Many of Your Favorites of the Air Have Become Stars Because of Real Handicaps. Here Is the Full Truth of Many Afflicted Stars You Didn't Even Suspect

By Phil Weck

VENE, VEDE, VICI," said Caesar. And the Carthaginians trembled.

"Ah, 'tis Twing, and the twits are birdering in the treeflops," said Roy Atwell. And the audience howled.

The main difference was that Caesar meant to say what he did, whereas Atwell fully intended to say "Ah, 'tis Spring, and the birds are twittering in the treetops."

Caesar had no physical impediments to conquer. Atwell did—he stuttered when he was nervous. That is, Roy thought it was an impediment to conquer, until he fozzled the above line. From then on, as his many biographers previously have told, he stuttered his way to fame. His affliction turned into an advantage, and he actually made money on what he once believed was his greatest handicap.

Atwell is not the only radio personage who has capitalized on a speech fault. Indeed, the networks are full of such examples. For instance, there is Poley McClintock, the very bass drummer with Fred Waring's troupe.

PEOPLE wonder whether Poley swallowed his drum or whether he stopped a mule's hoof with his neck. The truth of the matter is that Poley's frog-voice is natural. He even developed it further by yelling across back-yards at Fred Waring, then his neighbor and school-boy chum. Later he trained diligently and succeeded in developing a more normal speaking tone, and even a high tenor singing delivery. But when he moved into the big time under the Waring banner, Fred capitalized on Poley's unusual bass croakings. Now Poley rehearses by shaming lions into quietude.

THEN there's Whispering Jack Smith. Jack really does not have a speech impediment; he had to develop it for his broadcasts. The development really was accidental. 'Way back in 1925 Jack was broadcasting over station WMCA, New York City, as one of a quartet. Then one night the other three singers failed to show up.

"You'll have to go on alone," said the station manager.

"I won't!" replied Jack. "I can't!" But there was no alternative.

Mike fright in its worst form assailed Jack as he began to sing. The vocal cords in his throat did queer little tricks, jumping up and down and wrapping themselves around his larynx. Then they, too, became frightened—so scared that they resolved themselves into a state of temporary paralysis. The result was that Jack's voice went into the microphone, and came out of the various attuned loudspeakers as a hoarse whisper, instead of his own clear baritone notes.

The following day Jack presented himself at the hotel ready to do his best to set himself right with the station manager. But to his surprise he found that those whisperings of his had registered with the listeners, and "the whispering baritone" already was in demand. Jack has developed that whisper even further, until now he can tease his cords into a somnolent state without any great effort.

Little Jack Little is another whose vocal chords did tricks that brought him money. Back in his high school days Jack was too little to play football. So he resorted to cheer-leading. And one day a particularly loud cheer proved too much for him—he suffered a strain of the larynx. For three weeks he couldn't talk, and ever since then his singing has had that husky quality. As everyone knows, he turned that detriment into an advantage.

HARRY EINSTEIN began his career working for his father in the produce business. Einstein senior catered almost exclusively to Greeks, and as Einstein junior worked behind a counter, he almost had to develop the Greko-American dialect used by his customers. Harry never imagined that this dialect could be turned into something advantageous; after he was promoted from salesman to advertising manager, he retained the broken talk merely to amuse his friends.

Then one day he was called upon to entertain at a banquet which numbered Eddie Cantor among its guests. Cantor recognized the (Continued on Page 29)

Philosophy of a Phoolish Phire Chieph

By Ed Wynn

THE Philosophy of a Phoolish Phire Chieph may best be started with a paradox, that being the most handy weapon: The serious business of being funny is the saddest profession in the world.

A fool can never learn from a wise man, but a wise man may learn from a fool, and some day GRAM McNAMEE will be sticking to my horse.

Don't become a salary coward if you wish to get above the crowd, but at the same time it will do you no good to be the richest man in the cemetery.

If you attain success while young, a swelled head will avail you nothing—except when you get older it may stand you in good stead when you pass your hat around.

"In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." My advice to all youngsters is to marry while young; for today it is possible to promise in haste and repeat at leisure.

There will be trouble as long as there are two persons alive on the earth, but there need be no war if it is placed on a pay-as-you-enter basis. And regardless of current news, I doubt if there will be another war—and if there is, it will be a cheap one.

Only recently did I realize the full import of the "Peace" Treaty. France got a "piece" of Germany; Germany got a "piece" of France; Italy got a "piece" of Austria; and Uncle Sam was told to eat cake.

Laugh and the world laughs with you, cry and you might start another war. Replace the bearded diplomats and their long, sad faces with a group of comics—among others ROGERS, WODEHOUSE, COBB, et cetera.

"Whenever you hear the siren and the bell, think of"—the man who didn't pull his new car over to the curb in time.

A lot of our movie stars roared to fame like a lion, but it took a Mickey Mouse to make them all run second in the box office.

The man who beats his drum the hardest, usually is deafened to everything else except the noise he makes.

And if love truly makes the world go round, no wonder people in love feel dizzy. And girls, remember that gold will not heal a broken heart. Neither will it heal a broken dish. But it will buy plenty of glue.

Ed Wynn's program is on the air every Tuesday at 9:30 p. m. EST (8:30 CST, 7:30 MST, 6:30 PST) over an NBC network.

Generations of Theatrical Tradition That Date Back to 1740 Give Anne Seymour, Talented Star of Radio, a Background Second to None

By Henry Bentinck

Here's to the world of the drama,
The realm where the board is trod;
Where the Barrymores speak
To the Davenports—
And the Davenports—only to God.

AND ANNE SEYMOUR, star of NBC's Grand Hotel, is a Davenport!

The story of Anne's theatrical lineage sounds as though it might have prompted Clemence Dane's saga of the drama, Broom Stages. For all Miss Seymour knows, it did, because she is of either the seventh or ninth generation of a dramatic Royal Family founded in England, back in 1740, by one Jack Johnson.

So deep into the past does her line go that somewhere in the mazes of genealogy the thread has been lost. But the strain has remained unbroken throughout nearly two centuries.

Even Anne's mother, Mae Davenport Seymour, while no longer on the stage, remains at least of it, as she is in charge of the Theatrical Collection of the Museum of the City of New York, a department of memorabilia sacred to every follower of the theater.

And as if this all were not distinction enough for one girl, Miss Seymour becomes further notable by being one of the few singers or dramatic artists of the era, who didn't advance her technique in The Ziegfeld Follies, Show Boat or Blossom Time.

THE story of the original Mr. Johnson is lost in the obscurity of the ages, but at the point where Anne's ancestors began their traceable line, the story sounds like a page from Genesis.

Her forbears just begat and begat and begat. And each in his turn begat more, until the story is studded with records of eight to ten children to a family, one or two of which from each branch of the widening clan clung to the theatrical tradition.

The modern branch of this interesting family dates back to E. L. Davenport, who migrated to America after reaching the heights in his native land, England, contemporary with Booth and Lawrence Barrett. In New York he married Fanny Vining, also of the theater, and their issue eventually amounted to nine children, most prominent of whom in stage lore, was Fanny Davenport, Anne Seymour's great aunt.

Another of the children, Harry Davenport, is currently successful in the hilarious comedy, Three Men on a Horse. So Anne Seymour rates more than a nod from the Barrymores and, from the safety of her exalted position in the theater, she herself speaks to all whom she knows with the convincing spontaneity of one who rates environment dearer than pedigree.

Anne was born within earshot of Manhattan's Rialto, in the not very remote year of 1909, on September 11. And into her twenty-six years she has crowded the entire gamut of theatrical experiences which fall only to those in whom trouping is inherent.

Nor is Anne one of your studio-made actresses, product of the dramatic schools. To her a coach in her formative days was what the polisher is to the diamond which Nature created in a crucible of its own. She matriculated at the American Laboratory Theatrical School in New York. Pupils of this advanced institution generally are not released to the theater until they are in the second year.

THERE was no dross in the material of which Anne Seymour was made. She had not finished four months of training before she had made her professional bow to Manhattan's exacting audiences. There followed one thing and another until she joined the Jitney Players, one of the more modern dramatic enterprises which youth has contributed to the theater in America.

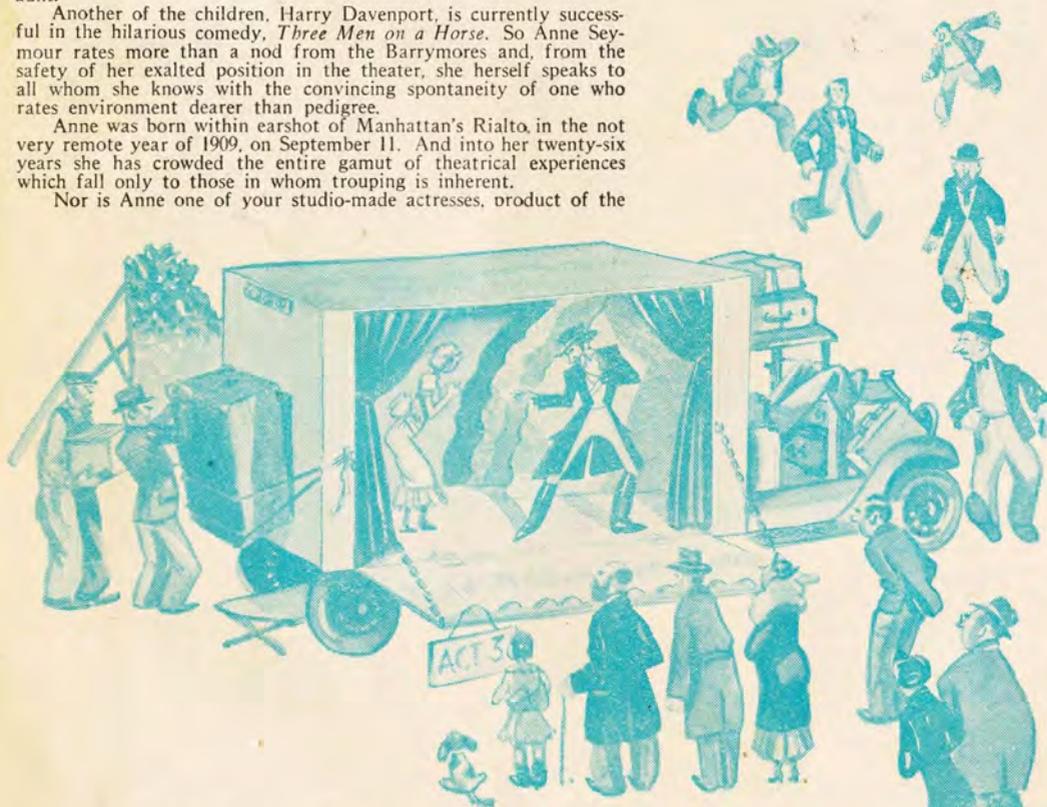

Meanwhile, in one production she had been merely an off-stage voice, although during the tenure of that thankless role she studied and learned the scripts of the thirteen other characters in the play. She was the original wholesaler in the understudy business. But to be a true opportunist one must anticipate opportunity.

In the matter of absorbing roles, Miss Seymour repeated herself while supporting Ethel Barrymore in the School for Scandal. Had the grand dame of the theater been compelled to leave the show, it would have been but the matter of a moment for Anne to have assumed the sprightly part. After all, what's a Barrymore to a Davenport-Seymour?

ONE day Anne was a singer—next a character actress—and eventually a comedienne, until the elements of stagecraft were so blended in her that to this day she is uncertain of her classified status.

But all of these developments in normal theatrical progress are only sidelights against the brightest period in the adventures of this daughter of the stage. That was when she and four fellow-performers launched the artistic venture which later was to become the Millbrook Theater, outstanding among the many enterprises of the countrywide Little Theater movement.

These gay gypsies knew no theater. Their stage was the floor of the truck in which they traveled, their living quarters and dressing rooms tiny canvas tents that scarcely deserved the name. Blithely but with determined seriousness they carried the almost-forgotten drama to the hinterlands of New England, with the rugged vistas of the northeast for their scenery and the characteristic skeptics of (Continued on Page 29)

Barnstorming with the floor of a motor truck for a stage gave Anne an experience that few, if any, theatrical stars have been privileged to enjoy obtain some lunch and return to the studio for the broadcast.

Tony Stanford, the director, is a short, slim, nervous Texan, and upon him depends the success of the broadcasts. It would be interesting to go backstage to watch a rehearsal, and for an illuminating insight as to how a radio director handles the greatest all-star cast in the show world. This is what the writer saw on a typical occasion:

Wallace Beery, playing The Old Soak, was standing in front of the microphone, script in hand. The burly screech star presented a memorable sight, with his coat and vest off, his suspenders hanging down, and his shirt open at the neck. It could be seen plainly that Beery

Paul Muni is one celebrity who insists upon using props when he appears before the microphone. Note the cigaret in his hand

Cowl's history were not surprised at her grand work, for she had played the role for more than 1,000 performances on the stage. But few, if any, know that Miss Cowl insisted on two full weeks of rehearsal before she agreed to go on the air.

