WHEELING, WEST VIRGINIA
There are a number of important facts you need to remember when you buy North Carolina television.

Remember that WRAL-TV, Raleigh, is the only ABC-TV affiliate between Richmond, Va., and Columbia, S. C. Unlike other stations, there's no overlap, no duplication.

Remember that WRAL-TV, Raleigh, has achieved an unusual identity with the community and the market. A recent attitudes and opinion study by Central Surveys, Inc., shows that 61% of the people prefer WRAL-TV for news and weather.

Remember that WRAL-TV, Raleigh, has consistently pioneered in programming in this market. No other station in the market editorializes daily.

Remember that WRAL-TV is the only station located in the state's leading food brokerage center. In addition, Raleigh is ranked as the state's second largest shopping center by N. C. officials.

Remember that WRAL-TV can give you more homes for less money. Total homes mean little unless related to cost-per-thousand. With a rate card that includes pre-emptible AA spots, WRAL-TV can deliver nighttime audiences for as little as $1.44 per thousand homes.

Check this offering, prepared on request from an advertiser. It is not a trumped-up schedule, but a typical 12-plan proposal. Look it over. Like it? See H-R. They'll prepare an up-to-date proposal for you.

Prospects on pay TV

Not all of its clients agree with Stanford Research Institute's bullish attitude toward pay-TV prospects (CLOSED CIRCUIT, July 29). At least one of some 60 SRI clients who attended private briefing in New York last week doubts that sufficiently attractive programming has been devised—or even dreamed of—to attract enough daily revenue to make system economically feasible.

Report's anticipation of $2 billion yearly revenues for pay TV looks especially staggering. But skeptics after SRI session in New York last week acknowledged that if SRI is right in foreseeing 15 million homes linked up by mid-1970's (at initial cost of $2 billion), then it's conceivable that the relatively low level of home usage might cover operating costs and turn profit. Even so, they figured that if SRI had used more realistic home spending figure, it would have projected loss rather than profit. They're clearly inclined to side with report's hedging observation that in practice, pay-TV programming may not prove as attractive as it seems apt to be.

Metromovements

To be announced by Metropolitan Broadcasting (Metromedia): transfer of Albert P. Krivin, vice president and general manager of KMBC-TV Kansas City, to KTTV-TV Los Angeles, recently acquired by Metromedia, and appointment of Mark Wodlinger, vice-president and general manager, WZMZ-TV Grand Rapids, Mich., as Mr. Krivin's successor in Kansas City. Bennet Korn, president of Metropolitan Broadcasting and directing head of television properties, was on West Coast last weekend.

Mr. Wodlinger's successor at WZMZ-TV, ch. 13 outlet which has operated on interim basis since Nov. 1, 1962, is Harold Sundberg, former sales manager. He has previously managed WMBD-TV Peoria, Ill.

Ownership limits

Four members of FCC are said to favor consideration of reducing number of radio and television stations any person or company may own. Subject was discussed at last Thursday's FCC meeting and is almost certain to come up again after commission returns from August vacation. Some commissioners think present limits of 21 stations—seven each for AM, FM and TV—may be too high. Four who asserted interest in question last Thursday were Chairman Henry and Commissioners Loevinger, Bartley and Cox.

In recent weeks there's been persistent report that FCC staff has been working on draft of proposed rule-making to reduce permissible multiple ownership of VHF television stations from five to three. No confirmation, however, has been obtained. Commissioners who last week showed interest in exploring question were at variance on approaches to take.

Escape hatch

Stations report that something new has been added to Pulse Inc.'s letters soliciting their participation in Pulse audience surveys. It's line saying "Pulse shall not be liable for any loss or injury caused by the neglect or other act of said company or any of its officers, agents or employees in procuring, collecting, tabulating, computing, analyzing and communicating said information." Pulse officials say this disclaimer, designed to protect against clerical and similar errors, has always been written into Pulse contracts, has been added to solicitations as matter of precaution.

There's no indication whether Pulse decision to insert disclaimer in letters of solicitation was influenced by recent announcements of government surveillance over ratings users. Federal Trade Commission has said it would hold users responsible for accuracy of surveys as well as in use in sales and promotion. FCC has said it will consider FTC actions in deciding whether stations are operating in public interest.

Swezey leaving

Robert D. Swezey intends to leave his job as director of National Association of Broadcasters code authority when his $40,000-a-year contract expires next Oct. 15. Mr. Swezey doesn't need job; he has substantial income from sale of minority holding in WDSU-AM-TV New Orleans. Word is that he and LeRoy Collins, NAB president, have been at odds over philosophy of radio and television codes and their operation. When he leaves code job, he'll take it easy for while, may eventually return to station operation or practice of law.

Following the news

CBS News is consolidating its Atlanta and Dallas bureaus into new, larger one at New Orleans, effective this month. With WDSU-AM-TV New Orleans news staff it will share new building that will be news headquarters for both. Dan Rather will be chief correspondent. New Orleans move is part of series of reassignments and expansions by CBS News, mostly timed to coincide with start of CBS-TV's new half-hour news show.

Among other changes planned by CBS News, Charles Kuralt, South American correspondent, becomes chief correspondent of enlarged Los Angeles bureau, with Robert Schakne as bureau manager. Bernard Eismann moves from Chicago to New York, and Hughes Rudd, who has been chief of Atlanta bureau, takes over expanded Chicago bureau. Arthur Bonner, formerly in India, more recently in special shows in this country, has gone to South America temporarily, pending appointment of permanent successor to Mr. Kuralt.

Other side

FCC commissioners and possibly FTC and other government officials will get chance at radio business orientation in Radio Advertising Bureau's management conferences, scheduled in September and October. RAB has invited one or two to each conference, with idea that they'll see detailed presentation on radio today, hear broadcasters discuss radio problems, then be given opportunity to talk and answer—or ask—questions. Five of seven FCC members have accepted.

Splurge in syndication

Westinghouse Broadcasting Co., which is on spree of producing programs for syndication, is understood to be taping series titled The Meaning of Communism for showing on its own stations and for sale to other outlets. Series will cover 30 half-hours exploring various facets of Communism and 10 are said to have been completed. WBC also produced Steve Allen Show and Mike Douglas Show, plus large number of specials for syndication. It has just signed for television rights to a stage play opening on Broadway next fall (see page 56).

Trade winds

Tribulations of National Association of Broadcasters are not necessarily peculiar to that trade association. Number of trade groups, both among media and in manufacturing, are having internal convolutions growing out of membership complaints over character of service and increasing costs of operation. One trade association (National Business Publications) recently deposed its president and others in both electronics and electrical manufacturing, report what they regard as seasonal unrest.

SWEENY SPEAKS OUT ON RAB, BUNKER

Decries radio code as one of NAB's 'worst mistakes'

Kevin B. Sweeney, president of Radio Advertising Bureau for nine years until his resignation last February, let fly Friday (Aug. 2) at his successor, Ed- mund C. Bunker, and RAB's current plan for $200,000 radio audience research methodology study.

In speech prepared for delivery at New Mexico Broadcasters Association, Mr. Sweeney, now president of John Poole Broadcasting Co., also said he was now free to call National Association of Broadcasters' radio code "among the worst mistakes that NAB has made in this generation." He said key to radio's service is "almost strictly economic," and scoffed at notion that a station's commercial load reflects against its service to its community.

Mr. Sweeney said RAB's current plan for radio research methodology study "is either one of the most naive plans in RAB's history or one of the most cynical, because there is historical evidence" that major research projects rarely pay their way in new advertising sales.

Answers Are There - "Without spending a dollar," he said, "just by studying the dozens of research projects RAB has undertaken for specific advertisers in the past years but never published, they [RAB] can find the facts about how many listen, when, and to whom."

Mr. Sweeney said that "to see Ed Bunker identify himself with this re-search project as the path out of the desert convinces me that he is as remote from the day-to-day realities of selling radio to national and important retail accounts as he was during the seven months when we were trying to ride the same horse." This apparently referred to period when Messrs. Sweeney and Bunker were both at RAB, as president and president-elect, respectively.

Mr. Sweeney said RAB had learned over 10-year period that radio will never beat TV and newspapers on basis of total audience figures. Current project's $200,000, he claimed, "should be devoted to persuading General Foods and Lever Bros. and the nation's retailers to spend some money with us."

'Not In Touch' - RAB officials, ad-visers of Mr. Sweeney's remarks, suggested he was 'not completely in touch with industry developments because, they said, "he isn't describing the same project we are working on.'

They said need for study like theirs "has been endorsed enthusiastically by everyone we know of" and "if Kevin visits advertising agencies and advertisers he will observe how much enthusiasm has been generated."

"We are seeking the knowledge that will allow accurate and complete measurements of radio audiences on a continuing basis—not just a study providing figures on total audience," RAB said.

An NAB official said association would have no comment until text of Mr. Sweeney's comments have been studied. He said NAB had not seen statement.

Former Kennedy adviser faces late tax charges

James M. Landis, former special assistant to President Kennedy on regulatory agencies, and who was highly critical of FCC operations, pleaded guilty in federal court in New York Friday (Aug. 2) to five counts of late filing and payment of income taxes for years 1956-60.

Mr. Landis, who was represented by Dean William Warren of Columbia Law School, said all taxes due, along with penalties and interest, were paid as soon as amount was calculated. Charges are misdemeanors carrying maximum penalty of year's imprisonment and $10,000 fine for each count.

U. S. Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau said charges were brought because Mr. Landis didn't meet government standard of "voluntary disclosure."

Mr. Landis, who once was Harvard Law School dean, joined Kennedy staff shortly after 1960 election and remained as White House advisor through most of President Kennedy's first year in office. He now practices law in New York.

TTC sale signed, Time to get KERO-TV

Contracts totaling about $38.5 million for acquisition of Transcontinental Television Corp.'s TV and radio stations in five markets were signed Friday by Taft Broadcasting, Midwest Television and Time Inc.

David C. Moore, TTC president, said sales are subject to FCC approval and to favorable rulings from Internal Revenue Service, "among other conditions." Total sales price, based on about $21.20 per share of TTC stock, is largest in broadcasting history. There are 1,817,900 shares outstanding.

Sales follow pattern indicated when negotiations were first disclosed (BROADCASTING, April 15, 22), except for Time Inc.'s entry into picture.

Time Inc. acquires KERO-TV Bakersfield, Calif., a UHF station. Originally Midwest Television had been negotiating for Bakersfield as well as San Diego. Announcement said Midwest "stepped

Stylish togio spots

What are said to be two of higher priced commercials of re-cent TV history have been com-pleted by General Cigar Co. for its White Owl brand, at cost of $50,000 for pair. General Cigar through Young & Rubicam went to Paris to produce one-minute commercials which star French comedian Fernandel and authen-tic Parisian backgrounds. Commer-cials will be introduced in September on first NCAA football game (CBS-TV) and ABC-TV's Fight of The Week.

New effort to balk Faulk

Appeal has been filed by Vin-cent W. Hartnett to upset New York State Supreme Court jury libel verdict in favor of TV-radio entertainer John Henry Faulk. Jury awarded Mr. Faulk $3.5 million in damages against Mr. Hartnett, Aware Inc. and late Laurence A. Johnson. Estate of Mr. Johnson reportedly has settled with Mr. Faulk for $175,000 and is not participating in Mr. Hartnett's appeal.

aside” when Time offered to buy Bakerfield property on same terms Midwest had offered. Time said it had been negotiating with TTC since 1961. Time owns KLZ-AM-FM-TV Denver, WOOD-AM-FM-TV Grand Rapids, Mich., KOGO-AM-FM-TV San Diego, WTCN-AM-TV Minneapolis and WFMB-AM-FM-TV Indianapolis.

Time Inc. said it was paying $1,565,000 for KERO-TV. Spokesman for TTC and Taft said it was impossible to break down individual prices on other stations pending further computations. TTC retains WDOK-AM-FM Cleveland, valued at 80 cents per share.

Mixed blessing bestowed on editors by Celler

“Efforts to preclude editorializing on the air should be resisted,” said Representative Emanuel Celler (D-N.Y.) Sunday (Aug. 4). But he added “unless television and radio fashion a way to permit fair editorial comment... these media will never reach the maturity that will communicate demands in the public interest.”

In statement prepared for Congressional Conference on WOR-TV New York, Representative Celler urged broadcasters to encourage audience to comment on editorials “as is done in the newspapers through the publication of letters to the editor.”

Noting “dwindling number of newspapers,” Representative Celler, chairman of House Judiciary Committee, said “it would be in the nature of an important public service to have editorial comment.”

Representative Celler’s committee held hearing this spring on concentration of ownership of news media. Hearing recessed when committee took up civil rights legislation.

Another meeting set on Negroes in radio-TV

Employment of Negroes on live radio and TV broadcasts in Hollywood is to be discussed Friday (Aug. 9) at meeting of broadcasters with representatives of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, James Tolbert, president, Hollywood-Beverly Hills chapter, NAACP, said Friday (Aug. 2).

Demands which NAACP will present were to be determined over weekend at meeting of Mr. Tolbert with Herbert Hill, national labor secretary of NAACP in New York. Also to be decided then is plan to file proceedings with National Labor Relations Board for decertification of Set Designers Local 847 of International Alliance of Theatrical & Stage Employees, which allegedly has held membership application of Negro on file for three years

WEEK’S HEADLINERS

Charles G. Mortimer Jr., program manager of TV department at William Esty Co., elected to newly created post of VP for television programming. Assuming new position today (Aug. 5), Mr. Mortimer continues as head of TV programming but in broadened executive capacity. He joined Esty agency in 1957 following duties with ABC-TV as program production manager and supervisor of on-the-air programming. Prior to positions at ABC Mr. Mortimer was with CBS-TV as associate director and producer-director.

Segregation feared in use of HEW funds

Three applications for federal funds to build educational TV stations in two southern states have run into opposition of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Department of Health, Education and Welfare Friday (Aug. 2) gave NAACP 30-day extension of deadline for commenting on applications.

Association, in seeking delay, said stations involved are located in areas which practice school segregation and “since it is most likely that these TV facilities will be used in connection with existing educational facilities, it is imperative that guarantees be secured that will insure colored students their full participation in the benefits to be derived from the use of these facilities.”

Existing TV facilities are being used to promote segregation, NAACP charged, and asked applicants for federal grants be required to pledge equal opportunity for Negro children. NAACP said it is conducting investigation of three applications, HEW, which handles ETV grants of federal funds, extended deadline until Aug. 28.

Three requests involved, with amount of money sought, are WHRO-TV (ch. 15) Hampton, Va. ($129,943 to build new studios); South Carolina Educational TV Commission for new stations in Charleston (channel 7, $59,000) and Greenville (channel 29, $285,000).

Individuals to have say in NAB fall session

Individual broadcasters will have greater participation in eight fall conferences of National Association of Broadcasters in October-November than they have in past. This is major decision to date in early planning for sessions, which begin Oct. 14 in Hartford, Conn. NAB staff met last Thursday (Aug. 1) in first full-scale planning session. In past years, staffers of association have dominated programs with few broadcasters appearing. It was at fall conference in Portland, Ore., last November that NAB President LeRoy Collins made his now-famous remarks on cigarette advertising.

GM’s first move into spot TV

Buick will crack spot TV ice for General Motors this year, is to buy prime 20’s in top 25 markets for five-six weeks beginning late September as starter, it was learned in Detroit Friday (Aug. 2). Dodge starts buying spot television this week; Chrysler cars expected soon also.

British home TV recorder not due until ’64

Delay in development of new low-cost home TV tape recorder for distribution in U. S. by Telcan Ltd., Nottingham, England, was reported last week. Meanwhile interest grew about possible impact of new equipment, especially on future of pay TV systems.

Telcan, which expected to have recorder on U. S. market before end of 1963, may have to wait until late 1964 before system is suitably adapted for American use, it was said. List price of unit in Britain will be about $182.

Recorder, called “Telcam,” reportedly permits home taping and replay of TV shows. Unit even allows viewer to record program on different channel than one he is viewing. Company says unit will also enable user to play homemade TV tapes.

Equipment weighs 15 pounds, dimensions 17 inches by 2 inches, with 4 inch protrusion for motor housing. It will be available as separate unit or one which can be built into TV set. Sound and vision are recorded simultaneously on standard quarter-inch magnetic tapes.

Similar equipment has been developed in U. S. but none suited for marketing. RCA demonstrated “here-see” tape recorder in 1958 but high cost and tape speed problem have prevented its commercial production.
One sure-fire way to beef up late-afternoon and early-evening television ratings is to program a Western series. And you'll find most of the great television Westerns are hours. Take Maverick, Sugarfoot, and Bronco, for examples. They're all going great guns on an off-network basis.

REACH 35% MORE HOMES

During February and March 1963, a total of 65 hours of these three Westerns were running each week in various markets between 5:30 and 7:30 P.M. weekdays. Compared to programs on the same stations, same time periods, a year ago, these 65 Western hours reached 35% more homes.*

REACH MORE ADULTS, TOO

More important, the three Westerns reached 48% more men and 24% more women. Now, with the hour-long Cheyenne series ready for fall start, stations and advertisers have even greater flexibility in opportunities to reach more adults. Look into the great Westerns. You'll find most of them are hours...and they're also ours.

OADCASTING, August 5, 1963
What makes a great salesman?

Daredevil auto racer... staff driver for General Pershing... America's top flying ace in World War I. Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker might have been considered a glamorous doer rather than a positive thinker. But when he became head of Eastern Air Lines in 1934, he recognized that flying was destined to become a commercial business rather than a sport, and that the big job was to sell the idea of flying to everyone—its safety, its time-saving advantages, its tangible value to business.

Then Capt. Eddie became a great salesman. He lived and breathed commercial aviation. Seldom seen in his office, he was constantly on the wing, talking to service groups, women's clubs, chambers of commerce, sales conventions—anyone who would listen to the fascinating story of air transportation. Today's vast network of domestic and international airlines owes much to Capt. Eddie's persuasiveness, and to his belief in and knowledge of his product.

Likewise, the success of the Storer stations stems from continuous work in the field to gain greater understanding of people's needs and desires. Because they know their markets, Storer stations can plan their programming to meet community tastes and preferences, backing up this knowledge with efficient operation and a watchful eye for the advertiser's interests that turns more listeners and viewers into buyers. In Miami, Storer's great salesman is WGBS, an important station in an important market.

