Ain't Love Grand

In a hastily planned and surprise wedding, complete with a convoy of buses to thwart the eyes of the public, Lyle Lovett and Julia Roberts tied the proverbial knot in Marion, Ind., June 27th, just hours before Lovett's scheduled concert at the Deer Creek Music Center outside Indianapolis. Roberts and Lovett decided to wed in Marion when one of Lovett's bus drivers, Larry Chandler, suggested the town, which was on the way between Detroit and Deer Creek and was convenient to Washington, D.C., where Roberts is filming "The Pelican Brief." Chandler is a member of Marion's St. James Lutheran Church, where the wedding took place. Willis Alan Ramsey performed "Angel Eyes" as Roberts walked down the aisle, escorted by actor Barry Tubb. Roberts, who met Lovett on the set of "The Player," joined her new husband on stage later that evening in full wedding regalia, and introduced him by saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, my husband, Lyle Lovett and his Large Band." Roberts left the stage only to return when the band broke into "Stand By Your Man," which she did, punctuating the song with a hug and kiss. During the concert, Lovett's band included a few riffs of "Pretty Woman," during the song "Here I Am," in honor of his new bride. Nancy Seltzer, Roberts' spokesperson said the most frustrating moment in the rapidly planned event was trying to convince the Associated Press in New York that her report of the marriage was legitimate. Seltzer finally put Susan Sarandon, who was one of the 75 guests at the wedding, on the phone and her familiar voice convinced them the story was legit. But a photographer for People magazine, Steve Kagan, knew the pairing was newsworthy, when he snapped photos of the couple at Deer Creek. Deer Creek security personnel confiscated Kagan's film, but a U.S. District Court Judge ruled the film should be returned to Kagan because the news value of the photos outweighs the couple's privacy interests. No immediate plans for a honeymoon were announced. Roberts returned to work June 29th and Lovett proceeded with his tour, which is scheduled to run through at least mid-August.

Whitney Houston Posts Victory Diet

The New York Post had to eat its words over a story published June 24th, which claimed Whitney Houston was treated at Miami

Beach's Mount Sinai Hospital for an overdose of prescription diet pills. The story in the Post asserted that Houston was taking the diet pills to help her lose the weight she had gained during her recent pregnancy. The singer's lawyer Sheldon Platt, said that Houston was outraged over the story and had filed a $60 million libel suit against the newspaper. Platt said, "She has never taken a diet pill in her life....It's total fabrication." The Post claimed Houston's post-pregnancy pudge problem was escalated when she had a chance encounter last month with a svelte Janet Jackson, who once dated hubby Bobby Brown. Post reporter Florence Anthony told USA Today June 29th, the Post is "standing, pretty much, behind our story....My sources are very legitimate." But the Post published a retraction the next day, "We can now report that Ms. Houston did not suffer an overdose of any pills and does not take diet pills." The Post also said that Houston was not admitted to any hospital and apologized for its errors. There was no immediate word if the lawsuit would now be dropped. The suit claims the Post report might hurt ticket sales for her upcoming tour which is scheduled to begin on July 5th.

Profitable Weekend Tooling Around

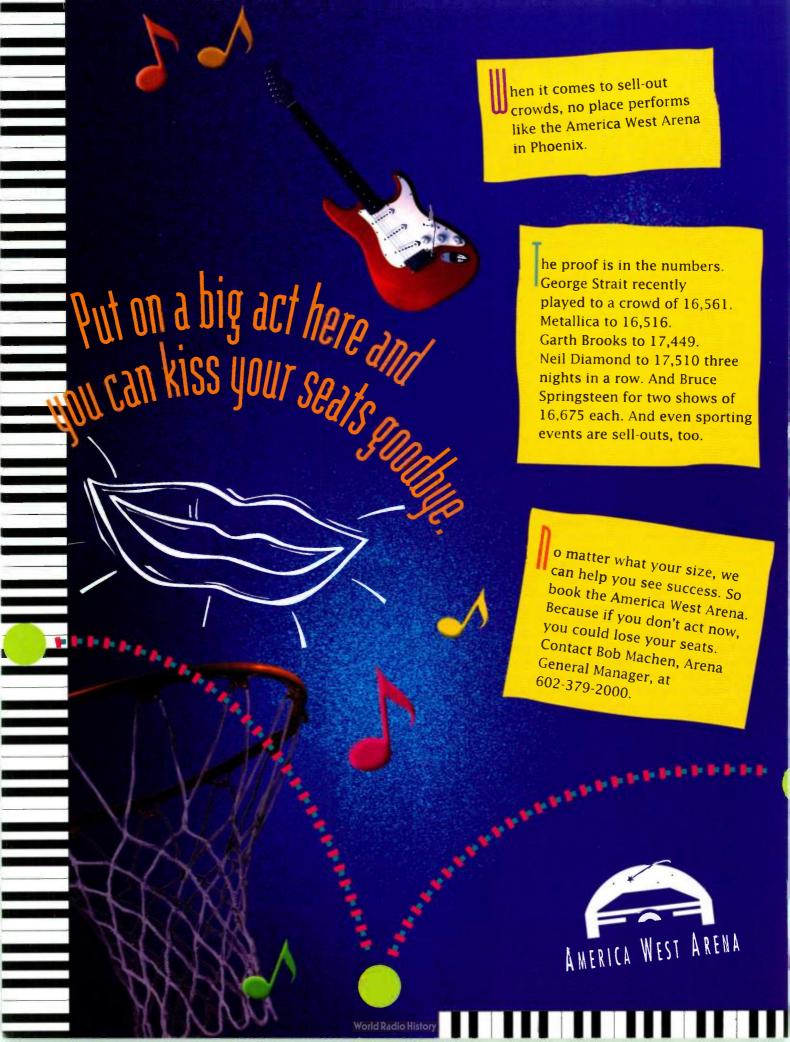

Tim Allen gets a big thumbs up from (L-R) Contemporary's Inv Zuckerman and Robin Tate (they must have made money), and Allen's manager Rick Messina. The comic sold 36,000 tickets for his June 17-19 shows at Riverport outside St. Louis, Sandstone near Kansas City, and Deer Creek outside Indianapolis.