BEING a naturally inquisitive reporter, this writer asked Miss Cowl to tell why she demanded such a long rehearsal period for a role she knew so thoroughly. "Yes, I guess I know the part of Mooneyan better than any other living actress," admitted Miss Cowl. "But I know her only as a stage heroine. Radio and its mysteries frighten me. I realize that the Radio Theater audience is practically as large as the combined audiences for all those stage appearances. And so I insist that it be rehearsed even more thoroughly than for a first night on Broadway."

Ever since that hysterical time when winsome Margaret Sullivan reported sick at the last moment, the

By Jack Banner

WHEN the curtain rose for the opening performance on the Theater of the Air program less than a year ago, much shrugging of pessimistic shoulders was seen in informed radio circles. It couldn't last—or so the wise ones thought. But if it came to be scoffed, it has remained to be lauded as the outstanding entertainment of its kind on the air.

In the beginning the usual hackneyed arguments were advanced. . . . the program was too high-brow, and for that reason it would have but a limited audience appeal. . . . it departed too radically from the beaten path. . . . and finally, that hardly old perennial was dragged out of mothballs—the reputed inability of the radio audience (libelously credited with possessing the intellect of a 12-year-old) to grasp or appreciate anything but the ancient wheezes of lowbrow comedians.

It is to be hoped that the phenomenal success of the Theater of the Air has forever confounded those critics who advance such foolish and obsolete theories every time a worthwhile radio feature is proposed.

The Theater of the Air shows are rehearsed as carefully and as thoroughly as any show on Broadway. Principals and supporting players gather in the studio on Monday for the first preliminary script reading. On Tuesday the script is polished off, and the players take their places at the microphones for the first time. The next three days are devoted to arduous and grueling rehearsals, reading lines, marking off cues, setting the sound and music effects. The first "dress rehearsal comes on Friday, and after a day's rest the cast meets in the studio on Sunday morning for the final "dress." This usually is completed about noon, which gives the players a chance to was frightened by the mike. He was leery of his voice and didn't know whether to whisper or to bellow. Several times he "faded" off the dead end of the mike and approached the "scene" on the live end, which is just the reverse of what he should have done.

Seated behind the glass window of the control room, Director Stanford listened to the reading of the script with a super-critical ear. From time to time as the players made mistakes he interrupted them with suggestions which are carried into the studio through the medium of a loud-speaker and microphone. Lines were repeated over and over again. Sound effects were employed; the noise operator always looked to the director for his cues. Director Stanford calls the players "children."

AFTER hours of nerve-searing work the players finally seemed to capture the right emphasis, shading expression and timing of the words. But apparently Stanford wasn't satisfied with the way Beery and another player were slurring their lines.

"No—no—no, children!" he boomed over the loudspeakers. No one seemed to appreciate the ludicrousness of tiny Tony Stanford addressing portly Wallace Beery as a child.

Thus the afternoon wore on. Under Stanford's direction the rough spots were filed off, and the script took on life and color. Beery fell in love with his role, and at present is moving heaven and earth in an effort to have his film company buy the screen rights to the play. He feels that it will be one of the greatest roles of his film career.

Jane Cowl, a true First Lady of the theater, gave a sensitive and faithful performance of Smilin' through in her first Radio Theater broadcast last Fall. Those familiar with sponsors of the Radio Theater have employed understudies to fill in any unexpected breach in the program. Margaret was engaged to do Peg O' My Heart. The male role was allotted to Bramwell Fletcher, the well-known Broadway actor.

ALL WEEK long Miss Sullivan survived the long preliminary rehearsal schedule. Sunday morning everyone reported fresh and rarin' to go—everyone but the star, who was sick in bed with a suddenly contracted case of laryngitis, and unable to speak above a whisper.

The producers were frantic. Here it was eleven-thirty Sunday morning—with the program scheduled to go on the air three hours later. Bramwell Fletcher came forward with an idea. "Call my fiancé," he suggested excitedly. He was referring to lovely little Helen Chandler, stage and screen star. A half-hour later the sleepy-eyed little actress was in the studio—but the unexpected prospect of playing opposite the man to whom she was to be married a few days afterward, wrought havoc with her nerves. "I'm scared stiff," she admitted. "Try and get some one else. If you fail, then I'll go on."

Some one thought of Helen Hayes, who lives in a suburban retreat—Nyack. Another desperate phone call. Luck was with the producers. The challenge was like a narcotic to the plucky little trouper.

It's a two-hour drive from Nyack to Radio City. Helen Hayes and her husband, the playwright and script writer, Charles MacArthur, made it in an hour and fifteen minutes. Into the studio she stormed, scarcely able to catch her breath. A desperate script reading once or twice—and the second hand on the electric studio clock spun past the hour when the Radio Theater goes on the air.

The show went over perfectly, just as if Peg weren't

Irene Dunne, whose playing of Secrets counted as one of the red-letter presentations of the Theater of the Air. Roland Young and Lucille Watson (left) as they had their turn on the Theater's microphone

A roll-call of the stars who have graced the mythical stage of radio's theater reads like a page torn from a Who's Who of the amusement world. They include, among others, Lillian Gish, Gene Raymond, Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins, Helen Hayes, John Boles, Ruth Chatterton, Roland Young, Ethel Barrymore, Jane Cowl, Leslie Howard, Jimmy Cagney, Claudette Colbert—to name some of the recent ones.

AND THE plays!—an extraordinary colorful array of smash hits, unrivaled anywhere! Legitimate theater owners gloat when their mime temples house one or possibly two hit attractions a year. The Theater of the Air presents an outstanding hit each week. Witness: Seventh Heaven, Berkeley Square, Secrets, Mrs. Dane's Defense, The Old Soak, The Barker, The First Year, Daddy Long Legs—these and score of others already have been heard. An equally elaborate list of hits is yet to come.

And if you've listened to the programs, you know that the plays were not emulsified, as frequently happens in radio. Each one was a full, vital, complete drama. In several instances minor characters and inconsequential dialogue have been written out, but in the main the action and sequences were untouched. George Wells, who does the radio adapting, explains that an hour-and-a-half show on the stage, easily can be done in 60 minutes before the microphone, as the action on the air moves at a much quicker pace.

fish and Helen Hayes scotch. It was a grand, game effort, for Helen Hayes never had seen the play on the stage—in fact was totally unfamiliar with it until shortly before the broadcast. Charlie MacArthur, sitting in the control room, almost bit his finger-nails off in his frantic anxiety.

After the broadcast the supporting players gave her a tremendous ovation, and carried her around the studio on their shoulders.

The music occupies the same place in the Radio Theater presentations that the settings do for a stage play. Robert Ambroster, the musical director, writes original scores for all the plays—except of course, those plays which have their own musical theme—such as Lilac Time. A careful study of the script precedes the writing, as Ambroster always tries to write music that will fit the character of the lead roles. Ambroster spends three days composing new tunes, two days working with his arrangers, and two days in actual rehearsal. The Theater of the Air is one of the few dramatic shows which does not go in wholeheartedly for an abundance of sound effects. Operating on the theory that too many sound effects result in a confusing and jumbled program, the directors insist that only those sound effects which would seem strange by their omission, be used.

This theory was decided upon while they were working out Seventh Heaven, their inaugural program. There were 1,442 sound effects indicated on the script—every time Clisco ran up and down the steps—every time Diane rattled the dishes, and so on. By using only those effects that would have seemed strange by their omission, they were able to cut the sound noises down to less than 300—and subsequent shows have used much less.

Reviewing Radio

By Martin J. Porter

THE NEWS that ELMER RICE, actor and playwright, has joined the parade of Broadway producers to the radio studios is interesting. Doubtless when Mr. Rice's new series—titled Street Scene, but quite apart from the play of that name—begins, we shall have another fresh dramatic viewpoint to analyze. Mr. Rice is an individualist, as may be judged from his battle with the stage critics, and individualists of course should be considered an asset. Yet certain misgivings accompany the announcement. Not that anyone should lack admiration for Mr. Rice. But there is to be considered the ill-fate of the individualists from Broadway, who preceded Mr. Rice into the radio scene is another of the Broadway literati lately arrived, with his Music at the Haydn's, which started out with a new idea but which, despite the Harbach history, seems to me at this writing to have become slow-moving and quite dull. Mr. Rice therefore has a historical hedge full of obstacles to hurdle; but of his ability to produce something absorbing for the NBC, I have little doubt.

Perhaps you are missing that little Lord Haunterly, BEETLE, from the PHIL BAKER programs, and are wondering why this heckling voice from the echo chamber is no longer part of the show. The character of Beetle, even Phil Baker will admit, was an integral part of the broadcast. Well, it seems that temperament has caused the deletion. There have been three Beetles and all of them, because of a theory held by Baker, have remained myths and anonymous. Each Beetle has had to sit alone in a small room while the rest of the cast basked in studio applause. In advertising, billing and the public prints, Beetle never got his real name into type. And since each Beetle—the last being Hank Ladd—served time in vaudeville, the urge for notoriety, and the lack of realization of it, caused the Beetles to fret. Trouble with Baker ensued with the result that Beetle has been dropped. But if the public squawks loudly enough, it is a certainty that Baker will restore the heckler.

WNEW, which had inherited the American Broadcasting chain when the WMCA millionaires withdrew, is back in its independent role with the chain no longer in existence as such. The Philadelphia outlet, WIP, has joined forces with WMCA on a commercial and program exchange basis, for the purpose of giving WOR a bit of competition.

Among the interesting news items of the week was that which gives a new status to MAJOR BOWES originally staged his amateur hour. LOUIS K. SIDNEY, the new director, has turned the artist bureau of the station over to the William Morris agency, which will handle the future of all amateurs appearing there, and will align the station with Hollywood whence will come, between pictures, all the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars, including Garbo, for

WHN, where MAJOR BOWES originally staged his amateur hour. LOUIS K. SIDNEY, the new director, has turned the artist bureau of the station over to the William Morris agency, which will handle the future of all amateurs appearing there, and will align the station with Hollywood whence will come, between pictures, all the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars, including Garbo, for performances at WHN. All recordings have vanished from WHN.

Additional vigor has been given WHN by its inauguration recently of its Sunday night "Itty Bitty Kiddy Hour," opposite JOE PENNER. This has opened a new field for radio entertainment.

The program is a straight burlesque of everything on the air, including commercial announcements. Its star is WARD WILSON, the mimic, with PERRY CHARLES announcing, and various celebs walking in and out of the lampoon sessions. Nothing is sacred to this event, which is hilarious with a straight face, and about the gayest and smartest job to go on the air this season. The cast brazenly knocks you over with a false-teeth advertisement, while a whistler wearing a set of artificial molars whistles beautifully. Little kiddies, gently referred to as "brats," recite, dance and sing, or engage in conflict with giants and witches, between dramatizations of this or that. Mr. Whoopinkoff plays his cile-din, while Lady Pester tells you how grit her cosmetics are. You no sooner digest this than you hear an artistic plea for your patronage of the Bouncing Bustle, with which, says the announcer, you will get a kick out of life, or at least a lift. BOBBY BENSON becomes Sloppy Bimpson, BUCK ROGERS gets the name of Punk Dodgers, UNCLE DON is Uncle Con, and there's a Little Orphan Fanny and numerous "pest artists." Personally, I imagine WHN has a better bet in this lampooning business than it has in its amateurs. At the very least it is a courageous gesture, and a godsend to network script writers who listen religiously and steal all the gags.

SOME of the unusual contracts between sponsors and radio artists are giving attorneys the jitters. For instance, the contract which LEON BELASCO has with PHIL BAKER'S sponsors allows the employer the right to take away the speaking parts from Belasco if he should lose his natural Russian accent. GOODMAN ACE'S agreement with his bosses permits him to write as many as 30 people into his scripts, but if he writes in only two they must be Ace and his wife, Jane. The five actual bullfighters in XAVIER CUGAT'S orchestra, contract with him so they can return to Spain every so often to engage in the fights.

The funniest of all clauses, however, is the two-week capcellation clause in nearly every radio contract, under which the sponsor can fire the works within any fourteen days.