ONLY NOW CAN THE FULL STORY BE TOLD of World War II as seen through the eyes of the fighting men.
Here at last is the story of World War II told by the men who were there...on both sides of the Battle Line. This is no “General’s War,” no reporter’s story, no “official document.” It’s War in the words of the men who fought it, now retold for the first time. Years of painstaking research went into finding surviving combatants of World War II’s most important campaigns—Pearl Harbor, the Bismarck, the Kamikaze and U-boat raids, Salerno, Iwo Jima, Stalingrad. Now, these men—Allied and Axis—come before the cameras and tell how these never-to-be-forgotten events looked through their eyes. This is war, in all its raw truth, stripped of its gloss and glamour. And backing their words is the world’s finest war film footage, much of it until now, locked behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. This is war as it actually was, seen by the men who were there, on both sides of the—

Narrating each episode is Jim Bishop, popular historian and author of “The Day Lincoln Was Shot” and “The Day Christ Died.” During World War II Jim Bishop, as War Editor of Colliers, had access to the key stories of the day. Yet because of official secrecy and wartime censorship, much of this vital information could not be transmitted to the public. Now at last this popular correspondent can reveal information that tells of some of the early staggering defeats that all but destroyed the Allied and American Armed Forces...information that puts in its full perspective the courage and determination of the fighting men who ultimately won victory. Jim Bishop, with his first hand knowledge, historic perspective and insight of the human spirit weaves this unprecedented series with the exactly right blend of compassion and understanding.
MONDAY MEMO from HENRY A. MATTOON, McCann-Erickson Inc., Los Angeles

The 1960’s: the decade of the bold, forward-looking marketer

Of the presidents of the top 58 companies in the country today, 21—or better than one out of three—advanced to their jobs through advertising, marketing or sales. These are 10 more than those who got there through the financial route and 11 more than those who came up through research or engineering.

That’s a statistic based on the past. The odds are even better for the future.

Remember the 1920’s? Whose star shone brightest in that roaring time between war and depression? The Henry Fords, who found a better way to make it for less.

Now recall the 30’s—the decade of the legal or financial man.

And let’s take a look at the 40’s—the era of the ingenious substituter, when even the lowly penny gave up its copper.

By the 1950’s a new kind of executive was rising to power. He was the distribution genius—the retailer with a new concept who asked “What does the public need and want to buy that we can make or have made—and how do they want to buy it?” And so the early pioneers in supermarkets and discount houses were joined by the automatic vending machine and the many coin-operated services.

The Present • What about the 60’s? This decade needs every smart marketing man, advertising man and sales man it can get. Without them this bright decade is going to look pretty tarnished.

Henry Ford’s secret of mass production is now everybody’s. There isn’t a company anywhere that can’t increase production by 50% any time it wants to. The problem has an almost mathematical solution. The vice president in charge of production can tell the board of directors, “we can increase production in X weeks at a cost of Y cents per unit, to be amortized after the first Z additional units are made.”

Can you envision a marketing man making this absolute a promise? How much will it cost to increase sales by 50%? How long will it take? Is there a quicker way? How much extra cost?

Are there any answers? Not as precise as the production man’s, certainly. And because we are talking about human beings and their moods, likes and dislikes, and not machines, there will never be any precise answers.

Just because it can’t be worked out on a computer is no reason to relax. We can keep trying to make the answers more precise.

Be Original • But, you’re thinking, how can I make the presidency by okaying a set of proofs? A fair question, and the answer is short and direct—you can’t. You’re going to make it not by okaying something that’s been done, but by creating something that hasn’t been done.

Take the concept that the end result of advertising is good earnings. This leads inevitably to the sister concept that advertising per se is only one of many forms of marketing communications. This in turn leads to another notion—the idea that a marketing dollar should be viewed as a whole, with so many cents going to advertising, so much more to sales promotion, to publicity, to sales and dealer communications, to research, and so on.

Such a concept led us at McCann-Erickson Inc. some years ago to look at these separate forms of communications to and from various publics and view them as completely related parts of the whole. And it was inevitable to conclude that if all these forms of marketing communications were managed and directed at a common target, the marketing communications dollar would bring the greatest dollar return.

As a result, a little over two years ago a unique marketing communications company was born, designed to provide professional services in each of these areas—and designed to relate them to each other in such a way that they could and did aim at a single goal.

Working Concept • Under our parent company, Interpublic Inc., this concept is still growing and expanding today.

Interpublic today owns several advertising agencies. Interpublic also owns Communications Affiliates Inc., which operates Marplan, a worldwide research organization; Infoplan, a worldwide public relations and publicity organization, and SCI, a sales communications organization.

On the corporate level, Interpublic provides personnel, financial, legal, business development and advance project services to all its components.

Some months ago, a division of McCann-Erickson called Industrial Technical Scientific Marketing was established. Why? Because communicating with a technical or scientific audience today is a highly specialized job, and needs specialists to do it.

Knowledge in Motion • We are in an information revolution. Our knowledge now doubles every year. Of all scientists who ever lived, 90% are still living. A graduate from a scientific or engineering school this year will, unless he continues his studies indefinitely in his free time, find himself technically left behind in only seven years.

The fact that this concept is in motion and moving fast can best be grasped by looking at what happened and is happening. In 1951 McCann-Erickson Inc. was an $81 million business. At the end of 1962 Interpublic was doing well over $400 million from 89 offices in 26 countries. In the first months of 1963, six new offices and two more countries were added, and further additions are to be expected. This, I feel, is conclusive evidence that there is a tremendous worldwide need for just such an integrated marketing communications facility—and strong validation of the concept that brought it into being.

The advertising business that we have known so long is not the same today, and never will be the same again. Today, serious minded investors consider a company’s marketing goals and advertising expenditures one of the significant indicators of its future earnings. The concept of spending money to make money has the active approval of the financial community. These changes are important and vital.

The 1960’s are definitely the decade of the bold, forward-looking marketer.

Henry A. Mattoon has been vice president and general manager of McCann-Erickson’s Los Angeles office since July 1962. Mr. Mattoon joined McCann-Erickson in 1956 as a vice president in the New York office and served over the next six years as chairman of the agency’s marketing plans board as an associate creative director. Before affiliation with McCann-Erickson, Mr. Mattoon served as president and a director of Reach, Yates & Mattoon, New York and Newark.

Sunday's Driver

Although he's already featured regularly on the "Today" show and NBC Radio's "Monitor," Frank Blair (above) has unhesitatingly accepted still another assignment: host of the forthcoming "Sunday" series.

Fact is, it will be a labor of love for Blair to be in the "Sunday" driver's seat, since the program will cover a range of interests as wide as his own.

When it becomes a Sunday afternoon highlight of the formidable NBC Fall schedule, the live, full-hour series will not only cover leading national and international happenings, but—like a weekend newspaper magazine—span Music, Art, Science, Theatre, Books and Sports.

In keeping with this concept, a corps of reporters will appear each week, including NBC Washington correspondents Ray Scherer, Robert Abernethy and Nancy Dickerson, and sportscaster-humorist Joe Garagiola.
Analyses of the passing scene will be offered regularly by NBC's witty, literate Edwin Newman and frequent visitors such as Cleveland Amory, columnist, author and perceptive chronicler of American society; and Aline Saarinen, one of the art world's most authoritative critics.

"Sunday's" very able back-seat driver is producer Robert Northshield, whose past credits include "Today" and such acclaimed NBC News specials as "The Chosen Child," "Who Goes There?", and "The Trial of Adolf Eichmann."

Of course, "Sunday's" diversity merely reflects the span of our entire Fall schedule, which ranges from the urbane "Tonight" to the newest adventure series, "Temple Houston"; from the world-news coverage of the expanded "Huntley-Brinkley Report" to the music of the Andy Williams specials. In all, it shapes up as a season whose virtues couldn't really be described in a month of "Sundays."

Editor: It will probably be of interest that our concern now has orders for three towers, all of which are taller than the present tallest existing man-made structure in the world (1,749 feet). One is 1,800 feet designed for an addition of 200 feet at a later date, one is 2,000 feet and one is 2,063 feet. The tallest of these three is approximately half again taller than the Empire State Building (1,472 feet).—B. H. Kline, Kline Iron & Steel Co., Columbus, S. C.

Change through education

Editor: The June 8 resolution of the National Council of Churches calling for firm government clamps on radio and TV is certainly the talk of our industry (Broadcasting, June 17). Before broadcasters rush off in all directions to fight the ivory-tower leftists who supported the resolution, let us take note of the thousands of well-grounded, intelligent and sound clergymen who know what goes on in radio and TV and how responsive it is to their ideas and suggestions. The resolution pales when we consider the powerful radio and TV programming produced by such groups as the Lutheran Laymen's League, the American Lutheran Church, Southern Baptist's Convention and the Christophers. Churchmen of these groups are right in the thick of the fight to inform and uplift Americans, shoulder to shoulder with responsible broadcasters anxious to do all they can to make this a better Things are not always exactly what they appear to be. Example: Nashville APPEARS to be a small southern city of slightly over 400,000. But reach a little further and you'll discover that the Nashville television market numbers 2,052,300 people and some 450,000 television homes. 98% of these homes depend on Nashville for network TV. 96% of them look to Nashville for ALL TV. So, while Nashville LOOKS like America's 65th city, it's actually the Nation's 28th television market. Aren't these points worth further investigation?

WIBC editorial #543 came about as had many others. A problem had been found which we related to our listeners and offered a possible solution. Specifically, the Indiana World War Memorial Plaza had been permitted to fall into a state of disrepair. This condition existed because maintenance funds had not been provided by the General Assembly.

Following the editorial, Jack D. Trowbridge, the Memorial Commission’s secretary, announced that Explorer Scout Troop #60 had volunteered to launch the project by clearing the many rows of hedge in the two-block long plaza on Saturday, July 13. Sixteen members of the troop did just that. In spite of intermittent showers, they worked hard and made a tremendous improvement in the appearance of the area.

LEADS IN AUDIENCE

While this is not a permanent solution, it indicates that the youth of Indianapolis are vitally interested in community problems. We’re glad to number young men like these in the huge audience of WIBC...the only station that delivers both Indianapolis and Indiana!

BOOK NOTE

The author, sports information director and journalism instructor at Utah State University, has what is essentially written a textbook, better suited to the classroom than the broadcasting studio. His experience as a play-by-play broadcaster for the Aggie Network is evident, but it would appear that novices—for whom the book appears intended—will feel after reading it that no further experience is needed before broadcasting their first game.

Although Mr. Klages emphasizes the need for experience from the ground up and offers his work as "a philosophy of approach to a sportscaster's functions" rather than the lone criterion for success behind the microphone, the book's intent may too easily be misinterpreted.

TIO's sponsors

EDITOR: A recent BROADCASTING quotation from a station representative, "we now support...the Television Information Office," was not, in fact, true. TIO seeks its support only from broadcasters. Nonetheless, our library and other facilities are available not only to TIO's sponsors but to members of other branches of the television industry and to the community at large. We welcome all the assistance we can get in telling the story of television's problems and accomplishments as a social force.—Roy Danish, director, Television Information Office, New York.

THE JOHNSTOWN TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT STATIONS
COMMERCIAL MAKERS BUSIEST EVER

- Television advertisers more interested in color this year
- Price stability improves as bidding system loses favor
- Specter of fall AFTRA-SAG negotiations hovers in background

The production of TV commercials for the 1963-64 season is heading into peak activity this month amid signs that volume will be the heaviest in recent years and that color commercials are growing significantly in number.

A check by Broadcasting last week of officials at advertising agencies and commercial production companies also indicated that a measure of stability is being introduced into the industry because of a diminishing reliance on the bidding system of selecting outside producers, though this system has not been abandoned by any means.

However, the pricing situation, however, is the upcoming negotiation, this fall, of the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists and the Screen Actors Guild with advertisers and producers. The key issue undoubtedly will be a formula for residuals, which has been a thorn in the side of management since 1960 when the most recent contract covering filmed and taped commercials was formulated.

Tough Formula = "The residual formula that was negotiated by the advertising agencies and production companies (and some advertisers) have instituted stronger cost control units, whittling down expenses wherever possible and enabling agencies and producers to operate more efficiently and more profitably.

There was no unanimous opinion on whether more or fewer commercials are being produced for next year, as compared with recent years. A majority of..."
those canvassed said they were producing fewer commercials for most clients but many were producing for more clients than in past years. Some noted they were producing as many commercials per client but that a smaller number of commercials actually would reach the air for large-scale campaigns.

William Gibbs, vice president of Television Graphics Inc., voiced the belief that just as many or more commercials are being produced today, but that fewer actually are reaching the air because many are dropped after test periods.

He explained that the main concern of an advertiser should be the value of a commercial to the media buy, which may run into $300,000 or $400,000. Accordingly, only the commercials that the agencies and advertisers consider the most effective eventually remain on the air for regular campaigns.

Pick Companies Mr. Gibbs, a former J. Walter Thompson executive, said he has observed that agencies are still relying on the bidding system, but tend to go to a few companies they consider best suited for a particular assignment and negotiate a price and a contract.

The accent on cost-consciousness was sounded by several agencymen and was detailed by Gordon Webber, vice president and director of broadcast commercial production, Benton & Bowles, who said:

"In the past year, we have attempted to reduce promotion costs more than ever before, and have a department which makes up its estimates of costs and then compares them with actual costs. Though we use the bidding as the standard, as do many agencies, efforts are being made in some way to get away from it by use of the negotiated bid, for example. This means we go directly to a company or two which we feel will do the best job, ask for their bid, and then negotiate the price."

A production executive at a top agency, who is charged with responsibility over costs, noted that while fixed costs (talent, union, cameramen, directors) have gone up, revision costs have gone down. This indicates, he said, either that outside producers are more careful or that the clients are less demanding. He observed that the attention paid to costs and the insistence on more detailed specification of costs has also worked to the benefit of the production houses, which now obtain a clearer view of the cost picture and can adjust their original bids, if necessary.

Color Gains The growing importance of color was accentuated by several producers and agencymen, who noted that a larger number of advertisers were ordering color commercials. They were reluctant to identify the color clients, citing competitive considerations, but said the reason for the expansion was that color is becoming a more important factor in some major markets because of the steady rise in the number of color receivers.

One development mentioned in hushed tones by several producers and agency men is a move toward using more Negro performers in spots. Several noted they have been employing Negroes in commercials to a larger extent, and one producer added:

"We have, in fact, shot sequences to old commercials, adding Negroes and splicing them in. And this is not unique to our shop. Nobody likes to talk about it, because it's a kind of touchy situation."

What are some of the trends in commercial TV techniques? There were variations, depending on producers and the agencymen approached, but among those mentioned were live action commercials; a combination of live action plus graphics; so-called slice-of-life realism; documentary commercials.

But there was a feeling the casual, soft-sell approach would steal the scene next season.

Robert Bergmann, president of Filmex, offered these observations:

"We've found that commercials are most effective when they engender excitement for the product—and stop-motion can be useful here—and when they become involved with people. The so-called documentary technique in which a housewife gives her candid opinion of a product while involved in a home-life surrounding can be most convincing. We lean here at Filmex to a casual, low-pressure approach."

Lincoln Schuerle, president of Film-maker Inc., believes that the interview technique in commercials may have been "abused" but said it will be improved and will expand. He also envisions an increase in live action plus graphic spots and in the use of performers who do not have "the professional look." Sound is one area in the TV commercial field which needs improvement, Mr. Schuerle said, adding that "we sometimes forget that TV is not just sight but sound too."

Perhaps the two most pressing problems facing the TV commercials production industry are the long-range one of the bidding system (and what can replace it) and the immediate one of the SAG-AFTRA negotiation. These subjects were mentioned repeatedly by both agencymen and producers.

The upcoming union negotiations constituted a topic treated by these management officials with considerable concern. Several agencymen claimed that SAG and AFTRA have attained goals that should satisfy the unions without seeking additional gains. There was some fear that the AFTRA-SAG residual pattern might be sought by technical unions.

The consensus seemed to be that AFTRA and SAG had reached optimum conditions and additional demands upon producers and agencies might well be "a breaking point."

Several producers and agency officials mentioned that there is considerable research in progress to find a replacement for the bidding system.

Samuel Zurich, assistant managing director of the commercial production department at N. W. Ayer & Son, acknowledged that Ayer is one agency that is researching this subject, and added: "But we haven't come up with a solution yet."

At present, Ayer asks three producers to bid for a job, specifying (1) cost estimate and (2) the creative contribution the outside producer can make to the assignment. Mr. Zurich said the agency is not satisfied with the so-called bid system and hopes to evolve a more "fool-proof" method of selecting the "best" producer for a specific job.

Mickey Dubin, vice president for sales and administration for Sarra Inc., offered one suggestion to agencies that may help in making better commercials and bringing costs down—send your order in sooner. He said that business for Sarra came in later than usual and the company is "just beginning to roll."

If agencies can persuade their clients to give approval earlier, the outside producer can spend more time and effort on the advertiser's commercial, Mr. Dubin said.

A large increase in the demand for live action commercials was noted by Abe Liss, creative director, Elektra Film Productions, New York.

Mr. Liss said that while business in animated commercials is about the same as a year ago, the demand for live action commercials has doubled.

He attributed the rise in live action films to a trend toward more and more realism in commercials. "Audiences are becoming more sophisticated and they desire more realism and believability in commercials."

Tareyton account switches to BBDO

In what may be the largest account switch of the year to date, the American Tobacco Co. announced last week it has awarded its Dual Filter Tareyton cigarette business to BBDO, replacing the Lawrence C. Gumbinner advertising agency.

A spokesman for American Tobacco said Tareyton would bill "close to $12 million," though authoritative trade sources estimated the account in 1962 billed closer to $7 million.

They pointed out that for 1962, Television Bureau of Advertising figures show Tareyton spent about $3.3 million in TV, and Publishers' Information Bureau figures show that the cigarette brand invested about $3 million in newspapers and magazines combined.

They doubted that the company had spent more than $1 million in non-measured media.

The shift of the account marks the end of a 38-year relationship between Gumbinner and the American Tobacco Co. In 1925 the agency obtained American Tobacco's Tuxedo pipe tobacco business and in 1928 it began to handle the Roi-Tan cigar account, which recently moved to Gardner Advertising.

Robert B. Walker, president of American Tobacco, said the change was being made to "consolidate media planning and billing with consequent related advantages." BBDO has handled the company's Lucky Strike account since 1948.

Advertising for American Tobacco's Pall Mall cigarettes and Montclair cigarettes will continue with Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles. The BBDO appointment is effective Nov. 1.

Other large agency account switches this year: the $8 million Beech-Nut business from Young & Rubicam to Benton & Bowies and the $6 million VOS shampoo account from BBDO to J. Walter Thompson.

ABC-TV announces AFL telecast sponsors

ABC-TV announced last week that nine advertisers will sponsor a schedule of 40 American Football League games on 17 dates this fall and winter, beginning with two games on Sunday, Sept. 8 and running through the league playoff game late in December.

