Candidate
One of hopefuls for FCC seat now held by Margita White, Katherine (Kay) Eriksson Sassieville of Minnesota is gathering support from prominent Minnesotans in Washington. So far she has been endorsed by Senator Wendell Anderson (D), who as Minnesotans governor appointed her twice to her current post on state Public Service Commission, and Representatives Bill
Frenzel (R), Donald Fraser (D), Thomas Hagedorn (R) and Albert Quie (R). She also expects help from Vice President
Walter Mondale.
Backimg from Democrats reflects her liberal philosophy. She is member of Ripon Society and National Women's Political Caucus, latter group having first contacted her about possible opening if
Mrs. White is not appointed when her FCC term expires June 30. Mrs. Sassieville has had no indication from White House about her chances. In Washington recently, she paid courtesy call on FCC Chairman Charles Ferris.

Runner-up
Gannett wasn't only bidder for Combined Communications Corp., which agreed last week to merge into newspaper chain (see page 26). In fortnight before that deal was announced, Larry Israel, former president of Washington Post Co. and Post-Newswark Stations, talked with CCC principals about offer on behalf of unidentified investors of $45 a share for CCC's outstanding stock - package worth roughly $315 million. Gannett merger is pegged at $370 million.
Although interests Mr. Israel was representing in CCC offer aren't known, he is associated with principals of Coca Cola Bottling Co. of New York in ownership of WJXTtv) Syracuse, N.Y., acquired last year. He's scouting for media properties.

Their own people
Commerce Department's new National Telecommunications and Information Administration has moved to establish its independence of White House in matters not rising to presidential level. When domestic policy staffer Rick Neustadt sent over suggested agenda for action (based on conversation with NTIA officials), Henry Geller, who is to head NTIA, and his aides considered it, then sent it back with agenda of their own. Although number of items on both were same, NTIA officials say exercise was useful in demonstrating agenda they follow is their own, not White House's. One general difference, according to one who has seen both, is that White House is looking for short-term "political" payoffs, while NTIA wants to invest resources in long-range issues.

Mr. Neustadt, who reportedly took rebuff with good grace, did not get very far, either, when he asked NTIA to look into matter of public service announcements
- whether they were effective and appropriate for government use and whether ground rules should be established for broadcast carriage. NTIA said it lacked resources for that project and that, in any case, subject was outside its mission.

Re-counting the house
NBC-TV's estimate that audience of 120 million was attracted by miniseries,
Holocaust, is under review by A.C.
Nielsen at network's request. Preliminary reappraisal puts cumulative households watching some part of Holocaust at 47 million. That figure multiplied by average viewer-household standard equals 95-million audience, but NBC researchers think Nielsen will find viewing per household to be abnormally high for show and that ultimate estimate will be not too far from 120 million.

Growing kitty
Participation by broadcasters in World
Press Freedom Committee efforts to resist Soviet and Third World nations that espouse controlled press (and now censor broadcast output) has won plaudits of directing heads of voluntary group.
Chairman is George Beebe, on leave as associate publisher of Knight-Ridder's Miami Herald, and secretary-treasurer is Leonard Marks, Washington attorney and former head of United States Information Agency.

Roughly half-million dollars has been contributed since drive began last year.
Bonneville of Salt Lake City has put in $25,000; National Association of Broadcasters and Mutual Broadcasting System, $10,000 each. Biggest contributor - all broadcast-connected - are Gannett, $100,000; Knight-Ridder,
Time Inc. and Scripps Howard, $50,000 each; Washington Post Co. and Newhouse, $25,000 each.

Slow pay
Six and a half years after U.S. Media International, media buying firm, went bankrupt, settlement is reportedly in sight for suits and countersuits. Some $2.5 million in receivables has been collected.
After secured lenders have been paid, about $1.3 million (30 cents on dollar) will be available to creditors, it's said. U.S.

Media listed liabilities of $8 million and assets of $4 million when it went broke (BROADCASTING, Oct. 18, 1971).

Reinforcement
Still holding strong against premature release of Communications Act rewrite draft, House Communications Subcommittee is preparing for inevitable flood of inquiries when it finally opens spillway in June (subcommittee chairman, Lionel Van Deering [D-Calif.], is still shooting for introduction of bill June 1).
Chief move will be to import one of Mr.
Van Deering's former Washington legislative assistants, John McLaren, who now works in congressman's San Diego office, for week to handle press on rewrite release. Extra help was requested by subcommittee counsel, Harry M. (Chip) Shooshan, who says he won't have time to take questions because he and rest of subcommittee staff will be writing another opus to explain draft bill.

Buying mood
Arbitron Co., New York, heavy into television and radio audience research, is seeking acquisitions to put it into magazine research and more heavily into computerized broadcast billing business (latter acquisition would be integrated into Arbitron's Station Business Systems, already in that field). Theodore Shaker, president, is heading acquisition activity.

Noise abatement
Committee for UHF Broadcasting may have lost ground in FCC's new proceedings on proposals to require manufacturers to reduce UHF TV receiver noise level below 14 db (see page 52).
Commission officials say manufacturers produced new and apparently persuasive evidence of difficulties in even reaching 14 db level. As result, some officials are said to feel that, in case of black and white sets, manufacturers would need six months to year beyond 18 months already planned to meet 14 db level.

Wald report
Tougher, less bland, more provocative treatment of news and public affairs on Public Broadcasting Service: That's main recommendation of former NBC News President Richard C. Wald in report to be unveiled to PBS's program committee on May 19. Mr. Wald, who has since joined executive staff of Los Angeles Times-Mirror Co. (BROADCASTING), April 3 was retained as consultant at PBS at year's end at $180 per diem.

These are some of the people to ask when you have questions about Gulf.

Finding, producing and transporting energy are complicated jobs. Sometimes the reasons we do things one way instead of another, or do one thing instead of another, aren't clear to anybody outside the business.

But the people and the press have a right to know what we're doing and how it will affect them. So Gulf Oil Corporation has an elaborate system for supplying answers to questions about our company. The people in the picture are just a few of the people who are in charge of Gulf Public Affairs offices in various parts of the country.

Below there is a list of names and phone numbers of the Gulf people to call when you need information.

We hope you'll use the system, because probably one of the most important challenges we have to meet is maintaining a free and open dialogue with the press.

GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY AWARDS FOR
"ROOTS" AND "GREEN EYES"

The ABC Television Network is proud that two of our recent presentations merited the highest honor our industry can achieve. The University of Georgia’s George Foster Peabody Award. "Roots," based on Alex Haley’s monumental saga of the triumph of an American family made all of us more deeply aware of our heritage.

The ABC Theatre presentation "Green Eyes" was a deeply moving drama which showed how a young veteran’s desperate search for the son he left behind in Vietnam led him to the most precious kind of love there is.

ABC is grateful to all of the men and women who helped create both of these outstanding presentations.

Next best to being there

EDITOR: In my opinion the report on the National Association of Broadcasters convention in the April 17 issue of BROADCASTING was outstanding. As you well know, it is absolutely impossible for any one human being to attend all of the scheduled and nonscheduled meetings, and still have enough time to devote to the exhibits. By reading the BROADCASTING report I was able to pick up on what I missed.

Incidentally, this issue is being circulated as required reading to all of our management personnel. — A. James Ebel, president and general manager, KOLN-TV Lincoln, Neb.

Don't take it lying down

EDITOR: I would hope broadcasters don't sit back and let performer royalties go through like lowest unit rate and cigarettes. Take time and speak up.—John A. Goeman, general manager, KJAM-AM-FM Madison, S.D.

Biting the hand

EDITOR: "Commercial-free hour," "No commercials on Sunday." "Only six units per hour." "Twenty percent fewer commercials."

All of the preceding are claims currently being made by area radio stations. We at WQA detect an alarming trend, and we are circulating a letter to all advertising agencies in our area to assert that for we one are proud to air the commercial portion of our programming. We view the commercials we carry as a continuation of the information service we provide.

Training the audience to dislike, avoid or consider commercials as a negative is not the path to success.—Herbert M. Levin, vice president-general manager, WQBA/AM Miami.

Remote possibility

EDITOR: I have just concluded a four-year battle with the telephone company over remote lines, finally winning after carrying it all the way to the FCC. The outcome is interesting to all broadcasters who utilize telephone loops for remote broadcasts.

We broadcast the annual July 4 celebration in a town four miles away, but loops have to go 15 miles from there to a large city, then 19 miles back to our town and then to the station. Since events there take place at four separate locations, we ask each year for one loop from here to the central office (CO) there, and then a branch line to each of the four locations. The phone people said no dice. We would have to rent a separate line all the way for each location, and pay long distance charges on each loop all the way from the station to the remote location. No branching.

To make a shorter story, the commission ordered them to provide either branching at the CO of origination, or to provide one line from the destination CO to one of the locations and run additional pairs from that point to the other three locations and let us switch the connections ourselves, and save the switching charges.

There is a precedent there for anyone with a similar problem.—Dale Brooks, president, WLAB/AM St. Pauls, N.C.

NOW SAILING INTO ITS SECOND BIG YEAR!
Eight advertising lessons for taking back to school

In September 1943, at the height of World War II, the United States Army sent me and a group of other 18-year-olds to Syracuse University as part of the Army Specialized Training Program (ASTP). Sixty days later the program was disbanded and we were reassigned as instant infantrymen. Thirty-five years later to the month, I'll be returning to the same school as a faculty member.

For such a long-term dropout, I had to ask myself just what tickets was I bringing to the ball game?

Well, for one thing, I had been fortunate in the path my career had taken: Vick Chemical had supplied some basics; Johnson & Johnson had offered breadth; at Xerox, I'd learned what high standards of excellence could mean. In addition, I'd had a taste of the agency business as a copywriter on Brylcreem and other proprietaries.

At Syracuse, the first course I'll be teaching is called TVR 695: Television Principles and Practices. Among many things I propose to propound for the students are Olesen's Eight Easy Axioms. These are based upon some seldom-recognized truths not generally to be found in standard textbooks on television.

- Easy Axiom Number One: The "commercially acceptable" is unacceptable. It is always better to run over budget to gain top quality and superb results than it is to save $6,000 or so and achieve mediocrity. Important people will break down your door with congratulations to tell you that your new TV commercial has sent shelf movement through the roof in the Phoenix test market. They will not charge in to tell you that sales are so-so, but that you did an absolutely wonderful job in coming in under budget. Top quality is obtained only by meticulous attention to every detail—casting, editing, color correction, you name it. The budget, too. Anything less than this is intolerable.

- Easy Axiom Number Two: There is always new ground to be broken. Look at Coke and Pepsi. After all, they're two similar cola drinks. No healing qualities. No new ingredients. What is there to say about them that everybody doesn't already know? And yet, year after year McCann-Erickson and BBDO do the brightest, freshest, most with-it commercials imaginable. They top each other, and frequently everybody else, constantly. Corollary: There will always be an imitator. Second corollary: Don't follow fads, start them.

- Easy Axiom Number Three: The best practitioners do. And do. The really great people in the TV business do not sniff around work. Or nit-pick it. They simply do not talk about the fantastic program they want to do "some day," the sensational commercial they plan to write. They just go ahead and do these things. Somehow. Mostly by hard work. The best writers write, and write some more. This same characteristic is true of virtually all the top men and women in broadcasting.

- Easy Axiom Number Four: Top people are to be treasured. After all, there are so few. And there are so many also-rans. You can recognize the top ones because they're always asking "How can I do it better?" Without exception they never give a client what he wants or expects; they give him more than he could have hoped for or dreamed of.

- Easy Axiom Number Five: Good work never wears out. Bad work is worn out before it runs. The good stuff is good because it works. A good concept, or a variation of it, is worth its weight in gold. I understand Speedy Alka-Seltzer is on his way back. Similarly, Jim Jordan's dynamite line, "When you're having more than one" for Schaeffer. There are lots of examples. Even—like it or not—the one about squeezing the Charmin. Corollary: Like the old joke, the clients (and even, sometimes, the people who did the work) are usually the first to think an idea is tired, often before the spot has actually run.

- Easy Axiom Number Six: Humor is not a no-no. Funny is not ipso facto bad, or good, for that matter. It can be effective and ineffective. The best Xerox commercial ever worked on (Brother Dominic, the monk who says "It's a miracle!") was probably the most recognized and result-oriented of all that I'd ever been associated with, funny or otherwise. At the same time, a hilarious Xerox commercial showing a chimpanzee operating a copier stirred up downright envy among Xerox machine operators around the country, who felt that they were being compared to monkeys. It was pulled rather quickly off the air. All of which means, in the words of a tune of the thirties, "It ain't what you do, it's the way that you do it."

- Easy Axiom Number Seven: No matter what you do or talk about in public, it inevitably says something about you. In broadcast, what is said, where it's said, how it's said and when it's said tell the audience something about the company, the agency, the station, the medium itself. Even if the talk is concentrated on a product or service and nothing else. In turn, this affects attitudes in myriad communities: local, state, federal governments, financial circles, industry, education and a score of other constituencies. Are these attitudes the ones you want them to have?

- Easy Axiom Number Eight: The real enemy is fear. Fear of the client, the boss, the co-workers in the vineyard, the bank loan, your spouse, the FCC, the Federal Trade Commission or whatever. Be right and then have the courage of that conviction. If you're any good, you are right. Corollary: Try not to go to the lawyers until you get in trouble.

CBS-TV puts on the best face, brightest outlook for its affiliates

Upbeat mood pervades meeting in Los Angeles; new schedule greeted with enthusiasm; advertisers are said to be equally impressed

In an outwardly happy if not euphoric annual meeting in Los Angeles, CBS-TV affiliates were repeatedly reassured last week that their network was on its way back to the top of the prime-time ratings, and if any doubted the words they heard, they didn’t show it.

They weren’t necessarily looking to regain first place in the 1978-79 season, but after sampling the new-season programming they were looking at least for a stronger second-place finish, and they gave no sign of disagreement with the pledge of Gene F. Jankowski, the new president of the CBS/Broadcast Group, that “being number two isn’t enough. We want to be back where we belong in prime time—number one. And we will be there again—even sooner than some people expect.”

The pledge was reinforced by John D. Backe, president of CBS Inc.: “We’re convinced we are on the right course and that CBS is on the way back to the number-one spot in prime time. Nothing less will satisfy any of us here today. Of course, that sort of effort takes a lot of resources. And we’re fully prepared to commit them.”

Steve Sohmer, the CBS Entertainment division’s vice president for advertising and promotion, put it more bluntly. Wind ing up a frequently applauded presentation on advertising, promotion and sales aids being prepared for the affiliates (see story page 42), he said: “To me, there’s no such thing as coming in second; there’s only winning and losing. And by God, we mean to win.”

The affiliates seemed to like the 1978-79 schedule much better than the one previewed for them a year ago (story page 39). And good business news came with it.

After previews in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit the week before, CBS-TV sales vice president Paul Isacsson told them, “the buying community has received our schedule with the greatest enthusiasm and is ready to support it with monetary commitments. We are well-positioned for the coming season and will have a more dominant position from which we can reach the boom market of 1979-80.”

Mr. Isacsson said current business is good too—up 8% in the first quarter, compared with a year ago, and projected to be up 11%-13% in prime time, 8%-9% in daytime—in the second quarter. Moreover, he added, CBS’s ratings improvement in February has brought “greater demand and higher prices for third-quarter prime units.”

Perhaps better yet, he said advertisers have grown less balky about network prices:

“Coming off two years which averaged over 20% price increases, the 1977-78 season represents a return to normal growth, probably an average of 11% for the season. We predict similar growth for 1978-79, about 12%.”

“The possibility of two years of normal increases back to back has encouraged the growth of existing television budgets and emphasized the medium in new-product introduction plans. Furthermore, the advertiser has diminished his frantic efforts for alternatives to television because he has been reassured of the affordability of the medium.

“Does he want to be reassured? No one wants to leave, or even decrease the use, of the most effective and efficient advertising medium. It is so important in maintaining or improving share of market. What other means give a new product maximum awareness before the competition can move against it?”

Affiliates were reminded, too, that they could be glad for reasons even closer to home. Charles McAbee Jr. of KCMO-TV Kansas City, Mo., chairman of the affiliates advisory board, told them at the outset of their two-day meeting that 75% of them had received network-compensation rate increases in the past two years, a majority of those in the past year (and he ventured that most of those in the other 25% would be pushing CBS-TV for raises of their own in the coming months). He also noted that CBS-TV had instituted 40-second breaks for local news updates seven nights a week, with 10 seconds of that time available for local sale, and that network cut-in charges have been doubled.