Artist Profile

Karl Wallinger is taking his party, his World Party, on the road this summer and he's not doing it alone. For World Party's previous North American tours, the group has headlined small venues but this time out they are supporting 10,000 Maniacs on their summer shed tour. Wallinger said World Party decided to go on the road with the Maniacs because it was the happening thing to do, and it seemed to be a good match.

Wallinger, who formed World Party in 1985, got his first solo record deal with Ensign/Chrysalis while he was still the keyboard player with The Waterboys. "Nigel (Grainge) and Chris (Hill) were doing The Waterboys and they signed me because I played them some stuff before I played it for anyone else." Grainge was Ensign's managing director at the time and Hill was manager of A&R. Since 1985 World Party has essentially been a one-man-gig. Wallinger recorded by himself and only formed a "real" band for live dates. But things have changed. Today, World Party's nucleus is essentially Wallinger and his rhythm section, Dave Catlin-Birch, who plays bass, guitar and sings, and Chris Carrack on drums, both of whom worked on the new album, Bang!, and toured with World Party in 1990. "It's a lonely job if you're sitting there making music all on your own, all the time....I want World Party to grow into something else."

With his third album, Wallinger hopes to reach more fans while continuing to be lauded by the critics who have embraced World Party much quicker than the party poopers who program most radio stations. Of his music, Wallinger has been known to say, "The Beatles are why I am doing this." He has studied their music intensely, but what he really admires about the Fab Four is the effect their music had on people. He thinks The Beatles are an example of a band whose first intentions were to make music for the sake of the music. "All the fame and the rest of the madness was....part of the trappings." Wallinger gets bored watching people who are trying to make money instead of just trying to make music. Yet he is committed to making Bang! a success. "It would be nice to sell more records and that's why we are rolling up our sleeves and attacking things in a more scientific way. We've never really given ourselves a chance anyway. We make albums every three years, we come out on the road for two months and then we disappear again for three years. It's not exactly a blue-print for fame.'

With the help of its business team, World Party plans to be on the road for a full year in support of the album many critics are already putting on their 'best of' lists for 1993. Wallinger finds his manager, Steve Fargnoli of Pure Management, very supportive. "If we want to flip out and go mad and want to do a gig in the Antarctic, he will try and help me, but he will also warn me on how unfeasible it is." Fargnoli was instrumental in arranging a meeting between Wallinger and Steve Lillywhite, who has produced records for U2, The Psychedelic Furs and The Pogues, among others. Wallinger was "keen" on playing his new album for Lillywhite, and Fargnoli, who was having dinner with a friend of the producer's, passed the word along. Lillywhite went to Wallinger's studio in London and within an hour they were re-mixing five tracks. Wallinger enjoyed working with Lillywhite; he found his enthusiasm and his attitude refreshing. When they worked together, it was all about the music. "It's our own place. It's not like the clock was on and it was $1,500 a day or anything....I think he quite enjoyed that. It was a bit of a holiday for him."

World Party also has a good relationship with its agents, Dan Weiner at Monterey Peninsula Artists in North America, and Wallinger's old friend, Ian Flooks at Wasted Talent in London. But Wallinger makes it clear that the final decisions for World Party rest safely in his hands, except when it comes to selling his record. "I don't actually want any input....I'd spend 24 hours a day worrying about radio formats....That's not my job....I don't want to control my career because it is so specialized these days. There are so many radio formats and I don't give a shit about them....I made the album....I'm happy with it. And whatever they want to do with it in this crazy world, then they'll do it....But if it's a total fuck up at the end of the day, I want to know why."

The historically reclusive and interview shy Wallinger is looking forward to increased interest from the media on this tour. He finds having greater access to the media an interesting game to be involved in. "Having the attention, or not, of the public, via the media is an interesting piece of power to have." In the past, he shied away from the media because he didn't want the focus to be on him as a pop or rock star. He wanted the focus to be on World Party's music.

And just a few dates into the tour with 10,000 Maniacs, World Party seems to be getting the attention Wallinger is looking for. He said they seem to be playing to a lot of people who have never heard them before, or people who have heard about them but never seen them, or never linked a song with the group. "There is a lot of introduction going on there....it's a good thing." But Wallinger insists World Party must not throw caution to the wind. He finds that if he puts the wrong set together it can be a real downer. Some of Wallinger's songs are whimsical and sullen, simultaneously. They can be idealistic and naive, up and positive or gloomy and heavy. But he insists that even the gloomy ones are tinted by wit, word play and amusing images. Like one of his favorite television shows, "The Simpsons," Wallinger's music deals with serious issues, but never loses touch with the humorous nature of life, something he refers to as "Beatlesque." He also takes the name of his band literally; he doesn't want any specific audience for his music. He simply and sincerely says, "It's World Party....We came to boogie."

1993 Mid-Year Business Analysis

Where Have All The Ticket Buyers Gone?

Everyone in the concert industry had hoped that the worst of times was behind us when 1991 finally came to a painful close. The economy appeared to be improving in many areas of the country in 1992 and the talent pool was stronger. Going into 1993, cautious optimism about the future had become central in the minds of talent buyers. It's always nice to be optimistic but in today's world it's a requirement that buyers be cautious. Every deal has become critical because the volume just wasn't there during the first half of this year to easily make up for mistakes. In fact the business generated in 1993 by the Top 20 tours represents a drop of about 28 percent from the first half of 1992. And that's not even the bad news. It's also about 10 percent less than the similar period in 1991 which everyone had hoped would be the industry's low point. Or to look at it another way, this year's Top 20 tours barely equaled the same dollar volume as that generated by the Top 10 tours in 1990 before the recession really hit.