Sponsors for the telecasts will be the Gillette Co. (through Maxon), the Lincoln-Mercury division of Ford Motor Co. (Kenyon & Eckhardt), the Good-year Tire and Rubber Co. (Young & Rubicam), P. Lorillard (Grey), American Gas Association (Lennen & Newell), Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (BBDO), Pearl Brewing Co. (Tracy-Locke), Sun Oil Co. (William Esty), Chesbrough-Pond's Inc. (Norman, Craig & Kummel) and Union Carbide Corp. (William Esty).
Coffee TV spending up 7% in 1962

The coffee industry spent some 7% more money in television in 1962 than in 1961, but advertising by the 11 biggest spenders fell by some 5%, according to Television Bureau of Advertising figures.

Coffee spending was up from $40.3 million to $43.1 million, although spending of the top 11 was off from $36.7 million to $34.9 million.

Television accounted for 91.1% of the advertising budgets of the top 11 coffee advertisers. Of 19 brands produced by the 11 companies, seven brands used television as their only measured advertising medium.

Most of the coffee money went into spot television—$37 million—with $6.1 million being placed in network shows. For its industry-wide statistics, TVB based its figures on the advertising of 20 companies which produce 27 different brands.

Biggest spender of the group was General Foods Corp., producer of Maxwell House, Yuban and Sanka. General Foods spent $13.3 million in television in 1962, a drop of some $1.2 million from its 1961 figure. Five of the top 11 showed budget reductions from 1961 to 1962 in television, but the other 14 companies represented in the TVB figures made up for the slack and boosted the spending by almost $3 million.

We suppress the news
(and our audience likes it that way)

A breathless, blown-up version of how Mrs. Murphy dented her fender is the kind of news we don’t report.

We don’t shout — to be heard. We speak softly, but carry plenty of what our listeners want to hear (legitimate news) — when they want to hear it (now).

That’s how WFAA has learned to grab attention and hold it with the “news more people quote.”

And advertisers approve. They know it works.

News that’s actual, factual, in-depth, and often.

In all, nearly 30 hours a week. Including something like 210 features—weather, sports, farm, business, women, etc.—plus regularly scheduled NBC reports. Not to mention thorough, continuous regional, state, and local coverage by WFAA’s Southwest Central News staff of 16 full-time reporters, stringers in every Southwest city and town worth mentioning, and four mobile news cruisers on 24-hour call.

Providing news that informs. The kind that people turn on, tune in, listen for, and believe in.

This makes for loyalty. And an audience that responds. At least, that’s been our experience and that of our advertisers. Let it be your experience too.

Begin by calling your Petry-man.

NETWORKS’ HAPPY DAYTIME

Fourth-quarter TV selling well ahead of 1962; ABC and CBS near sellout; NBC at 92% level

A bullish pace at each of the TV networks in sales of next season’s daytime schedules indicates another record fourth quarter and continuation of a three-year trend of stronger advertiser response to network daytime programming.

ABC-TV and CBS-TV are virtually sold out in daytime, and NBC-TV is moving forward to SRO status. Network sales personnel are ready with reasons to account for the quickened activity.

Yale Roe, director of daytime sales at ABC-TV, where the sales rate is now estimated to be one month ahead of last year, attributes the brighter picture to the ABC’s “fully documented” daytime lineup. Track records for all but two shows in the schedule have been registered “on ABC air” and newcomers, Price Is Right (moving from NBC-TV) and Trailmaster (repeats of Wagon Train) have “established” themselves elsewhere.

Mr. Roe contrasts this lineup to last year when ABC-TV was “selling on the come” for three new daytime shows. Fourth quarter Monday-Friday daytime business already signed by ABC is estimated at $15 million based on standard card rates.

Higher Prices • According to network sources, four-half hours in ABC daytime strips are bringing prices 50% higher than the network’s “traditional” rates. Minutes in the Tennessee Ernie Ford Show, Price Is Right and the 60-minute Trailmaster series may now sell at $3,600, depending on frequency, where previously the going rate for an ABC-TV daytime minute, purchased at the same frequency, was approximately $2,400.

New programs in next season’s NBC-TV daytime schedules are the exception rather than the rule. The network will start in September with three new game shows—Word for Word, Missing Links and The Match Game—and two recently started—People Will Talk and You Don’t Say.

NBT-TV’s daytime programs are approximately 92% sold in the fourth quarter, a figure representing an estimated $20 million worth of business at standard card rates. A similar study of daytime network sales conducted by Broadcasting last year showed NBC-TV sold at a 90% level at the same time a year ago.

Bob McFadyn, manager of daytime sales at NBC-TV, sees the network’s healthy daytime financial picture as based on both increased affiliate clearances and longer lineups bought by individual sponsors. The average number of affiliate clearances in the coming season for daytime programs is 176, compared to 168 last year. And the average lineup bought by sponsors is up 15 stations from 150 last year to 165. The network reports that eight of its 12 daytime half-hours are completely sold and the four remaining half-hours are 70% sold. Its four news strips are sold out.

One Change • CBS-TV has preferred not to tamper with its Monday-Friday daytime schedule, the only change being the discontinuation of The Millionaire (4:30-5 p.m.) and allocation of that period to local station time.

Advertiser response to the status quo schedule has gratified the sales department to the extent that the schedule was sold out early in July. A spokesman for CBS-TV noted that this pace outstripped last year’s record for fourth-quarter sales.

Under CBS-TV’s “Morning Minute Plan” all time between 10 a.m. and noon is sold by the minute. When the plan was introduced in 1961 it met initial “lukewarm” reception (fourth quarter 50% sold by the end of July). And last year there were scattered minutes remaining at this point compared to this year’s sold-out record.

Morning minute prices at CBS-TV have gone up $300 across the board and now range from $2,300 to $3,100 in summer and $2,800 to $3,500 in winter. Afternoon time which CBS-TV sells as quarter-hour program buys will be “slightly more expensive” in the coming season than last year, reflecting higher program costs.

Weekends, Too • Saturday programming on each of the networks has also sold well ahead of last year's pace. The Saturday schedule at CBS-TV is totally sold for the fourth quarter with the exception of an alternate quarter-hour in the Alvin show and the network’s new children’s educational series, Do You Know, which has been slotted at 12:30-1 p.m.

NBC-TV reports its Saturday schedule 91% sold in the fourth quarter. Biggest boom to NBC Saturday sales has been the sellout of its educational program Exploring, completed recently with half program sponsorship signed for by Encyclopaedia Britannica.

ABC-TV’s Saturday-morning schedule was virtually sold out for the fourth quarter, early in May, according to the network.

BROADCASTING, August 5, 1963
What's discretionary income?

“I'll never know—now!”

His chances of knowing may not be quadrupled—but they're better in Ohio's THIRD MARKET—with 27 percent more discretionary income (on the national average). Millions of people with this advantage are entertained and informed by WHIO-TV-AM-FM. Quadrupler George P. Hollingbery can tell you how to bottle up this market.

Additional morsel for thought:

state's broadcasters and advertisers.

James A. Murphy, president of the Washington State Association of Broadcasters, said the recent liquor board decision has left advertisers in the state in a quandry on planning their campaigns and has cost the industry clients. An appeal will be made to the board, he said.

Of the two beer commercials involved in the decision, one depicted an outing in the woods with this commentary, in part: "Mid-afternoon and you're in the middle of nowhere. New mountain trail. Just saw a fawn. Cool, green, pine-y. Great time for a cool beer."

The ruling: "The board will have no objection to the 'outing' commercial, provided that the sentence 'Great time for a cool beer' is deleted. The board feels that this sentence is suggestive of consumption in a public place [the forest]."

A second beer commercial telling of a lazy, comfortable day on a yacht was rejected in its entirety by the liquor board on the grounds "boats and alcoholic beverages do not mix."

Mr. Murphy said broadcasters and advertisers are disturbed by the principles involved in the board's action. "For years the broadcasters in this state have rigorously adhered to a self-imposed voluntary guide to good practice and taste," he said, and have been able in the past to discuss mutual problems with the Liquor Control Board. "The recent action taken by the board, however, were taken unilaterally on the part of the board without consulting industry," he said.

Commercials in production...

Listings include new commercials being made for national or large regional radio or television campaigns. Appearing in sequence are names of advertiser, product, number, length and type of commercial, production manager, agency with its account executive and production manager. Approximate cost is listed, where given by producer.

For adults only...

Cigarette advertising is "more adult than ever," if BBDO's new radio spot campaign which began last Monday (July 29) for Lucky Strikes is any indication.

The commercial jingle line states that "Luckyse separate the men from the boys, but not from the girls."

The commercial was recorded July 22, 12 days after the Tobacco Institute had released an official statement of policy that "it is not the intent of the industry to promote or encourage smoking among youths."

Following the introductory jingle line of the commercial, an announcer says, "Smoking's a pleasure meant for adults. And Luckies are blended for adult tastes. If you're an adult smoker, remember: LS/MFT—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco."

SIMMONS’ TV RESEARCH

Does it give magazines an edge over TV?

Television researchers were waiting last week to find out whether their medium had been hurt by W. R. Simmons and Associates Research Inc.’s new television audience report.

They feared TV might suffer in the report’s analyses of magazine and television audiences, but they couldn’t tell immediately because the report was just going into distribution.

Moreover, such TV sources as the three networks and the Television Bureau of Advertising had not subscribed to the report, and Simmons authorities said it was going to subscribers only. Nonsubscribers would have to wait and crib a look from a friendly buyer.

W. R. Simmons, president of the research organization, issued a statement which seemed to allay and arouse TV fears at the same time. It said the figures couldn’t be used to compare the effectiveness of magazines and television, but it also offered a finding that seemed to give a distinct edge to magazines. The statement:

“The inclusion of television viewing information in the same study which provides audience information for 37 magazines makes possible certain joint analyses of the two media. Whereas in presenting these findings there is no assumption or implication that exposure to the two media affords equivalent opportunity for advertisers’ messages to be perceived, nonetheless advertisers wish to know the numbers and types of people reached by the two media separately and in combination.

“A striking result of the study is found in the comparison of ‘light’ magazine readers who are ‘light’ television viewers, with the ‘heavy’ television viewers who are ‘light’ magazine readers. We find significant differences between these two groups. Proportionately more people in the former group are younger, have high social position, more education, higher household income and better occupations.”

A number of TV researchers have speculated that television would suffer in “comparison” with magazines because, they contend, the two are no comparable by standard measurements.

Simmons officials said that in addition to citing magazine readership and viewing “relationships” the study reports total program audiences for 77 nighttime network TV programs and describes the audiences in terms of age, sex, index of social position, education, household income, occupation and locality type.

TV viewing and magazine reader ship relationships are shown accord to (1) the number of magazines read by the number of half-hour segments of TV viewed on an average evening, and (2) the average issue audiences of magazines by number of half-hour segments of television viewed on an average evening.

BROADCAST TIME SALES EXPANDS

To open 17 independently-owned branch offices

Broadcast Time Sales, a radio station representative firm for the past decade, is announcing today (Aug. 5) plans to open 17 independently-owned and operated branch offices (CLOSED CIRCUIT, July 29).

Called by BTS President Carl L. Schuele “one of the most revolutionary advances in the history of station representation,” the plan will grant regional franchises with rights to advertising sales and station solicitation in the territories as well as stock in the parent company to the branch office manager.

The office managers will receive training in management, station operation, and sales management, and will work on a 100% commission basis. By offering voting stock in the parent company, plus equity in the branch office, BTS is hopeful that the branch-office system will intensify its regional operation with what Mr. Schuele calls “lower income nationally, but the finest personnel in history.”

BTS plans a central billing system plus a continuous campaign of direct client calls at company headquarters across the country. In some instances BTS will create sample radio campaigns.

The new program is designed to enable the station to receive both national and regional service from one representative, and with the expansion, Mr. Schuele said BTS would become the country’s largest.
Why KBTV Bought Volumes 3, 4 and 5 of Seven Arts' "Films of the 50's"

Says John C. Mullins: President and owner of KBTV, Denver, Colorado

"There is no sure thing as far as television programming is concerned, but there is no better insurance for good station ratings than Seven Arts' "Films of the 50's"!

"With the 134 Warner Bros. and 20th Century-Fox features we have recently acquired we are looking forward to dominating feature film programming in Denver for the next three years.

"For example, we had ARB do a coincidental for our prime time debut of 'Mr. Roberts' on January 19 from 9:00-11:00 P.M. We scored an Average Rating of 32 with a 65% Share-of-Audience! How's that for insurance?"

NAACP DEMANDS HIT SNAG

2 IATSE unions turn down requisite of adding a Negro to each crew; call it 'featherbedding'

Demands of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for the Advancement of Colored People that the craft unions working in the Hollywood motion picture studios add a Negro to each crew have been flatly rejected by two unions. Despite the recommendation of George Flaherty, international vice president of the International Alliance of Theatrical & Stage Employees, that the 22 IATSE locals ratify the NAACP proposal, Scenic Artists Local 816 and International Photographers Local 659 strongly opposed it at membership meetings last week.

The Scenic Artists members, at their meeting, adopted a statement of policy drafted by the local's board which expressed "sympathy for the aims and purpose of the NAACP," but continued: "this union takes a position that the request...to force the employment of a Negro in addition to the normal regular crew would constitute featherbedding which we are opposed to in principle as being immoral if not illegal and will not be a party to such an act."

The resolution also noted that the "deterioration of the motion picture industry in Hollywood has resulted in the lack of employment opportunities," which makes compliance with the NAACP demands "impossible at this time." The statement concluded: "This local union does once more reaffirm that section of the obligation that we all took upon becoming a member of the IATSE, which states: 'we will use every honorable means to secure employment for the members of this union in preference to nonmembers.'"

A telephone check made by Broadcasting revealed that the proposal for providing employment for Negroes on the basis of the population distribution ratio of one Negro for every nine white workers, was to have been taken up at yesterday's (Aug. 4) membership meeting of the Motion Picture Studio Grips Local 80. The Publicists Association Local 818 will discuss the subject at its meeting Aug. 6 and on that same date it will also be considered by the board of the Make-up Artists & Hair Stylists Local 706.

The board of the Motion Picture Custumers Local 705 will consider the matter Aug. 15; the Motion Picture Studio Electrical Technicians Local 728 board will take it up on Aug. 28; the Film Technicians Local 683 will deal with it at their next regular meeting, Sept. 7, and the Script Supervisors Local 871 on Sept. 16. Other locals have not yet set dates for their next meetings.

Networks plan civil rights specials

All three television networks busied themselves with civil rights programing matters last week.

NBC-TV and CBS-TV revealed plans for special broadcasts on the subject, and ABC-TV disclosed the first topic for its previously announced five-part series on civil rights.

NBC-TV will pre-empt three hours of its prime-time programing Monday, Sept. 2 (7:30-10:30 p.m.) for what it calls a "definitive study of all aspects of the civil rights issue." The network said last week that it would try to sell the entire show to one sponsor.

Pre-empted shows will be Monday Night at the Movies, The Art Linkletter Show, and David Brinkley's Journal with a total of 12 sponsors involved in the three shows.

Described as a "comprehensive examination of the history of the civil rights movement from the Emancipation Proclamation down to the present day," the show will draw upon NBC's full staff of domestic correspondents for analyses, and also will call upon foreign correspondents to report on reaction to the issue in other countries.

CBS-TV on Aug. 21 (7:30-8:30 p.m. EDT) will carry a special broadcast on The Press and the Race Issue, examining charges and countercharges concerning the manner in which the press and broadcast media have handled the race issue.

CBS News's Charles Collingwood will be the reporter on the program, which will include a discussion moderated by Edward Barrett, dean of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University, with James Kilpatrick Jr., editor of the Rich-

CBS-TV policy paper on use of Negroes

The importance of employing Negroes in television programs was stressed last week in policy statements circulated among producers and performers.

Michael H. Dann, vice president in charge of programming for CBS-TV, sent a memo to staff producers and outside packagers re-emphasizing the network’s position that Negroes be “adequately and accurately” depicted in programs appearing on CBS-TV.

Mr. Dann noted there are “many Negro doctors, lawyers, school teachers, engineers, policemen, nurses, and jury men in life today,” and said CBS-TV “wished to maintain realism about having them appear as such in our dramatic programs.”

The New York chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences issued a statement of policy to its membership to “remind the TV industry of its responsibility to reflect the realities of the American scene by employing and truthfully representing all facets of our population.”

The statement said that “this applies especially to the Negro. There are in America Negro ambassadors, Negro judges, Negro doctors and Negro lawyers as well as Negro housewives and workers. There is no reason why television should not take pride in this fact and reflect this pride in the casting of its programs.”

NTA parent firm buys L.A. fruit packager

Mission Pak, Los Angeles, packager of California fruits, is being acquired by National General Corp., operator of 225 motion picture theaters, as part of a program of diversification. The acquisition, to be completed by Aug. 15, involves NGC’s issuance of a net amount of 135,276 shares of its common stock, after adjusting for the 59,000 shares of Mission Pak and the $340,000 worth of MP’s 53 1/2% convertible debentures acquired by NGC earlier this year as an investment. NGC has formed a wholly-owned subsidiary, Mission Pak Co., to carry on and expand the 43-year old business. NGC is also owner of 38% of the stock of National Telefilm Associates, five community TV systems and other interests, and is preparing a nationwide closed circuit color TV theater network for operation beginning in 1964.

Stanley Pflaum Associates, Los Angeles, which has handled Mission Pak advertising since 1949, will continue as agency for the operation. Company last year spent some $300,000 for broadcast media, divided between TV and radio on a four-to-one ratio, all spent in the six-week pre-Christmas period and largely in California, where most of the Mission Pak retail outlets are set up for the holiday sales season. The advertising is expected to be expanded after NGC’s takeover.

HARRIS OPPOSES LEGISLATION, PREDICTS NONE WILL PASS THIS YEAR

Many problems remain unsolved in the field of broadcast editorializations but few, if any, escaped discussion at the first National Broadcast Editorial Conference in Athens, Ga., July 25-27.

There was near unanimity among the 130-plus registrants and panelists that FCC strictures on radio and TV as advocates have been inimical to the public interest. And, conference participants agreed, the primary responsibility for fairness in editorializing rests with the licensees and should not be legislated by Congress or placed in rules by the FCC.

A powerful voice in Congress agreed with the latter view. Representative Oren Harris (D-Ark.) told the conference that broadcasters themselves should develop guidelines for editorializations. The chairman of the House Commerce Committee, in a departure from the prepared text of a July 26 speech (BROADCASTING, July 29), predicted that restrictive legislation on broadcast editorializations will not pass during this session of Congress.

At the same time, Representative Harris stressed that members of Congress are greatly concerned over political editorializations and the power they can wield. Criticism of congressional hearings on broadcast editorializations (BROADCASTING, July 22) was put forth during almost every session of the conference and Representative Harris's defense of the inquiry did little to relieve the apprehension of broadcasters.

