Nelson Eddy is Elected Star of Stars by Listeners

Edgar Bergen

IN WHAT is probably the greatest national poll of radio favorites ever conducted, the radio listeners of America have just elected Nelson Eddy as their Star of Stars, making him the most popular entertainer on the air during the radio season of 1938-1939. In a surprisingly close finish, Jessica Dragonette took second place, Edgar Bergen took third, and Jack Benny placed fourth. We congratulate them all on their splendid talents and on the friendship and loyalty they have inspired in their followers. Particularly, we must comment upon the devotees of Jessica Dragonette who, in last year's election, voted her into first place as Radio's Star of Stars despite the fact that she has been off the air for some time. This year, despite the same odds, they rallied so convincingly that twice during the contest she was out in front. Finally, however, Eddy enthusiasts rolled up a total vote that could not be denied. For the point score and for winners in other divisions, please turn to pages 6 and 7.

Canada's King: From our radio and from the talks of Mr. Cesar Saerchinger in particular we get some of our most interesting and useful information concerning the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States. He has straightened out several kinks in our thinking. For example, England's king is not Canada's king. England does not rule Canada, which we had supposed. Canada has its own king and he does happen to be the same man as England's king, but the point is that Canada is a kingdom itself, equal in power and rights with England; and the Prime Minister of Canada, MacKenzie King, is a direct minister of the crown and not in the least responsible to Neville Chamberlain, who runs England.

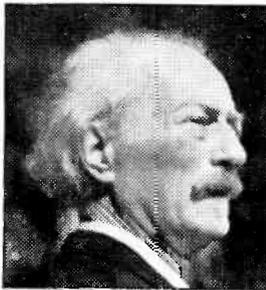

The British royal family is something that most Americans cannot understand. To us a king is the antithesis of democracy and liberty, yet we hear that England is the most democratic of nations. This has come about through a long process, in which the absolute monarchs of the time of Henry VIII and James I lost more and more of their power to the people and their Parliament. The result has been that though the royal head of the British Empire has been shorn of most of the "divine right" by which kings once governed, he is still a great personage and a potent influence. As Mr. Saerchinger has pointed out, he is the symbol of unity of the Empire, a sort of super-personal bond which holds that Empire together. Chiefly, his is the power of personal affection, to which radio—which enables his people to hear his voice—has added much.

Once, Great Britain and the United States were not such firm friends, but today animosities are forgotten, and our friendship with Canada's king and his people gives us a vision of enduring peace.

Cesar Saerchinger

Paderewski's Debt: The tour recently made by Ignace Paderewski was marred by illness. At the last, a heart attack forced him to cancel what was to have been a triumphant farewell performance in New York. Nevertheless, he is reported to have made enough money to keep him in comfort to the end of his life. Before he came to America this last time, he was penniless. Worse, he was told that he owed the United States government about $10,000 in income taxes.

Paderewski

It was this fact, we hear, which decided him to make the arduous trip in order to pay his debt to a country which had been so good to him. Now he returns home and we wish him well.

Marie Dressler Cottage: The benefits from radio are sometimes unexpected. Who, for instance, would have thought that the idea born in the minds of two Hollywood humanitarians some years ago would have given both good entertainment to a nation of radio listeners as well as $220,000 in cash to needy folk in the screen capital? On June 4, the Screen Actors Guild show completed its 1939 season. On that date, this remarkable broadcast balanced its books. As you know, the Gulf Oil Company sponsored these broadcasts. Stars, writers, directors, and technicians all worked for nothing, turning the total of $10,000 that they earned per week over to charity. Already, the same plan is promised for this fall. A home for homeless actors will be built with this money. There will be smaller bungalows named for donors or in memory of loved entertainers. They are planning a Will Rogers bungalow, also a Marie Dressler bungalow. As listeners, we admire the charitable spirit of the stars.

Robert Ripley's Day: The man who created a "Believe It Or Not" cartoon twenty years ago recently heard himself proclaimed "Doctor of Letters" by President Thomas W. Bib of Missouri Valley College in Marshall, Missouri, and thus the educational work that Bob Ripley has been doing for years was recognized by a great educational institution. Most interesting was the commencement address that Ripley then delivered. He told those seniors that life itself was a college full of information. He took them with him on an oral trip to the Garden of Eden, where he found no apple trees, on the road to Mandalay, where the flying fishes do not play; to the Garden of Hesperides, where Hercules found golden apples but which Ripley found to be oranges; on a boat-ride beneath the Sahara Desert, thence to Hell, the beautiful little town in Norway. The students and a great crowd of Missourians who had come for miles to listen to Ripley liked what he said. Observers commented again and again on the friendliness and hospitality of that crowd. Flags were flying and posters in windows of homes and stores welcomed visitors. Throughout the city the chief topic of conversation was Robert Ripley.

After his talk, he signed autographs for every farmer, miner, child or adult who sought it. Standing under a blazing sun, wearing the cap and gown of his new degree, he made many hundreds happier. The town voted him a life membership in the Chamber of Commerce. The alumni association voted him a life membership. The women gave him a Missouri fried-chicken dinner. Police gave him a special escort whenever he moved. Certainly, it was a great day for Bob Ripley, but most of all it was a demonstration of radio's power for bringing people together and making them friends.

ANNE LINDBERGH'S MAGIC KEY

BY FRANCIS CHASE, JR.

After their marriage, the Lindberghs were constant flying-mates. Anne is shown here greeting well-wishers at Ottawa, Canada, on the fourth leg of their famous flight to Orient

—Wide World

PERHAPS, in your radio adventuring, you have slipped down into the short-wave band on your receiving set and wondered what drama, what color and romance and mystery lay behind the sharp dots and dashes which fill that frequency and which is a magic key upon which men and women in far, dangerous places talk with each other.

This is the story of Anne Lindbergh, radio operator, who—even as you and I—wondered about those strange coded messages until, one day . . .

"And we'll have to carry a radio," Charles Lindbergh was saying. He and Anne were planning their trip to the Orient, and it seemed to her that every time he went over the list of necessities, it grew by one or two items. Of course, the radio was a necessity.

"Can you operate radio, Charles?" She knew what was coming, dreaded it. And yet there was a strange fascination attached to the idea of sending messages out into the boundless ether—straight as an arrow and as true—that made its appeal outweigh the mechanical difficulties involved.

"A little," he said. Then, raising his eyebrows, "But you will have to be radio operator."

"Oh, I see."

It was wonderful to be going on such a trip. They were to fly north to the Orient—from New York to Tokyo, straight as a bird might wing its way, through Canada and along the shores of the Arctic Ocean. Names like Aklavik, Kamchatka, Hingwa—strange names that made her blood tingle—dotted the charts that were carelessly sprinkled about their living-room at Englewood, N. J. To learn radio seemed such a little thing in return for the strange sights and sounds and experiences that were in store. Now the dots and dashes seemed such a horrible jangle, but if she set her mind to it, studied . . .

The practise set of buzzers and keys they set up in the living-room was fun, and, like a boy with his first fountain-pen, she spelled her name over and over in dots and dashes. A radio operator dropped in in the evenings to help with her instruction, and she became fluent in her new conversational medium. But, from the radio regulations: ". . . must pass a practical and theoretical examination . . . comprehensive questions . . . care and operation of vacuum-tube apparatus and radio communication laws and regulations . . ."

Her husband drew diagrams of the radio set.

"We might as well start with the vacuum tube," he said. And Anne echoed vacantly, "We might as well," adding to herself, "We might as well start on that back wisdom tooth." But technical phrases which seemed hopeless in the abstract took on meaning as they became concrete parts of a mechanism, and the examination was not such a nightmare as she had expected.

Then, one day, there was a barrage of questions from the press, a continuous flash of news cameras, last-minute warnings and advice, and they were off. An operator on Long Island had agreed to listen to her signals, test her sending. She reeled out the antenna and started: "Anne - - - Lindbergh - - - how - - - is - - - this - - - sending - - -?" And back through the air came: "Pretty --- good --- but --- a --- little --- heavy --- on --- the --- dashes --- " His instrument was still clicking. " --- just --- like --- my --- wife's --- sending --- "

It seemed odd to her—such a civilized creature—to be flying over country untouched by man—no houses, no smoke curling comfortably from red chimneys, only the endless, unbroken march of pine forests across a land that seemed endless. And at her side a little key that was their only contact with the civilization they had left behind. She felt a surge of power as she touched the key, thus and so, and then—after a short pause—to have words come back to her across the wide, clean spaces of the heavens, words which told them how to fly, what landmarks to look for, what atmospheric conditions awaited them ahead.

AND it seemed odd to her—loving a home and friends as she did—to sit down to dinner with trappers and hunters at Baker Lake, in the Far North, who had not been "outside" for years. Their daily papers—for a whole year back—came to them in a batch on the annual visit of a trade steamer each summer. And they read them singly, day by day, over the year. Their news was always a year behind, but what difference did it make here where there was no time?

And yet, this slender girl with the smiling eyes and the singing heart was to come—in time—to take these things in her stride—men with strange jobs in strange places, blistering tropic heat, freezing Arctic cold—until even the tiny cockpit of the plane became a sort of home to her, extraordinarily pleasing. Every corner, every crack and crevice of it had significance. And it was odd that she—who had lived so meticulously the years of her life at home—could find a sort of second home here among coils and glistening fuselage, motors and oil and radio transmitters.

They had slept in ice-houses in Alaska; and in Africa they had known the ravages of yellow fever, sleeping in the baggage compartment of their plane anchored far out in a bay. They had flown food to starving Chinese in the Yangtze basin, daring floods and typhoons, and it would have been odd, indeed, if she had not come to feel a strange affection for the plane in which she had spent so many hours, which had borne them to so many out-of-the-way places—an affection which made of it a second home.

Home! But what a strange home!

—International

Being just a great man's wife was not enough for Anne Morrow Lindbergh until a radio key made her a partner in two of the world's greatest flights.

Charles and Anne Lindbergh have flown together to the ends of the earth. Anne's part in these epoch-making flights has been the all-important operation of their plane's short-wave radio

Now she could look out of her window, and there were no garden-plots, no birchwood trees—only the long, endless stretch of ocean, blue and white-hot under the sun. No neighbors—but there's a ship, far off ahead. She talked with it by radio, and then they were flying over it and waving at the men on deck. She felt like a blind man from whose eyes the veil had been lifted. A blind man can talk and hear—just as she could by radio—but now she was waving and they were waving back. It was like talking with a neighbor. And then they were gone. The operator on the ship was calling again, a last word:

"Xmas --- wishes --- and --- Happy New Year --- from --- all --- on --- board ---"

Christmas wishes! She had never felt farther away from Christmas, there with the burning sun and the blue tropical sea below. Christmas was a season of white snow and frosted window-panes and furs and sleigh-bells. It was December 6, she remembered. Maybe . . . It was just possible that they might be home by Christmas, and she bit her lip and the motor of the plane was a voice reciting:

*And all the lamps are lit . . .
The men are sailing home from Troy,*

Suddenly she knew that the little cockpit where she had spent so many hours was not home. She was driving a car from New York to Englewood, past the old familiar landmarks, around the old familiar curves. And her heart was sick, but she would bury it in work. Her finger was on the key. Gas for the plane, a mechanic, a new coil for the transmitter. She'd have these all waiting at Fernando de Noronha, in Brazil, and, maybe—she tried not to think about it—but maybe they'd be home for Christmas.

IT IS much easier to picture Anne at home, the shy and simple mistress of an important household. It is easier to picture her pouring tea in the afternoons, planting flowers in a well-kept garden, preparing menus for the next day's meals, than bundled in greasy coveralls in the cockpit of a plane. And it is difficult to imagine what might have happened to Charles Lindbergh had his choice fallen upon a different girl than Anne.

For life has not been easy or kind for the Lone Eagle. Modest and innately shy, in the beginning, he has become bitter and untouchable as the years have passed, bringing with them a still keen interest in his affairs on the part of the press and bitter memories of the deep tragedy which took from him his son in a brutal kidnaping and murder. Often, now, he is rude to friends and acquaintances upon the slightest provocation, and newsmen approach him with the knowledge that they can expect only the coarsest treatment.

It is well for him that Anne has a deep feeling for people, that she is keenly sensitive—able to feel his moods and, with the deep sympathy which is a vital part of her make-up, adapt herself to them.

It is well, too, that she has become his flying-companion, eager to share the hardships of rigorous flights across primitive lands, eating crude food improperly prepared, facing winds that are hot and rains that are cold by his side. And it is well that she shares these—not as an idle companion but as an active and vital unit in his flights. For he has grown to feel a dependence upon her, a dependence which has given rise to a finer relationship based upon giving and taking.

In the varied conditions—good and bad—which they have encountered on their long flights, they have come to know each other with a fulness that others lack, and the love which has grown out of this knowledge is a finely tempered thing. For it is not in the easy, every-day life amid comforts and conveniences that full understanding arises. It is in adversities—waiting at barren Porto Praia for the tropic wind to die, day after day, and unable to return to Dakar because of a yellow-fever epidemic; mobbed by starving coolies in flood-stricken China; flying blindly through fog above Buroton Bay, unable to land although the gas is running low, while polite Japanese radio operators send the message, "Japan --- welcomes --- Col. --- Lindbergh ---"

Or that day, near the mouth of the Yangtze, when their wing caught in the swirling flood-water and tipped the plane. "No one," they had been told at Hankow, "who goes under the Yangtze's surface ever comes up again." Now their plane was spilling them into the muddy, filthy stench of the stream. They jumped.