FRUSTRATED FANS: On Tuesday, take Crosby at 9 p. m. EST (8 CST) and dial Bernie at 12 midnight EST (11 p. m. CST) over KFI, KPO or KOA . . . and if you'd hear Winchell's Bernie barbs twice, tune the Gray Ghost of Broadway in for the second time Sunday nights at 11:15 p. m. EST (10:15 CST) over the same three Western stations.

Amateur shows are swell, so the public says, but we wonder what became of Jane (Rowene) Williams, the national winner of the Hollywood Hotel berth?

The hurried air trips DOROTHY PAGE made to the Coast were not in vain. By the time you read this, the beautiful songstress will be back in Hollywood for the third time in four weeks, and working on the Universal lot in preparation for her first picture—with a nice new flicker contract in her vault.

Countess Albani of the Silken Strings program (NBC-WJZ network Sundays at 9 p. m. EST, 8 CST) made one of the highest scores so far recorded on the automatic tone-variator, shown above—a device for testing the subject's ear for musical pitch

There was SIGMUND ROMBERG, for instance, whose show is folding. It was individual and melodic, but it was not a clicker. Earlier still came COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER as author of the Gibson Family, and that feature became, mostly through production interference I am told, a very second-rate affair until OWEN DAVIS and Son took hold. OTTO HARBACH

Plums and Prunes

MYRT AND MARGE listeners don't realize how very nearly they missed hearing their favorites on Monday evening, March 25. And the reason was one of the most unusual ever recorded in the annals of radio. Only the quick thinking of one of the studio officials saved the day.

Early in the afternoon the storage battery power at the CBS Chicago studios began to fail. Engineers, observing the trouble, nursed their batteries as well as they could; but try as they did, the power supply ran dangerously low toward late afternoon. Evening was approaching, and with it the 7 p. m. EST (6 CST) origination from these studios of the Myrt and Marge sketch. What to do?

The solution was something new, to say the least. The Railway Express agency was called and asked to send over four of their large electric trucks. These were driven alongside the building close to the studios, their batteries joined together, and cables connected to the studio amplifiers on the floor above. Result—the show "went on," as Myrt would say.

COUNTESS OLGA ALBANI'S voice, revealed to be one of the most faithful to tone (see photograph elsewhere on this page) by a new testing apparatus, will be heard at your neighborhood motion picture house soon after May 1.

With the end of April the Countess will begin commuting weekly between Chicago and New York, spending the days between Monday and Saturday at the Warner Brothers studios where she will be busily engaged in making a series of three-reel dramatic and singing shorts. And believe us, whether you merely listen to or look at Olga, she's all right.

SPEAKING OF SEEING things, one you didn't see was an incident which happened on the night of MAJOR BOWES' Amateur Hour premiere over a coast-to-coast NBC network. If you remember, the Major's rendition of a bit of poetry was rudely interrupted by audience guffaws which might have been construed as razzberries. No explanation was made by Bowes, for he likewise didn't see what was happening. But right behind him, standing with quaking knees alternately motivated by chills and fevers, was a gentleman of the amateur class whose brow was wet with perspiration . . . so wet, in fact, that a toupe he was wearing had taken to sea and was floating down his head. At the moment of the audience eruption, the toupe had reached an oblique angle over his right eye.

OFF A LIVE MIKE: Supplementing Wayne King's several commercial programs at night, his sponsor is now dickering for a dramatic show by Irna Phillips, the Today's Children and Welcome Valley writer, which now is spotted for five daytime periods weekly . . . Dolores Gillen, the Midwestern radiactress, is now playing stock three times weekly in Los Angeles and between times working as secretary to Bing Crosby, whose wife, Dixie Lee, is her girlhood chum . . . The radio script factory, alias Bob Andrews, is not content with turning out merely the Betty and Bob, Skippy, Back Stage Wife and Irene Rich sketches, but now is rumored to have the Chandu pen in hand . . . Pat and Connie Kennedy are taking a vacation till after Easter, in Pittsburgh . . . Dan Russo, daddy of the maestros, and his lovable missus are having a great time resting at Miami, Florida.

Inside Stuff

Along the Aerialto By Martin Lewis

YOU MAY have read elsewhere, that when ED WYNN leaves the air in June for his usual Summer vacation, the sponsor will relinquish the air time. Such is not the case. The Fire Chief will be succeeded by an as yet untyped temporary program, which will remain on the air until the Fall when it will be succeeded by a permanent show. It may be kind of oily to make this prediction, but you can bet your best friend that the Fire Chief will not return on this new permanent show, because he and his sponsor are all washed up. Last year the gasaloon people made a deal with NBC, which permitted them to go off the air for the Summer and to return to their usual spot in the Fall. However, this year the network moguls flatly refuse to guarantee the same time if they go off for the Summer. Thus the sponsor has no alternative, and is making plans for a Summer show so they can hold their Tuesday night spot. Why Wynn is burned up about it, I don't know. Your gas is as good as mine.

After next Sunday night's show JACK BENNY and his troupe, including JACK, MARY, DON BESTOR, FRANK PARKER and DON WILSON, will pull up stakes and migrate to the West Coast. Jack will board a plane immediately after the show. April 10 he starts production on Broadway Melody of 1935 for M. G. M.

Mary will take a train with the baby, and Don Wilson, who is being released from all present commercials, will drive out. Parker and Bestor are undecided as to their mode of travel.

Jack and the troupe will wind up their present air series from the coast about July 10. He will stay on out there with Mary and the infant, and probably establish a home. There will be a second picture, already contracted.

Bestor and his boys probably will move into one of the movie city hotel spots to supply the music for the diners. As for Don Wilson, the trip will be going home for him, also a chance to revive old friendships.

This is the annual Spring lull, when there is little activity in the air castles by the way of new programs. However, we have news of at least one program. In the issue dated January 12, we mentioned in this column that the blues-shouting songstress of Broadway's smash hit, Anything Goes, was slated for a commercial, and now we can confirm that flash. LA MERMAN will be the star of a new series presented by the sponsors of EDDIE CANTOR'S series and the just concluded Club Romance, plugging another of their products. Ethel will take the spot now occupied by Cantor's crew, immediately after they exit on April 28. That makes Sunday, May 5, the starting date and 8 to 8:30 p. m. EST (7-7:30 CST) on CBS the time. JOHNNY GREEN'S orchestra will supply the music. The rest of the program is still in the planning stage.

When Mark Warnow is not in the CBS studios rehearsing his musicians or making arrangements, you probably can reach him at his home. The maestro is truly a devoted father to his children, and if you should ever have occasion to call on him at his domicile, don't be surprised if you find him sitting on the floor playing with his kids. It's almost a ritual with him.

CBS has high hopes for another singer of large promise, whom it will launch for a buildup early in April. The new star is NORMAN CORDON, North Carolina blueblood and nephew of Governor Eringhaus of that state. Norm, a six-foot-five baritone, was the Mystery Singer on the PAUL WHITEMAN commercial last year, and is pretty well known already for his work with the Chicago Opera Company, and also on WOR and a number of NBC programs. CBS has signed him and will push him along intensively.

Every Wednesday at the stroke of midnight WENR, Chicago, presents "Lights Out," a thrilling drama full of horror and ghost stories written by BILL COOPER. You may think this is not the ideal time to present a broadcast of this type but, surprising as it may seem, the show in a short time has built a huge listening audience; so much, in fact, that last Wednesday night NBC put it on the network. They did this for two reasons: for an interested sponsor in New York, and to get the reaction of the people outside of the regular listening area who were hearing it for the first time. So if you heard the program and liked it, let NBC know about it. You may get to hear it regularly.

Here's a hilarious little incident concerning BEN BERNIE and WALTER WINCHELL that thus far seems to have escaped the commentators: The afternoon of the Winchell-Bernie broadcast, the principals were supposed to meet in the NBC studios for picture-taking purposes. On the way down to the studio Bernie was struck with an inspiration and hurried to a costumer where he obtained a couple of synthetic shotguns.

Entering the lobby of the Radio City building with the uncovered shotguns held under his arm, he made for one of the elevators. A group of uniformed attendants and guards blinked their eyes at the approach of the armed figure, and in a twinkling surrounded the Ole Maestro.

"Where ya goin' with those guns?" they growled evidently not recognizing Bernie.

"Why, I'm going upstairs to get Winchell," flipped Bernie, as his arms were pionioned and the cannons taken away from him. One of the attendants tooted a police whistle, and several coppers responded on the run. Ben almost went for a ride in the Black Maria, but it didn't take him long to prove his identity and innocent intentions.

Rumors have reached these old ears to the effect that JACK PEARL'S sponsors were not satisfied with his current brand of comedy. Also rumors have come to the same ears, to the effect that Jack does not appreciate his sponsor's idea of humor. Which would indicate that all is not smooth in the Pearl camp. Rest assured, however, that it's all the malarkey. Radio row always buzzes with strange rumors, especially where the comics are concerned. We doubt if there has yet been a comedian who was not subject to rumors that he and his commercial angels were bitterly feuding. Comedy programs always give rise to heated arguments, and it's all a part of the game. No two people think every gag is sure-fire.

From their harmless and well-intended arguments, reports of rifts spread like wildfire.

One day last week ROSALINE GREENE invited a party of friends to lunch. After paying the check and giving the waiter his tip for services rendered, Rosaline found she had just eight cents left in her purse, which wasn't near enough money for cab fare home. She didn't want any of her guests to know of her embarrassment, and as luck would have it, Sir Lancelot ROSS (Lanny to you) appeared on the scene. After a hurried private conference, the Knight of Song slipped her a few greenbacks. The fair Rosaline knew then she didn't have to walk home.

PEGGY ALLENBY got a bigger thrill than most folks are aware, in playing the repeat radio version of The Rogue Song on her regular program, and here's why: Last May Peggy played the first instalment of the drama, but the following week, when she should have been in the studio carrying on with the final instalment, she was in a maternity hospital giving birth to her baby. This time, however, the stork didn't interfere with her plans, and she completed the offering.

It seems both NBC and CBS lost out on a good thing when they turned down the Pathe News Reel of the Air program because of their antiquated ruling which prohibits recordings. By not accepting it, they left themselves open to some stiff competition, the sponsor taking the unique show over to the Mutual chain (WOR-WGN-WLW-WXYZ). From all indications it should have a monopoly on the listeners when it is on the air.

Listeners will have the opportunity of hearing the real sound of dramatic happenings picked up by Pathe sound trucks used in the taking of movie newsreels. No sound effects or mimicked voices will be used in these broadcasts.

Personal recommendation: KAY KYSER'S excellent arrangement and SULLY MASON'S grand vocalizing, of "Take Your Girlie to the Movies" . . . BURNS and ALLEN, who for the past several weeks have become crazier and much funnier . . . ARTIE AUERBACH'S amusing dialect on the PHIL BAKER show . . . LITTLE JUNIOR, who in our estimation steals the show away from BEA LILLIE . . . The new Pathe News Reel of the Air, which will be aired over the Mutual chain. From what I've learned about it, this program should be different, Graham.

The reason you didn't hear LEAH RAY singing with PHIL HARRIS' orchestra last week from the Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati, was that the attractive songstress was confined to a bed at the Good Samaritan Hospital with a bad case of the flu. By the time you read this, it is hoped that she will be fully recovered and back with the new Harris band, which by the way sounds great. Give a listen.

Amos 'n' Andy— Here They Are

With Their First Sponsor Came Gosden and Correll's First Real Fight. The Issue? Whether They'd Consent to Merge Themselves with a Big Show, or Remain an Independent Team. Little Did They Dream That Before That Fight Was Over—

By Harry Steele

Amos 'n' Andy, as their recent late Winter vacation nears its end, sun themselves and "relapse" in the invigorating atmosphere of El Mirador Hotel and Palm Springs, California. Here they are scouting the threatened advance of some movie desperadoes who threaten them with a contract

Freeman Gosden, Amos of the famous team, was born thirty-six years ago in Richmond, Virginia; he began life an automobile salesman. He is married and has two children, Freeman, Junior, six, and Marie, four.

Charles Correll, Andy, is a native of Illinois; his early claim to fame and fortune was made through laying bricks. He too is married, but the Corrells have no children.

A mutual interest in amateur theatricals threw the pair together. In previous instalments Harry Steele has described many turns in their affairs, including the accident that came within an ace of preventing their ever making a contact with each other; their adventures coaching amateur theatrical companies in several states; their earliest flings at radio.

Herewith is presented instalment six, containing further glamorous episodes in their life-story.

NO ONE who ever has worked as a sustaining radio artist, and watched the parade of stars go by to network fame, could fail to thrill at the alluring words which Niles Trammel directed at Gosden and Correll, after the preliminary formalities of their first meeting.

"How would you boys like to come over to NBC?" was the nubbin of his first inquiry.

