TM Crosses Black Cat

he Black Cat in Washington, D.C., is leaving the Ticketmaster fold to go with Ticket Alternative effective Sept. 25, in part because of club owner Dante Ferrando's concerns about the company's pending merger with Live Nation.

Ferrando, who told Pollstar he prefers to keep ticket prices at the $12 to $15 range, also cited the economics of Ticketmaster fees, particularly the "print at home" add-on, as factors in looking elsewhere.

The economics driving a vendor change in itself wouldn't raise eyebrows But citing the Live Nation / Ticketmaster merger as a cause to drop TM has.

"The Live Nation merger just really makes it impossible to consider continuing with Ticketmaster," Ferrando said. "I think the merger is a little bit nuts and I don't understand why they're doing it.

"I can't imagine anybody who competes with Live Nation not switching. Nobody in any business hands their competition a percentage of all their income. It doesn't make sense." he continued. "Between losing all your information and a percentage of all your shows to your competition, I can't imagine that everybody isn't going to switch that doesn't already work with Live Nation."

But the bottom line, for Ferrando, was that it made financial sense to make the move now. He'd considered it six years ago.

"It might have made economic sense to switch but there were certain things that Ticketmaster offered that were important, that the other guys didn't have, like the outlets. Now that's not as important," Ferrando said. "Now, nearly 95 percent of the people who buy tickets to one of my shows buys online. And I found that virtually no other ticket companies charged for the printat-home option.

"It's absurd anyway. We looked at a lot of ticketing companies before we decided to go with Ticket Alternative. Given the economics, it made sense to quit." Deborah Spiger

Concerts Lift Sprint Center

f the last year was supposed to be a bad one, nobody told the Sprint Center in Kansas City, Mo., which just gave an unexpected $1.8 million to the city thanks to a financial windfall

The arena, which is operated and partially owned by AEG, had such a good fiscal year ending July 31 that a profit-sharing provision with the city kicked in. The city, which owns the $276 million facility (minus AEG's $54 million contribution), has seen past revenue come from ticket user fees and sales tax, along with increases to hotel room fees and car rental fees.

And the profit came from concerts.

"The $1.8 million is unanticipated on both the part of the city and AEG," Sprint Center spokeswoman Shani Tate Ross told Pollstar. "The provision was literally thrown in and based on the performance, in terms of bookings of concerts and family shows, as well as sporting events. That's how we achieved that provision in the management agreement."

The profit-sharing is based upon a series of benchmarks that arrived throughout the fiscal year, Tate Ross said. Highlights included the launch of Tina Turner's world tour. two sold-out Eagles dates, an evening with Celine Dion and a banner year for family shows.

Although the news is good for the concert industry in general, it's especially good news for AEG and president Tim Leiweke. The Sprint Center was built partially on the hopes of landing a resident professional

"The economic model of this building is guite successful," Leiweke told the Star. "The last thing we or the city want to do is throw away that model and make the arena a loss leader with another tenant."

He added that the situation would be different if there was a professional team involved that would have blocked out 50 dates from the calendar, plus its ability to block out two months' worth of potential playoff dates.

"I'm sure we wouldn't be able to write a check to the city for $1.8 million [if a team was herel." he said.

WME Layoffs Hit Music Division

he good news at WME Entertainment is that apparently the layoffs are finished. The bad news is that three people from the music department were reportedly let go.

s part of a $2.5 million renovation to the 43year-old San Diego Sports Arena, AEG has decided to convert a section of it into a new, 6,500-square-foot nightclub.

AEG, the majority owner of the venue, and general manager Ernie Hahn, whose family has a minority stake, announced Sept. 22 that Club 3500 will debut in early October. The club will include a DJ booth, modular lounge seating and, as would be expected, a dance floor.

There will also be a membership component, according to a statement, with members having exclusive parking entrance and exit, a member's arena entrance and access to the best seats for every event

"We're extremely proud and excited about Club 3500, which will be the signature piece of the San Diego Sports Arena," Hahn said in a statement, calling it "part nightclub, part sports bar."

Renovations also include new seats to the lower level of the arena, LCD televisions, new restrooms and upgraded concourse and arena entrance designs.

The system links the tickets to students' ID cards and puts a $60 resale cap on seats, which go for $30 per game. The system also limits the number of games students can resell to six.

Previously, Penn State students were apparently able to score as much as $1,200 from reselling season tickets. Under the new system, a student could reportedly earn a maximum of $120.

The university's Daily Collegian reported that long lines of students gathered at a resolution booth in front of the school's Beaver Stadium after their ID cards swiped negative and the system went down completely during two of the school's earliest games of the season.

However, Penn State Associate Athletic Director Greg Myford told the paper that the paperless system had no glitches and lines moved quickly during a Sept. 19 game.

has been having a rough go lately, getting busted for a drunken boating accident about the same time he pleaded guilty to sexual assault.

Nelson, who helped create the 900-capacity Big Top Chautauqua – a tented property in Washburn near Lake Superior – was arrested and cited Sept. 17 for operating a vehicle while drinking and for resisting arrest. An employee of a campground on Lake Namekagon called authorities after an intoxicated boater nearly caused a collision, according to local TV news reports.

Bystanders directed sheriff's deputies to Nelson, who was parked in a vehicle near a boat landing, according to KQDS News. Officials said Nelson was uncooperative, ran from a deputy and jumped in the lake.