"THAT wing may hit me as it tips over," she thought. Then, under the muddy surface, she wondered about her husband. He was swimming easily behind her when she came to the surface. They drifted downstream to a waiting life-boat, and she coughed up some Yangtze water as she climbed on board. "For three weeks," she thought, "I've been brushing my teeth in boiled water to avoid infection."

Intimate, understanding relationships are born in experiences like these, and in the rich companionship Anne Lindbergh has given him lies the hope that—some day—Lindy's bitterness may pass away into a riper, richer quality which we term as "human understanding."

Thus, radio has been a magic key for Anne—a key which has brought her close to the heart of a lonely and bitter hero; a key which has made her—in every sense—his good right arm; a key which may—in the end—prove the salvation of that lonely man who now walks alone.

Nan Wynn doesn't get much time for sunning as above now that she's traveling with Hal Kemp's band. It's her first band-touring experience

Ed Gardner, who played "Archie" and produced "This Is New York," will head a show to substitute for "Lux Radio Theater" this summer

NEW YORK.—Phil Baker loses the services of Harry von Zell and orchestra-pilot Harry Salter when his program switches to Wednesday nights starting July 5. Salter must remain with "Hobby Lobby," which is heard the same night, and Von Zell must stick to "What's My Name," the show that replaces Fred Allen for the summer . . . Orson Welles has signed a new contract with the soup sponsor and returns to the air in the fall with his one-hour dramatic show . . . "The Waring Family" (no relation to Fred) is the title of a new quarter-hour script-show to be heard on Friday nights (CBS), starting July 7.

The "Hit Parade" will be heard two hours earlier on Saturday nights starting July 8 . . . If you didn't hear Gracie Allen as guestar on last week's "Information, Please," you will, in all probability, be hearing her this Tuesday night. Incidentally, when George and Gracie return to the air in October they will be heard on Wednesday nights over CBS . . . Mary Margaret McBride signs off CBS next week . . . When the Eddie Cantor program folds after the broadcast on June 26, Kay St. Germain will hop a choo-choo back to California to fulfill a West Coast radio contract. Cobina Wright, Jr., makes a repeat guestar appearance on the Cantor show this Monday night, and the following week Orson Welles will let his hair down and flip cracks with Cantor.

Ed Gardner Heads New Show

When the CBS "Lux Radio Theater" leaves the air for the summer the spot will be filled by a new show headed by Ed Gardner, who produced "This Is New York" and played the part of Archie on the show . . . One of my spies tells me that the Gardner program has been sold for fall airing, but no further information can be revealed at the moment.

If the popular NBC "Hobby Lobby" program remains on the air for the summer, Dave Elman may leave the show for a short vacation . . . Don Voorhees is going to be a weekly air commuter to Detroit for the new program, which features James Melton, Francia White and a fourteen-voice choir. This program sounds as though it will make for excellent radio listening . . . Next Saturday night the "Vox Pop" program will introduce the American Father of 1939, who will have been selected by the program's listeners. A last-minute plan will also introduce a man who will have become a proud father that same day.

The switch of the Raymond Paige program from Wednesday night to Friday night enabled the conductor to take a week off and go to Maine for a vacation, but Andre Kostelanetz and Walter O'Keefe weren't so lucky. They had their regular Thursday night broadcast on June 1, and then did another show the following Monday night, when the program switched to its new weekly schedule, which didn't leave them much time for rehearsal. When they finished dress-rehearsal Thursday, Kostelanetz and the Kay Thompson singers went right to work on the Monday show, and Walter O'Keefe went into a script-conference with his two writers . . . Nan Wynn is on the road with the Hal Kemp orchestra. This is the first time she has ever toured with a band. Before she left she was all excited about the trip, but I'm betting she will be glad to get back home.

Incidentally, Hal Kemp was given top honors for making the best musical short of the 1938-39 season in the annual Motion Picture Exhibitors poll . . . Glenn Miller, playing from the Glen Island Casino, and Vincent Lopez, airing his music from Chicago, have been broadcasting at the same time over different networks. The vocalist featured with the Lopez crew is Betty Hutton, whose sister Marian is the songstress with the Miller band . . . Radio actresses Noel Mills and Irene Winston, of the new dramatic serial, "When a Girl Marries," have been very good friends for years, and now they actually play the part of best friends in the script. Last year Miss Winston appeared on the "Battle of the Sexes" and was given a watch for her effort. On the back of the watch was inscribed "Winner Molle Contest, 1938." However, since she received the watch, the "e" in the sponsor's name has disappeared and Irene actually blushed when she showed it to me.

Where's Ralph Kirbery?

A recent mention of Ralph Kirbery, the "Dream Singer," brought forth a huge response of mail from his loyal followers, who still are hoping for his return to the air in the near future. The latest report is that Ralph is going to organize a band, which in all probability will bring him back to the airlines . . . Benny Goodman has made several changes in his band again, including another new drummer-boy. Incidentally, the Louise Tobin who replaced Martha Tilton as songstress with Goodman is the wife of Harry James, the orchestra-leader.

Eddie Cantor's 25th Anniversary

When Eddie Cantor celebrated his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary with an Eddie-Ida audience, his own Ida occupied a box in a corner of the CBS playhouse. Eddie introduced his frau to the audience and the applause was long and loud. It being a warm night, Eddie invited the men to shed their coats, which met with hearty approval. After the program Cantor came back on the stage and answered any and all questions popped at him. Believe it or not, someone asked him how many daughters he had. Another asked him if it was true he was related to Walter Winchell. Cantor denied it and added, "I never have relatives who do well." A lady in the audience told Cantor that she and her husband were celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary that day, and the comic immediately invited them to attend his anniversary at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel the following Friday night. Incidentally, Ethel Blume, who is heard with Ezra Stone in the "Aldrich Family" and many other shows, played the part of Ida on the show that night and did a grand bit of acting.

Larry Clinton's "Our Love" is one of the leaders in the "Hit Parade," but you can't buy a Clinton recording of the tune because he left Victor to go with a new company that hasn't started to operate as yet, which means the orchestra-leader is out plenty do-re-mi in record royalties . . . The National Swing Club's first annual jam session in New York, which featured such names as Paul Whiteman, Tommy Dorsey, Louis Armstrong, Cab Calloway and other prominent swingsters, was a financial flop, which might mean that swing is on the wane.

Hollywood Showdown

By Evans Plummer

HOLLYWOOD.—That warbling Pat Friday, young lady, who made such a terrific debut on Bing Crosby's program, is being swamped by offers from all the agents—who don't know that her uncle is a lawyer and reads all proffered contracts. In fact, Unc is being so careful that he's afraid to let Bing star and build her up! . . . Edward G. Robinson's "Big Town" renewal for the fall will put him in the "first five" class in radio salaries. His weekly pay check won't fall far short of $10,000!

on the air and, look-see, set sales will boom! Incidentally, had W6XAO been equipped to televise the opening June 6 of Carroll's new production, they might have captured a view of announcer-singer John Conte at a table with his date, "Oomph Girl" Ann Sheridan, watching the Oomph Girl tableau of the production!

Backstage Goings On . . .

Latest autograph gag witnessed at NBC Hollywood Radio City is the offering of miniature turtles to celebrities to sign! . . . Was his face red! Anabella, as guest of Chase & Sanborn, insisted upon poking into Charlie McCarthy's innards to see how his lips and head are made to move . . . Sports fan Bing Crosby had to broadcast during the Nova-Baer fight, so he had the control-room men dispatch bulletins on the bout's progress to him between his "Music Hall" duties!

Jimmie Fidler's sponsors don't think Hollywood will make much gossip this summer. He'll get along with one (his CBS) broadcast during the warm months . . . At last report, Jack Benny and Fred Allen were still hiding out from that fight the mayor of Butte, Montana, wants them to stage there between July 1 and 9, during the city's jubilee . . . Suggestion to the Grouch Club: Why not invite Hitler and Mussolini to your National Grouch Convention July 16 at Hollywood Bowl?

None of My Business

The Bette Davis-George Brent romance is the hottest thing in Hollywood . . . Speculation is rife over the man to whom Madeleine Carroll will next plight her troth—but their friends are discounting the whisper that he is that big-time radio producer . . . Bandsman Charlie Barnett appeared at Dotty Lamour's cocktail party June 4, and he's been rushing her hither and yon, but the wise money is still on Rudy Vallee . . . Hollywood Whisperer George Fisher and Lya Lys ("Nazi Spy" other woman) are a steady twosome . . . While Kay St. Germain's away, it's Mary Healy with whom Edgar Bergen is at play . . . Grouchmaster Jack Lescoulie has lost his heart to an unnamed San Francisco cutie.

Vital Statistics Boom

Bob Burns, as scheduled here, became father to an eight-pound-six-ounce Robin on Memorial Day and told the world about it next day in a Hollywood trade-paper full-page advertisement which concluded: "I regret that I have but one life (a year) to give to my country . . . Five days later, Carroll Carroll, writer of the Kraft Music Hall scripts and glorifier of the NBC station-break chimes, passed cigars upon the arrival of seven-and-a-half-pound Bruce Carroll . . . and—

Did I ever say anything mean about Joan Crawford? Well, maybe, but I take it back. Last week Jack Albin, RADIO GUIDE and SCREEN GUIDE photographer, became a father—but his little girl Joan's arrival was difficult and surgical. When he asked the Hollywood Hospital authorities about the bill, he was amazed to learn it had been paid in full by an unnamed person! Albin suspects Crawford, who has a way of helping anonymously when help is needed.

Whoopie! Television Finds Itself

Television has little to give to radio unless it adds to the living-room spectacles that cannot be adequately described in words—such as the Earl Carroll Theater Restaurant's "World's Fairest" revue. And the latter is exactly what Thomas S. Lee proposes to televise over W6XAO, the Don Lee-MBS television station here, when his newly purchased portable-camera equipment arrives. The Carroll beauties will go

CBS scene: Amos' Andy rushing into the studio one minute before airtime and announcing, "Just came from my dentist, and boy, how he can figure to the split second!" . . . At "Good News": Frank Morgan celebrating what his enemies figured out to be his forty-ninth birthday, and Bob Young, who is learning magic for his role in M-G-M's "Miracles for Sale," amusing Meredith Willson with his new parlor tricks . . . Blind Alec Templeton returning to the NBC Hollywood studios after some six months, but recognizing all of his friends' voices without an error.

Parkyakarkus telling his "Tuesday Night Party" pals how he is taking a reel of home movies monthly of growing Clifford, Parky's first-born . . . At "Screen Guild Show's" last performance, Marie Wilson, mike-frightened noticeably, recovering nicely to kick Lionel Stander in the pants at cue in script; Dick Powell, Tyrone Power, George Murphy and Reggie Gardner tapping time to Oscar Bradley's music while waiting for their lines; Rosalind Russell observing her birthday in a dizzy hat.

Abner Goes Places

"The nicest birthday present I ever received!" was the thanks Lum got when, on Abner's birthday, he surprised his air partner by presenting him with a motor-scooter. Abner took one look at the gadget, mounted it and started to scoot. The engine turned over and began firing. Abner hung on and dodged music racks, microphones, piano and table in the studio while he whizzed about at alarming speed. Just then someone opened the studio door and Abner charged out into the CBS corridors, still mounted on his gift gas-steed. When last seen, parties of studio tourists were running for cover while Abner attempted to stop the contraption!

Tag Lines . . .

Fannie Brice's aired account of her near hole-in-one has brought her thousands of letters from golf enthusiasts, advice from other hole-in-ones, three golf-club invitations, an honorary club membership, a dozen golf balls, an instruction book, and a bid from a club manufacturer who wants to make junior clubs and brand them "Baby Snooks" . . . Jerry Gray of Artie Shaw's band is now an actor, too. Bob Benchley heard his voice, thought it funny, and has been drafting him ever since in the sketches.