Why The Drop Off?

The easiest explanation is the lack of stadium-level shows. Only the Grateful Dead and Paul McCartney ventured on to the outdoor stadium circuit and neither did enough markets to make up for the lack of competition. The biggest arena tours were mostly turned in by artists who have been around for decades or who have toured frequently in recent years. What that adds up to is a lack of excitement in the marketplace. Part of the problem can also be attributed to the continuing contraction of the concert business into the three or four months of summer when the shed circuit is in full operation. Increasingly it appears that artists are gearing their tour plans for summer amphitheatre schedules and simply ignoring the other eight months of the year. Based on current trends, it now looks like better than two-thirds of the concert industry's total ticket sales volume will be generated during the summer season.

The Biggest Shows Of The Year

The Grateful Dead had the biggest concert gross during the first half of the year with the nearly $3.3 million they generated at the Sam Boyd Silver Bowl in Las Vegas. All but one city on their tour made the Top 100 grosses and, in fact, the Dead had the top six grosses so far this year. Country music also continued to show increasing box office strength with seven tours in the Top 25 representing about 18 percent of the total top end of the concert business. That's more than double the numbers posted last year.

Looking Ahead To The Second Half Of The Year

Although there aren't any stadium tours on the books, there is a nice assortment of major artists who have either just begun tours or will do so within the next few months. Van Halen, Billy Joel, and Rod Stewart should all post big numbers. In addition we can expect more from Lollapalooza, Jimmy Buffett, The Dead and other acts who have already started their tours. If you are looking for new blood on the horizon--well there really isn't much. The Spin Doctors are doing well, the H.O.R.D.E. tour may surprise some people, and the two rap/R&B packages, one headed by LL Cool J and Naughty By Nature, and the other by Dr. Dre and Run-D.M.C. should do good business. But the best news of all is that the concert industry's only Jurassic Park-level attraction is returning to the road later this year. Garth Brooks has thus far been the only act who has proven he can truly generate massive box office excitement and has already sold about $10 million worth of tickets for his tour which begins at the end of this month.

When you travel to the Motor City, either of our models will make your road trip most successful.

Garth Brooks co-manager Pam Lewis is venturing into the restaurant and cable television business through her PLA Media company. PLA and the Country Music Foundation are involved in a country-theme restaurant, Country Star Cafe, which will open early next year in Nashville. Plans for the cafe include a museum, a showcase club and a Boot Walk Hall of Fame. Lewis has also joined prominent Los Angeles surgeon/author Vicki Hufnagel in launching the Women's Cable Network, which will create its own programming and spinoff specials to other channels. But Lewis' new ventures will have to compete for her attention, with her July 25th wedding to Andy Frances, her partner in North-South Records, a new Atlantic venture. The wedding will have an antebellum theme complete with hoop skirts, Civil War uniforms, period tuxedos, and cuisine from the Civil War era.... Miami has one nearly new arena and may soon have two more. Owners of the NBA's Miami Heat say they want to leave their home at the Miami Arena by 1998 for a proposed new $100 million arena. Blockbuster CEO H. Wayne Huizenga has a new NHL franchise which will begin play this fall at the Miami Arena. Huizenga, however, isn't interested in combining forces with the Heat on a new building, and instead has announced plans to build his own arena by 1996 for the hockey franchise..... Gov. Lowell Weicker Jr. and Francis Murray, a former minority owner of the New England Patriots, are proposing a 65,000-seat stadium in the Hartford area in a bid to lure the team. Murray said he had made a $133 million offer for the Pats. The NFL has said that Foxboro Stadium, southwest of Boston, is not adequate for pro football. The Pat's have a lease to play at Foxboro until 2002, and stadium officials say they intend to make sure the team honors it.... Gov. Mario Cuomo wants to turn a 30-acre rail yard on Manhattan's West Side into a $1 billion sports and entertainment center in hopes of keeping the New York Yankees in the city. A threat to leave New York has created an urgency because, despite a winning record at Yankee Stadium, the teams attendance has been down this season. The governor was to meet with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner to discuss the stadium idea.... Executive Interview 📥

TICKETMASTER CEO FRED ROSEN SPEAKS HIS MIND

First of all, what's the status of negotiations to sell Ticketmaster?

We're definitely exploring some things, but we have nothing to announce at the moment.

Have you done an evaluation of Ticketmaster's change in policy to start refunding service charges on cancelled shows?

We made that policy last summer and said that we would review it annually but I probably will not review it until November. Clearly, with the current economic conditions, we will be very careful before modifying it. Not only do we have the issue of refunding service charges when groups don't show up, but we also have to face natural disasters like the hurricane that hit Florida and the Gulf Coast. A lot of shows got cancelled and we refunded over 100,000 tickets. One of the by-products of refunding service charges is that not only do you have to face the fact that an artist may not show up, but you're also underwriting natural catastrophes. I'm not quite sure that's our role, but for now that's our policy.

I take it that you have now factored the expense of cancellations in as a cost of doing business?

