagreb (KDZ) got public money to pay wages for non-existent employees, showed cash payments to artists that never performed, and put in bogus claims for traveling expenses. KDZ runs mainly classical events in the Croatian capital of Zagreb.

KDZ is funded by city of Zagreb authorities and the Ministry of Culture. It has guaranteed a reported $2 million to underwrite the costs of the Stones show. Any losses would have to be covered by the public purse.

Last week, it faced public embarrassment when Stones European tour producer John Giddings – from London's Solo agency – dropped local promoter Marijan Crnaric following the adverse publicity that had resulted from his involvement.

According to KDZ chief Saša Britvic, Crnaric, who is accused of keeping fans' ticket money when shows are canceled – was only on board because the band's management requested it. Giddings denied that claim, and said he told Wolfgang Klinger to get rid of him.

Klinger is head of the Viennabased Rock & More and is the show's main promoter. He would have been responsible for bringing in Crnaric.

Sandra Veljkovic, the Vecernji List journalist who broke the most recent stories, told Pollstar she discovered the alleged frauds after getting sight of the state audit report on KDZ for 2004.

"For eight months, [KDZ] received money for two employees more than they had. They even claimed money for an employee who had left the company in 2003," she explained.

"They paid artists fees in cash – which is pure and simple money laundering – that amount to more than 2 million kunas (about US $352,750).

"There are a number of payments for which there are no explanations. For example, it's not known what one item for 150,000 kunas (US$26,500) for the organization of Zagreb Baroque Festival was actually spent on.

⁴There are also a number of unspecified artist fees, including a deal with one unnamed artist for 40,000 kunas (US$7,000), without any mention of what that unnamed artist was paid for."

It seems some of the acts mentioned in the report didn't even appear in Croatia.

The 2004 state audit for KDZ was carried out between December 5, 2005, and March 14.

The company would have claimed the money in question from the city of Zagreb's cultural department.

Veljkovic said she believes a copy of the audit would have landed on Britvic's desk within the last two or three weeks.

"Maybe the amounts are not spectacular by Western European standards but it is bigger money in Croatia. It's also public money and taxpayers are outraged," she said.

She said she hasn't been able to get any explanation for the apparent discrepancies from Britvic, Zagreb cultural chief Duško Ljuština or city mayor Milan Bandic.

"I did get through to them but they're not prepared to make any comment at the moment," she explained.

High Court Leaves Barrett Wailing

THE FORMER BASS GUITARIST WITH The Wailers has been left waiting in vain for £60 million in unpaid royalties he says he's owed by Bob Marley's estate and Island Records.

London High Court judge Mr Justice Lewison dismissed Aston Barrett's claim, saying Barrett had "the greatest difficulty" in answering questions about business dealings and that his testimony was not reliable.

Barrett's case against Marley's family and Universal-Island was based on a contract signed in 1974.

He also claimed Marley promised the members of the band equal shares of royalties from hit albums including Babylon By Bus, Natty Dread and Rastaman Vibration.

Justice Lewison said an agreement in 1994, in which Barrett accepted a share of a £1 million settlement from the Marley estate, compromised his current claim.

That settlement had followed two actions brought by members of the remaining Wailers in New York and Jamaica in the late 1980s.

Summing up, Judge Lewison said, "[Barrett] was plainly close to Bob Marley himself, whom he trusted implicitly. At this remove of time, his recollection of events was hazy.

"I also consider that, as often happens, he has reconstructed events in his mind according to how he would like them to have been."

After the May 15 ruling, the Marley family was reported to be "delighted" with the outcome.

"For the last four years Aston Barrett has persisted in this hurtful and extremely expensive claim which was actually settled in 1994," the family said in a statement. "It was hard to listen to Aston Barrett reduce his friend Bob to someone who was more interested in playing football than making music. It is good to see our position vindicated."

Barrett (aka "Family Man"), who is now 60 and reputedly the father of 52 children, brought the claim on behalf of himself and his late brother Carlton, the drummer in The Wailers who was murdered in 1986.

He now faces legal costs of about £2 million and may be forced to sell his two homes in Jamaica.

