BERMUDA

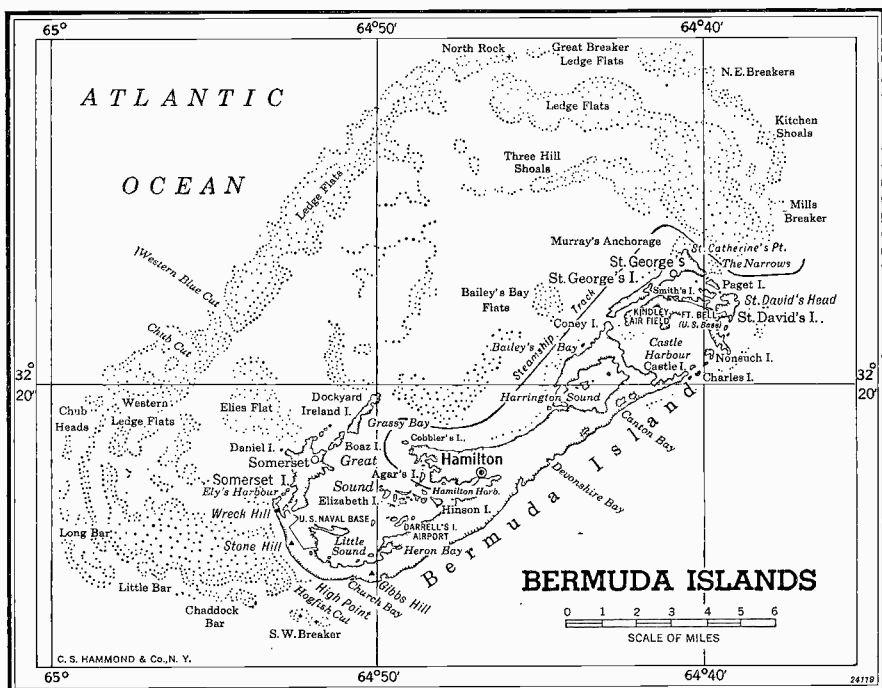

Population 37,254 (White, about 38%; Colored, about 62%) 1950 Census

Capital, HAMILTON

A group of islands in the Atlantic Ocean, about 770 miles southeast of New York. Although said to be 150 in number, of which a score are inhabited, they occupy a space of only 22 square miles. The largest has an area of 9,000 acres, the whole group containing only about 14,000 acres. The climate is delightful, without extremes of heat or cold, the temperature averages 71 degrees. The more important islands are connected by bridges and causeways. They are of coral formation on the summit of a submarine mountain. Although a governor is appointed by the British Crown, the islands have their own representative government for local affairs, having the oldest parliament among all the British Colonies.

In 1949 there were 3,500 acres under cultivation. The soil produces almost every description of fruit, flowers and vegetables abundantly. Potatoes, celery, tomatoes, early table vegetables and Easter lily flowers and bulbs are the chief crops.

The islands are very popular as an all year round pleasure and health resort, and are visited every year by increasing numbers of visitors from the United States, Canada, and England. Frequent and regular steamship communications carry many tourists to Bermuda. Most of the revenue of the Islands is derived from the tourist trade. There is daily air service from the U. S. A.

The culture of lilies, especially Easter lilies for the flowers and bulbs, is an important industry; potatoes, celery and tomatoes are also exported, all principally to the United States and Canadian markets. The Islands' chief imports are food, clothing, chinaware, hardware, perfumery, liquor, and feed for horses and cows. In 1948, imports from the United States totaled $13,401,808, and exports to the United States, $1,242,220. Imports from all countries totaled $28,484,156.

Bermuda is the main Atlantic station of the British Navy. In 1949 there were about 100 miles of government roads. The transportation is by bicycle, horse and carriage, ferries, small British cars and taxis, busses and autocycles.

HAMILTON, pop. 3,800. Situated on the largest island, known as the mainland. Boat connections. Airlines, BOAC; CAI; PAA; TCA. Seat of government and business center of the Bermuda island group. Main industry tourism, secondary agriculture; principal export lilies.