The conference, sponsored by the Georgia Association of Broadcasters and the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia, took two firm steps. Conference participants adopted resolutions:

- Agreeing that an annual conference would be held on broadcast editorializations with sponsorship provided by those state associations of broadcasters, radio and TV stations and institutions of higher learning which desire to aid future conferences.
- Declaring that "ambiguous interpretations" of the fairness doctrine by the FCC have hurt the public interest and that legislation "can only inhibit the art of broadcast editorializing."

Broadcasters, the resolution continued, "can best solve the problems developed by the relatively new art of broadcast editorializing only through the conscientious evolving of policies, techniques and procedures. . . . We firmly believe evolution unfettered by restrictive legislation and guided by responsible broadcast editorialists can supply [the answer]. The members of this conference pledge ourselves to this end."

Dick Mendenhall, WSB-AM-TV Atlanta editorial director and chairman of the Athens conference, reappointed his steering committee and added four other members to plan the 1964 session. A meeting of this committee will be held in Washington Aug. 22, at which time a new chairman will be named and

'Anyone read the First Amendment lately?'

"What the hell is going on in this country?"

Asking that, an alarm was sounded Thursday in Chicago by the Radio-Television News Directors Association's past president over the growing trend toward government control of broadcasting. Particularly singled out: the congressional probe of station editorializing.

Dick Cheverton, past president of RTNDA and news director ofWOOD-AM-TV Grand Rapids, Mich., told a new Chicago chapter of the association that radio and TV newsmen had better start asking themselves this frank question "or be satisfied to work in a profession that is a mockery of the constitutional order."

Also asking if anyone has read the First Amendment lately, Mr. Cheverton called for newsmen to "quit being tolerant" of these incursions and to "make their stand now. We ought to label this congressional interference with the establishment of free journalism for what it is: a dangerous experiment that has no place in America."

Mr. Cheverton observed that Representative Walter Rogers (D-Tex.) called his probe of radio-TV editorializing because 20 congressmen "complained that the stations were violating the rules of fair play in their editorializations." The news official asked whether Congress would dare call a probe of a new religious group just because 20 congressmen didn't like another religion moving in on their churches.

Mr. Cheverton

Hands Off = "They'd be jeered out of office," Mr. Cheverton said, pointing out that the First Amendment "orders" Congress to "keep its hands off" both religion and the press. And the founding fathers never intended to exclude new communication innovations from the "press" concept either, he explained.

As for the concern of congressmen over "fair play," Mr. Cheverton noted that "the Congress imposed a rule on broadcasters which allows only politicians—not lawyers, not doctors, not clergymen, not truck drivers—but politicians and only politicians equal time on radio and TV to answer any comments about them."

Citing Representative Rogers's view that the broadcasters who editorialize must have clearer guidelines for their own protection, Mr. Cheverton said that "any time Congress imposes guidelines, they are controlling. Rogers's statement about 'protection' makes me uncomfortable. Congress doesn't have to protect journalism. The First Amendment has already taken care of that."

Mr. Cheverton also had a question for Representative Robert W. Hemphill (D-S. C.), who said... possible 1964 sites discussed.

FCC and Fairness • FCC Commissioner Kenneth A. Cox participated in a panel on "Management-Government relations" but he did not mention, until questioned, the commission's policy statement the same day (July 26) on the fairness doctrine and controversial issues (Broadcasting, July 29). He maintained the statement contains nothing new" and is simply an effort on the part of the FCC to remind licensees "which we have reason to believe some people have been overlooking and to caution them about their observance."

At that time none of the conference participants had seen the statement and Commissioner Cox was not questioned further.

The FCC member and Washington attorney W. Theodore Pierson of Pierson, all & Dowd clashed over "limitations" CC has placed on broadcast editorialists. Panel moderator Dick Cheverton, news director of Wood-AM-TV Grand Rapids, Mich., opened the discussion with the contention that continued regulation can only become more complex.

"It appears to feel broadcasters are becoming increasingly abusive of their editorializing "privilege." The RTNDA spokesman asked, "Since when is the dissemination of opinion in this country a privilege? It can't be, unless Congressman Hemphill does not believe in the 'free press' guarantee."

Mr. Cheverton said he would like to point out to Representative Hemphill that editorializing—"the so-called 'bias'"—was a powerful weapon in his hands of men like John Adams and Tom Paine in affecting the very government which sustains Representative Hemphill. The Declaration of Independence is an editorial. Does Representative Hemphill think, as the British did, that it was an abuse?"

Double Standard • Mr. Cheverton said the congressman obviously doesn't "but his language emphasizes double standard that is being accepted in this country. No one attacks journalistic effort if it is carried in newspapers.

"But what happens if a newspaper and a broadcast station carry the same editorial in one of those congressional districts where a representative thinks he's been abused? The newspaper editorial an abuse of 'privilege' to be debated in Congress?" Mr. Cheverton asked. "Or is it excluded because newspapers are not licensed by the government?"

Mr. Cheverton explained what is really being said "is that radio news, as part of a radio station, is under government control. Representative Glenn Cunningham [R-Neb.] put it bluntly when he said, 'Editorials ought to be sanctioned by Congress, not by some bureaucrat downtown.'"

Comparing such views with the language of the First Amendment, Mr. Cheverton said, "What do you think now of freedom of the press?"

The new local chapter of RTNDA was organized during a luncheon meeting held in the executive dining room at WJSA(TV) Chicago. Additional chapters are to be organized in other cities, it was said. Harold Salzman, WLS Chicago, was made temporary chairman of the Chicago group.

The new chapter also voted a resolution that the RTNDA annual meeting in Minneapolis Sept. 11-14 should discuss and "take urgent and concerted opposition to FCC public notice 38372 which concerns the stations' responsibilities under the fairness doctrine."
interest, fairness doctrine, controversial issues and editorials. He said the FCC has had no difficulty separating its administrative and enforcement functions and that, if Mr. Pierson's suggestions were followed, broadcasters would forever be bogged down in court without a decision on what they could or could not do.

This particularly would be true on Section 315 (equal time) questions, the commissioner said, in pointing to the speed with which the FCC acts in this area.

There is no evidence, he countered, that the FCC has restrained or coerced broadcasters. "The FCC's standards were not set at a cost to editorial freedoms nor have they hurt the public," the commissioner contended. Competition, he said, will not solve the problem of fairness and standards must be applied to the multi-station as well as the one-station market.

Commissioner Cox said the FCC does plan to issue a primer of do's and don'ts on editorials.

No Quarrel • Another panelist, Wil- lard Schroeder, general manager of WOOD-AM-TV, said that he could not argue with the FCC's fairness doctrine as expressed in the 1949 policy statement on editorializing. Trouble arises, he said, when the FCC attempts to specify what should or should not be done in a given situation. He questioned the value of an FCC primer on editorials, similar to the present one on political broadcasting because broadcasters are more confused on Section 315 because of the existing primer.

Kurt Borchardt, communications counsel for the House Commerce Committee, said there is little reason for broadcasters to fear that Congress will take away their right to editorialize. He pointed out that only one member of the committee, Representative John Bennett (R-Mich.), has expressed a view that stations are not authorized by the Communications Act to editorialize and that no other committee members have agreed with him.

Mr. Borchardt agreed with his boss, Representative Harris, that legislation which would restrict broadcast editorials is not likely.

Most broadcasters agreed during a July 27 panel on political editorials that stations should endorse candidates for public office—but only after thorough investigation of the candidates and issues.

An earlier panel stressed the importance of thorough research before editorials are undertaken on any subject. The participants agreed that the size of a station's staff is not important in a decision to editorialize but that the staff must be competent.

Representative Harris and Mr. Borchardt made appeals for editorialists to appear before the Communications Subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee when it resumes hearings later this month on broadcast editorials. "Come and speak as individuals," Mr. Borchardt urged.

More than a half-dozen of the broadcasters at the conference said they would request an opportunity to testify. None of them had planned to appear prior to the conference.

Future Plans • "Reason and responsibility are the only guides we need" in future editorials, Dale Clark, WGAATV Atlanta, said in a summation of the conference. Editorials must follow a course of reason and broadcasters do not need a lawyer or the FCC to tell them what is fair and right, he said.

Members of the 1964 committee, in addition to Mr. Mendenhall, include Messrs. Cheverton and Clark; Professor Worth McDougald, head of the radio-TV department, University of Georgia; Ralph Renick, WTVJ TV Miami; Byron Cowan, WSGC Fort Knox, Ky. (all members of the 1963 NBEC committee); Roger Turner, WMCN New York; John Corporon, WDFS-TV New Orleans, Jack Williams, executive secretary, GAB, and Bill Monroe, NBC News, Washington.

In addition to the above, Mr. Mendenhall said that Ed Ryan, news director of WTOP-TV Washington, and a representative of the National Association of Broadcasters, would be invited to attend the Washington meeting.

Raymond Carow, WALB-TV Albany, Ga., and president of the GAB, indicated unofficially that the Georgia broadcasters again would like to sponsor the conference in 1964. The same sentiment was expressed by Professor McDougald. The conference, held in the Center for Continuing Education on the university campus, attracted twice as many participants as the sponsors had originally planned.

In the resolution adopted by the conference, NBEC was established on an annual basis open to all radio and TV stations.

In a second resolution, the NBEC delegates described the conference as a "major positive effort to attain increasing maturity in broadcast editorializing. . . All concerned in the complexity of broadcast editorializing are seeking fairness. We submit that so-called fairness doctrine as ambiguously interpreted and defined by the FCC and individual congressmen is not the totally fair approach. Nor is it in the fullest sense in the complete public interest, convenience and necessity.

Will it some day be AP, UPI—and NBC?

NBC News announced the opening of new wire service today (Aug. 5) linking its New York and Washington communications centers and making reports from its correspondents all over the world readily available in "item form" to all the network's news units.

William R. McAndrew, executive vice president in charge of NBC News, said the new service would not replace any regular wire service used by the network but would only be used to carry NBC's own news coverage.

He referred to the new link as a natural outgrowth of increased numbers of NBC News shows and an expanded network news staff. Mr. McAndrew noted that with the change, NBC News correspondents will function as wire service reporters as well as broadcast- ers, phoning and cabling stories when other circuits are unavailable and adding detail and color to stories carried by the regular news services.

He called the new circuit "the first leg of an NBC News news service" and added that it could "develop into a much more comprehensive one . . . and might be made available outside NBC."

Unexpected news special

A WXYZ-TV Detroit telecast of a golf tournament was transformed from a routine show into a live news special July 27 when a golf course bridge holding 80 spectators suddenly collapsed into a river just one minute before air time.

As the "Womens' Wolverine Open" tournament was canceled for the day, WXYZ-TV turned its cameras to the disaster area for an hour's worth of live news, including interviews with some of the injured spectators. The coverage was video-taped and 30 minutes of highlights were replayed later in the day.

First year of pay TV test considered successful

"Encouraging and enlightening" was the description of subscription television's first-year test over WHCT(TV) Hartford, Conn., given last week by Thomas F. O'Neill, chairman of the board of the General Tire & Rubber Co., parent firm owning WHCT. The pay TV project is being conducted by a General Tire subsidiary, RKO General Phonevision Co.

Mr. O'Neill's first-year report was issued in association with Joseph S. Wright, president of Zenith Radio Corp., developer of the pay TV system and maker of the technical equipment. The pay TV test runs for three years under FCC authority.

Mr. O'Neill said "it is still too early" for the test to provide complete conclusions as to the future prospects for pay TV, but "the experiment has already shown that we are meeting a public need, that program expenditures are consistent and that disconnections due either to dissatisfaction on the part of subscribers or delinquency in payment are remarkably low."

More than 3,000 homes are Hartford pay TV subscribers, Mr. O'Neill said, and the number could be much greater had the firm chosen to increase its installation pace. Since the purpose of the test is to get information for the FCC and not numbers this has not been done, he indicated, although "applications of new subscribers have sharply increased during the last two months."

RKO General Phonevision's goal, he explained, is to maintain a large enough sample "to develop data for our own purposes and for the information of the FCC in its eventual evaluation of the entire subject of pay television."

Zenith's Mr. Wright felt the results so far have been satisfactory also. "We have always believed that TV could be more than just an advertising medium," he said. "We felt strongly that it had the capability of becoming a new economic and convenient electronic box office to distribute the type of top quality entertainment advertisers cannot afford to sponsor but which the American public nevertheless wants to see."

Zenith's convictions now are "being translated into actual practice in Hartford," he said, "and it appears that our confidence in subscription TV was justified."

Mr. Wright said his company believes commercial TV will not lose by pay TV but eventually will benefit "through renewed interest in TV as a medium, through encouraging the establishment of new stations and stimulating the creative talents of the entertainment industry."

The report noted that theater operators "are still adamant in their attempts to place embargoes on films for subscription TV" but most major film distributors have been cooperative in the test. The highest rating films over the past year were "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" with 66% of all subscriber homes and "The World of Suzie Wong" with 65%.

The Hartford project telecasts approximately 75 live sports events during the first year, the report said, including professional hockey and basketball, collegiate football and basketball and professional boxing. Last fall's Patterson-Lisbon fight rated 81% of all subscriber homes at $3 each. Results of the July 22 rematch were not available.

The report disclosed that RKO General Phonevision has just completed tape a special show featuring the Limeliters and has scheduled another special starring Eddie Fisher. A summer theater production, not identified, also has been completed. Other programs this past year included the Bolshoi Ballet, Kingston Trio, Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Council," "An American Pageant of the Arts," Anton Chekhov's "A Country Scandal" and guitarist Carlos Montoya.

The report said most programs are in the $1 and $1.50 category and subscribers pay no minimum. After a three-month bonus period, subscribers are charged a weekly rental of 75 cents for the decoder unit which unscrambles the pay TV picture on their regular TV receiver.

How DO YOU
snare a
Gold-Crested
Budgetspender?

Here is a story with a purpose:

Once upon a short time ago there was this fellow, you see, and he built up quite a reputation for himself by the way he kept capturing that most elusive of all birds, the gold-crested budgetspender. The other ornithologists (who were usually happy enough just having a lark) began to grow jealous. "How," they asked archly—his name is Fred K. Archly—"do you manage to find so many gold-crested budgetspenders?"

"Well, sir," said Fred (a quiet, courteous fellow), "I just ask myself: 'If I were a gold-crested budgetspender, where would I go?' Then I do. And they have. It's all just a simple matter of media strategy!"

Your advertising story has a purpose, too.

That's why this thinly-disguised allegory carries a message for you. There are all kinds of gold-crested budgetspenders flying around the firmament of the broadcast business. Some have bigger wingspreads than others—which makes them more desirable (albeit more elusive).

As everyone knows, a gold-crested budgetspender in the hand is worth a whole flock hidden behind a door marked "Radio-TV Department" or "General Manager" (depending which side of the street you're selling). And—at risk of scuttting Fred K. Archly's secret—you just have to know when and where you can find gold-crested budgetspenders at rest. Then you go there. And they're receptive.

The "when" is the time they happen to be in need of specific, up-to-date, indubitably accurate facts about the broadcast business. Which, in their case, is often.

The "where" is the place most of them go to find such information—a rich feeder of factual nourishment known to them (and, we hope, you) as Broadcasting Yearbook. Like the reliable oak tree, it's a perennial mainstay that puts forth new, fresh foliage every year. It has been doing this more and more comprehensively for the past 33 years—which is only one reason why so many gold-crested budgetspenders are attracted to its authoritative boughs... uh, pages. (Allegory can sometimes be tricky.)

And—would you believe it?—WE also have a purpose.

The 1964 Broadcasting Yearbook will displace the best selling 1963 Broadcasting Yearbook come next December 1. Every gold-crested budgetspender worth his salt will then send the old, frayed copy to his company's Reference Library, putting the bright, mint-new, bigger-than-ever edition within easy reach on his desk.

When he opens it (which could be a dozen times a day), his mind attuned to matters of budget-spending—will you be there? With your story? With the kind of facts about yourself to influence his decisions?

Fred K. Archly will. He's already sent in his space reservation for the 1964 Broadcasting Yearbook, smart fellow. But there are quite a few other prominent, advantageous positions still open. We can't guarantee for how long. (Here is a happy case where the early bird gets something really worthwhile for his foresight.) Lots of people are interested in making profitable contact with gold-crested budgetspenders. Some of them are probably those birds of prey you call competitors.

You can read a frank appraisal of the 1964 Broadcasting Yearbook's virtues in the column at right. The average reader will absorb all the facts in 47.3 seconds. But if you read faster, you can reserve your space that much sooner. Never put off until tomorrow what you can do TODAY—particularly when you're invited to call your nearest Broadcasting office collect. (We also accept postage-due mail.)
Some anonymous genius (with a flair for descriptive precision) has aptly called this—

WHY? Because the 1964 BROADCASTING Yearbook is a veritable library of 50 separate directories, comprising the most complete assembly of information about the radio and TV business ever published...yet all compacted with editorial skill into a single, easy-to-use volume.

The 1964 BROADCASTING Yearbook (biggest yet) will have nearly 650 pages, two-thirds of a million words, all tabbed for instant reference under six main sections:

A. Television Facilities
B. AM/FM Radio Facilities
C. Broadcast Equipment/FCC Rules
D. Codes/Program Services
E. Representatives/Networks/Trade Groups
F. Agencies/Advertisers/Billings

Westinghouse, as angel, will telecast new stage play on opening night in New York

Television and Broadway will join hands in October when Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. presents a new three-act dramatic play on its five TV stations at the same time that the theatrical production opens in New York.

The play, "The Advocate" will open at the ANTA theater in New York on Sunday, Oct. 13. It will be televised on that date on Westinghouse's stations—WBZ-TV Boston, KVV-TV Cleveland, KDKA-TV Pittsburgh, WJZ-TV Baltimore and KPIX(TV) San Francisco. The show will be taped for television in New York following the conclusion of its two-week tryout in Mineola, Long Island, and before its Broadway opening. Westinghouse also has TV syndication and will share in the motion picture rights.

Donald H. McGannon, president of WBC, in announcing the new venture last Thursday said that Westinghouse put up $60,000 of the $100,000 financing for the Broadway production. In addition the TV production itself will cost the company $80,000.

The television show will be offered for sponsorship, but the production will not be interrupted for commercial messages, Mr. McGannon said. Commercials will be presented at the opening, during intermissions and at the closing of the drama.

Mr. McGannon pointed out that Westinghouse does not expect to receive a profit from the original TV production on Westinghouse stations. He added, however, that the program will be offered for syndication following its initial run.

He noted that Westinghouse is "looking forward to presenting more than one Broadway production over the period of a season," depending on the success of the initial program. Michael Ellis, co-producer of the Broadway production with William Hammerstein, said that the theatrical production was possible only because of the 60% backing by the broadcasting company.