Mr. McAbee spoke of the affiliate-network relationship as “a partnership”—as did Mr. Jankowski in one of the key speeches at the opening session.

Mr. Jankowski also told the affiliates that the CBS Entertainment division, which supplies the programming for the network, "is in that rare position of having an abundance of riches. Never before have we had so many properties in development—series, miniseries, specials and made-for-television movies. CBS is amply prepared to take the offensive in the season to come."

Mr. Jankowski also offered a promise: "We intend to work more closely with you than ever before so that we will continue to be the best network operation in the country."

The affiliates also received reassuring news in a closed session with CBS executives Wednesday afternoon when, in response to a question, network officials said there were no plans to increase the amount of network commercial time.

James H. Rosenfield, who was making not only his first appearance at a CBS affiliates convention as CBS-TV president but his first in any capacity, anchored the presentations and also offered an overview of some of the changes that have occurred at CBS within the past year.

He also described some of the "incredible opportunities that lie ahead of us" in technology—developments that have already ranged from electronic still stores and new optical techniques to "the exciting new one-inch tape equipment that permits the reduction in size, weight and cost of tape production, while increasing quality and flexibility."

"We are experimenting here in Hollywood with multiple and single-camera tape production that will permit all film production techniques to be done with tape at greatly reduced cost and with increased quality," he said. "Computer tape editing equipment to support this film-style production with one-inch tape is being worked on in our Stamford, Conn., labs and new equipment will be available shortly."

And, of course, we are paying close attention to developments in the world of satellite transmission. . . . We are now planning much farther ahead and marshalling our financial resources to take full advantage of the technological opportunities of the future" as CBS moves into its second half-century.

"These second 50 years," he said, "will be the most challenging and the most rewarding we've ever faced."

As for satellite distribution of network programs, Mr. Rosenfield told affiliates at a closed meeting that CBS was keeping an eye on the possibility but that "for the short term we plan to continue our terrestrial interconnection service." He said affiliates would be kept informed of major developments as they occur and that there would be "a minimum of 18 to 24 months from the time we reached any go-ahead decision on a satellite interconnection system to the time of implementation."

He emphasized, however, that "we do not know if or when that 'go-ahead' date will be reached."

The convention, Tuesday and Wednesday at Los Angeles's Century Plaza hotel, attracted a record CBS attendance of close to 800 station executives and, counting wives, CBS executives and talent, a record crowd of about 1,500.

Some affiliates observed that only one thing was missing: the panels of CBS affiliate call letters that usually adorn the meeting rooms. They found the omission had been corrected Tuesday night at the buffet CBS gave for them. It was held in space-age decor with disco lights and music on the 42d floor of a Century City tower, and circling the tower was a Goodyear blimp, flashing all those call letters and occasional promos for CBS shows.

Gannett goes from mostly newspapers to multiple media in one big deal

It announces merger agreement with Combined Communications for $370 million that will build it up to 20 stations, 79 papers and outdoor ad firm

Combined Communications Corp. and the Gannett Co. announced a $370-million merger agreement last week. Under the terms of the agreement Gannett will become an $800-million-a-year communications giant with 79 newspapers, an almost full portfolio of radio and television stations and one of the largest outdoor advertising firms in the country.

The directors of both companies met on Sunday (May 7) and approved the proposed merger, which, if also approved by stockholders and government agencies, will make CCC a subsidiary of the newspaper company.

Karl O. Eller, president and largest stockholder of publicly traded CCC, will join the office of the chief executive at Gannett once the merger is completed. According to Mr. Eller, Gannett's WHEC-TV Rochester, N.Y., and CCC's KTAR(AM)-KBBC(FM) Phoenix are likely to be spun off to comply with FCC ownership rules. Mr. Eller will also serve as president and chief executive officer of CCC, which will remain in Phoenix.

John J. Louis Jr., chairman of CCC, is the son of one of the principals in the old Needham, Louis & Brobury advertising agency and an heir to a Johnson Wax fortune. Gannett is headed by Paul Miller, chairman, and Allen H. Neuharth, president and chief executive officer. Messrs. Eller and Louis and another, unnamed, CCC official will join the board of directors of Gannett.

At a presentation before security analysts in New York last week, Mr. Neuharth called the merger a "marriage made in heaven." Mr. Eller called it the "supercalifragilisticexpialidocious deal of all time!"

Also speaking before the analysts, Mr. Miller said that Gannett will continue to expand its newspaper holdings, and he forecast that "within the foreseeable future" the chain will increase to 100 papers.

Mr. Eller said that he believed the merged companies may venture into new businesses such as business and specialized magazines, cable television, shopping center advertising and other media-related activities.

Under the terms of the agreement announced last Monday, 1.2 shares of Gannett common stock will be traded for each share of CCC's. After a previously announced 3-for-2 stock split of CCC, scheduled for May 31, the exchange will be .8 shares of Gannett stock for each of CCC. At the time of the announcement, Gannett was trading on the New York Stock Exchange at $42.50 a share. CCC was at $41.

In 1977 Gannett reported total income of $69,416,000 on revenues of $557,908,000 ($2.60 per share) while CCC reported a net income of $20,625,000 on total revenues of $227,603,000 ($3.17 per share).

Reports that the two companies were holding talks surfaced two months ago when CCC acknowledged "exploratory" conversations with another, larger company. At the time, officials of both companies refused to comment on the reports, and it was said a week later that the discussions had fallen through (Broadcasting, March 20, 27).

A Washington attorney who had been working on the merger said that the principals of Gannett and CCC were scheduled to hold a meeting late last week to work out the details of the agreement. As of last week, he said, the specifics of the arrangement were "probably in the minds" of the
The $370-million agreement is not the largest ever announced in the broadcasting industry. Although it eventually fell through, the 1965 agreement to merge ABC Inc. with ITT carried a price tag of $379,750,000 when it was announced, but by January 1968, when ITT canceled the merger, the valuation had risen to $661,200,000 (Broadcasting, Jan. 8, 1968).

The ABC-ITT merger collapsed, in part, because of strong Department of Justice opposition to the "anticompetitive" arrangements.

Whether a similar effort to block the CCC-Gannett merger will be mounted remains to be seen. A Justice Department spokesman said that the Antitrust Division will be examining the deal.

Daniel Schwarz, deputy director of the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Competition (which has begun looking into media conglomerations), said that the sort of agreement that the FCC and Gannett struck "possibly" could be of interest to the FTC. Mr. Schwarz refused to comment specifically on the merger, but he said it certainly involves the concentration of media interests that the commission has been studying.

Representative Morris Udall (D-Ariz.) called the Gannett-CCC deal a case of a "whale swallowing a whale" and said it was "an alarming development and one that ought not to go unnoticed by those who fear the implications of concentrated communications power." Mr. Udall is sponsoring legislation to provide tax incentives that would protect independent newspapers from being acquired by chains. (It was a Gannett acquisition of his hometown paper last year that sparked Mr. Udall's interest in media companies.)

Larry Wilson, general counsel of CCC, refused to comment on any proposed governmental obstacles that the merger may encounter. He said that CCC is reserving comment until we file the application for the change of ownership at the FCC.

In their largely separate fields, both Gannett and CCC have been on acquisition sprees of late. CCC, for one, made its presence in the communications world felt last year when it agreed to swap its KOCO-TV Oklahoma City for Joseph L. Allbritton's WLTV-Washington plus preferred stock—a $100-million deal that eventually fell through. Also in the past, CCC acquired Globe Broadcasting Co. for $13.8 million. CCC's broadcast portfolio includes seven AMs, six FM's and seven TV's: WXIA-TV Atlanta; KOCO-TV Oklahoma City; KBTY-TV Denver; WPTA-TV Roanoke, Ind.; WLKY-TV Louisville, Ky.; KARK-TV Little Rock, Ark.; KSTAR-AM-KBBC(FM) Phoenix; KSDO(AM)-KZEL(FM) San Diego; KIIS-AM-FM Los Angeles; WDEA(AM)-WLDM(FM) Detroit; WVON(AM)-WGCIFM) Chicago; WWVE(AM)-WDOK(FM) Cleveland, and WWDJ(AM)-WWWE(AM)-WDOK(FM) Hackensack, N.J., which has been sold, subject to FCC approval, for $4 million. (Broadcasting, April 15). CCC also owns the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune, as well as Eiler Outdoor Advertising—one of the nation's larger outdoor advertising firms.

Gannett owns 77 newspapers in 30 states and two territories—mostly in small and medium-sized cities. The Rochester, N.Y.-based company also owns the Louis Harris and Associates polling firm and WHEC-TV Rochester and WBRJ(AM) Marietta and WKFI(AM) Wilmington, both Ohio. Gannett went public in 1967 when it owned 28 papers in five states.

With the addition of the two CCC dailies the Gannett chain will become second only to Knight-Ridder Newspapers in terms of circulation. Knight-Ridder's 32 daily papers have a combined circulation of 3.43 million copies while the 79 papers that will form the Gannett chain will have a circulation of 3.37 million.

During the presentation in New York last week, Mr. Eller noted that the merged companies will have something approaching 2% of the $44 billion U.S. advertising market.

Sparring. While Federal Trade Commission Chairman Michael Pertschuk was in Atlanta last week defending his agency's proposal to ban some advertising from children's television programs, the rulemaking inquiry was the subject of considerable attention elsewhere. The Public Broadcasting Service's MacNeil-Lehrer Report devoted its 30 minutes last Wednesday (May 10) to an examination of the controversy surrounding the proposal. Defending the commission's position were Tracy Westen, deputy director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, and Peggy Charron, president of Action for Children's Television. On the other side were Senator Lowell Weicker (R-Conn.) and James Mack, president of the National Confectioners Association. Senator Weicker, who has been a vocal opponent of the FTC proposal, said television was "a very powerful medium" that the government must not try to usurp, as he believes the FTC is doing in this instance. In New York, four trade organizations demanded that Mr. Pertschuk disqualify himself from the inquiry. The chairman, said the Association of National Advertisers, the American Association of Advertising Agencies, American Advertising Federation and the Toy Manufacturers Association, has "shown pre-judgment of the factual issues involved and bias against advertisers." And in Atlanta, speaking before the National Association of Consumer Agency Administrators, Mr. Pertschuk said business was overlooking that the FTC was looking at remedies "from the most extreme to the very mild."

NBC-TV: Knowns and unknowns

NBC-TV programmers decided late last week to keep juggling over the weekend and now plan to announce their fall prime time schedule today (May 15). However, the network has been leaking some "preliminary" line-ups to advertising agencies that, although they vary, give some idea of what is likely to turn up on the network's final first draft.

Sure renewals are Little House on the Prairie, Rockford Files, Quincy, CHiPs, Project U.P.O. and Walt Disney. Also certain, according to an NBC spokesman, is that the network will retain its Saturday through Tuesday events slots (now apparently dubbed "universal hours"). As for new programs, Dick Clark is to have a one-hour variety show on the schedule, the magazine show derived from Weekend may have a 10 a.m. time period on one of the nights, and the network has commitments to a Norman Lear project called The Arrangement (about young unmarrieds) and to a Stewart Raffell-Simon International production called Sea Gypsies (about city folk on the high seas), although neither of those shows has to go on in the fall.

Projects considered as definite additons to the NBC schedule are Waverly Wonder, a Paramount production about a girls' basketball team and its coach, played by Joe Namath; WBB, a 20th Century-Fox production about a female program executive at a fictional TV network, and Coast to Coast, a T.O.Y. production about stewardesses flying between New York and Los Angeles. Shows that turned up on some of the draft schedules making the rounds of the agencies, and described by NBC as in the "possible" category, are Legs, a Garry Marshall/Paramount production about a group of showgirls; Joe and Valerie, the disco show from Bob Hope Enterprises that has been tested on the air for the last couple of weeks, Lacy and the Mississippi Queen, a Larry Gordon/Paramount western about two women who work as detectives for the Union Pacific railroad, Harris & Co., about a black family that moves from a northern city to California, produced by Universal, and Joshua Tree, the Vince Edwards project about test pilots.

Black Sheep Squadron and Grizzly Adams appeared on some of those draft schedules, but not on others, while Police Woman and Bionic Woman were nowhere to be seen.

Government and researchers share needs at Airlie

Telecommunications types meet with academicians, discuss what one group has and what the other wants

Academicians and representatives of government agencies concerned with telecommunications assembled last week for their annual bazaar at Airlie House, in the rolling, spring-splashed countryside of northern Virginia. It was a time for those with completed research projects to discuss them and suggest new ones, and for government agencies to indicate their research needs.

For FCC Chairman Charles D. Ferris, as well as Henry Geller, who awaits Senate confirmation as assistant secretary of commerce in charge of the new National Telecommunications and Information Administration, it was a time to cast, in terms of research needs, their views that deregulation of the telecommunications industry is the way to go.

"We need a complete reappraisal of our regulatory structure," Chairman Ferris said in a luncheon speech on Friday. "New technologies have created economic and social forces for change in the industries we regulate... Regulation is justified only to help the marketplace serve the consumers of communications services..." The regulatory structure the New Dealers erected 40 years ago, he said, "has ossified."

And Mr. Geller, who was regarded as a hard-nosed regulator in his days as associate general counsel and general counsel of the FCC in the 1960's, said in a speech at dinner that the older he gets the more inclined he is to rely on marketplace regulation. He also indicated, however, the major focus of NTIA will be on common carrier matters, not broadcasting.

So for two and a half days, the researchers and government officials (from the White House, among other agencies)—some 250, in all—talked to and at one another in panel sessions, over meals and drinks, and by the pool, in what remains a relatively secluded area of country about 40 miles south of Washington.

Although neither Mr. Ferris nor Mr. Geller offered much that was new in the way of policy initiatives, they indicated where much of their agencies' policy analysis resources—each has $1 million in research funds—will go.

Chairman Ferris, in referring to broadcast- ing matters, noted that the commission is examining ways "to expand programming diversity without regulating content" (a goal, he said, the commission's network and cable economic inquiries and the children's television study can help the agency achieve), encourage a regulatory framework based on an abundance of new information resources and improve methods of spectrum allocation.

In that last connection, he apparently referred to his view that users of the spectrum should pay for that use. "The scarce spectrum resource can no longer rationally be thought of as a 'free good,' in economic terms," he said.

The social impact of new technologies is another matter for study, the chairman said. He said the two-way communications system being tested by Warner Communications on its Qube system in Columbus, Ohio, "could radically change our political process through direct and instan-

In Brief

Revenues of three commercial television networks and their 15 owned stations reached $3.1 billion in 1977, up 18.5% from 1976, FCC announced last week. Profits soared 22.3% to $555 million. Commission reported that advertising sales from network operations rose 21.1% to $32 billion while net revenues (after deductions for payments to affiliated stations—which rose 6.3%—and advertising agencies) increased 21.9% to $2.6 billion. Pre-tax profits from network operations were $405.6 million, up 37.2%. O&O's reported pre-tax profits of $149.3 million (down nearly 6%) on revenues of $504 million (up 3.6%). Networks paid O&O's $41.9 million (up 4.2%) and $239.6 million to affiliates (up 8.7%). Network news and public affairs operations cost $207 million, down 4.9% from $218 million spent in 1976.

Harry Reasoner, who has been looking to get out of his ABC News contract, has received his release. In statement circulated by ABC, Mr. Reasoner said he'll leave ABC Evening News network in July for full-time documentary work. Shortly thereafter, former employer of Mr. Reasoner, CBS News, put out statement saying negotiation with him was already under way and agreement expected to be consummated within next few days. Likely role is that of chief correspondent for CBS Reports, job Bill Moyers is giving up to return to WNET New York and Public Broadcasting Service with Bill Moyers' Journal.

Harte-Hanks owns three other TV stations in South. Evening News Association, Detroit, announced purchase of KVUE (Austin) Tex., for price reported to be in excess of $13 million. Seller of channel 24 ABC outlet is CH 24 Inc., owned by Tolbert Foster, Allan Shivers and others. Buyer is major newspaper publisher and group owner of one AM, one FM and four TV's. Richter/Kalli Co. was broker.