Nelson was set to begin a nine-month jail sentence for attacking a woman in January. He pleaded guilty to misdemeanor sexual assault and battery in July.

Nelson was reportedly jailed for a parole violation. He resigned from the Big Top Sept. 22.

Big Top Chautauqua's summer schedule included Joan Baez, Gaelic Storm, Suzanne Vega and Yonder Mountain String Band.

concert in Havana, Cuba, that spurred protests and tweet threats against Colombian rocker Juanes drew what reports called a crowd of more than 1 million to the city's Revolution Square Sept. 20.

Peace Without Borders, headlined by Juanes, was a global affair, featuring artists from Cuba, Europe, Puerto Rico and Ecuador including Miguel Bosé, Silvio Rodriguez, Orishas, Danny Rivera and Los Van Van.

Juanes told the crowd during the show that the artists "came to Cuba for love. We have overcome fear to be with you and you too can overcome it," he said. "All the young people in the region, from Miami in the United States and in all the cities ... should understand the importance of turning hate into love."

However, the singer hadn't received much love from Cuban exile groups in Miami in recent weeks.

One such group, Vigilia Mambisa, held protests, smashed Juanes albums and held up signs that reportedly read "Juanes, Guerillas Without Borders," and "Juanes, Friend of the Murderous Castros," according to the Latin American Herald Tribune.

Police in Key Biscayne, Fla., reportedly monitored the homes of Juanes and his manager during the concert following death threats.

Reactions following the show were mixed.

U.S. Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen told WLTV television that the event had in fact been a triumph for the Castro regime, as performers made no mention during the show about humanrights violations and political prisoners on the island.

But members of the Cuban American National Foundation, which seeks to bring democracy to Cuba, were more complimentary in their review of the show.

"To go to that same plaza – where [Cubans] have been forced to listen to things they don't believe in – for music? It's great," president Francisco Hernandez told the Miami Herald.

Juanes met with Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton

Sept. 23 that the partnership with Onexim will "ensure the successful completion of a world-class entertainment venue in Brooklyn, the relocation of the NBA Nets basketball team and the economic and housing benefits of the Atlantic Yards Project."

Under terms of the deal, Onexim would invest $200 million to acquire 45 percent of the Barclays project and 80 percent of the team.

"Mikhail and Onexim will be great partners for this project," Forest City CEO Bruce Ratner said in a statement. "I am thrilled that smart global investors appreciate the exciting economic potential of Brooklyn. We are one step closer to achieving our goals of creating much-needed jobs and economic development for Brooklyn and the city."

Prokhorov, who would become the first non-North American owner of an NBA team, said he has a "longstanding passion for basketball and pursuing interests that forward the development of the sport in Russia."

The deal awaits approval by the NBA's Board of Governors and is expected to close early next year.

If passed, the deal could take at least some of the financial burden off Forest City, which is attempting to raise nearly $800 million in tax-exempt financing before the end of the year to begin the Barclays construction.

The developer still faces an appellate hearing next month regarding the use of eminent domain in the development.

faux concert promoter was sentenced to 30 months in prison by a Chicago judge after redirecting investor funds from four unfulfilled concerts and failing to pay income tax on her new balance.

Manilen Mendoza, a Filipino promoter, was indicted on three counts in the U.S. Northern District Court of Illinois Sept. 22, according to the Manila-based GMA News. The Chicago newspapers apparently did not cover the trial. "Mendoza took investors' money and converted it to her personal use but failed to report the money she received from her entertainment business as income on her tax returns," IRS Special Agent Maria Suarez told GMA.

Mendoza ran a company called Infinity Productions and, later, Prestige Entertainment. According to Mendoza's indictment, Mendoza recruited investors for four shows that never materialized. One was a supposed Lionel Richie gig in California in 2004, another was an Olivia Newton-John show in the Philippines in 2005 and two - Stevie Wonder and Kenny Rogers - were to take place in Illinois in 2006, according to GMA.

Non-Regulation Blues

If there's one subject guaranteed to raise the blood pressures of Internet company execs and Netizens alike, it's Internet regulation.

Aside from countries such as China, which actually tries to regulate Internet content, many industrialized nations are leery of going too far. That is, until their citizens complain about Net porn, Nigerian banking scams and the constantly growing amount of e-mail spam arriving each day.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Julius Genachowski recently addressed regulation issues, indicating the commission might regulate wireless networks much the same way it regulates hardwired conduits, which essentially means little or no regulation at all.

Normally, a government official favoring less regulation for an industry is often considered a friend by those he or she oversees. But wireless network operators have expressed doubts as to whether their networks can effectively operate under the same rules and regs their physically connected brethren abide by.

In other words, some wireless network operators might prefer more, not less regulation.

One of the main issues is "Net neutrality," the concept that all traffic should be treated equally. If regulated in a manner similar to wired networks, wireless operators might have to open their networks to traffic that until now. has been prohibited from their systems.

For example, ATGT prohibits file sharing on its wireless network, but if Net neutrality standards are applied, the company might be forced to allow its users to swap files regardless of traffic congestion.

Genachowski's position is somewhat confusing. He's on record as saying he wants to apply wired Internet traffic principles to wireless networks but at the same time hasn't backed off from treating WiFi somewhat differently. Plus, he's proposing a rule that would prohibit ISPs from hampering certain types of traffic.

The FCC sanctioned Comcast last year for secretly disrupting peer-to-peer filesharing traffic. At that time the ISP was interrupting filetrading between two computers on its network by sending "hang up" notices to both sender and receiver – a procedure considered to be in violation of Net neutrality concepts.