He noted that although the theater has only talked about the possible effects such a venture might have on Broadway, now "we have the chance to find out."

"The Advocate," which stars James Daly, is a drama of an attorney who defends unpopular clients despite threats to his personal and professional life. It is based on the experiences of the defense attorneys in the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

The play is the first by Robert Noah, a creator of TV quiz shows for Goodson-Todman Productions.

RED TAPE, VIDEO TAPE

ABC-TV on a tight schedule in coverage of track meet

The United States-Russian track meet in Moscow on July 20 and 21 may have had speed and excitement but there were no less ingredients in the race with time of ABC-TV crews and producers covering the events.

In an interview with Broadcasting last week, executive producer Roone Arledge detailed the statistical rundown from the July 17 night flight from New York to Moscow and on up to show time for the 90-minute telecast at 9:30 p.m. on July 23 five nights later.

At the time of the flight at 8:30 p.m., the network production unit had yet to receive formal Russian approval for coverage of the meet. Visas had been obtained (just hours earlier) at 4 p.m. On arrival July 18 at 8 p.m. Moscow time, the producers began a series of meetings with officials for coverage approval and movement from the airport of the some 16,000 pounds of TV tape equipment the 21-man crew brought with it to record the proceedings at Lenin Stadium.

Tape Is Tape • But it was red tape and not only video tape—which the Russians apparently couldn't see as a necessary "substitute" for film cameras—that ate up precious hours up into the late evening hours on July 19. Equipment at last moved to the stadium by about 10 p.m. and a control room built, cables laid and camera positions staked.

Preparations were completed by 10 in the morning on July 20, testing underway by noon, and at 3:45 p.m. the crew was checking its camera shots and taping introductions. At 5 p.m. the track meet was on and the taping started. That day's taping was edited on the morning of July 21 and the first cut enplained that night for New York. Cameras were then changed to fit coverage requirements on July 21, the second day of the meet. At 2 p.m., new camera positions were completed and cables relaid, taping was performed from 4:30 p.m. and editing and custom clearance to 6 a.m. on July 22.

The crew was back in New York with all tape at 6 p.m. July 22, with editing and run throughs up to about 9:05 p.m., 25 minutes before air time.

It is estimated that the network took a $45,000 gamble, the approximate cost of moving equipment and people to Moscow, for at the time there was no assurance of approval.

Veteran Coverage • ABC-TV has covered the meet for the past three years—two years before in Moscow. In the current agreement, the Russians had specified that the coverage be filmed, that shooting not be permitted outside of the stadium and that all equipment and produced be crated and packaged immediately after the meet for shipping back to the United States. The building of a control room also was part of the pact.

ABC-TV has planned its coverage from the first of this year but initial negotiations had not sealed the agreement to the point of visa granting.

Reasons for the Russian attitude that caused the tight schedule are not known through the following may have affected the situation to some degree:

Taping in Moscow is unusual, nuclear test ban talks were in progress, the Chinese Communist delegation was in Moscow, the international film festival was being held and two American circus companies were there.

The sports special was sponsored by Chesbrough-Pond's Inc., through Norman, Craig & Kummel; the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., through Young & Rubicam, and Whitehall Laboratories, through Ted Bates & Co. ABC-TV announced on July 25 that "by popular demand" it would telecast highlights of the meet again in prime time to both eastern and central time zones but in an edited, 60-minute version (Friday, Aug. 2, 7:30-8:30 p.m. EDT).

Suggestions sought from scientists

Social scientists throughout the country have been invited to submit proposed research projects to be considered in a government-backed study of the effect of television on children.

The study, sponsored by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and to be financed by private contributions, has been slow getting off the ground. It was ordered over a year ago as an outgrowth of hearings by the Senate Juvenile Delinquency Subcommittee (BROADCASTING, July 9, 1962).

A Joint Committee for Research on TV and Children was formed to oversee the study and this committee last week sent letters to several thousand social scientists seeking fruitful areas for investigation. Proposals must be submitted in less than 1,500 words to the Joint Committee, Dr. Ralph Garry,

But what’s so newsy about ancient Greece? What’s so pressing about the Battle of Marathon, the trial of Socrates or a performance in the theatre at Epidaurus?

The answer, says NBC News, is “plenty.” And who can deny that the past and present are tied together inextricably in the flow of human affairs?

That’s why next season’s actuality specials on NBC-TV will range all the way from an exploration of Greece’s Golden Age to an up-to-the-minute study of American foreign policy.

Whether the datelines read “B.C.” or “R.N.” (for “right now”), this network’s news specials are unique in broadcast journalism.

Just this Spring, “The Kremlin” explored the last eight centuries of Russian history through an unprecedented look behind the walls of Moscow’s storied citadel. The nation’s critics hailed it as a television masterpiece.

Then, last December, it was a phenomenon of current history that held NBC viewers spellbound. “The Tunnel’s” on-the-scene, start-to-finish coverage of an underground escape into West Berlin won a flock of important prizes, among them the Emmy for “Program of the Year.”

Next season’s news specials will be dealing with subjects as varied as race relations, a journey on the Orient Express, and 20th-century warfare. But one aim will be shared by all: making this complex age of ours just a bit easier to understand.

Bernard Russell, special assistant to the secretary of HEW, is chairman of the committee. Other members, all from the industry, include Melvin A. Goldberg, vice president-research director of the National Association of Broadcasters; Julius Barnathan, ABC; Frank Shakespeare, CBS, and Louis Hausman, NBC.

Accompanying last week's invitation for bids were proceedings of a February conference in New York among 25 social scientists. This conference suggested broad areas of research into the question of TV's effect on children.

After definite projects of study are selected by the committee, contracts will be awarded to various institutions in specific areas of research. Mr. Russell predicted that some of these studies will be completed in months while others will take years.

International festival planned by WND(TV)

Educational station, wntv(tv) New York, announced plans last week for an international television festival, to be presented on two or more weekends in October. The station has sent out invitations to 19 countries to participate, and indicated it will wait until response is received before making specific plans for the shows.

Stations in the various countries are being asked to submit from one to three shows produced originally for domestic viewing in the fields of drama, documentary, music, dance or comedy.

Samuel B. Gould, station president and general manager, said the program will be "one of the most ambitious projects" the station has undertaken.

Countries invited to participate were Australia, Mexico, Japan, Great Britain, Italy, Sweden, Canada, Germany, France, Czechoslovakia, Ireland, Spain, Argentina, Chile, Norway, Venezuela, Brazil, Colombia and Russia.

Sonderling stations to 'sell' democracy

The six Sonderling radio stations will try to "sell" educational material with a year-long campaign of spot announcements aimed at teaching "the full concept of American democracy," it was announced last week.

The series, titled "Declarations for Democracy," was prepared and will be voiced by Professor Robert A. Scala- pin, chairman of the political science department of the University of California at Berkeley. Varying from 80 to 95 seconds, the spots are designed "to provide the answer to a question on American democratic principles or rebut a communist or fascist anti-American thrust."

Twenty-six of the spots have already been prepared and are scheduled for broadcast over the next few weeks. An additional 95 are currently in preparation for the remainder of the year. Egmont Sonderling, president of the Sonderling stations, said he plans to make the scripts and/or tapes available to any other station which would like to present them.

Sonderling stations are WOPA-AM-FM Oak Park, Ill., KDIA Oakland, Calif., WDBA Memphis, and KFOX-AM-FM Long Beach, Calif.

Time-Life and Drew to syndicate TV shows

Ten one-hour films of a dramatic documentary nature, co-produced by Bob Drew Associates and Time-Life Broadcast, are being placed in worldwide syndication by Peter M. Robbeck & Co.

Among the films to be offered are "The Chair," the story of the successful legal fight for the commutation of Paul Crump's death sentence; "Football," an examination at two high school coaches and their fiercely competitive teams; "Susan," the story of the life and death of a play featuring Jane Fonda, and "Blackie" a recounting of a veteran airline pilot's last trans-Atlantic flight before retirement. Other films also will deal with people in "times of deep emotional stress."

A Time-Life Broadcast spokesman said the series marks the company's return to the TV film syndication field after an absence of about 10 years. In the network area, co-productions of Time-Life Broadcast and Drew have appeared on ABC-TV's Close-Up! series on CBS-TV sports programs and on NBC-TV's Today and Tonight series on CBS-TV sports programs and on NBC-TV's Today and Tonight series on CBS-TV sports programs.

WAAL-TV Baltimore will on Aug. 19 present the world television premiere of The Crowning Experience a story of American educator Mary McLeod Bethune who, born of slave parents, eventually became a presidential advisor. Report details candidates' complaints

SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE BRIEFED ON HOW STATIONS HANDLED THEM

Should a broadcast licensee give free time to a political candidate who complains that the seating plan of a joint TV appearance gave his opponent an advantage?

What should a licensee do for a candidate who complains that newspapers failed to list his name in a time slot for which he has scheduled a paid political broadcast?

How about giving free time to a man who says he deserves it so he can announce his candidacy in the middle of a campaign?

These were some of the problems—all worked out by broadcasters without appeal to the FCC—during 1962 coverage of campaigns for the U.S. Senate. The nature of these complaints and other details of licensee experience in all 1962 political races are contained in a special report prepared by the FCC for the Senate Subcommittee.

The information will become a part of the hearing record of a completed Senate Communications Subcommittee hearing on bills to suspend equal time provisions in various races next year. It was requested during the hearing by Senator Ralph Yarborough (D-Tex.), watchdog chairman (Broadcasting, July 1).

The Senate communications unit has ended its hearing and has the bills under advisement. The new FCC report, a supplement to a previous document which provided statistical data on the 1962 political broadcasting experience of 5,300 licensees (Broadcasting, June 10), will be considered when the senators sit down to hammer out a bill. Proposals under consideration include one to repeal Section 315 entirely, another which would suspend the equal time section for presidential, gubernatorial and congressional races next year, and a third version limiting suspension to 1964's presidential and vice presidential races. The House already has passed a bill like the latter (Broadcasting, June 24).

The Human Side • The FCC's supplemental report goes behind the myriad of figures it offered the Congress in supplying background of the statistics with the names of candidates and stations—all information culled
Local show goes Group. "The Mike Douglas Show" is a product of a Group W—Westinghouse Broadcasting Company—station, KYW-TV, Cleveland. It is scheduled to be seen on all five Group W television stations.

A big success in Cleveland, "The Mike Douglas Show" brings a fresh personality into the medium; and daily hour-and-a-half programs of variety, laughter, and big name guests. It will be a source of pleasure to audiences in Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and San Francisco, as well as its own hometown. It is even being made available to other stations outside of Group W throughout the country.

The Group, unlike the network or the individual station, has both local flexibility and creative and financial resources. "The Mike Douglas Show" is a case in point. It demonstrates the ability of a single station to contribute to the vitality of the Group. It also demonstrates the ability of Group W to use these resources and this flexibility to provide new and interesting sources of programming for the industry.
A contender’s opinions on Section 315

New York Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, considered a contender for the Republican presidential nomination in 1964, favors suspension of Section 315 for next year’s presidential race, but does not favor moving the suspension down to the governor level.

The governor’s opinion is contained in a letter written last week to the Senate Commerce Committee, which is considering legislation to suspend Section 315 in various races (see page 60).

Governor Rockefeller said broadcasting has provided a great service “in making substantial amount of prime time available free of charge to candidates for public office.” Noting his “very deep respect for the rights of minority groups to be heard on public issues,” the governor said, “I believe Congress should move with caution in considering any legislation which would modify or abridge this right.”

The committee heard from two other governors last week. Both supported S 252, a bill to include gubernatorial races in a 1964 suspension of Section 315. The governors: Endicott Peabody (D) of Massachusetts and Carl Sanders (D) of Georgia.

Earlier 32 governors had told the committee that they supported the bill (CLOSED CIRCUIT, July 29).

from the questionnaires.

The following is a sampling of the new report:

The FCC found that while 1,200 licensees gave sustaining time to political discussion last year, the amounts varied widely. Some stations gave as little as 30 minutes, but at the other extreme were these:

- In TV, four stations gave between 10 and 15 hours: KNBC and KXNT, both Los Angeles; WCBS-TV New York and WKBW Madison, Wis. WNBC-TV New York gave between 15 and 19 hours. Three stations—all Hawaiian—gave more than 20 hours each: KHJX Hilo and KVHN-TV Honolulu (both licensed to Kaiser Industries Corp.) and KMWV-TV Waikiki (Maui Publishing Co. Ltd.).

- In AM, 16 stations gave between 10 and 15 hours; nine gave from 15-20 hours and eight provided over 20.

Senator Yarborough was equally interested in stations which chose not to broadcast political programming. Of 10 initially reported to have told the FCC they had no political activity on their air (other than news), four were found to be noncommercial, one engaged in a pay-TV experiment and one was not on the air during the campaign. But four commercial TV’s were rated as non-active: WATR-TV Waterbury, Conn.; WLOX-TV Biloxi, Miss.; WISE-TV Asheville, N. C.; and KCBY-TV Coos Bay, Ore.

It was noted that political activity varies from state to state from year to year, but all states had congressional races in 1962.

Of 100 AM’s reporting no activity, two-thirds are located in four southern states: Virginia (27), Mississippi (25), Louisiana and North Carolina (11 each). (In sections of some southern states, political activity is negligible due to a one-party system.)

Among independent FM’s (those not connected with AM’s) 89 reported no political activity. Nineteen are located in California; eight are in Illinois; seven in Ohio and six in Texas.

Where the supplemental report humanizes the political information is in the answers to a question about complaints stations received which were not referred to the FCC. For the report’s purposes answers were confined to senatorial races.

The report shows that 16 TV stations and 24 AM’s had complaints of this nature.

The Fulbright Complaints • Many of these complaints were traced to the senatorial campaign in Arkansas where Senator J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.) faced Dr. Kenneth Jones, a Republican. James H. Pilkington, the senator’s campaign manager, wired 17 AM’s in Arkansas on the weekend of Nov. 3-4 that portions of spots for Dr. Jones contained statements which were “libelous, slanderous and defamatory of Senator Fulbright.” The stations were warned to consult their attorneys before continuing with the spot schedule.

Seven stations either dropped the spots or asked the GOP for new copy. One of these said it was concerned that its location in the senator’s home town might have an effect on a local jury if the complaint went to court.

Six stations continued to run the spots. Two read the complaint on the air and two told Mr. Pilkington they didn’t have the GOP schedule.

Elsewhere, KMED-AM-TV Medford, Ore., received a complaint from a candidate who said the station’s regional representative opposed him. The station told the FCC it resolved the problem on its own.

KOW-TV Portland, Ore., heard from one of six candidates for the Republican senatorial nomination who had appeared in a joint telecast. He deserved free time, he said, because an opponent had an advantageous seating position. The station decided it had been fair and turned the man down.

WVTY-TV Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., reported that a Republican candidate complained to the station that two of four newspaper listings for his paid 15-minute political appearance failed to use his name. The station said it had no control over such listings.

KMBC-TV Colorado Springs, Colo., said it had a request for free time in the middle of the campaign from a man who wanted to announce his candidacy. The station refused him and explained that he wasn’t a legally qualified candidate. There was no further complaint.

KOAA-TV Denver offered free time to a minority candidate who had refused to participate in a joint appearance because one of the candidates scheduled was a Socialist.

WTVH-TV Peoria, Ill., said it had complaints from two Democratic officials when it tagged a spot for the Republican candidate as paid for by the “General Democratic Party of Illinois.” WTVH stopped the spot.

Socialists who requested free time from WABC-TV New York were granted the exposure after Senator Jacob K. Javits (R-N. Y.) appeared on All America Wants to Know.

When Chicago’s Mayor Richard J. Daley complained about the substance of a WIND Chicago newscast, the station aired his statement.

The FCC last week…

- Gave Herbert M. Hoppe 30 days to explain why he shouldn’t be fined $100 for buying the construction permit of WVAL Sauk Rapids, Minn., without commission permission. Mr. Hoppe bought out his partner in the venture, Carl A. Nierengarten. The FCC’s action also retroactively granted Mr.

Senator Keating calls Pacifica inquiry ‘useful’

A member of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee said last week that it was conducting a possible Communist infiltration on the Pacifica Foundation, licensee of three non-commercial FM stations, brought out useful information.

Senator Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) said it is not the subcommittee’s function "to judge or to condemn any individual, but it is useful that certain facts were brought to light that the directors of the Pacifica Foundation and the public can approach the problem fully informed."

Late last month the subcommittee made public testimony obtained during its secret January hearing on the foundation’s stations (Broadcasting, July 29). No subcommittee member other than Senator Keating has commented publicly on the hearing, and no report or findings accompanied publication of the transcript. But the pattern of questioning, the responses of some witnesses and annotation of names mentioned in the hearing transcript showed that some had been members of the Communist party. Other persons not called but formerly associated with Pacifica were linked to the party by the subcommittee.

Trevor K. Thomas, Pacifica acting president and one of seven witnesses called before the subcommittee, said when the hearing transcript was released that foundation stations would not change their policies. Pacifica, whose FM stations are all listener-supported, is licensee of KPFK Berkeley and KPFF Los Angeles, both California, and WBAI New York.

Although renewal of Pacifica’s licenses was still being held up by the FCC last week, it was learned that the agency has had the subcommittee transcript since January, although it was not made public until last month.

The subcommittee expressed concern to several witnesses at Pacifica’s failure for some time to identify the political backgrounds of some persons who appeared as commentators on its stations. The stations now identify all commentators, who include persons reflecting political viewpoints from Communist to ultraright, a Pacifica spokesman said.

Senator Keating noted last week that while communications media have a right to present a broad spectrum of opinion, they have a duty "to differentiate between factual reporting and editorial comment. Similarly, radio stations (purporting) to present an unbiased view of current events should, in fairness to the listening public, identify any persons on their policy-making staff who might have an interest in slanting the news."

FCC orders hearing for KGLC sale

The FCC’s concern over the common ownership of broadcasting stations and newspapers in the same community has been growing. It resulted last week in an order for a hearing on an application to sell the only radio station in Miami, Okla., to the city’s only newspaper.

Miami Broadcasting Co., licensee of KGLC Miami, has applied to sell the station to Miami Newspapers Inc., publishers of the Miami News Record. The commission said it wants to determine if the sale would result in a concentration of media control.

Commission officials cannot recall another transfer case in which the agency ordered a hearing on this issue alone.

The commission’s concern with concentration of media ownership has intensified as a result of the House Antitrust Subcommittee hearings on the subject last winter.

In ordering the hearing, the commission also had in mind a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision holding that the FCC should consider the possible antitrust aspects involved in the proposed sale of the only broadcast facility in an area to the publisher of the only newspaper.