I have factored it in as a cost of doing business and if it remains modest, I'm not going to readily change the policy. I used to find it interesting when shows cancelled and service charges weren't refunded, the press never blamed the group. They seemed to blame the ticket company and very few writers would question why the group didn't show up. Why did they blow it off? Why was the group being irresponsible? From a public relations point of view, I'm not sure how much credit Ticketmaster gets from the public for accepting the burden on this. Certainly in the industry it generates goodwill, but I'm not quite sure how much. We provide a service, and we sell front to back. I think people seem to equate the service charges they pay with where they sit, as opposed to recognizing our service is the same for all seats. I mean you just can't sell only the tickets in the first half of the house. I had some guy say 'Hey I wasn't going to pay you $3 a ticket to sit in the back of the arena, so I went to a broker and I paid $80, but I got good seats.' It's like I'm getting a lousy seat, ergo Ticketmaster is bad. As opposed to saying, they're providing me a service and what we're giving people is time; the one thing that's not replaceable today. We make tickets very accessible for the public. We sold 48 million tickets last year and we expect to sell 55 million this year. People obviously find our service convenient. But some people think we invented the last 30 rows. And reporters never seem to point out that their newspapers don't feel any moral compunction about keeping the money the promoter paid for their ads on a show that got cancelled. You can't go to the radio station and get back your money because the show didn't happen. It doesn't work like that. But somewhere in the process, the consumer press took the attitude that, as a cost of doing business, we should give back the service charge.

If you had Axl Rose in the same room with you, what would you like to tell him?

I really don't want to single him out, but you can use his group as a good example of the problem, because they probably cancelled more dates in the last 18 months than any other band. Some promoters would also point out that they also played more dates, and we should all be happy. I believe that if an artist commits to do a show, they have the responsibility to perform. It's real simple. If you don't want to do the date, don't put it on sale. It's different if you're dealing with situations like when Jerry Garcia got sick and the Grateful Dead didn't play. The Dead have always been very conscious of their fans. If someone's ill, you don't make that an issue. That's life. But some artists have not been as responsible as they should be. Our job is to provide a distribution service to put tickets in the hands of the public as easily as possible. The promoter's job is to make sure that the widest number of people know that this event is coming. The building's job is to provide a showcase and a safe environment. And the artist's job is to show up and do a good show! When you look at some of the performers who keep touring and have large followings, whether it be Neil Diamond or Jimmy Buffett--what do these people give their fans? They give them shows. They give them a sense of...it's a great night out. There's a responsibility that these performers feel to the people that come to their shows year after year. And ultimately, look how well they've done. They fulfill their fan's expectations. You should not have to worry whether someone's going to show up. It's important for all these groups to learn that they've got a public responsibility. Believe me, I did not enjoy making the decision to refund service charges, but the reality is, in the position that Ticketmaster occupies in America, someone had to stand up and protect the public. I looked around and found there were not a whole lot of people who could do that, so we stood up and did it.

Executive Interview

How do you answer the industry complaints that service charges have gotten too high as a percentage of the ticket price?

I don't think they've greatly increased. We froze our prices in '91 and '92. We selectively raised them a quarter a ticket in 1993. The fact of the matter is that ticket prices themselves have gotten higher. If you look at ticket prices ten years ago and compare them to what they are today, I don't know if the ratios are significantly different. I want to point out something that's very interesting which we did last year for the Guns N' Roses / Metallica show at the Rose Bowl. We made a point of having a box office open at a facility where traditionally there had been none for stadium shows--where people could buy a ticket without a service charge just to see who would come. A radio station did a promotion over it and we still sold 97% of the tickets through our outlets and by telephone. This one kid was interviewed and he was asked 'How are your tickets?,' and he says 'My tickets are great.' The interviewer then asked, 'Which is your favorite band, Guns N' Roses or Metallica?' The kid drove an hour from Orange County to come to the Rose Bowl to get these tickets. And he said, 'I'm not going to see the show. I can scalp these tickets for $100 a piece.' He was then asked, 'Why did you drive an hour to come here? Why didn't you go to your local Ticketmaster?' His response was, 'Why, and pay those scumbags $4 a ticket?' Now there's a great philosophy. We are an easy target for some people. But the public is smarter than that and our service keeps growing. We don't require facility box offices to be closed. We don't require in any of our contracts that's there's no first day of sale at the box office. The reason certain buildings do that is they don't want the crowds and the problems that go with them. The way our business keeps growing shows that the public embraces our service. Ticketmaster serves, not instead of the box office, but in lieu of the box office. We provide an alternative to driving to a box office. And we don't say that our service is free, or cheap--it is what it is, and yet every single year our sales go up! The writers who love to core us a new backside complaining about what we charge, work for newspapers that are accepting classified ads from the people who got good tickets and then scalp them at four or five times face value. It's a double standard. What a bunch of hypocrites! The public understands that the one commodity they have that they cannot replace is time. If you put an outlet on the corner that's charging three dollars a ticket and you buy four tickets, that's twelve dollars. Balance that with how much time it would take to travel to the box office? We have nearly 2600 outlets and 1800 telephone operators. The thing the public complains about is not the service charge but where they sit. Does anybody who complains about our service have seats in the first half of the house? No, they're all complaining because they got bad seats. No one complains about the service, they all complain about the cost if the seats aren't good! We've created a service that the public now sees as a necessity, but they complain about paying for it. Our state-of-the-art service is very expensive to deliver. Remember that seven out of eight calls are just for information and generate no revenue.

A portion of Ticketmaster's service charge revenue is shared with facilities and even large promoters. How do you answer complaints from agents and managers who are angry that you are not sharing that revenue stream with their artists?