In light of the bright vision engendered by that simple question, both Gosden and Correll forgot the shimmer of their success with their "personal network," that web of recordings which had given them the national prestige only accorded, as a rule, to performers for the chains.

There is a psychological gratification that comes with being solicited by network officials, and Amos 'n' Andy's creators were not distinguished from fellow artists in their reaction to Trammel's pointed question. Assent was in their eyes long before they could co-ordinate their thoughts sufficiently to phrase it.

NATURALLY, there had to be the customary fencing with which men of business conduct their negotiations—that backing and filling over terms and conditions which is deemed to be sound business, regardless of the high probability that both sides are predetermined to come to terms. Somehow the process seems to imbue the negotiators with the belief that it wouldn't be dignified or strictly commercial, or perhaps even masculine, to yield without the customary palaver that leads only to the contract.

It safely could be assumed by the two comedians that Mr. Trammel had a potential sponsor up his sleeve. Had it been a case merely of wanting to give the act a national airing, the network executives could have dealt directly with WMAQ, the Chicago Daily News station, which had inaugurated the Amos 'n' Andy scripts.

He did. It was the toothpaste company which still presents the boys—but it developed that there was more in store than the mere signing of a contract and the launching of the program under a new sponsorship.

Before Gosden and Correll were approached by Trammel, the sponsor had wavered between the two comedians in a special treatment of their own devising, and a symphony orchestra program; at one stage of the negotiations it appeared that the musical unit would be selected. Only the fact that the company felt that the symphony would be too heavy a dose for more than one presentation a week, and they wanted to be heard at least three times a week in order to pound home their sales story, averted the musical choice. So Amos 'n' Andy got the call. But from Gosden and Correll's point of view, there was a catch in it.

BY THIS time, of course, the nation at large knew about the famous negro characters. Countless listeners who had not heard the broadcasts, had picked up endless favorable comments about them, and had read the mounting columns of publicity which were accorded Amos 'n' Andy. So it was that the boys were established with the public, and naturally they were hardly of a mind to entertain a proposition which would rob them of the identity so completely their own and for which they had worked diligently and conscientiously.

Yet that was the very proposal with which they were met, once the preliminaries of the conference with Trammel were over. The name of the proposed sponsor was revealed to them, and along with it the sponsor's plan: they wanted to fabricate an elaborate minstrel show in which the two black-face comedians were to perform as end men. If they consented, their independent identities would be submerged in the necessarily elaborate cast.

It was all too baffling. Literally the dawn had come in a sponsor-call, but it had brought clouds that completely dimmed the usual jubilation over the event. Gosden and Correll yearned for the prerequisites that are the fruit of national sponsorship—but most assuredly they did not want to relinquish the characters which had won them their chance.

WITH no show of servility but with the natural caution of the employe toward employer they argued their case, pleading that to cast them as Bones and Tambo would be to undo the good of several years of toil. Allied with them in arguing their case was the loyal Sen Kanev. Sen had been a warm admirer in the days of the Kinky Kids' Parade era over WEBH, and had watched with delight the flowering of the characters born of those patter choruses.

The boys' sound reasoning eventually wooed the sponsors from their decision to launch a gigantic minstrel show, but the concession was a reluctant one fraught with the general opinion that "no good would come of it." But nevertheless Amos 'n' Andy, along with Bill Hay and his traditional "Here they are," were introduced to network audiences under the toothpaste sponsorship. Developments were awaited eagerly.

It would be useless to attempt to analyze the furor which the act created. Psychologists, radio experts, the public and Gosden and Correll themselves have attempted to put their finger on the ingredient which accounts for the overwhelming success of the broadcast. But despite the erudite conclusions that have been reached, there never has been a completely satisfying explanation.

A SUCCESS it was, beyond anyone's most exalted dreams. Amos 'n' Andy swept the nation like the current dust storms. A thousand programs have imitated it and failed—as many sterling productions have been devised to wrest from it a share of its glory without so much as casting a shadow on its bright luster—and like the brook, it goes on forever.

The act made its network debut in August of 1929, and by September the country was aflame with the affairs of the various characters to an extent where they exceeded in popular interest the vital current events of politics and economics. They became an overnight menace to amusements in general, and it was then that public places had to find means to cope with the Amos 'n' Andy threat.

Many hotels found it wise to equip their lobbies with loudspeakers in order that transients might not lose track of the adventures (Continued on Page 27)

Jubilee Tribute to a Titan

Says Doctor Damrosch from the Wealth of His Experience: "I Am Grateful to Radio for the Opportunity to Do the Most Important Work of My Life"

By Chester Matthews

DOCTOR WALTER DAMROSCH, dean of American conductors and grand old man of radio, celebrates his Golden Jubilee as a conductor on Friday, April 12. For fifty years Doctor Damrosch has been leading symphony orchestras, directing operas and concerts; and for every one of those fifty years he has been an exponent of the better things in music.

The arrangements Doctor Damrosch has made and the compositions he has written have become historical in American music, but far more important than those is the part he has been playing as an instructor of the American public, teaching everyone to know and to love good music. And radio, he says, has made his gospel universal in its scope.

"Radio," he once declared, "more than any other form of musical dissemination, has taught the American people to appreciate great music."

For the past dozen years Doctor Damrosch's name has been synonymous with broadcasting. He has devoted the last years of his life to a battle to make radio mean more to the public than light and impermanent entertainment. And these last years, he says, have been his most productive.

ONE OF the first serious musicians to envision the potential possibilities of radio in promoting the cause of good music, this dean of American conductors has remained one of radio's staunchest champions—and one of its most beloved personalities.

"In looking back over the fifty years of my career as a conductor and musical pioneer," reminisces Doctor Damrosch, "I am struck by the fact that what is to me the most important development has come within the past twelve years. It has been my privilege since I was a very young man to share in helping the people of our country to familiarize themselves with the works of the great composers, but it was not until the advent of broadcasting that I was enabled to bring those masterpieces to the attention of millions.

"Since the inauguration of broadcasting the growth of musical understanding on the part of the country as a whole has been phenomenal. It is not surprising, because I have always been convinced that the American will be sung in German with Lauritz Melchior, tenor, and Dorothy Manski, contralto, of the Metropolitan Opera; John Gurney, baritone, and Alden Edkins, NBC bass-baritone. The Wagner act will be sung in English with an all-American cast, including Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, Helen Jepson, soprano, both of the Metropolitan Opera; George Meader, tenor formerly of the Metropolitan; Edwina Eustis, mezzo-soprano; John Barclay and Frederick Baer, baritones. A portion of this performance will be broadcast over an NBC-WJZ network at 10:45 p. m. EST (9:45 CST) Friday, April 12.

THUS Doctor Damrosch returns to the very scene of his debut as a conductor to celebrate the Golden Jubilee of that event. It was on Lincoln's birthday in 1885 that young Walter picked up his father's baton to conduct a performance of Tannhauser in the Metropolitan Opera House. That event came as an unheralded emergency. His distinguished father, Leopold, German opera director at the Metropolitan, was suddenly stricken ill. No other conductor familiar with the score could be found, and the youthful Walter was pressed into service. So ably did he acquit himself that he was asked to conduct Die Walkure the next night and Meyerbeer's Le Prophete two nights later. The following day sorrow overshadowed his triumphs. His father passed away.

Nine days later Walter went on tour with that company as its duly appointed director of German repertoire.

Even before his debut as a conductor a half century ago, Walter Damrosch had been active as an apostle of good music. At the age of seventeen he began his professional career as a second violinist in his father's orchestra. Two years later he was assisting the elder Doctor Damrosch in drilling a festival chorus. So efficiently did he discharge those duties that he was selected permanent conductor of the Newark Harmonic Society. Also he played the organ and directed the choir of Henry Ward Beecher's church (Continued on Page 30) people needed only to hear fine music in order to appreciate it. I am grateful to the radio for the opportunity it has given me to do what I consider the most important work of my life; that is, to help the school children of the United States gain a perception of the meaning of the universal language of the emotions—music."

Doctor Damrosch's host of radio friends and admirers have not been overlooked in the plans for celebrating his Golden Jubilee.

On Friday morning, April 12, from 11 to 12 noon EST (10 to 11 a. m. CST) the National Broadcasting Company will combine its coast-to-coast networks to broadcast a program honoring its musical counsel. Several of his own compositions will be performed, including his arrangement of Bach's prelude and chorale, A Mighty Fortress Is Our God; the chorale will be sung by a chorus of 200 school children.

THE RADIO audience also will share in listening to a portion of the gala celebration to be held in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York in the evening. The bill that evening, with Doctor Damrosch in the pit as conductor, will consist of the second act of Beethoven's Fidelio, the dungeon scene and both scenes of the third act of Wagner's Die Meistersinger. Many Changes in Star Election

IN all but two divisions of the Star of Stars Election, the latest tabulations of the Tellers resembles a game of leap-frog more than anything else. Each day during the week just closed, found various contestants shifting positions until it remained for the end-of-the-week flood of ballots to determine the current standings.

In the Performers' division, all of the top contestants held their own with the exception of Crooner Crosby. He was deposited in favor of Lanny Ross. The Log Cabin tenor dropped the Hollywood baritone to sixth place, while he himself advanced a notch to take fifth, formerly occupied by Bing.

Of greater moment was the strength revealed by Ben Bernie in the orchestra group. The Old Maestro, despite his digression to battle (via the typewriter) with Walter Winchell, managed to pilot his popular film and radio band into fourth place, dispossessing a conductor who has never until now known a place below fourth—Jan Garber.

ADDED to the official ballot is a line asking the name of your radio receiving set. It is not imperative for you to fill this in, and your failure to do so will not keep your votes from being counted for your favorites. RADIO GUIDE would appreciate this information, of course. But remember—if you do not fill in that particular line, it will not in any way invalidate your vote.

How important is each ballot was exemplified in last week's tabulations, which showed a startling alteration in the Musical Programs division. Both the Rudy Vallee Variety Hour and Jack Benny's program succumbed to the suddenly-revealed strength of the Thursday night Show Boat, which hurdled over the toughest competition on the air to attain second place in the standings.

Among Dramatic Programs, the March of Time followed up its advantage of the previous week by catapulting into second place. This classification has been marked continually by upsets, but the unsuspected strength evinced by the dramatized news program is little short of thrilling.

The time to vote is now. Vote at once and vote often. You can send in as many ballots as you wish. The only requirement is that you use the official ballot printed in RADIO GUIDE. It is so devised that you can paste it on a post card and take advantage of cheap postage.

Each week brings the contest closer to the finish, and the more firmly the contestants entrench themselves in leading places, the more difficult it is going to be to dislodge them. The answer is in your hands. Vote early and vote often. Mail your ballots to the Star Election Tellers, RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Ct., Chicago, Ill.

Results of the latest tabulations are shown herewith, with a number opposite each name to indicate the standing of the contestants in each of the six classifications. A gold medal suitably inscribed, goes to each winner your votes elect, at the close of the Election, June 1, 1935.

To Hell with All Cops!

"Heist 'Em, Then Kill 'Em. They Can't Rat on You Then." This Seemed to Be the Code of the Murderous Quartet of Detroit, Who Set out to Make a Pile . . . But the Power of Radio to Defend the Law Stepped in And —

Calling All Cars By Moorehead Green

NEXT time I stick up a guy," said Robert Frazier, "I think I'll kill him." The other three looked at him. They had been drinking, and now formed an unholy quartet of street-corner loafers, lounging at the brightly lighted and busy corner of East Jefferson and Chalmers Avenue, in Detroit. It was about 9:30 on the evening of September 1, 1933. "I never killed a man," observed 17-year-old Louis Whitsitt. "I wonder what it feels like to knock a guy off."

"Shut up, kid!" snarled Louis' older brother, Douglas. It annoyed him, the way the kid always tried to talk like a big shot. Why, everybody knew young Louis hadn't even done a stretch yet, while Doug Whitsitt, Bob Frazier, and the fourth member of their group, Bob Buffa, all had criminal records. Doug often had been heard to tell the kid that he ought to keep his mouth shut when wiser men were around.

"Why risk a murder rap?" Bob Buffa, slight and dark, spoke directly to Frazier, ignoring young Louis' faux pas. He spoke cynically, but respectfully, for Frazier was the toughest man in their little ring of petty crooks. A burly fellow, Frazier, with narrow eyes set in a tough face. He wore a very loud, checked suit.

WELL, you see," Frazier began, eyeing a car which had just driven up, "I figure dead men don't go to no line-ups. I done a rap once because of doing a fellow a favor. And I hate cops, too—to Hell with all cops!" He still eyed the car which had stopped. Two women were just getting out of it.

"Done a favor and went to jail for it, eh?" Buffa prompted. "Tell us about it."

