Jay Faires

Mammoth Records

Mammoth Records' founder and president, Jay Faires, calls himself a "huge music fan." Originally from Huntsville, Tenn., a town only 500 people call home, Faires went to college at the University of the South in Sewanee. He majored in psychology at that Tennessee school but most of his time was spent booking bands as the chairman of the concert committee, spinning discs on the college radio station, and writing music reviews for the college paper. While an undergraduate, Faires booked a concert with a new band out of Georgia that was touring behind its debut EP, R.E.M. He also booked a Violent Femmes show when that band was touring behind its first release. When he graduated in 1985, Faires went directly to grad school at Duke University in Durham, N.C., to study business. Upon arriving in North Carolina, he took a job at the area's hip record store and used the time to get to know the regional music scene. He began managing some local bands while still in grad school and he says his career just sort of developed from there. Faires wanted to start his own label, so the time came to launch Mammoth Records. He finished grad school in '87 and spent a year putting together the plan for his new indie label, talking to anyone he could that had experience in the record business. The first official signing was a band called the Sidewinders out of Arizona. Faires turned around and got them a deal with RCA and the release ended up being a top 5 Gavin Alternative record. Now, after only six years of operation, Mammoth has grown to become one of the most successful independent labels in the recording industry.

Why did you decide to start Mammoth rather than go to work at another indie or major?

A lot of my motivation stems from a passion and a belief in music. It sounds corny now because it seems to get said a lot, but allowing the artist to follow their vision and selling records at the same time was something I always believed in. I didn't see a lot of labels doing it back then. One exception was Elektra. In about a year's time, they broke Metallica, Tracy Chapman, the Pixies and the Cure — essentially a metal band, an English dance goth band, a folk artist and an alternative band. They were all left-of-center artists and Elektra brought the market and the audience around to them. I think that's what we are trying to create — an atmosphere where artists feel comfortable in their growth and believe that we're going to stick behind them in the long term.

Do you think it is possible for an artist to maintain a left-of-center mentality and still make a lot of money?

I think bands get to the point where they realize 'If I enjoy creating this art, why shouldn't I be able to make a living at it? Why do I have to eat peanut butter and live on somebody's floor whenever I do a tour?' I don't know why poverty and ethics have to go hand in hand. I think a band like Green Day has paid their dues. They've defined themselves and created their identity with two indie records and were then able to take that to the major label level. And that's essentially what Frente! did for us. They had two indie EPs and an album out in Australia. I think it went platinum before they ever signed a major deal. They totally defined what they were about before they made that next jump. I think the danger artists get into if there's a bidding war too early-on is the band doesn't get a chance to define themselves. Bands start to think, 'If I just did a quarter-million dollar deal, I'd better make a record that's going to sell a quarter-million copies.' And that's not the right environment to put yourself in.

What can Mammoth offer an artist that a major cannot?

Both Victoria Williams and Frente! had major label offers five times as large as what we were giving them. But they chose to go with us and I believe that is based on three reasons. One, being able to come and meet our staff allows an artist to see the passion and commitment in our office. When an artist walks in our office or when we hang with them, they know we're going to understand where they're coming from and what they're about. We're going to market the band in a way that's sensitive to what their music is about. Two, it's a consistent passion that we have for our bands. I think a lot of major label people have so many records to work and some of them they may like and some of them they may not. If they're not involved in a particular record, they're just going through the motions. The third thing Mammoth has to offer is our long term artist development approach. We want to do three singles for every record and I get pissed off when a band doesn't want to do at least three national tours to support a record. If a band stays out on the road, I know they are going to start getting an audience. And we'll get retail people out, we'll get radio people out, we'll get press people out and that's when it gets it going.

What is Mammoth's affiliation with Atlantic Records?

About 2½ years ago, I made a deal with Danny Goldberg that allows my artists different levels of involvement with Atlantic. When the artist gets to a certain level, then they can move into the major label system. I make the decision when they are going to move over and that can be based on a variety of things. If it's a great record without any sales base here, like Frente!, and I think it has a lot of potential in this marketplace, I'll put it at Atlantic. Juliana Hatfield had such a great indie sales base, it was a no-brainer that she needed to move over there. Also, it could be that we think an artist has a great press base even if the sales base isn't there. So we look at each artist on a case by case basis.

About how many of your releases go through Atlantic?

We will put about six records through Atlantic this year that we think have the most potential to break through. But it's really simplistic to think you're going to have one formula that works for every record. There are three different avenues our artists can take to get their records out. There are records we put out through WEA that we start totally on our own. And if the record gathers enough steam, then the Atlantic team can get involved. The second way is to have our team working jointly with the alternative team at Atlantic. And then there are other records, like this next Juliana one, that will be a company-wide priority at Atlantic. And in instances like that, we'll work closely with them on all levels.

