BROADCASTING, March 10, 1969
Reverse twist

There could be revival this week of six-year-old proposal that television networks submit programs to clearance by National Association of Broadcasters code authority. If so, networks will probably resist it as strongly as they did at first. Proposal was first made in March 1962 by Senator John O. Pastore (D-R.I.), chairman of Senate Communications Subcommittee, who was outraged by episode of ABC-TV Bus-Stop. Pastore, now Senator Pastore who has called new hearings on television violence this week (see page 25).

Back in 1962 NAB itself, under president of LeRoy Collins, tried to get networks to clear with code. Under present presidency of Vincent T. Wasielski, association will take opposite approach. In testimony at Pastore hearing next Wednesday (March 12), NAB is expected to argue that program responsibility belongs to individual licensees, including networks which are licensed through their owned stations.

Some relief

FCC Chairman Rosel H. Hyde intends to move fast in effort to ease some of worries now besetting broadcasters about competing applications being filed for their facilities. What he has in mind, as he hinted to Senate Communications Subcommittee last week (see page 23), is proposal to set cutoff date after which new applications for occupied facilities could not be filed. (New application for Los Angeles channel 4, now occupied by NBC's KNBC(TV), was filed in February, two months after NBC's license had expired—and as commission was completing review of allegations against NBC that had caused deferral of action on renewal application.)

Although Chairman Hyde was not specific, it's believed he hopes to have proposal before commission for consideration this week or next. Proposed rule, presumably, would set cutoff date certain number of days after renewal application is filed.

Co-op conversion

Station Representatives Association's drive to convert manufacturers' co-op advertising money into spot TV and radio budgets is gathering steam. Idea is to get manufacturers to take co-op allowance set aside for retailers—who spend bulk of it in newspapers anyway—and let their own agencies use it to produce and place strong commercials with "store tags" at end showing or telling where brands may be bought locally (BROADCASTING, July 22, 1968). Project is headed by Nathan S. Lanning, formerly of Burlington Industries, who launched it for SRA in January 1968. In addition to dozen or so manufacturers who used plan last year, 20 are already committed for 1969, with budgets ranging from $15,000 to $750,000 or more. And 13 of those 20 were not in spot broadcasting before.

Going home

Henry Loomis, business executive, educator and scientist, shortly will be appointed number-two man in United States Information Agency under Director Frank Shakespeare, former CBS executive. Mr. Loomis, who worked in Nixon campaign last year, was director of Voice of America, 1958-65, and deputy commissioner of education in Department of Health, Education and Welfare until 1966.

Birth control

With pressure beginning to build up from broadcast representatives, FCC is expected to start move soon on rule-making aimed at drastic revisions of its AM allocations rules. Commission clamped freeze on AM applications in July, when it issued notice of proposed rulemaking (BROADCASTING, July 22, 1968) and in recent weeks commission staff and members have been getting calls from outside wondering when proposed rules would be issued.

Preliminary draft has been completed. It would virtually rule out new service in all but underserved areas. Conceivably, however, commission would simplify present processing procedures without, at same time, opening floodgates to renewal applications. Principal reason commission undertook revision of AM allocation rules was that processing of AM applications was considered excessively costly in terms of creation of new allocations. Rules now would convert to gross national product.

EVR customers

CBS electronic video recording system, publicly demonstrated on West Coast last week, now seems to be rolling into high gear with announcement expected this week at Washington demonstration that major life insurance company will purchase more than 1,000 EVR players over next three years for training purposes. Installation will be made in company's agencies throughout country, with current video-tape and film training programs converted to EVR cartridges.

Also at Boston demonstration of EVR system, scheduled for March 25, another new customer will be revealed who is said to be of "innovative" nature. Meanwhile, Motorola Inc., which has manufacturing and marketing rights from CBS for EVR player in U.S. and Canada, is hopeful that volume in production on players by second quarter of 1970, with shipments by July 1 of that year.

Spot programing

Underscoring trend toward advertiser-identified syndicated programing (BROADCASTING, Feb. 24), Top Value Stamps Inc., Dayton, Ohio, will sponsor one-hour Glen Yarbrough Show in 89 markets, starting next month. Music special was produced by Ed Sullivan Productions and elements of programs were assembled by Top Value Program Sales, which is handling syndication in other markets. Top Value Stamps arranged for direct placement of special.

Try again

FCC appears to be having tough time disposing of protests against sale of WGKA-AM-FM Atlanta to Strauss Broadcasting Co. Atlantans, worried about losing WGKA's classical-music format, opposed sale last summer, then filed petitions for reconsideration after it was approved in August (BROADCASTING, Sept. 2, 1968). Strauss switched to middle-road format in October. After reconsideration for weeks, commissioners last week took unprecedented step of asking Strauss to make further effort, by "more comprehensive survey or other method," to ascertain that its program proposals will best serve community's needs and interests.

Some of heat may have gone out of controversy in last few months. Women from Decatur, Ga., daytimer that covers at least part of Atlanta service area, switched to all-classical format on Christmas morning.

Front money

Broadcast Pioneers Educational Fund is getting off to lively start. Following Westinghouse Broadcasting's $50,000 contribution (BROADCASTING, March 3) Won Continental Broadcasting has made $30,000 pledge toward $750,000 fund to sustain reference center and library to be equipped on first floor of new National Association of Broadcasters' building in Washington. Ward L. Quaal, president of Won Continental, is co-chairman of BPEF drive.

Admen off Senate hook

In unexplained turnabout, advertising industry association leaders aren't being invited to this Wednesday's violence session before Senate Commerce Committee (see page 25). Hearing will be all-broadcaster confrontation with senators and U. S. surgeon general.

Advertising spokesmen may still be called at later date, it was confirmed Friday (March 7), if it develops that surgeon general feels that sponsor pressures are fundamental to problem to be studied.

National Association of Broadcasters accepts premise that broadcasters are fully responsible for programming practices. NAB President Vincent Wasilewski expects to have relatively brief statement promising full cooperation with study.

Committee's initial interest in appearance of Howard Bell, president of American Advertising Federation, was thought to have involved Mr. Bell's earlier broadcasting service. He was present at 1962 meeting in Senator Pastore's office, as assistant to then NAB President Leroy Collins, at which, according to senator last week, promises were made that weren't kept. Later, Mr. Bell was director of NAB Code Authority.

Meanwhile, long-time adversary of violence on TV, Senator Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn.), declared Friday (March 7) it is "high time for action."

On Senate floor and in letter to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch, Senator Dodd offered transcripts from Senate Juvenile Delinquency Subcommittee hearings held seven years ago, stressing that since then "nothing has been accomplished... if anything, there is more violence, more mayhem."

AFTRA strikes WNEW-AM-FM

Members of American Federation of Television and Radio Artists called strike against WNEW-AM-FM New York Friday (March 7) but on-air operations continued with use of supervisory employees. AFTRA contract expired Feb. 1. Twenty AFTRA employees walked off their jobs and eight members of Writers Guild of America refused to cross picket lines. Union said main issues were parity of FM employees with those of AM, particularly in news area; higher wages for newsmen and improved working conditions.

Station spokesman said wages did not constitute critical demand and said it was union's insistence on additional news personnel and reduction in workload. He said "readers-writers" now earn from $435 to $475 per week and station has offered increase of $40, spread over three years. Union insists that WNEW's news scale to be same as one recently negotiated at WINS New York, calling for $65 increase over three years.

Advertising vs. FCC

FCC's proposed ban on cigarette advertising over broadcast media strikes at heart of "the basic business-advertising relationship," according to chairman of major agency.

Ernest J. Jones of MacManus, John & Adams Inc. said in speech prepared for delivery today (Mar. 10) to Phoenix Advertising Club that potential of commission's decision is "so disastrous" that those in advertising should "band together in protest."

Mr. Jones identified himself as non-smoker with no stock in broadcast or tobacco industries, and as head of $40-million agency with no cigarette accounts. His interest, he said, was as businessman "greatly concerned about the right of business to sell a legal product in a legal manner."

Problem should not be regarded as provincial squabble between tobacco, TV and FCC, Mr. Jones said. "Constitutional rights are neither selective nor negotiable," he argued. "And in the wonderful world of bureaucracy nothing succeeds like success.

"If the voice of legitimate business can be stifled in this manner, I wonder what product or business will be next obliterated by a statistical shadow," he said.

Annenberg confronts Senate

Walter Annenberg, president of Triangle Publications Inc., group publisher and station owner, ran into complications stemming from his media holdings during Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing Friday (March 7) on his nomination by Nixon administration to be ambassador to Great Britain. But that same power was cited by Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright (D.-Ark.) as best reason why Mr. Annenberg's nomination should have clear sailing in committee.

Thoroughly aired during hearing were charges that Mr. Annenberg had used his communications empire unfairly in Pennsylvania political campaigns. Issues had been raised in syndicated columns by Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson.

Under committee questioning, Mr. Annenberg flatly rejected criticisms raised in columns, added that he had not contributed financially to political campaigns, either. Specifically denied was any contribution to Nixon campaign. His wife, however, had contributed $2,500 to that campaign, it was noted. Broadcaster-publisher told committee he saw no conflicts of interest flowing from his financial holdings, but that he plans to resign directorships he holds in wide range of industries, put his securities in trust and refrain from active editorial direction of broadcasting and publishing properties.

Triangle stations are WFIL-AM-FM-TV Philadelphia; WNBK-AM-FM-TV Binghamton, N. Y.; WFBG-AM-FM-TV Altoona, Pa.; WNCM-AM-FM-TV New Haven-Hartford, Conn.; WLYH-TV Lancaster-Lebanon, Pa., and KFRE-AM-FM-TV Fresno, Calif. The firm also publishes newspapers and magazines, including two Philadelphia dailies and TV Guide.

Chairman Fulbright suggested that Mr. Annenberg's confirmation to Court of St. James should be approved with out difficulty. Alluding to presence on committee of several senators from eastern seaboard states, he said, "after all, he owns all those newspapers and television stations."

Committee and full-Senate approval could come this week.

Ethnic news network set

Soul News Network, new service designed to provide audio feeds to ethnic radio stations, announced Friday (March 7) it had begun service to seven stations.

Service, which originates from Washington, was created by Chris Cutter, former VISTA volunteer. It will concentrate on wide range of industries of interest to minority groups.

Initial station list includes WLIL New York; WAOK Atlanta; WJLB Detroit; WABA Milwaukee; WEUP Huntsville, Ala.; KNOX Fort Worth, and KAPE San Antonio, Tex.

NCCB finding funds

National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting plans to issue report on long-range financing for public broadcasting within next two weeks, meet with FCC in Washington March 11-12 and carry on other projects, thanks to grants from two outside organizations and donations from members, industry sources reported Friday (March 7). Spokesman for William Benton Foundation said...
Week's Headliners

Mr. Northcross  Mr. Rich

Samuel Northcross, formerly VP and national director of broadcast, Foote, Cone & Belding, New York, joins Norman, Craig & Kummel there next week as senior VP and management executive. Mr. Northcross has 20 years in agency business, including 15 with William Esty Co. where he was VP in charge of broadcast and account supervisor on Salem cigarettes. He interrupted his FCB service for a year in 1965 to serve with MCA as VP in charge of New York office.

Russell Stoneham, director of nighttime programs for CBS-TV, New York, appointed director of program development for MGM Television, Culver City, Calif. Mr. Stoneham will be based on West Coast, where he previously spent three years as director of program development for NBC-TV. He was also associate producer of Playhouse 90 series for four years and directed such shows as Climax, Studio One, and Front Row Center.

Lee M. Rich, senior VP in charge of media services, Leo Burnett Co., Chicago, resigns (continuing as consultant) to form own feature film and TV production company, Lorimar Productions, Beverly Hills, Calif. (see page 66D). Mr. Rich was with Leo Burnett since 1967. Previously, he spent two years as president of Mirisch-Rich Productions, Hollywood-based producer of Rat Patrol and Hey, Landlord series. Mr. Rich was with Benton & Bowles, New York, for 13 years, leaving there as senior VP in charge of media management. He will be president at Lorimar.

For other personnel changes of the week see "Fates & Fortunes."

LNA shows network gains

Leading National Advertisers reported Friday (March 7) that network TV revenues for January-February 1969 increased by 5% to $290,168,100.

According to LNA, NBC-TV showed strongest increase with gain of 11.9% over January-February 1968. CBS-TV's revenues climbed by 1.9%, while ABC-TV's declined 1.2%. By day-parts, total evening showed combined network gain from $184,964,400 to $198,323,000 while weekend daytime and weekday dipped slightly.

Conn. ETN gets grant

Connecticut Educational Television Corp. has received $15,000 grant from William Benton Foundation to help finance noncommercial, educational TV coverage of 1969 state general assembly. CETC has three stations (WEDN-TV)

Phonevision expansion plans

Zenith Radio's Phonevision system of pay TV will be ready to go in several U.S. cities by next year, according to Joseph S. Wright, chairman of Zenith Radio Corp.

Mr. Wright says in March-April, 1969 issue of Screen Actor, trade organ of Screen Actors Guild, due for release today (March 10), that Zenith's next pay-TV operation will be underway "in possibly a year with other markets following . . ." He says if systems are successful "vast additional market" will be opened for film industry because, he contends, there's "vast, lost audience" today for movies in theaters.

Citing statistics that claim that 42 million less people go to movie theaters weekly now than did 20 years ago, Mr. Wright says pay TV will serve these theater dropouts by making "it economical and convenient" for whole families to attend movies in living rooms at cost "of not more—and probably less—than the price of one admission ticket at the theater."

AFM to vote on pact

American Federation of Musicians announced Friday (March 7) it has reached agreement on new contract covering musicians on jingles and spot announcements for radio and television. Terms of agreement, which was negotiated with representatives of Association of National Advertisers and American Association of Advertising Agencies, were not disclosed pending its ratification by AFM members later this month.

More TV exports

United States TV set makers increased their exports in 1968 by more than 5,000 receivers, Electronic Industries Association is reporting today (March 10). There were 144,302 color sets sent abroad last year, valued at $27.8 million, with virtually half of them going to Canada. In 1967, 139,127 units were exported, valued at $23.6 million.

Home radio exports amounted to 385,129 units, worth $4.95 million last year, compared to 253,993, valued at $4.3 million in 1967. Auto radios totaled 258,586 units, worth $6.6 million last year, compared to 183,205 units, valued at $5.1 million the year before.

Researches Your Personality

Every television and radio station has a personality which, like that of a person, its audience can define and articulate with amazing and sometimes startling candor. This personality (or image) is the result of the effect of everything that happens on the station. Each individual on the air is part of the call letters or channel personality.

We have completed over 130 market studies, encompassing more than 60,000 depth interviews, studying the images of TV and radio stations from coast to coast in the United States as well as in Canada.

Our company uses the unique skills of the social scientist to examine in detail, program-by-program and personality-by-personality, the strengths and weaknesses of your station and the competing stations in your market.

Our clients know where they stand, and more importantly, they know reasons why their ratings tabulate the way they do, particularly for the programs under their control—news, weather, sports, documenta-ries, women's programs, movies, children's programs, etc.

One of the principal reasons for our contract renewal year after year is that we do more than just supervise a research project. We stay with the station for a whole year to make sure you understand the study and that it works for you.

Our contribution has helped the aggressive management effort of some of our clients to move from third to first place in several of the country's most competitive markets. As a matter of fact, over one-half of our current clients are number one in their markets. Why do they use us?

They want to know why they are in first place and be sure they stay there.

If you are concerned about ratings and would like a sound objective look at your station and its relationship to the market, give us a call for a presentation with absolutely no obligation on your part.

Gives true perspective

EDITOR: Congratulations on your weekly Broadcasting stock index and particularly on one feature of it which is missing from financial advisory publications.

Today, when it appears that the Las Vegas dice throwers have taken over the stock markets ... our "total market capitalization" figures should bring a lot of people down to earth.

In many of the companies which you list, it is possible to make a reasonable guess on the market value of all their assets. When the public bids up the value of a broadcasting stock to the low 40's, 90% of its value is low as recently as 1967, it is time to run for the showers... - William H. Rich, Eastern Regional Broadcasters Inc., New York.

Likes stock index too

EDITOR: Allow me to congratulate you on the Broadcasting stock index appearing weekly in your magazine. I am sure it is a most valuable and interesting addition for many of your readers... Lloyd D. Loers, station manager, Kolo-TV Mason City, Iowa.

It pays to be a joiner

EDITOR: I feel it would be appropriate from time to time to suggest that broadcasters who aren't members of the National Association of Broadcasters and their state association ought to get active in them. The more members an organization speaks for, the more effective that organization can be.

But the "Monday Memo" tried to make the point that if brevity is the soul of wit, it also works the other way around. Precisely, because the Vademecum spot is a gag (and not a mini-movie), it could easily be cut to 30, as our new creative firm would be glad to demonstrate without charge.- Lincoln Diamant, president, Spots Alive Inc, New York.

The shorter the better

EDITOR: There appears to be doubt about the premise of my Jan. 27 "Monday Memo" on "How Long Is a Mini-Movie?" and your excellent Feb. 24 follow-up, "The Tricky Art of Making 30-Second." You [say] Carl Ally's one-minute Vademecum toothpaste spot is a "spoof-commercial that can't be told with brevity."

Contemporary radio gets through to young America

Contemporary radio programing has helped establish the image we set out to develop when our first Arby's roast-beef-sandwich restaurant in Cleveland (fifth in the Arby's system) opened during December 1965. Today we are the largest Arby's roast-beef-restaurant franchisee in the country, with fast-food-service restaurants in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Florida. We project that during the next 24 months we will be operating many more Arby's roast-beef-sandwich restaurants in a four-state area. Arby's restaurants have the highest average sales volume in the fast-food carry-out field.

Our advertising budget in early 1966 was small and so was our market. No national advertising, or any advertising for that matter, had preceded us to identify who or what we were. We had to get off the ground fast and do it on a small budget.

Our goal was to establish a climate of excitement, an atmosphere that said: "It's fun to eat at Arby's." We wanted a contemporary image in addition to telling the public that an Arby's roast-beef sandwich was great eating.

We feel we achieved this goal, and in a relatively short period of time, by our strong identification with contemporary-music stations. Not only did our then measger budget get tremendous mileage but equally important, by identifying with the pace-setting audience delivered by the contemporary stations (and, in closely with station promotions), we developed a loyal and strong sales base.

The youthful market is mobile, it's trend-setting and it spends.

Today we draw from a broader market, which we have been able to attract through an ever-expanding promotional budget.

WixY in Cleveland, the lone remaining contemporary radio station serving the Greater Cleveland market now, was and is an excellent example of the type of radio station we like to work with. They are imaginative and innovative along with being able to deliver a faithful audience. That's a hard combination to beat. By clearly identifying with WixY, which we do at every opportunity, we also identify with the market they speak for and through. Moreover, by being flexible in their programming, they have provided the advertiser, who wants it, unusual promotional opportunities which in turn give us effective, sales-producing results.

Unfortunately, we find that most radio stations give only lip service to their desire and willingness to cooperate in special promotions, which we find an important ingredient in developing the proper vehicle for our advertising message. It is our feeling that it does not take a great deal of talent to buy time, but it does take imagination to develop promotions that can merchandise radio— and television—spots. Wherever possible, we attempt to "showcase" our commercials through special programming.

A recent example was the Christmas parade promoted in part by WixY. We combined with the station in sponsoring a float in the parade. The float promoted the Arby's-WixY Friday Night Basketball Scoreboard. The station helped us develop a collateral promotion by conducting a contest to select 15 Greater Cleveland high-school cheerleaders to ride the float. This was done through promotional spots and newspaper advertising. We were flooded with entries; the response was outstanding. Thus, we were able to take the sponsorship of our Friday Night Basketball Scoreboard and build a solid promotion on top of it.

All of our radio and television commercials are provided by Arby's International. We place our commercials, both radio and TV, on stations in the Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Ohio, Fort Lauderdale, Fla. and Miami areas. VHF stations and, where available, UHF stations are utilized. The commercials are well done and we do not have to spend time developing the basic sales message or preparing the necessary graphics. Therefore, we can devote all of our time to building collateral promotions. WixY has been very helpful along these lines.

Our Friday Night Basketball Scoreboard, patterned after our Friday Night Football Scoreboard, gives progressive reports and results of all the high-school games in Greater Cleveland. The first report starts at 7:30 and there is one every 20 minutes thereafter until the wrap-up at 11:30.

Each week the individual stores receive a line-up of the basketball and/or football games, as the case may be, that are of particular interest in their neighborhoods. All of our stores have a blackboard on which the half-time and final scores are posted. These scores are called to the individual stores by the radio station.

We have sometimes been accused of devoting a disproportionate amount of our advertising dollars to the "young adult" market. However, we did so originally both because it was an easily defined market plus the fact the contemporary-music stations were able to help us design and implement programming that specifically wooed this market.

Periodically we check the effectiveness—and audience response—to our spots by offering a free premium item. The item (always a limited time offer) is varied from station and from week to week so we can zero in on who is delivering "the numbers".

We are sold on contemporary radio stations as long as they are able to be flexible in helping us carry out our advertising program.

Raymond L. Saks is the president of Arby's Northfield Systems Inc. and is Arby's largest franchisee. He bought the fifth franchise sold by Arby's and has been closely identified with and has paralleled Arby's own success story. Mr. Saks was, for many years, owner of a graphic-arts manufacturing company, which he sold just prior to going into the Arby's fast-food business. He has used his merchandising know-how to build one of the largest fast-food-franchise operations in the country.

A brake on strike applications?
Key legislators deplore FCC role in challenges to incumbent licensees; Nick Johnson upbraided

FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson was told by the chairman of the Senate Communications Subcommittee last week, "Mr. Johnson, you have indicated a desire to file against existing licensees at renewal time.

Mr. Johnson kept insisting he had not done so.

Senator John O. Pastore (D-R.I.), who was presiding over a hearing before the parent Commerce Committee, issued his rebuke after other senators had questioned Mr. Johnson about some of his writings and speeches.

"Apparently somebody has been agitating trouble," Senator Pastore said. "I don't think you accomplish good service by going out looking for trouble."

Although Mr. Pastore did not explicitly direct his remarks to Mr. Johnson, he made them after the commissioner had engaged in a pointed exchange with Senator Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) and had been interrogated on the same subject by Senator Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.).

The dispute arose toward the end of day-and-a-half hearing in which the FCC was called to give an overview of its recent work and pending rulemakings. The next day the commission appeared in a shorter hearing before the Communications Subcommittee of the House.

Mr. Johnson's confrontation with the Senate started when Senator Scott told Mr. Johnson that you have 'written in speeches and articles that you yourself have made up your independent mind that large companies shouldn't own broadcasting stations, in effect by listing them in categories of undesirable licensees.'

"Broadcasting Magazine has made that allegation," Mr. Johnson said, "but I believe, like many of their statements, it fails to stand analysis. I have not prejudged any of these cases beyond those which have come before the commission in which I have written opinions. I have not written any magazine articles that refer to the merits of any cases that are pending before us, although I have referred to cases that have been decided by the commission."

(A Broadcasting editorial, in the Feb. 24 issue, cited a number of major broadcast owners that had been identified by name in an article written for The Atlantic by Mr. Johnson. The article constituted an attack on what he called "local and regional monopolies, growing concentrations of control of the most profitable and powerful television stations in the major markets, broadcasting-publishing combines, and so forth." The editorial also quoted a Johnson article in Harper's in which he commended, by name, a number of persons or groups that had filed protests or competing applications against existing licensees—several of which cases are still pending FCC action.)

Senator Scott then asked whether Mr. Johnson believed that commissioners should seek out rival applicants for licenses of existing stations.

"We have been precluded by Congress from so doing in an amendment to the act," Mr. Johnson said at the beginning of a long reply.

(Legal authorities pointed out that the only amendment that might be in point was a 1952 change in Section 310(b) of the Communications Act, prohibiting the FCC from entertaining competing applications in transfer cases. The amendment makes no reference to license renewals.)

"Didn't you on a program on WRC solicit other applications for that license?" Senator Scott asked.

"That," said Mr. Johnson, "was another comment of Broadcasting Magazine." He added that his version of what he had said on the station and in the Harper's article "was simply to make available to the public the information which the Senate has enacted into law and the FCC has enacted into legislation."

(According to a news story in Broadcasting's Feb. 24 issue, Mr. Johnson, in an interview on WRC-TV Washington White House correspondent, and Charles W. Roberts, a correspondent for Newsweek.

The dissidents tried unsuccessfully for several months to effect a voluntary removal of the discriminatory policy, through petitions and appeals to management and members (Broadcasting, Sept. 23, 1968). They were told by management at one point that they should accept the will of the "vast majority" of Kenwood's members and allow the policy to stand.

Last month, however, the group notified Kenwood's owner of its intention to file suit unless the club lifted its ban within a month.