Barrett played with The Wailers from 1969 until Marley died in 1981 at age 36.

EMI Could Get Snared in Catch 22

ALTHOUGH EMI IS FULLY EXPECTED to return with a raised bid for Warner Music, each new approach from the British music company is likely to push its U.S. rival's share price even higher.

After having a US$28.50 per share bid rejected, most U.K. business analysts are expecting EMI chairman Eric Nicoli to return to the table offering US$30 – valuing Warner at about US$4.5 billion – despite murmurings from some of his company's major institutional shareholders.

Many Wall Street bankers are saying it still won't be enough and that the Warner board may hang out for US$33 dollars per share, The Observer reported.

That could be unacceptable to some of EMI's London-based shareholders, who are said to be nervous that Nicoli and chief executive Alain Levy could overpay for Warner.

Concert Hotwire . MAY 29, 2006 73

They're concerned that a gap has opened up between the two sides about the level of cost savings that could be extracted after a merger.

EMI is understood to be banking on at least US$200 million, but Warner is pitching the figure at about double that.

The extent of the cost savings is critical, as much of Warner's stock price rise has been fuelled by speculation about a merger with the U.K. company.

Based on share price alone, Warner is overvalued and its stock might fall sharply if EMI was to go cold on the deal.

Warner chief exec Edgar Bronfman Jr. and private equity investors including Thomas H. Lee Partners, Bain Capital and Providence Equity Partners – which collectively own about 75 percent of the U.S. company's stock – will be hard put to find another bidder offering such a huge premium on the US$2.6 billion they paid for Warner a couple of years ago.

To avoid over-gearing EMI's balance sheet or forcing it to raise funds via a rights issue, the merged group could sell one of the two massive publishing companies it would then own. The U.S. and European monopolies commissions would certainly insist upon this.

Either would be valued at about US$1 billion.

Mean Fiddler Gets A Little Latitude

IN DESCRIBING THE NEW FESTIVAL Mean Fiddler Music Group is setting up near the Suffolk coast at Southwold, the company's Tania Harrison said, "It'll seem like being at the top of The Magic Flyaway Tree."

Her references to The Enid Blyton books, and also kids' TV character Mr. Benn, are because she said those who visit the two-day event in the East Anglian countryside will feel like they've stepped into a different world.

"It's the most beautiful festival site that I've ever seen," she told Pollstar, describing the green open spaces, lakes and pockets of woodland that characterise the landscaped parkland surrounding Henham Hall.

The new festival, which is called Latitude, is something of a departure for Mean Fiddler. The predominately rock/pop-oriented promoter has set up an event that spans pretty well all arts and entertainment genres.

Harrison, who books most of the site except the major music stages that are programmed by Jon Dunn from Live Nation, has lined up a bill that includes theatre, cabaret, film, literature, poetry and art. And maybe even political debate.

"I'm very keen to see [Conservative politician] Boris Johnson here debating with somebody from my side of the fence," Melvin Benn, Mean Fiddler managing director and self-proclaimed socialist, told BBC News.

He said he wants Latitude to be like "engrossing yourself in a quality Sunday paper." He added that he's "fascinated" by the annual Hay-On-Wye literary festival in Wales.

He's aiming for a "genteel, less manic feel" than his favourite European festivals and said he wants the audience to be able to "wander from books to music to film in the way you can in your own sitting room."

Among the major music acts who'll be appearing in the idyllic Suffolk countryside July 14-16 are Snow Patrol, The Zutons, The Lemonheads, Anthony & The Johnsons, Patti Smith, Mercury Rev, and Mogwai.

Branson Sells Another Virgin

SIR RICHARD BRANSON HAS SOLD most of his remaining stake in the V2 record label to Morgan Stanley for an undisclosed sum.

The U.S. investment bank now holds about 95 percent of the company, having bought 47.5 percent in 2002.

Morgan Stanley has declined to comment on the deal, but is understood to be a passive investor in the label, leaving V2's management to run the business.

According to the U.K. financial pages, the money from the deal could be used to launch a Virginbranded music television station.