Regarding Comcast's P2P interruptions, the FCC said it relies on broad "principles" of open access that, up until then, hadn't been tested. Comcast's response was to file suit against the commission, saying the FCC had no authority to regulate what it did with its own networks. That case is still in federal appeals court.

But it's easier to talk about Net neutrality than it is to uphold the basic principles behind the concept. It's hardly a service to users if an ISP allows its network to become so congested that all traffic slows to a crawl. However, any attempts to prevent congestion by moderating or policing data flow often results in accusations of favoring one type of traffic at the expense of another.

For example, Cox Communications is reportedly testing a system that slows traffic the company determines to be less time-sensitive. What kind of traffic? Apparently data movement such as downloads and software updates. Of course, it's always timesensitive if you're sitting in front of your computer waiting for the download or update to complete.

Meanwhile, David Young, VP of federal regulatory affairs at Verizon Communications, says he's happy that the FCC chairman does not appear to favor an intensely regulated Internet. In Young's opinion, carriers should be free to experiment with different methods of handling network congestion, otherwise technology development might be slowed.

"The concern is that it will stifle innovation, investment and growth," Young said. "To dramatically change the 15-year policy of the United States government to not regulate the Internet is a pretty radical thing and should be driven by a very real and present need to do so."

A Failure To Communicate

Do you own a Palm Pre? Can it connect with iTunes?

Apple and Palm played their own private game of Whac-A-Mole during the summer, with each company trying to block the other's latest software development.

At issue was Apple's iTunes monopoly. Currently, only Apple's own devices, specifically iPods and iPhones, can connect and synch with the popular music-management software.

But Palm tried to change that in June when the company released the $200 Palm Pre, the first non-Apple device capable of connecting directly to iTunes.

How did Palm do it? Simply put, it constructed the Pre to act like either an iPod or iPhone, thereby fooling iTunes into accepting the mobile device as one of its own.

Apple quickly countered Palm by updating the iTunes software. However, Palm retaliated by updating the Pre's software so that when it connected to iTunes via a USB hub, the device would give out the hardware vendor code assigned to Apple by the USB Implementers Forum.

Needless to say, Apple wasn't too thrilled with Palm spoofing the vendor code. The company made a few more changes and now the latest version of iTunes refuses to get along with the Pre.

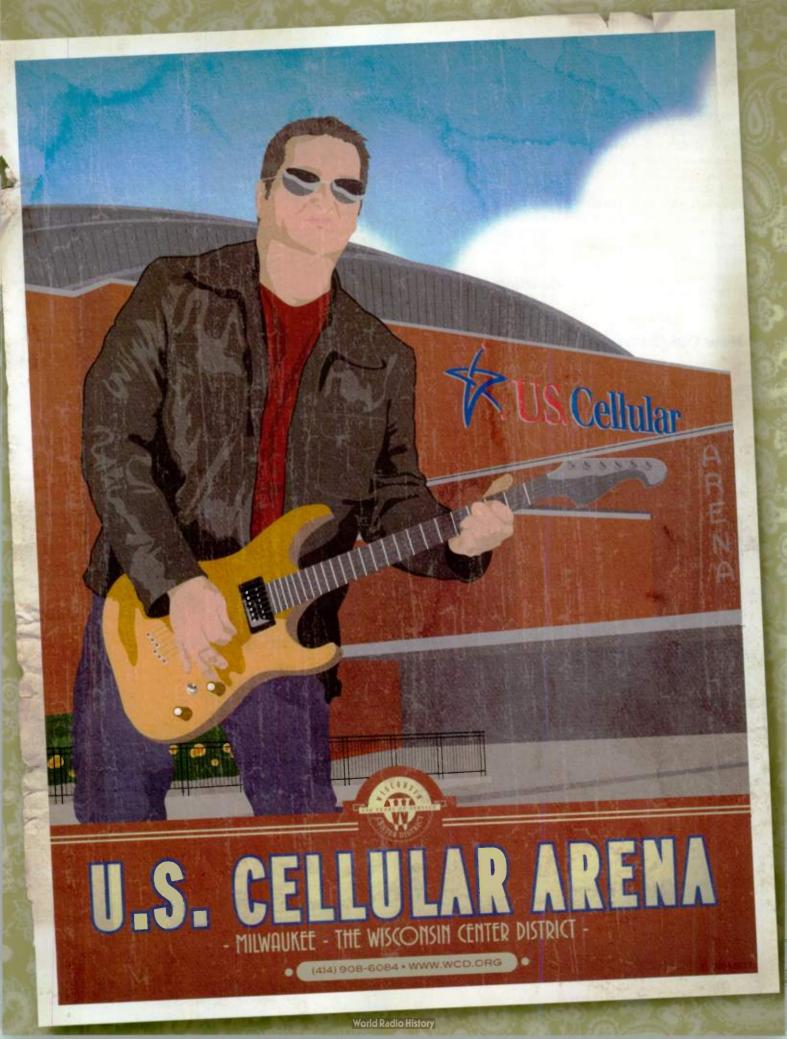

With the ball in Palm's court, the company decided to stop its upgrade feud with Apple and appeal to a higher authority – the USB Implementers Forum – claiming Apple was improperly using its USB code to stifle competition.