Jimmie Fidler will do only one weekly program this summer. Above: Jimmie (r.) is burying the hatchet in feud with Ted Lloyd, radio columnist

Bing Crosby, being kidded above by music maid Dotty Messner, had control-men keep him informed on Nova-Baer fight during his broadcast

AND so the 1939 Star of Stars Poll is completed. Ballots have poured in as never before. Each week we've seen our mailbags heaped higher. Each week we've seen longer rows of girls counting and tabulating your votes—750,000 votes, ladies and gentlemen! It's been a big job, to be sure, but a worth-while job. For the Star of Stars Poll has established Radio Guide as the great clearing-house for radio preferences. In 1937 you preferred Jack Benny; in 1938 you preferred Jessica Dragonette; in 1939—Nelson Eddy! And for your specific preferences, we refer you to a new and convenient table of results on these pages. For each classification on the ballot, you'll find the picture of the winner with his standing in points (based on 100) and his runners-up listed below with their standings. We don't need to list the winners here, but comment on some unusual twists in the returns might be interesting. Naturally we were surprised, as we think you'll be, at the similarity in the Star of Stars voting of this year and last. In 1938 it was Jessica Dragonette, with Nelson Eddy taking second honors. This year their positions are reversed. We rather expected Bergen and McCarthy to creep up on Jack Benny, who won first honors among comedians last year, and we weren't disappointed. Other observations: Lowell Thomas noses out the great Winchell in the male commentator's event; Margaret Speaks wins over Dragonette, second Star of Stars choice, in her own classification; finally, Nelson Eddy, the Star of Stars, is also the greatest standout winner in any one classification!

stock ancestry—simple, sturdy, honest. On May 7, 1833, Johannes is born in Hamburg. Desperately poor, the family occupies a tenement in the red-light district of Hamburg. The father, a double-bass player, teaches the boy the rudiments of music, and striking some notes on the piano one day is astonished that little "Hannes" (the German equivalent for "Johnny") names them while looking out the window. Soon he is placed with Marxsen, an excellent piano pedagogue, and gets rigorous training in the classics. But money must be earned to help the family. So Papa Brahms sends out his son to play dance music at sailors' dives along the harbor-front. The remuneration is two thalers and free drinks during the pauses. Hannes does not drink. Instead he draws forth a book of poetry and reads.

In his tenth year Hannes gives a concert and amazes the musicians and the public. Further successful concerts (but financially sad) and a little composing fill the next few years until he is fifteen. Meanwhile working desperately and "living on twenty-four hours a day." Then comes an invitation from a wealthy music-lover for a long stay in the country. There the young musician forms the love for woodland and meadow which tinges so much of his later works.

At nineteen he writes his first sonata for piano. The Hungarian fiddler, Remenyi, hears him play. "Come along and tour Germany with me," he says. Hannes—no, Johannes now—goes, and

THE HEIR OF BEETHOVEN

By Leonard Liebling

From his twenty-second year, slouchy, lovable Johannes Brahms (shown in silhouette as artists of Vienna loved to draw him), created a wealth of masterpieces, joined Bach and Beethoven to become third in a trio of towering B's

A MERRY party in Vienna. Beer and punch in plenty. Jest and laughter. Singing. Strauss waltzes on the piano. (No one dreams of a World War twenty-five years later, or of the tragedy of Anschluss.) Everybody gay. All except one guest, sitting in a corner. Scowling. Bearded, stocky, large-girthed, not too tidy in dress. Argumentative, contradictory, sarcastic when he speaks at all. Suddenly he leaves, the host following.

"If I have forgotten to insult anyone this evening," growls the surly one, "ask him to pardon me." The door slams, the bulky figure lumbers down the stairs.

The host smiles. He knows his man. "Good old Herr Doktor Brahms is not feeling so well," he murmurs and rejoins his guests. He delivers the composer's message. The guests smile. They know their man, too.

They are aware that even as a famous grown-up he still squats on the floor and plays with toy soldiers; that he confesses to fresh thrills every time he rereads "Robinson Crusoe"; that he sings roistering songs with his companions on the way home from taverns; that, with the heart of a child, he loves and fascinates children. "Uncle Brahms," they call him. He scatters silver coins on his walks and roars laughing when the street urchins scramble for them. Every year he has a Christmas tree for youngsters.

BUT he abuses some of his colleagues meanly and without mercy, as when he looks over a composition by one of them and jibes "Beautiful! Really beautiful. The music paper, I mean! Where do you buy it?" Reverse there is the occasion that sees him, with equally sharp uptake, disparage his own works. He sends a sheaf of his master songs to a friend with a note, "Tell me whether they are bad, shameful or ridiculous." He advises Simrock, his publisher, "You would be insane to invest a penny in my fourth symphony, just finished."

So frugal that he diaries every copper he spends, habitually wears unpressed clothes, and carries home his supper in greasy paper from the delicatessen store; nevertheless, being made beneficiary of a legacy of $5,000, he declares, "As I do not need the money, I am enjoying it in the most agreeable manner, by taking pleasure in its distribution."

A queer, contradictory, patchwork individual, this man with the spirit of a child, the temper of a bear and the goodness of an angel. A human being. A son of the people. A genius—Johannes Brahms. Where in all the world of tone can one find his counterpart?

The odd mixture is traceable, however, to his North German peasant-the tour enables him to meet Joachim, the famous violinist, and Liszt, musical god of the day. Johannes likes Joachim, the conservative, better than Liszt, the tonal-leftist.

In Duesseldorf, Schumann receives Brahms, hears his music, and calls excitedly to his wife, "Clara, come here and listen." She walks into the room and into Brahms' heart. Schumann, editor of the leading music magazine, writes his momentous article about Brahms, calls it "New Paths," and proclaims him as "he that should come . . . the Messiah of Music."

Now quartets, sextets, a quintet and sonatas pour from Brahms' pen. He teaches at the Court of Detmold and intensifies his dislike for ceremonial and nobility. He writes his gigantic D minor piano concerto, and plays it in Hanover and Leipsic, reporting in a letter that "it enjoyed a brilliant and decided—failure." He performs it in Hamburg and triumphs gloriously. All the time, he loves Clara Schumann (whose great husband has meanwhile passed away) but is shy with her. "I know how to talk to a chambermaid or waitress," he tells a friend, "but I never feel at home with ladies."

From his twenty-second to his twenty-eighth year, Brahms creates a wealth of masterpieces, including the lovely "Handel Variations" for piano, many songs, the exalted "German Requiem" (completed after the death of his beloved mother), and his first symphony, following ten years of work at that score. At first pooh-poohed by the critics and passed up by the public, the symphony slowly conquers everywhere. He is now famous as a composer and somewhat notorious as a man, for with Joachim he has issued a manifesto against "music of the future" by Wagner, Liszt and their disciples.

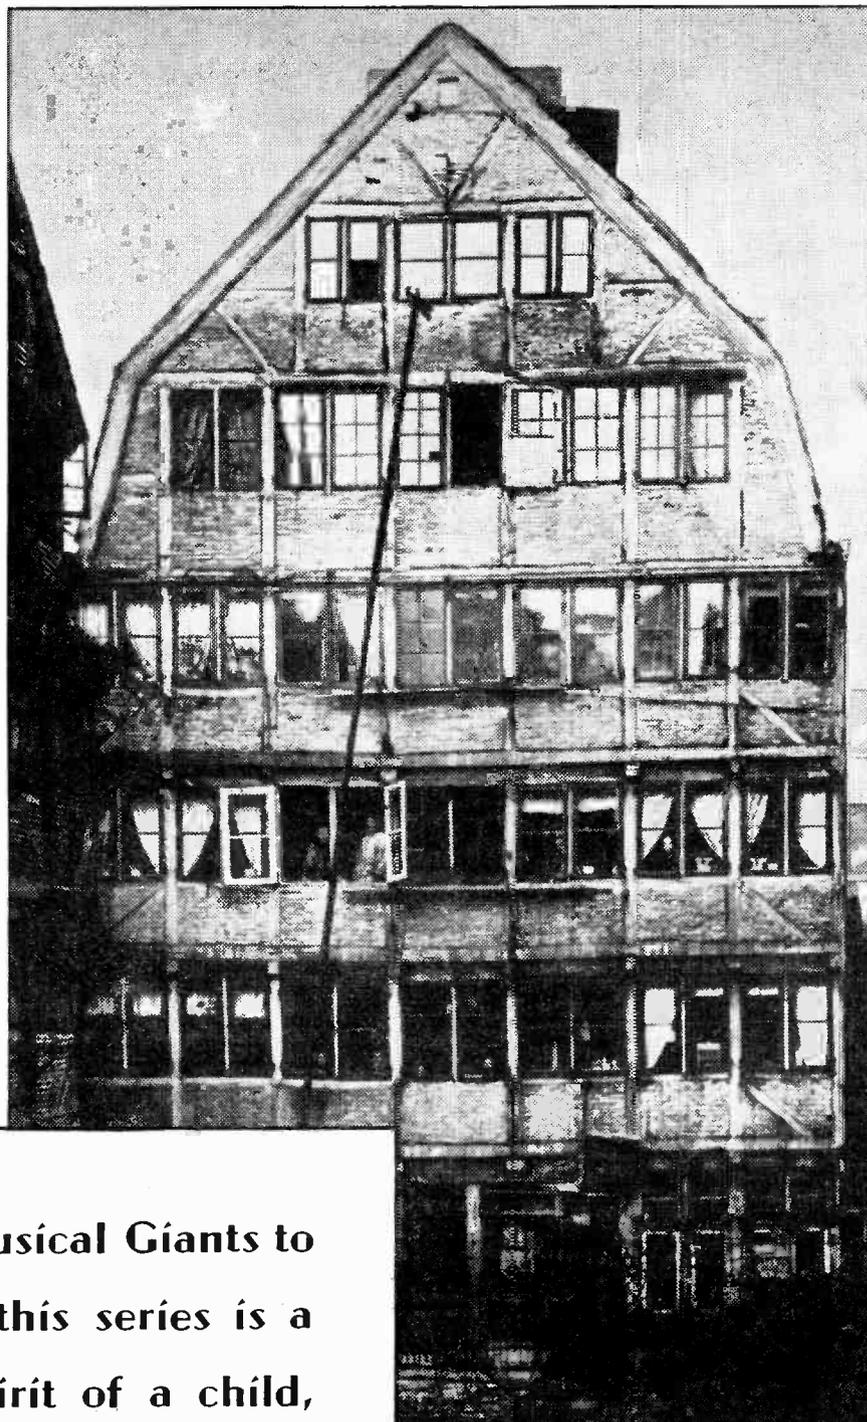

Below: In this dignified Vienna house, old Herr Doktor Brahms died at the age of sixty-four

Just before his thirtieth year, Brahms makes a sudden decision to go to Vienna—"the musicians' holy city," as he names it—"and breathe the air where Haydn, Gluck, Mozart, Beethoven and Schubert had lived." Hellmesberger, favorite violinist and general musical power in the Austrian capital, rhapsodizes about Brahms' G minor quartet and proclaims "This is the heir of Beethoven." Vienna quickly takes the newcomer to its affectionate heart, he makes the city his permanent home and all his subsequent inspirations come to life there. He gets to know the music of the Magyars, adores it and writes his "Hungarian Dances." Hungarian bits, too, crop up in his other pages. But predominantly he is always influenced by Bach, Beethoven, Schumann, and now again by Chopin's novel harmonies and sultry sentiment.

IN 1876 (he is forty-three) Cambridge University promises him the degree of doctor of music if he will come to England to receive it. He declines (and also the renewed offer in 1892). He is afraid of the sea. In 1886, however, he accepts the honor from the Breslau University, and for the occasion writes his "Academic Festival Overture," impishly shocking the straight-laced dignitaries by using for his themes several of the ribald drinking-songs of the students. He is lastingly proud of his Doktor title, and prefers it to being addressed as "Meister" (Master). He sputters, "Every first-class shoemaker is a Meister!"

Twelfth of the Musical Giants to be presented in this series is a man with the spirit of a child, the temper of a bear, the goodness of an angel—a human being!

Brahms was born in this tenement, in the redlight district of Hamburg, the son of a poor double-bass player ing the sudden death of Wagner. He lays down the baton and says simply, "We sing no more. A master has died."

And how about the romance with Clara Schumann during all these years? Their published correspondence and all other evidence indicates that the relationship is tender but entirely platonic. Psychiatrists would say that he transfers his strong mother-fixation to Clara. In one of his early letters he addresses her as "Meine liebe Frau Mama." (My dear Mrs. Mother.) They make a foot-tour along the Rhine. He could have married Clara then, but this mother of seven children does not encourage the union. They stay close friends until she dies in 1896.

ALL Vienna knows the squat, stout, aging master as he promenades about, or is seen at concerts in his uncouth attire (to this day exhibited in the Gmunden Museum)—baggy coat, disreputable slouch hat, and trousers habitually much too short. During a visit to some friends in the country, (Continued on Page 40)

The second symphony and the celestial violin concerto appear. Also piano pieces and songs, songs, songs. All the output is matured, mellowed, rich in thought, tenderness, drama and marvelous workmanship. The number of his symphonies reaches four. There is much chamber-music too, and still more songs. None so fine have been heard since those of Schubert and the last ones of Schumann.

Hanslick, the caustic Vienna critic and hater of Wagner, sets up Brahms as a foil against the Bayreuth giant, and bitter warfare follows between the two camps, with Hanslick and Wagner swinging their pens as lances—and Brahms remaining silent. He can not refrain from his customary sharp flings at times. On the other hand, asked why he does not write an opera, he replies, "What, after 'Meistersinger'?" While conducting a choral rehearsal, a note is handed to Brahms, announc-

THE BATTLE OF CAPITOL HILL

An insider's account of how Fulton Lewis, Jr., won a newspaper vs. radio battle for you

BY DONN THOMAS

This story of a radio commentator's struggle to establish the same rights for radio newsmen in the nation's capital as are enjoyed by newspapermen was written by a prominent newspaper correspondent who served two terms as a member of the standing committee of the press galleries.—Editor.