CUBA

Population 5,199,000 (1949 estimate)

Capital, HAVANA

Cuba, the largest and most populous of the West Indian Islands, is situated about 90 miles south of Florida, from which it is separated by the Florida Straits. It is 730 miles in length, has a width varying from 25 to 124 miles, and a coast line of more than 2,000 miles. The total area is 44,206 square miles, or approximately that of the state of Pennsylvania. Several irregular mountain chains cross the island in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Camaguey and Oriente, forming fertile and healthful valleys and plateaus.

Cuba is in easy reach of the United States both by boat and airplane. From New York several boat lines have regular sailings to Havana and other Cuban ports. There are also boats from Boston, Baltimore, Norfolk, Mobile, New Orleans, Tampa and Galveston to Havana. Between Key West and Havana there is daily ferry service. The principal ports of the country are Havana, Matanzas, Cardenas, Cienfuegos, Nipe, Guantanamo and Santiago de Cuba.

AGRICULTURE

Of the country's crops, sugar cane is by far the most enormous one. Nearly 2,285,000 acres are devoted to this one product alone. Next in importance is the raising of tobacco, cultivated chiefly in the famous Vuelta-Abazo district near Pinar del Rio.

Quantities of fruits and vegetables also flourish in Cuba's tropical soil, pineapples, oranges, grapefruit and bananas being grown in abundance, as well as tomatoes, onions and potatoes. In smaller quantities are produced: mangoes, mameys, sapotes, guayabas, guanabanas, aguacates, limes, pomegranates, melons and figs.

Coconuts and cacao are important products of the island, and much attention has recently been given to the production of coffee and rice.

Cuba has much excellent range land, and cattle are raised and fattened on grass. The cattle industry is an important segment of the island's agriculture, and has good possibilities for greater development through improvement of breeds, feeds, and handling.

Large quantities of sponges are gathered on the south coast of Cuba, near Batabano, opposite the Isle of Pines; on the north coast smaller beds are also found.

FORESTS

The forest area covers about 3,500,000 acres, and produces mahogany and other valuable cabinet woods, as well as an abundance of cedar for the manufacture of cigar boxes. Dyewoods, fibres, gums and resins are also important commercially.

MINERALS

Oriente, Santa Clara and Pinar del Rio are the provinces richest in mineral wealth. Principal minerals are iron, copper, manganese, gold, lead, silver and antimony, coal, asphalt, sulphur, salt, asbestos and petroleum. Mineral springs with water of medicinal value are also found at a number of points on the islands.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Exports for 1949 amounted to $578,306,696, imports to $451,390,279. Principal exports: crude sugar, tobacco crude and manufactured, fresh vegetables, nutritious products, fibrous vegetables, minerals, bananas, leather. Principal imports: foods (small aliments), machinery, textiles, combustibles, chemicals and pharmaceuticals, paper, forest products, metals. United States is the predominating purchaser of Cuban exports and supplier of Cuban imports.