"Well, I stuck up a guy," Frazier said. "He squawked. About a week later I took the collar and paraded at the lineup. This rat was there, and he recognized me. So I took the rap."

"But what favor did you do him, Bob?" demanded young Louis Whitsitt.

"I done him a favor by not shootin' him, didn' I?" demanded Frazier. He spat on the sidewalk. "The rat!"

"Shut up, kid!" the older Whitsitt growled.

THEN a moment of silence fell upon the lounging group. Robert Frazier was eyeing the parked car again, thoughtfully.

"That's the kind of guy I hate!" he said. "He looks like he's got dough, too." Following his glance, the others saw a middle-aged man, obviously respectable, sitting behind the wheel of that car.

"Listen!" said Frazier suddenly. "That guy's waitin' there while his women shop in the drug store. What do you say we take him?"

"Okay by me," the cynical Buffa agreed with a shrug.

And the four, with a cautious glance around, began to edge toward the parked car.

The middle-aged man behind the wheel made no move as they approached. Why should he? Who would expect a murderous attack to be launched at a busy, bright corner? Certainly no honest, hard-working citizen such as Joseph Nesbitt, service manager for the Autocar Sales and Service Company, who was waiting there for his wife and daughter to come out of that drug store. Nesbitt's mind was farthest from danger, when . . .

"Push off, brother—and no noise!"

NESBITT turned, startled, as the left front door of the car was wrenched open. He saw a revolver pointing at him. Behind the gun loomed the bulky body and sneering face of the thug who held it.

A startled mind is apt to seize upon unimportant details, and Mr. Nesbitt noticed that the gunman wore a loud, checked suit. He also noticed another, and highly important detail: the man's finger was tight upon the trigger. So Mr. Nesbitt obeyed orders. While his gears meshed, the three other hoodlums climbed into the back seat. Then the frightened driver pulled away from the curb.

As the car drove off, Mrs. Nesbitt and her daughter emerged from the drug store. Was it womanly intuition that caused the wife (Continued on Page 28)

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

THE LAST CONCERT of the now historic Philharmonic-Symphony Brahms Cycle will be broadcast this Sunday (CBS at 3 p. m. EST, 2 CST). It includes the second piano concerto, in B-flat, with OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH as soloist; and the fourth symphony. (However, as this is being written a newspaper report stated that Mr. Gabilowitsch has been taken to a hospital in Detroit; his illness may prevent his appearance.)

This cycle has brought us the spiritual as well as the human Brahms. We have gazed upon the earthly scene through all of his passionate understanding, and we have felt his heroic fortitude and his beautiful resolve to live and endure. We have been with him in those mystical realms where pain and tears are cherished like joys. And now with Mr. Toscanini we bid farewell to the memorable pages of the E-minor Symphony. And with the leave-taking we ask that we may hear his incantations again.

American Music

PROGRAMS OF contemporary American music are planned for the next two Sundays (NBC at 8 p. m. EST, 7 CST). ERNEST SCHELLING, HENRY HADLEY and HOWARD BARLOW will conduct. The first program includes Henry Gilbert's comedy-overture on negro themes, John Alden Carpenter's Adventures in a Perambulator; the world premiere of a new composition by George Antheil; Irish from Henry Hadley's Silhouettes; and George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the composer at the piano. SOPHIE BRASLAU, deep-voiced contralto, will sing Song of the Bird Woman from Cadman's Shanewis, MacDowell's Thy Beaming Eyes, My Old Kentucky Home and The Rosary. Eugene Ormandy, announced as a conductor in an earlier release, will not participate. Objection was raised that he is not American-born.

The second program, conducted by Deems Taylor and Frank Black, (April 14) features Nelson Eddy, who has received great praise for his "well-nigh flawless singing." New York critics predict a great future for him if he develops naturally and does not rely upon the more superficial and obvious facets of his art, or resort to an artificial manner of "putting over" his songs. He sings The Glory Road, Old Folks at Home and Deep River. Deems Taylor conducts his Through the Looking Glass Suite, and Frank Black will direct George W. Chadwick's overture, Euterpe; Dana Suesse's Symphonic Waltzes, with the composer at the piano; the world premiere of Howard Arlen's Mood in Six Minutes; and Charles Shelton's Indian War Dance.

Any American composer deserves to have his music played on its merit, not simply because he is an American or a member of a composers' clique that happens to have "pull". His music needs to be heard if it has quality and if it is of substance; not that it can be expected to rival or equal the whole classic repertoire

Rose Bampton, called the "most promising American contralto," will have a real opportunity when she sings as symphony soloist Sunday at 9 p. m. EST (8 CST) over CBS in depth or in meaning, but that it expresses the contemporary spirit and will be liked for itself.

The "motors" concerts, which hit a new performance low with PAUL KERBY and FRANCES ALDA, came back to a new high with ARTURO TOSCANINI and ELISABETH RETHBERG. The whole Philharmonic-Symphony was brought to the Center Theater and rehearsed until it played as we never have heard any orchestra play for a commercial sponsor. The program, composed of musical tid-bits, was projected with a fire and performed with a finesse that made of them masterpieces, moments to be cherished and never lost from the memory.

This series will end Easter Sunday (NBC at 8 p. m. EST, 7 CST) with a special broadcast from Detroit. KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD, now the ranking Wagnerian soprano, will divide her part of the program between Wagner and Easter music. Motor employees will sing choruses, and OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH will conduct if an orchestra can be found. His own Detroit Symphony is employed, playing the following hour (CBS at 9 p. m. EST, 8 CST) for a competing sponsor. The Cleveland Orchestra might be transported across Lake Erie, but Detroit union officials object. They say there are qualified orchestra musicians out of work in Detroit, who should be hired. Whatever happens, we shall hear.

Coming!

ROSE BAMPTON, most promising American contralto, is the symphony soloist this Sunday (CBS at 9 p. m. EST, 8 CST). She will at last have an opportunity to display the variety of her talents that her more popular programs have not allowed. . . . The other "motors" concert, April 14th, features TITO SCHIPA, and on Easter Sunday (April 21) a quartet composed of RICHARD CROOKS (now convalescing from an appendicitis operation), GRETE STUECKGOLD, KATHRYN MEISLE, and EZIO PINZA. These concerts, fortunately, will continue until June 30.

ALMA KITCHELL and Honti and Bremer, duo pianists, join in an all-Brahms program Monday (NBC at 2 p. m. EST, 1 CST). The program includes the Sonata for two pianos, opus 34, and Wie Melodien Zieht es mir, Minnelied, In Walden Samkeit and the fourth of the Erste Gesänge.

The chamber music broadcasts this week include programs by the KOLISCH QUARTET (NBC, Monday at 11:15 a. m. EST, 10:15 CST); the GORDON String Quartet (with A. Walter Kramer, commentator), NBC, Tuesday at 11:15 a. m. EST (10:15 CST).

Musical Surprise Party ★★★★★
Heard Sunday, March 24, at 1:30 p. m. EST (12:30 p. m. CST) over the NBC-WEAF network. Sponsored by B. T. Babbitt & Company.

Cast: Little Miss Bab-O (Mary Small), Carol Deis, Bertrand Hirsch, violinist, and his orchestra.

The Sunday Surprise Party was a pot-pourri of delightful music nicely orchestrated, well executed and strung together in a surprising continuity. The producer of the program used all the tricks of introducing his numbers and soloists, from a grand Opera opening to letting the numbers introduce themselves. Despite the variety of form, the continuity was almost perfection itself. With the strains of Beautiful Ohio the program opened, and faded rapidly into the popular Lovelier Than You, introducing the vocalists. Mary Small, the Little Miss Bab-O, followed with her own interpretation of the Carioca, ably assisted by a quartet and instrumental specialties. Carol Deis in the Italian Street Song seemed to be lacking in power, but her rendition was faultless otherwise.

It may have been the control man who failed to give Miss Deis' microphone the necessary boost, because in later numbers there seemed to be no lack of power in her voice.

Bertrand Hirsch did the ever-popular Love in Bloom as a solo, which was picked up by his orchestra and the quartet in full vocal accompaniment. The period came to a fast-moving end with When the Night is Young, followed by Mary Small's interpretation of How the First Song was Born.

The final announcement faded out to the strain of the full orchestra doing The Glow Worm.

Major Edward Bowes' Amateur Hour ★★★
Premiere heard Sunday, March 24, at 8 p. m. EST (7 CST) over the NBC-WEAF network. Sponsored by Chase & Sanborn.

Major Edward Bowes' Amateur Hour premiere gave to the nation one of those delightful broadcasts which New York has been selfishly enjoying for more than a year. Major Bowes created the present vogue in radio amateur shows, and seems to hold the formula for which so many others have been valiantly but vainly striving. With simple dignity, sympathetic understanding and a spontaneity of expression that seem to have escaped his imitators, Bowes presented a fast-moving, entertaining hour.

Under his masterly showmanship the amateurs had an opportunity of showing their talents to better advantage than a great many professional performers who have lucrative network spots.

Whether it's a leopard-skin-clad Senegambian or a saxophone trio, Bowes sets the stage and puts each contestant at home with a few well-chosen, sympathetic and understanding words. Not once during his hour, no matter how poorly the contestants may have shown, did he use their deficiencies for ridicule. I recommend that particular point of technique to the earnest consideration of other conductors of amateur shows.

Despite Bowes' effort to submerge himself and push the youngsters and other personalities of his program to the fore, he stands out alone as the dominant feature of the hour, beautifully surrounded by a mosaic of aspiring youngsters who turned in a performance that was creditable even for seasoned troupers. But it all reflected the consummate showmanship of Ed Bowes, who has a habit of doing things that recommend themselves for emulation.

Congressional Opinion ★★
Premiere of new series heard Sunday, March 24, at 11 p. m. EST (10 p. m. CST) over CBS-WABC network. Sustaining program.

The idea behind this weekly quarter-hour from Washington, D. C., is to present discussions of proposed legislation before the United States Senate and House of Representatives, so that the public will have a better idea of what is happening on Capitol Hill.

First night's subject was the Mead Airmail Bill. This was discussed, in catechism form, by its authors, Representative James Mead, of New York, and Representative Donald Dobbins, of Illinois.

I will say that the question and answer form of discussion made the broadcast more interesting than a straight talk on the subject. Congressmen Mead and Dobbins successfully put over many points in favor of the airmail bill, and provided a thorough explanation of its provisions.

Recommended for the attention of good citizens who wish to keep abreast of the times—tabs on their duly elected Representatives in Congress.

At last... an indelible, transparent lipstick that hasn't even a hint of purplish undertone! Actually stays red on the lips; and such a red! The brilliant red of Hawaii's gayest flower... the wild Hibiscus... the brightest, most daring, exotic red you have ever seen. Yet it is so soft in its intensity, it is easy to wear. It makes lips really feminine... gorgeously, appealingly feminine! "HAWAIIAN" is pastes too. Put it on... wipe it off, only the COLOR stays. There's never been anything like TATTOO "HAWAIIAN" before. The price is $1, at the best drug and department stores.

LUCKY NUMBER DREAM BOOK

This dream book has been well named, for it is, indeed, a lucky one in every sense of the word, and by heeding its interpretations of dreams, you may also be forewarned as to dangers—and "forewarned is forearmed." Both sacred and profane history are full of so many examples of the fulfillment of dreams, that he must be very skeptical and but little versed in natural science who would refuse to have faith in them. In this book the interpretation of almost every imaginable dream is given, and also the Numbers of the Lottery to which they apply. It also gives Good Combinations to play; Significance of Cards dreamed of and their Numbers; Combination Table for Saddles, Gigs and Horses; Table for finding Lucky Numbers; Numbers of Dreams of the Months, for the Days of the Week. Also contains Napoleon's Oracleum, which was consulted by him on numerous occasions. The translator has several times consulted it for his own amusement, and, incredible as it may appear, he found its answers to correspond with truth, as they afterwards came to pass.

JAPANESE ROSE BUSHES

THE WONDER of the WORLD

Will Bloom Six Weeks After Planting

Perpetual Rose Bushes bloom all the year around. Just think of it! Six weeks after planting the seed the plants will be in bloom. It may not seem possible, but we positively guarantee it to be so. They will bloom every ten weeks, Winter or Summer, and when three years old the bush will be a mass of roses, bearing from five hundred to a thousand roses on each bush. The flowers are in three shades—white, pink and crimson. The plants will do well both in and out of doors. Send for a packet and have roses all the year around. We guarantee at least three bushes to grow from each packet of seeds. PRICE ONLY 10 CENTS Packet, three packets for 25 CENTS POSTPAID.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER

GET A MODERN WOMAN'S REMEDY TO

RELIEVE PAIN and IRREGULARITY Now

Don't suffer unnecessarily when nature fails you. Do as other women do. Get a modern woman's praised remedy for gaining quick relief. Used by thousands of women from coast to coast for relief of late appearing, suppressed periods and similar abnormal functional irregularities. Only a woman knows how another woman can suffer at times so if you are troubled with irregularities read every word of this message from another woman who wants to help women everywhere.