Virgin launched V2 in 1996 in a move heralded as Branson's return to the music industry after his sale of Virgin Records to EMI in 1992.

The sale of the new label follows Virgin Group's deal with the cable television operator NTL, which will soon offer customers a one-stop shop for cable television, fixed and mobile telecom services and broadband Internet under the Virgin brand.

Owning V2 would present a conflict of interest for Virgin if it does decide to take on the likes of MTV.

These are busy times for the company, which is also reported to have appointed ABN Amro and Investec to prepare Trainline.com – its train ticket reservation and billing system – for a possible £200 million flotation.

Billionaire entrepreneur Branson started building his empire by forming Virgin Records in the early 1970s.

The label had a massive hit with Mike Oldfield's Tubular Bells album and fetched a sale price of £550 million when it was swallowed by EMI.

He will keep a personal stake of about 5 percent in V2, maintaining his interest in the music sector.

THIS BRONZE statue of Jimi Hendrix commissioned by Solo Agency's John Giddings will be shipped out soon to commemorate the original 1970 Isle of Wight Festival site. Rolling Stones guitarist Ronnie Wood has painted a special piece of art to complement the statue.

BELGIUM

Welcome To The Metal Dome

GRASPOP METAL MEETING IS ADDing a fourth stage for this year's event: a new, 5,000-capacity tented area dedicated to ... erm, metal music.

The Maple Room, Battalion, Iconoclasm and Ancient Rites, plus monsters of tribute rock including Nutellica, Ozzy Ozz, and Action In DC will be among the smaller acts appearing in the tent.

The main stage area will play host to such heavyweights as Guns N' Roses, Korn, Soulfly, Alice In Chains, Whitesnake, Motorhead, Helloween, Cradle Of Fikh, Lacuna Coil, Satyricon, Moonspell, Michael Schenker Group, The Gathering, and Stream Of Passion.

It's a moot point whether this year's June 23-25 gathering will be the event's 21st birthday or the second time its celebrated its 11th.

Graspop began in '86, but after a disastrous 1995 edition when festival overkill was blamed for Joe Cocker and Simple Minds heading a bill that attracted the event's worst crowd ever, organiser Peter Van Geel was close to giving up on it.

However, the intervention of now-Live Nation promoter Herman Schueremans persuaded him to merge it with Bob "Biebob" Schoenmaekers' The Midsummer Metal Meeting at Vosselaar, a rapidly expanding indoor that was bursting at the seams.

Since '96, the festival has kept the Graspop name and the Deboeretang park site near Dessel, about 30 miles from Antwerp. But the switch to heavier music has led to continued expansion.

From pulling 10,000 a decade ago, Graspop has grown to attracting regular crowds of about 30,000 and has recently upped its site capacity to 40,000.

Marktrock Needs To Up Revenues

MARKTROCK'S GUIDO HOEVEN IS making changes to the ticketing arrangements for this year's festival in a bid to settle the event's outstanding VAT demands and keep pace with ever-rising artist fees.

Instead of charging euro 15 each time a festivalgoer visits the Oude Market stage – the only area that isn't free entry – he's looking to switch to selling all-day tickets for about euro 25.

"It was costing fans euro 15 each time they visited the main stage area – like paying a toll. But now they'll be able to go in and out as often as they like for 25.

"This will enable us to sell tickets in advance, which is something that we haven't been able to do before," he explained.

The 24-year-old outdoor in Leuven city centre – one of Europe's biggest urban festivals – has three free stages at Vismarkt, M. De Layensplein and Hogeschoolplein.

Despite pulling 50,000 for last year's gathering, Marktrock faced financial difficulties after being hit with a backdated VAT bill by the Belgian revenue authorities.

Hoeven and his team believed the event had a "tax free" charitable status but a clampdown on the law, which hit many street festivals throughout the country, left them with arrears amounting to "thousands and thousands of euros."

Having agreed terms with the tax inspector, the festival will take about two or three years to settle.

Smaller non-profit foundations mainly in the art and culture sector don't pay VAT, but pop festivals that pull huge crowds and carry their income as a cash "reserve" don't qualify for the same protection.