The dissidents have not yet extended their attack to the question of Negro membership in the country club. Kenwood has no Negroes among its 2,000 members.

Johnson says he'll sue his segregated club

FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson, who has a flair for making news headlines, is spokesman for a dissident group of members who are challenging the racial policies of a segregated country club he joined some time ago.

The nine-member group at the Kenwood Country Club, just outside the District of Columbia in Maryland's Montgomery county, will file suit this week in Baltimore's Federal District Court, with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union, which has agreed to pay legal fees and other court costs. This suit will attempt to lift the club's ban on Negro guests.

Besides Mr. Johnson, the group includes Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho); Robert C. Pierpoint, CBS ton, volunteered that broadcast licenses, including WRC-TV's, in Washington, Virginia and Maryland expire Oct. 1. To the audience he said, according to the transcript of the program: "You can suggest they ought not to get their license renewed or you can apply for a license yourself."

Senator Scott pursued the question: "Would you say that on this waq program you did not encourage by your statements or seek to encourage people to become applicants for that station's license?"

Mr. Johnson replied: "The net result of education and information is often that actions will take place that would not otherwise have. To the extent that I made information available, that is, after all, public information to members of the public who were listening to that program."

"The net result of that may be that people who are now frustrated, who do not know how to turn or how they can effectuate their rights, will know information that they did not know before and thus be in a position to take actions that they would not otherwise be able to take."

"In other words," said Senator Scott, "it is a very circuitous way to say yes."

"If you wish to so interpret it, it is your pleasure," said Mr. Johnson. "I do," said Senator Scott.

It was later in the day that Senator Cannon reopened the subject. He asked whether Mr. Johnson thought it proper for the FCC to encourage others to apply for existing licenses.

"I believe, Senator Cannon," said Mr. Johnson, "that we have, of course, a responsibility to our licenses. I think we also have an obligation to the public at large, to viewers and licensees, to audiences that these stations serve."

Senator Cannon asked the same question of Commissioner Kenneth Cox who said that the law, by creating the opportunity for rival applicants to file, in a sense encourages them.

At that point Senator Pastore broke in. "I don't think any individual who has a responsible position should go out enticing or activating or stimulating trouble in order to give the public service."

A little later Mr. Pastore added: "If the commission is indulging in that sort of activity, then the commission is derelict. I am saying that."

"But I don't think you accomplish good service by going out looking for trouble. And you don't stimulate trouble. It strikes me that some of the tactics have been exactly that."

The four other commissioners present, in answer to the same question by Senator Cannon, emphatically stated opposition to the practice of soliciting applications. Chairman Rosel Hyde spoke of judicial entrapment and the awkwardness of sitting in judgment on an application so solicited against an incumbent licensee.

Commissioner Robert E. Lee termed the practice "highly inappropriate." Commissioner James Wadsworth thought it would be "almost impossible" to operate in such circumstances. Commissioner H. Rex Lee said he would "hate to sit on a decision where one of the applicants had been encouraged to file."

The only commissioner to be missed in the roundup was Robert T. Bartley, absent because of the death of his mother.

The House Communications Subcommittee hearing the next day Mr. Johnson was sharply questioned by Representative William L. Springer (R-Ill.), ranking minority member. Mr. Springer asked whether Mr. Johnson had publicly urged the public to intervene in license renewals.

In a long reply Mr. Johnson said he knew of no solicitation of intervention "in a particular case" and that his public utterances had been intended to distribute information to the public.

Representative Springer wasn't satisfied. "This isn't an answer, but roaming all over the place. I want the reporter to repeat the question."

When the reporter did, Mr. Johnson answered: "No."

During the Senate committee hearings, which took all day Tuesday, March 4, and the afternoon of Wednesday, March 5, Chairman Hyde presented a comprehensive survey of the commission's recent work and numerous rulemakings. Other commissioners afterward added their own comments to the record.

Aside from the discussion of solicited applications, the principal development at the hearings was the institution of a study of TV violence by the U.S. surgeon general (see page 25).

NBC studies violence, CBS ready, ABC willing

Two of the three television networks are engaged in or embarking on research programs exploring the relationship, if any, between TV violence and children. The third says it stands ready to cooperate in any appropriate study by "outside" experts.

NBC, it was disclosed last week, has committed $500,000 to a five-year study that was designed by Dr. Thomas Coffin, its research vice president, and will be conducted under NBC supervision. Although it is set up to cover a five-year span, officials hope it will produce reportable results after about a year and at approximately one-year intervals after that.

CBS is known to be engaging in some research of its own regarding violence, but authorities said last week they were not yet in a position to discuss the work. ABC said its officials have stated publicly on several occasions that ABC will support such a study if done by outside researchers but that it thinks one undertaken by broadcasters themselves would be considered "suspect" and would not be generally accepted.

The NBC project was said to have been initiated last December by President Julian Goodman in assigning Dr. Coffin to see whether he could design a study that he thought likely to produce meaningful results. Dr. Coffin did, and the design won management approval with a five-year, $500,000 authorization.

The study was said to call for examination of real-life viewing children and the comparison of the reactions and behavior of groups exposed to varying kinds of TV programming.
Is TV guilty 'til proved innocent?

That's how Pastore talks about violence as he asks surgeon general for study, calls network hearing

The outlines of a major investigation into the effects of televised violence will begin to take shape this week at a suddenly called hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee. The study is to be done by the surgeon general of the United States, at the prodding of an influential and exercised senator.

In concept the investigation is to bear a likeness to the surgeon general's study of smoking and health. As a direct sequel to the earlier study, the FCC has proposed to ban cigarette advertising on the air.

The violence study was precipitated last week by Senator John O. Pastore (D-R.I.), chairman of the Senate Communications Subcommittee, while he was presiding at hearings of the parent Commerce Committee. The hearings had been called to review the current work of the FCC.

A clue to Senator Pastore's intentions came at the opening of the hearings last Tuesday morning (March 4). At that time the senator said that he was especially concerned about the incidence of violence in television programming and observed that he had wondered whether it would be fruitful for the surgeon general to make a study of its possible effects on mental health.

As the hearings progressed, Mr. Pastore returned to the subject several times, although other matters were under discussion. By the opening of the Wednesday-afternoon session his negotiations with the surgeon general and the latter's boss, Robert Finch, secretary of health, education and welfare, were far enough along to permit the announcement of the new hearing, to be held on Wednesday, March 12.

At next Wednesday's hearing, Senator Pastore has called the surgeon general (William H. Stewart), the presidents of the three television networks (Leonard Goldenson, ABC; Frank Stanton, CBS, and Julian Goodman, NBC), the presidents of the National Association of Broadcasters (Vincent T. Wasilewski), American Advertising Federation (Howard Bell) and American Association of Advertising Agencies (John Crichton), and the director of the NAB Television Code Authority (Stockton Hofritch).

This week's appearance will be the network presidents' second command performance in Washington on the subject of violence. They testified before the President's Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence late last year (Broadcasting, Dec. 16, 1968).

HEW Secretary Robert Finch, appearing before the House Public Health and Welfare Subcommittee before the Pastore announcement on Wednesday, told that panel's chairman, Representative Paul Rogers (D-Fla.), that he hoped to have just the sort of study that Senator Pastore was proposing under way within 10 days to two weeks. He said one difficulty was choosing an impartial panel to conduct the inquiry.

Mr. Finch's confirmation that the study would be undertaken came before he received an official letter from Senator Pastore requesting the action. The Pastore letter, which is to be released this week, was understood to have called for the naming of a panel made up of representatives of various professions to devise techniques and conduct a study under the surgeon general's supervision. The study is to help determine whether there is a causal connection between televised violence and antisocial behavior by individuals, especially the young. A report would be submitted to the subcommittee within one year from the letter's date, March 5.

The letter is said to point up the parallel between the proposed violence study and the similar approach taken with the smoking-health problem.

Central to Senator Pastore's surgeon-general approach is an effort to devise a method of applying legal pressures on broadcasters to modify, preferably through self-regulation, programming practices in both news and entertainment. Senator Pastore made it clear that contriving a scheme of governmental regulation that would square with the freedom-of-the-press provisions of the First Amendment had stumped him and almost everyone else who had responsibly searched for a solution.

One exception, as it turned out, was FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson, who told Senator Pastore that he felt he could draft a constitutionally acceptable statute. He preferred not to, however, he told the senator, who had already been made testy by some of Commissioner Johnson's previous contributions (see page 23). Mr. Johnson said one approach might be to require the networks to devote a minimum percentage of their programming to "public service" that would be unsponsored.

Pastore told Commissioner Johnson. "I've stayed awake nights trying to come up with an answer to the problem. It strikes me that the industry has to do it itself if it wants to maintain the respect of the public."

Earlier Senator Pastore had tongue-lashed broadcasters on the need for more effective self-regulation. The outburst came shortly after CBS Inc. President Frank Stanton, in Washington on another purpose, dropped into the standing-room-only hearing chamber, along with the new president of the CBS Broadcast Group, Richard Jencks, and stood in a highly visible position at the rear of the room.

"The one thing that has aggrieved me," said the senator, "has been the recklessness, and I use the word advisedly—I don't want to say dereliction—but the recklessness on the part of the networks, and it is fundamentally the networks. . . ."

One of his points was that networks, for competitive security reasons, wouldn't allow affiliates to preview network fare for acceptability. "I had the networks in my office not too long ago [almost seven years ago, it turned out]. I told them that this is one of the responsibilities of the industry—to so regulate themselves to bring about a proper restraint on this violence that would not do harm and injury to the American people."

"Well, there are a lot of promises made. What happens? The networks are absolutely reluctant to have the broadcasters view one of their product before it goes on the air. . . . But there it is again—the rivalry and the money in this big money-making industry. . . ."

"Now it strikes me that the industry—and I am saying this for the benefit of the industry today—they ought to get on their toes and they ought to begin doing something about this. The American people are disturbed about this violence and we have some very serious constitutional questions. . . ."

"I think the responsibility is on the industry. I want to say here this morning that they have not lived up to that responsibility and they have not kept the promises that they made to me."

During a later exchange with Commissioner Johnson, Mr. Pastore struck the same theme: Broadcasting's present self-regulation was inadequate. "A rule can't do it," he told the commissioner. "The industry can do it. They do have a code, but they might as well not have a code at all . . . Broadcasters have a job to do, beyond concern for the interest of the stockholders. There is a responsibility to the public. I think they can do a wonderful job on their own. . . . Here we are fussing over TV and they could correct it overnight if they wanted to."

On the first day of the Senate hearing Senator Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) also delved into the violence question, urging several times that the Communications Subcommittee take the lead in investigating the effects of televised violence. It was during an exchange with Senator Hartke that Senator Pastore agreed that the Senate should not necessarily wait for the report of the President's Commission on Violence, which has also been studying effects of the mass media on a climate of violence.

But without tipping his hand on the following day, Senator Pastore observed that "we don't have expert opinion, and we should have the highest authority," similar to the findings of the surgeon general on cigarettes, so that policy could be implemented on medical effects—"proof positive."

The problem, he added, "is fundamental. Control over program formats amounts to censorship. I used to say the industry had achieved maturity, but today the situation has gotten completely out of hand."

In the House Communications Subcommittee hearing the following day (see page 23) Chairman Torbert H. Macdonald (D-Mass.) pressed Chairman Rosel Hyde on whether the commission "would be constrained" to act in a similar manner as it had in proposing a ban on cigarette advertising if the surgeon general after an appropriate study was to find that violence on television was harmful. Chairman Hyde replied that the commission "would definitely have to take a look at it," but that the commission's action in this area would raise complex constitutional questions regarding free speech.

Chairman Hyde later said he had hopes for a "voluntary solution to the problem" coming from the broadcast industry; however, he felt that TV violence was a "very difficult area to regulate." The commission would be fully prepared to cooperate in lending assistance to the proposed study by Secretary Finch, he added, if the agency were asked to do so.

Surgeon general starts cranking up his study

Dr. William H. Stewart, U.S. surgeon general, has put a mental-health specialist to work drafting proposals for a study into the effects of televised violence. The proposals will be submitted to the Senate Commerce Committee at a hearing this week (see page 25).

The man picked for the drafting is Dr. Morton G. Miller, director of special programs at the National Institute of Mental Health, Bethesda, Md. Dr. Miller has specialized in studies of drug addiction, alcoholism, crime and violence.

Dr. Miller was unavailable for comment last week, but sources within the higher echelons of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare explained that implicit in their thinking on how the TV study should be approached is the experience of former Surgeon General Luther L. Terry in attacking the smoking-and-health controversy.

Following several years of heated charges and countercharges that cigarette smoking and lung cancer were linked, Dr. Terry in 1962 established a 10-man advisory committee to look into the subject. The committee comprised eight medical doctors, a chemist and a biological mathematician. Public Health Service physicians were named as staff director and medical director. Also attached to the committee was a staff of 23, composed of eight professionals and 15 secretaries and technicians.

The advisory committee and staff consulted with more than 200 specialists before issuing the 1964 report that found cigarette smoking a cause of lung cancer, bronchial diseases and heart disorders.

In the new study of TV and violence HEW officials are considering seeking the advice of other government agencies. HEW's Children's Bureau and Office of Education, the FCC, and the President's Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence were some of those named.

The violence commission is due to make its final report to the President early in June, and there seems to be no question that a significant section of the final document will deal with television (BROADCASTING, June 13).

Although the government's entrance into the TV-and-violence debate seemed on the surface to be sudden, Senator John O. Pastore and Nicholas Zapple, the Commerce Committee's staff professional on communications, had privately talked to Dr. Stewart on the subject earlier this month.

"The Great Swamp"

"WNBC-TV's 'The Great Swamp' is a noteworthy and excellent treatment of our fast-retreating wilderness. In an era when many urban families seldom have or take an opportunity to explore the 'other worlds' of the nation's wildlife parks and preserves, WNBC-TV has tastefully brought the opportunity or incentive to thousands of its viewers in our largest urban center.

The program, broadcast June 15, 1968, on New Jersey Illustrated, is enhanced by its outstanding technical and aesthetic blends and transitions."

The asking prices of network minutes

Top tab of $65,000 per commercial minute asked for 'Laugh-in', 'Mission: Impossible', 'Mayberry RFD'

The price-tags that have been hung on prime-time television network programs for next fall came into full view last week for the first time, and they ranged from a low of $33,000 a commercial minute to a high of $65,000.

The price lists, compiled by Broadcasting from a number of agency and advertiser sources, were estimated by agency experts to average about 5% or so above last year's in the case of CBS-TV and NBC-TV, and perhaps about 2% up at ABC-TV.

For a sampling of programs whose going prices were reported late in 1968, however, the increases appeared to be closer to 10% for CBS and NBC and 5% for ABC. But these comparisons were not necessarily with last fall's asking prices as distinguished from actual selling prices, and in any event it could not be ascertained whether the increases were typical of the schedules as a whole.

For some programs, next fall's prices will be lower than last fall's.

Biggest price-tag in regular programing is $65,000 a commercial minute, and it has been hung on three shows: NBC's Laugh-In and CBS's Mission: Impossible and Mayberry RFD. Doris Day Show on CBS, Dean Martin Show on NBC, and FBI and Bewitched on ABC are all neck-and-neck in the $63,000 area. Lowest entertainment-program price in the regular nighttime schedule is $33,000 a minute in ABC's Let's Make a Deal.

The prices are those quoted to agencies and advertisers as applicable in the fourth quarter of 1969—roughly the first quarter of the 1969-70 season. These are the so-called "winter prices," highest of the year. They cover both time and program charges. Substantially lower prices go into effect during the spring, and become even lower during the summer.

The reported prices take into account, according to agency sources, an apparent innovation in CBS pricing—a lowering of charges for a few days during the Christmas holidays. Apparently there is a slight increase in November prices to offset these reductions.

What appeared to be firm prices could not be ascertained for only four regularly scheduled prime-time shows, mostly so-called "packages" wholly or largely sponsored by a single advertiser.

The four are Kraft Music Hall on NBC, which a year ago was pegged at $60,000 a minute and is believed to be in that area again; the new Bill Cosby Show on NBC, underwritten by Procter & Gamble (see page 34) at a per-minute price estimated by some sources at about $40,000; and ABC's FBI and Bewitched in which Ford and Bristol-Myers, respectively, have had substantial positions; both FBI and Bewitched are quoted in some lists at $62,000 a minute and in others at $64,000.

At either figure, FBI and Bewitched carry ABC's highest price-tags. Next highest in the ABC schedule is the Sunday movie, at $56,000 a minute.

CBS has nine shows priced at $60,000 or more a minute; NBC has seven, counting Kraft's assumed cost of at least $60,000. CBS's top price of $65,000 a minute on Mission: Impossible and Mayberry RFD is followed by $63,000 in Doris Day Show, $62,000 in Hogan's Heroes and Lucy, and $60,000 in Smothers Brothers, Red Skelton Show and Thursday and Friday movies. Aside from Kraft, NBC's top per-minute prices behind Laugh-In's $65,000 are $63,000 a minute in Dean Martin Show, $62,000 in Bonanza and $60,000 in Disney, Julia and Saturday movies.

KOVR:
24th TV Market in the Nation.

The Stockton-Sacramento Market is big ... and growing rapidly. This rich television market ranks:

- 23rd in Consumer Spendable Income ... bigger than Miami
- 22nd in Total Retail Sales ... bigger than Cincinnati
- 20th in Food Sales ... bigger than Baltimore
- 18th in Drug Sales ... bigger than Houston
- 20th in Passenger Cars ... bigger than Buffalo

The total KOVR coverage area contains 1.7 million TV homes, and where KOVR has 50% or more coverage there is an effective buying income of $5.2 billion. Any way you look at it, this is one big market.

both from NBC—apparently experienced opposite pricing fates as a result. Get Smart, reported selling at $42,000 a minute on NBC last fall, is pegged at $48,000 on CBS. Ghost and Mrs. Muir, reported at $50,000 on NBC, is on the ABC list at $43,000.

Among the new shows next fall, top tag has been put on CBS's Jim Nabors Variety Hour and NBC's Debbie Reynolds shows, both are listed at $56,000 a minute. CBS's United Medical Center is second among new entries at $55,000, and The Governor and J. J., also on CBS, is next at $54,000.

Per-minute prices quoted for other new shows are as follows:

CBS—When in Rome, $50,000.

NBC—My World and Welcome to It, $50,000; and The New People, And Then Came Bronson, Bracken's World and Andy Williams Show, all at $46,000.

ABC—Room Two Twenty-Two, $50,000; Survivors, $49,000; Courtship of Eddie's Father, $48,000; Movie of the Week, $46,000; Marcus Welby, M.D., $45,000; Mr. Deeds Goes to Town, $44,000; New People and Love-American Style, both $43,000; Music Scene, $42,000; The Brady Bunch, $41,000, and Jimmy Durante Presents the Lennon Sisters, $39,000.

Among programs for which year-ago prices were reported, these comparisons were indicated:

On CBS, the Ed Sullivan Show at $57,000 a minute is quoted about as it was last year, but Smothers Brothers is up from $55,000 to $60,000. Gunsmoke, hardly perennial that CBS tried to drop two seasons ago, is pegged at $57,000 now as against $50,000 then. Red Skelton Show is up from $57,000 to $60,000 and the two movies have gone from $55,000 to $60,000.

On NBC, Bonanza's $62,000-a-minute tag is up by about $3,000. Laugh-In's smashing success in the ratings has boosted its price from a reported $45,000 a minute to $65,000. Dean Martin's $63,000 list price is up $4,000, and the Saturday movies have gone from $58,000 to $60,000 while the Tuesday movies moved from $52,000 to $56,000.

On ABC, Mod Squad pricing has gone from $38,000 a minute to $46,000, but Flying Nun is down from $46,000 to $43,000. It Takes a Thief also is down, from $45,000 to $42,000. But That Girl has risen from $45,000 to $50,000, Here Come the Brides from $35,000 to $43,000, Dating Game from $27,000 to $35,000, Newyork Game from $29,000 to $35,000, Lawrence Welk Show from $39,000 to $45,000 and Hollywood Palace from $39,000 to $42,000. ABC's movies are up from $52,000 to $56,000 a minute on Sunday nights and from $51,000 to $53,000 on Wednesdays.

Although ABC's Let's Make a Deal at $33,000 is the lowest-priced entertainment show on the list, it is not the lowest in the schedule: that distinction goes to CBS's 60 Minutes/News Hour, set at $30,000 a minute.

Other prices circulating on the list last week and not reported above were as follows:

ABC—Land of the Giants, $40,000; This Is Tong Tong, $45,000.

CBS—Carol Burnett Show, $56,000; Lancer, $48,000; Glen Campbell Hour, $55,000; Family Affair, $58,000; Good Guys, $50,000; Hogan's Heroes, $62,000; Jackie Gleason, $56,000; My Three Sons, $58,000; Green Acres, $52,000; Petticoat Junction, $52,000; Mannix, $55,000; Beverly Hillbillies, $51,000 and Hawaii 5-O $55,000.

NBC—I Dream of Jeannie, $45,000; Virginian, $46,000; Daniel Boone, $43,000; Ironside, $52,000; Dragnet, $54,000; High Chapparal, $43,000; Name of the Game, $45,000; Adam 12, $50,000.

Biggest buyers are at head of line

TV networks' fall offerings quickly snapped up by P&G, General Foods

Several of television's biggest advertisers were identified in the ranks of buyers negotiating with the three television networks last week as the new-season selling period moved into its most active stage.

A measure of the keen competitiveness among the networks, and the advertisers themselves, was the disinclination of network sales departments to disclose advertiser renewals of carryover shows, much less new-show purchases. A sampling of advertiser and network sources, however, indicated the early-bird advertisers were indeed harbingers of spring at the networks.

Procter & Gamble, the dominant advertiser in network television, was prominent in early sales reports. P & G, it was understood, will sponsor all of the new Bill Cosby Show, in the advertiser's contractual period on NBC on Sunday, 8:30-9. In addition, on NBC, it will be in for half of I Dream of Jeannie and in the new Andy Williams Show and in movies, and has been purchasing participations in other nighttime series. On CBS, its buying encompasses Gunsmoke, Doris Day, Lancer, The Glen Campbell Show, Beverly Hillbillies, the new United Medical Center, Family Affair, Get Smart, Good Guys, The Jackie Gleason Show, Green Acres, the new When in Rome and The Ed Sullivan Show.

General Foods is set for Mayberry RFD, on CBS and Julia on NBC, among its various buys. Bristol-Myers is said to have a multimillion-dollar contract on ABC, with its money in participations in the Sunday movie, Mod Squad and several other shows, with larger hunks of sponsorship in the new Room Two Twenty-Two, That Girl and Bewitched. Also on ABC, Colgate-Palmolive was in the sales picture with a substantial contract involving sponsorship in Sunday movies, Marcus Welby, M. D., Let's Make a Deal, Here Come the Brides and Lawrence Welk, and a participation in the new Servivors.

Several cigarette companies were identified in the early shopping spree. On NBC, American Tobacco has half of the new Debbie Reynolds Show (Hunt Foods has the other half), P. Lorillard is in the new Then Came Bronson, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco in The Virginian, Draget, and the new Bracken's World. Brown & Williamson on NBC is said to be in High Chaparral, Daniel Boone, Laugh-In, Ironside and on CBS is in Gunsmoke, Mannix and Smothers Brothers among others.

Business briefly:

Hy-Test division of International Shoe Co., St. Louis, through Frank Block Associates there, moves into network radio with a 13-week schedule on CBS's Worldwide Sports. United Van Lines and American Viscose division of FMC Corp. have also bought on CBS Radio. United Van Lines, through Kelly, Zahndt & Kelly, St. Louis, will run 26 weeks on the 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. news. Aikin-Kynett Co., Philadelphia, placed a 20-week order on newscasts and Dimension for American Viscose.

Maxwell House division of General Foods Corp., White Plains, N. Y., is using spot TV in a market-expansion for Freeze-Dried Sanka coffee. The brand is moving into eastern markets from Maine to Pennsylvania. Young & Rubicam, New York, is the agency.

Ford division of the Ford Motor Co., Dearborn, Mich., through J. Walter Thompson Co., New York-Detroit, will sponsor D-Day Revisited on ABC-TV, Sunday, June 1, 8-9 p.m. EDT. In the show, producer Darryl F. Zanuck, who produced the "The Longest Day" motion picture, revisits the Normandy beaches of France, historic site of D-Day battles 25 years ago.

NBC Radio buys last week included the Lincoln-Mercury Division of the Ford Motor Co., through Kenyon & Eckhardt, both Detroit, in Monitor and News of the World, and General Electric, through BBDO, both New York, in various programs.