Paul M. Hughes, vice president and general manager, wcco-tv Minneapolis-St. Paul, named president of Viacom's newly acquired WHNBF-TV Hartford (New Britain), Conn. It's no secret Viacom is group-building—purchase of Sonderling Broadcasting (including wazitv Albany, N.Y.) awaits FCC approval (broadcasting, March 20)—and it's anticipated Mr. Hughes will become president of resuming Viacom TV Group.

FCC approved $69-million sale of Rust Craft Greeting Cards Co. to Ziff-Davis Publishing Co. including spin-off of six AM's and five FM's to Rust/Craft shareholders. Commission also approved $6,675,000 sale of WTOP(AM) Washington from Post-Newsweek Stations to Outlet Co.

AVC Corp. has signed letter of intent to sell UHF WPHL-TV Philadelphia to an undisclosed buyer for $10 million plus a 10-year consulting and noncompetition agreement contingent upon earnings that could result in additional $5 million. AVC is hardware and textile manufacturer with no other broadcast interests.

Stoner Broadcasting System Inc. is trading WVEZ(FM) Louisville to Multimedia Broadcasting for WUIR-AM-FM Knoxville, Tenn., and $1.5 million. Stoner owns three other AM's, two FM's. Multimedia owns five TV's, six FM's and eight AM's including WAKY/AM Louisville.

Sears, Roebuck, in letters to three television network presidents, said it is concerned that networks are continuing to risk offending prime time viewers with shows with too much sex and violence in next fall's programming and will continue to remove its ads from shows it deems offensive. Last year company removed 128 commercials, and in review of television two weeks ago, decided to withdraw support from four more series: Six Million Dollar Man, Barnaby Jones, Charlie's Angels and Three's Company. Sears told TV networks heads that it has agreed to help form Business Advisory taneous polling on local referendum issues by every television household in the city."

The chairman made clear he welcomes research contributions "from disinterested sources," and said the commission would work with NTIA in sharing research priorities. He noted that other government and private foundations invest money in telecommunications research.

Mr. Geller, who stressed that his concern was husbanding resources, said NTIA will devote most of its money to common carrier. There is, he said, "a whole panoply of things" to consider—the proper role of competition in the field and the inquiry into the distinction, if any, between data processing and data communications. Common carrier, he said, "is the future."

NTIA is involved in some broadcasting matters—it has taken the lead in shepherding the administration's public broadcasting bill through Congress and it is playing a leading role in attempting to promote minority ownership of broadcast stations—a matter, he said, of particular interest to President Carter.

But Mr. Geller is not interested in NTIA's energies being directed to many other areas. "We have limited resources," said, "we're not going into areas where others have authority. I'm going to be silent on a ton of broadcast issues... it would swallow all our resources."

Jagoda ties detailed in letters with CPB

Last July, he sought information of public broadcasting's plans for spending federal funding

Barry Jagoda, President Carter's adviser on media and public affairs, and Henry Loomis, president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, exchanged several letters last summer on CPB's proposals for five-year extension of public broadcasting funding. Among other things, Mr. Jagoda asked, and was told, of broadcasting's planned budget priorities and goals for use of federal funds over the five-year period.

CPB made the correspondence available to the Senate Commerce Committee in response to a request from Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), who has been pressing Mr. Jagoda to appear before the committee to explain his connection with public broadcasting. The senator feels that activities in that area conflict with Mr. Jagoda's responsibilities as media adviser to the President.

Mr. Jagoda, who has taken an interest in public broadcasting matters since the Carter administration took office, participated in drafting the administration's public broadcasting bill and advises on CPB board nominees—apparently served as Mr. Loomis' contact on the budget at the request of Bowman Cutter, executive associate director for budget in the Office of Management and Budget. Mr. Loomis, in response to a letter from the Senate committee asking why he had written to Mr. Jagoda on budget matters, replied that Mr. Cutter said Mr. Jagoda should receive the CPB proposals. The first letter to Mr. Jagoda was dated July 15, a second, following one from Mr. Jagoda on July 22, on Aug. 24.

It was in the July 22 letter that Mr. Jagoda asked about CPB's priorities.

It was also in that letter, however, that Mr. Jagoda indicated his role as contact was temporary. He expressed the hope that a new assistant secretary of commerce to head a successor agency to the Office of Telecommunications Policy—it was later established as the National Telecommunications and Information Administration—would be appointed to develop executive branch proposals "on this and other communications-related legislation."

Senator Goldwater has said he might ask that Mr. Jagoda be subpoenaed to appear before the committee (page 34). However, Ernest F. Hollings (D-S.C.), chairman of the Senate Communications Subcommittee, has also attempted to persuade Mr. Jagoda to appear before the committee, appears to be trying to head off a confrontation. He has said a letter from the White House might resolve the problem. However, one Mr. Jagoda sent satisfied neither senator.

Celebrities endorsing products in advertisements were put on notice by Federal Trade Commission that they may be held financially accountable for false or misleading claims. Singer Pat Boone signed FTC consent order agreeing to contribute toward any restitution commission orders Karr Preventative Medical Products Inc. to pay for making false claims for its Acne-Statin skin preparation. Commission charged that Mr. Boone and manufacturer falsely advertised product in print and broadcast as acne cure.

Today (May 15) is last day for House Communications Committee's authorization bill for Corporation for Public Broadcasting to be reported out of full House Commerce Committee. If committee cannot muster quorum, usually very difficult on Mondays, bill will die for this year—much to pleasure of Public Broadcasting Service which was lobbying hard against it last week. PBS Chairman Ralphs telegramed PBS member stations to urge that will be deferred or amended "to remove the objectionable infringements on local autonomy," prompting deluge of calls and letters to Congress. CPB and PBS, on other hand, were backing subcommittee measure.

FCC has petitioned Supreme Court to review appeals court decision overturning commission's rules imposing public-access, channel-capacity and equipment requirements on television systems with at least 3,500 subscribers. Commission said U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit erred in holding that rules exceeded commission's authority and that lower court's opinion stands, "unified regulation" of cable television would be "seriously jeopardized."

KAKE-TV Wichita, Kan., was reported to have flashed subliminal messages in attempt to capture suspected mass murderer there. Use of illegal technique was approved under emergency authorization by Martin Levy, assistant chief of FCC's Broadcast Bureau. Subliminal message—Contact the chief—was said to be flashed during newscasts in hope that suspect, who remains large, would turn himself in to local police.

Pianist Vladimir Horowitz will receive $150,000 for his 67.5% share of foreign distribution rights to his 50th anniversary White House concert. Feb. 26, it was reported last week. Flap developed in public broadcasting circles in March when it was learned WETA-Washington had assigned distribution rights to Mr. Horowitz and German firm without clearing deal with Corporation for Public Broadcasting (Broadcasting, April 3). Mr. Horowitz received no pay for original appearance.

State Department has established public advisory committee in connection with WARC '79. Committee, whose membership is being selected by State, will be headed by Gleen O. Robinson, former FCC commissioner who has been named chairman of delegation. Apart from 20 government officials forming its core, delegation has not yet been selected.

Radio Advertising Bureau has set up two groups—National Marketing Task Force and Local Marketing Task Force—to help insure neither medium is promoted at expense of other. RKO General's Dwight Case is chairman of national unit; Stuart Enterprises' Dick Chaplin local one.

FCC has set up task force, headed by Chairman Charles Ferris, to promote equal employment opportunity within commission. Serving with chairman will be Commissioners Margita White and Tyrone Brown. Chiefs of broadcast and Safety & Special Radio Services Bureaus, and of Office of Plans and Policy, as well as Executive Director have been "invited to participate," according to commission notice.

Things get hot at FCC for WNET

Oral argument will be held on issues raised by groups in New Jersey to determine if hearing is necessary

For 17 years, Educational Broadcasting Corp.'s WNET(13), has operated in New York as a noncommercial station on a commercial frequency (ch. 13) assigned to Newark, N.J. The odd arrangement has produced strained relations between the station and those in New Jersey who have not reconciled themselves to what they consider the loss of the state's only VHF allocation. Last week, petitions to deny filed against the station by New Jersey groups (Broadcasting, May 8) almost resulted in an FCC order designating WNET's 1975 renewal application for hearing, and they may yet.

The commissioners decided to hold oral argument on issues involved in the question of whether the license should be renewed—essentially, whether the station is serving New Jersey as it has promised and has been directed by the commission. And if the commission feels questions remain to be resolved at the conclusion of the argument, the renewal application will be designated for hearing before an administrative law judge.

The Broadcast Bureau had prepared a recommendation for a hearing. However, General Counsel Robert Bruce, in advance of the commission meeting on Tuesday, emerged in favor of an oral argument, and that seemed to be the principal recommendation before the commission.

"The issues could be brought into sharper focus in an oral argument," Mr. Bruce told the commission. "We could decide what issues should be considered in a hearing." The record already compiled in the case, he said, "is enormous."" The debate before the commission last week made it clear that the staff had not yet succeeded in framing issues to be discussed in the oral argument. However, the staff's discussion with the commissioners—particularly Joseph Fogarty and Tyrone Brown—appeared to help produce agreement on one issue, at least: the legal implications for present and proposed commercial stations, dating back to 1961, regarding programming.

The commissioners also indicated they wanted to consider WNET's programming during the 1972-75 license period, despite the staff's feeling the programming was at least adequate in terms of service to New Jersey. (The staff maintained, however, that, since WNET's license had been renewed through 1972, the commission could not now consider whether the station had kept its programming promises during its first 12 years on the air.)

Another issue to be included in the oral argument involves the request of the New Jersey Coalition for Fair Broadcasting—one of three petitioners seeking denial of the 1975 renewal application—that the commission also fine WNET for failing to keep its commitments. The commission is under a court order to act on the request. The U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington issued the order two weeks ago in response to an appeal by the coalition.

The station's troubles with New Jersey and its residents began in 1961, as soon as the commission approved noncommercial EBC's acquisition of WNTA-TV, a commercial station, from NTA Television Corp. The commission also approved the location of the main studio to New York on condition WNET maintain a studio in Newark.

The state of New Jersey appealed that decision. But while the case was pending, the state agreed to withdraw its appeal in return for a promise from the station to provide political coverage of the state, as well as a specific amount of programming each day on matters of concern to the state.

The petitioners opposing a grant of the 1975 renewal application—the coalition, the Congress of African People and a Newark area resident, John Cervase—say the station has not fulfilled those 1961 promises or a commitment made in 1972 to the coalition to provide a half hour of New Jersey programming weekly.

Two years ago, the commission, acting on the New Jersey complaints, conducted a field investigation. This led to the conclusion that continuation by WNET of past levels of New Jersey programming would be inadequate. The station was given an opportunity to amend its program proposal.

WNET's response was to propose a nightly half-hour news program in association with the New Jersey Public Broadcast Authority. Two weeks ago, New Jersey Nightly News went on the air (Broadcasting, May 8). It originates at 6:30 p.m. on WNET, with an updated version the following morning at 7 o'clock.

Tales of LBJ. Bobby Baker in the June Playboy: "...it was no accident that Austin, Tex., was the only city of its size with only one television station. [Lyndon] Johnson had friends in high places among those who controlled the broadcast industry... Bob Bartley, a member of the FCC, just happened to be a nephew of LBJ's patron, Speaker Sam Rayburn. You can bet that others in the regulatory agencies, including those who granted broadcast licenses, were aware of those friendly connections and of Johnson's great power.... Senator Johnson told [an NBC executive] that he wanted his station paid [higher] advertising rates... He finally got his way... "Your market isn't big enough down there.... 'I say it is;" Johnson retorted. 'I know how you fellows work—you can do anything you want to. Well, want to?' The network officials thought it over and decided they wanted to.'

Station discretion about reply time is upheld by court

In Massachusetts case, ruling says broadcaster's good faith must be trusted, whether opponent gets response free or pays for it

A broadcast station that sells time to an advocate of one side of a controversial issue of public importance would not be wrong to give time, in meeting its fairness doctrine obligation, to spokesmen for a contrasting view, even if the second advocate is later found to have been able to pay.

The FCC ruled that way in a fairness doctrine case last June, and now a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in Boston has affirmed that ruling. In doing so, the court focused on the question of the good faith of the stations involved.

At issue was a petition by a Massachusetts group called the Council for Employment and Energy Use. In October 1976, it bought time on Wnor(FM), both Boston, and Wnrc(AM) Worcester, Mass., to oppose a state referendum question that, if approved, would have prohibited public utilities from selling electricity at a discount to large customers (the question was later defeated).

The stations subsequently gave free time for response to an organization called Fair Share Inc. The council, which claimed Fair Share's subsequent purchase of $30,000 worth of television time proved it had adequate funds to pay for the radio time, asked the commission to rule that it was unreasonable for the three radio stations to offer Fair Share free time solely because the council had bought time and that carrying the council's spot did not require an offer of free time.

The Broadcast Bureau, in an order later affirmed by the commission, upheld the reasonableness of the stations' actions. It cited the wide range of discretion accorded broadcasters in meeting their fairness doctrine obligations.

To the court, a critical issue was the lack of any allegation on the part of the council that the stations chose to ignore Fair Share's ability to pay for the spots or had acted in bad faith. It said the thrust of the contention seemed to be that the stations "acted unreasonably even if they believed in good faith" that Fair Share could not or for some reason would not pay. "So stated," the court said, in an opinion written by Judge Levin Campbell, "the council's position is unsupported."

The court noted that the fairness doctrine has been held by the Supreme Court to be constitutional and that the focus of the doctrine is on the dissemination of both sides of controversial issues rather than the protection of particular advertisers.

"While, with respect to payment for time," Judge Campbell added, "there may be a point at which a calculated inequality of treatment by broadcasters among advertisers would raise a litigable issue, we see nothing arbitrary about the commission's hands-off policy here."

Judge Campbell said the commission had done no more than rule that donating reply time is an acceptable means of meeting a licensee's obligations under the Communications Act, "at least where there is the suggestion that the licensee has deliberately and discriminatorily disregarded a respondent's ability to pay."

(However, that does not mean, the court added in a footnote, that broadcasters are obliged to investigate the financial status of groups seeking free air time or that they should require financial disclosure from such groups.)

The court said the commission may believe that instructing broadcasters as to when to require payment and when to offer free time would deprive them of needed flexibility in applying the fairness doctrine. Broadcasters, the court said, "may normally be expected to charge for time when feasible... In any event, we see nothing unreasonable, unconstitutional or otherwise illegal in the commission's policies in this regard."

The council had also complained of a fixed ratio of reply time to paid time offered by the stations. It said that constituted an unconstitutional quota in violation of its First Amendment and equal protection rights. The court called that argument "patently absurd."

NAB urges SBA to clarify aid

There's confusion in profusion about plan to aid minorities to get into broadcasting, according to association

The National Association of Broadcasters has asked the Small Business Administration to initiate an affirmative-action program aimed at promoting the implementation of SBA's new program of lending money for the purchase of radio and television stations.

NAB, which supported the change in policy as a means of helping minority group members who become broadcast station owners, suggested in a letter to the SBA, that the program include seminars, printed materials, memoranda to banks and other lending institutions.

The NAB said that inquiries it has received from stations and minorities wishing to become broadcast station owners indicates that "confusion exists with respect to both the method of application and the substantive guidelines of the SBA program." Accordingly, NAB asked for any procedural guidelines SBA has developed for processing direct and guaranteed loans.

Double billing does in Berlin

FCC upholds decision of ALJ and denies renewal to WBLR

Fraudulent billing has proved fatal to Berlin Communications Inc., licensee of WBLR (AM) Berlin, N.H. The FCC last week, in a 6-to-0 decision, denied the station's license renewal because of a finding that the station had engaged in a double-billing scheme between April 1971 and August 1974 enabling local advertisers to overcharge manufacturers $22,390.81.

The commission, which affirmed an initial decision by investigative Law Judge Byron E. Harrison, rejected Berlin's argument that Judge Harrison had overlooked mitigating evidence that tended to show the fault lay with the station's manager, not the owner, and that the station was caught up in a situation in which other stations in the community were permitting local retail advertisers to benefit at the expense of manufacturers.

Judge Harrison had found that Robert T. Dale, WBLR's general manager, had issued affidavits to local advertisers misrepresenting the cost or quantity, or both, of advertising on WBLR. He also said Mr. Dale had signed each of the false affidavits either in his name or that of Richard L. Blais, president, treasurer and 75% stockholder of Berlin.