Jay Faires and Victoria Williams with their Atlantic family prior to Danny Goldberg's departure. L-R: Val Azzoli, Faires, Goldberg, Williams, Doug Morris and Mel Lewinter.

Have the executive changes at Atlantic affected your agreement?

I did the deal with Danny Goldberg but now I'm working closely with Val Azzoli on it. And I'm psyched about working with him. He's highly focused and he's really excited about some of our artists. He's all over this Victoria Williams record and I think he's going to take this next Juliana Hatfield record gold. The system we have is working for us but, of course, it's in an evolutionary process. If you think you've got the system down, then you're dead because things change.

Who distributes releases that don't go through WEA?

RED, which is owned by Sony, is our independent distributor. We've been with them for four years exclusively and they've done a great job. Even though our five biggest records went through Atlantic last year, our sales through RED still doubled in 1994. When I entered the deal with Danny, he knew I had a great relationship with RED. Atlantic respected that. One of the reasons Atlantic made the deal with us was that they needed more expertise in alternative music. They weren't going to do the deal with me and then mess up what I was doing. One of the best things about that whole team of Val and Doug Morris and Mel Lewinter and even Danny when he was there, was that they brought me in for a reason and they let me go do it. I was either going to hang myself or I was going to succeed. I have enormous respect for them for that. Take Frente! for example. Outside the U.S., we just had a gold record in Canada with them. That record was released on Attic, which is the largest independent in Canada. In Australia, the group is on Mushroom Records, which is the largest independent down there. Mushroom is actually bigger than two of the major labels down there. In Southeast Asia, we use a company called Ponycanyon. In Europe I have my own company set up for some of our entry level bands but we also put some of our things through Atlantic's sister company. We also can license to some other labels which is good for us there. We can take a record to the label that's most excited about the release and that has been working out really well. Our sales doubled overall last year domestically and probably tripled internationally. And I think they are going to at least double here this year and go up three to four times internationally.

You've never established an A&R department at Mammoth. What's your attitude about the art of signing new talent?

I think there are a lot of outdated modes used to sign acts. At the end of the day, I'm always going to have a final say on what bands we sign. I don't mean that in a dogmatic way at all but when you have an A&R department, everyone else at the label gets left out. For example, our sales guy, Dan Gill, is in touch with people at one-stops about records that are starting to happen. We want to pay attention to that. The staff has more input. They're talking to radio stations all over the country every day and they're finding out about all the local bands. Why should you cut those people out of the process? I want everybody on board to understand why we're going after a band or why we're not. And if everybody feels involved in the A&R process, they're gonna have the passion to go the extra mile.

What do you look for when signing new artists?

When we're signing a band, the most important thing is the songs and if you believe in the artist and their vision. We only sign bands that we think have a really strong vision of where they want to go musically or visually or what their live show is about. Also, if I'm going to bust my butt for this band and work with my staff till 10 o'clock every night, then the band needs to take it seriously and realize it's a lot of work. I love it when a band has figured out a way to finance their own indie record. It shows how committed the artist is and I love seeing that kind of work ethic in a band. And it also gets things started for us. We can't afford for bands to want to be rock stars but not understand what's involved in getting there. If you have all these discussions before hand and bands really understand, then everybody's on the same page. They understand what we're going to be doing and they understand what they need to be doing. And then we can create an environment that allows them to go and pursue their vision and know that they're going to have a stable company behind them. Then it's our job to take that vision and spread it.

Would you ever put your vision for Mammoth into the hands of a corporation as a way to increase your financial foundation?

No, but I have had offers. We may not have been able to compete with the big dollars coming out of major labels in the past but I hope that's a temporary thing. If we break some stuff wide open, then we're going to be able to compete on that level too. But the flip-side of the money picture is, I think the artists that we work with are smart enough to know that, at the end of the day, it doesn't really mean diddley doing a $250,000 deal if they're not quite ready. We still do $6,000 records and we get huge buzzes on them. We do what is appropriate for the artist at that point in their career. There are some of our artists that are now at a level where their advances will compete with any major label. So our artists understand that we build along with them.

What does Mammoth do to help develop long-term careers?

We don't front-load when recording. Our philosophy has always been, 'Let's spend what you need to spend to make a great record but, at the same time, let's really try and save up the money so that we have it to go into marketing.' What if the third single is all it will take to break a band but you've spent so much on recording that you can't afford another single. Major labels do that all the time. They'll spend $200,000 on the first record when they could have made it for $30,000. Then they'll say they're not going to spend any more money on marketing after the first single. It's so backwards. We also try to hook our artists up with great people to work with — like Machines of Loving Grace starting to work with Sylvia Massey, Tool's producer, hooking Victoria Williams up with Paul Fox, who did the 10,000 Maniacs record, or putting Clarissa, this amazing sort of Stonesy band, in the studio with Don Gehman who produced. I think you help create a team that can go make a brilliant record then you let them do it.