They should be declaring six percent of their ticket income as VAT and 25 percent on VIP tickets that include food. So far, Pet Shop Boys is the only act confirmed for this year's August 13-15 gathering. The rest of the bill is likely to be announced within the next couple of weeks.

GERMANY

Brits Invade Berlin

RAZORLIGHT, KUBB, KING CREOSOTE, and Belle & Sebastian were set to lead the week-long Brit invasion of Berlin.

They were part of British Music Week May 19-26, a joint initiative between the British Phonographic Industry (BPI) and local partners including MTV Germany, Radio Eins, leading independent retailers including Dussmann and such music mags as Tip, Intro Magazine and Uncle Sallys.

The pick of the live shows looks to have been the German debut of Razorlight at a 1,000-capacity Postbahnhof May 22, which also had Kubb, The Feeling, and Boy Kill Boy on the bill.

Belle & Sebastian at a 2,000capacity Columbiahalle May 21, Skye (ex-Morcheeba) at Postbahnhof May 23, and King Creosote, Seachange, and The Storys at the 500-capacity Liido May 27 also looked set to do well.

During the course of the week, more than 30 British bands were due to play showcases at nine Berlin venues, which also included Kesselhaus, Magnet, Knaack and Silverwings.

Among the other acts helping the Brits take over the city were Towers of London, The Rifles, Sophie Solomon, Amusement Parks On Fire, Mohair, Sons & Daughters, and Shitdisco.

Hurricane Goes Like The Wind

FKP SCORPIO'S TWINNED HURRICANE and Southside festivals have sold out in record time, shifting all 90,000 tickets within three months.

"Last year, we started the sale December 22 and sold out two to three weeks before the event. This year, we didn't start until February 14 and they've all gone six weeks before the events," FKP press officer Matthias Pätzold said.

Acts appearing on this year's Hurricane/Southside bills June 23-25 include The Strokes, Manu Chao, Seeed, The Hives, Wir Sind Helden, Arctic Monkeys, Ben Harper & the Innocent Criminals, Muse, The Kooks, Snow Patrol, Within Temptation, The Cardigans, and Delays.

World Radio

FKP's new Area 4 Festival, which began last year as a onedayer on a 20,000capacity site next to Oberhausen Arena, has confirmed Audioslave, Seeed, Jimmy Eat World, and Less Than Jake for this year's September 1-3 renewal. It also has upcom-

The three-day event will present about a couple hundred acts in the square mile around the city's docks, using the facilities of regular music venues including Grosse Freiheit 36, Docks, Gruenspan, Mandarin Kasino, Indra, Knust, Molotov as well as theatres including the St. Pauli, the Schmidt, the Imperial and Fliegende Bauten.

IRELAND

Fans Gasping For Oxegen

DENIS DESMOND LOOKS SET TO JOIN that very small group of people who have left Punchestown race track with money in their pockets. The 80,000-capacity Oxegen Festival he runs on the Irish horse racing circuit sold out in less than 12 hours.

The 3-year-old event has never done short of sellout business, but going clean on the first day of sales is a record.

Desmond attributes Oxegen's meteoric success to the strength of its lineups, which soon caught the attention of MTV Europe and New Musical Express readers.

The widespread coverage it gets from the satellite station and the NME – whose readers have voted it one of the Top Five U.K. festivals – has helped give the event a massive media profile.

It's a standard fixture at the top of the readers' polls run by the Irish music papers.

Twinned with Scotland's T In The Park – in the same way as the V Festivals and the Reading-Leeds Carling Weekend are packaged together – it has increased Desmond's huge slice of the U.K. festival market.

Apart from his interests in the V fests and Oxegen/T In The Park, his partial ownership of Mean Fiddler

Music Group means he's also involved with Reading-Leeds and the world famous Glastonbury Festival.

The speed of the Oxegen sellout prompted Desmond to issue yet another warning to fans regarding the potential problems of buying from touts.

"If you didn't manage to get tickets this year, then once again we do advise you not to turn to ticket touts or unofficial Web sites.