RADIO has finally come of age at the Capital of the United States—thanks to the pluck and perseverance of Fulton Lewis, Jr., the big, blond, blue-eyed commentator on national and world affairs for the Mutual broadcasting network. This thirty-five-year-old reporter, musician, angler and radio news pioneer is the acknowledged father of the new-born Fifth Estate—a paternity achieved only after a savage scuffle with a hostile and skeptical and redoubtable press.

Before outlining the strategy by which Mr. Lewis won admission for radio to the galleries of the great—Congress, the White House, the inner offices of Cabinet members and politicians—it is appropriate to set forth what that long-denied privilege means to radio's millions of listeners.

Until Mr. Lewis persuaded Congressional bigwigs that radio rated equal privileges with the press in centers where news is born, radio commentators had to gather their data by bootleg methods. In the Senate, for instance, they were forced to sit in the visitors' galleries, and they were not permitted to take notes. Such a violation of the august chamber's precedents might even provoke a roar from the presiding officer of the day or a more gentle protest from the Civil War veterans who act as doorkeepers.

Whereas the press gallery occupies the front of the chamber fronting the so-called statesmen, the radio men had to observe and listen from the side-lines. They missed the asides and undertones and by-play which frequently illumine a Senator's meaning more clearly than what he says for public ears.

Now the radio commentator can push through doors hitherto barred. If he wants the inside story on why Vice President Garner is bucking the President on a WPA appropriation, he can walk into the Texan's office and ask "Jack" face to face. If the V. P.

A one-time ace Washington correspondent, Fulton Lewis, Jr., is now MBS commentator in the Capitol late Mr. Ickes on the expected arrival of a baby.

It is the difference—a vital one—between tasting news cold and colorless or sampling it hot and human. That explains why, since Mr. Lewis' triumph, the radio chains are rushing reporters to Washington—why newspapers owning stations are planning to have their own correspondents take to the air once or twice a week—why, in a sense, radio has attained a stature it never enjoyed before.

Perhaps an even more important consideration is the effect which the bigger and better radio news reports will have on the listening and the voting public. It is no secret that the average American cannot find time to read the twenty columns of Washington news which his daily newspaper contains. Moreover, even if he did, he would have only a confused and chaotic idea of what it was all about. It is difficult to be a reader and an interpreter, too. Then again, every newspaper has its pet prejudices and its editorial slant, frequently coloring the news or distorting it slightly. Even the most honest and independent journals are not blameless in this respect.

A radio reporter cannot afford such prejudices, however, if he wishes to stay on the air. For some psychological reason, people resent unfairness and intolerance in a speaker more violently than they do in a writer. They resent the disparagement which the spoken word or tone suggests far more deeply than they do the written attack. They may chuckle over a bristling editorial, but they rebel when the same ideas are brought into their living-room through a loudspeaker. So the radio commentator's Darwinian duty—to himself and his constituents—is to be fair

THE MELANCHOLY CLOWN

Another instalment in the tale of Jack the Bee Benny, in which the Bee teaches Mary how to act

BY JAMES STREET

AFTER Jack Benny married Sayde Marks in 1927, he discovered he still had a living to earn. He took her with him on a tour of the road company, "The Great Temptation." She never had been on a stage in her life. She didn't like the theater, the long train rides, the little hotel rooms. She had been a working girl, and the inactivity made her nervous.

Their marriage did not have an auspicious beginning. For one thing, Mary had been lukewarm to the idea of marrying a trouper. It was Jack's father who had helped convince her she should follow the dictates of her heart and not her mind. They had married so quickly that Jack hadn't had time to buy a ring but had used his mother's. And now the trouping.

Mary was not a prig, but she was a bride and she didn't like the ways of show people, particularly the scantily clad girls who worked with her husband and were his friends behind stage. She even accused Jack of flirting with them. Who wouldn't?

Jack realized his wife didn't have enough to occupy her time and suggested she learn some lines in the show.

The show was in New York when Jack's lady stooge got sick and Mary pinch-hit. She was pretty terrible and it hurt Jack more than it did her.

She said, "You needn't try to soften the blow, Jack. I'm punk. I quit." She did, and Jack got a new girl.

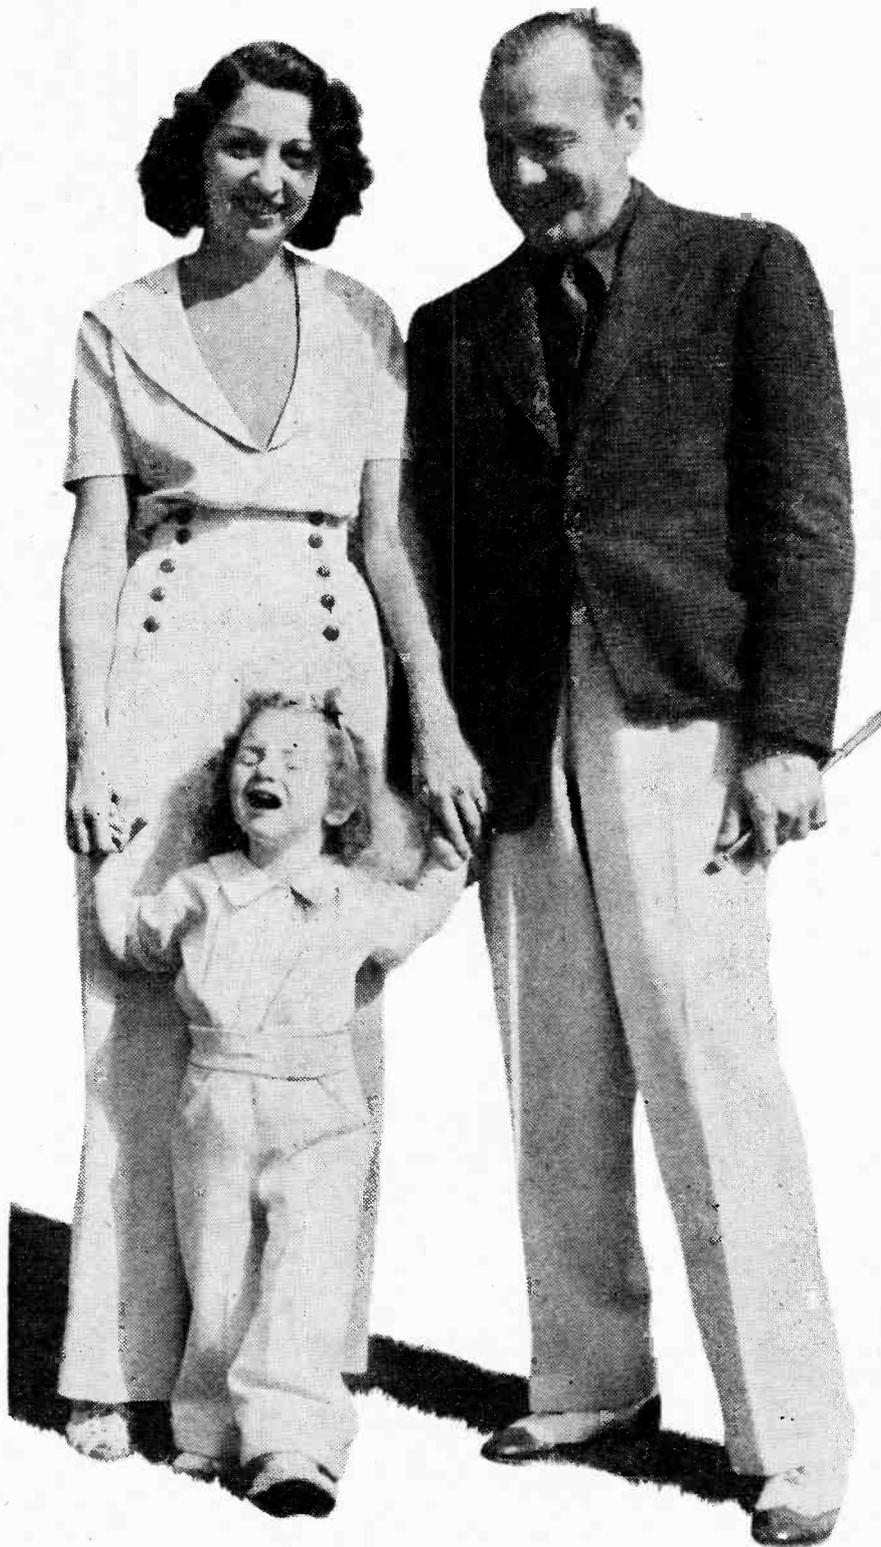

Early in their married life they began calling each other "darling" and it soon was shortened to "doll."

The show moved on to Chicago, and Jack's new girl left him, so he told Mary, "You've got to pinch-hit again, doll." She did better, but when the show got to Los Angeles Jack was afraid she would flop and removed her. But his new stooge didn't click and he shoved Mary back into the breach, and she's been there ever since.

IN LOS ANGELES, an executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spotted him. The talkies were just earning their keep and Jack was a natural for a revue. He was signed first for "The Hollywood Revue of 1929" and did all right. Next he was cast in "Chasing Rainbows" with Bessie Love and Charlie King, and a year later was in "The Medicine Man." Mary had gone back to her knitting.

Then Earl Carroll brought Benny east as master of ceremonies for his "Vanities." It was a long, tough job for Jack. He didn't use his hat or fiddle for props and needed something in his hands to keep them out of his way. Somebody suggested a cigar. He had never smoked in his life, but he began. Now he's an inveterate smoker, and in his picture "Artists and Models Abroad" he smoked 1,500 cigars, costing Paramount $375.

When the Vanities closed, Jack went back to vaudeville, which was gasping for air. The talkies had hit vaudeville on the chin and radio was digging its grave.

It was the winter of 1930 when a man's forgetfulness changed Benny's life. Wayne King was playing in Milwaukee, and William Stein, vice-president of Music Corporation of America, and Evans Plummer of RADIO GUIDE, went up to Milwaukee from Chicago to hear him. In a Milwaukee hotel they bumped into Benny, who buttonholed Stein.

"Listen, Bill," Jack said. "Vaudeville is dying. It's getting worse every week. I can see the handwriting on the wall. Now, your company books bands, doesn't it? I can still play a fiddle enough to get by, although I'll admit I have neglected my fiddle for straight gags. So how about you setting up a band around me and signing me up?"

Stein said he'd think it over and then forgot it. If he had done as Benny suggested, Jack probably would be the type of comedian Ben Bernie is, using a fiddle for a prop.

Jack stayed with vaudeville until it turned up its toes. His act was the same it had been during the twelve or thirteen years he had plugged along. He was always threatening to play "The Bee" but never got around to it. He would borrow a fiddle from the pit-leader, make as though to play, and then crack a gag. Millions of persons wondered if he really could play.

In February of 1932, Ed Sullivan, columnist for the New York Daily News, had Jack on his radio program. It was Benny's first appearance. He took to the air the same technique he had used in vaudeville, posing as a smart guy but acting the sucker, razzing himself and making his listeners feel superior.

Jack still has his first script. His first radio crack came right after Sullivan presented him, and here are the lines, Benny talking:

"LADIES and gentlemen, this is Jack Benny talking. There will be a slight pause while you say 'who cares?' I am here tonight as a scenario-writer. There is quite a lot of money in writing scenarios for the pictures. Well, there would be if I could sell one.

"I'm going back to pictures in about ten weeks. I'm going to be in a new film with Greta Garbo. They sent me the story last week. When the picture opens I'm found dead in the bathroom. It's sort of a mystery show. I'm found in the bathtub on a Wednesday night.

"I should have been in Miss Garbo's last picture, but they gave the part to Robert Montgomery. You know—studio politics. The funny part of it is that I'm really younger than Montgomery. That is, I'm younger than Montgomery and Ward.

"You'd really like Garbo. She and I were great friends in Hollywood. She used to let me drive her car around town. Of course, she paid me for it."

Funny? Maybe not to you, my friends, but those words made a man a millionaire. It was the beginning of a radio career which enables Brother Benny to earn more than three times as much money in a year as the Government pays the President and all of his cabinet officers combined. Charles Evans Hughes gets $20,500 a year for delivering great tomes of wisdom. Benny gets more than that in two weeks for making us laugh. Shakespeare's words were not worth a penny apiece to him. Benny's words are worth at least $300 each when he's on the air. And for one reason only—he can sell those six delicious flavors.

Jack Benny was not an immediate success in radio. He's never been an immediate success at anything. He's always had to plug. His vaudeville fans numbered millions, but after his

Honorary mayor of Van Nuys, Calif., Andy spends a lot of time at the ranch, is quite at home among the animals in his barnyard

Not the least among Andy's stock of animals are his highly prized Cornish chickens. Maybe listening to them gave him that squawking inflection

BACKSTAGE IN CHICAGO

BY DON MOORE

CHICAGO.—I mentioned recently the imposing record of the WGN humanitarian program, "I Need a Job," and expressed the opinion that there should be many more such radio programs. Came word from a reading friend in Texas, Kyle Johnson, that KTRH in Houston has inaugurated such a program and it is clicking resoundingly. A unique angle is that the Texas Employment Bureau offered its official services to take over the clerical work involved in making the "Opportunity Wanted" radio feature a big project. Thanks to Kyle. How about other job-finding radio programs? Is there one in your vicinity? Let's make radio a lead-horse in the tough pull back to the top of the employment hill.