Berlin contended that WBLR had engaged in improper billing long before Mr. Blais acquired the station in 1971 and that Mr. Dale had engaged in the practices for a number of years while he was with two other stations in Berlin. Furthermore, Berlin said, Mr. Blais attempted without success to stop the improper billing practices after he learned of them. Other stations in Berlin that were engaged in the practice rejected his pleas and those of town's weekly newspaper that they desist. (The commission in 1976 denied renewal of the two stations—White Mountain Broadcasting Co.'s WMOUL AM—WXLQ IFM—for fraudulent billing. [Broadcasting, July 12, 1976]. The denial has been appealed.)

Judge Harrison had found that Mr. Blais learned of the station's double-billing practices in 1971. But at the same time, he was informed by Mr. Dale that if WBLR's advertisers would leave the station, Mr. Blais raised no further objection until the commission began its investigation in 1974, the judge found.

Judge Harrison had concluded that even if Mr. Blais had not known of the false billing before the commission began its investigation he was responsible for it and could not escape liability by attempting to place the blame on his employees.

The commission adopted Judge Harrison's findings and conclusions.

And, in a statement intended to underline to other stations the warning the action represents, the commission said that Mr. Blais could not have failed to realize the seriousness of allowing fraudulent billing to continue at WBLR, since the commission has repeatedly advised licensees that participation in double billing "would be considered reprehensible in itself" and would be considered contrary to the public interest.

Senate is the next stop for Hollings's public broadcasting bill

Commerce Committee passes bill with funding provision that would run through 1983, but not without Republican dissent

Although several Republican members expressed doubts and reservations, the full Senate Commerce Committee adopted the Ernest F. Hollings (D-S.C.) version of the public broadcasting bill and sent it on to the Senate for a vote. The bill was passed by the committee with only two minor amendments added to it.

During his presentation last Tuesday (May 9), Senator Hollings, chairman of the Communications Subcommittee, said that his bill was basically an endorsement of the present public broadcasting system with a few nods at the Corporation for Public Broadcasting to move "a little bit more strongly into the sunshine" and to enhance its "accountability" to Congress and the public.

Two amendments were offered by Harrison H. Schmitt (R-N.M.). One, the senator said, would "exempt recipients having fewer than five full-time employees" from equal employment opportunity reporting requirements. The amendment, which passed on a voice vote, was not intended, Mr. Schmitt said, to exempt public licensees from EEO requirements—only from paperwork.

The other amendment offered by Mr. Schmitt and also adopted was a provision to "allow the states to remain active" in public broadcasting and to offer assurances that the federal government was not attempting to run the public system—many member stations of which are state-owned.

The Republican members of the committee did, however, get on the record their opposition to the five years of authorizations that would result from the Hollings bill. The measure authorizes funds for three years from 1981 through 1983, in effect extending public broadcasting's authorization, currently running through 1980, to a total of five years.

Robert P. Griffin (R-Mich.), the ranking minority member on the Communications Subcommittee, said bluntly, "Five years is too long."

In defense, Senator Hollings described CPB as "a private corporation with limited congressional oversight." He said that public broadcasting "has established itself in the public mind," and that Congress, as much as possible, should try to keep the public system "as it is."

Undeterred, Mr. Griffin said that "this committee abrogates its responsibility" by granting CPB authorizations for five years. He said it was "ridiculous" that the Congress should provide "the public's money" and then have "no supervision" over how it is to be spent. Mr. Griffin also made comments on the general "deterioration" of television quality.

Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) also carried the discussion of the bill to one of his pet subjects of late—the role of Barry Jagoda, President Carter's media adviser, in the formulation of public broadcasting policy. There is "some reason to believe," Mr. Goldwater said, that Mr. Jagoda's job "involves the use of public broadcasting for political purposes."

Mr. Goldwater said he may ask the committee to subpoena Mr. Jagoda to testify to "just what he does" in his White House position. Thus far, Mr. Jagoda has resisted requests from the committee to testify voluntarily.

Mr. Schmitt, siding with Mr. Goldwater, said that he had sensed "some very disturbing signs" that public television is subject to political pressures. When the discussion ended, however, and Senator Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.) asked the members to vote, a Griffin amendment to delete the three-year authorization was defeated, and the bill then was recommended to the full Senate.

Reuben departure from Kirkland & Ellis leaves operation in Washington up in air

He handled Tribune Co. business for many years; immediate effect, however, is not yet determined

Member of the Washington legal community pointed their antennas toward Chicago last week in hopes of picking up intelligence regarding the effect of a shake-up in the Chicago headquarters of Kirkland & Ellis on the law firm's Washington office and its communications practice. Immediately, at least, there was little to report.

The shake-up involved the departure from the firm of Don H. Reuben, a senior partner who had been with Kirkland & Ellis for 27 years. Press reports talked of a "resignation," but Mr. Reuben referred to a "firing." In either case, he expects to take about 10 to 15 Kirkland & Ellis lawyers with him and establish a firm of his own. Kirkland & Ellis presently has about 200 lawyers, including 60 partners.

The Reuben firm's first client, evidently, will be the Tribune Co., one of Kirkland & Ellis's oldest clients. The firm was founded in 1908 by Colonel Robert R. McCormack, son-in-law of Joseph Medill, the founder of the Tribune Co. Colonel McCormack left the firm in 1920 to devote full-time to the Tribune Co., and its newspaper, the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Reuben had served as general counsel for the Tribune Co. And Stanton R. Cook, president of the company and publisher of the Tribune, said in a statement that Mr. Reuben will continue to serve in that capacity. Mr. Reuben "has represented the company ably for many years," Mr. Cook said.

But the question communications lawyers were asking is whether the Tribune Co.'s broadcasting properties—WGN-AM-TV Chicago; WPIX-FM-TV New York; KDLA-AM-TV Duluth, Minn.; KWGN-TV Denver and WICC(AM) Bridgeport, Conn.—would be represented by the new firm also, rather than continue to be represented by the Washington office of Kirkland & Ellis.

Lawyers in the Washington office last week said it was too soon to answer that question. And Mr. Reuben in Chicago had no immediate answer, either. "That's a matter we'll have to look at carefully," he said. "We'll make sure the client is well served and well represented, and that nothing interferes with that."

WSYR-TV opponents try again on another front

The FCC renewal of Newhouse Broadcasting Corp.'s WSYR-TV Syracuse, N.Y., has been appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington by the Syracuse
Any TV station can inform consumers. We use a law school to protect them.

Consumer protection is a goal of the law. But the people who need that protection the most are usually the ones who don't know how to get it. That's why WRC-TV—an NBC Owned Television Station—works with a law school to protect its viewers.

Every week, 40 students from George Washington University Law Center work with Emmy Award-winner Lea Thompson solving consumer complaints in conjunction with Contact 4—the consumer protection program of WRC-TV in Washington, D.C.

These students handle every consumer request and complaint that comes into the television station.

In the three years of its existence, Contact 4 has investigated over 45,000 cases of fraud and abuse. Over 90 per cent of these cases have been resolved, saving viewers an average of $1,000 a day, every day. All that, in addition to responding to over 225,000 requests for reprints of materials prepared by the unit on subjects like Small Claims Court, Safe Children's Sleepwear, and a guide to Free Legal Advice.

Contact 4 is just one of the unique consumer protection services afforded by all five NBC Owned Television Stations. The work of our reporters—like Emmy Award-winner David Horowitz of KNBC Los Angeles and Betty Furness of WNBC-TV New York, who was just named recipient of the coveted Peabody Award—has received nationwide attention.

At the NBC Owned Television Stations, we believe our responsibility goes beyond merely informing the public of their rights. We help get them!
 Coalition for the Free Flow of Information.

The appeal followed the commission's rejection of the coalition's petition to deny the 1975 license renewal of the station. The coalition had contended that renewal would be inconsistent with antitrust law and policy. It would, the petition said, perpetuate the high degree of concentration of news and advertising resulting from Newhouse's ownership of WSyr-AM-FM-TV and the two daily and Sunday newspapers in Syracuse.

The commission, in rejecting the petition, had said that there are a number of other broadcast stations in Syracuse.

It said that, in the absence of an egregious monopoly situation, there was no basis for concern based solely on a structural analysis of Newhouse's broadcast-newspaper ownership in the city.

The commission also said the coalition had not shown any specific abuses arising from the common ownership of the media properties.

BFMA merges sessions

The Broadcast Financial Management Association has canceled two of four scheduled human resources workshops. Each workshop consists of two days of sessions on motivation, problem-solving and communications, led by Clifford R. Woodbury, a Chicago consultant. The first workshop, in New York May 5-6, attracted 20 participants, and the next one, in New Orleans May 19-20, has about the same number enrolled. Two deleted workshops were initially scheduled in Chicago and San Francisco.

Starr is to turn into Shamrock

Connecticut-based group owner and Roy Disney-owned company agree to $21.6-million merger

Starr Broadcasting Group, Westport, Conn., has reached agreement to merge into Shamrock Broadcasting Inc., Los Angeles, in a transaction valued at approximately $21.6 million.

Shamrock, which was formed by the Roy E. Disney family to acquire Starr, will pay each Starr stockholder $15.25 per share. There are 1,413,785 Starr shares outstanding.

The agreement gives Shamrock a 60-day period to undertake business, accounting and other investigations of Starr. During the investigation period Shamrock may terminate the agreement without cause.

The proposal has been approved by Starr's board of directors and is subject to similar action by Starr stockholders and the FCC.

The agreement with Shamrock came as something of a surprise. LIN Broadcasting, New York, in the last of several offers, recently tried to acquire Starr at $16 per share (BROADCASTING, May 18).

Last month it was reported that shareholders owning about 45% of Starr's common stock had "voluntarily agreed in principle" to a merger under which Shamrock would pay each Starr holder $14.50 per share (BROADCASTING, April 17).

Commenting on LIN's subsequent higher offer, Bruce Johnson, Starr's president, explained that the LIN bid was turned down because it would have involved spin-offs of at least six stations.

The transfers would have been mandated because FCC rules permit a single company to own more than 21 stations—seven TV's, seven AM's and seven FM's. Starr owns four AM's, four FM's and two TV's but the one in Honolulu, KITV-TV, has two satellite stations on the islands, which are counted as separate licenses under FCC rules, according to Mr. Johnson.

LIN owns 11 radio and television stations and is in the process of acquiring two more. Another complicating factor was that both LIN and Starr own stations in Houston and Dallas.

"We have nothing but praise for LIN," Mr. Johnson said, "but we felt the Shamrock offer made more sense."

Starr stations are KSLR(AM) North Little Rock, Ark.; KABL-AM-FM Oakland-San Francisco; WBOK(AM) New Orleans, KYOK(AM) Houston; KUDL-FM Kansas City, Kan.; WWWW(FM) Detroit; KMGCFM Dallas; WTVQ-TV Lexington, Ky.; KITV-TV Honolulu; KHVO(TV) Hilo and KMLI-TV Waikiki, Hawaii.

Starr's announcement said some members of the company's board intend to resign if the merger is completed. These directors all voted in favor of the merger and are William F. Buckley Jr., board chairman, Jim Long and Glenn Burrus. Starr said that if Long resigned, Tom Merriam, an official of a Starr subsidiary in Dallas, would replace him on the Starr board.
CP means stronger coverage in FM broadcast.

And Jampro is the CP leader.

Circularly polarized broadcast antennas deliver the strongest signal to any randomly polarized FM receiving antenna. That's because CP transmissions are radiated in both the horizontal and vertical planes.

Achieving high CP performance in practical FM broadcasting antennas is a sophisticated engineering task and a demanding manufacturing feat.

Even though Cetec Jampro is the world leader in high-performance CP antennas for FM broadcast, there's nothing routine about any Jampro antenna. Even our standard models are customized to each installation.

There are ten models each in our high-power line, multi-station line, and super-power line. We also produce ten elliptically polarized antennas in a low-power, low-cost range, specifically for Class A and educational applications.

We back up state-of-the-art engineering know-how with computer testing and pattern adjustment, and rugged, all-weather construction of high-strength brass. Jampro antennas are designed and built for high-performance under the toughest conditions.

The bottom line is that Jampro leads the way in CP antennas for FM broadcast. The proof is in the field, at radio stations around the world.

New CBS schedule finds favor with its affiliates

‘Kaz’ seen as most likely to succeed; doubts about girl shows; network itself all confidence

CBS-TV affiliates welcomed their network’s new fall schedule last week with some reservations but general approval and in some cases enthusiasm.

“Much better than what they showed us a year ago,” one affiliate said after witnessing screenings of the new shows during the annual affiliates convention in Los Angeles. His judgment seemed to reflect the reactions of affiliates generally.

Kaz, a one-hour drama centering on a jailhouse lawyer hired by a prominent law firm, received high marks from almost all affiliates. Of the eight new shows being introduced by CBS, it was generally rated most likely to succeed, followed by WKRP in Cincinnati, a comedy about a little-listened-to radio station that converts to rock.

People, patterned after the magazine of the same name, also received good marks and by most of the affiliates questioned by reporters was given a good chance to succeed. Paper Chase, a one-hour drama about first-year law students, was widely hailed for its quality but was also regarded by many affiliates as “too heavy” to carry the night against its Happy Days and Laverne and Shirley opposition on ABC-TV.

“If we’re going to lose Tuesday night, we might as well do it with a quality show,” one affiliate said after the Paper Chase screening.

Mary, a variety show starring Mary Tyler Moore, also seemed to get a warm response, while Just the Beginning, about a “worldly wise nun” and a “conservative” priest running an inner-city storefront mission, received mixed reviews from affiliates assessing its prospects for success.

Most consistently put into the doubtful class were Flying High, often dismissed as too obvious an attempt to copy ABC’s highly successful Charlie’s Angels, and The American Girls, although even the critics conceded that either or both might prove highly successful.

The screenings were interspersed among program presentations that concealed no possibility of failure.

Robert A. Daly, president of CBS Entertainment, launched the at-times combative series of program presentations with a reminder of progress made and a promise of more to come.

In addition to rebuilding the prime-time schedule, he said, the newly formed CBS Entertainment division has rebuilt “a strong, talented and innovative program organization.” And he told the affiliates that the division intends to strengthen its communications with them.

“We intend to make more frequent use of our closed-circuit facilities to tell you in advance of any significant program changes and why we’re making them,” he promised.

B. Donald Grant, vice president, programs, came out fighting.

“ABC is clearly in a decline,” he asserted. “The facts are apparent. The numbers do not lie. We have cut their lead in the January-April period by 65%. Our momentum is building, and our schedule is designed to further reduce or eliminate that lead completely.

“NBC, this past year, valiantly tried to make up for lack of series strength by playing specials and miniseries. Doing better than could be expected, they nevertheless finished third, three-quarters of a point—that is, 600,000 homes per average minute—behind CBS. Any program development of significance takes at least a year. And NBC next year, as this past year, will have to rely again on specials, movies made for television and miniseries. These have, in fact, already been ordered.”

After a night-by-night rundown of the new prime-time schedule—announced the week before (Broadcasting, May 8), Mr. Daly...
Grant told the affiliates again: "The momentum is with us. Our schedule is a balanced schedule—an innovative new program such as People, outstanding comedy in WKRP in Cincinnati and Just the Beginning, intelligent quality drama as in Paper Chase—and Kaz, a unique television personality that will make Ron Liebman a shooting star—very strong commercial concepts such as Flying High and The American Girls—all topped by the enormously popular and incredibly talented Mary."

"We are definitely on our way back."

Bernie Sofronski, vice president, special programs, said CBS's original entertainment specials during the past season—114 hours of them—outperformed the programs they replaced by an average of 14%, with many turning in rating superiority far above that average, up to a high of 108% in the case of Elvis. And the 1978-79 season, he said, will have "new people and new events" as well as the traditional award shows, pageants and parades.

Among the specials being planned, Mr. Sofronski said, are Star Wars Holiday Special, "perhaps the most lavish show of the season"; "exciting new anniversary specials," such as Hollywood's Diamond Jubilee; an animated film based on The Gnomes by Will Huygen, "a book about creatures who are six inches tall and seven times stronger than man"; dramas such as Bogie, "the dramatic story of one of the most beloved actors of all time"; Circle of Children—Part Two; Carol Burnett in The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank, based on the best seller by Irma Bombeck; a drama based on the French painter, Gaugin; The Bing Crosby Story and one based on the life of Hubert Humphrey, plus a roster of musical and variety specials that includes A Country Christmas with Roy Clark and Loretta Lynn and "an all-star celebrity magic special starring David Copperfield."