"Not only will you pay well over the odds, but you may be paying for tickets that do not exist and you will not gain access to the festival with a forgery," he said via a company press release, echoing the messages being sent out by almost all of the major European festival promoters.

The bill for this year's Oxegen July 8-9 includes The Who, Red Hot Chilli Peppers, The Strokes, Kaiser Chiefs, Arctic Monkeys, Franz Ferdinand, Clap Your Hands Say Yeah, James Brown, Paul Weller, Richard Ashcroft, Pharrell Williams, Editors, Manu Chao, and Placebo.

ISRAEL Weiss Breaks New Ground

IN DESCRIBING THE WORK INVOLVED in turning acres of farm land into a venue for his Roger Waters show, Shuki Weiss told Pollstar, "It's no doubt one of the most complicated productions I've ever dealt with."

He has until June 20 to clear 80 acres of chick peas and 20 acres of wheat, develop a network of dirt roads leading from Highway One – the main drag between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem – and cordon off sufficient parking area for an estimated 22,000 cars.

He also needs to sink a huge tank into the ground and build a sewage system.

He has already paid US$128,000 for the chick pea harvest – enough to make several oil tankers full of humus – and the wheat fields.

"It doesn't read like good business. We had to compensate for the harvest because we needed to clear it before it was ripe, but I did sell the top foliage back to the farmers for US$5,000 and they will use it as cattle food," he explained.

He received police permission for the show May 11, which was moved from Tel Aviv's Hayarkon Park because – in the face of criticism for playing Israel – Waters decided the show should take place at the peace village at Neve Shalom, a community dedicated to the peaceful coexistence of different faiths and races. In March, the U.K.'s The Guardian and The Independent reported that he was being lobbied to cancel his Hayarkon Park show by political and cultural activists protesting about Israel's policy toward Palestinians.

At the time, Waters – who is known to sympathise with the Palestinian cause – refused to pull out.

"I would not rule out going to Israel because I disapprove of the foreign policy any more than I would refuse to play in the U.K. because I disapprove of Tony Blair's foreign policy," he told The Guardian.

Weiss concedes that both promoter and artist would have made money by playing in front of 55,000 in Tel Aviv, whereas most of the income from the $55 tickets will now be spent on creating the new Neve Shalom venue.

"We have volunteer workers from the local kibbutz and the show has captured the imagination of the whole country," he said. "We'd sold 34,000 tickets for Hayarkon Park and less than 100 people asked for a refund when we moved the show," Weiss revealed.

"The new site is midway between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, about a half an hour from each, and is in a beautiful area between the peace village and the ancient Monastery of Silence.

"Apart from continuing to sell tickets in Tel Aviv, we're now getting more enquiries in the north from such places as Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Haifa," he added.

POLAND

Heineken Reaches For Bigger Parts

THIS YEAR'S HEINEKEN OPEN'ER Festival will be staged at Gydnia's Babie Doly Airport because the city's 25,000-capacity Kosciuszko Square is no longer big enough.

Since the first Heineken drew a 10,000 sellout crowd to Warsaw's Tor Stegny Stadium in 2002, the event has expanded so fast that it now needs room for 40,000.

"Last year we were sold out with 25,000 people and this year we expect even more fans to show," said Tomek Rawski from festival organisers Alter Art. "Kosciuszki Square is a very picturesque place but it's surrounded by water on three sides and now it's too small for us.

"We need space for bigger stages and backstage areas, more camping and other facilities," he said.

Among the acts hoping to enjoy the sea air on Poland's Baltic coast July 6-8 are Scissor Sisters, Franz Ferdinand, Placebo, Pharrell Williams, Manu Chao, Kanye West, Groove Armada, Basement Jaxx, and The Streets.

PORTUGAL Festival Season Kicks Off In Lisbon

THE PROVERBIAL PLETHORA OF TALent passing through Lisbon's Portela airport during the last weekend in May marks the beginning of what looks to be another highly successful European festival season.

Although Portugal can hardly claim to have the continent's richest festival heritage, the 2006 outdoor programme kicks off here with the recently imported Rock In Rio and Musica No Coracao's Super Bock Super Rock Festival.