My "Special Relief Compound" is designed to be QUICKER IN ACTION THAN PILLS OR TABLETS. Compounded of time tested vegetable ingredients used by physicians and nurses for over a quarter of a century because of their reputed power to relieve pain and aid in restoring a normal action. Safe, Harmless. Does not contain any narcotics, habit forming or harsh mineral drugs, only pure laboratory tested vegetable extracts used for their effectiveness in functional, periodic disturbances. Women report relief, often in a few days, without pain or inconvenience. Friendly testimonials like these reach me from women the country over.

E. W. "I was late nine weeks. Had a natural action in 3 days." D. C. "I was about 6 weeks past, in 5 days I was O.K. It is wonderful being odorless, tasteless and pleasant to take." G. U. "Tardy for 3 weeks. Relief started on 4th day. Simple as A.B.C. to take!" G. V. "After being late two months—relief started on 5th day." Send for reports of many others.

LITERATURE FREE
 My private talk "Do As Other Women Do" will be sent FREE to all women who desire to relieve pain and irregularity now. Other interesting literature together with a "personal record" calendar for 1935 will also be included. Send for this. It's FREE. Use coupon. No obligation.

WORDS FROM FRIENDLY USERS
 P. S. "Your compound is the best I have ever used. I was a little more than two weeks past. I had good results in four days."
 P. B. "I used six boxes of your Compound. I used to have the most painful time every month, now since using your Compound I am greatly relieved. I also was late once 10 days but was relieved in 12 hours."
 H. M. Y. "I can truthfully say your Formula No. 2 is a blessing to women. After missing five weeks I took one box and in five days I got relief."
 E. K. "Your compound proved highly satisfactory. After two and a half weeks omission the function appeared again in regular form."

SEND NO MONEY
 If it is inconvenient to get a money order or bank draft, I will be pleased to send you a trial package of Formula No. 2 for 25¢, your order C.O.D. I will pay the regular postage as usual but you pay the C.O.D. Fee. However, if you wish to save time and possible embarrassment, I make this offer particularly to those who may have used other remedies without success and who perhaps are a bit doubtful as to the merits of my compound. The fact that a great many of my orders come from friends of my customers is ample evidence of the great good it is doing. Many of my customers say they are glad they found out about my remedy and that they will use no other. Regular package $2.00. Special Formula No. 2 for slow regulating functions $3.00. Two packages for $5.00. All orders are given personal attention and mailed quickly. Don't let disorders persist. Send for this popular remedy today. You don't need to write me a letter, just use the coupon for FAST SERVICE

NOTE—Some women even report quick relief after spending many times the cost on other treatments that they say failed. H. E. "I was 12 days past and all that I needed was one box of your Compound. I had just finished one box of your compound and found relief after being tardy for 6 weeks. I have just received my second box but will keep them on hand."
 J. M. "The Formula No. 2 was very satisfactory, having been past six weeks the function resumed very normally and without pain."
 J. C. "After taking your compound for 5 days I was relieved with no pain or inconvenience whatever."

Studio News and Notes

By Murray Arnold

JAMES CORNELL, announcer at WGY, Schenectady, has resigned to join the motion picture department of the General Electric Company. Mr. Cornell will be in charge of sound recording . . . A. W. TRENCH, WCAE, Pittsburgh, director of publicity, left that position last Monday to devote his full time to the microphone in the WCAE studios.

READY THIS week for the public gaze will be WTOC's new Hotel Savannah studio. Many of the station's regular features will emanate from this new studio.

BEGINNING THIS Monday, WIP, Philadelphia, and WMCA, New York, will join in a two-station network. Plans call for a mutual interchange of programs, with the vast audiences in both cities being given the opportunity of hearing the finest Empire City and Quakertown shows.

PATRICIA SHELDON, leading woman of the WGY Players, is to be married June 15 to DOUGLAS SMITH, and will make her home after that date at Lawrence, Massachusetts.

BOB CARTER, one of WIP's ace announcers, thought it would be an idea to start a program of, by and for men. Carter (a son of Carter County, Kentucky, suh!), with rural perseverance, went right ahead with the idea, named it The Men Are Invited, and airs it to this day over WIP each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 8:30 p. m. This new type of presentation features intimate discussions of topics of interest to men; news, sports, clothes, and what-not. So what happens? Well, 90 percent of Bob's mail comes from women!

WCAE HAS just installed four brand new baby grand Steinway pianos in its studios—$12,000 worth of beautifully-toned equipment.

IN THE MAIL BAG:
 J. J.—The Three Old Shoes, heard on WCAE's Mid-day Merry-Go-Round, are ERNIE LAVISH, RUSS SMITH, and BILLY CATIZONE.

M. C.—ANDY STANTON is no longer connected with WFIL. He is now commercial manager at the recently revamped WBIG, Philadelphia.

L.—That was WGY's newest star, JOYCE BRIGHT. Her hobby is interior decorating.

Omega Phi Sorority—HENRY PATRICK, when last heard from, was a featured member of the cast of a musical play in Boston. Sorry, but watch this column for more definite news.

Mrs. L.—LOU AND CURLEY, Lester's Lucky Rangers, heard over WIP daily at 12:15, are both veterans of the air, having played over more than 70 stations all through the country. You may have heard them before on the WLS Barn Dance chain show.

With the Punches That Made Me Knockout Champ of the World!
 My copyrighted knockouts are quickly learned. I am the Knockout Record Holder of the World. I earned this by socking over

500 KNOCKOUTS ALL WITHIN 3 ROUNDS

No man regardless of weight could stand the power of my astonishing knockout punches. They worked every time as on right by my pupil Billy Freeman of Danbury. First punch of his second fight. Full story from The Times will be sent you. I'll double your Strength, Reach and Speed. I will make you stand on a handkerchief without being hit, as I taught Griffo. I'll make you unbeaten and Fearless with a Knockout in either hand. I guarantee my five courses to be the World's Best Fighting, Boxing, Training, Physical Culture and Muscular Development, or your money back.

And if a strong, healthy boy, and you can't win your first amateur fight within 30 days after conforming with my instructions at home, no expense, no sparring partner necessary. I'll pay you $25.00 in cash, but not if you go against one of my pupils. This applies to any professional from Max Baer down.

 and get every knockout punch known to the fighting world showing vital spots to hit, how and when fully illustrated and if you can show me any such simple system that any boy can understand and *Knockout Record as I will send you from letters received from any boxing instructor or learned from any book but mine since John L. Sullivan's time, until Jan. 1, 1935. I will pay you $100.00 in cash and your 25c back plus postage. I'm the only man in the World that can show Carnera how to lick Baer as he did Sharkey with my copyrighted uppercut.*

I am the only living champion advertising boxing today and you know I would not be in business 30 days if the above broad statements were not true, every word of which I will prove to you in answer to this ad.

SEND THAT 25c NOW! TODAY!

Use the NEW! SCIENTIFIC AERIAL With the Dual Connection

The DUAL CONNECTION, a new feature exclusively our own, gives better distance and positive performance on all electric radios (pat. pend.). This aerial can be installed without tools by anyone in a minute's time. Goes right inside the radio completely out of view and it does not use any electric current. No climbing on roofs. For short or long wave.

$1.00 Complete Postpaid

NO OSCILLATING OR WHISTLING
 This DIAL type aerial uses a new scientific principle which completely eliminates this annoyance as commonly experienced on inside aerials. On Short Waves

By Chas. A. Morrison

(Time Shown Is Eastern Standard. Figures in Parentheses Denote Megacycles, or Thousands of Kilocycles.)

WE WISH to extend our greetings and those of our readers to that pioneer station, PCJ, The Flying Dutchman, at Eindhoven, Holland, upon the occasion of their transmitting again on a regular daily schedule after an absence of several years from the short-wave channels. Probably one of the world's most internationally famous announcers, Phil Startz, is back again at the mike, bubbling over with his usual enthusiasm and good cheer, with his frequent announcements in the half dozen languages he handles so fluently.

To start the day right, whether or not you are a regular short-wave listener, we recommend you dial the frequency of 15.22 mgs between the hours of 8:30 and 10:40 a. m., and fish for PCJ.

Advance Program

W2XAF operates on a frequency of 9530 kilocycles or 31.48 meters. Preceding the QST episodes there will be a five-minute news period known as QST News.

of the boys. At both the William Penn and the Ft. Pitt Hotels in Pittsburgh, cafe service was suspended completely in the fifteen minutes consumed by the nightly presentation—as a service to guests and a sop to employees who literally were threatening to abandon their jobs if those jobs interfered with the hearing of Amos 'n' Andy.

Doubtless many other hotels found the same course necessary, and there are many specific instances of Eastern motion picture theaters having to air the program to overcome the loss of business at 7 p. m., which, normally, was the most productive time of the day.

And while the boys were somewhat surprised by their tremendous vogue, it wasn't a marker to the bewilderment which assailed their sponsors. If their sketches were on everybody's tongue, their tooth-paste apparently was in the identical position, and long before the original one-year contract was concluded Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll had been signed up to an agreement which enlisted their services for an additional five years at a previously unheard-of remuneration, and with a clause that permitted another two-year option.

Spurred by their brilliant success, the boys found no difficulty in keeping the act fresh. It was their prerogative to introduce or drop characters at will, to test situations, discard, expand, reintroduce and otherwise alter according to public reaction.

So vivid a sensation could hardly be overlooked by the motion picture producers. Amos 'n' Andy had hardly swung into its stride before NBC, the sponsor and Gosden and Correll were besieged by demands for an Amos 'n' Andy picture by every one of the leading celluloid producers of the country. After long consideration, a decision was reached to film a story around the boys—a conclusion which led practically to an ultimatum by David Sarnoff, president of RCA, and an active director in the affairs of the National Broadcasting Company.

Amos 'n' Andy was the brightest jewel in the NBC diadem—it would have had to be to stir the attention of the busy Sarnoff. But he scented in the proposed picture a threat to the boys' popularity, and he opposed the venture vigorously. His voice thundered from his luxurious Manhattan office.

"If the picture is a flop," he said, "and the boys' popularity suffers as a result, all of you NBC executives who had a hand in sanctioning it had better begin to look around in the fields in which you were employed before you made the mistake of thinking you knew something about radio."

So the picture went into production. Gosden and Correll had no worries. Their contracts were secure enough to withstand the shock of a motion-picture flop, but there was a deal of breath held by NBC executives during the weeks attending the making of the film and the time which elapsed before it was flashed before the public. The interim seemed endless, and one or two local officials of the network were rumored to have spent many an unhappy moment eyeing the distance between their office windows and the nearest roof.

And finally, after the usual delay, the picture made its appearance. Then—

The effect of that motion picture will astonish any one who never has learned the inside story of what it did by way of making history in the industry. Read about it, and further intimacies in the lives of this popular pair, in next week's issue of RADIO GUIDE.

Amos 'n' Andy may be heard every day except Saturday and Sunday at 7 p. m. EST (6 CST) over an NBC-WJZ network, and on the same days at 11 p. m. EST (10 CST, 9 MST and 8 PST) over a split NBC network.

To Hell with All Cops

to realize all was not well? No one in the car saw her dash madly back into the drug store, where she telephoned Police Headquarters. And all unknown to the quartet who had kidnaped her husband, this radio call went out to every Detroit police cars, before the kidnapers had gone a half dozen blocks:

"Calling all cars . . . All cars . . . Joseph Nesbitt, is believed to have been kidnaped from the corner of East Jefferson and Chalmers Avenue in his Buick sedan, Number . . ."

Had the kidnapers heard that radio call, the chances are they would have abandoned the car in a panic. But they didn't, and the miracle is that they forced Nesbitt to drive through crowded Detroit streets, through districts patrolled by radio cars on the watch for them—without once being sighted by a police car!

To Nesbitt, that forced ride was a horrid nightmare. For as he drove, the half-drunken fiends openly discussed what they were going to do with him.

"First we take him out on the road to Port Huron," Frazier said. "Then we heist his dough, and then I let him have it."

"Why?" Nesbitt cried. "Why kill me? I won't prosecute you! I'm not even looking at your faces, so I won't be able to identify you."

Jeers and filthy oaths were the only replies the shaken man received to his entreaties.