Welles Carries On

You probably know by now that John Barrymore suffered a heart-attack while playing a stage engagement here in Chicago. John was scheduled to do a part on "Knickerbocker Playhouse" June 4, but while John was musing in an oxygen tent about the bludgeonings of chance, his friend, Orson Welles, flew from New York to join Elliott Lewis and Betty Winkler in "Business Before Pleasure." I didn't hear the broadcast, but Bob Jennings of Kastor agency was kind enough to play over a recording of the show for me. Welles, naturally, did an admirable job, even though it was a comedy part written especially for the Barrymore touch.

This series is fast taking on the aspects of one of radio's top half-hour dramatic shows. Behind it is the aspiration to build more big shows in Chicago. "Knickerbocker Playhouse" is giving a healthy shove to the ball we've been grunting to get rolling—and there isn't an eight on the ball, either.

Oh Mytems

Boris Aplon, who does convincing villain roles, spends spare time with interior decoration. He's a specialist on early Georgian . . . Pretty Lesley Woods won a prize for a polka at a party recently. Famous dance instructor Arthur Murray entertained the "It Can Be Done" cast and judged Miss Woods best in an impromptu dance contest. Bret Morrison was second . . . Marlin Hurt, middleman of "Tom, Dick and Harry," drew a bead with his trusty shooting-iron and fired away, then nearly dropped dead himself, for the ball sank into the cup on the fourteenth hole at Brookwood Country Club for Marlin's first hole-in-one . . . Virginia Clark's summer coiffure is her own creation and consists of cutting off some and curling up the rest of her locks high on her head . . . A revolving door is no respecter of women's hats, even if they do come from North Michigan Avenue and sport a yard of veil. Nancy Martin, NBC songstress, found that out when a mean old door snatched her hat off and ground it into something too radical to even resemble a modern hat.

From hats to hose: Songbird

Lillian Cornell got peeved at snagging her hose in her commuting train and sent the railway company a bill for damages. She didn't get a remittance, but she got a notice from the company that they were changing the seat-covers to a non-snap surface . . . Back to hats: Janet Lane, Helen Gowan in "Road of Life," sees red when she looks at her hats, for she has a colossal collection of hats in her favorite color, red . . . Skip Farrell has moved to an apartment on the North Side near the lake, convenient for summer swimming. Emily Vass, before leaving for New York, helped Skip decorate his apartment . . . Ken Griffin eagerly awaits his annual "injury." To get him out of his air-shows for summer competition in Lake Michigan sailing-races each year, one of his authors gets him banged up in the serial for a spell.

Crossroads Store

"Caroline's Golden Store" is open for business and business is looking good. This is a new NBC program that tells the day-by-day story of a charitable, though poor, middle-aged woman who manages a small-town store. Caroline Ellis writes the continuity and plays the central character. The cast includes Joan Kay, Jack Brinkley, Virginia Jones, Frank Behrens and others. And here's welcome news to many: The important job of narrator and go-between is handled by Franklyn McCormack, and the task fits well the poetry-reader's intimate style. Right here let's offer a bushel of big, red, grade A apples to the "Golden Store" and to General Mills for working the commercial plugs unobtrusively but convincingly into the continuity. Hooray for everybody! If they'll just stick to that policy they'll not only win undying honor as valiant pioneers but they'll find it will sell Caroline's goods better than the vaudeville-barker announcements that have become radio tradition.

Backstage Bits

Lee Keller, for twelve years drummer with Wayne King, has organized a sweet-swing band of his own and will blossom out soon . . . New "Breakfast Club" vocalist, Evelyn Lynne, was formerly soloist with Eddie Fitzpatrick's orchestra and came up from WFAA, Dallas . . . Sports announcer Pat Flanagan of WBBM has rounded out seventeen solid years at the mike . . . Ransie Sherman says it took him seven years in radio before he landed a commercial. But his ten-year-old son made his radio debut on a commercial broadcast last March; and just recently his seven-year-old daughter Ann did the same . . . Marek Weber lays down "Contented Hour" baton after broadcast of June 26; guest conductors will take over . . . Hoosier Hot Shots gone to Hollywood to make a movie called "In Monterey," with Gene Autry, the singing cowboy.

Shut-In Corner

Editor, Radio Guide:

I have been confined to bed and wheelchair for the past seventeen months. The doctors do not hold out hope for recovery, but I am thankful to be alive and to be able to type with the aid of an electric typewriter. I can't use my other machine, because hitting the keys affects my heart. The past months have been a loss financially, but I have gained by being able to think over much of my work. Consequently I am revising all the manuscript for "Salt on Your Lips," my latest volume of poetry.

For many years it has been my hobby to send a copy of my poem, "The End of the Rope," framed, to anyone I heard of who needed a pat on the back. I enjoy it so much and especially the perfectly beautiful letters I get back. I'm mailing you a copy of the poem for your desk, which I hope you will accept with my compliments.

Margaret Nickerson Martin,
Jackson, Mich.

● Like so many shut-ins, Miss Martin has a worth-while hobby, a grand hobby. The message of her fine poem is: "When you come to the end of the rope, tie a knot in the end and hang on."—Editor.

"Twin Stars" Want Star

Editor, Radio Guide:

Our literary and dramatic club, the Twin Stars Society, makes it a point to study and discuss radio programs.

We are unanimously agreed that Franklyn MacCormack has done a commendable piece of work for poetry, and we wish to register our vote for his early return to the air with his understanding interpretation.

Cecilia Scarborough, Tulsa, Okla.

● We think you'll hear MacCormack reading poetry again soon. In the meantime, see picture on this page.—Editor.

Youngster Makes Good

Editor, Radio Guide:

Even though he is a youngster, Garry Morfit is doing a fine job as comic master of ceremonies of "Club Matinee." Glad to see at least one young fellow get a radio break in a field dominated

Franklyn MacCormack, poetry-reader, actor, announcer, is heard on "Caroline's Golden Store," NBC

Taking his cue from the collegiate goldfish-swallowing fad, Garry Morfit goes them one better with Felix the Cat. Morfit, young radio star, is part-time emcee of "Club Matinee" and handles "Summer Bandwagon" by milk-fed movie stars and vaudeville hangers-on.

L. A. Murdock, Indianapolis, Ind.

● Garry Morfit has also climbed into the driver's seat of the Fitch "Summer Bandwagon." The field surely isn't "dominated" entirely by the above-mentioned varieties—just somewhat crowded.—Editor.

Was It Betsy Ross?

Editor, Radio Guide:

The "World Is Yours" program about the "Growth of Our Flag," June 11, was very interesting. In fact, there is a world of history as well as beautiful tradition connected with Old Glory. We should have more of it, and some of the legends about it that historians now acknowledge as unfounded should be debunked.

For example, authorities are now overwhelmingly agreed that Betsy Ross did not design the first Stars and Stripes. The honor is claimed for various other people and towns. In New York, Ft. Ann and Bennington are put forward as possible sites. One of the persons most prominently considered today by historians as the designer of the first flag is Francis Hopkinson, who was born in Philadelphia in 1737, and who is also considered the first native American composer of a secular song, "My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free."

I thought perhaps your readers might be interested in these facts.

Dudley Riggan, Philadelphia, Pa.

● Interesting, indeed.—Editor.

Figures Can Lie

Editor, Radio Guide:

During a recent week I counted the number of laughs received from the audience on the half-hour comedy shows. Bob Hope led with 150 laughs during one show. Jack Benny was second with 115, Joe Penner next with 110, then Robert Benchley with 100 and Fibber McGee with 80.

Clarence Ecker, Stanford, Mont.

● Interesting statistics. But studio laughter and applause aren't always good standards. They depend sometimes on how well the audience is coached before the show. We heard a comedy program recently that must have registered over 100 laughs in the studio, but four persons listening at our radio were simply disgusted at the studio interference.—Editor.

O Kay!

Editor, Radio Guide:

I have a friend who is a great admirer of Herbie Kay (especially since his divorce from Dorothy Lamour). I'm a Wayne King fan, and I told my friend that Herbie got his start with Wayne here in Chicago. Isn't that true?

Lillian Lanek, Chicago, Ill.

● Herbie was playing banjo with King at the Aragon Ballroom in Chicago when the owner selected him to lead a second band at his other ballroom, the Trianon. Kay scored his first big hit at the Chicago Blackhawk Restaurant.—Editor.

Serialysis

Editor, Radio Guide:

I'm a nurse on private duty, and in every home where I have had a case my patient has been the only member of the family who has listened to the script plays. When we consider that people of that type and housewives whose work keeps them at home alone day after day make up the principal part of the daytime radio audience, doesn't it seem that they should have something served to them besides misfortune, grief and gangsters? To mention one incident, I have seen a little blind woman eighty-six years old walk the floor wringing her hands while Ma Perkins was going through an episode with an ape.

Radio can serve only two purposes—education and entertainment. The wildest imagination could never call script plays educational, so why not have them entertaining?

Edith J. Carpenter, Albany, N. Y.

Polo Chair

Editor, Radio Guide:

I'm a history student, and therefore very much interested in the new NBC program about great adventurers on Mondays. It's especially interesting that the candidates tell their stories while sitting in Marco Polo's chair. Is this a chair which actually belonged to the famous adventurer? Such a chair belonging to the noted Polo was brought from Venice to Holland in 1753 by a trader named Ruffo. It was bought by a noble Dutch family, and was brought to America some eighty years ago. This particular chair was made entirely of wood and patterned after the severe semi-Gothic lines of twelfth-century Venice. I'd like to know if this historic chair is the one being used by this adventurers club.

Raymond J. Clagget, Boston, Mass.

● NBC has affidavits maintaining that the chair being used by the Order of Adventurers is that same piece of furniture described by Mr. Clagget; it was borrowed from the owners for this series.—Editor.

The March of Music

Edited by LEONARD LIEBLING

"... An ampler Ether, a diviner Air..."—Wordsworth

From our letter-box

AS REMARKED before, this department receives many a letter that deserves complete quotation here but cannot be used owing to lack of space. Such a misadventure is that of J. E. Gossard, Jr. (Parkersburg, W. Va.), but at least we can cite some excerpts that are of general interest.

Mr. Gossard praises this editor and other music commentators, and says that at present he is getting the most help from our "Musical Giants" and the "Something About" articles, "even though—alas!—a part of what I hear on the radio still goes over my head." However, our correspondent adds that he has acquired a phonograph and keeps on repeating certain elusive music until familiarity is developed.

The letter asks whether good music may be heard at the New York World's Fair during a visit there for several days during the next few months, and also "what about the same thing in Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia, all on the way to the metropolis when my wife and I set out for our trip?"

Sad to relate, the musical program originally announced for the fair has been abandoned, as the attendance at the opening concerts (Philharmonic, Grace Moore, Nino Martini, Jan Kiepura, etc.) fell far below the expected capacity crowds. It seems that the large majority of visitors preferred Frank Buck's monkeys to the muses, and Billy Rose's swimming damsels to the exponents of symphony and song. Nevertheless, the New York summer will not be without attractions for Mr. and Mrs. Gossard, as the Stadium series has already opened and later there are excellent concerts in Central Park by the Goldman Band. They might also take a peep into the Public Library and see manuscripts of famous composers and other fascinating musical mementoes.

Baltimore and Washington have some local orchestral music activity in summertime, but the Robin Hood Dell concerts in Philadelphia are of national renown. The Gossards wish to hear particularly Wagner, Beethoven, Stravinsky, Enesco, Dvorak, Schubert, Prokofieff, Tschaikowsky, and Richard Strauss; a great violinist, pianist and singer, and a potent opera.

"What general music dictionary or compendium is best? At $10 or less? At $5 or less? What periodical (other than RADIO GUIDE) and book on music appreciation would you suggest?" asks Mr. Gossard.

Recent splendid musical encyclopedias, both priced at $10, are Albert Wier's (Macmillan) and Oscar Thompson's (Dodd, Mead), and smaller and cheaper useful ones are Deems Taylor's Music Lover's Encyclopedia (Garden City Publishing Co.) and the Oxford Encyclopedia (Oxford Press).

The Musical Courier is the oldest musical journal in existence and has an international reputation. Valuable books on appreciation are Sigmund Spaeth's "Common Sense of Music," and "The Art of Enjoying Music," and Oscar Thompson's "How to Understand Music."

For their exploratory tour, I wish Mr. and Mrs. Gossard what Mendelssohn called one of his overtures—"Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage."

Speaking Up

By V. Vidal

FIVE hundred music students turned up one afternoon several weeks ago at Columbia's Radio Theater No. 1 by special invitation of Raymond Paige, conductor of "99 Men and a Girl." They were there to attend a rehearsal of his broadcast and were the first of many more such groups who will provide a permanent audience for Paige's weekly Wednesday rehearsals.

The students will learn something of split-second timing, microphone placing, radio acoustics and dynamics. They will get a glimpse of the control-room and will be told something of radio engineering. They will be able to watch a first-class orchestra in action, study how the conductor obtains his effects, how he balances the various parts of the orchestra one against the other. But most important of all, they will get an inkling of the professional way of doing things which no amount of watching a conservatory orchestra or even attending a concert can teach them.