But instead of siding with Palm, the Forum warned the company that any attempt to use Apple's vendor code would be a violation of the group's rules. The forum then asked Palm to clarify its intentions regarding connecting the Pre to iTunes and to respond to the group within a week.

A Palm representative said the company contacted the USB Implementers Forum because it felt consumers should be able to make their own decisions regarding which devices to use for playing music and video.

Meanwhile, Apple hasn't commented on the matter, preferring instead to let its iTunes updates do the talking. And right now those updates have ensured that iTunes does not talk to the Palm Pre.

Settling Up At Gunpoint

Six people are facing charges of extortion and kidnapping for holding two promoters hostage following a failed Memorial Day concert.

Promoters Michael Murphy and Amir Saleem were allegedly held at gunpoint for hours in a Vineland, N.J., storefront June 4 and forced to come up with $165,000, police said.

invested in the Memorial Day weekend rap concert in Miami promoted by Murphy, Saleem and a Floridabased partner, authorities told the Vineland Daily Journal.

When the show failed to turn a profit, the Patels and Cortes, along with several other "enforcers," allegedly confronted the promoters during a meeting at the storefront and demanded their money back. Vineland police detective Thomas Ulrich told the Journal that when Murphy and Saleem entered the storefront, guns were drawn and the men's lives were threatened.

They were then ordered to call relatives to have money wired to them, taken to an ATM to withdraw money and forced to sign a promissory note that turned over interest in their company, Dreammakers Events, to the Florida business partner, Ulrich said.

The six arrested also face charges of robbery, criminal coercion and weapons offenses. They are being held in the Cumberland County Jail on $200,000 bail each, the paper reported.

A SECURITY GUARD CHECKS BAGS at Comerica Park before a Tigers game in Detroit Sept. 22. Security has been stepped up nationwide after word of a possible terrorist plot involving hydrogen peroxide bombs hidden in backpacks.

The FBI and U.S. Marshalls Service are also assisting with the case, which is ongoing, he told the Journal.

Venues In Terror Alert

Apparently al-Qaida is going after "places of amusement, immorality and sin," according to a terrorist training manual. For counterterrorism officials, that translates to entertainment venues.

Officials sent two bulletins to police departments Sept. 21, identifying no specific terrorism plots but urging law enforcement and private companies to be vigilant. The bulletins specified stadiums, entertainment complexes and hotels as potential targets. The recent flurry of terror attention involves a possible bomb plot in Denver and New York.

"While DHS and FBI have no information regarding the timing, location or target of any planned attack, we believe it is prudent to remind transit authorities to remain vigilant," Homeland Security spokesman Sean Smith said.

Separately, law enforcement officials said a Colorado man may have been planning to detonate backpack bombs on New York City trains.

Burning Lawsuit Appeal Denied

California's Supreme Court denied a Los Angeles man's attempt to reinstate his lawsuit against the Burning Man organization for injuries he sustained during the 2005 event in the Black Rock Desert in Nevada.

The justices voted unanimously Sept. 16 to deny review of Anthony Beninati's appeal. His lawsuit against San Franciscobased Black Rock LLC, which claimed the promoter was negligent in allowing people to approach the flames without providing safe pathways, was dismissed earlier this year, according to the San Francisco Chronicle.

Beninati, a real estate manager, was badly burned at the Burning Man festival, which culminates every year with the torching of a 60-foot wood effigy of The Man. He walked several feet into the effigy's burning remains to toss in a photo of a friend who died in a motorcycle accident.

The lawsuit said Beninati tripped over what he claimed was a hidden object and fell into the embers, burning his hands and legs. He was airlifted to a nearby hospital for treatment, the paper said.

Big Debt For Folk Fest

acing mounting debt, the free American Folk Festival in Bangor, Maine, will likely have to charge admission if there's to be an event next year. Organizers released figures Sept. 22 showing the event $130,000 in the red.

"We are at a sobering crossroads," festival board chairman Maria Baeza said at a press conference, according to the Bangor Daily News. The $130,000 debt has accumulated since 2006. "It's a very scary reality, and it's one we take very seriously."

Added executive director Heather McCarthy, "It's become more than we can continue to carry. ... We aren't able to fully pay off the costs of the 2009 festival. If it hadn't rained on Saturday, perhaps that wouldn't have happened. Nevertheless, that's the reality." Creditors were unknown at press time.

Organizers now seek feedback on whether fans would be willing to pay admission to attend the event Organizers say the quaranteed revenue stream would obviously help and tickets would be in the $5-$15 range, the paper reported.

"Nothing is for off the table," McCarthy said. "We want to hear from people on how we can fix this problem and continue to have this incredible event here in Bangor."A donation offset losses in 2005, the paper said, but 2006 through 2008 saw losses of about $97,000, $28,000 and $38,000 respectively.

Figures released to the Daily News showed that 2009's event cost about $1 million to stage, with most of the expenses coming from production ($269,000) followed by programming costs ($259,000). Considering this year's financial troubles, 2009's event was in the red by a comparatively small $9,300. This year's fest included Clinton Fearon, Cherish The Ladies and Rob Curto's Forro For All.

McCarthy told the paper that the organizers become more efficient each year in putting the event together and blamed this year's debt on loss of revenue from "Bucket Brigade" donations as well as lost beer tent and souvenir sales on the rained-out Saturday of the festival.

Previous folk festivals have included Bettye LaVette, Del McCoury Band, Grupo Fantasma and Eternal Tango.