A rundown of theatrical and made-for-TV movies on tap or being planned was offered by Bill Self, vice president for motion pictures for television and ministries—topped, perhaps, by his disclosure that the veteran George Cukor will direct Katharine Hepburn in a TV movie of "The Corn Is Green."

Among other made-for-TV movies on the schedule, he said, are Les Miserables, First You Cry, Why the Caged Bird Sings, The Orchard Children, One in a Million, and Women on the Edge, while the theatrical-movie list included Gone With the Wind, "Black Sunday," Marathon Man, "Network," Carrie, Poseidon Adventure and Rocky.

Mr. Self said four to six miniseries will be offered. His presentation included clips from two: Haywire, based on the book by Brooks Hayward, and The Pirate, based on the Harold Robbins novel.

CBS's new daytime schedule, previously announced, was reviewed by Michael Ogiens, vice president, daytime programs, who also got in a few shots at ABC. It is true, he said, that ABC has become more competitive in daytime, ending the season in "a virtual tie with CBS" for first place, but these advances have not been on a broad, across-the-board basis. Rather, he said, they have come from "unusually high ratings" for two programs, Happy Days and Family Feud.

"As we expected," he added, "their serial expansion of One Life To Live and General Hospital have not been particularly successful."

"I don't mean by all of this to minimize the ABC improvement," Mr. Ogiens continued. "I just wanted to put it in the proper perspective for you. Your network does not take this situation lightly. Consequently we are planning whatever action might be necessary to reverse this situation. In other words, while we remain basically strong and our strengths are apparent, we have plans to help those areas that show any signs of weakness."

"We are currently engaged in an ongoing analysis to determine how to best maximize the strength of our current hit programs. In addition we have accelerated our new program development and we are carefully supervising the creative quality of all our shows."

In what is an almost obligatory part of meetings of any network with its affiliates, he also told his audience that they could help by giving better clearances. With full clearance, he said, CBS's ratings at 10 a.m. would improve by approximately 20% and at 4 p.m. by 27%, thus boosting the ratings for the entire daytime schedule.

The new line-up of programs for children, also previously announced, will be augmented by a five-part miniseries—the story not yet selected—to run at 4-4:30 p.m. NYT the week of Nov. 27 as well as by the new 30 Minutes public service series, according to Jerry Golod, vice president, children's programs. Other extra features, Mr. Golod said, will include a one-hour UNICEF International Year of the Child and new programs in both the performing and nonperforming arts. The Monday-Friday Captain Kangaroo will retain the dental hygiene elements that won endorsement from the American Dental Association and will add nutrition, good health and physical fitness elements—52 in all.

In addition to all the reports on where programming was going in the new season, affiliates heard from Arnold Becker, the CBS/Broadcast Group vice president for television network research, an accounting of how it fared in the past season. Over-all, he said, it fared better than either of its competitors, while in prime time, though it was still second to ABC-TV in the ratings, it was a stronger second than the year before—and growing stronger still.

"Next fall's sales," he said, "will be based primarily on first-quarter results, and that is why the more current January-April data are so exciting." For that period, Mr. Becker said, "your network leads NBC
HOW TO TELL WHEN YOUR CAR NEEDS A TUNE-UP
AND HOW TO BE SURE YOU DON'T PAY FOR MORE SERVICE THAN YOU NEED.

Remember the old Spring and Fall tune-ups? There was a time when GM cars needed tune-ups every year. But that was a long time ago. Since 1973, we've been building cars that don't need anywhere near as much routine maintenance as they used to.

Now, a lot of people are getting tune-ups they don't really need. Probably out of habit.

Break the habit, and you'll save yourself some money. The maintenance schedule and the owner's manual your GM dealer gives you with your new GM car will tell you exactly what scheduled maintenance is required and when. Some of the newer schedules may surprise you.

For example, spark plugs used to have to be changed every 12,000 miles. Now it's every 22,500 or 30,000, depending on which new GM car you bought. For most drivers that means changing plugs every two years instead of every year.

When you bought your first car, you probably changed oil every 1,000 miles. We upped it to 6,000 a few years ago; and now it's 7,500 on all new GM cars except diesels.

Or take distributor points and condensers. They never need replacing with GM's new high energy ignition system. It doesn't have any points or condensers.

If you do have trouble with your car, just fix what needs fixing. When you take your car in for service, tell the mechanic exactly what's happening. If it's hard to start, it's probable the mechanic may not be able to pinpoint what's wrong, and he won't have to make unnecessary repairs. That can save you time and money.

Some things have to be watched more carefully, depending on how and where you drive your car. For example, if you do a lot of driving on dry, dusty roads, you may need to change the air cleaner and oil filter more often than the maintenance schedule indicates. Remember, the maintenance schedule that comes with your car is based on average driving conditions.

If you have an older car that still needs an annual tune-up, what should it include? There are some basic things to be checked: spark plugs, points, condensers, idling speed, and drive belts.

It can't hurt to check the air cleaner and fuel filter, tire pressure, and brake fluid, either. And when you do take your car in for a tune-up, don't be shy. Find out exactly what you need and what you're getting for your money.

We're trying to make GM cars easier and more economical to service. We've been able to stretch out the maintenance intervals for new GM cars, which should reduce the cost of routine maintenance; and we're working on engineering improvements that should reduce the amount of required maintenance even further. We want to be sure our cars perform well for their entire lifetime, without costing you a lot of time and money in maintenance. That's better for you and better for us.

People building transportation to serve people
Owning up. The CBS Sports division’s troubles with the FCC were not glossed over at the CBS-TV affiliates convention last week. Frank Smith Jr., named acting president of the division in the aftermath of the problem, told the affiliates he had found the division needs “direction, control and planning,” but that he had also found “a very solid foundation on which to build.”

The thing to do and the thing that will be done, he said, is to present sports in an informative way, “without hype,” and to be competitive “without losing sight of the rules. … We want to be proud of everything we put on the air and we want you to share that pride.”

Gene F. Jankowski, president of the CBS/Broadcast Group, who went on the air last month in an unprecedented broadcast apologizing for CBS’s billing tennis matches as “winner take all” when they weren’t, also took note of the problem. “We have cooperated fully with the investigations of the FCC and Chairman [Lionel] Van Deerlin’s House committee,” he said in an opening speech. “We all trust that, in its deliberations, the FCC will take into account the full story of CBS, in sports and in other areas, and not condemn 50 years of broadcasting for a few errors in judgment. At this time, we can do no more than wait for the FCC to issue its decision.”

by 1.3 rating points, while ABC leads us by 1.2. Last season, during the January-April period, ABC led by 3.4 rating points. We have cut their lead by 65%.

“Furthermore, five of your network’s programs are among the 10 most popular prime-time programs—more than either of our competitors. And these are the programs that are the building blocks for the future. So the battle goes well in prime time. The tide is turning. Momentum is beginning to work for us, rather than against us.”

Mr. Becker offered a rundown, daypart by daypart, to show that, over-all, CBS-TV is the network people watch most (BROADCASTING, May 8). Moreover, he said, on this basis—sign-on to sign-off—CBS affiliates fared better than their ABC or NBC competitors in the Arbitron February sweep measurements of local television markets.

“There are 152 markets in which a CBS affiliate competes with an NBC affiliate,” he said. “In 15 of these markets the CBS affiliate and the NBC affiliate were tied. In the remaining 137 markets, the CBS affiliate beat the NBC affiliate 94 times—more than twice as many CBS affiliates as NBC affiliates were first.

“Similarly, there are 143 markets in which a CBS affiliate competes with an ABC affiliate. There were 12 ties, but in the remaining 131 markets the CBS affiliate beat the ABC affiliate 72 times,” he concluded.

Five years of Daytona 500 are picked up by CBS-TV

CBS Sports has acquired rights to live coverage of the Daytona 500, billed as the pre-destined event in stock-car racing, for the next five years. CBS-TV affiliates were told at their annual meeting last week. The races are run in February and will be covered live for the first time, under the new contract, CBS Sports officials said. The 1979 event to be held on a Sunday afternoon, will be covered in its entirety, the affiliates were told. It is expected to last three and a half hours.

CBS-TV affiliates promised more help in beating drums

Network’s Sohmer runs down expanded list of promotions and materials to be offered; included are more co-op money, special blurbs from Cronkite and other personalities, tennis clinics for customers, help on local ‘Hot Car’ club

A greatly enlarged array of tools to make local selling easier and to build audiences was promised to CBS-TV affiliates last week by Steve Sohmer, the CBS Entertainment vice president in charge of advertising and promotion.

He told the annual conference of CBS affiliates that the support they will get from CBS-TV for the 1978-79 season will range from conventional promos and co-op allowances to monthly sales presentations, tennis clinics for them and their adversisers, training courses for their promotion directors, and the “Hot Car” promotion campaign and custom-built local news promos based on their own ascertainment studies and featuring appearances by CBS newsman Walter Cronkite.

“We are focusing on the entire broadcast day—not just the hours of networking,” Mr. Sohmer asserted. “Second, we’re using our resources of manpower and imagination to find new ways to help you make money. We’ve developed a series of new sales promotion tools designed to give you a competitive edge in your local marketplace.”

Even the conventional promotional materials, he said, will be improved. The fall campaign graphics—a “CBS satellite version of the Golden Eye”—and campaign music will be distributed before June 1 “so that your staff can begin work on your own fall campaign earlier than ever before.” Custom graphics will be distributed in June. There’ll be color slides for all prime-time shows, “but for the first time ever, these will include your station identification.” Ad kits for newspapers and

TV Guide will have “a new look” that “will allow you to grab more attention with smaller space units—in other words, more bang per buck.” And a reel of radio spots “created by some of the top talent in the business” will be shipped on June 10, “targeted for the key audience you’ll want to reach.”

Co-op allowances, Mr. Sohmer said, will be increased by 15% to 20% of 10% plus any increase that has occurred in newspaper advertising rates. There’ll also be an increase in the allowance for use of radio—“up to $1 in radio for every $3 you spend in newspapers out of your total co-op allowance.”

In the first week of June, he continued, affiliates will receive a 25-minute fall sales presentation film—a complete film for those who prefer it, a video tape with script for local narration for those who prefer that. And each month, beginning in September, there’ll be a five-minute sales presentation based on upcoming specials.

In addition, he said, “to dress up your sales meetings, we’re now taking orders for posters of CBS stars, making available a limited amount of CBS-identification merchandise, for use as business gifts to your key accounts.” Seasonal audience-promotion campaigns will be continued, and there’ll also be “Season’s Greetings” promos in December, plus messages from CBS stars urging viewers to watch carefully over the New Year’s holiday.

“We’ve also come up with a new program to help build the ratings of your local news with the help of the most trusted man in America, Walter Cronkite,” Mr. Sohmer continued. “We’ve developed a new kind of promotion spot, one which will identify Walter Cronkite with your local community and at the same time identify your station as the one to turn to for the best coverage of important local issues.

“Information for each spot must be drawn from the station’s ascertainment reports, and must show that the station is actually working to create a forum for public discussion of important local issues. If you wish to have this campaign for your local news, contact Peter Hereford of the CBS News division. It may take a little work and commitment, but I think you’ll agree that this sort of promotion will pay off in the ratings.

“We’ve also developed a new kind of local advertiser promotion to build sales in slow months and to help your salesmen get close to top advertisers on a personal basis,” he continued. “We’ve made special arrangements with the Tennis Grand Masters to stage day-long tennis clinics for CBS affiliates and their adversisers. This promotion will pay off in good will and hard cash. If you’d like one of these workshops in your market, contact Bob Hosking, our vice president for affiliate relations. And act quickly. The supply of available dates is limited.”

And then, he said, there is the “Hot Car” promotion, used “with great success” by WMAQ-TV Boston and CBS’s Raiding the Highway Trust Fund is a Poor Energy Policy.

America is running out of gasoline. Our dependence on foreign sources continues to grow at an alarming rate. The balance of payments problem gets more serious each year. America's business community as well as our friends overseas clamor for a strong, effective national energy policy. In the face of these problems, special interest groups persist in their efforts to raid the Highway Trust Fund for uses other than its original intent: to complete the U.S. Interstate Highway System.

Putting aside the favorable safety and economic factors of the Interstate System, let's take a realistic look at how it contributes to a positive energy policy. It's as simple as this: completion of the Interstate Highway System will allow our cars and trucks to move across the country more efficiently. Fewer stops for traffic lights. Less congested areas to contend with. More direct routes to destinations. The end result: significantly less consumption of gasoline.

Now that's an energy savings America can't afford to give up.

The American motorist pays an average of $38 a year into the Highway Trust Fund. Trucks which comprise 18.8% of the vehicles on the road, pay 41.8% of the taxes that go into the Fund. To divert money paid in good faith for more efficient highways and use it for local non-highway projects would be unfair to the millions of taxpayers from whom it was collected. And it would reduce a significant contribution to energy conservation.

ABC gets off on right foot in May sweeps

It takes the first week while CBS and NBC each win one night

ABC-TV, mixing specials with original episodes of its regular series, won four of the first six nights of the May sweep period, jumping into an early prime-time lead for the month with an 18.3 rating-point average to CBS-TV's 17.2 and NBC-TV's 16.4.

The highest-rated program of those six nights (May 3-8) was the second episode of NBC's miniseries, Wheels, which scored a 26.5 rating and a 43 share on Monday—the only night to be won by NBC. Wheels' premiere episode the night before pulled a 22.2/36, but local overnight ratings in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago for Part III showed it dropping to a 32 share average on Tuesday. (Wheels, which was scheduled at 9-11 p.m. NYT throughout its run, is to conclude on Sunday and Monday, May 14-15.)

The runner-up program in the early sweeps competition was ABC's special all-star version of the daytime and syndicated game show, Family Feud, which pulled a 24.1/39 on Monday (8-9 p.m. NYT). That led into another ABC special, The Stars Salute Israel at 30, which plummeted to a 12.8/21. Specials winning their time periods included ABC's The Phenomenon of Benji (the movie dog), which scored a 21.2/39 on Thursday, and CBS's rerun of Elvis in Concert on Sunday, which had a 20.6/34 coming off 60 Minutes 22.6/42—giving CBS its only nightly win. Big losers in the specials category were NBC's Rock 'n Roll Sports Classic on Wednesday (15.0/25) and CBS's Junior Miss Pageant on Monday (16.2/26).

Besides 60 Minutes, strong series performances (34 shares or better) were turned in by ABC's Eight is Enough, Charlie's Angels, Starsky and Hutch, Love Boat and Fantasy Island, all of them original episodes. Lowest-rated on the series totem pole were a number of new shows in the midst of tryout runs. NBC's Roller Girls and Joe and Valerie had two showings each during the week of May 1-7. The first came on Monday, when the two shows occupied Little House on the Prairie's lead-off spot. Both had 31 shares, but on Wednesday they again took over the lead-off hour and their shares fell to 23 and 19, respectively. Also on Wednesday, CBS's Spiderman (which has been considered a strong possibility for back-up status next fall) scored its third consecutive 29 share, quite a bit lower than the two 37 shares it started out with. Other series in the midst of tryout runs, among them NBC's Hanna Barbera Hour, ABC's Mel and Susan Together and CBS's Ted Knight and Rita Moreno.

Networks wish upon the stars

ABC-TV to try some variations in its largely holdover line-up; CBS-TV to make cast changes for three of its returning series

Since ABC-TV plans to bring 21 of its current prime-time series back next fall—84% of its total schedule—it stands to reason that the network is emphasizing that those returning shows will be spiced up in various ways to give them a new look.

During a presentation of the new schedule to advertisers, ABC Entertainment President Anthony Thomopoulos outlined how some of those changes will unfold. Most of the spicing will derive from focusing on previously secondary characters (for example, Ralph on Happy Days will fall in love; Shirley the waitress will gain more attention on What's Happening), or in more romantic adventures for the featured players (such as those in Charlie's Angels and Starkey and Hutch).

On the other hand the female half of the Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew Mysteries team will be eliminated as the show concentrates on teen-star Shawn Cassidy (who would have been free to work for NBC-TV if his series were canceled) and his partner, Parker Stevenson.