Paige's experiment, if successful, should open a new field in musical education. Today every music student who graduates from a conservatory has one eye hopefully on a radio job. But it is often difficult for him to acquire radio training, as only a few of the major music schools are equipped to teach it. That's where the big networks can step in and help. Most large studios have ample room to accommodate large audiences of students—not only at broadcasts but at rehearsals as well. Of course there is the old tradition that a concert hall should be empty of everyone except the orchestra and conductor during rehearsal. And it's true that most conductors dislike an audience while they rehearse. Toscanini is a fanatic on the subject. But radio has managed to overthrow so many more important traditions that such a minor one should give no trouble at all.

Think of what it would mean to music students actually to watch a Bruno Walter, a Rodzinski, a Barbirolli in action; to study their methods, to compare their various techniques. Radio would be offering a post-graduate course to music students that no music school could ever duplicate.

Ravel's imaginative and charming suite, dating from 1910 was first composed as a four-handed piano duet and so performed publicly by two Parisian children in that year. Soon after, Ravel arranged the music in the form of a short ballet, the orchestration being done from the piano score. The present suite is the result. The five suggestively themed and spicily harmonized movements bear the titles: "Pavane of the Sleeping Beauty," "Hop-o'-my Thumb," "Empress of the Pagodes," "Beauty and the Beast," and "The Fairy Garden."

Karl Goldmark (1830-1915) made his first hit with the colorful "Sakuntala" Overture (1865), followed it up with his opera "Queen of Sheba" (1875), and next year won renewed fame with the romantic "Rustic Wedding" Symphony, which depicts the festivities at a rural marriage. More of a suite than a symphony, the work consists of (1) Wedding March and Variations, (2) Bridal Song, (3) Serenade, (4) In the Garden, (5) Dance.

Goldmark's nephew, Rubin (1872-1936), born in New York, a harmony teacher at the Institute of Musical Art, was one of the instructors of George Gershwin, and helped to shape and orchestrate his "Rhapsody in Blue."

The NBC Orchestra. Erich Leinsdorf, conductor. Suite "L'Arlesienne" (Bizet), Symphony No. 2 (Beethoven).

In 1872 Paris premiered "L'Arlesienne," a play by Daudet, with incidental music by Bizet, a thirty-four-year-old composer destined to climb to greater fame three years later with his opera "Carmen."

Arles is a city in the Provençal section of France and "L'Arlesienne" means a woman of Arles. The story is a tragic drama which has a young farmer in love with an Arlesienne dancer, whose past life drives him to suicide. However, Bizet's music is more agreeable than morbid. He made two suites from his score, and the numbers usually selected from the pair are the Prelude, two Minuets, (the second for flute with harp accompaniment), Adagietto (beautiful use of muted strings) and Finale, the latter a combination of a march and the farandole, typical ancient dance of Provence. Its theme is first stated softly by the flute and clarinet, accompanied by drum-taps. The suite ends with brilliant sonority.

In the farandole, the dancers follow

Something About Classical Piano Music

WE LEFT off last week with bows to Bach and Mozart, and now we can turn our attention to Schubert and Beethoven.

The former's piano music is not the highest voicing of his genius, but it includes some sonatas, a bit too expansive and prolix, a number of lovable impromptus and moments musical, waltzes, marches, variations (the "Rosamunde" set leads in favor nowadays), and the truly imposing fantasia based on a theme from his song, "Der Wanderer." The miraculous Schubert never lacked melodies and ideas for the keyboard, but often he liked them so well that he overdeveloped the material to "heavenly lengths." Perhaps that showed a defense complex. He often said that he was not sufficiently versed in counterpoint.

Haydn's sonatas and briefer works for piano are now relegated to the conservatories, only the F minor variations figuring occasionally at public concerts. His keyboard examples show all the qualities of his symphonies and chamber-music—ingratiating themes, amiable harmonies, facility and grace of craftsmanship.

And now enter Beethoven, the Jupiter of piano music. As a piano composer he amplified technique, made form more elastic, and widened the boundaries of expression. The classical elegance and restrained sentiment of his two great predecessors made way for his deeper romantic eloquence, dramatic breadth and emotional truth. Form and manner came first with Haydn and Mozart; with Beethoven (after he freed himself from the influence of the two other masters), personal revelation was the primary prompting of his creative impulses.

At twenty-seven he did his first four sonatas (the second omitting the traditional Menuet), bold in structure and content, the last one, in E flat, opus 7, with the deeply poignant slow movement. Only two years later came the gripping and tempestuous "Sonata Pathétique," in some respects never surpassed since by any other composer. Two years more and the revolutionary genius cast all custom to the winds, opened his opus 26 sonata with a lovely set of variations, and shocked the purists even further by including the great "Funeral March." A few months elapsed and there burst upon the world (1802) the immortal "Moonlight" sonata—a title invented after his death. In 1802 also, the "Pastorale" appeared, and 1804 saw the completion of the "Waldstein" and the "Appassionata."

Now followed a lapse for a while, to give time for the greater orchestral and chamber-music masterpieces, concertos, the opera "Fidelio," songs, variations, fantasias, rondos, all pouring from the fiery fount of inspiration in ceaseless abundance. "Les Adieux" (1811) was a distinct "program" sonata, with related story events. (Chopin and Schumann were born the year before, as though thoughtful Providence meant the flame to burn after the death of Beethoven sixteen years later.)

Prior to "Les Adieux," the blithe minuet had made way in the Beethoven sonatas for scherzos, sometimes light, sometimes vehemently robust. With opus 101 commenced the last five sonatas and the most monumental ones. Quite deaf now, Beethoven gave himself over to fateful reflection and tragic brooding. No more playful pages or pretty lyricism, but music by turns sorrowful, defiant, deeply suffering, beatifically resigned. The "Hammerklavier" sonata, opus 106 (written for the just-perfected grand-piano as a successor to the harpsichord), produced a giant fugue, but also slow sections of ineffable beauty and pathos.

The final sonatas are documents of the soul. Form was unimportant, and in the middle of some elaborate development, recitatives frequently interrupted with sad questioning and despairing lamentations. In opus 110, Beethoven himself labels one of the themes "Complaining Song." Again, a few pages beyond, "Exhausted, complaining." In the beginning of the last sonata, opus 111, the mighty will makes one more tremendous protest, there is ursine growling, a thunderous massing of sound. But all in vain. Hopeless fury surrenders to simple, soulful pleading, and for a finale, several pages of whispering, sublime tenderness—a celestial vision and communion with the infinite. The sonata ends with a chord in the primal and clarified key of C major. Beethoven wrote no more sonatas, and four years later was dead.

His fruitful productivity spun forth also twenty-one sets of variations (the best are the fifteen in E flat on a theme from the "Eroica" symphony, and the twenty-three on a waltz by Diabelli), innumerable rondos ("The Lost Farthing," etc.), marches, dances, bagatelles, and the abidingly popular "Andante Favori."

However, the thirty-eight sonatas represent the peak of Beethoven's solo works for piano. They are in themselves a whole library of practically every technical device, harmonic combination and mood which the musical limitations of his day permitted to be transferred to the keyboard.

During Beethoven's later years, while no contemporary equaled him in eminence as a piano composer, much good music was written for that instrument, but hardly any of it survives today, unless it be a few nocturnes by John Field, a single rondo by Hummel, and, of course, some of the output of Schubert and Weber. The latter, born fourteen years before Beethoven, will lead off in our contemplation of romantic piano music next week.

each other two by two, in a long procession, headed by the local musicians playing on their "gaboulets" (a kind of primitive flute), the meter accentuated by the jingle of the tambourine.

Bizet's delightful score has lost nothing in popularity during the almost seventy years of its existence.

The Voice of Firestone, NBC. Alfred Wallenstein, conductor; Margaret Speaks, soprano. Danza Iberica (Borguno), the Orchestra; Since First I Met Thee (Rubinstein), Margaret Speaks; Faust Waltzes (Gounod), the Orchestra; Il Baccio (Arditi), Neath the Southern Moon (Herbert), Margaret Speaks; Ballerina (Crist), Softly, As in a Morning Sunrise (Romberg).

Two numbers originally scheduled to be played three weeks ago on this program are listed this week, so we reprint the comment on them. They were Borguno's "Danza Iberica" and Bainbridge Crist's "Ballerina."

Augustin Borguno, Spaniard from Catalonia, is an arranger at WOR and an authority on Spanish music as well as a composer. His work is mostly in the Spanish idiom, and possesses the exciting rhythms and melody of that country.

Bainbridge Crist is an American, born 1883 in Lawrenceburg, Va. He practised law for a while and gave it up to settle in South Yarmouth, Mass., where he conducts the Cape Cod Choral Society. He has written various ballets and choreographic dramas, the majority on oriental themes.

ACT IV

The last act of "Aida" finds Rhadames imprisoned as a traitor, after he has betrayed military secrets to Aida. Her rival for the love of Rhadames is the jealous Amneris, and the latter sings her great and gloriously impassioned plea, urging him to exculpate himself with the vindictive priests. He refuses to answer their questions, and is sentenced to be buried alive in a sealed tomb. The second scene, in a duplex setting, shows Rhadames in his mortuary vault. But Aida has managed to hide herself there and to some of the loveliest strains ever composed by Verdi, they expire in each other's arms, while the repentant Amneris kneels in the temple above and sobs out her vain sorrow.

It is possible that time will permit the broadcasting of Act III as well as Act IV.

LISTENING TO LEARN

Librarians and Broadcasters

By Blevins Davis

A. L. A.'s Faith Holmes Hyers will be interviewed Sunday afternoon on "Bookman's Notebook," NBC

Editor's Note: Blevins Davis, in conjunction with Lewis Titterton, head of NBC's script division, and William Rainey, head of NBC production, plans the "Great Plays" series. Mr. Davis, who is the author of NBC "Great Plays Study Manual," will speak at the American Library Association Convention in San Francisco Wednesday, June 21, before the radio division. His subject will be "Bringing Great Plays to Life."

TEN years ago few librarians believed in the desirability of library programs on the air, or the possibility of a library-radio relationship which would increase the usefulness of books. Today scores of librarians are initiating ways and means of linking books with listeners' interests and are experimenting with methods of broadcasting proof that books are vital to modern living.

That broadcasters and librarians are today working together on common problems is largely due to the vision and persistent efforts of three members of the headquarters staff of the American Library Association in Chicago—Carl H. Milam*, John Chancellor†, and Beatrice Sawyer Rossell‡. These library leaders, on the one hand, have convinced broadcasting officials that libraries are a force in the educational world and may be used to promote intelligent follow-up of educational programs on the air; and, on the other hand, they have steadily encouraged library workers to experiment in radio programs and to build friendly relations with their local radio stations.

Always working behind the scenes through interviews and conferences with leaders in education and radio, these three A. L. A. officers work also through the Library Radio Committee, made up of A. L. A. members from libraries in various parts of the country. Under their guidance, the various radio committees have struggled through the early years of educational work in radio, each committee chairman seeking to use the work of the former committee as a stepping-stone to further progress.

For the past five years the chairman of this Library Radio Committee has been an ardent radio enthusiast, Faith Holmes Hyers of Los Angeles, California, listed in the 1939 American Women for her work in journalism, library publicity and radio. As publicist of the Los Angeles Library since 1925, Mrs. Hyers has tried many ways of making known the services of libraries, and has found the radio one of the most effective. In the fifth year of chairmanship of the Library Radio Committee, she has written a summary and criticism of the place the library has taken in radio programs, which she calls The Library and the Radio.††

Reviewing The Library and the Radio, Helen E. Haines, literary critic and author of Living with Books, has said:

Problems, difficulties, technical details of library-radio relationship are many and varied. Mrs. Hyers touches them all, briefly and sensibly, and covers also points of professional technique, ethics of broadcasting, requirements of effective speaking, preparation of scripts, and the many different forms for programs, from the straight talk to the panel or round-table discussion and the dramatization of a book or topic—with a warning against amateur preparation of dramatic scripts.

The author herself claims that her book traces the merest beginnings of what librarians may do in the field of radio-education, both by cooperation with outstanding radio programs and by experimenting in book and library-service talks.

"By recording how comparatively little has been accomplished, I hoped to challenge librarians and educators into new experiments," Mrs. Hyers states. "For this new radio dimension has possibilities of imaginative and creative work, and stimulation of thought that beckon to the pioneer who has faith in his medium."

"The book broadcast should stir the reader to something more than listening—should inspire him to read another book, to plant a garden, to become a better parent, a more intelligent student, a citizen of broader horizons, because the book sets in motion activities of mind or body. And we know we have a great inertia to overcome before listening leads to doing something about it. But who can say how many times a book broadcast has accomplished this? Perhaps, too, it has served some purpose if it has merely entertained or amused or given an iota of the author's message to anyone who has neither time nor opportunity to read the book.