Couple Buys Ozark Amphitheatre

The Stoneridge Amphitheatre – a shuttered venue in Camdenton, Mo. – has been bought by a local entrepreneurial couple who expect to relaunch the 15,500-capacity shed next spring.

Tony and Lisa Ann Oddo, who reopened an exotic animal attraction near Springfield, have big plans for the shed, according to the Springfield News-Leader. The venue has also been known as the Lake Ozarks Amphitheatre.

"With the new name comes a new vision," Tony Oddo told the paper. "We envision using this amazing 15,500-seating amphitheatre, 77 acres and parking for 7,000 cars, as a hub for entertainment and events for the whole lake region and we are committed, as well as excited, to making that happen." Oddo did not return phone calls at press time, but a venue spokeswoman told Pollstar efforts are already being made to book acts for the shed come spring.

McGraw headlined a Sept. 17 makeup concert at Edmonton's Rexall Place for about 13,000 Jamboree ticketholders, according to the Edmonton Journal. The event included a moment of silence in memory of Donna Moore, the one person killed when the devastating weather caused a portion of the Jamboree main stage to collapse. More than a dozen concert-goers were also injured that day including a member of Billy Currington's band, which performed just prior to the collapse.

Volunteers at the event collected donations for a trust fund set up to help Moore's two sons. Those donations will be added to about $55,000 already contributed by Big G Rich, the Edmonton Oilers NHL team and others, the paper said.

Despite the tragic circumstances this year, Panhandle Productions' Larry Werner announced Sept. 16 that Big Valley Jamboree, which fea-

Reversal In Deadhead Murder Mystery

A man convicted and sentenced to death in the 1985 murder of two Grateful Dead fans in a Berkeley, Calif., homeless campground saw those decisions overturned Sept. 15 by a federal judge in San Francisco.

Judge Marilyn Hall Patel overturned the convictions, saying the jury never heard from numerous witnesses who would have suggested another man was the killer.

The trial lawyer for defendant Ralph International Thomas should have located those witnesses, whose testimony "would have led the jury to "harbor a reasonable doubt" about Thomas' guilt, Patel said. If the name seems familiar, Patel was also the presiding judge in the original suit that eventually brought down Sean Fanning's Napster.

The ruling entitles Thomas, 55, to a new trial in Alameda County Superior Court. A.J. Kutchins, one of his appellate lawyers, said his gratitude for Patel's decision was tempered by medical reports that Thomas has suffered several strokes, has severe dementia and can't care for himself. "He's basically had his adult life taken away from him, and he's got very little left," Kutchins told the San Francisco Chronicle. But Kutchins was pleased the judge agreed his client didn't get a fair trial and "was convicted of a crime that there is every reason to think that he did not commit."

Thomas was convicted of murdering Mary Gioia of Schenectady, N.Y., and Gregory Kniffin of Wilson, Conn. They had been following the Dead on tour and were staying at a homeless camp at the Berkeley Marina known locally as "Rainbow Village." Their bodies were found in San Francisco Bay in August 1985 with gunshot wounds to the heads.

Thomas previously served nine years in prison on a sexual assault conviction and was living in a car at the camp. The murder weapon was Thomas' rifle, according to prosecutors, but he insisted it had been stolen. Thomas reportedly identified Gioia's body as it was being pulled from the water face-down, and a witness said he had seen Thomas near the couple before the killings.

The sole defense witness said she had seen Gioia and Kniffin shortly before their deaths arguing with a different man about an object that looked like ayor Kevin Johnson warns that the Sacramento Kings could leave town for better facilities if Arco Arena isn't soon replaced.

His comments come after the NCAA passed on the aging arena, which put in a bid to host the regional round of the men's basketball tournament, the Sacramento Bee reported. Arco Arena has hosted the event four times since 1994.

"If we don't have a clear path to an arena in the not too distant future, then we as Sacramentans need to know that [the Kings] very well may look elsewhere," Johnson said.

apolin iiams' Officials claimed that hosting the 2007 NCAA round brought in $4 million to the local economy.

Sacramento Sports Commission officials were told the city's bid to host tournament games through 2013 was denied because of concerns over conditions at Arco.

"They said, "I hope you will consider bidding in the future when you get your arena issues resolved," sports commission executive director John McCasey told the Bee.

Johnson, a former NBA star. said it was "staggering and mindboggling" that the arena is no longer considered suitable for top college basketball. He says he wants to see an arena proposal for Cal Expo take mare solid form by the end of the vear

A multibilliondollar Cal Expo plan was unveiled in March including an arena for the Kings, but financing is still uncertain.

Voters in the region shot down two proposals to raise county sales tax to partially fund a new arena in 2006.

NBA representative John Moag, who is leading the NBA's three-year effort to build the arena at Cal Expo, SINGER/SONGWRITER Andrew J Gallagher claims Coldplay s video for Strawberry Swing lock's very similar to the video he shot for his song Something Else. Gallagher says the videos hare a similar concept – people interacting with drawings on a chalkboard – and he claims comeone connected with the band's vid had probably seen his video first.

THREE MONTHS after Michael Jackson death, police are still sifting through endence to determine who if anyone, should be charged with hastening his demise. One hurdle for police and federal Drug Enforcement Administration officials is documenting Jackson's drug usage Jackson illicitly acquired prescription drugs through several assumed names, making it difficult to determine just how many pharmaceutions the performer was taking during the last few months of his life. Prosecutors will also have to detail to a jury where Jackson not the drugs and how he acquired them. Dr Conrad Murray Jackson's personal physician is still a large part of the investigation. Murray administered propotol and lorazepam to Jackson, and was with the pop star the day he died told the Bee he understands the mayor's frustration.