Sponsorship of NBC-TV specials announced last week include Bulova Watch Co., through Young & Rubicam, both New York, on Jack Paar in Africa, May 1, 10-11 p.m.; Menley and James Laboratories, Philadelphia, through Wells, Rich, Greene, New York, for Andy's Love Concert, March 19, 10-11 p.m.; Pontiac Division of General Motors, Pontiac, Mich., through MacManus, John & Adams, Bloomfield Hills, Mich., for The Feelings of Feliciano, April 27, 10-11 p.m.; American Gas Association, through J. Walter Thompson, both New York, for The First Americans, March 21, 7:30-8:30 p.m., and Meet George Washington, April 24, 7:30-8:30 p.m.

April 14 special 33 1/3 Revolutions per Monkee, 8-9 p.m., will be sponsored by American Home Products, through Cunningham & Walsh, both New York, Seven-Up Co., St. Louis, through JWT, Chicago, Charles Pfizer & Co., through LaRoche, McCaffrey & McCall, both New York, and American Oil Co., through D'Arcy Advertising, both Chicago.

NBC-TV series buys last week included Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich., through Leo Burnett, Chicago, in eight night-time series; Admiral Corp., Chicago, through Cambell-Ewald, Detroit, in five daytime series; Miller Brewing Co., through Mathisson & Associates, both Milwaukee, in seven night-time series; Trans World Airlines, through Wells, Rich, Greene, both New York, in four prime-time series, and Hunt Foods, Fullerton, Calif., through WRC, New York, in nine night-time series.

Beatrix Foods moves $4 million in billings

Beatrix Foods Co., Chicago, last week named a new advertising agency there, IMAC Inc., to handle the more than $4 million in billings for its Meadow Gold dairy and three candy-division accounts.

The Beatrix business, heavy in TV, quietly was terminated a fortnight ago at Don Kemper Co., Chicago, following investigations of field reports that some stations were not being paid promptly. Other media also were involved in the allegations.

Kemper last week closed its Chicago office but continues in business at Dayton, Ohio, and New York. Kemper's other Chicago clients also have found new agencies, including Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. (lawn mowers, snow blowers), also heavy in TV, now at Rink Wells & Associates, Chicago. A. E. Staley III, former head of Kemper's Chicago office, said Thursday he is continuing on his own to assist Jacobsen with a TV schedule that starts on some 70 stations this week. He said he also intends to see that every station is paid every possible amount due from Kemper. The Jacobsen schedule is complex because it involves association with Beatrix in programs in some markets where Beatrix holds program rights and has sold them to stations when schedules are purchased.

Mr. Staley and five other former executives of Kemper's Chicago office meanwhile have filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court against Don Kemper Sr., agency chairman; Valera Grapp, secretary and general counsel of Polaris International, a holding company in Dayton which owns Kemper, as well as against Polaris itself and certain others. Kemper finances were handled in Dayton.

The defendants could not be reached Thursday for comment.

IMAC Inc. presently is housed at Beatrix Foods' offices in Chicago but shortly will be housed at 224 South Michigan Avenue there. Phone (312) 275-3930. IMAC has been founded by Tom Casey, president, formerly with Niles Communications Centers' Chicago TV film studio.

Mr. Staley is taking temporary space at Copri Productions, 676 St. Clair Street, Chicago; phone 943-6200.

Lids make lids flip

Throwing its hat into the television ring for the first time, Byer-Rolnick Corp., Garland, Tex., will present commercials on the theme of how "Hats Make It Happen."

Produced by King Screen Productions, the commercial will be used nationally to introduce the hat-manufacturers fall, 1969 line. The agency is Collin & Andrews Inc., Portland, Ore.

Best Foods re-assigns two product lines

Best Foods division of Corn Products Co., New York, has assigned two products to new agencies after announcing the withdrawal of the estimated $2.5 million account from Foote, Cone & Belding Feb. 27.

NuSoft fabric softener, which bills over 90% in radio and television, will be handled by Lennen & Newell. The Cacklebird line of frozen poultry, which spends a majority of its budget in broadcast advertising, will go to Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample. Both assignments are effective June 1.

Several products handled by these two agencies have also been shifted by Best Foods to another of its agencies, Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles. Karo syrup and Mazola margarine are being transferred from Lennen & Newell and Pourable salad dressings and Bosco milk amplifier from DFS. The re-assignments were effective immediately.

D'Arcy, Gardner add Ralston-Purina accounts

D'Arcy Advertising and Gardner Advertising, both St. Louis, have been named by Ralston Purina to handle advertising for its Chicken of the Sea line and the Checkerboard Farms turkey products, respectively. Both accounts were formerly handled by Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample/West, San Francisco.

D'Arcy has named Richard Stensby as account supervisor on Chicken of the Sea. Jack Bruegger will be account executive for Chicken of the Sea canned products, with Jack Forcelledo as assistant account executive. Joel Harris will be account executive for frozen and fresh seafood products. Richard Papke succeeds Mr. Bruegger as account executive for Ralston's Cheddar Kristp and Ky Krisp products, which were awarded to D'Arcy last July.

Gardner Advertising, which currently handles Checkerboard Farms chicken products and several brands of Purina pet foods, will add the Checkerboard Farm line of frozen turkeys and entrees and turkey slices to its Ralston repertoire. Other Ralston Purina agencies are not affected by the changes.

Agency appointments:

- Byer & Bowman, Columbus, Ohio, has been appointed by The Hanna Paint Manufacturing Co., also in Columbus. Hanna operates in 17 Midwest and Southern states.
- Doyle Dane Bernbach, New York, has been named to handle Bankers Trust Co's Bank-America introduction in New York in April. Billings were described as "over $1 million."
Reno CATV gets own sales rep

H&B system names John A. Potter Co., has local origination 19 hours a day

CATV entered a new era last week when a cable-TV system in Reno, announced it had appointed a national sales representative to seek national spot business.

The CATV system is Community Antenna Inc., owned by multiple-cable owner H&B Communications Corp. The sales representative is John A. Potter Co., Los Angeles, a 15-month-old firm with associates in major cities, that represents about 100 radio stations. Mr. Potter is the former western manager of National TV Sales, and considers the Reno CATV representation as an excellent pilot operation to determine whether cable TV may become a "big part of the business."

Community Antenna, a 12-channel system with 327 miles of cable passing in front of 30,000 homes, serves 6,500 subscribers in Reno and adjacent Sparks, Nev., with three local stations, plus three stations from Sacramento and one from Oakland, both California. It also provides customers with a news/weather channel.

About 18 months ago, Community Antenna began using channel 6 for local origination, providing cartoons, all-night movies (a National Telediell Associates package), a daily 30-minute news program prepared and presented by University of Nevada's journalism and audio-visual departments, fashion shows and, twice weekly, an Inter¬mountain Regional Medical Association program for doctors and nurses. Planned, according to Bob Williams, manager of the system, is coverage of public events, including local school sports.

The local origination channel operates 19 hours a day, under the call letters KUHL-TV, Mr. Williams said.

The Potter firm began its representation of Community Antenna on March 1. The one-time rate for a 60-second spot is $9; for 20-second and 30-second spots, the rate is $5.40 (60% of the one-minute rate).

Community Antenna has invested almost $10,000 in origination equipment, Mr. Williams said. This includes two vidicon cameras for live pickups, a portable camera-tape recorder, two regular tape recorders, monitors, switching equipment, and a film-slide chain of one camera and two projectors.

If the local origination channel is successful, Mr. William commented, the Reno system will be equipped for color.

Reau's latest report.

According to a survey last month by the National Cable TV Association, 30% of the 2,100 CATV systems in the country are capable of originating programs. There are, NCTA calculated, over 200 systems able to produce live programs (BROADCASTING, Feb. 17).

Chevrolet big spender again in TV sports

Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors Corp. will invest over $5.4 million in ABC-TV sports programming in 1969-70, the network announced last week.

The purchase, through Campbell-Ewald Co., Detroit, is for National Collegiate Athletic Association football games, professional golf matches and The American Sportsman series.

Chevrolet will have three one-minute commercials in each of the 18 NCAA telecasts, and in the post-season North-South, East-West and Sugar Bowl games.

It will be Chevrolet's third consecutive season as a football sponsor.

The golf purchase includes participa¬tions in 13 events in 1970. The one-hour American Sportsman is broadcast weekly during the first quarter of the year.

ARB radio services to cover more markets

The American Research Bureau, Belts¬ville, Md., is expanding its radio surveys this spring from 67 markets to 80 markets.

At the same time, the research firm is adding a number of other radio services and making methodological improvements, according to Dr. Mark D. Munn, ARB vice president-marketing.

The 13 new markets that are being added to the radio ratings surveys, which are done from one to four times a year depending on the market, are Beaumont-Port Arthur, Tex.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Flint, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Madison, Wis.; Raleigh, N. C.; Scranton, Wash.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Wichita, Kan., and Wilkes-Barre/Scranton, Pa. The 80 markets account for 87% of all national radio spot sales, ARB said.

ARB also said it was adding nine new markets to the seven now receiving special ethnic controls. The nine new markets are Atlanta, Baltimore, Cleveland, Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Memphis, Miami, Phoenix and St. Louis.

And, ARB said, it was beginning to build a "Media Management Series," comparable to the service it provides in its television clients. This includes the recently released "Radio-TV Planner," a new "Demographic Buyer," and special analyses of cumulative audience as well as custom analyses of selected spot schedules. The last two services will be issued three times a year.

In the methodology field, ARB is re¬designing its diary, improving supervision of respondents and paying more attention to low-response areas.

TVB clinics' aim: make big clients even bigger

Changes in local television advertiser categories will be highlighted in the Television Bureau of Advertising's 10th annual sales clinics, to be held in 20 cities, April 15 through June 13.

According to TVB, the areas of depart¬ment stores, auto dealers, food stores and furniture stores will be highlighted in the one-day clinics.

Howard Abrahams, TVB vice presi¬dent, local sales, said that signs "indicate another record-breaking year in local television sales but the direction of these signs in relation to specific adver¬tiser categories varies widely."

Department stores, he said, are now TV's number-one local client and they wish to know more about how to buy the medium, how to make better commer¬cials and how to use more "meaningful" research. Auto dealers, once on top, have slipped to the number-two position so that the question is: "How can this group be sold with renewed vigor?"

The schedule:
April 15, Kansas City (Plaza Inn);
April 17, Dallas (Sheraton Dallas);
April 30, Jacksonville (Hotel Roose¬velt); May 2, Durham (Downtown);
May 5, Denver (Sheraton Malibu Air¬port Inn); May 7, St. Louis (Ches¬hire Inn), and May 9, Minneapolis (North¬star Inn).

May 12, Los Angeles (Wilshire Hyatt House); May 14, San Francisco (Jack Tar hotel); May 16, Portland, Ore. (Sheraton Motor Inn); May 20, Chi¬cago (Pick-Congress); May 19, Mem¬phis (Sheraton Peabody); May 21, New Orleans (The Royal New Orleans); May 23, Atlanta (Sheraton Biltmore), and May 25, Syracuse (Sheraton Goth¬am Motor Inn).

June 2, Boston (Sheraton Plaza);
June 4, Baltimore (Sheraton Baltimore Inn); June 9, Cincinnati (Sheraton Gib¬son); June 11, Cleveland (Statler Hil¬ton), and June 13, Detroit (Howard Johnson's).

BAPSA elects board, officers in New York

Members of the Broadcast Advertising Producers Society of America selected a new slate of officers for 1969 at the annual election meeting in New York last week. President of BAPSA will be Alfred Tennyson, vice president of commercial production and business manager of J. Walter Thompson, New York. He succeeds Frank Martello, vice president of broadcast production at Leo Burnett, New York, who will remain as a member of the society's board of directors.

Elected again to the vice presidency of BAPSA was Lincoln Diamant, a free-lance producer. Other officers elected were John Edgerton of Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles, treasurer, and Catherine Z. Lang of Grey Advertising, secretary.

Two new members were elected to the society's board of directors: Larry Katz of SSC&B and John Sircus of Clyne Maxon. Three current board members were re-elected: Roy Eaton of Benton & Bowles, Robert Kronenberg of SSC&B, and Helen Nelson of Leo Burnett. The five, along with Mr. Martello, will serve two-year terms on the board. Continuing for another year as board members will be Frank Arundell of Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, John Donnelly of Leo Burnett, Sy Frolick of William Esty, Ray Fragasso of JWT and Arnold Walton of Foote, Cone & Belding.

AAF trims size of its executive groups

The board of directors of the American Advertising Federation has approved a major overhaul in the size of its executive bodies. The move will reduce the size of the present board from 93 voting members to 39, and the AAF executive committee from 19 to 11 members.

The revision in the board structure will create a new body, the Interassociation Council, made up of 27 advertising and media associations that will advise on policy matters. Also, the 41 members of the Advisory Council, comprising former presidents and chairmen of AAF, will become ex officio members of the board, relinquishing their vote.

The change was authorized at a board meeting held in conjunction with the annual AAF government-affairs conference in Washington (Broadcasting, Feb. 24). It will be submitted for membership ratification at the AAF convention, June 29-July 2 in New York.

Admen get advance look at TV football series

Potential advertisers and their agencies previewed the Hughes Sports Network-AFL/NFL Films 1969 football offering last week in New York—a one-hour weekly series containing highlights of all games in both leagues, discussion of key upcoming games, interviews and a special feature ("Closed Circuit," March 3). CBS sports reporter Pat Summerall and NBC's American Football League reporter Charlie Jones will narrate the series, which starts the week of Sept. 22.

The package offered to future sponsors is a minimum of two minutes a week for $25,000, or $350,000 for the 14 weeks of the series. Each program contains eight commercial minutes.

Hughes Sports Network is just beginning to line up stations to carry the films, and will make a presentation to station executives at the National Association of Broadcasters convention later this month.

This Week in Pro Football is the first football-highlights show combining action from both leagues. Last year AFL/NFL Films produced separate half-hours for each league plus a Game of the Week series. The programs this year will be put together in Philadelphia and will be available for programming in weekend time slots prior to the new week's games.
Now FM means Far More

What's the difference between an ordinary FM station and an ABC FM Network-affiliated station? Balanced programming. Today, when FM is within the reach of most people, you need more than just music to attract and hold a regular listening audience. ABC's FM Network is the only one of its type in existence. We provide world-wide news coverage, written and broadcast by top personalities and commentators. Our strength lies in providing a service that stations couldn't normally afford to set up, while allowing you to "do your own thing."

All our FM Network staff are experienced station people who believe in giving our affiliates the benefits of the most modern broadcasting techniques. Why not follow the example of FM stations all over the country who are signing up with us. Your listeners—not to mention your advertisers—will appreciate your example.

ANA issues TV report on rates and ratings

The fourth edition in the Association of National Advertisers’ compilations of audience and cost-trend data for TV stations has been published. It lists, for each of about 500 TV stations, average quarter-hour night-time audience, prime hourly and 20-second spot rates and average cost-per-thousand for each year from 1962-63 through 1967-68. An index using 1962-63 as a base shows how average C-P-M has increased or decreased from year to year on each station.

The report, based on audience data from the American Research Bureau and cost figures from Standard Rate & Data Service, is titled “television circulation and rate trends (1962-1968)” and is one of several such analyses published periodically by ANA covering rate trends in various media. Copies of the 117-page report are available to ANA members at no charge and to non-members at $15 a copy from ANA headquarters, 155 East 44th Street, New York 10017.

Hasbro has year pact for ‘Pufnstuf’ series

Hasbro Toys and Sid and Marty Krofft have completed negotiations on a $3-million-plus package for the new half-hour series created by the Kroffts, tentatively titled H. R. Pufnstuf, scheduled on Saturday mornings on NBC-TV (see page 66A).

The show is guaranteed a full year of sponsorship by Hasbro. Production, budgeted at $60,000 a segment, is scheduled to begin immediately on the first 17 segments.

A new division of Krofft Enterprises in Hollywood, Krofft TV Productions, has been formed to produce the new series. Two evening specials and a nighttime series are also under consideration.

The Kroffts are known for their adult puppet extravaganza, “Les Poupées de Paris,” which has played in the U.S. for the past eight years. They describe their new series as “a total happening for everybody, which will introduce a new entertainment dimension yet unexplored on the video tube.”

Metromedia, Post-Newsweek expand

MM pays record price for UHF in Chicago; P-N buys Miami V, Cincinnati AM for $18 million

WFLD-TV Chicago (ch. 32) was sold last week to Metromedia Inc. for what the parties said was an amount “in excess of $10 million”—the largest sum ever paid for a UHF.

Announcement of the sale, on Tuesday (March 4), rivaled in interest the disclosure on Thursday (March 6) that the Post-Newsweek Stations had purchased WLBW-TV Miami and WCKY Cincinnati from the L. B. Wilson Co. for more than $18 million, plus the assumption of liabilities.

Both transactions are subject to FCC approval.

The signing of the sales agreement involving WFLD-TV brought to a successful conclusion Metromedia’s on-again, off-again negotiations to acquire the UHF Showcase from Television Chicago, which is controlled by Field Enterprises Inc. (“Closed Circuit,” March 3). Although the station has operated at a loss since it went on the air on Jan. 4, 1966, Field Enterprises until recent weeks had insisted it was not interested in selling.

It was understood that the new tough line in Washington on mixed-media conglomerates sparked the change in Field’s attitude. And if the present views of the publishing company’s management prevail, Field Enterprises will devote its energies exclusively to print.

Field Enterprises publishes the Chicago Daily News and Sun-Times as well as suburban newspapers and is involved in educational publishing. Bailey K. Howard, president and chief executive officer of the company, said Field “has become increasingly committed to the expanded development of its print media.”

The company’s construction permit for WCNJ-TV (ch. 24) Milwaukee, purchased from Lou Poller in 1966 for $35,000, will either be surrendered to the FCC or sold, according to company officials. Field’s option for a Zenith subscription television franchise in Chicago expired last June.

The announced sales price of more than $10 million exceeds by more than $3 million the previous all-time high paid for a UHF—the $6.8 million that Sondeling Broadcasting Corp. gave up for WLKY-TV Louisville, Ky., in December 1967 (Broadcasting, Dec. 18, 1967).

Metromedia will prosecute the assignment application independent of the pending applications for its merger with Transamerica Corp. (Broadcasting, Jan. 6). The merger agreement, signed on Dec. 2, 1968, was approved by Metromedia stockholders at a special meeting on Feb. 28 (see page 73).

However, the Transamerica applications will be amended to reflect an intention on the part of Transamerica subsidiary United Artists to give up its construction permit for channel 20 in Houston (KUAB-TV).

This would be necessary to bring Transamerica-Metromedia into compliance with the commission rules barring ownership of more than seven TV’s (no more than five of them VHF). WFLD-TV would be Metromedia’s sixth television station. Besides holding a CP for KUAB, United Artists operates WUAB (TV) (ch. 43) Lorain-Cleveland.

Metromedia’s present station holdings include four VHF’s—WNBC-TV New York, KTTV (TV) Los Angeles, WTTG (TV) Washington and KMBI-TV Kansas City. The one UHF is KNEW-TV (ch. 32)

San Francisco. Metromedia's radio stations are WNEW-AM-FM New York, KELO (FM) and KMET (FM) Los Angeles, WASH (FM) Washington, WHK and WMMS (FM) Cleveland, WIP and WMMR (FM) Philadelphia, WCBM Baltimore, and KNEV and KSAN (FM) San Francisco.

John Kluge, Metromedia chairman, said Chicago will probably become a significant new program production center for the Metromedia group and for syndication in view of the talent pool there and the extensive studio and production facilities to be acquired in the WFLD transaction. Metromedia already has major production centers in Los Angeles and New York and a smaller one in Washington.

"The acquisition of WFLD-TV," Mr. Kluge said, "will mark an integral step forward in Metromedia Television's long-range plans to provide an alternative program service for television stations lacking network affiliations."

Mr. Kluge said the $10 million-plus purchase price will be paid in cash. But Field will not retain the full amount. It will execute an option to buy out for $2.5 million the Television Chicago minority stockholders who had originally been its competitors for the facility.

Field now owns 50% of the station and is responsible for its expenses. Under the agreement providing for the merger of the six original applicants, Field provided half of the $500,000 that was invested in the venture. It then undertook construction of the station, which cost $3 million by the time WFLD-TV went on the air.

The five groups, some of whom hold other broadcast interests in the Midwest, are: Boston Station Inc. (Harry and Elmer Balaban); Irwill Inc. (William, Irwin and Rosalind Dubinsky); Scheffco Inc. (Herbert Scheffel); Willand Corp. (Cecile B. Burger), and Froelich & Friedland Inc. (Harland Froelich and Milton D. Friedland).

The Post-Newsweek acquisition of WLBW-TV and WCKY was announced jointly by Larry H. Israel, chairman of Post-Newsweek Stations, and Charles Topmiller, president of L. B. Wilson.

WLBW-TV (ch. 10), an ABC affiliate, has been operating since Nov. 20, 1961, after a commission issued L. B. Wilson the only one of four applicants to be untainted by off-the-record contacts with FCC commissioners.

L. B. Wilson was initially granted only a four-month license. But in 1964, following a comparative hearing in which three applicants challenged L. B. Wilson for the channel, it was granted a full three-year renewal in a commission decision subsequently upheld by the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia (Broadcasting, July 12, 1965).

WCKY, on 1530 kc with 50 kw full time, went on the air in 1929 under an original grant made to the late L. B. Wilson. The station is an ABC affiliate.

Principal owners of L. B. Wilson are Mr. Topmiller, with 32.5%; Thomas A. Welstead, executive vice president and general manager of WLBW-TV, and Jeanette Heinze, executive vice president of WCKY, both 19.3%.

Other stockholders, who like the management-owners acquired their interests by inheritance from Mr. Wilson, are William M. Ittman, vice president, international division, Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati, 11.3%; The Jolar Corp., headed by Sol Taishoff, president of Broadcasting Publications Inc., 11.3%; and Mrs. Essie Rupp, secretary of L. B. Wilson, 6.3%.

Katharine Graham, president, and Frederick S. Beebe, chairman of the board of The Washington Post Co., noted that the company was making its first broadcast acquisition since the purchase of WJXT in January 1953, and added:

"We are convinced that WLBW-TV and WCKY are stations which are compatible with those we now operate and that these acquisitions will provide us an opportunity to serve their important communities in the best possible fashion."

Speakers are lined up for ACTS symposium

The All-Channel Television Society has set speakers for its annual breakfast symposium. The symposium, held in conjunction with the National Association of Broadcasters convention, is scheduled for Tuesday, March 25, in the Sheraton-Park hotel in Washington. The morning meeting, 8-12 o'clock will feature ACTS members speaking on programming, technology, financing, sales and legal aspects of UHF.

The proposed agenda includes Julian Myers, president and general manager, KKGQ-TV Ventura, Calif., speaking on local programming; Leonard Stevens, vice president-operations, U.S. Communications Corp., on programming as a means of obtaining an audience; Jules Cohen, consulting engineer, on the developments in UHF antenna efficiency and transmission and more effective microwave usage; W. Robert McKinsey, president and general manager, WJRT-TV Atlanta, on public financing for UHF; Frank Minner, assistant secretary-treasurer, U.S. Communications, on leasing and other shortcuts to low-cost programming; James H. Ferguson, executive vice president, WWLP (TV) Springfield-Hartford, Mass., on sales development factors in UHF, and Martin Firestone, Washington attorney, on recent legislative and regulatory developments.

NAB panel will review radio-TV problem areas

The agenda for the National Association of Broadcasters convention in Washington, March 23-26, was just about completed last week with naming of a panel on broadcasting's present and future problems.

The panel will be slotted for two hours (11 a.m.-1 p.m.) on Wednesday, March 26, as the next-to-closing item on the convention program. It will be followed by the annual luncheon address of FCC Chairman Rosel Hyde.

Members of the panel will be Paul A. Porter, Washington attorney and former FCC chairman; Lee Loewing, Washington attorney and former FCC commissioner; Robert L. Heald, Washington attorney, president of the Federal Communications Bar Association and former NAB general counsel; Sol Taishoff, editor and publisher of Broadcasting Magazine, and Douglas A. Anello, NAB general counsel. The session will be moderated by Grover C. Cobb, KVOB Great Bend, Kan., NAB chairman.

In other additions to the convention program, Leonard Jaffe, director of space applications programs for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will be the March 25 luncheon speaker at the broadcast Engineering Conference, and Joseph Whalen, WDMO (FM) Dayton, Ohio, will be a panelist at the March 23 FM Day session on programming.

NAB Atlanta lunch draws concerned executives

Everything else facing broadcasters pales before the First Amendment threat faced by the industry. That theme ran through last Thursday's (March 6) meeting in Atlanta of broadcast leaders under the sponsorship of the National Association of Broadcasters.

The meeting, the second in a series of three closed sessions, featured NBC President Julian Goodman, and was attended by 13 broadcasters, other NBC executives and NAB officials. At the Atlanta session in Los Angeles, Frank Stanton, CBS president led the debate (Broadcasting, March 3) and at the final session in Chicago, March 11, ABC President Leonard Goldenson will be the network representative.

