Worldwide Service

The goal of global coverage was achieved in 1969 when an INTELSAT III series commercial satellite was placed into service over the Indian Ocean. Positioned over the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans, satellites reach around the world.

22 new earth station antennas for sending and receiving commercial satellite communications went into full-time commercial operation during 1969, the greatest number of ground facilities built in a single year. Growth of this ground network to some 40 station antennas made possible direct satellite communications service to every continent. 14 additional antennas are due to go into commercial service during 1970.

A substantial portion of all transocean commercial communications now is being handled routinely by satellites.

TV Usage Up

Broadcasters continued to increase their use of satellites for international television events. Approximately 779 hours of satellite transmit time was used in 1969, compared to 666 hours in 1968, 225 hours in 1967, about 81 hours in 1966, and 40 hours in 1965.

The Apollo 11 moonlanding outstripped any other TV event in worldwide interest during 1969. Broadcasters estimated portions of the mission were seen on TV by some 500 million persons, in more than 40 countries, on 5 continents, through one of the most complex communications setups ever devised. Five commercial communications satellites positioned over 3 different oceans were employed, 25 different earth stations and thousands of miles of land links.

Other notable events broadcast via satellite during 1969 included coverage of earlier Apollo missions; the funeral of Eisenhower; the fall from power of DeGaulle and subsequent French elections; Nixon's visit to Western Europe, Rumania and the Far East; the Investiture of the Prince of Wales; Pope Paul's visit to Uganda; many sports events & public affairs programs.

The Worldwide System

Commercial satellites represent the latest advance in communications technology. The system, composed of satellites and a network of related earth stations, is capable of handling all types of commercial communications—telephony, data, telegraph, facsimile and both color and black-and-white television.

Each Intelsat satellite is stationed in a synchronous orbit 22,300 miles above the equator where it can "see" an area embracing nearly one-third of the earth. The speed is synchronized, so that it keeps pace with the earth's rotation so that it appears to remain stationary over one spot of the earth. Such a satellite acts essentially as a small radio relay tower in space for transmissions of all types of communications between one earth station and another, or between many stations at the same time.

By March of 1970, four Intelsat III series satellites were stationed in orbit, two over the Atlantic, one over the Pacific and one over the Indian Ocean. Each has a designed capacity of 1,200 two-way voice circuits, or four color TV channels.

The Intelsat IV series, larger & more advanced, is under construction, scheduled for launching in 1971. This series of commercial satellites will have a capacity of approximately 6,000 full-time voice circuits or 12 color TV channels each.

The earth stations, with precision-built electronic equipment, are capable of sending and receiving all forms of communications via satellite. By March of 1970, 43 earth station antennas were in operation, permitting direct service to all continents except Antarctica.

Comsat operates, and serves as manager for, six U.S. earth stations. They are located at Andover, Me.; Brewster Flat, Wash.; Paumalu, Hawaii; Jamesburg, Cal.; Etam, W. Va. and Cayey, Puerto Rico. Another U.S. earth station recently began operation at Pulantat, Guam and an additional station in Alaska is scheduled to begin in 1970. Under an interim ruling by the Federal Communications Commission, these stations are owned 50 percent by Comsat, and 50 percent by other international communications carrier companies. Earth stations located abroad are owned and operated by companies or agencies in the countries in which they are located.

Comsat's Dual Role

The Communications Satellite Corp. is a unique American company that has responsibilities both at home and abroad. Comsat is chartered by an Act of Congress, the Communications Satellite Act of 1962. But it is a private company—not a government agency—which is regulated like any other communications carrier company by the FCC. As a commercial communications company, Comsat receives its main revenues from leasing satellite circuits to authorized customers. Its principal customers are the established U.S. international carrier companies, such as AT&T, ITT, RCA and Western Union International.

Under existing interim international arrangements, Comsat is the U.S. representative in Intelsat and serves as its manager.

Intelsat

An international partnership—The International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium, or Intelsat—owns and operates the commercial satellites in the system. Intelsat was formed in 1964 with the goal of establishing a single global satellite communications system open to all countries without discrimination. By March 1970, it had grown to a membership of 75 countries. Each member nation shares in the cost of the satellites, and in turn receives its share of revenues from the system.