The commission’s interest in common ownership, particularly as it concerns the practice of combination advertising rates, has resulted in letters of inquiry being sent to renewal applicants with newspaper connections (Broadcasting, June 17). The letters are an aftermath of the House Antitrust Subcommittee hearing on the concentration of ownership of news media.

The commission has no definitive standards by which it would judge cases of concentration, rate practices, should the letters of inquiry turn up an instance, according to an agency staff member.

A number of businessmen of Miami have opposed approval of the KGLC sale on grounds that Miami Newspapers would create a monopoly detrimental to their businesses. C. C. Woodson, publisher of the News Record, allegedly proposed an immediate 50% increase in KGLC’s advertising rates as soon as the sale had been arranged (Broadcasting, March 11).

The commission dismissed requests for denial of the sale, but said that it would welcome “competent testimony” at the hearing.

Commerce Committee costs

Figures released by the clerk of the House of Representatives show that the Commerce Committee, which originates most of the legislation affecting broadcasting, had spent $86,379.95 by June 30 of $245,950 appropriated for 1963. This figure reflects only costs for "temporary" help, however, and does not include $89,569.66 spent on salaries for 14 “statutory employees” during the same period. Statutory employees are committee personnel who are considered to be permanent, although some employees listed as temporary have been with the subcommittee for several years.

Loevinger cites 'murky' FCC language
GIVES COLLEAGUES LESSON ON 'CONTROLLING PRECEDENT'

FCC Commissioner Lee Loevinger, who joined the commission June 11, may be its newest member, but with his background as a University of Minnesota Law School professor, associate justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court, and Justice Department antitrust chief, he hasn't hesitated to express his views to his colleagues.

For instance, he issued a concurring statement in an AM case which was, in effect, a brief lecture on the finer points of the principle of stare decisis, or controlling precedent, addressed to fellow Commissioner Kenneth A. Cox. It also commented, unfavorably, on the "murky" language of FCC opinions.

The case involved the request of KZIM-Cape Girardeau, Mo., that the commission set aside its grant of a construction permit to the Missouri-Illinois Broadcasting Co., permittee of KGMO Cape Girardeau, and hold a hearing. KGMO alleged that it would suffer economic hardship as a result of the additional competition and would, therefore, have to discontinue some of its public service programming.

Petition Rejected * The commission rejected the petition. It said the arguments advanced were too generalized to support the conclusion that an additional AM station (the market now has two) would result in economic injury to KGMO to the extent of affecting the service it rendered the public. The commission said the station should have presented more specific facts, rather than conclusions.

This has become firm commission policy. The agency took this position two weeks ago in denying a request for a hearing on an economic injury issue involving an AM grant in Greensburg, Ind. (BROADCASTING, July 29). It used the same argument last week in denying petitions of KIVA (TV) Yuma, Ariz., that the commission reconsider its CP grants to KXO-TV Inc. and Tele-Broadcasters of California Inc., for TV stations in El Centro, Calif.

FCC Chairman E. William Henry joined Commissioner Cox in dissenting to the KGMO case. But the chairman said only that he would have given KGMO an opportunity to make a more specific argument before deciding on its request for a hearing.

Commissioner Cox said the station should have been allowed to make its argument in a hearing. He said that the commission, in six recent cases, had granted hearings on the issue of economic injury. And in none of these cases, he added, were the arguments requesting hearings any more specific than those advanced by KGMO.

Loevinger Disagrees * In his statement, however, Commissioner Loevinger asserted that Commissioner Cox "misconceives both the principle of controlling precedent, or stare decisis, and the significance of the specific decision involved here."

Sprinkling legal citations through his statement like confetti before the wind, Commissioner Loevinger said the principle of controlling precedent cannot be applied unless there is a legally unifying principle tying two sets of factual situations together.

"Factual situations cannot be . . . mechanically compared without an intervening abstraction of . . . principles, and so cases cannot be controlled . . . by simple analogy." He added that none of the decisions cited by Commissioner Cox, said, provides this "intervening abstraction." In each of the opinions relied on by Commissioner Cox, Commissioner Loevinger said, there is only "a recital of the facts pleaded by the objecting competitor which led the commission to order a hearing."

"Murky Style * "Each of these opinions," Commissioner Loevinger added, "is written in the murky institutional style of the typical commission opinion which tends to blur the issue and mute any statement of controlling principles."

The most that can be said for the six cases, Commissioner Loevinger said, is that the facts involved in them are sufficient to raise the economic injury issue "in the circumstantial setting of each case."

"It is intimated (in the Cox dissent) that considerations or attitudes lurking behind the opinions of the commission in the prior case would, if carried forward to the instant case, compel a different result," Commissioner Loevinger said. But, he added, "this is not a legitimate argument."

Is there any general rule to be gleaned from the commission decision in the Cape Girardeau case? Commissioner Loevinger believes there is: "An objecting competitor seeking to prevent a new grant to an applicant and to raise the [economic injury] issue . . . must assert facts, as distinguished from conclusions, that are sufficient on their face to support the heavy burden of proof that rests upon any proponent of such an issue."

The commissioner's interest in stare decisis isn't a new one. Among the citations contained in his statement is "Loevinger, An Introduction to Legal Logic . . . (1952)."

Magnuson due at desk

Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, was released from a Seattle Hospital Monday (July 29) and was expected to return to work in Washington, D. C., this week. Senator Magnuson suffered a recurrence of malaria late last month while visiting his home state.

Senator John O. Pastore (D-R. I.), acting chairman in Senator Magnuson's absence and regularly chairman of the communications subcommittee, was designated last week as one of six senators who were to fly to Moscow for the signing of a nuclear test ban treaty. Senator Pastore is also chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.

Moss plans hearing on military news

A House subcommittee which has waged many of the Congress's own freedom of information battles during the past eight years is preparing to conduct a hearing on a problem affecting broadcast and print newsmen.

The problem: what authority do the military services have to obstruct news coverage of military accidents which happen in civilian areas?

Representative John E. Moss (D-Calif.), chairman of the House Foreign Operations and Government Information Subcommittee, says the Pentagon has failed to provide satisfactory answers to questions he has asked in correspondence with the Department of Defense and the Air Force (CLOSED CIRCUIT, April 15 and BROADCASTING, May 13, et seq.). Now, he says, he is going to conduct a hearing. No date has been set.

New operator rule held up for 60 days

The FCC last week postponed for 60 days the Aug. 1 effective date of the rule adopted July 10 which will permit certain AM and FM stations to employ first-class radiotelephone operators on a part-time contract basis.

The stay will allow the commission time, after its August recess, to make a decision on a petition for reconsideration of the rule filed by the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, AFL-CIO (BROADCASTING, July 29). The union said use of part-time engineers would result in poorer technical service.

'All' becomes 'other' in modified statement

FCC 'MINOR' CHANGE IS MAJOR ONE IN NAB'S EYES

The FCC doesn't expect broadcasters who air programs on controversial issues to offer opportunities for reply to "all" groups in their community.

The commission sought to make this clear last week in modifying the language of its statement reminding broadcasters they must observe the fairness doctrine when presenting controversial programs (BROADCASTING, July 29).

Commission officials describe the changes as "minor editorial corrections" that should have been made before the document was released. But representatives of the National Association of Broadcasters consider them important.

The changes meet some of the specific objections that were raised by NAB President LeRoy Collins in a letter to the commission last week protesting the statement.

The document originally said a licensee presenting programs on controversial issues of public importance, such as segregation, must offer spokesmen for all responsible groups within the community similar opportunities for the expression of the viewpoints of their respective groups.

The modified passage says that the opportunities must be given to spokesmen for "other" (instead of "all") groups and that the viewpoints to be expressed are those that are "contrasting."

NAB staff members were informed the changes were being made when they went to the commission offices Thursday (Aug. 1) to deliver Governor Collins' letter.

Douglas Anello, NAB general counsel, called on FCC Chairman E. William Henry; Vincent Wasilewski, NAB executive vice president, visited Commissioner Robert E. Lee and Paul Comstock, NAB vice president for governmental affairs, talked with Commissioners Kenneth A. Cox and Lee Loevinger.

The NAB officials said later they were told the changes were intended to make clear that the commission has not changed its previous policy in the application of the fairness doctrine.

In his letter, Governor Collins expressed particular concern about the passage which had already been changed. He said it didn't conform to the association's understanding of commission policy.

"Taken literally," he said, "the statement would seem to require that the licensee must present the viewpoint of every responsible group which may wish to be heard—even where the various groups may hold substantially the same viewpoint."

Governor Collins also said the commission "should not attempt to define in detail, by rule or otherwise, the licensees' responsibilities under the fairness doctrine." He said the doctrine is a standard which is dependent on the individual broadcaster's judgment.

As a result, he said, a rule of fairness that would cover the "myriad of circumstances that can and do arise" cannot be prescribed in advance. He said this concept is embodied in the commission's 1949 order authorizing editorializing by broadcasters.

Pulse asks dismissal of WAME's suit

WAME Miami, which is suing separately two major broadcast research companies on complaints that they have misrepresented ratings reports, may learn today (Monday) how it is faring in court.

Dade County Circuit Court Judge George E. Schultz said Thursday (Aug. 1) that he would take under advisement until today The Pulse Inc.'s motion to dismiss. WAME is asking $250,000 from Pulse (BROADCASTING, May 6, et seq.).

The research company argued last week that the state court has no jurisdiction in the case because Pulse has never done a survey in Florida and doesn't do business there. WAME, which claims that's the problem—that Pulse failed to perform surveys for which it has charged, asked if Pulse would stipulate that the surveys were not performed if WAME stipulated the court had no jurisdiction. Pulse then explained that surveys were performed all right, but by individuals who contracted with Pulse.

A Florida woman who testified she contracted with Pulse said under WAME questioning that the surveys were performed according to Pulse methods and controls. WAME's other suit, which asks $250,000 from the A. C. Nielsen Co., resumes in the U. S. District Court in Miami today. The complaint was dismissed on a Nielsen motion, but the station was allowed to amend its complaint, which it will file today.

VOA increases weekly schedule by 7 hours

The Voice of America, radio arm of the U. S. Information Agency, has added seven hours to its weekly schedule of broadcasts, the USIA announced yesterday (Aug. 4).

By doubling its daily one-hour regional English-language program service to Africa, VOA has boosted its total weekly air time to 796 hours and 15 minutes in 36 languages, USIA said.

FTC rerun on purity in TV demonstrations

"Spurious or fake" television commercials were used by Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. and General Motors Co. in a 1957-58 safety plate glass campaign, the Federal Trade Commission ruled last week. In a decision written by Commissioner Everett MacIntyre, the FTC said that, contrary to representations made in the TV commercials:

- The safety plate glass used in the side windows of GM cars was of lower grade and quality than that used in the windshields of GM cars.
- The automobile safety sheet glass used in the side windows of non-GM cars was not of the same grade and quality as the sheet glass used in home windows.
- The TV films were not accurate demonstrations of the perceptible disparity between the optical distortion of automobile safety plate glass and safety sheet glass under ordinary conditions of use.

In denying a GM plea that the safety campaign was primarily LOF's, the FTC held that both companies were guilty of the misrepresentations. LOF aired 22 TV commercials, using only GM cars, during 1957 college football telecasts; GM used one safety glass commercial twice during the same period.

In its opinion, the trade commission cited its famous "sandpaper" decision against Colgate-Palmolive Co.'s Rapid Shave cream and said the same principles apply (BROADCASTING, March 11).

The primary issue in the LOF-GM case, as in the earlier Colgate decision, the FTC said, "concerns the use of demonstrations on television which are fake or at least partly rigged performances but which give to the viewer the impression that an actual experiment or an actual demonstration is taking place."

Libby-Owens-Ford and General Motors have 20 days to file objections to the FTC decision.

LET COX VOTE, SAYS DROP-IN FACTION

ABC leads attack on plea for commissioner’s abstention

Critics of the FCC decision in the drop-in case last week opposed the proposal that Commissioner Kenneth A. Cox refrain from further participation in the controversial proceeding.

The proposal was made three weeks ago by the Association of Maximum Service Telecasters—which supports the commission’s position—on the ground that Commissioner Cox had been connected with the case before his appointment to the commission when he was chief of the agency’s Broadcast Bureau (Broadcasting, July 22).

Commissioner Cox, who was in the minority in the 4-3 decision which rejected the seven short-spaced VHF drop-ins, has become something of a champion to advocates of the drop-ins since filing his dissent last month (Broadcasting, July 8).

Chief among the 10 petitioners opposing the AMST motion was ABC, which told the commission the proposal “is an afterthought and an ill-conceived attempt to control the result in these proceedings by foreclosing the vote of a commissioner with whose views” the association disagrees.

ABC has long urged approval of the drop-ins, arguing that it needs additional VHF outlets to become fully competitive with NBC and CBS. The others opposing the AMST motion are prospective applicants for the drop-ins.

With the departure of former Chairman Newton N. Minow, who voted with the majority to deny the drop-ins, the commission is now divided 3-3 on the issue. Commissioner Lee Loevinger, who succeeded Mr. Minow, represents the vote that could reverse the decision.

His position, however, would be academic if Commissioner Cox withdrew from participation.

Oral Argument Set • The FCC, meanwhile, formally announced it will hold oral argument on its order denying the drop-ins for Johnstown, Pa.; Baton Rouge, La.; Dayton, Ohio; Jacksonville, Fla.; Birmingham, Ala.; Knoxville, Tenn., and Charlotte, N. C. (Closed Circuit, July 29). However, it moved the date back from Sept. 19 to Oct. 4 because the former falls on the Jewish holiday of Rosh ha-Shanah.

The commission also announced that it had reversed itself on the eighth case in the proceeding—that involving the move-in of KOCO-TV (ch. 5) Enid, Okla., to Oklahoma City. The commission said it would permit the move-in at short-spacing rather than at standard mileage separation as originally required (Closed Circuit, July 29).

The principal reason given by the commission was that it had concluded that, the station at standard spacing, could not find a transmitter site that would meet Federal Aviation Agency requirements.

Commissioner Cox was absent during the vote on the oral argument matter and was listed as not participating in the Enid case. Commissioner Robert E. Lee dissented to the latter decision.

Commissioner Lee Loevinger issued a concurring statement in the Enid case in which he said he didn’t believe AMST—which opposed the short-spacing proposal—had any standing and, therefore, any right to file an “opposition.” He emphasized, however, that the Enid case represented “an entirely different issue” from that involved in the drop-ins.

AMST based its motion that Commissioner Cox refrain from participation in the drop-in matter on the contention that the case is essentially adjudicatory, regardless of the rulemaking “label” attached to it. In adjudicatory cases, agency officials who serve as investigator, prosecutor or advocate are barred by law from participation in the decisions.

And Commissioner Cox, the association said, performed these roles while serving as chief of the Broadcast Bureau before his appointment to the commission last March.

Sangamon Case Cited • AMST relied heavily on the Sangamon Valley case, which involved the transfer of a VHF channel from Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis. In remanding the case to the commission, because ex parte representations had been made to individual commissioners, the U. S. Court of Appeals held that, in deciding television allocations matters, the commission should observe standards applicable to adjudicatory proceedings.

ABC and the other opponents of the AMST motion, however, said the drop-in case is rulemaking, not an adjudicatory proceeding. They added that the court, in deciding the Sangamon case, didn’t intend to recharacterize all allocations proceedings as adjudicatory.

ABC said the court was concerned only with “basic fairness” and didn’t hold that the Sangamon case was not a

Goodbye Conelrad, hello Emergency Broadcast System

Conelrad—the emergency broadcasting system established in 1951 for use in event of war or state of peril or disaster—officially passes into history today (Monday). In its place is the new Emergency Broadcast System.

The FCC last week noted the occasion by expressing its "gratitude" to the Conelrad stations that voluntarily contributed their time and effort and to the "success" of that system. The commission also praised the stations outside the system that participated in the Conelrad tests over the years.

The new system was devised by a special committee of the National Industry Advisory Committee. The commission last month adopted rules providing for the new procedures after consultation with the Defense Department's Office of Civilian Defense and the Office of Emergency Planning (Broadcasting, July 8).

Under EBS, all stations wishing to participate and meeting NIAC requirements will ultimately be authorized to remain on the air in a national emergency. Initially, only the 1,400 AM and 200 FM stations now holding interim National Defense Emergency Authorization from the FCC will be permitted to do so.

The interim authority extends from today to Dec. 31. In the meantime, civilian defense officials, working with Commissioner Robert T. Bartley and commission engineers, will determine local and regional originating points.

Ann Of System • The object of the new system, the FCC says, is to fulfill national security requirements while providing for transmission of vital information to the public.

Stations remaining on the air during an emergency will not be permitted to use their call letters (to prevent broadcasters from benefiting competitively) and will be required to follow this order of broadcasting priority: presidential messages, local programs, state or regional programs, and national news and information.

Under Conelrad, only authorized stations broadcasting on 640 kc or 1240 kc were allowed to remain on the air during an emergency.

New Rules • Meanwhile, the FCC last week announced the adoption of new rules providing for an interim reorganization of the agency to enable it to carry out its responsibility for planning for nongovernment communications in time of emergency. The commission was given this function by President Kennedy in an Executive Order last spring.

The commission took the first step in this connection in May, when it organized an Office of Emergency Communications. The new rules put the office under the supervision of Curtis B. Plummer, the commission's executive director. He, in turn, will be subject to the general direction of FCC Defense Commissioner Bartley.

The new office is charged with preparing emergency plans covering service by broadcasters, common carriers and safety and special radio operators; assignment of radio frequencies to licensees under national emergency conditions, and protection, maintenance and restoration of communications facilities.

These plans are to be designed to develop a state of readiness in these areas "with respect to all conditions of national emergency, including an attack upon the United States." The plans are to take into account the possibility of "exclusive government control of communications services or facilities, when authorized by law."

Western Electric in Omaha: behind the scenes of telephone progress

America’s need for communications continues to grow. Helping to meet this need are the communications products made at Western Electric’s Omaha Works. Included are cable, wire, “crossbar” switches and wire spring relays for central offices. These and other high-quality products are manufactured at the Omaha Works and assembled into completed switching units essential to the 21 Bell telephone companies across the nation.

It takes more than 4,500 people from the Omaha area with a wide variety of skills to do this important work for the Bell System. During 1962, these Omaha Works employees earned more than $26 million in salaries. In addition, Nebraska benefited from some $8.9 million worth of goods and services purchased by Western Electric from 435 suppliers, most of them small businesses.

The Omaha Works is just one of 13 major Western Electric manufacturing plants, all producing essential communications equipment needed by the Bell telephone companies to provide you with the finest telephone service at the lowest possible cost.