Last week's meeting, as did the Los Angeles session, focused on preservation of freedom of the broadcast press as the key to many of the industry's problems. If that freedom, guaranteed under the Constitution, is protected, Mr. Goodman said, subsidiary pressures will more easily be overcome.

Those attending the session felt that the NAB codes have some potential problem areas—decency, violence and overcommercialization—and felt that the voluntary codes are still the broadcaster's best weapon in combating attacks in those areas.

The meeting touched briefly on last week's charge by Senator John O. Pastore (D-R. I.) that there is still too much violence on television (see page 25), with Mr. Goodman and NAB President Vincent Wasilewski noting they are to testify before the senator.

In the area of news, those at the session felt more should be done to inform the public and members of government with what broadcasting is doing and the nature of the threats against it.

There was also some feeling that the Radio-Television News Directors Association should be a stronger professional association and should speak out more often on encroachments on freedom of the broadcast press. RTNDA, it was said, should stand up and speak out for broadcasting in such the manner that Sigma Delta Chi does for all journalism.

In addition to Messrs. Goodman and Wasilewski, those attending the Atlanta meeting were: William Brazzil, WTVJ(TV) Miami; Grover Cobb, KQTV(TV) St. Paul; Kenneth Giddens, WCKY-Cincinnati; William Brazzil, WTVJ(TV) Miami; Grover Cobb, KQTV(TV) St. Paul; Kenneth Giddens, WCKY-Cincinnati; and Anthony Grover C. Fosdick, WTVJ(TV) Miami.

Approved: The following transfers of station ownership were approved by the FCC last week (for other FCC activities see "For the Record," page 78):

- WWKOK Charlotte, N.C.: Sold by Frederick A. German and others to Jack Roth for $500,000. Mr. Roth owns...
KONO and KITY (FM), both San Antonio, Tex., and WRR Coral Cables, Fla. The sale of WRR is pending FCC approval. Mr. Roth also seeks FCC approval to purchase WAME Miami and is an applicant for a new FM at Miami. WWOK is full time on 1480 kc with 5 kw.

- WPAX East Syracuse, N. Y.: Sold by Claude A. Barto, Albert Webb and others to Bruce A. Houston for $175,000. Mr. Houston is former assistant station manager of Robert Roth and others to apply for sale of Polyply Inc., an Amsterdam, N. Y., plastics firm. Mr. Ferguson is vice president and general manager of cacas and associates to buy Continental's 20,000 customers in eight Ohio cities and has three other Ohio systems under construction or partially operating. Continental's affiliated companies serve 8,500 subscribers in two Illinois and one Iowa communities and are building two systems, one in New Hampshire and one in California. Mrs. Kovlan is the principal owner of WATH-AM-FM Athens and holds a minority interest in WMPO Middleport-Pomeroy, Ohio. Broker: R. C. Crisler and Co.

- Aspen and Rifle, both Colorado: Canyon Cable TV Corp. sold by William R. Dunaway and associates to Columbia Cable Systems Inc. (multiple CATV owner) for 28,600 shares of Columbia common. Columbia's closing over-the-counter bid was 134% last Thursday (March 6). The merger of Columbia and International Cablevision Corp., which will result in the consolidation of 19 CATV systems with 37,000 subscribers, was announced last month (BROADCASTING, Feb. 17). The 12-channel Aspen-Rifle system is almost two years old, serves 1,200 subscribers. Mr. Dunaway is 50% owner of KONO Aspen and publisher of the weekly Aspen Times.

- Lowville, N. Y.: Lowville Video Communications Inc. sold by Carlton Martin and associates to Suburban Propane Gas Co., Whippany, N. J., for an undisclosed amount of Suburban common stock. The Lowville system carries six TV and one FM channels to about 750 subscribers. Suburban Propane distributes bottled gas to over 8,000 communities; it also manufactures propane appliances, produces oil and gas and refines and markets gasoline. The company said it was considering other CATV purchases both in and out of its distribution areas. Suburban stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Court asked to allow cable TV in Trenton

The federal district court in Trenton, N. J., has been asked to enjoin the FCC from barring CATV in that city. Trenton and Teleprompter Corp., which holds a cable franchise there, asked the court for a declaratory judgment and both preliminary and permanent injunctions against the commission.

They noted that Teleprompter received a CATV franchise for the state's capital city in April 1968 and that it planned to bring in both Philadelphia and New York TV signals—both of which are received off-air.

The commission stayed the start of CATV operations after complaints against carriage of New York TV came from WIBF-TV (ch. 29) and WHHL-TV (ch. 17), both Philadelphia, as well as 13 copyright owners.

Trenton and Teleprompter charged that the commission's proposed rules, issued last December, would require new CATV systems to secure retransmission rights from stations for the so-called distant signals in major markets.

Thus, Trenton and Teleprompter said, they've lost out on the grandfather clause excusing pre-Dec. 20, 1968 cable systems from having to secure retransmission rights.

This violates the free speech amendment by foreclosing CATV for Trenton, the plaintiffs contended, and deprives Teleprompter of property with due process.

Another Boston channel under siege

Competing application for WNAC-TV is filed by seven Boston businessmen

Another challenge to broadcasting's established order was laid down last week, in a competing application that was filed for Boston channel 7, the facility now occupied by RKO General Inc.'s WNAC-TV.

The application, by a group of seven wealthy Boston area businessmen, under the name of Community Broadcasting of Boston, was submitted a month after a group of Los Angeles businessmen filed a competing application "on top of" NBC's application for renewal of its KNBC-TV Los Angeles, which operates on channel 4 (BROADCASTING, Feb. 10).

It also comes as an initial decision is awaited in a four-year-old contest in which the licensee of another RKO General station—KJH-TV Los Angeles—is at stake. A local group, Fidelity Television Inc., is seeking the channel 9 facility.

The two new challenges come against the backdrop of a commission decision, in January, to deny WHDH-TV Boston renewal of its license and to award the contested channel 5 to a local group, Boston Broadcasters Inc. (BROADCASTING, Jan. 27). WHDH Inc., the licensee and two other losers in that contest, have asked the commission to reconsider that decision.

One factor linking the Los Angeles contests and the one that erupted in Boston is a law firm, Welch and Morgan, Washington communications counsel, which represents all three challengers.

RKO General, which has operated WNAC-TV since it went on the air on July 1, 1948, will be defending its property in what appears to be, for it, an unfavorable regulatory climate. A major factor in the Boston channel 5 case was the concentration-of-control-of-media issue; WHDH Inc. is the licensee of WHDH-AM-FM and a subsidiary of the publisher of the daily and Sunday newspapers in Boston. And RKO General is licensee of WRKO-AM-FM Boston—as well as 14 AM, FM and TV stations across the country and CKLW-AM-FM-TV Windsor, Ont.-Detroit.

In addition, the commission is indicating increasing concern over the question of conglomerate ownership of broadcasting properties; it has recently initiated an inquiry into that subject (BROADCASTING, Feb. 10). And RKO General is the subsidiary of a parent corporation of wide-ranging interests—General Tire & Rubber Co., with assets of more than $740 million and subsidiaries in the tire, plastics, chemicals and aircraft industries, as well as in broadcasting.

RKO General goes into the contest with yet another burden—an antitrust suit hanging over it that was instituted by the Department of Justice in March 1967. The department, in a suit filed in the federal district court in Akron, Ohio, has charged General Tire and its subsidiaries with engaging in reciprocal trade practices with suppliers (BROADCASTING, March 6, 1967).

The suit is a factor in the Los Angeles channel 9 case. The hearing examiner took the evidence in the antitrust matter as it relates to charges that vendors were coerced into buying time on RKO General stations, and was authorized to disqualify the licensee or to assess a comparative demerit against it.

It's understood that the suit led to controversy within the commission as to how to deal with the renewal applications for KJH-AM-FM, whose licenses, along with all others in California, expired on Dec. 1. However, there appears to be strong feeling among the commissioners for following precedent in such matters and granting the renewals subject to the outcome of the antitrust suit.

The leading figure in the Community Broadcasting application is a 29-year-old Boston multimillionaire, David Mugar, who has a 37.3% interest in the application and is listed in the application as treasurer.

Several weeks ago, he telephoned Vincent Welch, of Welch and Morgan, whom he knew and with whom he had discussed the television business in the past. Mr. Mugar, as Mr. Welch related it last week, said "he had a group of associates who would like to file an application" for a channel in Boston if it were possible and if there were time.

Mr. Welch assured him there was no bar to the filing of an application, and was asked to help prepare one. Originally, the group was uncertain whether their target would be channel 7 or channel 4, now occupied by Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.'s WRZ-TV. But it was not long before the group settled on channel 7. Mr. Welch declined to elaborate on the reasons for the choice.

Mr. Mugar, who owns an investment counseling business and has a number of other interests, including real estate and a half ownership in an Italian holding company, is represented as having assets of more than $12,150,000.

Mr. Mugar's father, Stephen, has a 12.5% interest in Community Broadcasting. Stephen Mugar, who is president, has assets "in excess of $9,600,000," owns "less than 25%" of a plastics products company, owns 25% of the Boston Beacons soccer club and 25% of Giant Foods of Washington, among his other interests.

The other stockholders are Thomas J. White, president (12.5%); John P. Chase, vice president (12.5%); Gordon J. B. McLean, clerk (6.25%); Gerald M. McCarthy, assistant clerk (12.5%); and Edward R. Hampson, (6.25%).

All list assets of $1 million or more except Mr. McLean, who is president and director of a retail liquor store and whose other interests include real estate, and Mr. Hampson, who is a director and 16% owner of RoKon Corp., of Keene, N. H. Their assets were listed, respectively, as $355,000 and $313,000. Mr. Hampson is a cousin of Stephen Mugar.

Mr. White, president, treasurer and 60% stockholder of a general contracting firm, president and 100% owner of a building company and officer in a number of other concerns, reported assets of $2,342,000.

Mr. Chase, who is said to have assets of more than $1 million, is half owner of an investment counseling firm bearing his name and is engaged in some 20 other enterprises, generally in the investment and banking business. And Mr. McCarthy, who has real estate and other interests, reported assets of $1,967,000.

David Mugar, Mr. McLean and Mr. McCarthy are already associated in business. Each has 25% interest in 4M Petroleum Corp., a string of retail

Another round in WHDH-TV case

Boston Broadcasters Inc.'s contention that WHDH Inc. is not a regular renewal applicant in its effort to hold on to Boston channel 5 was challenged last week in pleadings filed with the FCC, not only by WHDH Inc. but the commission's Broadcast Bureau as well.

Their pleadings were among a spate of filings that have been generated by the commission's Jan. 23 decision denying WHDH Inc. renewal of its license for WHDH-TV and granting BBI's application for channel 5 (Broadcasting, Jan. 27).

The ever-growing complexity of the case led another applicant, Charles River Civic Television Inc., to urge the commission to permit all of the "eligible applicants" to participate in a joint operation on channel 5 until the proceeding—with roots in a comparative hearing that began in 1954—is finally concluded. Greater Boston TV Co., the fourth applicant in the case, was disqualified by the commission for failing to meet qualifying issues, but it has asked for reconsideration.

BBI brought WHDH Inc.'s status as a renewal applicant into question in two pleadings last month—one, an unusual one for a winning applicant, in which it asked the commission to supplement its decision, and another in which it asked that a specific termination be set for WHDH-TV operation (Broadcasting, Feb. 24).

The commission's decision caused considerable concern throughout the broadcasting industry, since it marked the first time that a television station had been denied a renewal of its license.

However, BBI argued that "implicit" in the commission's decision was the conclusion that WHDH Inc. was not a regular renewal applicant. It asked the commission to make this "explicit." It also asked the commission to adopt various conclusions on allegations during the hearing that would provide a basis for disqualifying WHDH Inc. and assessing comparative demerits against it.

BBI argued that the commission in its decision did not reaffirm the four-month license it had awarded WHDH Inc. on Sept. 25, 1962, and that, as a result, WHDH Inc. was simply another original applicant.

The short-term grant was made after the original decision, handed down in 1957, was remanded by the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington because of off-the-record contacts the late Robert D. Choate, president of WHDH Inc., had with the then commission chairman. In a subsequent remand, the court directed the commission to review the 1962 decision in light of Mr. Choate's death.

The commission's Broadcast Bureau, however, said that the hearing examiner, in his initial decision, "concluded not to modify" the 1962 decision. And the commission, by failing to reject the examiner's conclusions on that point or to state different ones, had reaffirmed "without modification" its 1962 decision.

WHDH Inc., asserting that BBI's petitions "leave no doubt" BBI recognizes it cannot win unless "WHDH is stripped of its status as applicant for renewal," cited court and commission rulings dating back to 1962 as referring to WHDH Inc. as a renewal applicant. It also said the language of the three opinions handed down on Jan. 23 "clearly recognize WHDH's status as an applicant for renewal of license." The opinions were written by Commissioner Robert T. Bartley, for the three-member majority; Commissioner Nicholas Johnson, in a concurring statement; and Commissioner Robert E. Lee, in a dissent.

WHDH Inc. also twitted BBI for paying "no more than token homage to the legal sufficiency" of the commission's decision. It said that much of BBI's petition "is devoted to an attempted demonstration that the decision is in error because of what it says and for what it omits to say."

In another matter, the Broadcast Bureau recommended dismissal of BBI's petition for designation of a termination date for WHDH-TV's operation, as well as WHDH Inc.'s request for a stay of the effectiveness of the commission's order. The commission did not specify a termination date because aspects of the case are still under court jurisdiction.

The bureau said both requests are premature. It said that the petition that WHDH Inc. has filed for reconsideration of the decision keeps its license in effect until the commission disposes of the petition.

Charles River cited the filings sparked by the Jan. 23 decision and the attacks on it by the winner as well as the losers (including Charles River) as indicating that a long road of administrative and judicial proceedings lay ahead in the Boston channel 5 case.

And there is no reason why any single applicant should be permitted to operate on the channel while the proceedings are underway, it said. Accordingly, it urged the commission to invite applications from the eligible applicants in the proceeding for joint interim operation.

Meanwhile, BBI has extended the deadline it has given WHDH Inc. for selling its equipment and facilities. Originally, BBI wanted WHDH Inc.'s answer by March 3. Now it will wait until 10 days after the commission acts on WHDH Inc.'s petition for reconsideration.

CATV advertising advocated by actors

Filings on FCC's proposed rules follow pattern of individual interests

The FCC, after postponing the deadline for comments on its proposed CATV rules (BROADCASTING, March 3), last week received a mixed bag of early filings, apparently timed to meet the previous March 3 deadline. The comments were marked by the usual clash of attitudes not only toward the proposed rules, but toward the phenomenon of CATV itself.

In a pro-cable filing, the Screen Actors Guild supported the commission's proposal to require program origination—if the CATV's are also permitted to accept advertising. The guild said that cable origination "affords the opportunity to restore a better balance of the forces involved in program creativity ..." because it has a smaller community base than television, which must serve the mass needs of a market area. However, the guild added, cable systems need added revenue to finance worthwhile programming, and should be allowed to get the money through advertising. The systems could attract small advertisers who cannot afford to advertise on over-the-air TV, the guild said.

The actors' guild also argued that the commission's retransmission consent proposal, which would require CATV's to obtain permission of distant stations before importing their signals, should be "more fully delineated." In many cases, the guild said, the originating station may be in a position to grant consent for the program, but not for retransmission of the commercials shown on the program. It advocated "some control over commercials separate and apart from programs."

A vastly different attitude toward CATV appeared in two filings by trade associations for the translator industry. The National TV Translator Association deplored the "weakening" of over-the-air broadcasting on behalf of cable. It characterized CATV as a wholly private service, with no valid claim to the same public-interest value derived from licensed broadcasting. And, it added, much of the benefit alleged to result from CATV could more logically be provided by translators.

The association expressed strong support for a commission proposal that would prohibit cross-ownership of broadcast stations and CATV's within a market. It described the two enterprises as basically incompatible. This position was also pressed by the Colorado Translator Association in a separate filing.

While the national translator group offered specific exceptions and support of several of the proposed rules, the basic thrust of its filing was that CATV in general has no place in communications. "Keep all broadcasting free and over-the-air for general public reception . . . " the association said, "and present broadcast rules of the commission will control the situation, split, create new systems of any kind and the present system will be eroded."

In a representative CATV-industry filing, Michigan CA-TV Co. took issue with the commission's proposal to limit the number of channels on which CATV-originated programs may be presented, and with the proposed cross-ownership prohibition. According to Michigan, the proposals are based on "two unrealistic assumptions: first, that it would be economically feasible or practical for CATV operator to control or restrict the programing on a large number of channels; second, that there is no competition or multiplicity of voices within the community, other than CATV."

Michigan also urged the commission to allow advertising on CATV systems.

The new deadline for comments on the proposed rules is April 3.

CAB signs off after five-years for FCC

The Committee for Full Development of All Channel Broadcasting, which was established by the FCC five years ago to provide the commission with guidance on developments and problems facing the industry, held its final meeting in New York last Thursday (March 6).

FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee told the group, which will go out of existence on Wednesday (March 12), that it fulfilled its original objective of assisting in the development of UHF television. He acknowledged there still are problems to be met, and he assured those in attendance that he could get authorization from the FCC to hold special meetings when a particularly critical issue emerges.

The committee adopted three resolutions for submission to the FCC. One asked the commission to make the 500-mv radiation limitation applicable to TV tuners at the point of manufacture this May; on TV receivers at the point of assembly on Sept. 1 and on TV receivers at the point of sales on Feb. 1, 1970. The second urged the adoption by the FCC of a policy or rule that would foster the sale and utilization of all-channel television home antennas. The third asked the commission to reject all proposals for either shared or outright allocations of UHF broadcast channels to land-mobile radio users.

Some members voiced regret that the committee was being terminated since they felt there were still many problems that had to be brought before the attention of the commission. Others expressed the hope that at least some of the functions of the committee could be performed by the All-Channel Television Society (ACTS).

WTAF(TV) Marion, Ind. gain NBC affiliation

WTAF(TV) Marion, Ind., which has gone to court and to the FCC with charges of conspiracy to deprive it of network affiliation, last week became an NBC affiliate.

The affiliation is limited to an hour and a half of prime-time programing per day, but is envisioned by the station's owner, Anthony R. Martin-Trigona, as a prelude to similar agreements with CBS and ABC. Those two networks, along with group owners Corinthian Broadcasting Corp. and Axco Broadcasting Corp., were the target of a $3-million antitrust suit filed earlier this year by Mr. Martin-Trigona, charging that they, in concert with WISH-TV and WLWI(TV), both Indianapolis, and WANE-TV Fort Wayne, Ind., had conspired to block WTAF's attempts to obtain affiliation (Broadcasting, Feb. 3). Mr. Martin-Trigona also complained to the FCC (Broadcasting, Feb. 10).

The consequence is a short-term renewal

KCHS Truth or Consequences, N. M., last week received a short-term license renewal from the FCC—until April 1, 1970.

Bairdland Broadcasting Inc., licensee of KCHS, filed for renewal Oct. 2, 1968, one day after its license expired; the commission accepted the application as one for station license rather than as a renewal application.

The FCC said KCHS failed to respond to commission inquiries in 1967 concerning a notice of violation issued it Nov. 1, 1966. The FCC also noted that KCHS failed to file its renewal application on time and failed to respond to commission letters last year concerning the KCHS application. It added that Bairdland's renewal application would be examined at the end of the one-year period to determine its compliance with commission rules and reporting requirements.

Antitrafficking rules spelled out by FCC

The FCC's last week codified a set of new rules its long-established policy prohibiting trafficking in construction permits.

The new rules bar transfer of a CP for financial gain before the permittee builds and operates the station. The commission said it would not consent to such transfer if payment to the seller is more than the amount required for legitimate expenses incurred in prosecuting the application and initial construction, if any.

The rules also modify existing transfer and assignment procedures. They call for a hearing if there is a question of actual or potential financial gain, as when a seller arranges to retain an interest in his unbuilt station which can later be disposed of at a profit. Under the new rules, applicants will be required to file declarations that there are no agreements other than those disclosed in the applications, as well as an itemized accounting of expenses being reimbursed to the seller.

Some sellers who retain an interest may be exempted from the mandatory hearing requirement, the commission said, if they contribute to capital proportionate to their interest. This applies to equity capital, loan capital and guarantees of loans made by banks or others without equity in the station.

The commission also said that it would require hearings in any case where the seller holds an option to acquire equity in the station and where the parties acquiring the CP have an option to purchase all or part of an interest retained by the seller.

The rulemaking proposal was issued last September (Broadcasting, Sept. 9, 1968), and prompted only a few comments, most of which welcomed the proposed rules as a more definite statement of broadcasters' rights and obligations.

Bill would cover CATV in Connecticut

Legislation to clarify Connecticut's general statutes as they apply to community antenna television and coordinate the roles of the state public utilities commission and the FCC has been introduced in the Connecticut general assembly by State Senator Ray W. Johnson (D), West Hartford.

The bill, which would also require the regulatory body to define more clearly areas to be served by cable and provide for comparative hearings for competing applicants, was opposed by several spokesmen for firms that already have been awarded franchises. The opposition was based on contentions that it was unnecessary to change the existing law and that to do so might result in further delay of CATV service.

Although the PUC awarded franchises in March 1967, none has been activated pending the outcome of appeals filed by unsuccessful broadcast-oriented applicants, claiming their disqualification because of broadcast TV interests was illegal. The litigation, now nearly two years old, is still pending in superior court. The only proponent of the legislation was W. Robert Hartigan, representing Connecticut Television Inc. (WHNB-TV New Britain-Hartford) one of the appellants.

In another Hartford development, representatives of the Connecticut Broadcasters Association, advertising and newspaper trade groups registered strong opposition to an administration bill levying a 5% sales tax on advertising revenues. The proposal is part of a multi-million dollar tax increase being considered by the lawmakers.

FCC shuns hard line on one-to-customer

Observes rule is not in effect yet in approving sale of KRUS-AM-FM

The FCC provided further evidence last week that it has liberalized the policy it adopted to implement the provisions of its proposed one-to-a-customer rule.

It approved the sale of KRUS-AM-FM Ruston, La., to Ruston Broadcasting Inc. But it made its grant subject to the outcome of the rulemaking proceeding that would bar the owner of a full-time station from acquiring another full-time outlet in the same market.

Thus, the commission followed the same procedure it employed in approving the sales of WTRF-FM-TV Wheeling, W. Va., two weeks ago (Broadcasting, March 3) and of WMOU-AM-FM Berlin, N. H., last month (Broadcasting, Feb. 17).

Furthermore, in orders approving the KRUS and WTRF sales, the commission said that, since early termination of the one-to-a-customer rulemaking proceeding does not appear possible, it would consider requests for waiver of the policy on their merits.

Not to do so until it has determined the action it will make on the rulemaking, the commission said last week, "will be, in effect, imposing the proposed rule before it becomes finalized." "We seek to avoid such arbitrary action." The proposed rule was issued for comment on March 28, 1968. As a result of replies and requests by broadcasters for extensions of time for filing reply comments, the deadline for replies was not finally reached until Feb. 28.

The commission found that the sale of KRUS-AM-FM, subject to the outcome of the proposed rules, would serve the public interest for two reasons: The stations are presently operated under common ownership and, therefore, a grant would not materially alter the present concentration, if any, that common ownership of KRUS-AM-FM represents.

The grant would not deprive the residents of Ruston of their existing FM service.

Ruston Broadcasting is owned by R. E. Hook and his wife and Don Hollingsworth. The Hooks own WELZ Belzoni, WMAG, WGST (FM) Forrest, both Mississippi, WRUS-AM-FM Russellville, Ky., WRKZ-AM-FM Key West, Fla., and have a 44% interest in Wrag Carrollton, Ala.

The commission vote on the KRUS-AM-FM transfer was 4-1, with Commissioners Kenneth A. Cox and Nicholas Johnson dissenting. Commissioner Robert T. Bartley was absent.

Commissioner Johnson, who with Commissioner Bartley dissented in the wtrf action, issued statements in both expressing opposition to waivers of the interim policy.

Johnson raps FCC on renewal of KNBR-AM-FM

FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson accused his colleagues last week of following a double standard in renewing the licenses of NBC's KNBR-AM-FM San Francisco without reviewing "the case against NBC." The commission renewed the licenses on Feb. 28, three months after they expired (Broadcasting, March 3).

Commissioner Johnson, the lone dissenter to the renewal, said that a "small, family-owned AM radio" station is dealt with far more severely when it commits "minor infractions."

The commissioner listed seven incidents which, he said, should have been reviewed. Two were reprimands for activities that the commission had said would be checked into further when NBC's license for KNBC-TV Los Angeles would come up for renewal— one involving NBC's conduct of the Golden Globe Awards program; the other, its supervision of two quiz shows.