"I think the mayor is expressing a sense of where we all are," Moag said. "We are in a bad economy in a state that doesn't have any money. Lending has dried up. We can't force developers to borrow money they can't get."

30 DCTOBER 5 2009 POLISTAR

There are some who might take offense to being called spacey, but Kid Cudi wouldn't likely be one of them.

Whether it was a stroke of genius or simply art imitating life, the hiphop hipster recently dropped his conceptual debut Man on the Moon: The End of Day just a few months after the 40th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moon landing.

While the Apollo mission may have looked to the moon and beyond, Cudi's release, which debuted at No. 4 on the charts, blends equal parts intergalactic and introspection, featuring experimental beats and lyrical themes of alienation and paranoia.

Getting personal wasn't a giant leap for Cudi, who also scored a chart topper earlier this year with the loner anthem "Day 'n' Nite" from his A Kid Named Cudi mix tape.

Cudi told Pollstar that after seeing the way his fans connected to that single, he found the confidence to push the envelope with Man on the Moon because he knew they were "ready to embrace something different."

He explained the album gave him the chance to collaborate with Ratatat, an indie act that had heavily inspired him when he was working on creating his own sound.

"I wanted to accommodate the people that have an eclectic ear," he said. "Working with Ratatat, it was just so easy to create those songs because it was like working with somebody that's on the same frequency as far as creativity.

"I really wanted to take it to another level. The mix tape was me kind of holding back a lot of ideas," he said. "I felt like I needed to step it up. I tell people this all the time – the mix tape was like a TV series and the album is the feature-length film."

The reference is apt coming from a guy who spent a year in film school at the University of Toledo in Ohio before moving to New York City to pursue a career in music.

A chance meeting at Def Jam introduced Cudi to his current manager, Patrick "Plain Pat" Reynolds, who was working in AGR at the time.

"There was just always something I'd liked even from the really rough demo stuff back then," Reynolds told Pollstar. "At the time it wasn't right. I couldn't really do anything at Def Jam with it."

They kept in touch and Reynolds, who left Def Jam soon after the initial meeting with Cudi, said their friendship eventually evolved into him assuming the role of manager.

Reynolds helped produce Cudi's mix tape, which got the rapper recognized by Kanye West and led to a guest appearance and songwriting credits on West's 808s & Heartbreak release last year.

That mix tape also earned Cudi recognition with William Morris Endeavor Entertainment's Cara Lewis, whom Reynolds said "reached out to us and got on board really early."

Lewis sent Cudi out with some other new kids on the hip-hop block for this summer's Great Hangover tour that featured Asher Roth and Cudi, along with B.o.B., 88 Keys and Pac Div.

"I definitely grew a lot," Cudi said. "It was dope that me and Asher got a chance to go out together, because, you know, we're both up-and-coming artists and we were experiencing something new together. ... Tours are the best when you're with homies and that's what it felt like – just like one crazy road trip. It was grueling at times, but with those shows, when you get onstage, you just forget about all that, man. It's just so much fun."

The tour played festivals and clubs around the country, and Cudi said he liked the energy in the small venues. "When you can reach out and touch the fans, I love shows like that," he said. "They were really into it."

The tour also gave the rapper, who performs solo, the opportunity to tap his background in film and present audiences with some cinematic visuals alongside his music.

"I wanted to mix it up," he said. "So I brought in some stadiumstatus, next-level visuals to smaller venues."

Another upcoming gig that will tap Cudi's film background is a role he'll play in Mark Wahlberg's HBO comedy series "How to Make It in America," which will focus on three guys trying to make it big in the Big Apple.

"I feel like I'm gonna connect with my character a lot," he said. "These guys work nine to five, so when I'm talking about the grind, it's taking it back."

Along with shooting the series, Cudi will be busy promoting the album and the upcoming Activision "DJ Hero" video game release, which will feature one of his tracks.

While there might be time left for "spot dates here and there" in 2009, Cudi said he plans to hit the road hard beginning next year.

"I'm ready to step it up for the Man on the Moon tour," he said. "I want to hit everybody up all at once." |Dana Parker-McClain 4 curred. We wouldn't have bought it. We'd have 90 percent of our funds still to invest and we'd look like geniuses," he told a Dow Jones private equity conference Sept. 16.

The former Terra Firma chairman and chief exec, who relinquished control to focus on investors and investments, said that now the main battle is to negotiate easier terms on the British label's debt.

Tetra Firma paid £3.2 billion (then $6.7 billion) to buy EMI in May 2007, just before the buyout bubble burst. Citibank lent most of the money.

Hands said debt negotiations with Citibank are continuing in a "gentlemanly" fashion, although he appeared less than confident over the outcome.

"Will we get to a solution that's a win-win for all stakeholders? I don't know, but I certainly know there's desire from all parties to do it," he said at the Dow Jones meeting.

Terra Firma has improved results at EMI, boosting the recorded music division's annual earnings from £50 million ($81.1 million) per year to £160 million ($259.5 million).

However, the struggling music group accounted for the vast majority of Terra Firma's euro 1.37 billion ($2.2 billion) writedowns this year and it's twice had to put money into the company to steady the ship. Citi, which arranged £2.5 billion ($4.05 billion) worth of the money that Terra Firma borrowed to buy EMI, has since had chairman and chief exec Charles "Chuck" Prince resign on the back of news that the bank had written down $17 billion on leveraged and sub-prime loans in the previous six months.