Huge Frames for central office equipment are rapidly equipped with Omaha Works-produced switches and cable with the help of wire-wrapping guns. Above, Wiremen Delmer Kyles (foreground) and Fred Dady work on one of these units. Designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured and installed to exacting specifications by W. E., these switching units are used by Northwestern Bell and the 20 other Bell telephone companies to connect telephone calls quickly and efficiently.
Canvas Cable Covers are used to protect cabled wire from dirt or injury in “PBX” switching units. The covers are supplied to the Omaha Works by Jorgensen Awning Inc., a local company. President Leo D. Jorgensen (left) discusses his firm’s product with W. E. Buyer Jim Farnsworth. This company is one of more than 40,000 located in all 50 states from which Western Electric purchased $1.2 billion in goods and services last year.

Omaha World-Herald President and Editor W. E. Christensen says: “In the four years Western Electric has been here, the company has proved itself to be an outstandingly fine citizen. Many local businesses have benefited through the things they sell to Western Electric. And W. E. people are truly community-minded . . . they are a part of every phase of community and civic life.”

Rheingrover and Edward Danner, State Senator from Omaha.

Thousands of Items are shipped daily from Western Electric’s recently opened Omaha Distribution Center. There is a total of 35 strategically located W. E. centers which supply the Bell telephone companies with a vast variety of communications products. In emergencies, W. E. people are ready to deliver around the clock.
Snail’s pace in space? FCC thinks so

COMSAT’S DELAY IN OFFERING STOCK CHIEF CONCERN

The FCC and the infant Communications Satellite Corp. have become engaged in a controversy over the company’s progress—or lack of it—in establishing a worldwide satellite system for transmitting television, radio, telephone and telegraph communications.

The commission says the incorporators appointed by the President are moving too slowly in making the initial stock offering and are making decisions that should be left to the directors who will operate the corporation once the stock is sold.

The commission expressed its feelings in a letter to Leo D. Welch, chairman of the corporation that was created by Congress last year. Congress placed the corporation under the regulatory authority of the FCC.

Mr. Welch said the facts provide “no basis” for concern by the commission. He said the initial stock offering will be made at “as early a date as the directors determine to be compatible with the public interest and the carrying out of the purposes of the act.”

He said it is essential that the corporation make a number of “determinations with respect to the program to be followed” in order to provide prospective investors with “adequate information in conformity with federal and state securities laws.”

He also said the corporation is preparing a summary of its position, “as previously outlined to the commission,” for transmittal to the agency.

The commission noted that the corporation in February indicated that the initial stock offering would be made this year. But, the letter added, the FCC is now “disturbed by current indications that the corporation no longer has definite plans for an early issue of stock.”

The agency said the corporation is apparently delaying the issue until more development work is done and decisions are reached concerning “the character and scope” of investment by foreign interests.

The FCC said that Congress intended many of these decisions to be left to the “balanced representative body” that will ultimately run the corporation—six directors elected by public investors, six elected by stock-owning communications common carriers and three appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The controversy came to light in connection with the corporation’s request for authority to borrow $600,000, in addition to a $500,000 loan authorized in February. The FCC approved the request, but said it probably wouldn’t authorize more credit until definite plans for a stock issue were made.

More ETV applications

The Department of Health Education and Welfare has accepted two additional applications for federal funds appropriated by Congress to be used by educational TV stations. The latest applications raise to 14 the number pending with the department, seeking a total of $2.6 million.

San Mateo, Calif., Junior College has asked for $122,991 from the government to build a new channel 14 station in San Mateo. The University of Georgia applied for $136,110 to expand the facilities of WGTV(Tv) (ch. 8) Athens, Ga. Copies of all 14 pending applications are open to the public in the HEW offices of the director for educational TV, Washington.

QXR to abandon FM relay system

SOUND QUALITY TROUBLES FORCE SWITCH TO TAPE

Difficulties in maintaining high sound qualities on its direct broadcasts to 16 inter-connected affiliates last week forced the QXR Network to plan abandonment of its present live-broadcast system.

Following a meeting of New York state affiliates in Syracuse, July 30, James Sondheim, network president, announced that QXR will adopt a uniform tape distribution for all of its programs starting Sept. 1. He attributed the changeover to the growing importance of stereo broadcasting and the need to improve transmission quality in the New York-New England area.

Currently 16 of the network's affiliates—located in the New York-New England area, are interconnected by air relays to exchange on-the-air broadcasts. Transmission difficulties caused by interference in the New England area and heavy construction work in New York City have caused network officials to become concerned over sound quality, especially with the increased use of stereo broadcasts.

The rest of the network's affiliates, some 45 located in QXR's western division, already receive their programing via tape.

Also discussed at the Syracuse meeting were plans for the origination of QXR type on-the-air programing from a point in upstate New York for the use of New York State affiliates, with further possibility that an organization for New England points might be established in Southern New England.

A network official said there were other alternatives being discussed also, and that the network expected to reach a decision within a week.

Hurleigh describes news as aid, not competitor

Increasing numbers of radio station managers are coming to understand network news services as "aids" rather than "competitors."

Robert F. Hurleigh, president of Mutual, takes this position in the August newsletter distributed by that network. He says station licensees now realize that quick distribution of global information is not only necessary in maintaining adequate service but a requisite for "survival."

Mr. Hurleigh states that the speed required today in disseminating world news requires "such a complex of manpower and facilities that no one station and no single group-owned combine can adequately manage it alone." He suggests that a network news service such as Mutual's is no more disruptive to a station's unique personality "than a piece of AP copy on page one" of a newspaper.

He foresees a day when networks will supply not only national and international news under the "exclusivity formulas" they now use but also will syndicate different correspondents to multiple stations within a single market. He sees closer network-station ties developing with the introduction of such new contractual arrangements.

Mr. Hoffa's right to sue NBC in Michigan was upheld in the U. S. District Court in March (Broadcasting, March 11). His original suit for $2.5 million was also based on the Kennedy appearances.

CATV's role in aiding ETV

The National Community Antenna TV Association is planning a survey on the extent to which community antenna television systems are furthering the signals of educational TV stations, NCTA President William Dalton said last week.

In a letter to FCC Chairman E. William Henry, Mr. Dalton pointed out that 70 ETV stations in areas...
Collins likes British commercials

LeRoy Collins, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, returned to Washington last week from a month in England with praise for the placement and quality of commercials on English television.

"I think our broadcasters could learn considerably from British commercial TV in that respect," Governor Collins said. He said the Independent TV Authority, the commercial network in England, does a "remarkably good job" with its commercials.

There is much to recommend the British system of confining commercials to blocks at "natural" breaks in programming, he said. This minimizes the number of interruptions which cause agitation in the U. S., Governor Collins said.

He explained, however, that he was not advocating divorcement of American television advertisers from direct program sponsorship. An advertiser who wants to buy an entire program, and gain identification with that show, should be permitted to do so as long as the broadcaster retains control of the content, he said.

The quality of English-produced TV programs is very good, Governor Collins said, but "I was amazed at the lack of quantity." He pointed out the British producers are freed to use words and subjects that are taboo in this country. If British producers are to achieve their desires to export more TV programs to the U. S., they would have to change some of their productions before they would be acceptable here, he said.

English TV is not as basic a part of the British way of life as television is in America, he said. Broadcasters in England "just don't pretend to give the overall benefits to the public that we do," he said. Governor Collins attributed this to the fact British radio-TV were developed originally under the government-chartered BBC while America's is a free enterprise system.

served by CATV systems, 56 are duplicated by the CATV. "The CATV industry has made significant contributions to the nation's schools in bringing the signals of ETV stations to communities which would otherwise be without educational television," Mr. Dalton said.

Broadcasters' meeting on GOP arrangements

Representatives of broadcasters planning to cover the 1964 Republican National Convention are meeting today (Monday) and tomorrow in San Francisco, site of next year's GOP gathering. The Republican arrangements committee will guide newsmen through the Cow Palace, which is the convention hall, and hear their requests for floor space, housing accommodations and parking. The committee will consider media requests in an executive session on Wednesday.

Robert L. Pierce, GOP national committee chairman from Wisconsin (Menominee), is vice chairman of the arrangements committee, and Robert R. Snodgrass, national committee chairman from Georgia (Atlanta), is chairman of the subcommittee on radio and television.

The man expected to handle similar media arrangements for the Democratic Convention in Atlantic City is also from Atlanta. T. Leonard Reinsch, executive director of the Democratic arrangements committee in 1960 and already has worked with the site committee in preparation for 1964.

The Democrats will meet officially with representatives of the news media at their convention site in late September or early October. However, because the networks and wire services usually require the major share of work space, they'll meet informally with Democratic arrangements people in Atlantic City Aug. 21 and 22.

Bill Henry, veteran Washington newsmen, is chairman of the 1964 convention arrangements committee for radio and television, and will be responsible for much of the detail work involved in setting up facilities for broadcasters.

WBT expanding studios for new production firm

A $500,000 expansion of the studios of WBT-AM-FM and WBYV(TV) Charlotte N. C., has been announced by Jefferson Standard Broadcasting Co. The expanded facilities will accommodate Jefferson Productions, which will specialize in commercial production and program syndication for both radio and television.

Charles H. Crutchfield, Jefferson Standard Broadcasting president, announced that Jefferson Productions will serve networks, agencies, advertisers and other broadcast stations. It will also handle the company's own syndicated efforts, such as "Radio Moscow" and the "Arthur Smith Show." The Smith program, a half-hour show, is now syndicated in 13 markets.

John P. Dillon, formerly promotion manager for WBT, has been named sales manager of Jefferson Productions and James R. Rogers, WBT's commercial coordinator, will be production coordinator.

Wallace Jorgenson, vice-president and managing director of WBT, and Paul B. Marion, WBT assistant vice president and managing director, will supervise the operation of Jefferson Productions.

Stockholder protests heard at Seven Arts

Minority stockholders of Seven Arts Productions Ltd., attacked the company's management at the annual meeting last week for buying a 20% interest in Grand Bahama Development Co. on Grand Bahama Island.

The complaining stockholders charged that Seven Arts' management failed to make "full disclosure" about the $5-million purchase.

A conflict of interest was alleged because Louis Chesler, Seven Arts chairman, also owns an interest in the land development company. Mr. Chesler conceded he had urged the Seven Arts board to make the Grand Bahamas investment because he thought it would be a good thing for Seven Arts. It was announced he had offered to sell his $2 million investment in Grand Bahama Development, but that the Seven Arts board had turned down the offer.

The full management slate of directors was elected, but a group of dissenting stockholders polled over 25% of the shares.

Seven Arts Productions Ltd. produces motion pictures, and through a subsidiary company, Seven Arts Associated Corp., distributes motion pictures to TV. The meeting was in Toronto.

3M second quarter hits high on sales, earnings

BROADCASTING, August 5, 1963
Multiply by 5½ billion, and what do you get?

You get a rough idea of how many of our tax dollars have already gone into electric power systems owned and run by the federal government. And that's quite an eyeful of silver dollars.

Some people want our federal government to get even deeper into the power business. They want it to spend trillions more of your tax dollars for federally owned electric systems, even though they are not needed.

The fact is investor-owned electric power companies are already planning and building to supply all the additional electricity you—and all America—will need to keep the future bright. They are companies you built, because you have supported them as customers—perhaps as a shareholder, too. For these are local companies owned by millions of investors, by millions of people like you.

When you think of all this, do you see any reason for the federal government to spend your taxes on more federally owned power systems—a job it doesn't have to do?
‘International Hour’—a project in goodwill

Ironing out the problems of an international television program exchange among 12 countries is no mean task. Now in their third summer as participants in such an exchange, the CBS-owned TV stations are still having this lesson brought home to them, but evidently they feel the rewards of presenting their sustaining International Hour outweigh the expenses involved.

The stations are presenting 12 such hours this summer and have also made the programs available to WETA-TV, Washington educational outlet.

Although no definite statement has been made, future participation in the exchange by CBS seems assured. Last week Merle Jones, president of the CBS Television Stations Division, told Broadcasting The International Hour would continue to be developed to its "fullest potential."

In the summer of 1961 seven countries contributed programs to the CBS stations in return for a series of 13 musical programs, The American Musical Theater, produced at WCBS-TV New York.

Growth Story — Last summer the exchange developed, from a two-way exchange between the CBS stations and the six other participants, to an exchange among all countries taking part, each contributing one program to the international pool.

This summer 11 foreign broadcasters have joined the program: RAI, Italy; Telesistema Mexicano, Mexico; CBC, Canada; NTS, Netherlands; Telefis Eireann, Ireland; TBS, Japan; Swiss Television Service, Switzerland; NDR, West Germany; Yugoslav Radio-Television, Argentinita Velez performs in "The History of the Tango," the contribution of Proartel to the international program exchange carried on between the CBS-owned TV stations and broadcasting companies in 11 foreign countries. The "International Hour" program is the last one scheduled in the three years of the international exchange. It will be seen on the CBS-owned stations Aug. 10 and 11 and WETA-TV Washington, Aug. 30.

Under terms of the project each broadcaster pays only tape shipping costs for the programs. Presentations must be strictly non-commercial; no advertising is allowed within the body of the programs. The sustaining nature of the programs has dictated their placement in weekend afternoon time slots on the CBS-owned stations.

A spokesman for the stations points out that despite the non-commercial flavor of the exchange, foreign broadcasters as well as the CBS stations understand the commercial possibilities suggested by the plan.

Although the language problems presented have been essentially overcome by turning to musical and dance presentation, technical difficulties in the exchange are rife.

Flutter And Sync — Most foreign broadcasters operate on more flexible time periods than American stations and some programs received by CBS in the exchange have been as much as 20 minutes over the 58 minutes allocated to the programs by the CBS stations. Splicing problems are compounded by the fact that some of the taps do not have sync pulses (electronic signals which serve as guides for editing). Another problem is "flutter" which may develop in converting tapes from the European 625-line system for presentation on the American 525-line system. Variations in picture and sound level add further difficulties.

In spite of these headache items International Hour has established its niche in the CBS-owned stations regular summer plans.

MORE TIME FOR BEER AND WINE?

Proposed BBG rule would allow

New regulations to permit more commercials for beer and wine on radio and television programs in Canadian provinces where such advertising is permitted are to be discussed at a public hearing of the Board of Broadcast Governors in Ottawa Aug. 27. BBG has announced proposed new regulations which will permit up to 30-second commercials on the beer or wine product, instead of the present 60-second commercial which permitted only 12 seconds of product identification.

Programs to be sponsored must be at least 10 minutes long and two 30-second commercials will be permitted, 30-second product mention with 10-second billboards. The same number of commercials applies for a 15-minute TV program.

For half-hour Canadian TV programs advertisers may have four 30-second commercials; on non-Canadian programs only three such commercials. On 45-minute Canadian programs five commercials are permitted, four on non-Canadian programs. In the case of 60- and 90-minute Canadian programs commercials are seven and 10 respectively; with non-Canadian programs six and nine, respectively.

On radio, billboard announcements may be 15 seconds and other commercials 30 seconds. One commercial announcement is permitted for a 5-minute program, two for a 10- or 15-minute program, four for a half-hour show, five for a 45-minute show, eight for one-hour program, and 10 for a 90-minute show. Flash and spot announcements are prohibited on both radio and television programs sponsored by breweries or wineries.

Ad revenue deficit halved by CBC

Advertising revenue of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1963, totaled $30,846,627, against $32,910,118 the previous year. The deficit was half that of fiscal 1961.

In the last fiscal year CBC spent $108,365,882 on programing, selling and administration, up from the previous year’s $107,611,154. CBC’s income from commercial programs, interest on investments and grants from Parliament amounted to $104,057,330, compared with $103,572,113 the previous year. Depreciation was $4,308,552 last year and $4,039,041 in fiscal 1962.

CBC received in addition to its operating grant of $73,244,000 from Parliament, $6.6 million for capital expenses.

Cost of programing for fiscal 1963 was broken down as $63,586,267 for noncommercial programs and $28,801,732 for sponsored programs. Selling expenses for the commercial division are given as $7,268,751, up from the previous year’s $6,967,639.

Britain would get color sooner with U. S. system

If the American system is adopted, color television could begin in Britain early in 1965. But a decision in favor of the French or German systems would mean a delay of a year or more. This view has been expressed by F. C. McLean, BBC director of engineering, in reviewing the results of demonstrations in London for European Broadcasting Union delegates.

Opinions of 60 delegates from 20 countries are being collated as part of the process of reaching agreement on a unified European color TV system.

Immediate adoption by Britain and the rest of Europe of the American system has been requested by F. N. Sutherland, deputy chairman and managing director of the Marconi Co. and a new member of the postmaster general’s television advisory committee. Speaking to delegates of the EBU in London, who have been studying the three rival systems, he said: “As the world’s largest exporter of television transmission equipment I would like to make a plea for worldwide standardization. This can only be effected on the international system which is already in daily use in North and South America and Japan and is also being used for experimental purposes in Russia.”

CBC, CTV set schedule for football coverage

Both Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and CTV Television Network Ltd. will carry Canadian Football League games this fall. CBC will broadcast Saturday games and CTV all other games.

CTV started its broadcasts at Calgary, Alberta, on July 31, and CBC will do its first broadcast at Hamilton, Ont., on Aug. 10. CTV has exclusive rights to the western Canadian semi-final games, and the first game of the eastern Canadian finals. The agreement to broadcast the games runs to Jan. 2, 1968.

CBC has as participating sponsors of the Saturday national network broadcasts John Labbt Ltd., London, Ont., (brewers) on the mid-East and Atlantic region stations, and British American Oil Co. Ltd., Toronto, on the full network. The same sponsors and Nabob Foods Ltd., Vancouver, B. C., will advertise on the CTV broadcasts.

Russia’s ham problem

Self expression in the Soviet Union may have found a new medium—ham radio. A Russian newspaper, Lenin’s Generation, published in the Kazakh Soviet Republic has reported increasing problems with ham operators illegally broadcasting “religious programs, vulgar melodies, base conversations and uncensored attacks.”

Mentioned specifically were broadcasts by Jehovah’s Witnesses from Dzhezkazgan and by Russian Orthodox believers from Alma-Ata.

The newspaper report said the illicit broadcasts were interfering with the government communications system and that in the future stiffer penalties would be meted out to apprehended offenders.

The Kazakh hams, according to the article, make detection difficult by constantly shifting transmitter sites.

DATELINE: Japan by David Takahara

Television accounts for 22.3% of total ad billings

The four great mass communications media of Japan are newspapers, magazines, radio and television. As a highly literate nation, the Japanese people are avid readers of newspapers and magazines—the printed media for commercial advertisements. Therefore, advertising through the printed media has always been popular.

But in 1961 the percentage of the printed media’s share in the total advertising billings of Japan became less than 50% for the first time, while the share of the tele-communications media (radio and television) reached 33.9%, of which TV is 22.3%. The increase of TV billings is very striking: a 38.9% increase over the previous year.