The commissioner noted that action on the KNBC-TV renewal has been deferred because a competing application for the frequency has been filed by a group of Los Angeles area residents (Broadcasting, Feb. 10).

But he said that those incidents and others he detailed should have been reviewed by the commission in connection with the KNBR-AM-FM renewal applications, since they were the first NBC has filed since the behavior in question.

The commission, as he noted, did not mention any of the incidents in its order renewing the licenses of KNBR-AM-FM. It said only that it has not "undertaken to dispose of complaints against other NBC stations which, as previously indicated, will be disposed of in other proceedings."

(FCC Chairman Rosel H. Hyde, in testimony before the Senate Communication Subcommittee last week, said that none of the complaints, "even if valid," would warrant denial of NBC's licenses for the stations.

One of the other matters cited by Commissioner Johnson involved the broadcast by NBC's WKYC Cleveland of a Lucky Bucks contest. The commission had told NBC that the broadcasting for the contest had fallen short of the "required degree of licensee responsibility" and that the matter would be reviewed at license-renewal time.

Other matters listed by Commissioner Johnson included:

- The "numerous complaints" the commission received concerning NBC's coverage of the 1968 Democratic national convention. The complaints, which were directed mainly at the networks generally, have been disposed of so far as allegations of violations of fairness are concerned. However, the commission is continuing its investigation of charges that some television crews engaged in news faking.

- The allegation that "NBC employees" had placed a hidden microphone in a room that was used for a closed platform committee meeting at the Democratic convention. This incident, involving a single network employee, is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Chicago.

- The commission reprimand involving a possible conflict of interest on the part of NBC commentator Chet Huntley in connection with his comments about federal meat inspection laws. (Broadcasting, Sept. 16). Mr. Huntley has financial interests in the meat industry.

- Reports that a KNBC-TV crew had brought "dove" and "hawk" picket signs for use in filming a student debate in the Los Angeles area. The commission considered the matter but disposed of it without further action last March.

The commissioner had also felt the commission was wrong in failing to consider plans of NBC's parent RCA to acquire St. Regis Paper Company in a $700-million transaction. The proposed agreement was aborted after Commissioner Johnson prepared his dissent, but he left his discussion of the matter in his statement with a footnote pointing out that the commission was prepared to renew the license without examining the impact "of RCA's largest acquisition."

Johnson hits TV for lack of creativity

FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson told a forum of the New York chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences last week of another of his criticisms of television, one that he found applies equally to commercial and educational TV:

"There is no opportunity for creative individual participation."

Mr. Johnson elaborated by noting his particular concern over the commercial side of TV—an industry funded at $3 billion a year—that does not have the equivalent of research and development facilities or a farm team.

He compared what he called the "lack of visual excitement" in television with the record industry, where he said today "any group of kids with enough money to hire a hall and some recording equipment can make a record and it will be sold in every supermarket."

While conceding that this produces "a lot of junk," he said it has also opened the way for an "effervescence and self-revelation" of television not available in the television industry.

Mr. Johnson added that the lack of originality leaves him feeling that while "I occasionally get a glimpse of what creativity can be in television, most of it is pictures of radio programs."

Mr. Johnson flew to New York after two-and-a-half days of congressional testimony to become a last-minute panelist in the academy's discussion of "Public Television—Can It Work?"

He joined John F. White, president of National Educational Television; Ward B. Chamberlin Jr., vice president of the Corp. for Public Broadcasting; John W. Kiermaier, president of non-commercial WNDT (TV) Newark, N. J.-New York; William Pearce, manager of non-commercial WLIW (TV) Garden City, N. Y.; Dore Schary, the writer and director, and moderator Robert Lewis Shayon, TV/radio editor of The Saturday Review and professor of communications at the Annenberg School of Communications, University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Schary opened his part of the discussion by noting that he had not heard of public broadcasting. He was told, and also heard an airing of the dispute between Mr. Pearce and Messrs.
White, Chamberlin and Kiermaier over whether exclusivity should be granted on major educational program material in individual markets (Broadcasting, March 3).

Post chairman denies charge of monopoly

The Washington Post Co. last week said it was, "to put it mildly, preposterous" to claim that organization could monopolize the news media in Washington.

The statement from Frederick S. Beebe, chairman of the Post Co., came after the firm had been attacked in an on-air editorial by Arthur W. Arundel, owner of WAVA-AM-FM Arlington, Va. (Broadcasting, March 3).

Mr. Arundel's stations have been operating as all-news vehicles and he charged that the movement into the all-news field by the Post Co.'s WTOP would "carry the corporate giant over the divide to an effective near monopoly of news in Washington."

The Post Co. is licensee of WTOP-AM-FM-TV Washington, WJXT-TV Jacksonville, Fla., and owns the morning daily Washington Post and weekly Newweek magazine. Last week it signed agreements to buy WLBW-TV Miami and WCKY-TV Cincinnati (see page 40).

Mr. Beebe said the Post's daily circulation is smaller than the combined circulation of the city's other two dailies and that there are 44 radio and TV stations in the market.

He noted that Mr. Arundel's current protestations are markedly opposite to the comments the WAVA owner made last November when the WTOP format change was first announced. At that time, Mr. Beebe said, Mr. Arundel "wrote us that he was 'delighted' and said: 'The public interest and Washington market would, I think, be well served and healthier by having two stations providing strong and extensive news services on different parts of the dial.'"

The Post Co. chairman noted that WTOP's switch to 24-hour all-news was a natural move after Larry Israel was named chairman of the Post-Newsweek Stations in August 1968. Mr. Israel, he said, is "generally considered to have pioneered genuine all-news programming" at Westinghouse Broadcasting's WINS New York, KFWB Los Angeles and KYW Philadelphia.

He added that a community survey showed a full-time news service "would add significantly to the broadcast service in the area. He also noted that WAVA is a daytime station and after it signs off, that operation's news is available "only to listeners with FM receivers" on WAVA-FM.

Even if both WTOP and WAVA could be heard at all times by everyone in the area, Mr. Beebe said, "what would be wrong with competition... We can see no reason why WAVA should be immune from such competition. Such immunity would indeed produce a kind of monopoly—for WAVA—and that would seem to be what its self-serving editorial is trying to promote."

Winston-Salem stations given autonomous set-up

FCC approval of the reorganization became effective March 1. Gordon Gray continues as chairman of the board of both companies; Donald J. Chipman, president of Piedmont, and Harold Essex, Triangle president, also remain in their posts. Each company will have its own management and board of directors.

Mr. Gray and associates purchased the newspapers and WJSJ on May 1, 1937. WJSJ-FM went on the air Dec. 1, 1947. Triangle was formed in 1953 as a subsidiary of Piedmont to operate WJSJ-TV, which went on the air on Sept. 30 of that year. The licenses of the stations were transferred to Triangle in 1967.

CBC costs to Canadians are revised downward

The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. will cost each Canadian about $7.90 in the coming federal-government fiscal year which begins April 1. A previous report erroneously gave the per-capita amount as $8.30 (Broadcasting, Feb. 10).

The federal outlay for the publicly owned corporation was estimated at $166 million for the 1969-70 fiscal year. On Feb. 1 Canada's population was estimated at 20,980,000 and it will surpass 21 million during the year in which the money is being spent. The $7.90 figure is based on a population of 21 million.

The previous report also put the estimated per-capita cost of the CBC to the federal government at $7.55. The actual figure is about $7.29.

Abroad in brief:

Belgian cable system = Vikoa Inc., Hoboken, N.J., announces that its European licensee, Ateliers de Constructions Electriques de Charleroi, has received a contract to build a 600-mile CATV system for Association Ligeoises de Electricite in Liege, Belgium. The system, valued at over $1 million, is expected to serve 25,000 homes by 1973. Vikoa makes cable TV equipment and is a multiple-CATV system owner.

1934 news = Avro, the independent Dutch radio network, last week broadcast in Holland taped excerpts from an NBC Radio newscast, dated July 21, 1934, as a part of a program celebrating the 45th anniversary of news broadcasting by the Dutch network.

More TV for India = Television in India, currently restricted to Delhi, will be expanded. Six additional TV stations are proposed for Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Kanpur, Ahmedabad and Bangalore.

Reischauer reflects = The Japanese, a look at Japan through the eyes of former U. S. Ambassador Edwin Reischauer, CBS News' Perry Wolff and former Tokyo correspondent Igor Ogresoff, will be aired April 23 on CBS-TV, sponsored by Xerox Corp.

There's a PAL in Australia's future

The decision in Australia last week to adopt the same color-broadcast standards as those used in Great Britain and in West Germany came simultaneously with official sanction of plans to introduce color on the South Pacific continent.

Color transmission will be on the PAL system (phase alternation line). Announcement was made by A. S. Huime, postmaster-general. He did not, however, announce a date for introduction, indicating that an 18-month notice would be issued to permit commercial stations and set manufacturers to prepare for color.

According to Australian broadcast sources in New York, estimates on initial costs to the industry—in Australian dollars—would include between $600 and $1,000 for a color set, up to $600,000 to convert a station and around $2.5 million to convert all of the 37 government-owned stations. There are 47 commercial stations in Australia.
The high cost of wheels for TV

Buying a mobile unit for one station’s use is poor economics, but there are ways to beat and profit from the problem

“If I do two remotes a year, what the hell’s the sense in spending a quarter of a million bucks a year on a color mobile unit and parking it in a garage?”

That frank major-market TV station manager may be one of the luckiest men alive. He doesn’t own a mobile unit, color or black-and-white; he rents one from an out-of-town station whenever the need arises. Other stations have color mobile units, and they have $1-million-plus headaches making a profitable venture out of keeping them on the road on a rental basis enough to justify—at least, to nervous station controllers—the high cost of equipment.

“I doubt that one television station has made a lousy dime on a mobile unit,” says Edward H. Herlihy, engineering manager for WKBG-TV Boston.

“You’ve got to keep it on the road all the time to make it profitable.” In fact, he says somewhat sourly, WKBG-TV “had some soul-searching last fall” on whether to continue its one-year-old mobile-unit service.

The $340,000 unit is still in business. But Mr. Herlihy has company from a number of stations that have expressed second thoughts about this increasingly competitive business of renting mobile equipment.

The quantum leap in technology from black-and-white to color, the demands made by the networks and such specialized hookups as Hughes Sports Network and TV Sports Inc., the burgeoning field of video-taped commercials—all have served in a few short years to move mobile units out of local markets and truly into continent-wide orbits.

A Charlotte, N. C., unit now tapes commercials in the Bahamas; an Austin, Tex., mobile unit covers live a regional National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball game in Kansas.

The bunching up of an Apollo space shot, a National Football League game, a 30-minute special for Celanese, a 60-second spot for Coca-Cola that have to be taped or covered within a short span of time, may find that neither the networks nor Hughes nor the commercial tape outfits can readily supply the equipment and manpower. Then these sources are turning increasingly to the independent and group station operator with enough mobile gear to do the job.

That trend was noted by Charles Phillips of RCA’s merchandising group, a major supplier of mobile packages, who says that the “networks are decreasing the purchase of the number of units they use and are relying instead on the independent stations or groups. There is a definite increase in the private ownership of mobile vans by tape production firms.”

There is money to be made—if the business can be secured on a month-in, month-out basis. How much is usually termed by knowledgeable stations as “modest,” or reflected in the statement “we hope to break even this year.” For it appears—despite the claims of prestige and community involvement surrounding the ownership of a color mobile unit—that going mobile is a high-risk business that few stations can afford to engage in, and oddly enough, more appear willing to try. As Ridge Radney, national sales manager for Mobile Color Inc. of Austin, Tex.,—a subsidiary of KHFI-TV Austin—which has made a total mobile commitment, sees it: “Mobility is the very essence of the television medium, to get out on location where the action is.”

The substantial question facing the major-market or medium-sized TV station manager concerned with going mobile is whether an expenditure of up to $1 million on color equipment or the junking of a present black-and-white mobile unit for color is to become an engineer’s plaything, a manager’s nightmare or a profitable return on investment? The answer may well depend... up upon how much he likes to gamble. According to several knowledgeable sources, the only certain thing about the mobile business is its uncertainty.

"There's absolutely no guarantee in this business," says John Dillon, managing director of Jefferson Productions. "Some months may seem light, but then you may get booked up quickly."

Or, he might have added, booked little or not at all.

Some station groups have tried the total commitment approach by forming autonomous production units wholly devoted to mobile activity and equipped with the latest equipment designed to meet most on-the-job contingencies. Jefferson is one example; it was formed several years ago by Jefferson Standard Broadcasting Co. (watty TV Charlotte, N. C.) not only for mobile color work but also for commercial production and for production of that company's syndicated programing as well.

About $1 million is invested in facilities which include an 18½-ton, six-color camera (five Norelco PC 70 Plumbicon's and one Norelco handheld) remote truck with an assortment of Angenieux lenses, RCA TS-40 switcher and BC-7A audio board multiple mike inputs, mixers, 12 black-and white and three color-preview monitors, nine-position program interrupt system (CBS, one of Jefferson's customers, had requested five, but according to Mr. Dillon, "we decided to go all the way.")

A 30-foot companion video-tape truck holds one RCA high-band machine and one Ampex VTR-2000 with room for other cameras if needed. A 45 kw generator can be pulled up behind in a pickup truck to enable complete operation of both cameras and tape units without commercial power.

"Good equipment is essential to a mobile operation," says Mr. Dillon, "but that too is a gamble because the equipment you buy today may become obsolete in the next couple of years."

A slow-motion video-tape recorder, for example, would be a risky item for Jefferson because it wouldn't pay for itself by twice-a-year use, he says. (But, at least two stations apparently are willing to gamble: Wnhd-TV Boston has an Ampex HS-100 slow-motion VTR in its $1.25-million mobile setup; KRLD-TV Dallas also has such an Ampex.) Yet Jefferson took the risk of a $1-million plus investment in mobile equipment because, as Mr. Dillon notes, "there was a need for a top-flight production outfit working in the Southeast."

Much the same need spurred KHFI-TV Austin, Tex., to form Mobile Color Inc. last April. According to Mr. Radney, "the market was ripe for action."

KHFI-TV had already compiled a two-and-one-half-year record of over 400 remote in central Texas before it moved to an autonomous unit with a separate crew available for outside assignments. The unit during the past year has covered network-televised National League baseball (NBC), NCAA football (ABC), and American Football League exhibition games on a regional basis.

Mobile Color too is equipped to meet virtually all contingencies. It has two custom Dodge 27-foot vans, capable of pulling a 12-foot trailer with power generator, each with three Norelco PC 70 cameras, one Ampex VTR 1200 high-band and low-band recorder with editing features, Angenieux lenses, multiple mike inputs, mixers and microwave facilities. The only difference between the two units is that one has a camera deck for shooting atop the cruiser. A third unit is a 35-foot bus equipped with four Norelco PC 70's, two Ampex VTR 1200's, four Angenieux lenses and external generator "if desired."

Although the Mobile Color units are fully equipped for network use, the outfit is making an effort to solicit business, at accordingly lower-than-network rates, from smaller-market TV stations that "are crying for color and can't afford to buy a mobile unit," says Mr. Radney. In addition, Mobile Color foresees a business in providing production support for medical and industrial firms that desire closed-circuit TV tape production.

Northwest Mobile Television is another production arm, formed late last year by the King Broadcasting Co. group (KING-TV Seattle), principally because it was felt there was a need in the Northwest area for a mobile unit designed for commercial use. (Stan Carlson, NMT manager, also notes that the autonomous unit was created because no one station in the King group wanted to touch the costs involved in such a mobile-unit undertaking.)

To that end NMT equipped a 27-foot "interim" unit with three Norelco PC 70's, one Ampex VTR 1200 with an assortment of Schneider and Angenieux lenses, mixers and Grass Valley switcher, and it is also equipping similarly an additional 35-foot van.

The NMT unit has been used by Hughes for Pacific Eight Conference basketball games for regional telecast on the Pacific Coast. But Mr. Carlson feels that the top earnings for the NMT unit will come from commercial production. "Terrifically high line costs" involved in network feeds of professional baseball and basketball games from Seattle, he says, minimize that as a source of revenue.

All three production unit managers suggest that such an investment in equipment would be a poor one for an independent station because they feel the unit would rarely "pay for itself," certainly not in station use alone. But independent stations are buying mobile units—large ones, at that, sometimes in the 35- to 40-foot van bracket.

RCA's Mr. Phillips notes that his company's 1968 packaged mobile-unit sales tripled over the previous year and he expects a three-fold increase over that amount this year. Mr. Phillips declines to specify the total number of units. But one of the specialized van body companies with which RCA has been dealing for 18 years says it turned out eight to 10 mobile TV units in 1968.

The company, Gertenslager Co. of Wooster, Ohio, which is one of the oldest manufacturers of custom vans for primarily bookmobiles and medical units, has experienced an appreciable upswing in mobile-unit product in recent years. According to a company spokesman, Gertenslager previously produced three or four units annually for network use (usually NBC and OBS) but the trend now is decidedly toward requests from independent and educational TV stations. Gertenslager has been identified with the recently constructed mammoth 40-foot van for WBAP-TV Ft. Worth-Dallas and a 35-foot van for KOMO-TV Seattle.

The company's mobile unit product varies in length from 18 feet to 40 feet in a broad price range of from $18,000 to $35,000 of which $15,000 to $18,000 is marked for the custom chassis. J. Madsen Co. of Bath, N. Y., designer and manufacturer for custom chassis primarily for transit school buses, has teamed with Gertenslager on a number of units including the WBAP-TV and KOMO-TV vans.

According to Madsen engineer Sid Heiser, his company has noted an increase in mobile-unit product; last year Madsen produced six to eight custom "chassis for mobiles. Most contracts, he says, are for a 35-foot tandem axle vehicle with an air suspension support capability of about 45,000 pounds supplied with either a gas-driven 345-cubic-inch Ford engine or a Cummins 220 diesel. "The stations are going after the big ones," he notes.

Both companies have seen a change in the basic design of mobile units. Mr. Heiser notes that contractors have dropped previous semi-trailer requests, where the mobile unit would be attached to an independent cab, in favor of a complete all-in-one self-contained unit. The Gertenslager spokesman sees a move toward the truly customized van tailored to meet the requirements of the individual station. The conglomeration of equipment from daily manufacturers being used in vans today precludes a wholly one-brand packaged product that used to be prevalent, he says, and the use of smaller cameras and equipment permits the accommodation of more equipment than ever before.

Few, if any, of the mobile vans produced by Gertenslager have what might be called "creature comforts," although WBAP-TV's unit has an area specified for client use. The Gertenslager spokesman notes that there is about "three feet of carpeted area" designed for prospective renters of the equipment, and not much else. "We don't put any of that stuff into our vans," he says.

Rupert Bogan, director of engineering for WBAP-TV, affirms there are only three chairs behind a table in this client area, and laughingly dispels images of other creature accommodations, such as bars or bathrooms, aboard this mobile palace. But RCA's Mr. Phillips foresees creature comforts becoming "more prominent in the future." In one RCA mobile-unit package a 100-volt refrigerator was installed, he says, and soon hot and cold running water may be a permanent fixture—"seriously," he adds.

It's hard to envision such "luxuries" aboard most mobile vehicles today where 10 to 12 staff members, perspiring from the heat of the equipment (eight tons of air conditioning notwithstanding), usually crawl over one another to get to their consoles. But one station, WTVJ(TV) Miami, has solved the client problem. It has a "Florida room," a portable six-foot by 12-foot van capable of being attached to the side of its 34-foot semi-trailer unit for the use of "production personnel and sponsors."

The initial cash outlay for one of the big vans may cause a brief lump in a station manager's throat; the cost of equipping the unit may bring tears to his eyes. But, it's when he puts the unit out on the road that the real headaches begin.

A behemoth costs money to operate as soon as it hits the pavement, in gas, oil, insurance, licensing, road-use taxes ($2,000 or more in some states) and driver fees. One station operator breaks down his vehicle operation costs per mile this way: for a 35-foot diesel van that gets about three miles to the gallon at 25 cents per gallon, fuel is roughly eight cents; add in 17 cents for insurance, three cents for license fees and 16 cents for driver expenses, and the total is about 44 cents a mile.

That cost may appear to be slight for local area use, but for long-haul jobs it's one of the reasons a number of stations are moving to a two- or three-mobile unit operation. The advent of the hand-held camera makes possible accepting assignments with only a videotape and switching truck capable of carrying the lighter-weight cameras. And many stations with a multiplicity of smaller units have been able to accept assignments in small markets that would prove prohibitive to the 40-foot van owner.

Amortization of the mobile unit is another headache. One major-market station operator figures he had to do 100 remotes last year, at a $440 profit per use of the unit to break even on a $44,000 annual amortization of his color equipment. He wound up doing only 84 remotes.

Labor costs are still another problem. With crew charges averaging anywhere from $8.50 to $10 an hour for an eight-hour day, for a normal six-man crew on a three-camera color remote the cost ranges from about $400 to $500—exclusive, of course, of overtime. One station engineer says part of his remote expense is always based on "time-and-a-half for the crew."

The rates stations are charging their customers reflect these basic considerations, and they serve to frequently scare off the smaller advertiser who wants mobile service for his commercials. For those contractors who can afford to pay the freight, the "typical" remote—three cameras, six men, working within a radius of 25 to 50 miles of the station—may cost a minimum $2,400 to $2,500 for an eight-hour day—a fee that varies remarkably little in the major markets. When you add to that figure, video-tape usage and travel far afield on assignment, then the rates reflect such exotic charges as separate set-up and strike day costs, rehearsal costs, per diem for personnel, meals, lodging, mileage according to the mobile unit used, advance cable installation, unit usage discounts, special rates for director and floorman—and the whole mobile operation becomes an expensive proposition for the average contractor.

It obviously is for a station which must cover an away game of the hometown baseball team and doesn't relish the prospect of a 500-mile trek to the ballpark. Often stations will set up a reciprocal arrangement whereby, as a hypothetical example, WFLD-TV Chicago can air a White Sox game in Baltimore through the mobile services of WJZ-TV. When the Baltimore Orioles play in Chicago, WFLD-TV would provide the mobile units. Often the only charges involved in such an arrangement are overtime costs for local station personnel.

But John M. Sherman, director of engineering, WCCO-TV Minneapolis-St. Paul, might well have been speaking for many of his brethren when he says: "Actually, the rental of this equipment can't be considered a profitable opera-
What can park like a car, sit in a ballroom, or video tape a Grand Opera?

The Minimobile

The Minimobile is our complete, entire, from nuts to bolts, Alpha to Omega, nothing-left-out-but-the-salt, mobile video tape television system. And it's all stowed away in a 21 foot van.

It can be used to tape a full-scale spectacular, a sports event, or a two shot chit and chatter show.

On top of that (for you Keystone Chase lovers) you can record with it while we're driving it. There are anchor positions for the cameras on the sides and the top, and radio frequency mikes that can beam back to the truck from hundreds of feet away.

And it's so small we could put two of them into one of our standard size mobile trailer units. (Only goodness knows why.)

Now read this part if you're technically minded, else skip on along to the end.

Besides Plumbicon cameras (studio and hand held), and Ampex VR-2000 and VR-3000 video tape recorders, the Minimobile has all the conveniences of a professional control room operation. It has a 6-input switcher with mix, effects and chroma-key; and 8-fader dual channel audio console with high and low level inputs, audio cartridge and reel record with playback facility, and a multiple-assortment of microphones, including RF mikes.

The Minimobile may be operated with the basic system of two cameras and one VR-2000, or as many as five cameras and two VR-3000s. With three or more cameras in the van, VR-2000s may be operated from a support van.

The Minimobile is the-only-one-of-its-kind in this neck of the woods. At the rate we're moving (while living at the Shack, and waiting for them to finish our grand, new production facilities at the Mess, and considering the post production facilities we already have at the Shack, and our four other mobile trailers) about the only production problem we can't solve right now is producing enough parking space.

Jefferson Productions moved camera and video-tape trucks and a crew of 16 from its Charlotte, N. C., base south to Atlanta for taping of 30-minute special, Joys of Southern Living, for Celanese Corp. There were a few production problems on first-day shooting, but experienced crew surmounted them to meet tight deadline. Left, floorman and cameraman prepare for "Take one." Above, Jefferson's Clyde McLean conducts interview in front of Celanese house exhibit, amid sounds of whining power drills and hammers banging on nails. On-location headaches are part of mobile unit business, but there are rewards too. Celanese paid a reported $20,000 for two day's shooting. Special was completed on time and was aired March 1 over 20 stations from Virginia to Georgia.

tion. Although the rates are high and the revenue is considered sizable, it all goes to pay labor and to amortize the more than $1-million cost of the color camera unit and to the more than $250,000 cost of the video-tape unit.

