

CBC Radio

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC), known as Societe Radio-Canada (SRC) in French, provides a number of Broadcasting services. There are English-language and French-language television networks, English and French AM radio networks, English and French FM stereo networks, Radio Canada International (a shortwave service like the Voice of America), special radio-TV services for Northern Canada, regional and provincial programs on the various national networks, local programs on individual CBC stations, and assistance to "community radio groups" (citizens who run low-power community stations).

The CBC is financed mainly by public funds voted annually by Parliament. Some revenue comes from TV advertising and the selling of CBC productions to foreign countries. There is virtually no radio advertising any more on CBC, except for programs not available to CBC without the advertising, such as Texaco's Metropolitan Opera broadcasts and some sporting events. The CBC had a 1978-79 budget of $517 million (Canadian) and currently has about 12,000 employees.

In the following lists of CBC (English) and SRC (French) networks, stations cwred by CBC/SRC are underlined. Other affiliates are privately-owned stations carrying a minimum amount of CBC programming each week, primarily in the evening hours.