I find this to be truly one of the most amazing complaints I've heard in my life! What does an artist need money from a ticket company for? The artist can set the ticket price at whatever they want it to be. Number one, I don't have a contract with the artist and number two, if the artist wants a dollar more, let them put a dollar more on the face value of the ticket. It's ludicrous for agents to say they should have a piece of this. There's a great legal word called obfuscation-which is when you don't want to point to the truth, you point to another person or issue and identify them as the problem. There are tours out today that are demanding 93/7 or 92/8 deals from promoters. You have to be crazy to make an investment in anything where you have real money to lose on the down side and have 7-8% possible on the upside. The fact of the matter is that since 1980 there have been basically only two new players in the music business, MTV and Ticketmaster. There are no new promoters. I think we're down to less than 15 major arena level promoters left in America. The reason is because the acts want more and more of the money. The old days when a promoter would take an act and lose money on the club level but build the relationship and then work with them again in a small theatre and maybe lose money there and maybe start to make money in a 5000 seat building and then make some money in an arena, and then they get to a stadium or multiple arena level and you could make enough to cover the entire history of your investment. The problem now is that the acts who can do multiples or stadiums, don't want to share anything but very small pieces with the promoters who helped them get there. What choice do the promoters have? They have to look for new revenue streams. The promoters and buildings helped build my business, so naturally I'm going to be looking out for their interests more than the artists. You've got a situation today where the agents squeeze the promoters and play one off the other which often puts them in a position of making ludicrous deals. Then they get upset because the promoters have to find alternative ways to make money because there's no way they can make enough money from just promoting the act. It's insanity! One day everybody is going to wake up and there are going to be very few promoters left. We're coming off some tough years, so where can the promoters look for help? They're all my friends. The agents didn't build Ticketmaster. In the '80s when I got into this business, agents said we need two things. We need the ability to sell tickets quickly and we need good auditing systems so we know where our money is. I gave them both and now they're angry because I make money. I gave them what they wanted and now they want a piece of us. That's not going to happen. Agents perform an important job, but I really question whether they understand this process is essentially feeding on itself and it's going to eat itself. As a business, if we are not all strong then we're all weak. If promoters as a group aren't strong, where do the new acts come from? They are the ones who bear the financial risks, but if agents keep making 93/7 deals, I don't know anybody in his right mind, in any business, who could keep taking that kind of risk. So who will wind up promoting the acts--the record companies. Time will tell.

Do you feel Ticketmaster has become a scapegoat for the concert industry's problems?

I think we're more the lightning rod than the scapegoat. It's become easy to blame things on us. If I were to believe the press, the only things that I'm sure we did NOT do was set the Hindenburg on fire, sink the Titanic, and I think we missed the recession in '56. Other than that, almost everything that's gone wrong in the world was probably the result of higher service charges. Agents and managers are all asking themselves, 'how did we allow this to happen, and can't we have some control over them?' That's really the root of all this. We made the universe of dollars bigger in this business because we knew the public would pay for service, convenience and value.

What's your assessment of the concert business so far this year?

I don't think it's as strong as it was last year. Except for Paul McCartney and the Grateful Dead, there are no stadium shows. I think we've seen a number of acts not selling as strong as they have in the past. We're seeing a lot of the same acts coming out over and over again. We are faced with the fact that there are not a lot of new arena or amphitheater headliners being developed to the extent we saw ten years ago. And you can't keep bringing back the same acts unless you bring something special with them. I think everybody knows which groups are selling and which aren't. If the videos have become more important than the music, then why should people pay to go see something they can see at home for nothing, especially when they believe what they're seeing at home is better than what they see in person.

Are you among those concerned about the fact that the industry is not developing many new headliners with sustainable careers?

There is a school of thought that says that MTV has destroyed the live touring business. Clearly a lot of people don't want to talk about this on the record because managers and agents have acts that are on MTV. Record companies want MTV to play their videos, etc. But think about what's going on. If you go back to the '60s and '70s, radio was king. The Doors and Cream played on the same radio stations as Barbra Streisand and Ray Charles. Radio drove the music in the '60s and '70s, but it's so fragmented today, that I don't know to what extent radio breaks new acts any more. If I like gypsy music with cymbals, there's a radio station, if I like gypsy music without cymbals, there's a radio station, if I like music from 1981 thru 1983, there's a radio station for that. The way careers were developed on television was that the groups would come on Dick Clark or Hullabaloo or Shindig, and they would essentially just stand there and they would just mouth the words to their songs so that the kids were really curious to see the bands when they played. And with radio you couldn't see your favorite artist, you had to listen to them. Now MTV can play that band's video until everyone is sick of it. You have motion picture directors spending a million dollars making videos. Do you think that artist in a live performance can be better than the video? There's not a chance! All these groups and their record companies are going to ultimately have to decide what's more important. If they're just interested in selling records in the short term, MTV can sell records. But if they're interested in helping an artist develop a full long term career, that includes live performances, merchandising, etc., then they have to understand an artist's career is condensed into a shorter time frame by instant overexposure on MTV instead of gradually developing a fan base by touring and making live contact with fans. If you talk to a lot of teenagers about concerts, they aren't real enthused because they're smart enough to know the acts can't be better than their videos. If we don't re-think this business, then we're all in trouble. MTV can be percieved as a carnivore, and carnivores eat their young.

Obviously, you don't want your MTV. But certainly if you look at which acts are doing the biggest tours, it becomes clear we are a dinosaur driven industry.

Someday I'm going to write a book, it's called Dead Guys Don't Tour. It used to be that acts would put out an album, the album would get airplay and sell, then they would tour to support the album, that would lead to merchandising and ticket sales. Today, you put out an album, it rotates on MTV--and you may or may not have the ability to sell tickets, even if it's in the top 10. I'm not a manager, God knows I know nothing about the record business, so as soon as I open my mouth there will be another 500 people shooting at me, but if I had an act, I wouldn't let them go on MTV. Or if I let them go on MTV, it would only be for an interview while they played the current record. If you want to see this act perform, then come and see us. This industry needs to take a real serious look at itself. Do we have a future? There's all kinds of albums being sold but the acts don't sell tickets. Are we saying that people don't go out any more? I don't believe that! Everyone is talking about virtual reality and 500 video channels and other things that are coming that will have an impact on live shows. What they don't realize is that entertainment is the last safe form of mass tribal gathering in America. In today's world, if you stop at a light in Los Angeles, you're going to look around to make sure that you are okay--the world we live in is a lot tougher and a lot more dangerous. You can go to a ball game and can root for your home team--you can share that experience with people next to you, in front of you, behind you, without worrying about anything bad happening to you because everyone is there to share, as a group, that experience. Same with a concert, same with a movie, same with any live event. Some of these events, like baseball, are brought to you free on television and you don't have to go, but people do because there's this tribal sense of gathering. The ability to share things in a group in a safe environment is an important element to our society. I don't believe for one minute that even if I have 1000 channels available that I'm not going to leave my home. People can't spend their whole lives alone. The live business is not going to go away.