The debt is said to be costing EMI 10 percent per annum, much higher than the 6 percent it originally expected, costing it about £300 million ($486.5 million) per year.

The recorded music division alone isn't making that much in a year. When the publishing section's profits are also used to fill the hole, it doesn't leave very much to run and grow the company.

Another financial burden is the cost of the cuts and restructuring that have been needed to slash the company's outgoings.

Terra Firma has reportedly offered to put in another £330 million ($535.3 million) worth of equity, in addition to the £84 million it put in at the end of January, to persuade Citibank to agree to a restructuring of the debt. in May, the private equity company wrote down the book value of EMI by a little more than half and poured in a further £28 million to avoid it breaching its bank covenants.

Citi has already tried to hive of some of the debt to secondary investors, but couldn't get any takers in the current economic climate.

EMI's improved performance may make it harder to convince Citibank of the urgency of restructuring the company or the debt repayment.

Musicians Squabble Over Filesharing

Filesharing continues to divide the U.K.'s music business and it's becoming clear that even the musicians can't agree on how the problem should be tackled.

Members of the Featured Artists Coalition (FAC), which includes Annie Lennox, Billy Bragg and Pink Floyd's Nick Mason, feel the government is being a bit heavy-handed to propose disconnecting filesharers from the Internet, while Sir Elton John and Lily Allen are among those who support a crackdown.

"I am of the view that the unchecked proliferation of illegal downloading (even on a 'noncommercial' basis) will have a seriously detrimental effect on musicians, and particularly young musicians and those composers who are not performing artists," Elton said in a letter to U.K. business secretary Lord Mandelson. FAC took the rest of the music industry by surprise by publicly announcing it has "agreed to disagree" with labels over government proposals to suspend the Internet connections of persistent filesharers.

Apparently all sides including record companies and music lobby groups have been in frantic talks to reach a consensus in the few days before the government's consultation draws to an end.

"We have negotiated in good faith with the labels all week, but they remain wedded to the idea of suspension of accounts," read an FAC statement. "We remain steadfast in our belief that making threats against individual music fans is not an effective way to resolve any problems associated with filesharing."

The Internet service providers and consumer groups share concerns over how such laws would be enforced, with the risk of penalising innocent Internet users. But more and more artists are coming out in defense of legal measures, echoing labels' comments that filesharing is hampering investment in new acts.

There are fears within the industry that the public divisions between artists could derail the long-running fight against piracy just when new laws are close.

Lily Allen has set up a blog titled "It's Not Alright," a reference to her first album Alright, Still, to collect the views of artists that support her contention that fraudulent business dealings. Local news services are quoting Amna Jallaf, Wartanian's lawyer, saying that a civil case has also been filed against Campo.

"Ms. Wartanian gave him around $1 million (Dh3.67 million) on the understanding he would manage and run the business," Jallaf said. "He took all the money and disappeared."

In a telephone interview with Abu Dhabi-based, Englishlanguage daily The National, Campo's wife Melissa was quoted saying the couple was unaware of the legal proceedings, which came four months after they left the Emirates.

"We had no idea there was a court case when we left the UAE,^ Melissa Butler explained. "We only found out there was an arrest warrant about two months ago. It came as a complete shock."

She also said the dispute centered on Wartanian's purchase of shares in CSM in 2000.

The company struggled in the years following the Sept. 11 attacks in New York in 2001 because fewer Westerners wanted to visit the Middle East at that time.

Campo's wife also claimed Wartanian later wanted to leave the company and asked that Campo buy out her shares in the firm, but he refused. "When you invest in a company, you take a chance that the company is going to do well, " she explained. "If it doesn't do well, then you don't just ask for your money back.

"We definitely don't owe her any money. We are speaking to lawyers in Washington. They believe the case may contravene international law."

Although there is no extradition treaty between the UAE and Spain, an agreement has been drafted and is due to be signed by representatives from both countries in the coming months.

However, the lack of a formal treaty would not necessarily prevent Campo from being deported should UAE authorities lodge a formal request.

Campo has remained in Spain and is now director of Wine Future, a popular two-day business conference for wine producers and experts.

It is to be held at the Fair and Exhibition Palace in La Rioja, Spain, in November. Wine critics including Oz Clarke and Steven Spurrier are expected to attend.

In 1997, Campo launched Connections Sports Services in Dubai, which later became Connections Sports and Music in 1999 and then Center Stage Management.

The firm managed sports and rock events under the different names.

Cohen Bounces Back

Three days after cutting short a show in Valencia because he was suffering from stomach cramps, Leonard Cohen was back on stage and celebrating his 75th birthday with 14,000 fans at a sold-out Palau St. Jordi in Barcelona.

After the Valencia show Sept. 17, Cohen was taken to the local Nueve de Octubre hospital by ambulance but was discharged the following morning. A spokesman for his tour said Cohen had suffered from food poisoning.

YouTube video shows Cohen performing the first part of "Bird On A Wire," one of his best-known songs, then sitting down on the edge of the stage for a few seconds before collapsing. His band stopped playing immediately and rushed to his aid.

A member of his band, Javier Mas, came out almost an hour later to tell the thousands of people gathered in the Luis Puig Velodrome that Cohen was suffering from a stomach complaint and would not return to the stage that night but hoped to reschedule the show for another time.