Killed Like a Dog

"No more stickup raps for me!" Frazier taunted. "From now on, when I stick 'em, I shoot 'em!"

"But—" protested Nesbitt. Frazier jammed the gun hard into his victim's ribs. "Dead men tell no tales!" he cried, and shouted with mirth. "I read 'at one in a book!" he added.

The lights of the city were behind them. Near the corner of Gratiot Avenue and Puttygood Road, in Detroit's suburban area on the way towards Port Huron, they made Nesbitt stop the car.

"Get out!" Frazier snapped. The older man obeyed. "Give me a break!" he pleaded.

"Reach your hands up!" Frazier growled. And while Nesbitt thrust his hands towards a night-blinded heaven, they went through his pockets and took his money—$37.00.

"Listen, boys," Nesbitt pleaded. "I'm old enough and sensible enough not to make a fight. Can't you see that? You can have everything I've got! Everything! But please—I don't want to be killed! My God, you wouldn't kill a—" "Hold his hands up, Buffa!" Frazier commanded.

Buffa, standing on the running-board of the car, lifted the helpless man's arms slightly. Frazier shifted his position so that Buffa would be out of the line of fire. "You wouldn't kill a dog—" Nesbitt began again.

Frazier shot him. "—like this!" Nesbitt mechanically finished, with a sudden cough. There came a smell of singed clothing.

Frazier pulled the trigger three more times. Nesbitt slumped to the ground. His helpless head hit the road, hard. Buffa kicked him, and the four murderers climbed back into the car.

"You see?" Frazier cried. "That guy can't put the finger on us now! We got his dough, an' he got my lead. A nice clean job!" Once again the cold-blooded murderer laughed at his grim idea of humor. And the other three joined him in an admiring, flattering burst of laughter.

A Dead Man's Tale

For three hours while they drove from one night spot to another and finally went to the home of Frazier's sister, Joseph Nesbitt lay in blood and pain upon the highway. Finally a passing motorist noticed the prostrate form. This good Samaritan picked up the wounded man and rushed him to a hospital. There he died—with one bullet in the liver, two in the lungs—but first he gave police a shrewdly accurate description of his murderers. All-most his last words were:

"The one who shot me wore a gray, checked suit!"

At that very moment the murderer in the checked suit was dandling a little child upon his knee—with every mark of affection! And as usual, his three fellow-murderers applauded him.

Frazier had driven the stolen car back to Detroit. They had roistered around in shady night clubs, spending Nesbitt's money, drinking liquor, dancing with molls—until suddenly some strange quirk in Frazier's nature made him drive to his married sister's home. He said he wanted to play with his tiny nephew—and in spite of his sister's protests, he kept the excited youngster out of bed until well past midnight. The car was left parked in front of the house.

"Hadn't we better get going?" the bored Buffa demanded at last. He had just tuned the family radio to the police calls.

"No," Frazier answered, pretending to give the little boy a horseback ride on his knee. "I'm havin' too good a time!" At this, the laughing child reached up under his uncle's armpit.

"What's this, Uncle Bob?" he demanded. Robert Frazier suddenly stopped laughing. The boy's little hand had closed around the butt of the pistol in Frazier's holster.

"Nothing," he said, "just a—" And then he broke off suddenly. For a voice was issuing from the radio—the voice of the police broadcaster. And it said:

"Wanted for murder . . . Four men . . . Number One, about five feet ten inches tall, weight about 180, about 25 years old, dressed in a gray suit with large checks . . . Number Two, about 24 or 25, around five feet seven inches tall, weight around 140, dark complexion . . . Number Three, about 17 or 18 years old, five feet eight inches tall, slight build, weight around 135 . . . Number Four, about 22 or 23, five feet ten inches . . . They may be riding in a Buick sedan, number . . ."

By now, each of the four murderers was sitting bolt upright, listening with straining ears. Young Louis Whitsitt paled.

"Turn that off!" snapped Frazier. But Buffa's trembling hand already had shut off the radio.

A Date With Death

"Let's beat it!" he said. "What's the matter?" demanded Frazier's sister.

"Nothing!" her brother told her. "We just got a date. Come on, boys." And very quickly they left the house.

Patrolmen Carl Brown and Jerome Keller had spent a quiet evening.

"Not a pinch all night," said Keller, when suddenly their radio spoke to them—telling of the murder of Joseph Nesbitt.

"No chance of picking these guys up," Brown remarked. "They've abandoned that car by now. Buick, eh?" He repeated the license number.

"And one of the guys has a suit with big checks in it. I hate checked suits."

"Me too," Brown agreed. "I remember . . ."

And at that moment a Buick sedan swung out of a dark side street just ahead of them. There was nothing suspicious-looking about the car, and it had vanished across the intersection before either officer had a chance to notice the license number. But for one moment it had stood sharply visible in a street light's rays and . . .

"Carl!" said Keller sharply. "I'd 'a' sworn that the driver of that Buick had a checked suit on!"

Without a word Brown stepped on the accelerator. They swung around the corner after the Buick, and they caught it without a chase.

"Pull over!" snapped Keller, holding a gun on the driver, while Brown expertly squeezed their quarry in to the curb. "Yeah," Keller continued dryly, "he's got a checked suit on!" And he peered into the other car. "Why, if it ain't Bob Frazier!" he exclaimed. "Always glad to see you, Bob!"

Meanwhile Patrolman Brown had joined

Keller, and his gun was out, too. Frazier made a cautious motion with his right hand. The other three hoodlums sat frozen in fear.

"I got a medal for shooting," Keller told Frazier, "but you'll never see it—if you don't keep your hands up. I said up! All of you!" And the four pitiless petty gangsters, who had been quite brave in shooting an unarmed and defenseless man, raised their hands meekly.

They were even meeker after police had questioned them at Headquarters. They confessed. They begged to be permitted to confess. For the police had the goods on them—an open and shut case.

In any case, Michigan justice moves with dazzling speed. Less than 48 hours after killing Nesbitt, the four murderers had been tried—convicted—sentenced.

At that rate, all four will die in prison at Marquette still owing the state several years of penal servitude.

comic possibilities in the dialectic. Einstein now is famous as Parkyakahas on Eddie Cantor's program.

Another New Englander who believed he suffered simply because he was a New Englander, is Fred Allen. The dead-pan comedian tried as hard as he could to change his typical Yankee drawl into something more cosmopolitan. It was not until he went into radio that he realized the advantage of his stultified expression. Now it is familiar wherever radios are heard, and immediately is identified as belonging to that star entertainer.

An unusual growth in the throat might preclude the possibility of anyone becoming a singer. But that growth has been responsible for one of radio's biggest stars. Without it, Bing Crosby would be just another baritone—with it, he is among radio's and Hollywood's highest paid stars, and the top in any man's billing.

Phil Cook was gassed during the war. He spent many months recuperating, and his throat was partially paralyzed as a result. He had an unusually husky voice, rasping as a matter of fact, and it seemed the very last kind of voice an entertainer would desire. But it proved the opposite.

Cook went into advertising following the war, and after that became a successful producer of shows. Three of his musical comedies enjoyed long and prosperous runs on Broadway. But Phil remained in the wings as the writer and producer, not as the star. When radio was young, Phil decided to give it a try. He teamed up with another performer, Victor Fleming, and they went on as comedians.

Evidently his partner was troubled with the same shortcomings that had affected Whispering Jack Smith's three missing quartet members—for he, too, failed to appear just before Cook was scheduled to broadcast. Instead of emulating Smith, Phil decided to cover up the ab-

As for Frazier—he proved himself to be far less a man than Nesbitt had been. As the words of his sentence sank into his mind, the killer's knees sagged and he had to be held up by two state troopers. The 17-year-old Whitsitt kid fainted when his sentence was pronounced.

An so once again radio—aided this time by Frazier's loud checked suit—proved the age-old truth that crime pays today, no better than it did in the days of Cain.

sense of the rest of his "team." He imitated the missing voice, and imitated it so well that even the sponsors of his show were unaware of the absence. They mailed a check made out to "Phil Cook and partner."

Phil then decided to carry on alone as the "team," also to bring two or three other characters into the script. The sponsors refused to pay for additional talent, so Phil did the next best thing. He enacted all of the characters. And here his husky voice came to advantage. He is able to change it at will, and, although it never loses its husky rasp, it reproduces faithfully many different voices.

Tony Wons was another victim of the war. His health is frail to this day, his body wracked by the effects of numerous wounds sustained during battle. He spent a great deal of time in various hospitals, and while convalescing he began his now famous scrapbook. Every printed piece he could get his hands on he cut out and saved.

After the war Tony went back to work, eventually landing a job at WLS, Chicago. There he bethought himself of the radio potentialities in his scrapbook, and persuaded WLS authorities to let him broadcast excerpts from them. The result is history.

Familiar to everyone are the success stories of people who have conquered handicaps and won out in spite of some specific physical defect. But radio has brought a new opportunity to these people. They no longer are handicapped; they have advantages a normal person does not possess. Undoubtedly there are many other performers not listed here, whose success has been due to their limitations—not because of mercenary aggrandizement of their freakish impediments, not in spite of them, but because they were able to recognize the peculiar advantages they enjoyed, and to utilize them.

The very earnestness of this pioneering group won them success in an endeavor which, offhand, seemed predestined to adversity. To them the flat bed of that battered truck became the stage of a favorite Manhattan theater; the trees, the flowers, the crags and the stars—an endless setting by Urban. It was rare devotion at the altar of Art, but it yielded blessings of friendly appreciation and praise for restoring the standard play to a drama-starved people.

There was a period in Anne Seymour's life when her theatrical blood became a bit anemic. It was then that she decided to put the stage behind her for a career in commerce. Her determination won her a place in the comparison bureau of a leading New York department store. In short, she became a shopper, watching competitors' sales and matching the values of their wares against those of her employers.

"But that was just the spirit of rebellious youth at work," Anne admits in private. She knew instinctively that the chintzes and the cottage style curtains could not long engross her, and six weeks was all she could endure of separation from the art to which she was affianced by those numerous and productive forebears.

Incidentally, that seems to be the only alliance on Miss Seymour's horizon. Even with talent, youth and charm, she so far has escaped any serious affairs of the heart.

Anne Seymour may be heard on the Grand Hotel program, NBC-WJZ network, Sundays at 6:30 p. m. EST (5:30 CST), the First Nighter, of the same network, Fridays at 10 p. m. EST (9 CST), and The Story of Mary Marlin weekdays except Saturday at 11:15 a. m. EST (10:15 CST) over a CBS-WABC network with a rebroadcast at 11:45 a. m. EST (10:45 CST).

CAUTION is strong in woman. It has grown strong through her instinct to protect her home. She is adept in stripping facts from fancies. Weighing values. Making right decisions. Why, then, are women in so confused a state about a matter of such importance as their own personal, intimate hygiene? The truth is: They are old-fashioned and out-of-date.

Before the days of Zonite, grave discussions were usual between doctor and patient about the proper antiseptic for feminine hygiene. The only antiseptics you could then buy, which were strong enough for the purpose, were caustic and downright poisonous. The doctor could not and would not advise his patients to use those poisons.

But Zonite is not poisonous. Zonite is not caustic. No danger of scar-tissue from Zonite. No membranes desensitized. This remarkable modern antiseptic-germicide is positively gentle in action—and it is far more powerful than any dilution of carbolic acid that can be safely applied to the human body.

Women can all get Zonite now—Zonite, the only non-poisonous antiseptic comparable in strength to the caustic poisons. Zonite is famous all over this country as the powerful non-poisonous antiseptic. In bottles: 30¢, 60¢ and $1.00.

Zonite Suppositories also sold

Zonite Suppositories have the same antiseptic principle as liquid Zonite in a semi-solid form. Each pure, white and greaseless Suppository is sealed in its own glass vial. In boxes of a dozen: $1.00. Some women use both forms.

Every married woman should read booklet "Facts for Women." It is so clear and straightforward that it puts certain matters before them in a light that is new, different, most helpful. Don't wait. Mail coupon now.

The Celebrities Step Up

this program, however, is the refusal of the stage-and-screen trained stars to emote before a studio audience. On all other radio programs, footlight stars who have been recruited to the air are absolutely insistent that they be permitted to play for a visible as well as invisible audience. Here, strangely enough, we discover the direct antithesis to the stage-trained players' usual plait.

This writer has attended many of the Theater of the Air rehearsals, and it was but natural to seek an explanation of the whys and wherefores of this edict contradictory to general practise. The replies of Walter Huston and Irene Dunn are representative of all the answers:

"We of the stage are trained to play to a visible audience," stated Mr. Huston. "We find it impossible to control our instinctive impulse to play to the people we see in the studio, rather than to the millions of listeners-in. Obviously this would be unfair to the unseen audience who, indirectly, make it possible for us to receive our considerable radio salary."