To what extent does pay-per-view impact the concert market?

Pay-per-view won't impact the concert market until they bring down the price to six or seven dollars, and even then, it won't have a material effect on the live market. We're dealing with the masses here, not the guys who work in the industry who can go home to big screen video rooms with state-of-the-art surround sound. Look at 98% of America. Most people watch pay-per-view programs on a regular television set. If they're watching a live concert or event, what most people are actually seeing is a video, because that's their delivery system. And most people aren't going to pay twenty dollars to see a video. There's no impact. What are you going to do, pipe in the smell of grass into their living room to make it more like a concert. Until they have fifty million homes wired and bring the cost down, it won't have much impact. And even when that happens, it won't keep people from going to an arena. Six people sitting around a television set in your living room is just not the same thing as sitting in Radio City or Madison Square Garden experiencing the event live. You can watch the Super Bowl, the World Series, or the NBA Championships in your home for nothing. Yet if most of the public could get tickets, they'd be there in a second.

What are Ticketmaster's plans concerning the sale of other kinds of merchandise through your ticket selling network?

We just made a deal with the Chicago On-Line computer network where fans can buy Chicago Cubs and Chicago White Sox tickets by using their home PC. Ultimately it will include merchandise as well. We think that the future in our business is to provide access to tickets in all mediums. We think PCs are important, we think telephones are important, both in their present form and the way they will ultimately be, which is more like PCs. We think that using television as a medium to sell tickets and merchandise within some form of a shopping channel might also be interesting. We recognize that we have significant obligations to our clients to continue to push the envelope, to make things more accessible to the public, and we're exploring all those areas. We're already selling records, videos, and movie tickets.

I take it you see a real future for home shopping?

You have to recognize that it's 1993, the economy is not really better, people have to work harder to make less, and that what they want is convenience. Barry Diller is a very bright guy. There's a reason he bought into the QVC Network. What's home shopping? It's a transaction driven business delivered into the comfort of your own home. Ticketmaster has been doing that for years, but by telephone. We probably have the most sophisticated operator driven front end sales system in America. The reason for our success is we are very proficient in processing large amounts of orders in a relatively short period of time, which is the key to transaction driven businesses. Barry's going to build a very successful company because he's very smart and he understands the medium. OVC does a billion dollars in sales, Home Shopping Network does a billion dollars in sales, and we do a billion dollars in sales. But retail in America today is a trillion dollar business. For QVC to grow to 3 billion, or 5 billion, or 10 billion dollars is only restricted by their ability to process the orders. The ones who survive will have the understanding and the vision to make this work. It's one of the reasons Ticketmaster is so successful. We had the discipline and stayed focused on what we needed to do in building this business. We provide an effective mass distribution system at reasonable prices. It's not free and it may not be cheap, but it's not very expensive either.

Do you think some people are wary of you because you are the biggest, and in some cases, the only game in town when it comes to ticketing?

What makes America great is that people have a right to make their own opportunities. We provide a service that's clearly been accepted by the public. The industry needs to understand that we have nothing without our relationships--with the buildings and the promoters. All our contracts eventually expire and they can all go find alternatives. You have to remember that in 1982 Ticketron had all the business and now they're gone. Why is that? The day you forget that you are interacting as part of a group is the day you start your downfall. If we don't all learn to live together, we're going to wake up one morning and find that a lot of the people we were depending on aren't there anymore. The truth is that the 90s are going to be tougher, and those people without a vision and a focus on where they're going aren't going to be around. That's a plain simple fact. The one word that is the key to this is flexibility. In the next 12 to 48 months as we begin to define what the new information highways will be, we will set the rules for the next 15 years. Whoever wins the technological races in the next few years is going to dictate the game for well into the next century. We all need to pay attention to this. We are at a crossroads in time now, where what happens next is going to redefine who's a player and who isn't.

One person it didn't go over well with was Garth Brooks who tested his populist status when he issued a statement last week saying he didn't want any of his future releases sold through stores that deal in used CDs unless they agree to pay artist royalties on the recycled music..... The Overland Entertainment company has created a new Overland-Overseas Division to provide its services for projects in London, South Africa, Thailand, Australia and The Dominican Republic.... The sixth annual Foundations Forum hard music convention will be held September 9-11 at the Hilton in Burbank, Calif. KISS will be among those showcasing at this year's confab..... Boy George has been added as a third keynote speaker for the July 21st opening of the New Music Seminar in NYC.

It Loses Something In The Translation

The Sorry Music convention held recently in Boca Raton, Fla., brought out the best in their senior executives, when they joined Gloria Estefan on stage to cha-cha the night away. The brave quartet (L-R) Sony Music senior marketing VP Torn McGuiness, Columbia senior VP of sales Rich Kudolla, Epic senior VP of sales Jim Scully, and Sony senior VP of sales/distribution Danny Yarbrough.