Probably the newest single element in a returning ABC program will be the addition of child-actress Quinn Cummings to the regular cast of Family. She was nominated for an Academy Award this year for her supporting role as the daughter in "The Goodbye Girl."

Two stars who have moved in the opposite direction—from ABC-TV to film—will make occasional appearances on the series that launched them. John Travolta is to appear in eight episodes of Welcome Back, Kotter, and will be featured in most of those episodes; Farrah Fawcett-Majors has agreed to appear in three episodes of Charlie's Angels as part of her settlement of a contract dispute with producers Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg.

CBS-TV also has a star returning to a former role after a dispute with her producers—Ester Rolle, who will again portray Florida Evans in Tandem Productions' Good Times. Meanwhile, CBS's All in the Family will be doing without Rob Reiner and Sally Struthers, while The Waltons lost Will Geer (who died April 22). Ellen Corby's further participation in that show depends on her health, according to a CBS spokesman.

Sonny & Cher follow Burnett's lead

In terms of syndication, what's good for Carol Burnett is good for Sonny & Cher. Using the same technique as it did in packaging 120 half-hour episodes of Carol Burnett & Friends, Los Angeles-based Television Representations Inc. is planning to extract 100 half-hour's worth of comedy sketches from the 1972-76 CBS-TV run of The Sonny & Cher Comedy Show. The first commitment for a fall start has come from WPIX-TV New York.

Like the syndicated Burnett show, also culled from CBS-TV hours, the music and big-production numbers will be edited out of The Sonny & Cher version. And again like Burnett, "substantial residuals" will put the show on the expensive side, according to Alan Silverbach, former senior vice president of worldwide distribution for 20th Century-Fox Television, who is credited with coming up with the Burnett syndication technique. Mr. Silverbach's partner in Television Representations is Herb Lazarus, former vice president and general manager of Columbia Pictures Television's international unit.

The off-network Burnett which began airing last October now runs on about 55 stations. Among the takers are Metromedia's WNEW-TV New York and KTTV(TV) Los Angeles, which strip it at 7:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., respectively.

Newcomer to the world of television distribution

Metro Productions half hours will be sold by Television Syndication Group

Television Syndication Group has been set up with headquarters in Stratford, Conn., to distribute 500 first-run half hours produced by Hollywood-based Metro Productions.

Involved are nine series that Metro introduced at the annual National Association of Television Program Executives conference in March, with the vast majority of episodes having been individually financed by investors seeking tax shelters. Investors Management Services, also based in Stratford, bought the rights-holders together for distribution purposes and entered a five-year agreement with Television Syndication Group.

The series are The Melting Pot, 130 episodes on ethnic cooking with Orson Bean as host, joined by guest celebrities; America Sings, choral groups (54 episodes); Sky's the Limit, comedy/variety (27); Down Home USA, bluegrass music (52); So What's New, comedy/instruction (78); Eat Yourself Healthy, nutrition experts (78); Coping, pop psychology (130); The Sacred Space, religion (39), and Master Bridge, champion Edwin Kantar and guest stars (26).

Television Syndication Group is owned by Jeffrey P. Smith, who has worked as a financial consultant for IMS. Regional distributors for TSG are Milt Strasser and Milt Strasser Associates, Spring Valley, N.Y., for the Eastern U.S.; Donald Herrick of TV Sports Scene, Minneapolis, for central states and Canada; Tom Thuman of Tri-centennial Productions, Houston, for the South, and DonColapinto of The Television Program Distribution Co., Los Angeles, for the West.

Frost six parter airs on NBC-TV this summer

'Headliners' will have among several segments one that takes a critical look at television

David Frost, who took on Richard Nixon on television a year ago, now is taking on the medium itself as part of an NBC-TV miniseries.

To be called Headliners with David Frost, the shows will air for six consecutive Wednesdays, beginning May 31, in the 9-10 p.m. NYT time period. Both Mr. Frost and NBC doubt at the moment that the Headliners format will be taken beyond that run, although he is under contract to the network to develop other projects.

One segment discussing "what is right and what is wrong" with television is to be a regular feature of the program, according to John Gilroy, producer for Mr. Frost's Parade Productions. Because the hope is to maintain as much topicality as possible in the show—many of the segments have yet to be taped—the producers are being closed-mouthed about who will participate. But Mr. Gilroy said that candidates for the TV segment would include independent and studio producers, network executives and other members of the industry. Mr. Frost, who has said his program will "not sidestep controversy," adds that that credo will go for the show's treatment of TV issues as well. "We are free to praise CBS or ABC—or criticize NBC," he said, "not that there's anything to criticize about NBC, of course."

Headliners will originate live from New York with Mr. Frost as host. Mr. Gilroy said that RCA portable TK-76 cameras will be used both in the studio and in exterior segments, which are to be recorded on three-quarter-inch tape. Other regular features of the program include a "headliner" interview with an important personality; a gossip segment with syndicated columnist Liz Smith; a "song of the week," in which a single tune will be featured with background information on the performer and the business; an "action profile" of somebody famous, in which the cameras will follow the personality at work and at play; a "Forum" feature that will be put together from a series of questions Mr. Frost submits to numerous personalities; and a satirical wrap-up of the week's events similar in concept to Mr. Frost's old show, That Was the Week That Was, and a debate on topics from born-again Christianity to abortion, with the studio audience joining in.

Showtime taps Qube for specials

In what's described as the "first nationwide live pay-cable entertainment program," Viacom's Showtime has taken a Warner Qube production with psychic David Hoy (already cablecast on Warner's two-way system in Columbus, Ohio) and plans to distribute it live by satellite to affiliates. The five element in the Showtime version will be subscriber call-ins to Mr. Hoy. Showtime will handle that portion of the 90-minute special (the studio location hasn't been chosen yet); Warner, however, will provide the toll-free number. Showtime also has purchased four other Qube productions: three Cafe Manhattan specials and A Paris Spectacular. Showtime President Jeffrey Reiss called the agreement "the first substantial pact between two pay-cable suppliers" and said he anticipates more will be coming before year-end.

Children and TV are subject of conference

NAB-sponsored gathering meets next month with representatives from industry and citizen groups

Plans are being completed for the National Association of Broadcasters children's programing conference, June 4-6 at the Hyatt Regency hotel in Washington.

Among the special features of the gathering, which is to be an idea exchange and showcase for children's programing, is a series of four "Meet the Issues" sessions to be moderated by Bill Monroe, moderator of NBC's Meet the Press. The four panels and their topics: (1) "Federal Funding and Children's Programing?" with Dr. Nicholas Van Dyck, executive director of the National Council for Children and Television, Princeton, N.J., and Gene Mater, vice president and assistant to the president, CBS/Broadcast Group; (2) "Socko Saturdays?—Prime Time Crime?" with Dr. George Gerbner, dean of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications, Philadelphia, and Roger Wagner of BI As-sociates, Washington; (3) "Positively Powerful Programing?" with FCC Commissioner Abbott Wetter and Susan Futterman, manager of children's programing for broadcast standards and practices, ABC, and (4) "What is Children's Programing?" with Richard Jencks, former CBS Washington vice president, and Peggy Charren, president, Action for Children's Television, New York.

Another feature will be a 30-minute film program narrated by Michael Landon, actor, producer and director, who reviews developments in programing for young viewers and discusses commercial television's increasing use as an adjunct to classroom teaching. The program, "Children, Television and Change," is sponsored by the Television Information Office and is the second in the TIO series, "Television in America."

Throughout the conference, current children's programing will be screened, with people involved in the productions on hand to answer questions.

Other workshops will be devoted to new

Program Briefs

Sports connection. Network sports presidents and House Communications Subcommittee members will be among participants in Boston University’s second annual Institute in Broadcast Sports May 23-30. Eight-credit course will feature appearances by more than 30 broadcast and sports figures, including NBC Sports President Chet Simmons, ABC Sports Director Chet Forte and Communications Subcommittee Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.). Tuition is $685 for program.

Peace. Writers Guild of America East and Children’s Television Workshop have signed first contract covering Sesame Street. It will apply to all children’s programs produced by CTW. Contract provides for additional payments to writers for use of material in merchandising and for overseas use and certain domestic uses. Six freelance writers on Sesame Street will receive 10% increase in fees for scripts. Guild has been on strike against CTW since March 3.

Consultants. Robert Berger, producer of NBC-TV series, Holocaust, confirmed published reports that man thought to be former Nazi SS officer was used briefly as consultant on show to supply details about uniforms and execution techniques unavailable from other sources. Several former Nazi soldiers were also employed, he said.

On the record. ABC, in written comments on legislation in House to create royalties that broadcasters and other users of recorded music would have to pay record performers and manufacturers, said it isn’t fair to make broadcasters correct imbalance in pay in record industry. “If... background singers and sidemen are underpaid, this is a matter for the recording industry to deal with in the context of traditional employer-employee relationships,” it said, “it should not be clouded by the injection of so-called ‘copyright’ considerations.”

Pennzoil’s programing. With airings already begun April 15 for Wild World of Stunts, 30-minute barter special from Pennzoil Motor Oil’s Los Angeles film center, company division is preparing another barter half-hour, Saddleback Superstars, featuring celebrity motorcyclists, and hopes to have it ready by June 1. Stunts already have been taken by 61 stations, ranging from KBTW-TV Denver to KOMU-TV Honolulu.

Keep running. ABC Sports secured three-year extension on its contract for TV rights to Kentucky Derby. New deal runs through 1982 at undisclosed price.

Heavy sales. ITC Entertainment is claiming 86% U.S. clearance so far for its new prime-time entry, Bonanza, with sales in 49 of top 50 markets, 122 markets in U.S. over-all and 41 abroad. On owned-and-operated front, all three networks are represented. NBC’s WMAQ-TV Chicago bought it after CBS’s WBBM-TV there gave it up. Original deal for all five CBS O&O’s had ITC escape clause for Chicago if access spot couldn’t be found (WBBM-TV’s offering news in that time period Monday-Friday and ITC’s Muppets on Saturday). ABC has taken it for WXYZ-TV Detroit.

Let there be dark. Along with “Secretaries Day” and “Sun Day”, there’s now “Turn Off Your TV Day,” May 23. Morality in Media, organization that wants to replace “pornography” in media with “love, truth and good taste,” is promoting TV blackout day to protest networks’ plans “to increase sex-oriented TV programing in upcoming fall season.” Organization’s chairman, Rabbi Dr. Julius G. Neumann, says “a series of TV blackouts could eventually cut into advertising revenues, and this seems to be the only language the networks understand.”

Top quarter. MCA Inc., in terms of its television operation, has reported highest revenues for any quarter in its history, with 12.9% gain to $100.3 million over same three months last year. Over-all MCA Inc. revenues for period ended March 31 were $236.4 million, up 19.4% and highest for any first quarter; it was second highest first quarter for net income—$21.4 million, up 33%—and earnings per share—$1.15, up 33.7%.

Ready for launch. First Operation Prime Time effort this year—two two-hour episodes of John Jakes’s The Bastard—is set for airplay on 91 stations beginning this weekend. Line-up for MCA TV/Universal project breaks down to 25 independents, 14 ABC-TV affiliates, 27 CBS-TV affiliates and 25 NBC-TV affiliates. Cleared are all of top 35 markets and 48 of top 50. Other 1978 OPT projects are Irwin Shaw’s Evening in Byzantium (already in production) and Howard Fast’s The Immigrants.

Media mix. Video Music Inc. reports it has sold Leonard Bernstein Conducts TV series (two 90-minute programs, five hours) in more than 45 markets. That involves both commercial and noncommercial outlets as well as Warner’s two-way Qube cable system in Columbus, Ohio.

Flying high. Program Syndication Services, subsidiary of Dancer Fitzgerald Sample, claims 69 stations already on board for 21 Days of America, minute capsules with celebrities keying history to U.S. flags. Series, for cash, starts June 14 (Flag Day), ends July 4. Similar PSS venture, 24 Days of Christmas, aired last year and new version is planned. Carter-Grant Productions handles production of both series.

Ninety minutes over Tokyo. Noncommercial WHYY-TV Philadelphia has received $200,000 from SmithKline Corp., pharmaceutical manufacturer, to produce 90-minute documentary of spring tour of Japan by Philadelphia orchestra. SmithKline has also allocated about $100,000 to promote and advertise program, which is scheduled for fall airing on Public Broadcasting Service.

How soon a successor to Salant?

You pay your money and you take your choice—between the speeches of John Backe and Gene Jankowski, that is; No. 1 says it's top priority, No. 2 says there's plenty of time.

CBS-TV affiliates were reminded twice last week that a change in the top command at CBS News is coming up. But the reminders seemed to reflect differing degrees of urgency in planning the succession.

"As most of you know," President Gene F. Jankowski of the CBS/Broadcast Group said in a wide-ranging speech early in the CBS-TV affiliates convention, "Dick Salant [president of CBS News] isn't planning to retire until April of next year.

"That's a long way off. In the meantime, he is active not only in the day-to-day running of CBS News but also in another area—creation of new product."

A few hours later, at the Tuesday luncheon, CBS Inc. President John D. Backe told the affiliates:

"As you know, CBS News is approaching a major change. Dick Salant, after a brilliant career at CBS and an illustrious tenure as president of CBS News, will be leaving us in April 1979. I know you're all concerned about this. Let me assure you that the transition will be orderly and professional. It will be designed to maintain the audience pre-eminence of CBS News as the very best broadcast news organization in the world.

"We are determined to hold onto those laurels, so richly earned and so conscientiously maintained. That is why I view the question of the future top management of CBS News as of pressing importance. If you were to ask me for my present agenda of priorities, this would be at the top."

There has been repeated speculation about Mr. Salant's eventual successor. But officials said again last week that no choice has been made.

(One executive who had once been considered the heir apparent—Senior Vice President Bill Small—was reported last week to be under consideration for the news presidency of NBC. Mr. Small himself was noncommittal, although some of his associates tended to discount the report. On the one hand, it was said he had given some prior indication to the effect that he was leaving. On the other, it was conjectured that, once the report got into print, he was avoiding an outright denial in order, as one put it, "to keep his options open" and to enhance his position as a man wanted elsewhere.)

Among the new projects with which Mr. Salant has been involved, Mr. Jankowski said, were the relatively new "Your Turn: Letters to CBS" and the public affairs program for young people, "30 Minutes," scheduled for introduction as a Saturday afternoon series next fall.

Mr. Salant and his associates, he said, are already working on some changes—"changes in form rather than substance"—in "CBS Morning News." It's still the best news hour on television," Mr. Jankowski said, "and we will do nothing to compromise its integrity. However, Dick and his colleagues feel that they can even improve on excellence.

Among other new CBS News projects, Mr. Jankowski said, is "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," a working title for a half-hour public-affairs series that may eventually be a candidate for prime time. He said "this series will combine the journalist's discipline with the dramatist's skill. It will be a drama of documented history. The pilot is an excellent, fast-paced half-hour."

CBS News added some details Wednesday afternoon in its own presentation by Mr. Salant and Robert Chandler, vice president and director of public affairs broadcasting, for a three-hour documentary on public education, entitled "Is Anyone Out There Learning?" Mr. Chandler said it will be presented the last week in August, either as a single broadcast occupying a full night or in one-hour segments on three consecutive nights. CBS Newsman Walter Cronkite and Charles Collingwood will be anchor and reporter, respectively.

Mr. Chandler also announced that Marjorie Baker, a producer on the "CBS Morning News," will succeed David Fuchs, now vice president and assistant to the president of CBS-TV, as CBS News vice president, public-affairs broadcast.

Mr. Salant confirmed the undisputed belief that newsman Harry Reasoner would return to CBS News whenever he settles his contract differences with ABC.

"I just hope Harry will be back soon where he belongs," he said.

An unscheduled, impromptu farewell speech by Mr. Salant, thanking the affiliates for their support over the years, brought a standing ovation. He said he had about 355 days to go before retirement and planned to remain active "every minute of them."

Backe changes the subject, turns attention to local news

CBS president warns waning of 'happy talk,' says radio, TV are leaving trivia to newspapers

The interrelationship of network and local news and the need to improve both were emphasized by John D. Backe, president of CBS Inc., in a luncheon appearance before the CBS-TV affiliates last Tuesday.