Another Reason

Beautiful and graceful Irene Dunn marshalled a shrewd reason for her taboo on studio audiences. She was rehearsing her part in Secrets, and during one of the rest periods she delivered the following opinion: "I have a very exacting role in this play," she explained. "I portray a woman in three different stages of life—youth, middle-age, and senility. Radio's limited time does not permit makeup, and I feel that I would look ridiculous to the studio onlookers, playing the part of a 75-year-old grandmother without the necessary makeup and costume accoutrements."

The sponsors carry out every ritual of the theater in an effort to capture even the most illusory detail of footlight atmosphere. As is customary on the movie sets in Hollywood and back stage at the theater, a luxurious easy chair, with a sign bearing the star's name, is placed at the disposal of the featured player. Supporting players and extras use the ordinary metal studio chairs. Something that smacks even more strongly of the theater is the sponsor's plan of delivering a beautiful corsage of flowers to the star at the conclusion of each broadcast, much in the manner of the stage and screen after a premier performance.

Muni in Action

The stars of the Theater of the Air indulge also in their usual stage mannerisms when performing at the microphone. The writer recalls the time he saw Paul Muni go to extreme measures to preserve a bit of stage illusion. Muni was broadcasting the role that made him famous, that of the lawyer in Counsellor-at-Law. The scene called for him to turn from the mike, take down his hat and coat from a clothes rack, jam his hat on, then hurry out, talking rapidly all through the scene. In the studio, of course, all this activity was superfluous, yet Paul insisted that a real hat-rack be placed alongside the mike. He actually performed the "stage business," and naturally the effect could not have been more realistic.

With all the talent it can boast—with all the wealth of play-material—with all the care and work and effort and thought behind each presentation—how can the Theater of the Air avoid being the outstanding success it is?

The Theater of the Air is broadcast every Sunday at 2:30 p. m. EST (1:30 CST, 12:30 MST, 11:30 a. m. PST) over an NBC-WJZ network.

in Brooklyn, New York, before his debut as a conductor of opera.

The same year he inherited his father's baton at the Metropolitan he succeeded him as conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra. He remained at the Metropolitan for six consecutive seasons, and with the New York Symphony Orchestra until it amalgamated with the New York Philharmonic Society in 1928.

As early as 1887 Walter Damrosch felt the urge to assist listeners in their understanding and appreciation of music by means of the spoken word. In that year he inaugurated his lecture-recitals on Wagnerian operas, illustrating at the piano the work he explained. Few seasons have elapsed since then that Doctor Damrosch has not delighted large New York audiences with similar series of lecture-recitals.

So responsive were his adult listeners to these illuminating discussions of music that in 1891 Doctor Damrosch inaugurated a series of symphony concerts with verbal comment for young people. These concerts had become a tradition in New York long before "microphone" and "loud-speaker" came into the vocabulary of the day. Indeed, so popular had they become that it was impossible to accommodate all the young people who wished to attend.

Broadcasts Lecture

When Station WEAJ requested permission to place a microphone on the stage of Carnegie Hall to broadcast a lecture-recital on a Beethoven symphony by Doctor Damrosch, he was quite sympathetic to the experiment, for by that time he was longing for larger audiences than the dimensions of even the largest concert halls permitted. He was so gratified with the results of this experiment that he became anxious to broadcast an orchestral program as soon as microphones could be perfected for the adequate transmission of such voluminous tone. That came in 1925.

The following year found him conducting regular orchestra concerts for radio broadcasting. On May 12, 1927, Doctor Damrosch accepted the appointment of musical counsel to the National Broadcasting Company, which position he has held continuously.

Six Million Pupils

The inauguration of the Friday morning Music Appreciation Hours for school children came in 1928. What Doctor Damrosch has accomplished through this medium in spreading the gospel of good music, helping listeners young and old to absorb it as a treasured part of their lives, no one can estimate. Combined with an unlimited fund of authoritative information concerning music, he possesses that charm of voice and personality that engages and holds attention. His genial "Good morning, my children," elicits a hearty welcome from more than six millions of public school, high school and college students from coast to coast on Friday mornings during the school year. The number of school orchestras, bands and choruses which have been organized as a direct result of Doctor Damrosch's stimulating and entertaining broadcasts, is only partial evidence of what he has accomplished.

When one attempts to estimate what Doctor Damrosch has achieved in bringing new vistas of beauty, inspiration and comfort into the lives of young and old, words instead of figures total: "This man has not lived in vain."

Enjoyed Since 'Ere Listeners' Rights

Dear VOL: Devils Lake, N. D.
May I say a word of sincere praise for Ray Noble? He has been at the top of my list of favorites for a long time through his phonograph records, but now we can hear his enchanting music first hand. I'd gladly break a date rather than miss one of these programs. As for his vocalist, Al Bowlly, there is only one word that describe the effect his voice has and that is entrancing. My only regret is that we cannot hear this inspiring orchestra more often.

Leona Berg

Dear VOL: Laramie, Wyo.
I think people kick too much about the programs. The biggest kick I have is that the largest station near here cuts a minute or two off almost every program during the day. It's like reading a book with the last page missing. Why don't more people protest this habit? I'll not buy one product while these sponsors chisel in.

Myrt and Marge are my favorites but I agree with Mrs. J. B. Marge spoiled her best broadcast—her wedding—by winding up like a baby.

My children don't like so-called children's programs. Skippy and Orphan Annie are read, not heard in this house.

Jean La Rue

Oh Dol-e Mio

Dear VOL: Lonaconing, Maryland
Wanna buy a good radio? I will soon have one to sell if they don't soon give us our New York orchestras back. I haven't been able to hear my favorite, Hal Kemp, for more than a week. I think that the three dollar tax on each musician per broadcast should be abolished. If the unemployed musicians are willing to take the relief money at the expense of the popularity of the ones that have jobs, they don't deserve relief. Why must these chiselers ruin our radio programs?

Sam McFarlane

LeBar Would Bar—

Dear VOL: Bennett, Nebr.
I want to indorse the complaint of Mrs. O. G. Cromwell who finds music too loud when someone is talking. This morning I could not get a poem read by Cheerio as the music was too loud. Like Mrs. Cromwell, I can say this has been so for many years on many programs.

C. R. LeBar

Graded Humor

Dear VOL: Philadelphia, Pa.
Every Sunday, I tune in the Jack Benny program just to see why he receives so much acclaim. I am still in the fog, because he bashes over the same gags. I can see why Joe Penner and Fred Allen are successful comedians because they are funny. If Eddie Cantor were quiet more often, he would be more entertaining. As he is, he is like Ed Wynn's aunt. Bob Hope should have gone in for singing or paper-hanging; or maybe I'm nuts. I probably don't know what a comedian is and sometimes I wonder if these so-called funny men do.

Fred Smoot

Roses and Rock-sies

Dear VOL: Dayton, Ohio
I am burning up, so to speak, and the cause of my fever can be attributed to the article which appeared in last week's RADIO GUIDE in Vice Commodore Martin Porter's "colyum."

The article contained the opinions of Roxy as to his feelings toward amateur hour shows, etc. I disagree with him as will thousands of others. The proof that amateur shows are in vogue now is shown by Ray Perkins, Fred Allen and our good friend Major Bowes, who have adopted amateur opportunity programs.

Roxy himself has made stars out of unknown men, women and children, who, if not given a break, still would be just ordinary folks. In closing I wish to offer orchids to all these sponsoring amateur shows because they are immensely interesting, and much success to Major Bowes in his new Sunday amateur hour.

Palmer Reist

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything. What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and 1/4 of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomato, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢ Copyright 1934, C.M.Co

BOAKE CARTER

As He Appears Under the

MIKEroscope

By Fred Kelly

BOAKE CARTER

BOAKE CARTER, the CBS news commentator, was born in Baku, Russia—and christened Boake in honor of his natal city. Ever since he has been able to contemplate the consequences, he has been grateful for the fact that his birth didn't occur in Nishnii Novgorod, a bit farther north in the Soviet Republic. Parents, so inspired, could have conjured up a lot of awesome name combinations out of that.

But in spite of the circumstances of his birth and the fact that he has risen to radio fame steppe by steppe, there is naught of the Muscovite about Carter. That Oxonian accent is rightfully his own as he not only is a product of Christ College, Cambridge, but by lineage is an admixture of British (including Erin). His Russian advent is accounted for by the fact that his father was in the British consular service located in Baku when his son was born.

It would not be difficult to guess that back of Carter's learned, if sometimes contentious, editorializing is a wealth of experience in which adventure and enterprize are equally divided. As a newspaper man and foreign correspondent for press associations, Carter not only saw much of the world but learned to study the political and economic situations in whatever country chance placed him. He has a most retentive and analytical mind, and as a result he made it his business everywhere to seek out famous personalities upon whom to polish up his readily formed opinions.

Aside from the Lindbergh kidnaping, through which he became nationally known for his narrative skill, Carter probably has found the crash of 1929 one of the most fertile of editorial topics. Strangely enough, however, three crashes of his own, sustained while he was in the British air force during the World War, have provided him very little material for his radio talks.

That's because he's normally reticent about his personal achievements—because there were many splendid deeds interlarded with the spills, examples of the sort of heroism for which English flyers were noted.

Another Carter secret, a special sort of light hidden under a bushel of commentative locution, is the fact that Boake is one of this country's better portrait painters. And he's no mere dilettante, no dabbler in the arts. He is an honor student of an English and an American academy and his paintings, including more than a hundred portraits, have received special notice in Eastern exhibits. (And don't look now)—but Boake Carter is a demon with a skillet. He can concoct more culinary masterpieces than you could eat in a week.

Mrs. Carter doesn't mind his puttering around the kitchen. When he's playing at being chef she and their two children at least know where he is. Which is something, in light of the things a lot of husbands and fathers cook up away from home.

Some people's success is ascribed to following the sun. Boake Carter's can be traced to his tendency to follow his father. When the elder Carter was dispatched to Mexico, his talented son was not long pursuing him. Thus he entered the United States by the back door; but once here, he determined to adopt the nation. He started his American career as a Philadelphia newspaperman, and because of the soundness of his conclusions was eventually called upon to discourse on world events over the air. He first was sponsored by a retail chain-store company with only a local Quaker City outlet, but the world heard his voice and he was made a nation-wide feature by his present sponsor three years ago. His news broadcasts have become something of an institution that has taken the edge off the sale of late editions of the newspapers which he served so faithfully earlier in his career.

RADIO GUIDE will place some celebrity Under the MIKEroscope every week. Save the picture on this page. There will be 52 in a full set. This is the forty-seventh.

To every person who sends to RADIO GUIDE a complete collection of 52 will be given an album containing the entire group of photographs as reproduced here; the photographic reproductions will be in fine finish.

Boake Carter broadcasts over a CBS-WABC network every day except Saturday and Sunday at 7:45 p. m. EST (6:45 CST)

Favorite Stories of the Stars

Jessica Dragonette's favorite yarn revolves about her first stage appearance, made at the tender age of fourteen. Even as a child Jessica had a glorious voice, but she always was beset by a fear of stage fright. Consequently, she refused to take part in any entertainments, despite the entreaties of her friends.

In her first year at high school she was tricked into making her inaugural footlight appearance.

Unknown to the golden-voiced youngster, the members of the sorority to which she was pledged, entered her as a contestant in an amateur contest scheduled to be held at the local theater. On the night of the contest Jessica attended the theater with a bevy of her sorority superiors. Several tyros made a bid for the prize before the master of ceremonies called her name as the next contestant.

She refused to go on until one of her sorority superiors issued an ultimatum. "Either you get up there and sing," she ordered flatly, "or you won't be initiated into the sorority!"

"The thoughts of being blackballed conquered my fear," she tells proudly. "I went on and captured the first prize—a box of handkerchiefs, some of which I use to this day!"

Ozzie Nelson goes way back to his early days in radio for his favorite anecdote.

It seems that after one of his broadcasts a blushing and stammering young couple met him outside the studio and asked him to accept an invitation to their wedding.

Ozzie looked at them in bewilderment. "But I don't know you folks," said the youthful maestro. "Why invite me to your wedding?"

The young lady explained the mystery. It seems that the romantic atmosphere furnished by Ozzie's music had been the cause of her young swain's proposal, and in view of this circumstance they both desired him to attend the nuptial ceremonies.

"I not only attended the wedding," chuckles Ozzie in the telling, "but I acted as best man and gave away the groom. A year later I attended the christening of their little boy, who was named in my honor. And anyone who thinks this is a gag can have the name and address of the couple for the asking."