But equipment costs are next-to-nothing compared with the frustrations and aggravations associated with problems on the road. On an assignment last month for Celanese Corp., Jefferson Productions moved its mobile units and crew of 16 from its North Carolina base south to Atlanta. The assignment was the taping of a garden and home-decoration exhibit in the Atlanta Civic Center, sponsored by Southern Living magazine, for a 30-minute special, Joys of Southern Living.

Although the ground work had been done two months previously (exhibits to be taped were planned in advance; a bare-bones shooting script had been developed), the schedule was rather tight: one-and-a-half days of shooting (Thursday and Friday) plus editing of the tape in Charlotte (Friday evening) for mailing by Saturday to 20 stations from Virginia to Georgia for airing that Sunday (March 1)—if all went on schedule.

It didn't, at least the first day. When the crew arrived, the exhibits were in the process of construction by advertising executives and product managers because the carpenters had staged a brief strike (they were back on the job the next day). The taping was done amid the sound of hammering and power drilling—an annoyance since on-camera audio was being used. Shooting was a half-hour behind schedule because the exhibits were not ready for taping.

Moving from exhibit to exhibit with three cameras (two Norelcos on dollies and one hand-held Norelco) using 300 feet of cable and checking-out the taping at every stop with a TV monitor were accomplished in spite of the noise and spectators vying for the crowded aisles. It was far from ideal, admits Jefferson's Dillon. "The difficult thing we had here was the fact that we couldn't control the background."

Despite the physical limitations, the setups and strikes of equipment were carried off quickly with an average 20 to 30 minutes spent per exhibit. The taping required one or two takes and a minimum of rehearsal for the talent, who ad-libbed most of their lines. Cumbersome problems of camera height were solved by that time-honored theatrical tradition of "making do"; if the dolly wasn't sufficiently high, benches were found on which the camera could be placed.

The taping was a "typical medium-sized remote job," according to Mr. Dillon. The crew included director; remote supervisor; audio, tape, and two video operators; a lighting director; three cameramen; a utility man; a production assistant; two actors, and an executive producer. And considering the "rush job" nature of the assignment (and it was completed and aired on time), Mr. Dillon indicated it was necessary to have an experienced crew that is accustomed to working together. "Absolutely first-rate people are necessary for this kind of job. You can't expect the normal studio technician to be competent to do commercial work on a part-time basis," he says. Contractors, agencies in particular, expect a more sophisticated product: "And you can't do that solely with studio technicians." (Contractors also appear willing to pay well. The 30-minute special cost Celanese in the neighborhood of $20,000.)

But more stations are going mobile with a variety of equipment that stagers the imagination and the pocketbook. And what's more, some report making a profit out of their operations.

KHVN-TV Honolulu had its mobile unit in use, primarily by the U. S. networks, for nearly 300 hours last year, covering such events as the Hula Bowl (ABC), Hawaiian Open (NBC) and portions of the Apollo 8 flight (CBS). During the last three years the KHVN-TV unit has been used by the four Japanese networks, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and the British Broadcasting Corp. The KHVN-TV unit also served as the primary pickup of of the first live transmission from Hawaii to the U. S. mainland during the Michigan State-Notre Dame football game on Nov. 19, 1966. And the unit has proved a profitable by-product of the station's uses: about $100,000 annually for the last three years.

KJH-TV Los Angeles has two mobile units: One 32-foot van holds six Norelco PC-70's and two Ampex high-band VTR's; the other, a smaller 20-foot van, contains two Norelcos and one Ampex VTR. Both units have been used by CBS, NBC, Hughes and the Public Broadcast Laboratory for several of its telecasts. The Bob Hope Golf Classic (NBC) employed a KJH-TV unit. According to George Tokar, chief engineer, the station has found that "the rental of equipment has been a profitable operation, and one which we actively pursue. However, we don't rent for the sake of keeping the equipment busy."

The KHTV-Houston unit, employing four General Electric PE350 cameras plus an Ampex high-band
VTR, has been used in the Astrodome for coverage of 40 National League baseball games, the first University of Houston-University of California basketball game and American Football League exhibition games. According to Crawford P. Rice, KHTV manager, its mobile unit "has been of equal importance to us as a revenue producer and as origination vehicle for a significant amount of our own programing.

The WFAA-TV Dallas unit is a 40-foot recently color-converted Aerocoach, originally custom-built by Ampex, which contains six GE PE350's and two Ampex high-band VTR's. The unit has seen service with ABC-television commercials for All-State Insurance, and a 30-day stint in Mexico City last October for the Summer Olympics at a considerable cost to the station and the network (ABC). The WFAA-TV unit hasn't yet proved a money machine, although as a black-and-white operation, it was quite successful, according to Mike Shapiro, general manager. "We have high hopes for it" he says, "because our basic van body as a black-and-white unit has already paid for itself several times over."

WFLD-TV Chicago is one UHF that has found its mobile unit—a 39-foot truck equipped with four Marconi color cameras—a profitable venture primarily because it receives extensive use during the baseball season. WFLD-TV carries the Chicago White Sox (home and away) games in addition to local basketball games.

Last year the WFLD-TV unit was used about 30 days by Hughes for Notre Dame football games and Showcase '68 (NBC).

WTVJ-TV Miami employs a 34-foot semi-trailer van and a converted 34-foot Greyhound bus, which serves primarily as a video-tape mobile unit. Both units have been used last year to tape all of the Jackie Gleason and Don DeLuis shows (CBS) originating from Miami Beach, the Miss USA and Miss Universe Pageant, 13 John Gary shows and the Republican national convention.

KFWC-TV Houston chose the economy route last September by squeezing existing color studio equipment into two of its black-and-white units, and with slight customizing of its audio switching unit, went into a mobile business for about $500,000—half of what a 40-foot fully equipped van would cost. KFWC-TV now has four units (camera truck with five GE PE 350's, control van with switching facilities, video-tape unit and utility and lighting vehicle) and has covered, during 51 days use, American Football League and National League baseball games (NBC) and the football Bluebonnet Bowl (Hughe).

KTLA-TV Los Angeles has four basic units, a 40-foot Crown Coach bus with RCA TK-41's, TS-40 switcher and BC-6 audio console; a 26-foot Fruehauf semi-trailer with four Norelco PC-70's; a 40-foot Crown Coach bus that houses two 85-kw generators plus additional camera equipment and a mobile unit with microwave gear. And, if the need arises, KTLA can provide aerial coverage with its helicopter outfitted with a Norelco six-and-half pound Plummicon color camera.

During last year, the KTLA units were used for about 350 hours with an estimated 1,800 hours contracted for 1969.

And the mobile equipment beat goes on, limited only by the ingenuity and funds a station can afford to pump into a "television station on wheels." But more stations are going mobile, and, according to Dan Love, general manager of KHFI-TV Austin, Tex., Mobile Color's parent, more should: "We feel there is a great need for this sort of thing at all levels of the medium. We feel that many small and large stations should get up off of their soft cushions and go to work." Perhaps. The sedentary station manager might do well,

Commercial companies rent mobile equipment

In addition to television stations that rent mobile equipment a number of commercial companies offer mobile units, cameras and video-tape units for rent. Among those well known in this area are the following:

- ABC, 57 West 66th Street, New York 10019. Merle Worster, director, TV operations. (212) 668-7777. Mobile units, camera chains, lenses and other equipment are for rent when not in use. Prices are competitive.

- CBS-TV Operations, 524 West 57th Street, New York 10019. David White, general manager. (212) 765-4321. Large mobile equipment is not for rent but small pieces, such as cameras, lenses, tripods, pedals are for rent when not in use. Prices are competitive (for example, price of a camera is from $400 to $700 a day).

- General Television Network, 901 Livermore Avenue, Ferndale, Mich. 48220. R. Randolph Hippler, sales manager. (313) 548-2500. Four-camera black and white mobile unit with black and white broadcast video-tape recorder. Portable power generator. Basic cost including crew $2,000 per day.

- Hollywood Video Center, division of Western Video Industries, 1541 North Vine Street, Hollywood. Rounsevelle W. Schaan, president; John Braislin director of operations. (213) 466-2141. Two mobile units. Larger six-camera unit in 40-foot air-conditioned van with 55 KVA sound-proofed generator in custom tractor; smaller, two-camera unit is all modular and transportable by air. Prices on request.

- Hughes Sports Network (formerly National Video Tape Productions), 530 Fifth Avenue, New York 10036. (212) 581-3891. Charles A. Vos, VP engineering. Four mobile units with 18 GE Plumbicon cameras. A tape operations center with 35 mm and 16 mm film equipment, five Ampex high-band recorders. Dub and edit high-band and low-band video tape. Prices on request.

- LewRon Television Inc., 625 West 42d Street, New York 10036. Stanley J. Cole, vice president. (212) 524-4225. Hollywood (213) 462-6511. Five mobile units—number one: 40-foot van, four Plumbicon cameras, two VR-2000 high-band color video-tape recorders; number two: four RCA color cameras; number three: Ampex VR-2000 high-band color video-tape recorders; Clark Cortez Mini-Mobile with up to five Plumbicon cameras; Econoline Unit with one Norelco PCP-70 and one VR-3000 color high-band video-tape recorder. Prices on request.

- Logos Teleproductions Center, 3620 South 27th Street, Arlington, Va. 22206. William T. Glimmon, president. (703) 571-1300. Two mobile units with modular equipment capable of interchangeable arrangement. Seven Norelco PC-70 color cameras; four video-tape units. Prices on request.

- National Teleproductions, 5261 North Tacoma Avenue, Indianapolis 46220. Howard J. Zuckerman, president. Mobile unit number one: 40-foot semi-trailer with six Marconi cameras, GE color film chain with 16mm projector and slide projectors, 23 monochrome and two color monitors. Unit number two: two color cameras, one video-tape recorder, specially equipped for location commercials, small sporting events. Third unit on order. Prices on request.

- NBC Telesales, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 10020. Dan Sullivan, manager. (212) Circle 7-8300. Color-mobile unit with five color cameras, one black and white camera and two video-tape machines for $750 per hour with a one-hour minimum. Other mobile unit equipment available with prices on request.

RCA, Columbia both get into the cassette field

Cassette tape cartridges—the youngest and smallest member of the booming recording industry—got a major boost last week as both the RCA record division and Columbia Records division of CBS announced that they will go into production of pre-recorded cassettes by summer.

The country’s two leading record manufacturers have been making four- and eight-track stereo tape cartridges, in addition to standard phonograph records, but previously had resisted the small but growing cassette business.

Many industry observers have predicted a battle between cartridges and cassettes similar to that between RCA’s 45 rpm LP record and Columbia’s 33 1/2 rpm LP record 20 years ago. Cassette, developed by Philips of Holland, were introduced into the U.S. by North American Philips Co. less than three years ago. Placed in a cassette system, the cartridges sold for $2.50 each, and were reported about seven times that of cassettes last year.

An RCA spokesman said “consumer interest in prerecorded cassettes has developed to a point that justifies an initial marketing effort.” Basic price of a cassette album will be $6.95, a dollar more than for the standard stereo phonograph version.

- RME Productions, 100 East Broad Street, Suite 1302, Columbus, Ohio 43215. Richard Mann, president. (614) 224-6281. Mobile production units housed in 40-foot vans, contain six color cameras, two video-tape units, slow-motion stop action unit and complete control-room facilities. Prices on request.

- Tele-Color Productions, 1108 Oronoco Street, Alexandra, Va. 22314. (703) 683-3203. Charles F. Riley, president. Camera and video-tape equipment set up in separate trucks for maximum flexibility. Unit number one: Up to four Norelco PC-70 cameras, which can be removed and used separately. Unit number two: One or two VR-2000B high-band video-tape recorders with support equipment rack. Price varies from $1,000 to $4,000 a day according to equipment needed.

- Tele-Tape Productions Inc., 321 West 44th Street, New York 10036. Richard E. Riedel, president. (212) 582-3400. Mobile units available include a black and white unit with six Marconi Mark IV cameras, two Ampex VTR’s and other necessary equipment; color camera unit with six Marconi Mark VII Plumbicon cameras, necessary auxiliary equipment; a color tape unit capable of functioning independently; a recording and editing unit with camera facilities; other portable facilities as needed.

- Tel-Fax, Enterprises Road, Montgomeren, Pa. 18936, Tony Symonovich, president. (215) 855-0970. Three mobile units, two color vans and one monochrome. Each color van is equipped with three color cameras and one high-band recorder. Both can be married for six camera-two recorder operations. Color cameras are Norelco PC-70’s and GE PE 250’s. Rates on request.

- Vidtronics Division, Technicolor Inc., 823 North Seward Street, Hollywood 90038. Bradley Kemp, western sales manager. (213) 462-6111. Mobile unit with two Norelco PC-70 cameras and all necessary equipment; specialists in transferring high-band color video tape to 16mm, 35mm and super 8mm film; all forms of technical editing. Prices on request.

WBAY/GREEN BAY
There's joy in two Mudvilles tonight ...

For the Washington Senators and Montreal Expos didn't strike out in their radio-TV negotiations

The Washington Senators have come up with a radio outlet; the Montreal Expos have come up with a "local" television package that will cover the continent, and the Seattle Pilots are still looking for local TV coverage.

Although 21 of the 24 major-league baseball teams had completed their radio-TV arrangements by last month (Broadcasting, Feb. 17), Washington, Montreal and Seattle still had unsettled situations.

The Senators, which for the past six years had received about $350,000 annually in local radio-TV rights from WTOP-AM-TV Washington, will move up to about $425,000 a year under new contracts with WWDC and WTOP-TV. The team had signed earlier with WTOP-TV, but until last week could not find a radio station that it could get together with on price. It was forced into the radio market, and now it turns out profitably so, when WTOP dropped all sports from its schedule prior to going all-news.

The contract with WWDC is for one year with options. The station will carry the 162-game regular-season schedule and about 10 exhibitions. It hopes to set up a regional network of about 20 stations. Already signed for one-sixth on WWDC is Atlantic-Richfield through N. W. Ayer. Participating sponsors will include Schafer Brewing and B. F. Goodrich, both through BBDO, and Giant Foods. Shelby Whitfield, former sports director of Armed Forces Radio and TV Service in Europe, has been hired by the Senators to handle play-by-play on radio and TV. Joining him on radio will be Ron Michene, former sports director of WWDC.

Although a second voice for WTOP-TV has not been set, that station will have an elaborate array of "color" commentators, ranging from Hugh Hefner to Bill Veeck. The station has been trying to get political, entertainment and sports figures to work on the 35 games to be televised locally. In particular, it has been looking for leaders in the black community to get behind the microphone to help the large Negro community in Washington more easily "relate to the games."

While the station still hopes to have political personalities such as Senators Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.) and Edmund Muskie (D-Me.) and former Vice President Hubert Humphrey on its broadcast team ("Closed Circuit," Feb. 17), those names are on the "possible" list. Already confirmed are pop singing groups the Supremes and Temptations (through Motown Records) for several games emanating from Detroit; comedian Flip Wilson for an early season game from Washington; Bill Veeck, former owner of the St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox and now owner of Suffolk Downs racetrack, for games from Boston; Johnny Unitas, Baltimore Colts quarterback, for games from Baltimore; Sonny Jurgensen, Washington Redskins quarterback; Timmy Brown, Baltimore Colts running back, and for a game from Chicago, Playboy publisher Hefner and at least one bunny.

The Expos, a new National League entry, in their contract with the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. will boast the most extensive local TV coverage afforded any ball club. The contract calls for 15 regular-season games on 44 English-language and 12 French-language stations. In addition the French network will take six more games, all on Wednesday night.

The 15 games to be carried on both networks will be nine on Wednesday nights, four on Sunday afternoons and two weekday games on April 8 and 14. The first is the season opener in New York and the second is the home opener.

Although the Expos still do not have a radio contract, the team will be getting approximately $250,000 for the TV rights. O'Keefe Brewing has purchased half of the rights and the remainder will be sold off to other advertisers.

The situation in Seattle, one of the American League's new cities, is still bleak as far as the Pilots and local TV are concerned. A club spokesman last week called it "entirely conceivable that the team will start the season without any Seattle TV coverage."

The problem seems to be that although several of the area stations have developed a TV baseball package and taken it into the marketplace, the interest by advertisers just isn't there.

Advertiser interest in the established eastern teams seems much stronger, particularly in Boston where the Zayre department store chain has just signed up for one-sixth of the Red Sox games on WHDH Boston and the 48-station radio network. Department stores are not known for big spending in sports and the Zayre buy through Bob Bernstein & Co. for the 34 stores in New England is looked on as a potential breakthrough.

In another baseball note, Nellie King will again be working the Pittsburgh Pirates games on the radio and TV lines through KDKA-AM-TV.

Triangle sets sights on feature-film production

Triangle Program Sales, Philadelphia, plans to expand into the feature-film field with the establishment of a production office in Los Angeles. A lease for office space has not yet been signed.

Robert A. Mirisch, resident counsel for Mirisch Productions in Hollywood, will be in charge of the new office as director of film development. His duties will be to secure rights to properties, develop new stories, negotiate agreements with studios and supervise production of movies for television and theatrical use, Triangle said. Development of television properties other than feature films is also planned.

Mr. Mirisch's appointment is effective March 24.

Original drama back in fall

Prudential's On Stage, the series of original dramas which made its debut on NBC-TV this season, will return to the network for the 1969-70 season. The series will be produced next year in association with noted writers and producers in the U. S. and England and will continue under the direction of William Storke, vice president, special programs. S. Mark Smith will continue as over-all story executive in 1969-70.

Prudential's On Stage included this season Rod Serling's "Certain Honorable Men," and Alun Owen's "Male of the Species." The third in the series is scheduled for Sunday (March 30), and two other, yet unscheduled dramas will complete the season. Prudential agency is Reach, McClinton & Co., New York.
Q: Do you know every morning at 9 a.m. when you come into your office what your billing is as of that day for this month, next month, or six months from now?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No. It can usually be guessed within 25 per cent. (1 point)
(c) No, if I really need it I can hire two more bookkeepers. (2 points)

Q: Was your program log perfect yesterday, and what are its chances today?
A: (a) Yes, and good. (10 points)
(b) No, but when you have live girls working on everything, it's bound to get confusing. (2 points)
(c) Are you kidding?! (No points)

Q: Is a complete, detailed, current availability list on the desk of your national and local sales representatives each day?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, but it seems to me there's an opening tomorrow night at 7 P.M. (1 point)
(c) Are you kidding?! (No points)

Q: Do you know this morning which contracts expire in the next four weeks?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, but if I went through the order file, I could find out in three to four hours. (1 point)
(c) Who cares about expiration? It's sales I'm interested in. (½ point)

Q: Can you do the Rorabaugh without overtime and/or hiring many extra people?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, but the accounting department loves overtime. (3 points)
(c) No, I never could figure out those ink blots. (No points)

Q: Is your billing always out the very first day of the month?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, but we're improving and last month we got it out by the 7th. (3 points)
(c) No, but we've got the corrected adjusting entries in for December! (1 point)

Q: Does your Operations Manager know each morning how many spots will come up in the next week for which he doesn't have copy?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, right now he is trying to figure out what happened to the P & G film that was supposed to run last night! (2 points)
(c) No, but if we're lucky, everything's in for tonight! (1 point)

Q: At the end of each month, do you know how much income was received for each of your programs and adjacencies?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) No, and I have often wondered if that Audie Murphy Film Festival was really worth what we paid for it. (No points)
(c) No, but by the 15th of the month I have a pretty good idea what our total income was for the preceding month. (No points)

Q: Could you design a system that would give you all of these answers, and more, each day for $15,000 or less?
A: (a) Yes. (10 points)
(b) Not unless I can steal it! (Tsk)
(c) No, but if I could hire four extra people, I could get it for $30,000 a year! (1 point)

SCORE: Whatever your score on this test, your station - Radio or Television - can function with 100% efficiency with the BCS Radio/Television Computerized Traffic/Accounting System.

The full system will be demonstrated at NAB Exhibit #549 at the Shoreham Hotel. Visit the BCS Hospitality Suite at the Washington Hilton.

Dilemma over definition of ethics
Commission's hearing on WBBM-TV 'pot party' finds Minow again saying show wasn't rigged

Members of the FCC and the former chairman of that agency struggled last week with the question of the ethics involved and the professional standards that broadcast newsmen should follow in presenting news documents that are, in varying degrees, "prearranged." They did not get very far.

But the former chairman, Newton N. Minow, who was representing CBS in an oral argument before the full commission, suggested that the question was somewhat academic so far as the matter on which he was appearing was concerned.

For the Pot Party at a University, which CBS-owned WBBM-TV Chicago broadcast in two segments, on Nov. 1 and 2, 1967, did not deal with a party that station personnel helped to induce, he said. The station, he added, was simply invited to film it in connection with an effort to bring home to its viewers a serious social problem.

But it has long been obvious that the case will help form commission policy in overseeing the broadcast of news and documentaries. Mr. Minow said he felt an important step in articulating that policy was taken three days before Monday's (March 3) oral argument, in the commission's letter to the networks on the coverage of the Democratic national convention in Chicago last August (Broadcasting, March 3).

The letter not only held that there was no "substantial basis" for concluding that the networks had been unfair in their coverage, but also said that, in matters of "staging" news events, "there are ... many areas of permissible licensee judgment."

The oral argument—which ran 45 minutes over its scheduled one hour—was the final procedural step before the commission reaches a finding on its inquiry into the program dealing with Northwestern University students at a marijuana party. And during it, Chairman Rosel H. Hyde reminded Mr. Minow that CBS was being given an "extraordinary" opportunity to rebut the findings of what was merely an investigator's report to the commission.

Former Chief Hearing Examiner James D. Cunningham, who conducted a hearing in the investigation and issued the report, found that the party had been "prearranged" for the benefit of CBS and would not have been held but for the request of WBBM-TV reporter John V. Missett (Broadcasting, Jan. 13).

Mr. Minow, however, noted that the examiner did not reach a finding on the issue posed by the commission—whether representatives of CBS helped plan or arrange the party, or encouraged others to do so. Furthermore, he said, the party was as represented—a pot party on a college campus.

But Commissioners Nicholas Johnson and Kenneth A. Cox were interested in Mr. Minow's views regarding the standards of ethical and professional behavior broadcasters should follow in presenting actions (they seemed particularly interested in illegal actions) that could have occurred as represented but did not.

Commissioner Cox cited the hypothetical appearance of a camera crew at a riot scene after most of the rioters had left and their request to a struggler to throw a brick through a window for the benefit of the cameras. And Commissioner Johnson cited various possible degrees of prearrangement in connection with the filming of a marijuana party—from an authentic one to which a reporter is invited to one that is staged at a university where marijuana is not smoked—for the purpose of representing a problem that exists at other campuses.

Commissioner Johnson, who said "we are dealing with the evolution of the commission's thinking" in matters of this sort, asked Mr. Minow to dig into his experience—as a former chairman of the commission (from March 2, 1961, to June 1, 1963) and as an attorney—to help the agency.

"What are the techniques that are used in putting together a documentary that are distinct from those involved in hard news?" he said. What are the ethical questions involved in "representations that are made to the audience? ... What do you think the professional standards ought to be?"

Mr. Minow felt viewers should be told precisely what they are being shown. But he said these were "hard questions," and allowed that he would rather "they were put to professional men."

This appeared to frustrate Commissioner Johnson, who said: "We've got to determine what we find reprehensible and why we find it reprehensible."

Mr. Minow, who stressed that CBS believed Mr. Missett's story that the station had been invited to film an authentic pot party, said at one point that WBBM-TV would not have aired the program if station officials thought the party was not authentic. "They have a policy against staged events," he told Commissioner Cox.

"But," put in Commissioner Johnson, "What is 'staged'?"

"It means different things to different people," said the former FCC chairman.

Mr. Minow said several times he thought the commission's letter to the networks on their Chicago coverage has helped clarify matters regarding "staged" news events—once after Chairman Hyde asked if the examiner's finding that the party was "prearranged" wasn't the same thing as saying it was induced or encouraged by CBS.

The letter recognized that every news conference involves some staging, as do scenes in a documentary—"on how the poor live in a typical day in the ghetto, for example—" and it added: "While there can, of course, be difficult gray areas, there are also many areas of permissible licensee judgment in this field."

The commission said it was concerned with "the deliberate staging of alleged 'news events' which do not in fact occur but are 'acted out.'"

It said it wanted to avoid involving itself in questions of licensee news judgment, and thus would investigate only those allegations where there is "extrinsic evidence" of staged or distorted news events.

Some observers seem to feel that the letter indicated that the commission was preparing the rationale for moving CBS off its current hot spot. They pointed particularly to a passage asserting that the commission would not place a licensee in jeopardy "for the isolated lapse of an employee... where the licensee has adequately discharged..."
its responsibilities." Mr. Minow, in apparent reference to that language, told the commission that "there is no question" on the part of the examiner [in the WBBM-TV case] regarding the licensee's "good faith".