"No matter how good a network news service is, it gives only part of the picture," he said. "CBS News performs incredibly well in telling the viewer what's going on worldwide, nationwide and regionally. But without a good local news operation, the viewer just cannot get a complete picture. You have to have a top-notch local news organization, with journalists who really know their communities, to fill in all the details."

Broadcasting, he said, "is an exceptional public trust," involving "major obligations to the public"—of which "none is more vital, more central to that trust, than our journalistic function, increasing our viewers' awareness of the world."

Mr. Backe told the affiliates that "your local news is getting better and better" and that "you are doing a superb job" that "helps you [and] helps us [and] more important, it helps the public."

But, he said, "our successes—and there have been many—only accentuate other areas where television journalism could do an even better job. In general, today's local news broadcasts increasingly tackle the difficult subjects people should know about—local politics and important social trends.

"The move to the 'happy talk' syndrome several years ago seems to be waning. Sensationalism is being reduced. But there is still need for even further development of local issues so the public can relate to them more wisely."

"We can take pride that we are not getting bogged down in our news efforts with the kinds of trivia which currently seem an obsession with the print press. Much of that trivia and gossip seems to arise from print's preoccupation with anything and everything that happens in television. We get a barrage of exaggeration and criticism, some well-intended but a great deal ill-founded and questionable."

"Above all we should not let this divert us from doing a better, more innovative job, at both the national and local levels, of covering those important but difficult subjects that do not lend themselves easily to visual presentation—coverage of the economy, for example."

Mr. Backe noted that CBS News has stepped up its economic coverage "substantially" in the past three years, both in regular newscasts and in specials. But he also noted that CBS News's three-hour energy special last summer drew only a 19% share of audience.

This, he said, "clearly means that we have to find new ways to reach more people and do a better job with the kind of subject. I look forward to seeing more efforts in this direction—and new techniques of illuminating difficult subjects—by both network and local television news."

Mr. Backe also had an answer for those who complain that TV news is only a headline service: "Its critics forget that electronic news, by giving faces and voices to the names we read about, provides the newspaper reader with a personal framework against which he can relate the printed news story. Television news stimulates interest in print news, and amplifies its content. And, despite the growth of radio and television news since World War II, the number of daily newspapers in the U.S. has held steady at about 1,700.

Broadcasters' efforts to improve their service, he said, "are well worth it. Because if the American people are convinced that what we're doing is in their interest, we're far more likely to have their support against any future attempts to restrict our freedom in broadcasting. Each of us in this room bears the special obligation of continuing to be the kind of broadcaster who deserves such support."

Indeed, he said, independent research shows "that we are getting more attention and more confidence from the public for our best efforts" year after year.

"We are getting this," he said, "because we are earning it."

Creeping closer to covering Congress live

O'Neill gives go-ahead for purchase of cameras for system that likely will be House-controlled; NPR asks to do more broadcasts like Panama Canal treaties debates

Reports from different corners of the nation's capital indicate that broadcasting is making slow but noticeable progress toward gaining entrance to the House and Senate chambers.

In the House, where permission has already been given to broadcast daily proceedings traditionally off limits to radio and television, the dispute over control of broadcast equipment in the chamber has not yet been resolved. Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill (D-Mass.) continues to favor having the House's employees man a system that would produce the exclusive broadcast feed, while broadcasters and some congressmen, notably John Anderson (R-Ill.), are keeping the pressure on for broadcaster control.

But Mr. O'Neill has directed the architect of the Capitol to draw up contracts for the purchase of three cameras—small RCA color studio models at a cost of about $100,000 each. A spokesman for the architect's office said last week that the order has not yet been given to complete the purchase, "but I get the impression that it's imminent."

Some take that news as evidence of progress toward the day when House debates can be seen and heard regularly over radio and television. But to the opponents of House control, it's a step in the wrong direction. Representative Anderson, in a private session with the Speaker two weeks ago, reportedly argued that Mr. O'Neill is virtually assuring that the system will be in House hands. Mr. O'Neill, on the other hand, is said to have repeated his promise to put the question of control to a vote of the House some time in the future. If the vote is to have a pool of the networks and public broadcasting control the House feed, Mr. O'Neill said the new cameras can be sold to the pool. Nevertheless, said an Anderson staffer, "we're going to raise a little hell."

In an action related to the House broadcast system, the Administration Committee has authorized the purchase of new color TV sets for each House member who wants to plug into the closed circuit system that is already piping the House's sessions to members' offices. The authorization involves no new funds, only the expenditures of office budgets already allotted for this year, to buy RCA 17-inch color sets at $282 a piece. One House staffer said he was under the impression that set was picked because it is the last color set manufactured in the United States.

And in another related action, representatives of National Public Radio, including President Frank Mankiewicz, met with Speaker O'Neill last Tuesday to try to win permission to cover future House debates, as NPR did with the Panama Canal debate this year in the Senate. In guarded remarks after the meeting, Mr. Mankiewicz said he is optimistic that NPR will do some coverage this year, but that no agreements to that effect were made Tuesday. At one point, he said, the Speaker suggested NPR might originate its coverage from outside the House chamber, following the action on one of the House's closed-circuit monitors. Mr. Mankiewicz said there will be further meetings.

NPR also has a request in to the Rules Committee in the Senate for permission to cover debate of the President's proposed sale of arms to the Middle East, if the issue reaches the Senate floor unresolved. There has been no action on that request yet.

APB convention set for next month in Cincinnati

Four-day affair begins June 1; there will be panels, reports from the front office, awards

Television and radio journalism topics including the media's impact on sports, the development of new technology and coverage in the emerging nations will be highlights of the Associated Press Broadcasters convention in Cincinnati June 1-3.

Advance registration has hit the 250 mark, according to Jerry Trapp, APB executive secretary, and he projects that 400 or more will be in attendance by the time of the meeting, eclipsing last year's record figure of 350.

The convention opens June 1 at Stouffer's Twin Towers with an evening reception honoring state APB presidents, who will meet earlier in the day as will APB's board of directors.

The first business session on June 2 will open with a panel discussion by media critics Steve Hoffman of the Cincinnati Enquirer; Les Brown of the New York Times and Garry Deeb of the Chicago Tribune.

During the luncheon meeting that day, APB will present the Bob Bunton Award, given in honor of the late AP broadcast executive, to Elmer Lower, one-time president of ABC News who retired last month as an ABC executive.

Other awards to be given during the luncheon that day will go to KIUL(AM) Garden City, Kan., for over-all cooperation; WNEG(AM) Toccoa, Ga., for spot news; KOBE(AM) Las Cruces, N.M., for enterprise and WRBO(FM) Tampa, Fla., for weekend coverage. Individual members of the AP news staff who will receive awards for outstanding performance during the year are Philip Joachim and Michael Collins, both of New York; Rachel Ambrose of Los Angeles, and Bob Berkowitz and Julie Frederikse, both of APRadio in Washington.

Examining the media's impact on sports during an afternoon session will be Paul Brown, founder and general manager of the Cincinnati Bengals; Bob Howsam, vice chairman of the Cincinnati Reds; Chet Simmons, president of NBC Sports; Tim Ryan, a CBS sportscaster; Will Grimsley, special correspondent of the AP, and Shelby Whitfield, sport editor of APRadio.

The concluding session on June 2 will focus on techniques for selling time in news programming. Participants will include Carl Loucks, a broadcast consultant in New York; Norman Woodruff, coordinator of news planning for the radio division of Combined Communications Corp., Phoenix, and Charles Wright, president of WBYS(AM) Canton, Ill.

An appraisal of the performance of AP's special news report for broadcasters and of APRadio will be held on June 3. The discussion will be led by Tom O'Brien, vice president, radio news, ABC, and will include Mr. Trapp, AP's general broadcast news editor; Ed DeFontaine, managing editor of APRadio, and John Hultman of NBC News in New York.

Later that morning David Bowen, AP's director of communications and Bob Benson, AP's deputy director of broadcast services, will report on exploration of satellite delivery of APRadio.

A panel on Third World news will feature George Beebe, chairman of the World Press Freedom Committee and deputy director of UNESCO; German Ornes, publisher of El Caribe in the Dominican Republic and Sig Mickelson, vice chairman of the board of Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty.

The Kentucky State AP Broadcasters Association will meet on June 1 immediately preceding the reception scheduled for that evening. The Ohio Associated Press Broadcasters has set its annual awards banquet for the evening the convention concludes. Both meetings will be at Stouffer's Twin Towers.

Journalism Briefs

Introspection. Mike Wallace and a crew from CBS News' 60 Minutes were among the news people covering last week's annual meeting of CBS-TV affiliates in Los Angeles (see stories this issue). They also plan to cover the conventions of ABC-TV affiliates May 22-24 in Los Angeles and of NBC-TV stations June 18-20 in New York. It's for a 60 Minutes report on how the TV networks develop and promote their fall schedules, to be presented on CBS-TV in September.

Miami TV upheld. FCC has affirmed Broadcast Bureau ruling rejecting complaint of Better Business Bureau of South Florida that wckT(TV) Miami violated fairness doctrine and personal-stick rule in series of "news commentaries" in September.
The other ACT petition comes under heavy fire

Its attempt at FCC to have inquiry started up looking toward ban on children's TV advertising is roundly criticized by broadcasters

Comments were filed at the FCC last week on an Action for Children's Television petition aimed at eliminating advertising from children's television programs. Broadcasters were unanimous in their opposition to the ACT filing, which was supported only by one Washington-based citizen group.

Leading the opposition was the National Association of Broadcasters, which called the ACT petition "unwarranted and inappropriate" and said the group had not succeeded in documenting the industry's allegedly insufficient observance of the FCC's policy on children's TV. NAB also said that FCC approval of the ACT request would eliminate "the economic base and incentive for children's programs and would inevitably result in some curtailment of broadcasters' efforts" in the children's programing field.

More strongly, the Toy Manufacturers Association said that the ACT petition, if adopted, "will surely represent an immediate and direct step in the ultimate elimination of advertising to children and the concomitant reduction, if not complete elimination, of children's programing." ABC also told the commission of the "disastrous" effects an advertising ban could have on children's television. According to ABC, a ban would remove or severely restrict "the critical financial base that is necessary to produce and present quality children's programing."

"Neither specific programming requirements nor advertising restrictions will insure quality children's programing," ABC said. The ACT petition would force the FCC "into prohibitive areas, causing deep ruptures of sound legal standards as well as disastrous practical consequences," the network continued.

J. joint filing by the Washington law firm of Pierson, Ball & Dowd for the Association of Independent Television Stations, Gaylord Broadcasting Co., Pittsburgh Telecasting Inc. and Manhattan Cable TV Inc. said the ACT petition gave "no justification" for what the petition said amounted to a reopening of the FCC's 1974 children's television inquiry. Restricting advertising, it said, would have "deleterious effects upon the amount and quality of both adult and children's programing."

"There is no demonstrable reason," the joint filing said, "to assume that the broadcast industry is ignoring the policies set out in the [FCC's] Children's Television Report."

General Mills Inc., a major children's advertiser, said that the "limitations and ultimate ban on advertising posed by the ACT petition present grave constitutional questions."

NBC said that "in order to insure continued growth and innovation in children's programing, broadcasters should not be deprived of the flexibility and independence which has long been considered the wisest course to serve the public interest and safeguard the creative environment."

Top-20 toppers. The top-20 categories in local television increased their spending in the first quarter by 29% to $339.1 million, according to a report released today (May 15) by the Television Bureau of Advertising. Using figures compiled by Broadcast Advertisers Reports, TVB said that all 20 categories posted gains of 12% or more. The largest percentage gain was achieved by newspapers, up 97% to $5.4 million, followed by builders and real estate agents, up 73% to $12.2 million and appliance stores, up 70% to $9.2 million.

* Dealers associations not included for Television and Children (WATCH), defended the ACT position and said that industry "self regulation has not and cannot be effective in achieving industry compliance with the 1974 guidelines."

In support of its and ACT's position, WATCH said that the FCC should adopt an inquiry to "determine the efficacy of self regulation"; to change the children's programming report form 303 "to elicit additional information on commercial and program practices affecting child viewers and to enable monitoring of the development of age-specific programming"; write a new definition of children's programs that will "reflect the reality of children's TV watching" by defining programs in terms of audience composition, and to "prohibit entirely" all advertising on children's programs.

Mobile plan immobilized
A Mobile, Ala., businessman's plan to delete the commercials of distant stations carried by a local cable television system and replace them with commercials he sells failed to win FCC approval.

The commission has denied the request of Garland B. Pugh for a waiver of the rule that prohibits cable systems from altering or deleting the signals they carry. Mr. Pugh contended that the manager of WTCG(TV) Atlanta had agreed orally to participate in the plan and that the Mobile system that carries the station's programming had agreed that local commercials would increase its subscriber list. However, the waiver request was opposed by a number of stations, including the Motion Picture Association of America and WTCG, which claimed Mr. Pugh had misunderstood its manager.

The commission said that so far as the rules prohibit the substitution of commercials, they prevent the loss of revenues to local broadcasters, which might result in reduction of service to the public. And since Mr. Pugh had not shown why the concerns were not applicable in this case, the commission said, it was denying his waiver request.

Banks and radio: a good advertising combination, according to RAB's David
The increasing use of radio advertising by banks was stressed last week by Miles David, president of the Radio Advertising Bureau, in a speech to the Bank Marketing Association in New York. Mr. David noted that 10 years ago about two out of three banks used radio and today 90% of them use the medium. He predicted that by 1980 virtually every bank of any size will use radio. "Radio, with its ability to reach divergent life styles, is a perfect matchup for banks, which are reaching out in their new services to the widest range of people types in our society," Mr. David said.

Department stores dropping stitch—Rice
TVB president offers figures to show that other retailers are getting upper hand by greater use of TV

The need for department stores to participate more fully in television's splurge in the general retail field emerged as a highlight of the Television Bureau of Advertising's Retail Orientation Workshop in New York.

This thought was raised by Roger Rice, president of TVB, and was discussed by speakers in the retail field. Mr. Rice contended that the department stores are adhering to the tradition of investing heavily in newspaper advertising and keeping down their expenditures in television, while other retailers and specialty stores are increasing their TV budgets.

He noted that while department-store spending in TV in 1977 climbed only 3% over 1976, expenditures by clothing stores climbed 11%; furniture stores, 18%; shopping centers, 22%; jewelry stores, 29%; drug stores, 30%, and appliance stores, 44%.

"I'm concerned about that because TV sales are growing so fast that when major department stores are ready to commit a major part of the advertising budget to television, it may be too late," Mr. Rice warned. "Specialty stores, which are heavy users of television, may have carved out franchises and have the know-how to use TV."

More than 100 persons in attendance at the workshop heard Peck Klose, vice president, sales promotion, Frederick Atkins Buying Office (Wanamaker's, B. Altman and The Broadway), point out that over the past decade the ratio of newspaper advertising to gross sales has remained the same. She added that advertising in other media, including television, has increased but not in all stores.

Ms. Klose indicated that if TV budgets are to be increased, department stores must have help from stations and other television sources. She said stores need help in reducing costs, in producing effective TV commercials and in buying time.

"If television is to become more than a suport medium," Ms. Klose counseled, "it will have to develop the capability of effectively delivering a message to a specific target audience. Total coverage is no longer the answer. We need much better demographic information."

Paul Leblang, senior vice president—marketing, Saks Fifth Avenue, New York, stressed the importance of timing in preparing an advertising campaign. He said retailers operate on a calendar year budget from Feb. 1 to Jan. 31, with planning starting in September and approval coming in October or November. He advised retailers to include television as a possibility during the campaign design period.

"The sponsors were just swamped, I mean just incredibly swamped by people..."

FCC approves settlement in Comsat rate case

Commission OK's agreement in 13-year-old case that would see satellite company refund about $125 million and lower its charges by nearly 48%.

An FCC proceeding kicked off 13 years ago when the commission decided to investigate the rates charged by the then-new Communications Satellite Corp. ended last week with commission acceptance of a settlement that had been worked out earlier this year (Broadcasting, Feb. 27).

Essentially, it provides for a refund to Comsat customers of some $100 million and an agreement by the company to file new tariffs to reduce its charges by 48%.

The commission order provides that the refund to the customers—all international common carriers—are to "flow through" to the ultimate users.

The broadcasters using satellites for international service will be among the beneficiaries. But since they are relatively small users of the satellite, the refunds they ultimately receive will not be large.