What is the benefit of a privately owned, smaller scale label?

First of all, I'm always going to be here. I'm not trying to slag majors at all, it's just that that's one of the biggest differences. I'm doing this for the next 35 years of my life if people let me. And I think at major labels, a lot of times, the guy's there one week and if he doesn't meet his quarterly bottom line, he's gone. There's a lot more turnover at a major than there is at our company. About 80 percent of our employees started at the company as an intern. Steve Balcom, whose my label manager, has been with me since day one. He started as an intern. My executive assistant who does film and TV licensing started as an intern. My head of international, used to be an intern. Our head of sales was an intern and on down the list. So if an act clicks with our staff, they know they will probably be working with those same people on their second and third records.

Are the new offices in NYC and London the first offices outside of North Carolina?

We've just opened this New York office for a publicity staff. New York is such a media center, it's important to have a staff there. And we've got so much going on in Europe that we put Ray Conroy over there. He's doing amazing stuff for us. Dillon Fence is wrapping up a tour with the Black Crowes. Victoria Williams is over there on tour. Velo-Deluxe is over there on tour. Juliana goes there this week. Jason & The Scorchers may do the Reading Festival. But the London office does more than just liaison with touring artists. That's way too simplistic a thing for what it is. Ray is literally the label manager for Europe.

Would you ever consider moving Mammoth's headquarters out of North Carolina?

No. I'll never move. Our vision is to develop a strong entertainment community here. We're building a recording studio down here this year. And we're looking at financing our first independent film. So in five to 10 years, I want to have created an environment down here that will make artists, whether it's a record producer, a film producer, a film writer, or a musician, want to live here. It's really a small world today thanks to faxes and modems. Besides, I can get to New York in 55 minutes when I have to.

How will a recording studio benefit the label?

Its benefits fall on four distinct levels. First, we still do a lot of really inexpensive deals for our younger bands. With our own studio, we'll be able to give our baby bands more time in the studio. The next thing we can do is give our bands a great deal so they will be able to go in and do B-sides, do demos of new songs and have a little more time to work on those demos. A third thing that the studio will accomplish is with our publishing company. Bands we're thinking about signing to publishing deals can go in and write and record songs in there. And the fourth thing, probably most importantly, a recording studio is a further A&R resource. There's so much going on here. The studio will give us a way to tap into that pool. All four of those aspects are important. And I think it will be a freestanding business that makes money for us but the A&R benefit is where it's really going to pay for itself.

Is a major part of Mammoth's roster from the local region?

We've always looked at local acts but we don't limit ourselves to this market. One of our new acts, Squirrel Nut Zippers, which I'm totally psyched about, is from here. There's an amazing buzz on them. And Clarissa's from here. That's two totally different acts from the same area. But then you've got Juliana who is from Boston, Frente! from Australia, and The Bats from New Zealand. Plus, we just picked up Fun-da-mental from England. So our focus is pretty broad.

MDL is just a way to further diversify our A&R vision. It's about doing deals with individuals that I think have really strong artistic visions. I want Mammoth's A&R vision to be this broad spectrum because my definition of alternative is pretty broad. It's really whatever's fresh in music and that can be hip-hop, it can be folk, it can be hard rock, it can be ambient techno, or whatever. MDL has a deal with Les Claypool from Primus for the San Francisco-based Prawn Song Records. That was the first label MDL made a deal with. And MDL just picked up a label deal from England with Michael Dog, who has the cutting edge techno/ambient label Planet Dog. They only put out four albums last year. Two of them were number one indie albums and one of them also was number 11 on the mainstream English charts. So both those deals were a way to push the boundaries of what we're about from an A&R sense. We'll continue to look for those kinds of arrangements. We really want to find the right person to do a hip-hop venture with at some point this year.

From an indie perspective, is there any problem with alternative music becoming more mainstream pop oriented?

To bring it to a local level first, there was something that started to happen around here with Superchunk and Archers of Loaf, which are brilliant bands. All these kids started trying to be Superchunk and Archers of Loaf. That became as stale as bad pop metal bands in the mid-80s. So on a larger scope, if everybody starts trying to be Nirvana or the Beastie Boys, then it's the same thing. Right now, there's this huge opportunity for somewhat progressive alternative bands to really cross into the mainstream. I think when you see Nine Inch Nails, Hole and the Beastie Boys on the cover of Rolling Stone, which has become pretty staid, in the course of two months, it's obvious something's changed. But as long as artists continue to follow their own vision, the music will stay fresh. If artists don't follow their own vision and major labels start trying to clone-out copies of Green Day, Weezer, and whoever, then we're dead. But after a while, it's all semantics and I don't really give a shit about that. The kids will figure out what's important. If great artists keep coming up with great songs and they get support from record companies, then there's a real opportunity here. But if the artists and the music gets bastardized or corrupted, the kids who buy records will figure it out and they'll quit buying them and go find something else.