A Plenipotentiary Conference convened in Washington in 1969, and resumed deliberations in 1970, charged with the task of formulating permanent or definitive arrangements, to replace the interim arrangements now governing Intelsat.

Under the existing interim arrangements, Comsat is the U.S. representative in Intelsat, and also serves as its manager. Negotiations over permanent arrangements were scheduled to continue in the fall of 1970. As of March of 1970, the 75 INTELSAT countries were:

Algeria	Ireland	Philippines
Argentina	Israel	Portugal
Australia	Italy	Saudi Arabia
Austria	Jamaica	Singapore
Belgium	Japan	South Africa
Brazil	Jordan	Spain
Cameroon	Kenya	Sudan
Canada	Korea	Sweden
Ceylon	Kuwait	Switzerland

TV Rates

Reduced rates by Comsat for TV service via Atlantic and Pacific satellites went into effect in February of 1969. The rates cover Comsat's charges to other communications carrier companies for a television service channel furnished from a U.S. earth station to a satellite.

Here are the rates, same for both monochrome and color, including audio and video:

Atlantic

U.S. mainland to Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, France, West Germany, Iran, Italy, Lebanon, Morocco, Peru, Spain, United Kingdom and Venezuela—$660 for first 10 minutes, $18 for each additional minute.

U.S. mainland or Puerto Rico to Panama or Mexico—$447.50 for first 10 minutes, $13.25 for each additional minute.

U.S. mainland to Puerto Rico—$414 for first 10 minutes, $11.40 for each additional minute.

Pacific

U.S. mainland to Australia, Hong Kong, Japan, Philippines, Republic of China and Thailand—$725 for first 10 minutes, $20.50 for each additional minute.

U.S. mainland to Hawaii—$440 for first 10 minutes, $12.50 for each additional minute.

Hawaii to Australia, Japan, Philippines and Thailand—$650 for first 10 minutes, $17 for each additional minute.

The rates also set conditions and rates for a television service package consisting of a one-way video channel, a choice of audio channels and, if desired, two-way voice coordination channels. The additional audio channels are of particular benefit for multi-lingual program needs.

Domestic Satellite Services

On March 25, 1970, the FCC issued a policy statement inviting applications for construction of domestic satellite systems and asking for comments by all interested parties. The action, taken after almost four years of study and review, left a number of complex technical, financial, legal and policy issues still to be resolved. Comsat announced it would file a comprehensive plan to provide a satellite system that would serve U.S. national communications requirements as soon as possible. Details of the system were being prepared. Comsat's stand was consistent with its earlier public offers to finance, build and operate a high-quality system of satellites and earth stations that would bring the benefits of this new technology to domestic service.

to each his own

Every time one of your staffers finds the house copy of Television Factbook in use or missing, he has wasted his time and your money. Perhaps another approach is in order.

Buy enough copies of Television Factbook to go around. It will save time . . . tempers . . . money, too.

Community Antenna Television Systems

As of March 9, 1970

(*) Indicates firm holds franchise, is not yet operation. (†) Indicates application for franchise pending. Ownership data includes material filed with FCC.

Cross reference in capital letters (e.g., CRAIG A.F.B.) indicates community is served by an operating system; with initial capital & lower case letters (e.g., Brighton) indicates franchise only. Listings of broadcasters with CATV interests and multiple owners of CATV systems follow this Directory. Statistical table of CATV industry development (1952-68) and listing of largest single CATV systems (10,000 subscribers and larger) are found in front pages of this volume, following index.

N. A. means information not available. Potential is number of subscribers expected within 5 years. CC denotes common carrier microwave. Information is as supplied by FCC, system operators, franchise holders, applicants, city officials, equipment makers and other sources. Though data is frequently incomplete, it is the best obtainable through diligent inquiry.

HOW'S YOUR RESALE VALUE?

CATV system resale value is dependent on a number of factors:—

- picture quality that increases cash flow
- reliability that reduces maintenance
- fast equipment service (by manufacturer)
- ability to update without total rebuild
- competent technical backing by equipment manufacturer

Build in a better resale value — insist on only the best . . . . .

... Rated First
Where Performance is Rated First."

If you're going to put TV cables underground you owe it to your subscribers to talk to us first.