MISCELLANEOUS

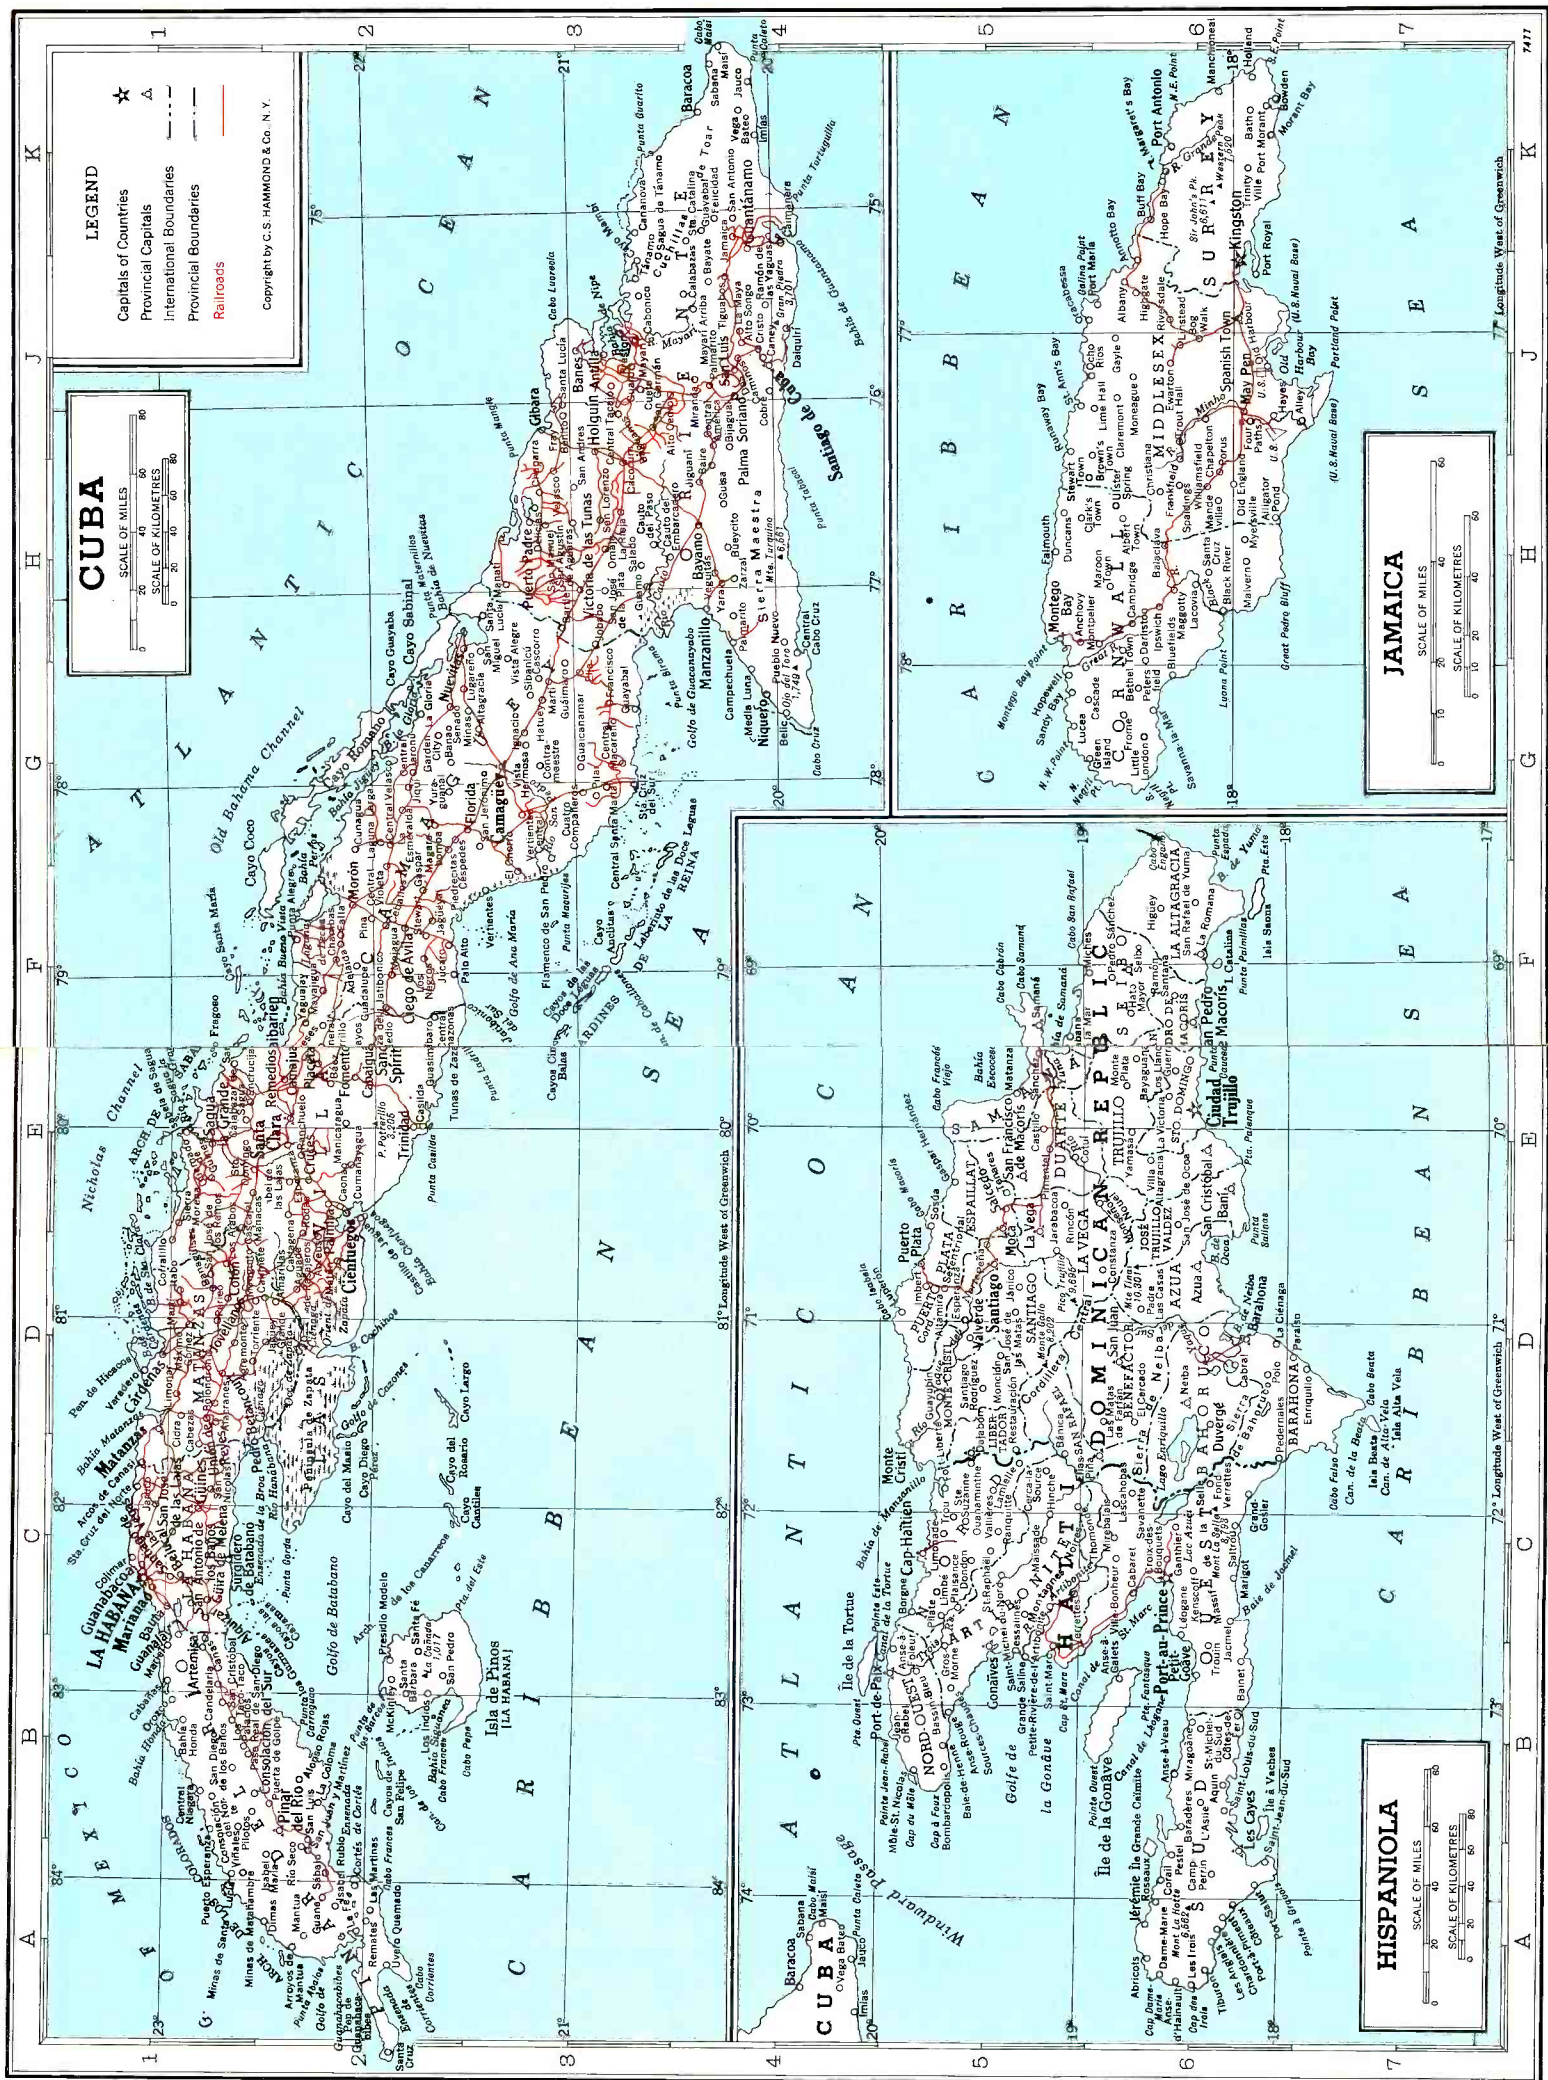

Cuba is well served by railroads and improved highways. International air traffic through Cuba is steadily increasing. Spanish is the language chiefly used but English and French are also widely understood. About sixty-eight per cent of the inhabitants are native white: the remaining percentage colored and foreign white.

Among higher institutions of learning is the University of Havana, founded in 1721.

REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

Population 19,234,182 (1948 Census)

Capital, MANILA (Luzon)

The Republic of the Philippines comprises the largest island group in the Malay Archipelago. There are 7,083 separate islands in this area which extends 1,152 miles from north to south and 688 miles from east to west. Of this large number 462 have an area each of one square mile or more. Eleven have an area of more than 1,000 square miles each. Total land area of islands is 114,830 square miles.