It was the fifth of six shows he played on the Spanish leg of his European tour, which were all promoted by Barcelona-based Doctor Music.

Company chief Neo Sala was kept up to speed on Cohen's recovery and on the morning of the show told Pollstar he was confident it would go ahead.

Canadian-born Cohen's career took off in the 1960s, but his retirement plans were thwarted when he discovered that £3.1 million ($5 million) of his pension fund had disappeared.

Despite winning a £5.5 million ($9 million) judgment against his former manager, he's not been able to collect the money.

After leaving Spain, Cohen's next show is scheduled for the BankAtlantic Center in Sunrise, Fla., Oct. 17.

Bluesfest Gets Permanent Home

After a year of battling red tape, the East Coast Roots and Blues Festival in Byron Bay will be allowed to move into its permanent home next year, in time to celebrate its 21st anniversary.

Co-founder Peter Noble says the 260-acre tea tree site is six times larger than its current site at Belongil Field.

It is an agricultural and livestock farm that also yields a rare Jelly Bush honey crop, which Noble says has a "mystical quality – it can be used to heal open wounds on the human skin."

While Noble says having a permanent home gives the acts that keep returning to the festival "a deeper sense of home, heart and belonging," it is believed he is annoyed that the local council capped daily attendance at 17,500 instead of the 20,000 he wanted.

Clubbing Together

Live music venues and nightclubs in two states are under fire as authorities try to curb alcohol-fueled violence.

In Victoria, small venues that showcase live acts are told to employ security guards, which can cost $250 an hour each.

A letter from the local live music industry to the Consumer Affairs Minister said that the move should target only larger venues, which typically have more violent incidents.

"The government must ensure that the law is proportionate to its intended purpose and does not unduly impact on small local venues to the detriment of the cultural life of the local community," the letter read in part.

The Queensland government froze all new applications to extend trading hours for the next 12 months. About 125 applications are before the Liquor Licensing Commission.

Virgin Re-brands Sydney Metro

Virgin Mobile struck a two-year deal to re-brand Sydney's Metro Theatre as the Virgin Mobile Metro.

Virgin customers get a members-only lounge and, at certain shows, free drinks and food, priority seating and meet-ups with acts at the 1,350-capacity club.

Metro owner Century Venues says the deal will put it on a stronger financial basis.

The Asian leg of Beyoncé's "I am..." tour will touch down in Kuala Lumpur's Bukit Jalil National Stadium Oct. 25, according to the show's local organizer, Marctensia.

It will be the first time Beyoncé will perform in Malaysia.

Two years ago, she was scheduled to appear in the nation's capital but the concert was canceled because of pressure from the government and Muslim groups regarding the singer's image, though publicly the reason for the cancellation was a "scheduling conflict."

Local media reported at the time that Beyonce refused to follow the government's strict dress code which prohibits revealing outfits for public performances. Instead, Beyoncé moved the concert to neighboring Indonesia.

Beyoncé said that she made a "major sacrifice" by agreeing to the dress guidelines because she wanted her Malaysian fans to see her show.

However, the concert isn't a sure thing just yet. Nasrudin Tantawi, the head of the Pan-Malaysian Islamic Party (PAS) that protested the previous Beyoncé concert, told AFP that the group "opposes the holding of such concerts and we will take action to prevent such a concert from taking place in Malaysia.

"This performance is not suitable for Muslims as her skimpy attire and behavior onstage are immoral and lead to unclean behavior."

Rocking Hard

Hard Rock International and Hotel Properties Ltd. announced the opening of a new Hard Rock Hotel and Hard Rock Cafe in Penang, Malaysia.

It will be the third Hard Rock Hotel in Asia.

The hotel will be located on five acres of property situated along a stretch of beach on the northern coast of Penang, a popular Southeast Asian resort destination.

The renovated six-story hotel will offer 233 rooms and 17 suites, almost all of which have beach views. The top floor will include the area's only hotel club floor, called the Kings Club. In addition, the hotel has the largest swimming pool in Penang, about 26,000 square feet, equipped with "sand islands" and cabanas.

The Hard Rock Cafe portion will offer the usual rock memorabilia collection that the brand is noted for.

Specialty items include a felt hat that Prince wore while recording "all the live tracks" for "Purple Rain," custom-made leather pants worn by Vince Neil during Motley Crue's Cruefest tour, and an outfit worn by Rob Zombie touring member Rob Nicholson for the 2005 Ozzfest tour.

cert tour in a very unlikely venue on Sept. 14.

The band played on the deck of the USS Missouri in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The battleship, which was decommissioned in 1990, is now a museum. Before Vamps used it as a stage, probably the boat's most famous purpose was as the site where a defeated Japan signed the surrender agreement with the Allies in Sept. 1945 in Tokyo Bay.

Surprisingly or not, the American media seemed totally uninterested in the irony.

The Vamps band features L'Arc en Ciel leader Hyde, Oblivion

Dust guitarist K.A.Z. and musicians associated with visual kei superstars Gackt and Yoshiki of X Japan.

The group performed 20 songs with a large American flag flying behind them and flanked by 16-inch guns.

The show concluded a tour that took in 60 cancerts, mostly in Japan and a few in the U.S.

Hyde said later that the symbolism inherent in the appearance was totally intentional.

"I think it's great that an instrument of war can be used to send out a message of peace like this."