Short Items Of Note

This Mid-Year special edition of POLLSTAR is a double issue. Although the office will be open next week, there will be no issue dated July 12th..... Nina Simone was hospitalized with burns after a June 26th fire at her villa in the south of France. A police official said that she was not seriously hurt. She was rescued by her bodyguard from the blaze, which completely destroyed her home near Marseille..... 38,000 kids, some clutching small fuzzy replicas of their favorite T-Rex, strived for a glimpse of Barney when he made a rare public appearance at the Minnesota State Fairgrounds. Barney was the main attraction at "FamilyFest '93," a benefit for Minneapolis Children's Medical Center. Last year's event drew only 400 people but this year with the Barn, they raised more than $100,000..... Apparently, both weekly Variety and Daily Variety are significantly scaling back their coverage of the music business. Respected L.A.-based music editor Bruce Haring and N.Y.-based music writer Kevin Zimmerman were let go at the end of June. Weekly Variety had given up its venue coverage several years ago and in recent months had all but eliminated its music coverage. The change at Daily Variety, however, came as something of an industry surprise..... Patti Scialfa will release her solo album in the coming weeks, but it doesn't look like Mrs. Springsteen will be touring to support it now that word has leaked out she is preggers with Boss baby No. 3, which is due in January.

Nashville Agents Honor Their Own

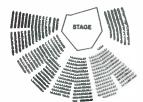

Nashville Association of Talent Directors "Agent Of The Year" award is presented to Dick Beacham (center) of The Beacham Agency, at the June NATD meeting. Among the Nashville agents and NATD board members are (L-R) Sonny Simmons, Tony Conway, Billy Deaton, Tanja Crouck, Jack McFadden who also won "The Hubert Long Award," Steve Dahl, Claudia Beacham, Steve Thurman, Rob Robinson, Ray Singer, and Miles Ball.

Garth Addresses The Troops

Fans are seen here listening as Garth Brooks addresses his Pacific Northwest flock live via satellite from Nashville. About 2,500 fans waited to buy tickets at an overnight party June 18th, held inside the Tacoma Dome. Every fan who entered the dome received a randomly numbered bracelet for the ticket lottery the next morning. The August 3-4 shows sold out instantly.

A Study Of Concerts In Stadiums & Arenas

A primary source of operating revenues for stadiums and arenas is from non-tenant events, such as concerts, family shows and motor-sport shows. In a survey done by Price Waterhouse, managers at all facilities which house NFL, NBA, NHL, and Major League Baseball teams were asked for statistics on various issues including facility utilization, attendance, ticket prices, concessions and novelty sales, and parking revenue. The average number of concert days per year in stadiums was 3 and average attendance was 41,528. At arenas the number of concerts per year was much higher, 27.7, ranging from 11 to 47 per year. Attendance per arena concert averaged 10,930. The average price per ticket, after taxes, for concerts at stadiums is $21.95. The average price per ticket at arena concerts is $20.70. The average concession per cap sale at stadium concerts is $4.10. That is significantly higher than the $2.25 per person average for arena shows. Interestingly, the average per cap for novelty items is just reversed. At stadium concerts the average is $3.87 while at arena shows it is $5.04 per person. Parking revenue from stadium concerts is higher than any other sporting or non-sporting event, with an average of $7.67. In arenas, parking per car averages $3.60, and is about the same for all types of events. Facility managers were also asked, if in the next five years, they expected the number of concerts in their facility to increase, decrease or remain the same? Two thirds of the stadium managers said they expected business to increase, while the same percentage of arena managers think it will remain the same. Given current trends, both groups may be overly optimistic.

Legal Griefs

Two companies have been fined $7,500 each for ticket scalping and have been barred from selling tickets in New Jersey unless they get a state license. The cases stem from charges filed by the New Jersey Division of Consumer Affairs in July 1992, in connection with Bruce Springsteen's concerts at the Brendan Byrne Arena. Showcase Entertainment of Easton, Penn., and ABC Ticket Co. of Wilmington, Del., offered the $28.50 tickets for up to $350. New Jersey state law permits licensed agencies to add only 20 percent or $3, whichever is greater, to the face value. The out-of-state agencies had claimed they should not be required to follow New Jersey law but the courts disagreed. Two other companies have already settled and paid fines in excess of $30,000..... Cathy Yvonne Stone aka Jett Williams, the illegitimate daughter of Hank Williams Sr., reached an out-ofcourt settlement June 22nd that ends her eight-year fight with Hank Jr. over sharing in her father's copyright royalties. No dollar amount was released but observers think it could approach seven figures. Williams' isn't the only country heir in the news. Under Tennessee law, Conway Twitty's widow is entitled to one-third of her late husband's assets, even though she was not provided for in his will since it was drawn up five years before she married the late singer. A family spokesperson says Twitty's four children don't intend to contest her claim to a portion of his estate.... Wilson Pickett pled guilty to reduced charges in a drunken driving accident in which he struck an elderly man in Englewood, N.J., in April 1992. Under the plea bargain, prosecutors will recommend that he be sentenced to 364 days in jail, and be required to enter an in-patient alcohol treatment program. The singer is also due in court July 7th on charges that he was drunk when he drove across the lawn of his neighbor, Englewood Mayor Donald Aronson, in 1991..... Boyz II Men singer, Wanya "Squirt" Morris, was recently cleared of charges that he beat up a longtime friend in an argument over a book the friend had written. Morris testified that he never laid a hand on Earl Pittman, and had gone to Pittman's apartment to tell him to stop harassing his grandmother. Pittman said a book he plans to publish about their years growing up in a north Philadelphia housing project sparked the fight. The judge based his verdict on Pittman's delay in seeking medical attention. "He waited more than a week after the incident to see a doctor," the judge said..... Victor Willis, the former lead singer for the Village People was acquitted by a San Francisco Superior Court jury June 30th, of charges he raped a woman after a one-week relationship. The woman accused Willis, who used to wear a police uniform on stage with the Village People before reportedly being thrown out of the group for being straight, of attacking her October 25th after they had an argument over $500 that the woman asked Willis to invest for her. Willis denied receiving any money, and said he did not know how the woman suffered her bruises and black eyes. Willis said that on the night of the alleged rape, the woman was angry over his concern about her excessive drinking, and that she became violent and started picking up things and throwing them against the wall. The jury ended in a deadlock on the assault charges against Willis..... Eric "Eazy-E" Wright has been ordered to pay annual child support payments of about $58,000. During the hearings, Wright denied he was the father of a 2-year-old Nebraska girl, but blood tests confirmed the kinship. The rapper also testified that his assets had been depleted, but the judge did not reduce the order, which was said to be the largest ever obtained by the L.A. DA's office..... Bruce Child, the father of a 13-year-old boy who died from injuries suffered at the January 1991 AC-DC concert in Salt Lake City, is arguing that Creative Artists Agency is trying to silence his concerns about festival seating. CAA made an out-ofcourt settlement with Child in January, and last month asked a judge to order Child not to disseminate any info he obtained on CAA's business dealings. Child's attorney argued that the agency wanted everything sealed because it shows they have the power to stop festival seating. CAA says its request has nothing to do with festival seating and the agency doesn't care if Child speaks out on the subject, it just doesn't want its "trade secrets" leaking out.