However, commission officials point out that the language regarding licensee conduct is critical and that Examiner Cunningham raised questions as to how WBBM-TV and CBS officials discharged their responsibilities in connection with the program —how well, for instance, they supervised Mr. Missett and checked into allegations that the program was rigged.

Mr. Minow, as in his written comments on the examiner's findings, stressed that CBS was convinced after its investigation that Mr. Missett had told the truth in stating he had been invited to film the party and did not ask that the party be held. He described Mr. Missett, 23, as a 1967 honor graduate of Northwestern University, who had been recommended to WBBM-TV by the university and who comes from a family of journalists.

The four participants at the party on whose testimony Mr. Cunningham had relied in reaching his major findings were, on the other hand, beyond belief, Mr. Minow said. He noted that Mr. Missett's contact—referred to as "Witness A" (but identified as Frank Feldinger in public documents)—was not only a marijuana smoker but a "pusher"—even if only a not-for-profit pusher—who had accused not only Mr. Missett but a commission representative, Northwestern officials, the Evanston (Ill.) police and the House Investigations Subcommittee (which has also investigated the pot party program) of lying.

"That's the witness the commission seems to be relying on," he said.

Joseph Stirmar, Broadcast Bureau attorney who was sitting with the commission, asked whether testimony of Malcolm Spector, a former Northwestern student now teaching at McGill University in Montreal, didn't tend to back up Mr. Feldinger's version. Mr. Spector has said Mr. Missett asked him to arrange a party that could be filmed, but the WBBM-TV reporter has denied making such a request.

Mr. Minow, noting that Mr. Spector had not been involved in the party that was held, said he had been interested only in producing a program for the station that would have been "pro pot." "CBS never heard of Spector until well after the party," Mr. Minow said. "We don't think he has anything to do with this."

Mr. Minow conceded that Mr. Missett had used "bad judgment" in one respect. He had given Mr. Feldinger $5 in return for which the witness gave him marijuana. The exchange occurred when the party was breaking up after Mr. Feldinger, according to Mr. Missett, said he and others at the party had the "munchies"—that is, were hungry.

Mr. Missett had been under instructions from his superiors not to pay any money or encourage the holding of the party in any manner. Mr. Minow said that Mr. Missett rationalized his action and ground that the party had already been held. Mr. Missett has said he threw the marijuana away almost immediately after picking it up from a table where Mr. Feldinger had left it.

Mr. Missett had withheld information on the incident from CBS for six months because of a promise Mr. Feldinger had extracted from him. Mr. Missett, who had already agreed to keep confidential the names of persons he had talked to, told CBS of the incident and gave officials Mr. Feldinger's name after it was apparent both men had already talked to authorities. It was at the same time, and for the same reason, that he divulged Mr. Spector's name.

ABC and NBC alter fall kid schedules

Both networks will have entries in 8-9 a.m. Saturday line-up

Major revisions in Saturday-morning children's programming for the fall were announced last week by ABC-TV and NBC-TV, and CBS-TV is expected to reveal extensive changes in its Saturday schedule soon. All the changes reflect an emphasis on "less violent" programming.

Both ABC and NBC will begin programming at 8 a.m., an hour earlier than usual. CBS currently has Go Go Gophers and Bugs Bunny/Road Runner in that time slot.

ABC will move Casper The Friendly Ghost, now at 9 a.m. to the start of the schedule from 8 to 8:30. The next three hours will be filled by new programs: The Smokey Bear Show (8:30-9), animated comedy adventures with a concluding conservation message; The Nashville Cats (9-10), an animated rock group with a variety of cartoon elements; Hot Wheels (10:10-30), cartoon of a group of young, responsible drivers who have formed an auto club, with a safe-driving tip at the end of each show; The Hardy Boys (10:30-11), an animated series based on the Hardy Boys mystery books; and Sky Hawks (11-11:30), animation of the Wilson family, a three-generation team of air experts.

ABC will end the morning with Adventures of Gulliver at 11:30-12 (now at 9:30), followed by Fantastic Voyage at 12-12:30 (now at 10:30); and American Bandstand in its regular 12:30-1:30 slot. The network has not set a definite date for the September launch of its new schedule.

NBC, after discussing the new schedule with its affiliated board of delegates (Broadcasting, Feb. 24), disclosed last week "a departure from past children's programming concepts and an emphasis on types and forms of programs especially designed for children."

New programs fill the 8-10:30 a.m. period on NBC: The Heckle and Jeckle Show (8-9), a comedy series with talking mynah birds that has been around but not on the network; Here Comes the Grunch (9-9:30), an animated series featuring a boy and his dog in a fantasy land with a "grunch" and a dragon; The Pink Panther (9:30-10), television version of the cartoon character drawn for the titles of the movie of the same name; and H. R. Pufnstuf (working title, 10:10-30), costumed actors and puppets in an adventure series. Hasbro Industries Inc., a toy manufacturer, has purchased full sponsorship of H. R. Pufnstuf.

Kellogg's Presents the Banana Splits Adventure Hour will remain in its 10:30-11:30 slot, followed by a new Ivan Tors animal adventure series. Jungle Tales (working title), from 11:30 to 12, The Flintstones, now at 10, and Underdog, now at 11:30 will be presented in the 12 to 1 p.m. period. NBC's new schedule will begin Sept. 6.

New TIO book reviews educational TV specials

The second edition of Teachers' Guide to Television, highlighting educational programs on commercial television, is now being distributed in cooperation with the Television Information Office.

Spring semester programs reviewed in the guide include A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Experiment, Adventures at the Jade Sea and Cinderella on CBS-TV; The View From Space, Nature's Adaptations, Three Young Americans, and The Last Great Adventure on ABC-TV, and The Wizard of Oz, White Paper: Ordeal of the American City, Meet George Washington and Mirror of America on NBC-TV, plus national and international news on all three TV networks.

Mrs. Gloria Knuehn is editor of the Teachers' Guides. The first edition was published last fall.
TV coverage catches drama of Apollo 9

All radio-TV networks will carry splashdown on Thursday morning

Following a week of intricate space maneuvers and a new set of television coverage firsts, broadcast coverage of the Apollo 9 flight this week settles down to a period of waiting for return of the orbiting capsule Thursday (March 13).

Although both radio and television networks have scheduled periodic progress reports, photographic and other scientific detail work provide little drama compared to last week's maneuvers.

For the most intricate and dangerous portions of the flight following lift-off last week, television networks found themselves with little more to offer than radio. Both used National Aeronautics and Space Administration audio communications with the orbiting command capsule as it maneuvered and docked with its previously untested lunar module. All three television networks relied on animation and mock-up demonstrations to add a visual dimension to the activities under way in space.

While live television coverage from space was not nearly so extensive or suspenseful as on the Apollo 8 moon fly-by, the space shot provided two live telecasts.

The full space walk scheduled for Thursday (March 6) by rookie astronaut Russell Schweickart was curtailed by concern over his recurring bouts of nausea, but some maneuvers outside the spacecraft were conducted with the aid of fellow astronaut James McDivitt, including spectacular views of the earth and lunar and command modules.

Although the live broadcast signal was interrupted twice during the 15-minute broadcast, picture clarity from the specially constructed Westinghouse Electronic Corp. camera (Broadcasting, Feb. 17), to be used on the moon, was praised.

The other live broadcast from Apollo 9—that of astronauts Schweickart and McDivitt inside the lunar module—on Wednesday (March 5) also was sharp, but bothered by static, and marred by loss of audio transmission during much of the seven-minute broadcast.

For the launch of the flight at 11 a.m. Monday (March 3), national Arbitron ratings gave CBS television coverage the most viewers, with a 9.4 rating and 38.0 share; NBC an 8.2 rating and 33.0 share and ABC a 3.5 rating and 14.0 share.

All of the radio and television networks plan live coverage of the scheduled splashdown at 10:17 a.m. (EST) Thursday.

'Great Decisions' gets first cooperative effort

Six noncommercial television stations, the Foreign Policy Association and the Southern Educational Communications Association are cooperating to produce and distribute a series of eight half-hour programs on foreign policy entitled Great Decisions...1969.

The producing stations are WGTW (TV) Athens, University of Georgia; WYES-TV New Orleans; WSJK-TV Sneedville, Tenn., University of Tennessee; WJCT (TV) Jacksonville, Fla.; and the ETV networks of South Carolina and North Carolina. Southern Educational, a regional alliance of noncommercial stations, will dub the tapes and distribute them to 76 stations in 14 Southeastern states for broadcast during February and March.

The Foreign Policy Association has sponsored the Great Decisions series for 15 years. The series in the past has been produced by a single station or by the National Educational Television Network.

Benedict takes the 'boo' out of children's TV

There's no future any more on television in frightening kids. That's the opinion of 32-year-old Tony Benedict, who works in an industry that has made a profitable thing out of presenting superhero action-adventure programing. Mr. Benedict is an artist, writer and producer of cartoons. He is president of Tony Benedict Productions Inc., Sherman Oaks, Calif.

"There's quite a difference between nonhumorous violence now shown on children's television programs and that portrayed by fantasy characters," he says. "The fantasy creations always seem to bounce back. There's never a finality or death in their lives. The poor cat always comes back for more punishment from the mouse or a plummeting dog bounces like a rubber ball and continues his wild pursuit of the cat. It's one big chase and no permanent damage."

Mr. Benedict's views on the diminishing returns of violence in children's programing is reflected in his current production, a one-hour television special scheduled for release later this year. An original story based on a Christmas theme, the program, A Yellowstone Christmas, was conceived by Mr. Benedict in 1965. Now, almost four years later, more than 50 artists and animators are creating some 70,000 individual drawings for the combination live-action and animation film. Currently the special is about 30% completed. It's aimed at prime-time network presentation in time for Christmas this year.

According to Mr. Benedict, who formerly worked for Walt Disney productions, the entire nature of TV cartoons is likely to change. "Animation is no longer an infant," he points out. "It's a mature industry with facets reflecting entertainment, education, art and the sciences."

Galveston CATV to give weather buffs a treat

Some citizens like all-night movies on TV, but citizens of Galveston, Tex., are going to be able to see a 24-hour radar weather watch, courtesy of the local cable TV system there.

Coastal Community TV Inc., which plans to inaugurate full service next week, will devote a single, exclusive channel for a continuous, 24-hour-a-day radar weather report direct from the Weather Bureau post in that often storm-wracked city.

With the addition of special equipment both at the meteorological office and at the CATV's headend, Galveston CATV customers will be able to see the actual radarscope superimposed over a map of the Galveston area, with information and explanations penciled in on the display device. The special equipment, which maintains the persistence of the radar information for up to 15 minutes at a time, has been built by ITT for both the Weather Bureau and the CATV system. The apparatus at the headend cost the CATV operator $7,500.

Coastal Community TV, whose president is former southwestern broadcaster Lester Kamins, started partial operation last December. The 110-mile 12-channel system passes in front of 25,000 homes and is due for completion March 21. It will deliver to subscribers six TV signals (five Houston and one Galveston), plus a standard weather-time channel and a local public service channel, as well as the radar channel. Also being considered is the use of another channel for the local public school system, according to George E. Barry, general manager of Coastal Community.

FCC asked to deny FM grant to Pacifica

The admittedly anti-Semitic poem and commentary broadcast earlier this year over Pacifica Foundation's WBAI(FM) New York (Broadcasting, Feb. 3 et seq.) have provoked another demand for reprisal against the licensee. The National Educational Foundation Inc. petitioned the FCC to deny Pacifica's application for a noncommercial FM authorization in Washington. NEF, formerly named Christ Church Foundation Inc. and still church-affiliated, is also seeking an educational FM grant in that city.

The foundation argued that WBAI's broadcasts of material, acknowledged by the station to be anti-Semitic, fall outside the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and press, because they represent a "violation of that standard of justice protected by the Constitution... and... a violation of international standards of justice...."

Specifically, NEF said, the broadcasts advocated a crime—homicide and genocide. The poem, said to have been written by a 15-year-old black high-school girl, contained the line: "You pale-faced Jew boy, I wish you were dead." On another broadcast, a black guest on a WBAI discussion program said of Hitler's program to exterminate the Jews: "He didn't make enough lampshades out of them."

The foundation also charged that "the objectionable programing of Pacifica" helps to produce a "fractionalized constituency in which one con-

Praises flow for Nixon performance

Critics cite candor, mastery of medium at hour-long televised news conference

With only seven weeks in office and three televised news conferences behind him, President Richard M. Nixon seems to have obliterated completely the old, tenacious image of a man ill at ease with the electronic media. A sampling of comments on last week's live, hour-long news conference showed only isolated expressions of disapproval: most ranged from the laudatory to the near-reverent, adding color and detail to the emerging picture of "the new Nixon." The presidential news conference was carried by all networks at 9 p.m. EST on Tuesday, March 4.

Some reactions:

- Washington Star: "... confident, masterful... he has shed any qualms about television he may have harbored during the campaign."

- Max Frankel, New York Times: "rendered with a remarkable degree of candor..."

- Robert J. Donovan, Los Angeles Times: "a masterful exposition of American aspirations and difficulties in the world."

- Tom Leach, Chicago's American ("open letter to Nixon"): "You had a good thing so far with your televised press conferences, so it bothers me to see you ruin it like you did last night. Those extra-long, night-time sessions have to go."

- Washington Post: "... you had to admire the craft of his performance. It is one of the ironies of the situation that the President, for all that he declines to answer questions from time to time on the ground that the press constituency of broadcaster hates the other. ..." This amounts to "incite- ment to racial prejudice," which in turn fosters civil disorders, NEF said. "Fundamentally, there are certain situations where 'fairness' is irrelevant," NEF said. "Advocacy of a crime is one of these."

The foundation's original application for an educational FM construction permit was denied last year when the commission ruled that, as "Christ Church Foundation Inc.," it was not an educational group but a religious one, and therefore ineligible for a non-commercial grant under existing FCC rules. In an attempt to meet commission objections, the foundation reapplied, under its present name, but the FCC ruled that NEF was still fundamentally a religious group and still ineligible (Broadcasting, Dec. 2, 1968). The foundation has since petitioned for reconsideration of that decision.

The commission granted license renewal to Pacifica stations KPFA(FM) and KPFB(FM) both Berkeley, Calif., and KPFK(FM) Los Angeles on Feb. 28 (Broadcasting, March 3). The stations have been the target of complaints from listeners who charged that their programing was one-sided, advocated "open warfare in the streets," and contained obscene language.

Commenting on the complaints, the commission cited its previous response to similar charges against the stations. It said that, while "such provocative programing... may offend some listeners... this does not mean that those offended have the right, through the commission's licensing power, to rule such programing off the airwaves. Were this the case, only the wholly offensive, the bland, could gain access to the radio microphone or TV camera."

BROADCASTING, March 10, 1969 66C
NAB again offers convention reports

Radio and TV stations wanting audio fill-ins of the happenings during the National Association of Broadcasters convention, March 23-26, will again be able to get them via telephone.

For the second year NAB will prepare two audio feeds a day during the four-day Washington convention. In addition, advance news reports about what will happen at the convention will be available March 22. The audio reports will be fed via Spotmaster cartridge equipment. Number for the audio service is (202) 234-7522.

NAB President Vincent Wasilewski (l) and Jack Neff, president of Broadcast Electronics, manufacturer of Spotmaster equipment, discuss the technical set-up of the convention audio news service.

New Marks-Kaplan firm to syndicate 16 films

The formation of Markap Television Corp., New York, a TV production and distribution company, was announced last week by Brad Marks and Cy Kaplan, partners in the new firm. The company already has placed into syndication a package of 16 features called "Initial Entry," Titles include "To Die in Madrid"; "Albert Schweitzer"; "The Witness"; "Mondo Cane"; "Face of Fear"; "Don't Lose Your Head"; "The Great British Train Robbery." The package already has been sold to WNAV-TV Boston; CKLW-TV Windsor, Ont.; WDIV-TV Detroit; WGR-TV Buffalo, N. Y.; WPHT-TV Philadelphia; WPCH-TV Pittsburgh and KEMO-TV San Francisco. In addition, Markap has entered into an agreement with the Los Angeles-based Winters-Rosen Distribution Corp. to serve as W-R's eastern sales representative. Markap will handle such new W-R syndicated series as the daily 90-minute, Zsa Zsa Gabor Show; the weekly half-hour Barbara McNair Show; the daily half-hour Juvenile Court drama series; the Monday-through-Friday half-hour Slim Scene series of mod physical-exercise programs and the Buck Owens Show, 78 half-hours of country-western music.

Mr. Marks previously headed his own company, Brad Marks Enterprises, and earlier served in executive capacity for for Independent Television Corp., the Reade Organization and Walt Disney Productions. Mr. Kaplan has been vice president of National Telefilm Associates for the past year and previously was a sales executive with Embassy Pictures, ITC, United Artists Television and RKO General.

Markap makes its headquarters at 515 Madison Avenue, New York. Phone (212) 355-0900.

Film production draws Lee Rich from Burnett

Lee Rich, who left television film production less than two years ago convinced that there's no room in the industry for independent program producers, has formed a new film production company, Lorimer Productions in Beverly Hills, Calif. But in resigning from Leo Burnett Co., Chicago, to form his new company of which he is president (see page 10), Mr. Rich made it clear that "my basic aim is not to do television." Instead, the veteran advertising agency executive primarily will produce motion pictures. He has purchased the movie rights to two books, "The Sporting Club," a first novel; and "Fuzz," a detective-adventure novel by Ed McBain, and is in negotiation with several studios on both books.

Still, Mr. Rich is considering producing some TV specials and reportedly is talking about doing three series for NBC-TV and two series for CBS-TV. "I'll do television under the proper conditions," he told BROADCASTING last week. "I'll not do deficit-financing television production under any circumstances. I've been through that."

New series: 'The Game Game'

CBS Enterprises has placed into syndication a half-hour, daily series, titled The Game Game, in which three celebrities compete with a nonecelbrity in questions dealing with human relations. The series is produced by Chuck Barris Productions, Hollywood, in association with CBS Enterprises.

Ralph Baruch, vice president and general manager of CBS Enterprises, last week told a news conference at which the series was announced that The Game Game has been sold in a number of major markets. Details will be announced shortly. The series will go on the air in the fall.

Cap Cities gives Pope copy of TV special

A copy of the one-hour TV special The Secret of Michelangelo: Every Man's Dream, has been presented to Pope Paul VI at a special papal audience in the Vatican.

The program, produced by Milton Fruchtman of Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp., was telecast over ABC-TV Dec. 5, 1968. It will be rebroadcast on Easter, April 6 (7-8 p.m., EST).

The film, based on Michelangelo's fresco on the ceiling of the Vatican's Sistine Chapel, was presented to the Pope by Archbishop Philip M. Hannan of New Orleans, episcopal chairman of the communications committee, U. S. Catholic Conference. It will become part of the permanent collection of the Vatican museum as a historical document.

The film is the first visual record of the complete Sistine ceiling. It was made possible by a specially designed camera, placed on a platform atop a 64-foot scaffolding to cover the 5,599 square foot fresco.

Program notes:

Soulful special • Metromedia Producers Corp. will produce a one-hour special on singer Aretha Franklin for telecast next fall.

Science-fiction series • Star Trek, comming off NBC-TV at the conclusion of the current season, will be placed in domestic syndication by Paramount Television, producer and distributor of the series. The package will include 79 episodes of the science-fiction series, which will have had a three-year network run.

Speedway telecast • For the sixth consecutive year, MCA TV on May 30 will present a closed-circuit live telecast of the Indianapolis 500-mile race. More than 175 theaters and arenas in the U. S. and Canada are expected to take the feed.
Mariner 6 heading for TV close-ups of Mars

While all eyes are on the Apollo 9 astronauts, whose TV transmissions last week thrilled millions of televiewers on earth (see page 66B), another U. S. space craft was speeding to rendezvous with the planet Mars, 59.5-million miles away. It will transmit back to earth the closest look yet of the red planet.

Mariner 6 started its five-month journey on Feb. 24. A second Mariner, 7, is scheduled to be launched March 24, and it also will relay TV pictures back to earth. The pictures will be received at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goldstone, Calif., earth station, and transmitted from there to NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena, Calif.

Mariner 6 is expected to fly by Mars on line with the planet's equator July 31. Mariner 7 is programmed to pass Mars's southern polar cap on Aug. 5.

On board both Mariners are two TV cameras, one with wide-angle lens, the other with a narrow-angle lens. Both are expected to produce pictures that should be 10 times the resolution of those sent back by 1965's Mariner 4. The new pictures are expected to show objects on Mars that are less than 1,000 feet wide; the 1965 pictures only showed objects that were two miles or more wide. Also to be used with the cameras are red, blue and green filters to help bring out surface features, particularly the mysterious canals that were seen by early astronomers.

Using a slow-scan mode, the television cameras will take a black-and-white picture about once every 30 minutes on the approach, and about one per minute when the vehicle comes down to the 2,000-mile level.

Picture taking is scheduled to commence two days before the spacecraft reach their assigned 2,000 miles alongside the planet.

Hyde on land mobile, control of Intelsat

FCC Chairman Rosel H. Hyde provided a few startling observations regarding the current land-mobile furor which is under commission consideration in several inquiries by stating before the House Communications Subcommittee last week that "we don't have a crisis here that requires dislocation of services."

The remark was based on interim findings of the Stanford Research Institute, which has been conducting for the commission under a $500,000 contract a one-year study of methods to expand interservice spectrum sharing and to devise new frequency allocation techniques. The findings are to be made public within two weeks, the chairman said. And he speculated that there is going to be "far more sharing [of frequencies by services] in the future than ever before."

The chairman also dispelled fears expressed by Representative Harley O. Staggers (D-W. Va.), chairman of the House Commerce Committee, that American interests in the current international talks on an Intelsat consortium would be "traded-off for political reasons." "Our delegation is making a vigorous effort to protect American leadership in this effort," Chairman Hyde said. "America will be the manager of this system. Nothing has been indicated... at this conference that this management would be faded off."

Peacocks are prettier in many more homes

The sale of color TV receivers in January reached a new record, almost 27% over the same month in 1968, the Electronic Industries Association has reported in issuing preliminary figures for the first month of the year.

During the month, U. S. television set makers sold 914,160 color and black-and-white TV sets to dealers; this represents a 16.7% increase over January 1967.

Home radio sales for the month were up 3%, while auto radio sales jumped 24.2%. Total radio sales moved up by 14.2%.

Ampex boosts prices

Ampex Corp., Redwood City, Calif., has announced a general price increase of from 3% to 5% for its broadcast TV equipment. The price hike becomes effective May 5.

The explanation for the price jump is products, including video-tape recorders, disc recording system, cameras, transmitters, translators will be affected. The explanation for the price jump is that it reflects increasing labor and material costs.

Emmy finds new home on both coasts

For the first time in five years, the telecast of the annual Emmy Awards presentations will not originate from a banquet hall. Carnegie Hall in New York City and the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium in Santa Monica, Calif., have been chosen as the sites for this year's telecast, the 21st-annual one sponsored by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The telecast will be carried live and from both coasts on Sunday, June 8, over CBS-TV.

Last year's Emmy presentations originated live from the Hollywood Palladium in Los Angeles and the Americana hotel in New York City. Both places have banquet facilities. The new sites will have greater seating capacities than were formerly available to the television academy. The seating capacity of Carnegie Hall is 2,784, while the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium will accommodate 2,600 people.

The West Coast site became available when the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences decided to move this year's presentations of the Academy Awards to the Los Angeles Music Center Pavilion. For the last eight years, the Oscar ceremonies have been staged at the Santa Monica auditorium.

WMCA's free drive-time ads

In an effort to assist minority group-owned business firms, WMCA New York announced it will create and provide free advertising on the station for companies suggested by the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity.

Howard Klarman, vice president of the Strauss Broadcasting Group, of which WMCA is a part, said the first company to be selected in cooperation with ICBO is the Arthur J. Choice Fuel Co., Roosevelt, L. I., N. Y. WMCA will provide 36 commercials over a four-week period in prime drive-time periods and weekends. Strauss Broadcasting is considering the use of this approach on its other stations, including WLMF Middletown, WTLB Utica and WQF Geneva, all New York.

Metromedia dinner at NAB

Metromedia Radio has invited government leaders and broadcast executives to a reception and dinner during the National Association of Broadcasters convention on March 24. Songstress Dionne Warwick will perform.

William B. Williams, WNEW New York personality, will serve as emcee for the special performance, which will be recorded and broadcast as a half-hour presentation, initially on Metromedia's WASH (FM) Washington and subsequently on the company's other outlets (WIP Philadelphia, WHK Cleveland, WCBM Baltimore, KLAC Los Angeles, KNEW Oakland, and WNEW).