Executive Interview

How important is college radio to the big picture of breaking acts in the record business?

It's hugely important for us, especially as a buzz thing. As a pure sales function, you can sell about 30,000 copies with college radio. But if you get a number one or a top five record at CMJ, then KROQ pays attention. When a handful of key stations pay attention and start spinning it and it reacts, then, all of a sudden, you can sell a lot of records. Also, bigger press publications pay attention to artists who have college radio hits or MTV pays attention or some huge band sees that it's a top five college record and they ask a band to go on tour. So it's more about that buzz that it helps create. In that way, college radio is critical.

Has Mammoth ventured into cyber-space?

We have an independent Internet site and we've just added a full-time person to make sure it gets updated every week. We've got 80,000 kids a month hitting this thing. They can come in and watch a video. They can listen to the new singles on Juliana's record already. They can see what her album artwork's going to look like. But it's still a very evolutionary thing and we're not at all where I want us to be on it yet. We're going to continue to be adding to the site because it's a good way to get feedback from our fans about the artists on our label. It's so cool. In the first 48 hours when we put it up last fall, we had people from Russia, Southeast Asia and Australia logging on.

Is there anything you are particularly excited about for 1995?

We just signed Jason & The Scorchers, which is incredibly exciting because he's the reason I got into the music business. They were on EMI and they had a sales base of probably 70,000 units when they broke up years ago. But the whole reason to be in the music business, for me, is to work with an artist that you care about. To be able to help foster someone whose vision you really believe in is totally phenomenal. I get goose-bumps when I talk about it. Jason's literally the reason I got into the music business because I was so moved by the music he did. I even named my dog after him. The band recently got back together and made this classic early Scorchers record. And to me, they're one of the best live bands that's ever been. They decided to do this tour last year to see how things would go because two of them had recently cleaned up. They did 44 dates and they did better business in most markets than they had done in their heyday. There was 400 to 1,000 people a night showing up. And this was without a record. And the cool thing is, Jason's acknowledged back to me what it all means to him. It's such an amazing feeling.

What else is in store for 1995?

There's this band called Squirrel Nut Zippers that is hot. The vocalist sounds like Billy Holiday when she sings. And the music is like hot jazz at times. We're getting a great early reaction on that. And then we've got the new Juliana Hatfield record that I think's going to blow wide open this year. It will probably be our biggest record in the first half of the year. And then there is the Clarissa record. In the second half of the year, we'll have a Joe Henry record that will go through Atlantic. He's working with Pat McCarty, who engineered the Counting Crows record and the last two R.E.M. records. Then there's the new Machines of Loving Grace record and we'll have another Frente! record in September. All I can say is we're going to get pretty aggressive in our A&R signing. We're going to get some good new blood and new bands in here.

Do you have any artists participating on compilations this year?

We've moved pretty aggressively into getting our stuff on soundtracks. There is strong interest in Squirrel Nut Zippers participating on a soundtrack for this film that Quentin Tarantino's acting in, as with another film called "Things To Do When You're Dead In Denver," that Andy Garcia and Christopher Walken are in. I think if you place songs right, a soundtrack can be a huge asset. Putting Machines of Loving Grace on "The Crow" soundtrack was great imaging. It was great to have them on a soundtrack with Nine Inch Nails, Henry Rollins, STP and The Cure. And the "Reality Bites" soundtrack set up Juliana really well for top 40 radio.

So what is the overall outlook for '95?

We're going to have a really good year. At a minimum, we should double in size this year. And I'm really psyched about the records we've got coming out. I think we'll have our first platinum record by the end of the year. And I think some of these other things, whether its involvement in soundtracks or building a new studio, or the things we're doing on the Internet, are really going to help us there. Our management team, Steve Balcom, label manager; Chris Sawin, operations manager; Dan Gill, sales; and Sean Maxson, radio; is the best operation we've ever had. And I think the relationship between Atlantic and Mammoth is going to help take care of our artists and take care of our records. Val Azzoli really understands where we're trying to go with the company this year and he's really backing us up on it. So without a doubt, '95 will be Mammoth's best year yet.

91.1 FM 91.1 FM

The logo consists of the text '91.1 FM' in a bold, white, sans-serif font. The first '1' is replaced by a red silhouette of a person standing on a red ground line. The ground line is a simple, horizontal red shape that tapers at the ends. A small 'TM' trademark symbol is located to the right of the second 'FM'.

In the Artist Index cross reference, each artist is listed by the first character of the first name. Thus, Elton John is found under E. Artist names that begin with numbers come before the alphabetical listings: 38 Special precedes the group Alabama. Finally, the word "The" is not considered for sorting purposes when it precedes group name: The Who is, therefore, found under W.