The port of Manila offers the finest harbor in the entire Far East. Other ports of entry are Cebu, Iloilo, Zamboanga, Jolo, Legaspi and Davao, and there are about 200 ports of call for inter-island vessels. The larger islands are mountainous with altitudes rising in places to more than 10,000 feet. Rainfall is abundant throughout the archipelago, varying from 60 inches in the driest district to 157 in the wettest. There are three seasons: the most agreeable, from November to March; the hot and dry season, from March to July; the rainy, from July to November.

POPULATION

Ninety-nine per cent of the population is native; the remaining percentage is made up of: Chinese, Japanese, Americans, Spaniards, Britons, Germans, French and Swiss. The American population is mostly centered in Manila. Although eight distinct languages and 87 dialects are spoken, English is used more extensively than all of these together.

AGRICULTURE

The cultivation of many crops heretofore imported but which may be grown locally is now being emphasized in agricultural development. Average size of the farms is 10 acres, but there are many large plantations. The chief agricultural products are unhusked rice, Manila hemp, copra, sugar cane, corn and tobacco. The principal export fruit is the pineapple, but there are also bananas, mangoes, papaya, lanzones, pilinut, chico, mandarins and oranges.

FORESTRY

Timber for construction purposes and for various types of lumber production is produced in large quantities. Rattan and bamboo, also dye woods and barks for tanning purposes, as well as rubber and gums and resins are in considerable production.

MINERALS

Gold production and the future of the gold mining industry are of increasing importance in the Islands. Exploration and the mining of gold and other metals is progressing. Besides gold, the Islands produce silver, lead, zinc, copper, iron, coal, petroleum, chromite, asbestos and manganese. Salt and clay are also found. The main Islands have a wide variety of natural resources. The coal fields already located are estimated at close to 100 square miles in area containing both hard and soft coal.