WIXY's legal trips

WIXY Cleveland's Lou (King) Kirby tools about town in a gold-flecked, monogrammed "Psy Cadillac" that could be the only one of its kind in radio TV. When not propelling Mr. Kirby to and from the studio for his drive-time disk jockey chores, the chauffeur-driven limousine is used to take listeners shopping or nightclubbing, to transport children to school or to 4-H meetings. Once it was used to rush a Cleveland woman to a maternity ward. Interior of the vehicle is decorated, with zebra skin and a white bear rug. Passengers are treated to comforts of AM-FM stereo, telephones, TV, colored interior lights that flash in tempo with the music and a liquid refreshment stand. Originally purchased from Standard Oil, the limousine was decorated for $11,000, according to the station.

ABC backs NARM educational project

The American Broadcasting Co.'s Inc. has established a perpetual scholarship on behalf of its record division and as part of the educational program of the National Association of Record Merchandisers. Speaking before a luncheon meeting of the 11th annual NARM convention in Los Angeles on March 1, ABC President Leonard H. Goldenson called for "exciting recruitment procedures to encourage young people to join our enterprise—to infuse new blood into our business mainstream."

Mr. Goldenson cited an on-the-job training program at ABC for young people as perhaps a step in the right direction towards welcoming the younger generation. "It is small at present," he said about the ABC program, "but there is no reason why it cannot be expanded. Our own internal results been most satisfactory, and we plan to increase our efforts as it suits our needs,” he said.

Agricultural ads receive plaudits

The National Agricultural Advertising and Marketing Association’s eastern chapter has presented awards for radio, television, print, direct mail and outdoor agricultural advertising.

Radio winners were Mobil Oil, through Wildrick & Miller, for a single commercial and Amchem Products Corp., through Wildrick & Miller, for a campaign. Southwest Potash Corp., through the same agency, and Pfizer, through Leo Burnett, received honorable mention.

New Holland Machine Co., through Telic Inc., was honored for the best single television commercial, and Geigy, through Cunningham & Walsh, received the television campaign award.

Promotion tips:

Northward expansion • Paramount Television reports that 13 Canadian TV stations have been added to its promotional slide service. Paramount TV has been providing weekly color slides to network affiliates in the U.S. which have been carrying its Mission: Impossible, Mannix and Star Trek series.

Hole in 281 strokes • How many strokes did it take Len Burkland, an air personality for KTAR Phoenix, to putt from the station to the Arizona Country Club, a distance of about eight miles? It took 281 strokes and the KTAR listener who came closest to predicting how many won a 1969 Plymouth Road Runner. The station called this promotion a “putt-in.” All day, Feb. 10, KTAR broadcast along-the-route progress reports of the contest at 10 minutes and 35 minutes past each hour until Mr. Burkland holed out.

Helping hand • A radio campaign that failed has provided Denver with its first police helicopter. This contrary turn of events started when Hal Davis, vice president and general manager of KHOW, decided to use helicopters in police work. With cooperation from the mayor’s office and the chief of police, Mr. Davis began a campaign to raise the initial cost for the first helicopter from the public. The campaign, however, did not progress satisfactorily, so KHOW suggested that it would purchase the helicopter and lease it to the city for $1 a year. Denver now has a Bell 47-G, three-passenger chopper, valued at $56,000. The helicopter will revert to KHOW when the city can afford to buy its own.

Broadcast graffiti • John Lennon, he of the naked pose on the record album, “has been seen hanging out in the wrong places.” So says a listener of KFEN(FM) San Francisco. The station is running a “golden graffiti” contest with winners receiving bottles of champagne. So far, 6,000 individual entries have poured in including: “Happiness is a warm poppy.”

Torsland • A new amusement center, to be called Torsland, will be constructed on 18 acres of land adjoining Ivan Tors Studios in North Miami, Fla. The Torsland concept will be to entertain visitors by demonstrating how ilusions and spectacular scenes are created for film and TV. The principal attraction will be trained animals. Film and TV producer Ivan Tors specializes in animal and undersea adventure stories.

Bears have upper hand in market

Stocks show 6.9% drop in February; RCA, Herald-Traveler, WRG on up side

Broadcasting stocks during February once again ran ahead of the general market trend—unfortunately, in an accelerating market decline. While the Standard and Poor Industrial Average slipped 5% in the period ended Feb. 28, the BROADCASTING index of selected stocks dipped an average of 6.9%.

All six categories recorded declines, with only six stocks in the entire index showing gains.

CATV stocks were off most sharply, with a 15.9% drop, and broadcasting-with-other-major-interests was close behind in the decline, with a 12.7% fall.

The large manufacturing stocks did best as a category, with an average slip of just under 5%. Purely broadcasting stocks slid 8.6%. Programing stocks slumped 9.2% and service stocks were down 8.2%.

Of the network stocks, ABC's 11% regression was viewed by market observers as representing a setback in its steady price climb of the past year. CBS's 5% dip paralleled that of the market average, while NBC-parent RCA turned in the best performance of any stock in the manufacturing category.

It was off only 1% as it reported record sales and earnings for 1968 (BROADCASTING, March 3).

Conglomerate stocks among the various categories generally suffered during the month's market activity: in the category of broadcasting-with-other-major-interests, Avco was down 18% and Fuqua 17%.

In the programing category, Gulf & Western was off 23% and Transamerica slumped 12%.

Among notable individual performers was Boston Herald-Traveler, in the broadcasting-with-other-major-interests category, up 10% as it began to rebound from the wave of selling that hit the month before in the wake of the FCC's WHDH-TV decision.

Merger activity apparently played a role in major moves within the programing category. Commonwealth United's 30% drop was at least in part laid to the increased competition it has received from Kinney Service Corp., in the bid to take over Warner Bros.-Seven Arts.

Meanwhile, W7 itself, appeared to have exhausted the long run of pre-merger bidding and slipped back 10%. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was up 7% as some heavy buying was underway from undisclosed sources and merger rumors began to circulate about it. Merger activity around 20th Century-Fox sent it up 22%, to make the production company the index's outstanding performer for the month.

The only service stock to show a gain was Wells, Rich, Greene. The ad agency enjoyed a 15% climb back from heavy end-of-the-year tax selling as it picked up several major accounts. At the same time, Papert, Koenig, Lois went into a 21% decline following two months of steep gains on the basis of its acquisition activity.

With this listing, the BROADCASTING index adds three firms: Post Corp. in the broadcasting-with-other-major-interests category; Columbia Cable Systems in CATV, and Visual Electronics in the manufacturing division. It also drops National Video following the manufacturer's declaration of bankruptcy (BROADCASTING, March 3).

Kinney clears the way for W7 acquisition

Kinney National Service Inc., New York, announced last week it has agreed to sell two subsidiaries, Ashley Famous Agency Inc. and London International, both talent agencies, to Marvin Josephson Associates Inc. for $12 million in cash.

Kinney National, a diversified company, had announced earlier it would divest itself of ownership in the talent agency field if its proposed acquisition of Warner Brothers-Seventh Arts Ltd. proved successful. The W7 board indicated several weeks ago it prefers Kinney's offer to one made by the Commonwealth United Corp. (BROADCASTING, March 3).

Marvin Josephson Associates is a talent agency with offices in New York and Los Angeles.

Warner Brothers-Seventh Arts issued a notice last week of its annual meeting, which will be held in the Royal York hotel in Toronto on March 27. An accompanying proxy statement said a detailed agreement on the proposed acquisition of the company is being prepared by its counsel and will be submitted to the boards of W7 and Kinney.

If approved, W7 will call a general meeting of its shareholders to vote on the Kinney offer.

One resolution to be considered at the annual meeting calls for the reduction in the number of members of the W7 board from 15 to 10 to achieve "greater expedition in handling company affairs."

The proxy statement listed the following total remuneration, including salary and profit sharing, to the six highest paid officers and directors for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1968: M. Kenneth Hyman, executive vice president, $259,436; Eliot Hyman, board chairman and chief executive officer, $258,505; Benjamin Kalmenson, president and chief operating officer, $56,000; Samuel H. Haims, vice president and treasurer, $114,584.

Also Alan J. Hirschfeld, financial vice president, $73,077 and Jack L. Warner, vice chairman of the board $53,000. In addition, Mr. Warner had deferred compensation of $106,000; Mr. Kalmenson, $52,000; Eliot Hyman, $4,000 and Mr. Haims, $2,400.

Financial notes:

* Cox Broadcasting Corp., last week announced purchase of the Kansas City Automobile Auction Co., Kansas City, Mo., for about $1 million cash. It is the second major acquisition in the auto auction field by the Atlanta-based group broadcaster. Last December Cox bought Manheim Auto Auction, operator of three eastern auctions, for $6 million (BROADCASTING, Dec. 2, 1968).

* National General Corp., Los Angeles, has announced that with Great American Holding Corp., New York, included as a consolidated subsidiary, gross income for the 13 weeks ended Dec. 24, 1968, was $105,094,000. Previously reported was $36,587,730, which was without the inclusion of GAH (BROADCASTING, Feb. 24). Net income of $2,671,000 or 62 cents per share remains unchanged.

* Commonwealth United Corp., Beverly Hills, active in TV production and syndication among other interests, and Rexall Drug & Chemical Co., Los Angeles, have approved an agreement whereby Commonwealth will pay $30 million cash plus 1.1 million shares of a new convertible preferred stock for the franchise and retail drug division of Rexall. The total purchase price, including cash and stock, is valued at $55 million.

- RCA has declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on common stock and 87.5 cents per share on $3.50 cumulative convertible preferred stock, both payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 13.

- Subscription Television Inc. announced last week that its stockholders had approved acquisition of Leach Corp., a closely held Pasadena, Calif., manufacturer of electronic parts for the aerospace industry. New York-based STV previously announced the transaction to buy Leach (Broadcasting, Sept. 9, 1968). The transaction is for 3,991,935 shares of STV's common stock, worth about $40 million. At the same time, STV stockholders also approved an increase in the authorized common stock of the company to 15 million shares from five million.

- Wometco Enterprises Inc., Miami, and entertainer Jackie Gleason have formed Jackie's International Inc. to own, operate and franchise a chain of family-type restaurants. WTVX(WTVX), Wometco's Miami outlet, has aided in the production of the CBS network Jackie Gleason Show since it began telecasting from Miami Beach in August 1964.

- Technicolor Inc., Hollywood, has announced purchase of Mecca Films Laboratories Corp., New York, television commercial processor, for an undisclosed amount of cash.

- Avco Corp. last week extended its offer for shares of Seaboard Finance Co., Los Angeles, until March 21. The tender offer, first announced last spring, originally was to expire Feb. 28. In January, Avco disclosed that its offer drew 85% of the consumer finance company's shares in exchange for two alternate packages of debentures or warrants. Avco's tender offer was valued at about $175 million.

- Stockholders of Oak Electro/Netics Corp., Crystal Lake, Ill., have approved the acquisition of Harper-Wyman Co., Hinsdale, Ill.-based producer of control devices for the appliance industry. OEN, which manufactures television tuners and other electronic components, will acquire Harper-Wyman for 440,000 shares of OEN stock.

Disney debentures sold out

Walt Disney Productions Inc.'s offering of $50-million worth of 5-year 5% convertible debentures (Broadcasting, Feb. 17) was reported over subscribed shortly after being offered. The debentures, which sold at $100, are convertible into Disney common stock on a sliding scale declining from an initial level of $105 for $100 face amount. The debenture proceeds will finance a new Disney complex at Orlando, Fla. The offering was handled by Lehman Brothers and Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Television Utilities plans public offering

Television Utilities Corp., Long Island City, N.Y., has filed a registration statement with Securities and Exchange Commission offering 120,000 shares for public sale through First Alabama Securities Inc., Montgomery, Ala.

The offering price is $5 per share maximum, which would bring to the company $600,000. Television Utilities has agreed to sell to First Alabama Securities, for $100, five-year warrants to purchase 10,000 shares.

Television Utilities designs, assembles, imports and distributes closed-circuit

Net proceeds of the sale will be used for purposes including increasing inventroy, developing new products and repaying loans, as well as for working capital.

The company has outstanding 206,-

400 shares, of which K. Alfred Jenkins, president and board chairman, owns 39%. Purchasers of the registered shares will acquire a 40% interest in the company.

Chris-Craft moves to buy Piper Aircraft

Chris-Craft Industries, boat manufacturer and group TV station owner, has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission seeking to offer 400,000 shares of 1969 series preferred stock and warrants to buy 400,000 common shares in exchange for 80,000 to 300,000 common shares of Piper Aircraft Corp.

The exchange offer, in the ratio of one share and one warrant for each share of Piper common, is being handled through Loeb, Rhoades & Co. and Shields & Co., both New York.

Chris-Craft, which already owns 547,-

106 shares, or 33.36%, of Piper common, acquired 304,516 shares through a tender offer made in January, at $65 per share. However, the offer was opposed by Piper’s management, which subsequently announced that Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp. had agreed to purchase 300,000 shares at the same price. Chris-Craft has filed a court action, alleging that Grumman’s acquisition of the Piper shares would violate federal antitrust laws.

If the exchange offer is successful, Chris-Craft intends to combine its business with that of Piper.

Chris-Craft has 1,505,474 shares outstanding, Herbert J. Siegel is president and board chairman.

The Chris-Craft stations are KCOPE-

(TV) Los Angeles; KPTV(TM) Portland, Ore., and WTCN-TV Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Trans-Lux drops Fox tender offer

Trans-Lux Corp., a relatively modest entertainment and communications company, last week abandoned its recently announced plan to make a tender offer to stockholders of 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., a major producer and distributor of theatrical films and TV programming (BROADCASTING, March 3).

Richard Brandt, president of Trans-Lux, said last week that “in view of changing market conditions, the board of directors of Trans-Lux decided to discontinue preparations for making an exchange offer” to 20th Century-Fox stockholders. Mr. Brandt also announced that the Trans-Lux board had declared a regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share, payable March
Nearly all Metromedia holders approve merger

The proposed merger of Metromedia and Transamerica by an exchange of stock, valued at $300 million at the time of announcement last October, has been approved by Metromedia stockholders.

The approval was voted at a brief special meeting on Feb. 28 in New York, with ballots cast in favor of the proposal by 99.7% of the stockholders who voted their shares at the meeting. Their holdings represented approximately 84% of all outstanding common stock. Under terms of the merger agreement, Metromedia stockholders receive 1.5 shares of Transamerica's common for each share of Metromedia common.

The merger proposal, placed in the hands of the FCC in January 1969 when a filing was made seeking transfer of control of 17 Metromedia stations, must have a favorable tax ruling of the Internal Revenue Service in addition to FCC approval. The cut-off date to the merger is a year off—March 1, 1970.

The stockholder vote was cast against a background of impressive earnings and revenues reported by the company a few weeks earlier. The annual report showed a climb in 1968 of $1.2 million in net income, or seven cents in share earnings over 1967, and an increase of more than $28 million in gross revenues.

Atlanta's WAGA-TV cuts film processing costs in half with Pako

"We used to pay 6c a foot for outside film processing," said Bill Buckler, chief news photographer at WAGA-TV, Georgia's leading color station. "But with our Pako 28EK Cine Processor, we've cut our costs in half."

"In the first 12 weeks with our 28EK, we processed nearly 177,000 feet of film at about half of outside cost — including overhead," he added.

"Everything our Pako Distributor, Treck Photographic of Atlanta, said it would do, it does—and does it very well," Bill continued. "It's fast, dependable, and the quality is excellent... all the time."

See your Pako Distributor or write Pako Corporation for more information about the Model 28EK Cine Processor.

BROADCASTING, March 10, 1969

92 (FOR THE RECORD)
Late-late viewers lately may have come across, and network-movie followers may recall, a 1953 release titled “Des-\nation Gobi,” starring Richard Widmark. They are hereby advised that the movie was based on a real-life World War II secret mission of an intelligence/sabotage outfit called SACO, featuring if not starring Edward M. Cramer, now rounding out his first year as president of Broadcast Music Inc.

Mr. Cramer looks back on the SACO adventure—a year-and-a-half stint in China, often behind Japanese lines and sometimes worse yet between warring Chinese factions—as a unique and, in the safe light of retrospect, sometimes pretty funny experience, but not terribly pertinent except that it gave him his first contact with radio communication—he was the outfit’s communications officer.

SACO is worth a quick look, however, for background on the man who now heads the performing-rights organization that licenses over half of all music played on radio and probably half of that on television, not to mention music in night clubs, movies, other gathering places as diverse as concert halls, skating rinks, circuses and football games.

SACO stands for Sino-American cooperative organization. Mr. Cramer, then in the Navy, was picked to “volunteer” for it, but the duty was so secret nobody would tell him what it was. He volunteered anyway, and discovered that SACO was a joint Chinese-American command in China. It operated completely independent of all other armed forces, and it had three principal missions: to gather and transmit information on weather along the Chinese coast, in a respect being a kind of land-based forerunner of the “U.S.S. Pueblo”; to train Chinese guerrillas and to conduct espionage and sabotage against the Japanese.

SACO men wore no uniforms or insignia and were liable to execution if captured. When not ranging up and down the coast, spying and sabotaging, cursing the food (American food was off-limits to SACO) and trying to outsmart both the enemy and the U. S. Army (which was not supposed to know what they were doing), Mr. Cramer and associates encountered other excitements, such as being pinned down by cross-fire between two Chinese bands fighting for a cave stocked with money. They overcame that last problem by improvising and hoisting an American flag very hurriedly—as hurriedly, that is, as possible under a meticulous commanding officer who insisted, despite the shelffire all around, that each star of the flag be given five precise points.

Mr. Cramer is himself a meticulous man, but not that meticulous. Not surprisingly, given the SACO background, he has a certain degree of toughness. This quality was perhaps most tellingly displayed a few months ago when he negotiated the biggest increase in radio music-license rates in BMI history: a contract that could raise BMI’s revenues as much as 26%, or $2.1 million a year, over a five-year span (BROADCASTING, Dec. 2, 1968).

Mr. Cramer achieved that contract not by toughness alone but also by convincing radio-station representatives that radio’s use of BMI music has increased to the point—about 55% of all music on radio—where the higher rate is justified (especially since they are still lower than those charged by BMI’s only major competitor, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers).

Mr. Cramer and associates could also cite need as a reason for higher fees, because BMI not only has been successful but is one of those rare organizations where success can be disastrous. The more its music is played the higher the royalty payments it must make; when income is fixed and out-go keeps rising, the squeeze can become pretty tight.

But writers and publishers, who get the royalties, are BMI’s stock in trade, and Mr. Cramer intends to build the stock, not let it be squandered. That does not necessarily mean he will now seek to increase BMI’s TV-station rates. He acknowledges that broadcasters currently and historically contribute the major share—some sources estimate 85% to 90%—of BMI’s revenues. But that, he notes, is because many are not paying anything: juke boxes, for instance, and educational stations and cable-TV operations, among others. Assuming a reasonable resolution of basic copyright issues—currently still hung up in Congress—he expects all these and other users to pay a fair price.

Although he was not widely known among broadcasters when he became BMI president, Mr. Cramer has been intimately identified with BMI as a lawyer since 1953. He was a key figure in representing the organization in all major congressional, FCC and court proceedings throughout that 15-year span, and he also played a leading role negotiating the consent decree that terminated an antitrust suit against BMI in 1966.

In his first year in office he has spent about 25% of his time traveling to get better acquainted with broadcasters and other music users and to visit BMI branch offices in (Hollywood, Chicago, Miami, Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, B. C., plus Nashville, which he regards not as a branch but as an extension of the New York head- quarters) and to strengthen BMI’s ties in Europe (where it has affiliations with more than 30 performing-rights societies). He’s not at home as much as he used to be, but he still tries to reserve a night a week for tennis with his family when he is not on the road. He does a lot of concert-going, too, but that is not new. He says he likes virtually all kinds of music (“I’m not saying this to be tactful”), but more than the diversity of his own tastes, however, he values the diversity of music itself. It’s a diversity that BMI can claim prime credit for developing.

The diversity of its music is to him one of BMI’s biggest strengths, both now and for the future: “When people say ‘they’re playing our song,’ they’re not talking about Irving Berlin any more. No, they’re talking about the contemporary sound in music—the music that’s represented by, say, the Beatles. It’s going to be even more so in the future. And BMI has the contemporary sound.”

Minisots, maxiproblems?

By last October, according to the latest figures from the Television Bureau of Advertising, 53.3% of all brand announcements on television were in the 30-second length, either piggybacked or isolated. Obviously the 30 has replaced the 60 as the standard unit for TV advertisers, and although broadcasters still sell more 60-second positions, the trend in selling free-standing 30's is growing rapidly—and so, recently, has been the concern of many broadcasters about where it all will lead.

Their fear is that, as 60's were first broken into 30-30's, so next will the 30 be broken into 15-15, 10-20 or even 10-10-10 combinations—and once that happened, what next? Mathematically, the ultimate would have to be subliminal advertising, and although that seems an unlikely result, it is at least the direction in which the trends have been running. Already more and more advertisers are putting two products into a single 30.

Meanwhile, we have been hearing more and more complaints that "too many commercials" are making TV hard to watch. We are not speaking of the critics who have always made this complaint, but of people in television who are confessing it privately, usually in reference to a few specific programs—notably movies, both network and local.

We have no way of knowing whether there is a relationship between fractionalization and complaint, and that fact, we think, describes the whole basic problem. There is a great need for thorough research, to learn whether "over-commercialism" exists in the minds of viewers generally and, if it does, to define it and so far as possible determine where it begins to occur. Absent that research, broadcasters can only ask themselves whether their commercial acceptance and scheduling policies are in their viewers'—and hence their own—best interests.

These times

As this is written Apollo 9 is in orbit in the latest feat of man's conquest of space. So far it has worked like a charm and hopefully will end that way in Thursday's scheduled splashdown.

Last week President Richard Nixon became the first head of state ever to be covered by satellite television, in color, on his eight-day whirlwind visit to five Western European countries. He topped it off 48 hours after his return with a 55-minute prime-time news conference.

During these events there were other happenings swirling about the mass media—mainly television. There were reports, hearings and comments on violence, real or imagined, on nit-picking about programming generally, on fairness and political coverage. All attested the importance of the broadcast media. Simply by talking about TV politicians get attention.

There was also another communications development in Washington. It attracted practically no attention because it had neither glamour nor excitement. The International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium is meeting at the call of the State Department. Its job is to try to establish a permanent organization to implement a global satellite-communications system. As always, the Soviet Union is a nonmember, trailed by 22 other "observer" countries in its sphere of influence. All are being implored to join in a "single global system" to control the allocations, design, equipment and traffic in space. Intelsat has 67 members.

What does Intelsat mean in this age in which we live?

Leonard Marks, communications attorney, director of the United States Information Agency under President Johnson, and now head of the U. S. delegation, in his keynote defined it this way:

"I can think of no more important step we can take toward reducing world tension than that of broadening the communications links between powerful nations representing different political systems."

And so it is. Our broadcasters are pilloried in the loose talk of the politicians for giving our people the kind of programming they want. Eavesdropping on these expletives are the representatives of nearly 100 nations who admire our expertise, who buy those same entertainment programs because their audiences like the action too, and who also witnessed in full color (many of them for the first time) the remarkable coverage, by satellite, of the Nixon European mission. Small wonder then that they find it hard to understand how American politicians can threaten television one day and embrace it the next.

The investigation of TV violence was played up and will get at least as much attention for some time. But the Intelsat deliberations, to implement advances of science and technology that involve the fate of new generations, go practically unnoticed.

Backfire

During a recent social evening with friends outside the business, a broadcaster we know was told that the anti-smoking messages now seen on television were certainly effective. As one guest put it: "Those American Cancer Society commercials are good, and I'm glad television is using so many of them." As an afterthought he added: "I guess you must be making a lot of money out of them."

Pow! as Tom Wolfe would write. Smack in the kisser.

Maybe broadcasters would be smart to accompany every antismoking spot in all that free time with an audio or visual announcement that it is being carried at the broadcasters' own expense in response to a government order that is unique in advertising history.
There are currently six television stations in Houston ... and 19 color television cameras. The unusual fact is that eight of these color cameras are owned by KPRC-TV. Couple them with the South's finest live, tape and film production facilities; add the new five-van remote unit shown here and the experienced men who operate them and you have the makings of maximum versatility and efficiency ... and uncommon ability!

NBC takes advantage of this set-up regularly by contracting with KPRC-TV to pick up such events as baseball and football games from the Astrodome, space coverage from NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center and, last November, sent us to Montgomery, Alabama, for election night coverage from the George Wallace headquarters.

With such network caliber remote equipment as five color chains, three 18-to-1 zoom lenses, high-band videotape, a 50kw portable generator and a Videograph, it's no wonder that KPRC-TV gets the difficult assignments.

KPRC-TV has the machines and the manpower to produce anything you can devise. Or, to say it another way, KPRC-TV can produce quality television programs or commercials at affordable prices! Give us a try ... Call Paul Huhndorff, Operations Manager, at 713/622-2950, for complete details.