"Hand in hand with our development of the technique of book broadcasts should go intelligent cooperation with the builders of such superb programs as 'America's Town Meeting of the Air,' 'Americans All—Immigrants All,' 'Americans at Work,' 'Great Plays,' 'Campbell Playhouse,' the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Metropolitan Opera House programs, 'The School of the Air,' and the many excellent news commentaries. Librarians can do much toward making their readers acquainted with these programs, stimulating a continued interest in each series by displaying bulletins and providing books as well as the printed information furnished by the networks. Librarians in all parts of the country are awakening to this opportunity of 'tuning in' to education on the air, and linking this interest with reading and library informational services.

"Libraries are also experimenting with 'listening-rooms,' where such programs as 'Great Plays' or 'America's Town Meeting of the Air' or symphony concerts may be heard in the library, with discussion before and after the programs, and books, plays or music displayed for borrowing. But the American public prefers to tune in on the home radio (each member of the family often has his own dial), and these groups do not gain much in numbers.

"An encouraging sign of the recognition of librarians in educational program-building," Mrs. Hyers continues, "is the increasing frequency with which library speakers are invited to take part in radio forums, art and music talks, or the more popular style of presentation, such as a well-liked Los Angeles program called 'Meet Some People.'

"And that, perhaps, is all we shall ask as librarians; to travel along in whatever directions radio entertainment and radio-education may take so that we, too, may be invited by radio hosts to 'meet some people.'"

THE A. L. A. has been invaluable in aiding the listening-audience to more fully appreciate such a program as the "Great Plays" series, which, during the past season, from October 15 to May 7, has been presented every Sunday afternoon on the Blue network of NBC. These productions, which were primarily planned to trace the development of drama from the sunrise performances in ancient Greece down to the contemporary theater, received enthusiastic response after each broadcast. A nation-wide committee, whose membership in each state includes teachers of drama in college and high school, school officials, officers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Little Theater organizations conducted study courses relative to the play preceding each broadcast.

Last spring, after the initial series had shown that there was a popular demand for broadcasts of this type, a conference was arranged with John Chancellor, adult-education specialist of the A. L. A., and Beatrice Sawyer Rossell, editor of the A. L. A. Bulletin. Both were keenly interested in the series of "Great Plays" outlined for the 1938-1939 season and offered to assist in every way possible to make the series known to librarians and patrons of public, school and college libraries.

At the Kansas City conference of the A. L. A. in June, 1938, plans for the series were discussed with members of the A. L. A. Library Radio Committee. Immediately after the conference, at Mrs. Rossell's request, Mrs. Hyers, chairman of the committee, announced the "Great Plays" series in the A. L. A. Bulletin, and informed librarians that before the series began in October, the National Broadcasting Company would have available for librarians and teachers a study-manual giving complete information about the author and play, together with side-lights on the period in which the play was written and information about the theater in which the production was staged. Mrs. Hyers also announced a bibliography which would help librarians to provide readers with books bearing on the play and period.

NBC's Blevins Davis will address the librarians' convention in San Francisco on Wednesday, June 21

The National Broadcasting Company, with the assistance of the A. L. A.'s mailing-lists, sent manuals and reading-lists to approximately eight thousand public, college, university and normal school libraries and all state and provincial library agencies. Similar aids were also sent high-school libraries. The point of working months in advance with the A. L. A. and its members was, of course, to prepare librarians for probable requests from radio listeners who might want to read the plays to which they had listened, to make it possible for libraries to build up their play collections well in advance of the broadcasts, and to feature appropriate reading in connection with play announcements. On each broadcast of "Great Plays," the announcer stated: "Consult your local library for reading material on the remaining 'Great Plays' of the series." The radio audience in many communities throughout the country thus has had reading service in connection with the dramas which would have otherwise been impossible.

NBC and A. L. A. staff members are looking forward to continued cooperation in 1939-1940 to make another series of "Great Plays" a success.

NBC's schedule of broadcasts from the A. L. A. convention follows. For further details refer to "This Week's Programs," pages 20 to 36.

BOYS TOWN'S GIFT TO RADIO

BY

LORRAINE THOMAS

Father Flanagan of Boys Town knows his boys. Left: Jimmy Skiles convinced Father Flanagan he was cut out for jazz

Father Flanagan suggested violin; Jimmy Skiles held out for hot music; so a Boys Towner became Horace Heidt's trombonist

SPENCER TRACY, Father Flanagan and I walked about the grounds of Boys Town, the famous little township set up in Nebraska by a kindly priest for homeless and abandoned boys of all races, creeds, colors. Tracy was there to talk over details of the sequel Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is making to its popular picture, "Boys Town."

"The sequel will deal with Father Flanagan and his boys who have gone out into the world and made good," Spencer was saying. Then he was talking to me. "You know, almost every boy who has passed through this place in the past twenty-five years has made good in some field."

I turned to Father Flanagan.

"Have any of your boys made good in radio, Father?"

He grinned sheepishly.

"Yes, we have one case I particularly remember because—" here his face turned a beet red—"I almost ruined one of the hottest trombonists in the country by trying to make a violinist of him. Fortunately, he knew what he wanted and today he's playing with Horace Heidt's Brigadiers."

Jimmy Skiles had music in his bones.

The day they left him—homeless, orphaned, alone—in Father Flanagan's office back in the fall of 1921, the twelve-year-old youngster stood shifting from one foot to the other as Father Flanagan talked to him, trying to find out what the lad liked, what classes he should take, what trade training. The mention of music made the lad's dark eyes light up.

"I wanta play music, Father, like my mother played. She could sure tickle the ivories."

Father Flanagan smiled as he recalled the youth—dark, with a sensitive, expressive face that mirrored his emotions. Almost every boy who entered Boys Town at that time wanted to join the band, Father Flanagan knew, because the band toured the countryside each summer with a roadshow. The show was designed to show the work at Boys Town and, at the same time, raise funds to carry on that work. But this lad was different. The love of music was inbred in him, a part of him. Under questioning, he talked familiarly of the classics.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Jimmy," Father Flanagan said. "I'll get you a violin and see that you get to Omaha for lessons. I'm afraid our bandmaster here won't be able to give you the sort of instruction you need."

"Oh, but he does, sir. I've already talked to Dan Desdunes, and he says he needs a saxophonist for the band and he wants me to learn."

Here were complications. Dan Desdunes, the Negro bandmaster, had already talked with the youth, had implanted a seed. Really, the seed was already there. Jimmy Skiles had music in his bones, but it was "hot" music. Father Flanagan argued for a while—the secret of his success with boys is his refusal to be arbitrary in his treatment of them—but in the end, Jimmy and Dan Desdunes had their way.

ALL that winter Dan worked with the youngster, and Jimmy—an apt pupil—soon outstripped his teacher. As Father Flanagan would pause outside the doors of the rehearsal-room, the weird moaning of the saxophone would assail his ears and then Dan's inevitable, "Dat's sure hot, boy! Dat'll burn 'em down."

By the time spring came, and the show was ready to take to the road in its tinselled, horse-drawn wagons, Jimmy was able to play almost any wind instrument in the band. He loved the road. There was a gusto, a love of life about him that made him love crowds, and crowds, sensing this, loved Jimmy. He had worked up a solo number which he did on the saxophone, trumpet and trombone which was a show-stopper.

AFTER every tour, Father Flanagan was flooded with letters from people who had heard Jimmy and wanted to adopt him. Usually these adoptions were completed when investigation showed that everything was all right, for Father Flanagan knew that the individual home was better for a boy than an institution. But in Jimmy's case, he did not insist. Jimmy cried whenever the possibility of leaving Boys Town came up. So he stayed on at Boys Town for five years, becoming, with each passing month, a better musician, a more versatile performer. Then, in 1927, he came to Father Flanagan.

"Father, I'm going to leave Boys Town now. I'm going east, where they have good bands, and I'm going to

Schedule Changes for June 17 to June 23

(Consult the Program Listings for Your Local Station)

NEW PROGRAMS

"Fred Waring in Pleasure Time" (Chesterfield Cigarettes) makes its debut on the NBC network Monday, June 19, at 7:00 p.m. PST (8:00 MST). This program features Fred Waring's huge dance band with soloists and vocal groups. It will be heard five times weekly, Monday through Friday.

"Musical Playhouse" (Gulf Oil) will be premiered Sunday, June 11, at 3:30 p.m. PST (4:30 MST). Erno Rapee, Jane Froman, vocalist, and Jan Peerce, tenor, are going to head the new gala musical revue as the summer replacement for "Screen Guild Show." Except for a few guest appearances together, this show will be the first time Erno Rapee, Jane Froman and Jan Peerce have been starred in the same show. Because of their versatility, the programs to be aired in the following weeks will cover a large field of musical presentations.

"Summer Hour" (Ford Motor Company), a new summer program replacing the "Sunday Evening Hour," begins Sunday, June 11, at 5:00 p.m. PST (6:00 MST). The program will star James Melton, Francis White and Don Voorhees conducting a 36-piece orchestra. In addition to the singing and music of the members of the regular cast, the broadcast will feature a guest vocalist each week.

PROGRAM CHANGES

"Arch Oboler's Plays," usually heard on Saturdays at 6:00 p.m. PST (7:00 MST), moved to 5:30 p.m. PST (6:30 MST) on the same day.
"Kraft Music Hall," Bing Crosby, singer and m.c. on this program, will take his vacation from the air beginning with the June 22 program. Bob Burns will take over the duties of m.c. and the rest of the personnel will remain the same. Bing Crosby will return in the fall.

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL

It is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections
No MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet when using an F & H Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Anyone can connect it in a moment's time to the radio set—occupies only 1 1/2 inch by 4 inch space behind the set, yet enables your radio to operate without an aerial and tune in stations over the entire broadcast band, frequencies and short wave channels.

ELIMINATE THE AERIAL FOR GOOD
Attach this unit to your radio—make your set complete in itself—forget aerial wires and troubles—move your set anywhere—no more roof climbing, unsightly lead-in or aerial wires.

NOT NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED
On the market five years, 100,000 customers in U.S. and foreign countries.
In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception. Cannot harm set—Easily connected to any radio, including radios having no ground or radios for doublet aerial. Note: It will not operate on battery or automobile radios.

5 DAYS TRIAL Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.00 plus a few pennies postage on delivery. If not entirely satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.

JUST MAIL THIS COUPON
F & H Radio Laboratories, Dept. 88, Fargo, N. Dak.
Send F & H Capacity Aerial. Will pay postman $1 plus few cent postage. If not pleased will return with in 5 days for $1 refund. Check here  if sending $1 with order—thus saving postage cost—same refund guaranteed. Check here  if interested in dealer's proposition.

NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY..... STATE.....

Davenport, Ia. Received your Radio Aerial Eliminator and it sure works fine. Also works swell on Short Wave band. Wish I had found it long ago. Signed:.....

WHAT USERS SAY
LaPorte, Tex. After using the Capacity Aerial Eliminator over a year on my 1935 small 7 tube set can say it brings in reception with fine volume and clarity; pulling in stations from Japan, Europe, South America, and broadcast stations from all over the U. S. Efficiency proven. I took down my old outside aerial. Signed:.....

"Men Behind the Stars"

The "Men Behind the Stars" program of June 23 will treat in discussion and dramatization interesting facts relating to the star constellation known as the winged horse, or Pegasus. This star group may be sighted just over the east point of the horizon after midnight in June. Mythologically, Pegasus is associated with Perseus' rescue of Andromeda, who is chained to the shore of Aethiopia. This snow-white horse is supposed to have sprung from the blood of Medusa when Perseus severed her head.

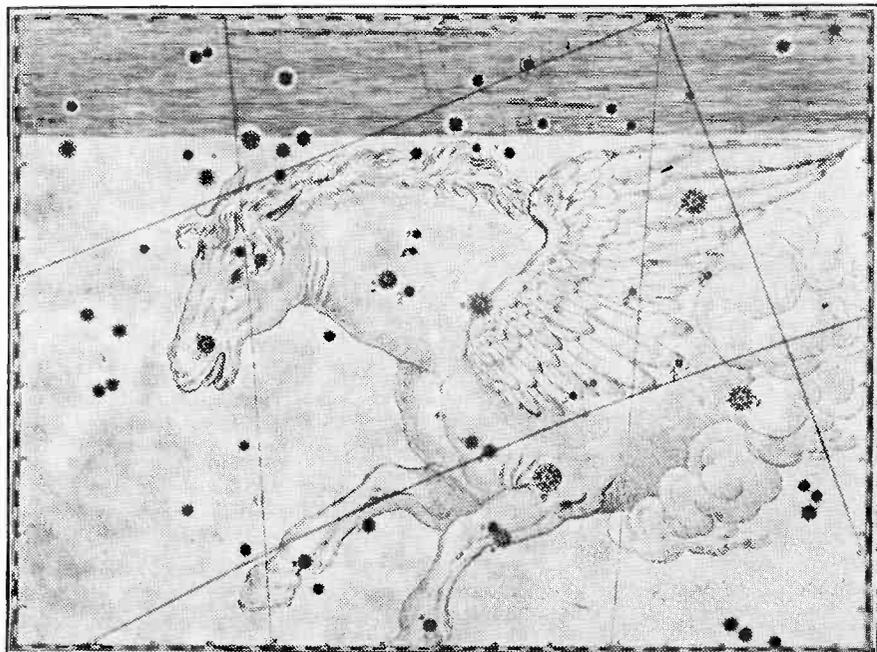

We generally associate this star group with the Great Square, a large region in the sky with bright stars at its corners and nearly empty within. One of the stars of the square, however, is borrowed from Andromeda for the occasion. This is the one near the clouds from which Pegasus seems to be emerging.