This is even more impressive when one realizes that this year marks only the 10th anniversary of Japanese television. In February 1953, the first television station in Japan was opened in Tokyo. Today Japan’s TV industry is flourishing. There are 325 stations and approximately 13 million TV equipped households.

The Japanese viewer spends a great deal of time watching television with Sunday the biggest viewing day. On Sunday the average TV household spends over eight hours at the TV set, almost two hours more than peak periods in the U.S. In the summer months, television viewing does not decrease as much as it does in America.

Because people spend so much time viewing television, a popular Japanese expression which roughly translates “Turn the whole country into a nation of idiots,” has achieved notoriety similar to that of the expression “vast wasteland” in America.

Two Systems • Unlike the U. S., Japan has both commercial and public television broadcasting. The majority of TV companies in Japan are commercial although NHK (Japan Broadcasting Corp.), supported by fees paid by both radio listening and television viewing households, is the oldest and largest. There are 212 stations operating under NHK and 114 stations run by 53 commercial companies.

The commercial television industry in Japan has a remarkable record of development. Probably the most important reason for television’s rapid progress is the quick recovery of Japanese industry in general, but in addition to the general economic climate of the country, there are several specific reasons for the rapid progress in television—all unique to the Japanese situation.

First was the idea of installing television sets in the streets to demonstrate television to the public and television’s potential to the advertiser. This idea was conceived and put into practice by Nippon Television Network Co. (NTV), the first commercial television station in Japan. NTV’s first problem was to get advertisers who would sponsor television programs.

In the early days of the medium, however, Japanese advertisers were reluctant to budget large sums of money for television advertising. To overcome this, the station installed large TV screens on the streets of Tokyo. The enormous crowds in the streets eagerly viewing television programs convinced many prospective advertisers that television could be an effective advertising medium.

Another reason for the quick development of television in Japan is the national interest in baseball and Sumo wrestling matches, which provide enormously popular television attractions.

Sales Booster • The unprecedented marriage of the Japanese crown prince with a commoner’s daughter was one of the events of the century. The anticipated telecasting of the wedding ceremony and parade brought about a phenomenal increase in Japanese television ownership. It is reported that the number of television homes was doubled by the occasion—from 1 million to 2 million sets.

And last, but quite important, the complex nature of the written Japanese language makes advertisements explaining a new product more difficult to comprehend when written than when heard. For this particular reason both radio and television are more effective than magazines and newspapers from the standpoint of commercial messages, especially in the case of new product introduction.

In the area of research, the industry realizes that comprehensive TV audience research is essential for further development of TV in Japan, because the Japanese public is getting more and more selective about TV programs while companies are adopting more and more rationalized budgeting for TV advertising. As a result of this concern, the Nielsen Television Index Service, established in Japan, has been well received.

No doubt the Japanese TV industry has copied or is still copying a great deal from the TV industry in the United States. Some interesting facts is that Japanese TV viewers have been enjoying Japanese dubbed versions of many American programs. For instance, Laramie, Walt Disney Hour, Rawhide, Bronco, Cheyenne, The Untouchables, Surfside 6, Rifleman, Ben Casey, Lassie, Popeye, The Jetsons, Wyatt Earp, M-Squad, Combat and International Show Time, to name several, all attract substantial Japanese audiences. If we compare the programs which have been telecast in both countries at present, we can see an interesting picture:

Color TV • Another interesting feature of television development in this country is the enthusiasm for color TV which was started in December 1967 by NHK and NTV. At the present time, the United States and Japan are the only two countries that have color television. Only a limited number of Japanese households own color TV sets on account of the high price of
French island gets shows from Paris

Tapes and records flown in from Paris, two hours daily of local legislative coverage and weather reports: that's the radio diet of the 5,000 residents on St. Pierre. The tiny island-town and its even smaller companion island-town, Miquelon (population 600), are situated off the coast of Newfoundland and are the last French possessions in North America.

Residents get about seven hours of broadcasts daily, with two hours in midafternoon being broadcast from the secretariat of the legislative council in St. Pierre's main square.

All broadcasting is noncommercial and Governor Jacques Henry told Broadcasting's Canadian correspondent that there are no plans for commercial shows or developing local live programs. The colony has no regular newspaper and television reception is intermittent. There are only a few TV sets on the islands and, under favorable conditions, a signal is picked up from CJCB-TV Sydney, N. S., or CJON-TV St. John's, Nfld., both of which are almost 200 miles distant.

color television set at present. But in hotel lobbies, railroad station waiting rooms and other public places and lazes, color TV sets are attracting crowds of admirers. In the not too distant future, a color TV set will become a "must" in an average houseold, because picturesque Japanese scenery, colorful kimons, etc., are far more effective in color television than black and white.

In 1964, Japanese television is going to play a very important role as a mass medium for the forthcoming Tokyo Olympics. A powerful relaying system is being planned and a new building or this particular purpose is to be completed by April 1964. If Telstar allows transmission between the United States and Japan for the 1964 Olympic Games, TV in Japan will surely play even a greater role through lobal televising of this international event. At the same time, there is no doubt that another spectacular increase in television homes in Japan will follow.

Bevins again defends Lord Hill in Parliament

Britain's postmaster-general, Reginald Bevins, has told the House of Commons that as Lord Hill, formerly a conservative member of Parliament Jr. Charles Hill and minister in charge of government information services, is retired from politics, there could be no objection to his chairmanship of the Independent Television Authority. (Broadcasting, July 15).

Labor MP Donald Chapman had sked if the postmaster-general appreciated the problems created by putting a very active party politician in charge of a public medium of expression of opinion.

"In times of national crisis, when there may be demands for government statements and opposition counterstatements on matters of the moment, what real assurance can we have that a very active party politician will be utterly impartial in providing the right use of the air?"

Mr. Bevins said he accepted Lord Hill's word that he had retired from politics and said it was quite inconceivable that any ITA chairman would ever attempt to influence either news programs or the TV companies.

Contest to end contests: turtle watching
BUT THERE HAS TO BE A FULL MOON FOR WWIL EVENT

If the late, late shows are any indication, the full moon brings forth nothing more than an assortment of vampires, werewolves, mummies and ghosts. However, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., under the sponsorship of WWIL, the full moon brings forth thousands of residents and tourists for a "Turtle Watch."

More than 4,000 persons appeared on the Fort Lauderdale beach on the first night of the full moon in July in hopes of seeing a giant sea turtle emerge from the surf, dig a hole in the sand, lay 100-300 eggs, cover them up with sand and return to the sea. The turtles, though, didn't follow the timetable, which calls for them to make an appearance during the full moon in May, June, July and August.

So WWIL got set for another Turtle Watch. The full moon was to appear shortly after 4 this morning (Aug. 5), and the 250-pound to 2,000-pound mama sea turtles were due on beach shortly thereafter.

The station has offered prizes for participants and also words of caution. Among them: Do not walk on the beach with sparklers or flashlights and don't make any quick movement or loud noise or the turtles will return to the ocean. A further admonition cautioned watchers against putting their hands in front of the turtle's mouth, "as she will bite it off."

The contest is being run in cooperation with the Florida Fish and Game Commission, which is guardian of the eggs once they are laid.

Bouncing eye introduces new call letters

KSYD-TV Wichita Falls, Tex., has changed its call letters to KAUS-TV. To promote the change an extensive animated on-air promotion was produced and ran for three days before the changeover became effective. The animation included both sets of call letters with the CBS Eye bouncing around.

The channel 6 CBS affiliate took new call letters as part of the change in ownership from Sidney A. Grayson and Associates to Paul Harron and group (Broadcasting, March 18).

More than 3,000 entries from agency and advertiser personnel were received in the KSYD-TV contest to get new call letters. H. Wendell Eastling, media director, Knox-Reeves Advertising, Minneapolis, won first prize of an MG sports car and a trip for two to Wichita Falls for selecting KAUS-TV.

station is paying "stringer" fees for stories called in by the "honorary" reporters.

Broadcasters support Detroit Olympic drive

Michigan radio and TV stations have blanketed the state with public service announcements in a drive to obtain the 1968 Olympic Games for Detroit.

The campaign was intended to raise $400,000 in public contributions to finance Detroit's bid for the Olympics. The Michigan Association of Broadcasters sponsored the drive on 120 radio and 16 TV stations. Spot announcements, with a background of a fife and drum corps, carried the theme "The Spirit of '68."

Harry Lipson, vice president-general manager of WJBK-AM-FM Detroit, served as chairman of the broadcast drive. Competing with Detroit for the Olympics are Lyon, France; Mexico City, and Buenos Aires. The presentations will be made before the International Olympic Committee, meeting in Nairobi, Kenya, in October.

Subteen market courted with Delta's stamp plan

There are postage stamps, tax stamps, savings stamps and trading stamps. Now Delta Airlines, Atlanta, has plans to offer travel stamps in its radio-TV commercials.

Delta hopes the stamps, which cost $1 each, will be an inducement for the subteen market-aged 10 to 12—to save a book of 150 stamps and trade the book in for a package tour of the New York World's Fair, which opens next April. The stamp-filled books can be exchanged for regular Delta tickets also.

With an all-media promotion campaign targeted initially for Atlanta, New Orleans and Houston, Delta's ad manager, George E. Bounds, said the airline is "breaking new ground ... preselling air travel to an oncoming generation of potential customers."

The stamps are now sold through Delta offices and will be available at banks and travel agents.

Delta's agency is Burke Dowling Adams, Atlanta.

OUR RESPECTS to Charles Anderson Pratt

An ex-cowboy thrives on wrangling TV's best buys

Charles A. Pratt of Alberto-Culver Co. never needed the help of a $40 million-plus television advertising budget to be popular.

He's one of those individuals whose personal warmth and business integrity had won a long list of friends years ago when he was still selling TV, not buying it. This was when there were few who could guess that both his career and Alberto-Culver's success would skyrocket to such heights today. Mr. Pratt hasn't changed.

Now vice president-director of advertising and director of public relations for Alberto-Culver, Chuck Pratt joined the company in 1960 after several years with NBC-TV in Chicago as an account executive. He is consistently described by his business associates as one of the most astute and tough, yet fair, negotiators in TV today.

Good Listener • Station representative, network and agency personnel who deal with him regularly find Mr. Pratt's door is always open to any reasonable idea. "But you've really got to do your homework before you call," they agree. All also admire his wit and frankness and respect his drive and enthusiasm.

Starting with the new TV season this fall, Alberto-Culver will spend over $40 million for TV on an annual basis. Small sums also will go for a careful test of radio and for magazines. Most of the TV money will buy saturation day and night schedules on the three networks but over $1 million a month will continue to be spent for spot TV.

Agencies: Compton, BBDO and J. Walter Thompson, all Chicago.

The new budget is a healthy jump over the $30 million spent in TV this year and will help push the young Melrose Park, Ill., firm still higher as the biggest TV spender in several product categories in the intensely competitive cosmetic-toiletries and hair product fields. Product diversification also continues, with new entries in the household and food fields due soon.

TV's Very Own • This new $40 million budget is also quite a giant stride beyond the original $75,000 which President Leonard H. Lavin plunged into TV in Philadelphia in 1955. Mr. Lavin as well as Mr. Pratt believe TV to be the most powerful mass medium today and the catalyst responsible for driving the firm's phenomenal sales records to new plateaus.

Charles Anderson Pratt was born in Chicago on Oct. 17, 1923, and grew up and attended grade school on the city's North Side in the area near the Edge-water Beach hotel. His father was in the stock and bond business but fiscal figuring had no allure for young Chuck during that period.

His real love was for horses. It first was sparked when he was but age 5 and his father took him riding. The infatuation would never end.

During his secondary school years at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., Chuck was a better-than-average student but horsemanship still ranked as a dominant interest. During the summer when he was 17, Chuck obtained his first job and anyone could guess it right off: professional cowboy.

Back For More • He got "40 and found" (40 a month and keep) just like all the regular cow hands, he recalls. He worked at the Hereford Ranch near Kremmling, Col. After his graduation from Culver, Chuck returned to the ranch to work again. He rode horseback into Steamboat Springs to register for the draft in World War II in the early summer of 1942.

But he didn't wait for the draft call to come. He enlisted in the U. S. Cavalry at Fort Riley, Kan., and after his basic training was sent to Fort Bliss, Tex., where the horse soldiers were assigned to Mexican border patrol. Now Corporal Pratt, he next was returned to Fort Riley to instruct cavalry recruits there.

When it became obvious that the cavalry units soon were to be de-horsed and mechanized, he passed up an opportunity to go to Officer's Training School and requested transfer to the Army with assignment overseas. He got prompt action. Infantry Private Pratt soon was headed for the Pacific.

By the time he was released as a sergeant in October 1945, he had served in New Guinea, the Philippines and the Moluccas. His decorations included the Bronze Star and Purple Heart.

Blind Date • In January 1946, Mr. Pratt enrolled as an economics major at Amherst College. He played football one year but he gave that up when troubled by a bit of malaria bangover from the war. One evening in the fall of 1947 he tagged along with a buddy who had a date at nearby Smith College and he was introduced to the girl he would marry the next year. She was Joan Broughton of Dayton, Wash.

They were married June 12, 1948, after her graduation from Smith. Their honeymoon was his summer school session in Maine at Bowdoin College.

The Pratts made their home in Chicago after his graduation from Amherst in January 1949. That year he worked for the Chicago Tribune's classified advertising department and the next year he was a local time salesman for WAAF Chicago. In 1951 Mr. Pratt joined the sales staff of WOR-TV New York and later was assigned to the station's Chicago office.

Seller To Buyer • Early in 1952 he joined the Midwest sales staff of Edward Petry & Co. and stayed there until 1957 when he became account executive for NBC-TV. In early 1960 he was named advertising chief for Alberto-Culver and last month he was promoted to vice president.

The Pratts live in suburban Barrington, Ill., where Mr. Pratt recently was made one of several "mounted deputies" by the local sheriff. Their home is a colonial ranch which fronts on its own lake. The Pratts have three children: Marion 14, Andrew 12 and Charles Jr. 8.

All in the family enjoy their three horses, two Alaskan Malamute sled dogs and a cat. Last summer the dog population was up to 10 but the puppies were sold.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt share a keen interest in golf too. Mr. Pratt also likes to swim and he is particularly fond of surfing in the ocean.

But after a hard day of work, Mr. Pratt finds nothing is finer than quietly slipping off to the barn to care for the horses. As Mrs. Pratt slyly explains: "He knows they won't talk back."
No doldrums

NOT many years ago, business news tended to dry up in the heat of summer, but the rise of television and the evolution of new patterns of buying have changed all that. Broadcast advertising is becoming more and more a year-round business; even the dog days can produce good news.

Take the last few weeks, for example. The reports on both radio and television business, although not spectacular, have been solidly promising.

An analysis by the Television Bureau of Advertising showed that among the top 100 advertisers, television's share of budget in 1962 rose to almost 58%—and by all current accounts, network and spot TV sales continue to rise. In radio, the networks uniformly have been hailing a business resurgence, while spot salesmen report midsummer sales are beginning to perk and say that, perhaps more significant, agency and advertiser interest is promising.

The outlook, then, appears good for the broadcasting media. If late-summer work matches midsummer prospects, it ought to be a bright autumn.

Time to send in the pros

UNLESS present trends of government control are checked, don't raise your boy to be a broadcast journalist. He faces a career in a play-it-safe, nice-Nellie business that will deal only with issues on which everyone agrees.

Consider, for example, the FCC's July 26 advisory about its fairness doctrine (Broadcasting, July 29). This statement makes it clear that any broadcast coverage of any issue that is remotely controversial must include or be followed by a presentation of all viewpoints on the subject. To depart from that standard is to invite FCC retribution.

The inevitable consequence of a continued application of the FCC's fairness doctrine will be the avoidance of broadcasts that can lead to disputes. Nothing is more certain to sap the strength of broadcast journalism.

Controversy has always been handled more gingerly by broadcasters than by print journalists, for broadcasters have always been subject to government pressures that print journalists mercifully escape. If those pressures are destined to intensify, broadcast journalism will be diluted in proportion. By comparison, print journalism will become more and more appealing. Adult Americans want something stronger than Pablum in their diet of news.

Fairness, which is to say comprehensiveness in the presentation of issues about which reasonable people differ, is an admirable objective toward which all responsible journalists in all media strive. It is not, however, a doctrine that can be successfully invoked or enforced by the government. Judgments of fairness will vary as widely as the subjects and situations about which they are made and as widely as the attitudes and biases of the judges. Among journalists themselves there are more apt than not to be variations of opinion about the emphasis to give the parts of any story that entails an exploration of diverging views.

The FCC's decision to release its advisory on fairness was no doubt prompted by the House Communications Subcommittee's hearings on bills to legalize fairness in broadcast editorializing. Plainly the FCC wanted to demonstrate, as it had asserted in its chairman's testimony before the House subcommittee, that it already has the power to make broadcasters be fair.

There is no easy way for broadcasters to counter this trend of increasing government pressure. Yet they must find ways to arrest it and, hopefully, to turn it around.

Priority, of course, must be given to the presentation of the broadcasting case before the House subcommittee when it resumes its hearings on editorializing later this month. We must hope that broadcasters with experience and competence in editorializing will volunteer to testify.

Beyond that is a longer haul—the counteraction of the FCC's enforcement of its awkward fairness doctrine. This can come about only if broadcast journalists continue to go about their work with such expertise and courage that they can defend it on professional grounds and enlist the support of rival media if the government attempts to move in. Already, despite the natural competition among media, powerful newspapers have taken the broadcasters' side against the proposals for restrictions on editorializing.

Professionalism in broadcast journalism is the only quality that can save the art from the emasculation that some bureaucrats and congressmen have planned for it.

Backsliding

HERE are signs that the National Council of Churches recognizes that it went afield in adopting an ill-conceived, dangerous and wholly unwarranted resolution calling for stricter government controls on television and radio.

The executive director of the NCC has sent a memorandum to all stations attempting to explain the council's pronouncement on the ground that "news accounts" had given an inaccurate picture. (Not the way we read them.) And the executive secretary also has asked for a series of meetings between the council and broadcasters. This comes rather late, since a request for consultation had been made through the National Association of Broadcasters prior to adoption of the resolution but was rejected.

The council has heard from many broadcasters since its pronunciamento last month. It doubtlessly has heard also from many of its lay and clergy members too, since, as is pointed out by Carleton D. Brown, WTVL Waterville, Me., only 55 out of a possible 200 members of the general board of the council voted for the resolution, with six against it and no abstentions. Mr. Brown, himself a prominent Protestant layman, vouches that the action does not represent the "majority thinking of the great Protestant churches of the country."

Since to err is human and to forgive divine, we suggest that the council would be well-advised to expunge the resolution from its official records.