Obituaries

G.G. Allin, 37, the East Village punk rocker best known for his indecent behavior on stage has died from an apparent drug overdose. Allin's body was found June 28th at a NYC apartment on St. Mark's Place. Allin, whose real name was Kevin Michael Allin, was known for several highly publicized arrests for defecating on stage and throwing his feces at the audience..... Wong Ka Kui, 31, lead vocalist for the Hong Kong-based group Beyond, died June 30th in a Tokyo hospital. He had been rushed to the hospital June 24th, after falling 10 feet from a platform and hitting his head during a TV program rehearsal. A spokesperson for Fuji Television said Wong, who suffered from a cerebral hemorrhage, had been in a coma since his admittance to the hospital.... The last of the great Delta bluesmen, James "Son" Thomas, 66, died June 26th at a Greenville, Miss., nursing home. Thomas' death came less than a week after a month-long stay at a Greenville hospital where he had been admitted following a massive stroke. In September 1992, just two months after Thomas had a benign brain tumor removed, he was back on stage at the Mississippi Delta Blues Festival where he was the only performer to play every year since its inception in 1977.

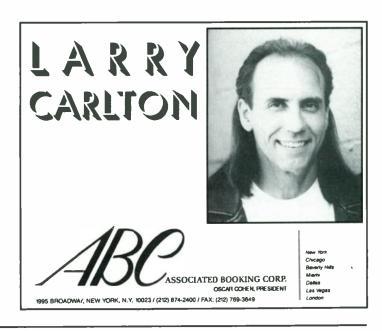

Contemporary's Grand Reopening Of Sandstone

Glenn Frey gives kudos to the Contemporary Group on their grand reopening of Sandstone Amphitheatre in Kansas City, Missouri. Frey and former Eaglemate Joe Walsh performed June 11th at Contemporary's first show since taking over and remodeling the venue. (L-R) Local co-promoter Chris Fritz of New West Presentations, Contemporary co-owner Irv Zuckerman, Frey, and Contemporary co-owner Steve Schankman.

Getting To The Core Of The Problem

Organizers of Apple Aid, a country-music concert in Orwell, Vermont designed to raise funds for local apple growers, pulled the plug two days prior to the June 26th show because of poor advance ticket sales. Festival organizer William Zahn told POLLSTAR most of the pre-production costs were donated by people in the community, but the advance sales wouldn't cover the cost of the headliner, Shenandoah. Zahn said he needed to sell 700 tickets to cover his production costs, and at the time he decided to cancel the show, only 262 were sold. "Granted this is an out-in-the-sticks kind of area, but a lot of the local people were going to come just to support the event." Zahn said that his goal was accomplished, in that the plight of the 28 growers behind the benefit, who produce more than half of the state's roughly $10 million apple crop, was brought to the attention of the general public. The "Apple Aid Foundation" is seeking non-profit status and now hopes to raise funds through non-concert related activities.

The ROD STEWART Unplugged tour of North America has a decidedly European air about it. The tour is being presented by Blockbuster Entertainment and is being produced by Stewart's managers, Stiefel-Phillips Entertainment, and major European promoter Marcel Avram of Mama Concerts in Munich, Germany. Although Avram has an office in Los Angeles, this is the first time we're aware of that he's had his hand in an entire tour over on this side of the pond. Though it was originally thought that RONNIE WOOD would be on all of Rod's dates, it now appears that he will just "show up" at selected shows. When Rod rolls through Michigan, he may also be making concert history in Detroit. He is tentatively scheduled to play September 25th at Tiger Stadium. If it happens, that would be the first musical event in the 81 year history of the classic ballpark..... GARTH BROOKS, the Jurassic Park of concert attractions, looks like he may produce the top concert gross for 1993. He has sold out all 195,000 tickets for his three dates at Texas Stadium for a gross that should easily exceed the current top slot now being held by the Grateful Dead. All three shows will be filmed for his NBC television special and a video..... The good news is that MARIAH CAREY is doing some live dates. The bad news is that there are only two of them and they are both in Schenectady, NY where she will use Proctor's Theatre to shoot her upcoming NBC special SUEDE is expected back in the states in September A TV show becomes live theatre when the "Movin' On Up" tour hits the road in October. Sherman Hemsley and Isabel Sanford, television's JEFFERSONS' will present what where once three half hour episodes of the CBS series that ran from 1975 through 1985.