One day before the 100,000capacity Rock In Rio gets under way May 26 at Bela Vista Park – the second time the Rio-based festival has been held there – Korn, Within Temptation, Soulfly and Portugal's Moonwish are scheduled to head the first day's Super Bock at the 50,000-capacity Parque das Nações.

Nµno Vierei from Super Bock organisers Musica No Coracao said neither event suffers due the presence of the other – although they're less than five miles apart – because they pull such different sorts of crowds.

"Our festival is for young people who are focused on the music, and Rock In Rio, although it has a huge stage with major international talent, is something of a family day out, more of a carnival.

"Apart from that, we only overlap on Rock In Rio's opening day, which is our second day," he explained.

The main attractions on Rio's first day are Shakira, Jamiroquai and Groove Armada, while the second day of Super Bock has Placebo, Deftones, Alice In Chains, and Primitive Reason.

Rio's second day has Guns N' Roses, The Darkness, Kill The Young, and Living Things.

The two events can't be crowding each other too much as both come back for a second helping at the beginning of June, although not on the same weekend.

Part Two of Rock In Rio June 2-4 has a bill that includes Roger Waters, Carlos Santana, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Anastacia, Sting, Starsailor, and Corinne Bailey Rae.

On June 7 and 8, Super Bock Part Two has Franz Ferdinand, Keane, The Cult, dEUS, Editors, Patrice, 50 Cent, Pharrell Williams, Boss AC, and Kalibrados.

SPAIN Jarrett Returns To San Sebastian

HIS APPEARANCE WAS SO WELLreceived last year that pianist Keith Jarrett is coming back to San Sebastian Heineken Jazzaldia.

The six-day event July 21-26, which is celebrating its 41st birthday, takes place on five stages dotted around the French border city.

The U.S. acts already confirmed include maverick New Orleans troubadour Dr. John, Herbie Hancock, The Neville Brothers, Howe Gelb, and Solomon Burke.

Chano Dominguez, Spain's internationally acclaimed pianist, and France's swinging Jacques Loussier Trio are also high on the bill.

SWITZERLAND

Blue Balls On A Roll

HAVING DONF NEXT TO SELLOUT business for the last five years, Blue Balls Festivals rolled out this year's lineup at a May 5 press conference in Lucerne's Schweizerhof Hotel.

The 14-year-old event – widely regarded as "the Montreux Jazz of the German-speaking region" – starts with a July 21 performance from Stephan Eicher. It is the only national festival performance the 45year-old Swiss MOR crooner will be doing this year.

Also scheduled for the 1,250-seat venue in the local culture centre are Randy Newman July 22, Willy DeVille July 24, Joe Jackson July 25 and ex-Supertramp vocalist Roger Hodgson July 26.

The same building's 2,000capacity standing venue will play host to Billy Idol July 21, Gary Moore July 24, Jeff Beck July 26 and Tracy Chapman July 27-28.

The acts for the 4,000-capacity Vierwaldstaettersee (Four Forest Lake) stage, a cheap-ticket, packedout showcase for upcoming Swiss talent, will be named within the next month or so.

Other acts to keep the ball rolling around the shores of Lake Lucerne July 21-29 include Saybia, Zap Mama, Nek, John Butler Trio, Angelique Kidjo, Sophie Zelmani, and Lizz Wright.

Last year's event was a little too ballsy for the local authorities. The canton (local authority) of Lucerne hit the festival with a 1,500 Swiss francs (US$1,155) fine because an

World Radio History

Iggy Pop show went two and a half decibels over its 100decibel limit.

Go-Betweens' McLennan Farewelled

SOME OF AUSTRALIAN ROCK'S BESTknown names joined 1,000 fans and family May 12 to farewell the Go-Betweens' co-founder Grant McLennan at St. John's Anglican Cathedral in Brisbane.

THE AOL ARENA in Hamburg, Germany, continues to light the way for football fans. However, the AOL won't be known as such during this summer's World Cup. The FIFA holds a strict line on corporate sponsorships and advertising deals, allowing only those who pay to advertise.