The various lines crossing the picture are the coordinate circles of the sky, to which star positions are referred as we refer terrestrial places to longitude and latitude.

*That poetic steed,
 With beamy mane, whose hoof struck
 out from earth,
 The fount of Hippocrene.*

—Bryant's "The Constellations"
 "Men Behind the Stars" may be heard Fridays over CBS at:
 EDT 5:45 p.m. — EST 4:45 p.m.
 CDT 4:45 p.m. — CST 3:45 p.m.

End of Friday Programs

On Short Waves: Edited by Chas. A. Morrison

President, International DX'ers Alliance

Times given are EDT. For EST and CDT subtract 1 hour; CST, 2 hours; MST, 3 hours; PST, 4 hours.

IMPORTANT commencement broadcasts will feature this week's programs over international station W1XAL of Boston, Mass. Commencement exercises of Princeton University, including the baccalaureate address by Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University, and music by the University Chapel Choir will be heard on Sunday, June 18, at 11 a.m. EDT, on frequencies of 11.79 or 15.13 megs. On the same day at 8:30 p.m. EDT, the choral singing by the Princeton University Chapel Choir of fifty voices, assembled on the Princeton campus, will be broadcast on frequencies of 11.73 or 6.04 megs. . . . An entirely musical commencement, during which New England Conservatory of Music students will play concertos with the conservatory orchestra, and soloists of the graduating class will be heard, will be broadcast on Tuesday, June 20, at 2 p.m. EDT, over W1XAL, on either 6.04 or 11.73 megs. . . . The Harvard Alumni Association Meeting, with Hugh McK. Landon, president of the association, as the speaker, will be broadcast from Cambridge, on Thursday, June 22, at 2 p.m. EDT, over the same station and on the same frequencies.

Continuing the interesting travelog series, describing features of the two Fairs, broadcast on Mondays at 5:30 p.m. EDT, over international stations W2XAD (15.33) and W2XAF (9.53) of Schenectady, New York, this week's broadcast will feature fine arts, giving the sources of the great paintings and sculpture sent to both Fairs from all over the world. New, creative work, especially mammoth sculptures and murals, at both Fairs are to be covered.

Further information concerning the experimental transmissions of the new Swiss Short-Wave Station Schwarzenburg, which have already begun, are furnished by Rudolph Kure of Cincinnati, Ohio, who states that the transmitter is testing during different hours of the day on 17.784, 11.865, 15.305 and 9.535 megs. The regular Swiss program for North America, heard Mondays from 7:45 to 9:15 p.m. EDT, is being broadcast by the new station on a frequency of 9.535 megs. Swiss authorities are very anxious to receive reports on the Schwarzenburg transmissions and all letters should be addressed to Schweizerische Rundspruch-Gesellschaft, Neuengasse 30, Berne, Switzerland.

Latest revised schedules for the Netherlands short-wave PHOHI-stations PHI and PCJ, are as follows: PHI operates on 17.77 megs, Sundays from 7:10 to 10:35 a.m.; Mondays and Thursdays, from 8:10 to 9:30 a.m., and on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from 8:10 to 9:15 a.m.; Tuesdays, from 3 to 4:30 a.m., and on Wednesdays from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; on 9.59 megs, Sundays from 8:15 to 9:15 and 9:25 to 10:25 p.m.; Tuesdays, from 2:45 to 4:30 and from 8 to 11:15 p.m.; Wednesdays, from 8:15 to 9:15 and from 9:25 to 9:40 p.m., and on Fridays, from 9 to 10 p.m. EDT.

Contrary to theory that television programs can be received only 40 or 50 miles from the transmitting station, General Electric engineers in Schenectady, New York, picked up the complete two-hour program telecast by NBC from the Empire State Building on Friday night. Both picture and voice were received exceptionally well, despite the fact that airline distance to the transmitter was 130 miles and the receiver, an ordinary production model, was located approximately 8,000 feet below the "line of sight." The reception location was in the Helderberg mountains near the site of General Electric's new television station which is under construction. The temporary diamond-shaped directive antenna was suspended about 40 feet above the ground.

As an example of the practical use to which ultra-high-frequency stations can be put, Mrs. Pauline Winner, the co-ordinator of radio activities for the Board of Education of Los Angeles, writes that this organization recently sponsored an educational program describing the very worthy aims and ideals of Metropolitan Continuation High School in Los Angeles, over CBS short-wave outlet W6XDA (38.6) of that city. The principal of the school and a group of seven senior students participated in this unusual broadcast.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 20. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

Solution to Puzzle Given Last Week

first appearance on the air as guest of columnist Ed Sullivan, he almost was forgotten until May of 1932, when Canada Dry sponsored him. He began studying radio technique and mastered it slowly.

Chevrolet and General Tires each gave him a job, but it was not until the fall of 1934, when Jell-O hired him, that he hit his stride. General Foods, makers of Jell-O, puts $25,000 a week on the line to keep Brother Benny oiled. America spends $30,000 a week in electric current to hear him! And folks eat Jell-O, and that great god Sales puffs and huffs and the dividends tinkle. It's one of the miracles of America.

There are a lot of funny men in the world, and what has Benny got that they haven't got? Genius!

Jack knows human nature and he knows people want to laugh at a fellow, not with him. He knows the public will always laugh at a cocky smart Aleck who gets it in the neck. So he's the smart Aleck. He doesn't hog his show. He's the slicker who dives into the pool to show off—and bumps his head. He's the cock-of-the-walk who struts along and slips on a banana peel. You are glad to see him fall, yet you feel sort of sorry for him. It might have been you. It's more than comedy; it's life disguised with grease-paint.

Benny plants his jokes so expertly that a child can get them, and he nurses them to the last drop of laugh-

MUSICAL GIANT: BRAHMS

they place a new and better-fitting pair of trousers in his room. In the morning he appears before the company with the gift garment astonishingly abbreviated—he has snipped off several inches with a scissors!

He takes long walks with his pal, Johann Strauss, and often says that he wishes he, instead of the waltz king, had written the "Blue Danube." Another pet of his is Dvorak; "that fellow has more ideas than any of us." But he especially hates the music of Tschai-kowsky, Massenet and Bizet (whose oratorio, "Christus" he alludes to as "humbug"). Brahms remains steadfastly critical of his own works. "It is easy to compose," he points out, "but it is wonderfully hard to let the superfluous notes fall under the table."

By 1895 he is one of the three towering B's—Bach and Beethoven being the two others. Honors galore shower upon him. But then the clouds begin to lengthen. He goes to Bonn for Clara's funeral, is altogether shattered emotionally, catches cold during the interment and develops a severe jaundice. He visits Dr. Gruenberger, whose written record reads: "Herr Johannes Brahms, hepatitis hypertrophica maligna (malignant swelling of the liver)." The physician knows it is cancer but keeps the dread knowledge to himself, advising "no more of your favorite Chianti and voracious eating." But after some months Brahms realizes his doom and is defiant. He keeps on with his generous eating and drinking. Remonstrated with, he shouts, "Nonsense, what does it matter now?" His appearance is horrifying, dark-brownish complexion, emaciated cheeks, hair straggly, thick beard unkempt. Soon he takes to his bed. At half-past one on the morning of April 2 (1897) the doctor visits the dying man, suffering but cheerful.

"A glass of wine?"
 Brahms nods.
 It is poured from a bottle sent from the cellars of his friend, the Duke of Meiningen.

Brahms drinks off the wine in two great draughts and hoarsely says, "Ja, das ist schoen." (Yes, that is beautiful.) He falls asleep. At half-past eight Brahms wakes. His housekeeper goes to him. She relates: "He sat up and tried vainly to speak but couldn't. Great tears rolled down his wasted cheeks. Gazing wistfully at me, he sank back and drew his last breath."

And so the great heart stills and the fire of genius goes out. "The heir of Beethoven." Truly. So they buried him next to that sanctified hero in the Central Cemetery of Vienna.

BRAHMS BIBLIOGRAPHY

The most formal biographies of Brahms are by Max Kalbeck, Walter Niemann and Richard Specht. The most humorous, human and picturesque document is Robert Haven Schaufli's "The Unknown Brahms."

BOYS TOWN'S GIFT TO RADIO

make something of myself. But I'll never forget what you've done for me. I know that you don't like the idea of my playing jazz, but I hope I can show you that jazz isn't so bad some day.

Father Flanagan assured him that he wasn't against jazz, but he thought that Jimmy had really good music in him and might have become a great musician.

Jimmy Skiles walked out of the gates of Boys Town the next morning, as homeless and alone as when he had walked through them five years before. But it was a different Jimmy Skiles now from the one who had stood, as a lad of twelve, embarrassedly in Father Flanagan's office. He walked now with a confidence in himself and with a musical knowledge that would at least keep him from going hungry. And under his arm he carried a trombone, battered and nicked but, nevertheless, a trombone. It was more than just a trombone. It was a symbol of a man who believed in boys, of a man who believed in him, and who, the afternoon before, had gone into the city and purchased it for him at a pawn-shop.

Letters from Jimmy came frequently. He was playing with a band in Utica, N. Y., then with another band in Troy. At Buffalo he had his own trio, which played at a small restaurant. And then . . . he was going to New York. Horace Heidt had heard him over the radio, was giving him a tryout. He'd clicked.

A short time ago Horace Heidt was playing an engagement in Omaha, a scant ten miles from Boys Town. A young couple stood in the chapel at Boys Town with Father Flanagan. The Boys Town priest had just performed their marriage ceremony.

"I'll have to admit now that I was wrong about the type of music you should have studied, Jimmy," for the young groom was Jimmy Skiles.

"Oh, no," Jimmy replied. "I'd probably have been a much better jazz musician if I'd studied the classics as you wanted me to, Father." From the bandroom in the distance came the long, weird moaning of a saxophone. "That boy's sure hot," exclaimed Jimmy. "He'll burn 'em down."

MR. FAIRFAX

Mrs. Grace Barton, St. Louis, Mo.—Eddy Duchin was born April 1, 1909, in Cambridge, Mass. He is six feet one inch tall, has black hair and black eyes. He is a widower, has one son. His opening theme song is Chopin's "Nocturne in E Flat," and his closing theme is "Be My Lover." Durelle Alexander is the girl vocalist with his band, Stanley Worth is the male vocalist. Stanley also plays the saxophone and clarinet. Harry Campbell beats the drums and Horace Diaz is pianist.

JACK BENNY

ter. His timing is perfect. If you miss his gag, he'll work back around to it some night and slap you in the face with it.

He'll never tell a gag just for a gag's sake. Unless the gag, no matter how good it is, fits in, Jack won't touch it.

Benny is a writing-man's friend, and realizing a show is no better than its authors, he was among the first radio stars to pay his writers a good wage. He works four writers. His show is sold as a unit and he is responsible for all of his hired hands. Don Wilson, his announcer, Murry Bolen, production-man, and the various sound-effects men are employed directly by the agency, Young and Rubicam, that represents General Foods.

The agency pays Jack an estimated $15,000 a week for his show, of which he gets $10,000, minus the ten percent he pays his business manager.

Mary Livingstone's wage was not announced. But Phil Harris and his musicians get about $1,250 a week, Kenny Baker $750, his writers $2,000, and Andy Devine and stooges $1,000.

His pay-roll includes Mary, Kenny, Phil Harris, Rochester (the valet), Devine, Harry Baldwin (Jack's secretary), and Bill Morrow, Eddie Beloin, Hillary Marks (Mary's brother) and Sam Perrin, writers.

Morrow is an old-timer. Benny discovered Beloin in the wilds of Vermont.

Jack and his writers begin work on Sunday nights, immediately after his second broadcast. His first show is at 4 p.m., Pacific time, and his second 8:30, Pacific time. The minute the show is off, Benny and his boys meet on the studio stage and throw ideas at one another. Then they go home, or somewhere. The writers get together on Monday and do something, and on Tuesday they have a rough draft of the script. Benny and his trained seals work on the script Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, polishing and priming it. They knock off Friday, and on Saturday the entire cast gets together and Jack reads the script. All suggestions are gladly received. If Kenny Baker suggests he can do a line better such and such a way, he's given a chance to prove it. The cast rehearses Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. After the first broadcast, Jack often changes his lines a bit for his rebroadcast. That produces spontaneous laughter, even from his cast, and that's what Benny wants.

He takes run-of-the-mill happenings and coaches humor out of them. And he's lightning when it comes to spotting humor. Mary worries about pronunciation. Jack let her call "Popeye," the spinach man, "Poopeye." For some reason, it's funny. And if she happens to slip and call him "Bloop-eye," so what? It's funnier.

Read James Street's third and concluding article about the startling life of Jack Benny in next week's issue.

Jack Benny may be heard Sunday night on NBC at:

7:00 p.m. EDT — 6:00 p.m. EST
 6:00 p.m. CDT — 5:00 p.m. CST