Broadcast industry representatives estimate that the commercial networks, the European Broadcast Union and other broadcasters account for 1%-2% of the money to be paid back.

Furthermore, the refunds are not automatic. The order permits the carriers to show why part or all of the reduction should not be passed on to the ultimate user. Thus it seems likely further proceedings will be held before the benefits that users will ultimately realize are known.

The commission said acceptance of the settlement is in the public interest, since it terminates long-pending litigation and paves the way for immediate and substantial refunds and rate reductions. The settlement, the commission said, is "a significant and necessary step toward ultimately making the economic benefits of satellite technology available to the public."

The commission's action—which came on the same day as Comsat's annual shareholders meeting—was applauded by Comsat Chairman Joseph McConnell. He said the settlement "is in the best interest of the company as well as in the interest of the customers for international communications services." Comsat's board approved the settlement on March 17.

The settlement was negotiated by representatives of the commission's Common Carrier Bureau and Office of General Counsel, Comsat and other parties after the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington last October affirmed in the main a commission rate-making decision handed down in 1975.

In that decision, the commission held that Comsat's rates were excessive and ordered the company to reduce them to a point where they would produce a 10.8% level of return on a rate base about one-half that claimed for its international operations.

The refund is to be of funds held in escrow after the appeals court stayed the effectiveness of the commission order following Comsat's appeal. The commission required Comsat to place in escrow an amount equal to the difference between the level of the corporation's earnings under existing rates and those prescribed by the commission, through the filing of informational tariffs.

Under the settlement, Comsat will base its new tariffs for services through the International Satellite Consortium system on revenue requirements that feature a number of modifications from the 1975 decision. Among them:

- Intelsat capital contributions will be allowed as rate-base additions as they are paid.
- Other plant construction work together with accrued interest during construction will continue to be allowed in the rate base when it is placed in service.
- Comsat may include 76% of the investment in its laboratories in its rate base.
- The corporation's allowed return on equity will be 12.2%-13.2% if Comsat acquires debt equal to 45% of the rate base.
- Until debt reaches that point, debt will be imputed against the 12.2%, and the allowed rate of return will be 11.48%.

Debate at the FCC on lower levels of noise for UHF

Broadcasters accuse manufacturers of holding back technology; set makers say it's just not there

On May 19, according to FCC Chairman Charles Ferris, the commission is going to try to come up with some kind of decision on UHF receiver noise levels. Whether the commission will side with broadcasters, who are asking it eventually to allow no more than 10 db noise, or with manufacturers, who contend that they cannot economically produce a set with consistently less than 14 db noise, remains a question.

Last Wednesday (May 10), the full commission held a day-long conference with representatives of both sides. The broadcasting interests accused the set manufacturers of "holding back" technology that they already had. The manufacturers, on the other hand, warned that the FCC cannot "create an invention" that has not been perfected.

The commission held the session as part of its deliberation on a petition filed last year by the Council of UHF Broadcasters asking that the FCC require manufacturers to begin making sets with a 14 db noise level. The CUB petition also suggested that the FCC set up a timetable for eventually reducing noise levels to at most 10 db.

In his opening remarks, Chairman Ferris said that the commission "wishes to improve UHF reception in every practicable way." He said that the purpose of the meeting last week was to give the commissioners a "clearer picture of this highly complex subject."

Commissioner James Quello appeared sympathetic to the broadcasters' position during the meeting and said the commission should proceed "post haste" with the job of reducing noise levels.

But, said Leonard Dietch, vice president of product development for Zenith Radio Corp., "there is no way to get down to 14 db" with present technology. Although, he said, a significant number of sets are produced now with such a level, quality control on most production lines is such that a mandated level would be difficult to maintain. In order to assure compliance, Mr. Dietch said, each set would have to be individually tested—a prohibitively expensive undertaking.

There was some interest shown by the commissioners and the other participants in the possibility that color sets could be made to conform with the reduced levels while less expensive black-and-white sets could not. According to Mr. Dietch, sales of the monochrome models are more cost sensitive and the added expense of new tuners could force the black-and-white sets out of the market.

Philip Rubin, director of engineering research and development for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, said he felt that would be unfair to people with lower incomes.

"It's the commission's turn," Mr. Rubin said, to help CPB and UHF broadcasters improve their product. Citing what he called the present "crisis in UHF broadcast television" and suggestions that more UHF channels be allocated, Mr. Rubin said "we need better UHF more than we need more channels that can't be received."

FCC reopens book on rates for newswires

The FCC has revived its inquiry into the question of whether it should authorize preferential press rates for domestic private line services used by newswires. The inquiry—began in October 1975 to determine the impact of nonpreferential rates and of high- and low-density rates proposed by AT&T on dissemination of news—was suspended a year later to await stabilization of domestic private line service tariffs. In reinstating the inquiry, the commission said it would focus on two issues: (1) whether AT&T's elimination of Telpak end links, on Jan. 23, and possible termination of other Telpak service and private line rates would impair the dissemination of news, and (2) whether the FCC should prescribe reasonable rates.

Mixed reactions. Bob Seger "can sing my grocery list and it will go to number one;" says Ray Williams of wskynx Asheville, N.C., where the artist's new single Still the Same (Capitol), came on strong. "It's a hit," says Pat Martin of wosrm Stevens Point, Wis. "It's real good, traditional Bob Seger song like Main Street and Night Moves, except there are more female vocals than you'd expect." Chris Curtis of wwoj Milwaukee concurs: "The vocal back-up group is excellent." Entering "Playlist" at 43 this week, Still the Same, from the soon-to-be-released Stranger in Town, LP has almost unanimous support. But not quite. Johnny Velchoff of woori Buffalo, N.Y., calls the single "Still Big Drag." Others, like Chris Miller of woori Raleigh, N.C., and Jack Robertson of wroc Pittsburgh say the flip side, "Feel Like a Number," is much better. Clean comeback. Seals and Crofts are "making a nice comeback after an awful lot of schmaltz," says wroc's Mr. Curtis. The song will be played on "MOR, top 40, AOR and adult contemporary" he adds. Chris Hansen of wizrim New Haven, Conn., agrees that You're the Love is "theoretically perfect [it should appeal to] AOR, MOR and R&B. "It can't go wrong," says Johnny (Red Min.) Michaels of kcbvrim Reno, Nev. "It meets every criteria—a message, easy listening, good production."

Viacom’s Ave Butensky: a mover, even while he was staying in place

Ave Butensky had always said it would take a derrick to get him out of Dancer Fitzgerald Sample. It’s no wonder.

By the time he moved over to Viacom International about a month and a half ago as president of the newly created Viacom Television Program Group, he had chalked up some 20 years with DFS; not a record, but in the agency business where movement is more the rule than the exception, it was more than a modest accomplishment in tenure.

Not that there weren’t offers as Mr. Butensky scaled the agency ladder from the mailroom through the traffic and media departments to the presidency of the DFS subsidiary, Program Syndication Services. But none was the right one. “It had to have both things to make a marriage,” Mr. Butensky said—meaning not only money but challenge as well.

Only weeks into his new job, Mr. Butensky is unwilling to get down to particulars about the challenge offered by his new post and instead leans more toward general and philosophical discussions. Viacom is an expanding firm (sales up 34% in the first quarter), so he talks of the need for “increased management control” and his own role as an administrator and coordinator.

There are sure to be changes and new directions—but they will be gradual. “I’m not in a position to say, ‘OK, fellows, beginning tomorrow we’re going to do this,’” he explains. “That’s not it at all. After we get input from everybody we’ll reach decisions.”

His first weeks with Viacom, Mr. Butensky says, were primarily concerned with learning “who does what” and “how do they do it,” and keeping a keen eye out for where improvements can be made. Among the things on Mr. Butensky’s mind: “How we look at research” (automation possibilities fit in here, he explains); “how we take care of creative services; the kind of programs this company has been acquiring; where the thrust should be for future acquisitions; what the future holds for certain kinds of programs and sales; how those sales should be made.”

Mr. Butensky’s new job is a beginning for Viacom as well as for him; his post is an addition to the Viacom International corporate structure. Reporting to Mr. Butensky are Henry Gillespie, Viacom Enterprises president; Elliot Abrams, Vice president-feature films acquisition, and Art Zeiger, vice president-program acquisition. Mr. Butensky reports to Ralph Zeiger, vice president-program syndication.

Baruch, Viacom International president and chief executive officer.

Mr. Butensky doesn’t believe that his agency experience per se was the prime factor in Viacom’s decision to approach him. “Certainly my knowledge of agency, syndication, barter and time banks is helpful,” he says. But he adds that his administrative experience probably was the trump card among his credentials.

“My experience with PSS and with spot buying has been in a parallel area. We made programs; we sold programs; we got involved with stations. We did all the things that are done here although to different degrees,” he says.

Ave Butensky’s introduction to the advertising world came during his student days at the University of Wisconsin. The prospects of a 15% commission from selling space for the campus newspaper proved more attractive than the other ways he had for working his way through college: carry-out boy for Piggly Wiggly’s supermarket, market surveyor for an agrimarket lab (“I didn’t even know what a market survey was; I was just adding up numbers”) and then work in a psychology lab on tests with monkeys.

By his senior year, he recalls, he had the biggest list of accounts for the Daily Cardinal in addition to writing a column, primarily movie reviews. A college placement bureau recommended that he stop in at DFS when he return to New York.

DFS took him in 1955. And, except for a stint in the U.S. Army in 1956-58 as a troop information specialist at the White Sands (N.M) missile range, he remained at the agency until Viacom called.

It’s unlikely that Mr. Butensky would have remained as long as he did if DFS hadn’t continuously offered him opportunities to broaden his experience. In the early days, he says, the satisfaction came from getting the difficult plans approved by both the agency and the client. Later it was seeing the results of “having faith in a property for syndication.”

A DFS vice presidency came in 1965, a senior vice presidency in 1972, capping other titles that already had led to senior media director. He became the PSS subsidiary’s general manager in 1974; its president last year.

What Mr. Butensky’s move after 20-odd years will mean to himself and to Viacom remains to be seen. (Some things remain the same; just as he did at DFS, Mr. Butensky says, he takes home a brief case full of work every night.)

Amidst his early analysis of company operations and the drawing of input from various new colleagues, he admits, there have also been “enough seeds planted” and “things in the works that can start to materialize any time now.”

One of those outside Viacom who is confident that things soon will be materializing is Stan Moger, executive vice president of SFM Media Service Corp. “He’s a doer,” Mr. Moger says. “There are not that many people in this business who make things happen. Ave’s one of them.”

Mr. Moger also made it clear that he wasn’t just referring to Mr. Butensky’s accomplishments at DFS, but also to his fund-raising efforts as president of the International Radio Television Foundation; his work as director of the International Radio and Television Society, and his support as a trustee of the American Friends of Haifa University in Israel.

Jay Walters, president of Harrington, Righter & Parsons, who has known Ave Butensky since the time they were both assistant buyers at DFS, claims it was clear even then that Mr. Butensky’s “career would be an exciting one.” The move to Viacom Mr. Walters takes as another piece of evidence bearing out that contention.

Broadcasting May 15 1978
Squeaking wheel of fortune

FCC Chairman Charles D. Ferris is reported to be considering a lottery of some kind as an alternative to the Alice-in-Wonderland promises now in effect for choosing a winner among rival applicants for unoccupied broadcast facilities (“Closed Circuit,” May 8). FCC Commissioner Margita White is on public record with like aspirations (Broadcasting, May 1). Former FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley came out with a similar proposal two years ago (Broadcasting, March 29, 1976).

The latest interest in the subject is aroused, understandably, by the FCC’s obligatory reconsideration of a decision reached five years ago in a comparative case that has been going on for 14 years. As reported a week ago, the seven surviving contenders for 1110 khz in Pasadena, Calif., now occupied by a “temporary” custodian as KRLA(AM), have been ordered back—at the direction of the U.S. Court of Appeals—to an “expedited” hearing. If history is any guide, lawyers’ children yet unborn could argue the ultimate resolution of this case.

It all started when the FCC kicked the original licensee of KRLA off the air for a number of alleged transgressions and put the facility up for grabs. As a “public service,” however, it put an interim operator in charge on the condition that profits would go to noncommercial broadcasting and other charities.

At one point there were 19 applicants for the facility. Attrition has narrowed the field to the seven that now find themselves beginning another exercise in the inherently futile pursuit of proving that one is clearly superior to all the others.

Meanwhile, back at the station, the FCC has another problem on its hands. A year ago the interim operator, Oak Knoll Broadcasting, came under investigation for alleged misappropriation of funds. The charge was that officials diverted revenues to their private use. As was noted on this page at the time, what else was the FCC to expect from a management that was under no compulsion to produce profits for stockholders?

No wonder Mr. Ferris is looking for alternatives. He is faced with an extended hearing in a case his predecessors thought they had decided five years ago. The case is complicated by the unresolved question of what to do about the interim operator that stands accused of squandering its revenues. The criteria by which the commission made a choice among the seven applicants five years ago have been riddled by the court of appeals. How is the next decision to be made without the prospect of another reversal by the court?

Investment note: Under the circumstances don’t buy a station; buy a law school.

A logical union

The first response to news of the merger of Combined Communications with Gannett predictably included cries of alarm from those who believe anything big is bad. The hope here is that more sophisticated minds will prevail as this transaction proceeds through government corridors.

Those who react with horror to the enlargement of media ownerships are thinking back to the days of the William Randolph Hearsts who dictated editorial policy for newspaper chains by intensely personal and autocratic standards. More recent experience proves that newspapers fare best in the marketplace if they retain individual identities. Broadcast stations owe their existence to the ascertainment of local wants and needs.

When the new company completes its spin-off of broadcast properties, it will be in full compliance with the FCC’s multiple-ownership rules. That will put it on no different footing from any other group owner with a full or nearly full portfolio. Even with the assets of the two companies combined, the new corporation will be smaller than other licensees already in the field. Indeed it could be argued that the emergence of another major economic force in broadcasting will increase competition among the larger enterprises.

The only other merger of comparable size to be attempted in broadcasting was that of ABC into International Telephone & Telegraph nearly 10 years ago. That was attacked by the Justice Department—not in a trial court under the antitrust laws but before the FCC and appellate court under the infinitely vaguer standard of the “public interest.” While the government proceedings dragged on and on, market conditions changed and ITT bailed out.

It would be unjust if the bureaucratic process in ABC-ITT were to repeat itself. As separate enterprises, Combined Communications and Gannett have conducted their affairs honorably. There is no reason to believe that their characters will change after marriage.

Both ways

The U.S. House of Representatives is slowly accepting the presence of television. It is installing cables that will connect the Capitol and House offices with the outside world. It is buying color sets for members. Before long the apparatus of a modern communications system will be operational.

That brings up the question of what is to be done with it. If Speaker Thomas P. O’Neill (D-Mass.) has his way, the proceedings on the House floor may eventually be televised, both for current monitoring and for the record. But the televising will be done by House employees under House control.

Broadcast journalists continue to oppose that concept. They want to operate the television system themselves in the interests of journalistic objectivity. Fair enough, but it strikes us that they are asking to assume a role of which they would soon tire. Why should the commercial broadcasters foot the bill for hour-after-hour, day-after-day coverage of proceedings of little or no news value?

As has been suggested here before, there ought to be room for compromise. Let the House run its own full-text television coverage for its own record and convenience. That system would also be of at least some value as a source of action shots for use in broadcast news. Beyond that, let the broadcasters bring in cameras and crews to cover events of above-average news importance. There would be nothing incompatible in that.

Does it have to be either/or?
KTXL-TV40 Sacramento/Stockton, now in its 4th year of news, is still the only Major Market UHF Independent with a full hour nightly newscast! As the only UHF member of the Independent Television News Association TV40's 18 person news staff joins with ITNA's world-wide satellite coverage to bring Northern California the late night news one hour earlier.

REPRESENTED NATIONALLY BY M.M.T. SALES

A lifesaver.

When a young Sioux City salesman saved the life of an elderly woman, he gave credit to the television show "Medix," aired Sundays at noon on KMEG-TV.

While the young man was speaking at a meeting of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, the woman began to choke on a chicken bone. He came to her aid and, using the "Heimlich Hug" method, dislodged it from her windpipe. The method entails locking both hands together under the diaphragm to force air from the lungs and clear the obstruction.

We honor this young man for his quick response to the emergency.