They included members of the Church, Hoodoo Gurus, Powderfinger, Regurgitator, as well as Paul Kelly, Ed Kuepper and Dave Dobbyn and Dave McCormack of Custard.

His collaborator Robert Forster spoke of McLennan's "warm, open and generous" nature.

"His songs will be remembered for 1,000 years," Forster said. After a pause, he continued, "Sorry, Grant's just told me 10,000 years."

A few days earlier, the Queensland Senate passed a motion to acknowledge McLennan's contribution to music. It was brought by Democrats leader Andrew Bartlett.

Splendour Site Melts

BYRON BAY'S SPLENDOUR IN THE Grass decided to tackle the scalper problem by introducing a new policy where tickets could only be sold on its Web site.

Alas, the site went into meltdown when it had 2.8 million hits for a 17,500-capacity event.

Frustrated fans complained, telling Pollstar it took them four hours to be processed.

Within 24 hours, all tickets were sold out.

Peter Dawkins Returns To Action

Not too long ago, music producer Peter Dawkins was so ill with Parkinson's disease that the Sydney community banded together and raised $50,000 for his medical expenses at a March 27 benefit at Star City in Sydney.

An operation was so successful that Dawkins has announced he's back to normal, and wants to play again. Dawkins is best known as the producer of 20 charttoppers in Australia, including those by John Farnham, Dragon, Mi-Sex, Matt Finish, and Air Supply. But few know that he was a drummer in London, and once played with Jimi Hendrix.

At the suggestion of Tony Grace of the Harbour Agency, Dawkins and guitarist Ian Miller pulled together The Pete's Sake Project at the Bridge Hotel in Rozelle in Sydney on June 24.

Playing with him are his son Paul, as well as former AC/DC bassist Mark Evans, members of Dragon and one-time Little River Band frontman Glenn Shorrock.

Beeston Strikes Chord In U.S.

SYDNEY-BASED CHRISTIAN SINGER/ songwriter Richard Beeston's eightweek U.S. debut tour has been so successful that he is holding talks with his U.S. representative, Patrick "Ozzie" Oswald, about returning early 2007.

"I came to the U.S. hoping to reach a new audience and learn more about the American market, but the response so far has been far greater than what I ever expected," Beeston said.

Highlights included being spotted by organisers of the Heart For The Valley festival in Hemet, California, and being asked to open for Christian band Pillar before 5,000 fans at the May 19 event at the Ramona Bowl.

Short Notes

THE CONTEMPORARY MUSIC TOURing Program, which is funded by the Government to get arts to regional areas, was extended for another four years with a $1 million package in the latest Federal Budget.

Andrew Roberts, of 2CHY in Coffs Harbour, set a new record at midnight May 14 for longest announcer on the air. His feat, for 120 hours straight on the radio, is expected to be ratified by the Guinness Book of Records.

When Canada's Nine Mile hit Melbourne, they got tattoos. Singer Mike D'Ari got a guitar etched on his right ankle.

The Vines might tour the U.S. after all. The band plans some Australian shows first to see how singer Craig Nicholls holds up.

To arrest falling ratings, the producers of reality TV series "Australian Idol" decided to hold additional auditions in regional areas.

Try-outs in Alice Springs, in the desert, were held at a cattle station. There was a slight delay when one singer choked when a fly entered her mouth.

Chris Brown is in Australia May 23-25 for a two-city promo tour that includes a live appearance at Westpoint Blacktown in Sydney.

Music video maker Michelle Trembath's Darlinghurst-based company Mad Angel Productions has closed its doors, with debts of $500,000, the Sydney Morning Herald reported.

Laws passed in mid-May by the Brisbane City Council placed a decibel limit for clubs in and around the Fortitude Valley entertainment precinct.

Under new regulations, a venue can cop an on-the-spot $375 fine. Repeat offenders will face court and fines of up to $37,500.

Princess Superstar's two club shows mid-May were canceled because of a "heavy workload and touring commitments," according to promoter Playground Music, which hoped to bring the act back later this year.