One of the basic reasons Cable TV Operators are burying cable is to protect it from high wind, heavy rain, snow and sleet, from wide temperature variations and from falling branches. What's more, they find that subscribers and city fathers appreciate the quality performance of buried cable and its contribution to neighborhood beauty.

But there are hazards underground, too.

Water, gophers and ground squirrels, for example, can eat into your cable investment—ruin reception and spoil your profit picture.

That's why you owe it to your subscribers—and yourself—to talk to us first. With our Bupic* and CCW* protected cables, you can take advantage of all the benefits of buried cable—while eliminating or minimizing the hazards.

Full information is contained in our brochures "Coaxial Cables for Cable TV" and "CATV Cables for Buried Plant." Write: General Cable Corporation, Section 200-05, 730 Third Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017.

The most famous relay signal men were amateurs compared to Benco.

The American Indian had a simple system. He relayed signals via smoke. But imperfections did arise. Only sharp, clear weather guaranteed sharp, clear reception. And the view was rather colorless.

Benco CATV equipment is beyond any Indian's wildest pipe-dream. It's part of a complex system designed to relay signals sharp and clear through all kinds of weather, over any terrain. You wouldn't expect anything less from professional perfectionists.

Built by perfectionists for perfectionists.

Benavac Mk II solid state automatic video-audio control unit. Maximum channel capability; modular design; immediate delivery.

Reasons why it pays to belong to the National Cable Television Association

1 NCTA is the national voice for the CATV industry and speaks out with authority in the highly competitive communications field.

2 Legal representation in CATV cases of industry-wide magnitude. Interpretive legal guidance to the membership concerning regulation and other areas of legal significance.

3 Federal and state legislative program to protect the cable television industry's interests in Congress and state legislative bodies.

4 Public relations to tell the story of CATV's many present and potential contributions to telecommunications in this country.

5 Annual National Convention with sessions on technical development, legislation, regulatory action and other industry concerns presented by nationally recognized experts.

6 Exhibit of latest CATV equipment on display for NCTA members at the National Convention along with explanations and demonstrations.

7 Seminars conducted to keep members up to date on the latest techniques and equipment.

8 Communication of information concerning CATV developments is carried out through a variety of membership newsletters, bulletins, and special notices.

9 Leadership training is provided through participation on NCTA standing committees, the Board of Directors, and the Executive Committee. All members have a voice in the direction of the association.

10 Promotion aids are made available at low cost, providing NCTA members with added sales power.

11 NCTA representation at state and regional meetings provides two-way communication—essential for NCTA to keep in touch with the "grass roots" of the industry.

12 Engineering and technical assistance from the NCTA staff helps members maintain the highest standard of technical performance. Technical staff also represents the industry before federal and state regulatory bodies.

13 NCTA Membership means meeting new people, keeping up with trends, exchanging ideas, and participation in shaping the future course of the most dynamic communications force yet conceived.

PUTTING INFORMATION IN A NUTSHELL

The 1970-71 CATV and Station Coverage Atlas is designed primarily as a reference tool for CATV, telecasting and advertising executives to provide a quick handy source to:

- Communities and areas served by Grade A and B contours of television stations, color coded. (The Grade A & B contours, displayed on a state-by-state basis, may be found in no other document—government or private.)
- 35-Mile Zone Maps, depicting areas within 35 miles of TV markets as defined by FCC in its proposed CATV rules and under consideration by Congress, NAB, NCTA and other industry groups seeking legislation controlling CATV operations.

The state maps display the proposed FCC 35-mile zones markets in 3 classifications:

Top-100, those not in Top-100, and ETV stations not in commercial markets.

The newly designed and revised CATV and Station Coverage Atlas for 1970-71 also includes:

- Locations of all CATV Systems.
- Amendments to the full text of FCC CATV Rules and Proposed CATV Rules & Inquiry.
- Microwaves Serving CATV Systems.
- A Microwave Route Map.
- CATV Industry Statistics.
- ARB Markets Ranked Alphabetically & by Size.
- Directory of CATV Equipment Manufacturers.
- Directories of Significant CATV Organizations, Including NCTA, Regional & State Associations, FCC Cable TV Bureau, Bell System.