Softbank Phones Goes ITunes

SOFTBANK CORP., ONE OF JAPAN'S leading Internet service firms, is planning to develop mobile telephones equipped with Apple's iPod music players, according to Kyodo News.

These third-generation cell phones, which will be launched sometime next year, will be capable of downloading songs directly from Apple's iTunes Music Store on the Internet through personal computers.

The two companies will also develop a handset that can download iTunes through Softbank's own telecommunications network.

Softbank has only been in the mobile phone business since April. It acquired the Japanese unit of British cell phone company Vodaphone, which remains far behind the other two companies in Japan's mobile phone market.

By hooking up with Apple's brand name, Softbank believes it can catch up with NTT DoCoMo and KDDI, the two mobile phone leaders, Kyodo reported. KDDI's au service is the leader in music downloads for cell phones, a factor analysts say has made it the most popular mobile phone company among young people. DoCoMo will introduce new phones this summer that can download music.

The market is too good to ignore. According to the Record Industry Association of Japan, sales of downloaded music in terms of yen doubled from 2004 to 2005, and 94 percent of the downloads made in 2005 were to mobile phones.

As a striking example, one of the biggest hits of the past year, Al's single "Story" has sold 350,000 copies in stores, but has been downloaded more than 3 million times.

Since February alone, the song has sold 150,000 times as a ring tone. The single was released exactly a year ago.

The ring tone phenomenon has obviously impressed the handlers of 23-year-old diva Hikaru Utada, whose latest single, "This Is Love," provides background music for a Cup Noodle TV commercial.

The song will be released to the general public on May 31, but only as a download.

According to the tabloid Nikkan Sports, it will not be sold as a single CD but will be one of the songs on Utada's next album, "Ultra Blue," which will come out June 14.

It is her first collection of new songs in four years and is expected to go immediately to No. 1. Utada's previous single, "Keep Tryin'," was downloaded 1.9 million times.

Puffy AmiYumi's B-Day Sellout

PRETERNATURAL POPSTERS PUFFY AmiYumi celebrated the 10th anniversary of its first hit single with a soldout concert on May 13 at the outdoor amphitheatre in Tokyo's Hibiya Park.

Three-thousand Puffy-philes sat in the rain and sang along to the duo's string of 21 hits as well as its newest single, "Tokyo I'm On My Way," which was scheduled for release on May 24.

For an encore, the crowd was honored with the appearance of Tamio Okuda, the man who wrote almost all of Puffy's hits and is a superstar in his own right.

Ami and Yumi will then go into rehearsals for their fifth full-scale U.S. tour, which begins July 11 in New York.

As they did last year, they'll end the summer with an appearance at the Summer Sonic festival in Tokyo.

World Radio History

Show Biz Soccer Charity

FIFTY-THREE OF Japan's top show business personalities, including musicians, actors, and TV stars, have collaborated on a "We Are the World"-like charity project centered on the upcoming World Cup soccer tournament in Germany.

The single, which is titled "Yell From Nippon," will be released May 31 sometime after the announcement of the members of Japan's national team, which made the cut in the Asia block that will compete in Germany.

Proceeds from sales of the single will go to a charity that buys soccer balls for poor children all over the world.

Also on May 31, a special compilation album of soccer songs called "Football Music Album Yell" will be released.

Fuji Bait Revealed

Smash Corp. announced May 10 that The Strokes would be the headlining act on the final day of this summer's Fuji Rock Festival, which takes place at the Naeba Ski Resort in Niigata prefecture July 28-30.

Fans of the festival have been watching the FRF Web site for weeks wondering who the final day "otori" ("lure" or "bait") would be.

The opening day and second day otori, Franz Ferdinand and Red Hot Chili Peppers respectively, were announced many weeks ago.

Other late additions to the Fuji roster include Blackalicious, Gnarls Barkley, Junior Senior, rinocerose, The Raconteurs, Dirty Pretty Things, and Martha Wainwright.

In other festival news, Creativeman announced on May 16 that all two-day tickets to the Tokyo portion of this year's Summer Sonic have sold out. *
