Painted hobgoblins are what stars in new television make-up look like to studio audiences

OUT Hollywood way, where Don Lee, Jr., has been quietly putting television shows on the air for a good many years, they are learning things about the do's and don't's of the business. Make-up, for example, must be different. Max Factor, Jr., who probably knows more about make-up than anyone else in America, tells us that television programs probably won't be very popular with studio audiences because the actors will look too terrible. We asked Miss Elaine Shepard, an actress, to demonstrate the new make-up, and the result is obvious across the page. White paint is used around the eyes, the nose, and the hollows of the throat. Lips are blue-black. The cheeks are overlaid with a bluish powdering. Which reminds us to say that television is not to be the bouncing baby prodigy that some folks expected last year. A recent warning statement issued by the radio manufacturers themselves says they would like to extend television service to the entire country. "But it will be a long time before such a reality can be achieved." Regarding the radio sets now in our homes, television "will not render the modern radio receiver obsolete. It will be a different type of service." So tie up with whatever you can get today. Television is in a few cities, but so are tall buildings—and the rest of our country is getting along very well without them.

Secret Broadcasts: The little genius of Germany's propaganda machine is in trouble. His own pet idea is being used against him. It was Goebbels who turned Germany's radio stations into the mighty forces which helped forge the Nazi state. It was his voice plus that of Hitler which drummed into millions of willing minds the "Supreme Germany" philosophy. For a long while no other speaker challenged him or dared to present other ideas. But some rebellious geniuses are still alive within the borders of the greater German state and they are now using radio to reply. Their stations are amazingly compact. They are installed in abandoned barns, for instance, near a big city. They are hooked up so that a clock starts them and stops them. An automatic phonograph-record player places record after record on the air, each telling Germans to resist Hitler, to throw out the Nazis. All this with no human being within miles. When the police trace the broadcasts, they find nothing but some tubes and machines. Not once have they captured a man. Of course they wreck the station, but by the time it is out of commission the rebels are operating on another wave-length in another community. Listeners are learning to tune to out-of-the-way dial spots in order to hear the truth about their leaders. It is quite possible that this new use of radio may dethrone the leader who was created by radio.

of England was a great honor for Kate Smith. It is also a great honor for RADIO GUIDE to have the pleasure of presenting her own exclusive story of her visit in the White House. Readers will enjoy "My Visit with Their Majesties," which is on page 7 in this issue. Kate Smith's record as an entertainer is paralleled only by her record as a human being. That quality of "God Bless America": The song Kate Smith sings almost every week is a prayer which we hope may find further answer. We hope, however, that her listeners will not forget that God has already blessed America in great abundance. In the matter of radios, for instance, we have more broadcasting sets and more broadcast programs than all the rest of the world combined. Quoting from government figures, our land contains six percent of the world's area and seven percent of its peoples. But we have eighty percent of the world's telephones and telegraphs, we run eighty percent of all the automobiles in the world, we operate fifty-three percent of the railroads. Our seven percent population consumes forty-eight percent of the world's coffee, seventy-two percent of its silk, fifty-three percent of its sugar. We own more than fifty percent of the world's oil, sixty percent of wheat and cotton. The purchasing power of over 130,000,000 people is more than that of the 500,000,000 people in Europe, and much more than the 1,000,000,000 people in Asia. We even have and use ninety-five percent of all the bathtubs in the world. God has already blessed America.

The U. S. Capitol

One of the straighter thinkers among educators who utilize the air is Dr. James R. Angell of NBC. A matter of concern to all of us is the use of radio so that foreign isms shall not intrude on the American democratic scene. He writes us as follows: "Radio's part in this situation is not merely a passive one. It must do much more than merely make its facilities available to speakers of differing viewpoints. It must attempt to help its listeners obtain better understanding of the vital questions of the day through programs of background information, through non-editorial presentation of news, through obtaining the most authoritative speakers and information that are available. As the radio audience gains more information, then it will become better fitted to weigh for itself the merits and demerits of arguments presented." Radio, the people's servant, can serve well if it will live up to the principles and responsibility Dr. Angell outlines.

Your Pardon: On page 13 of this publication for the week ending June 10 there appeared a series of photographs. A check by the editor reveals that the inventions therein were patterned after devices originally created by Russell E. Oakes of Waukesha, Wisconsin, to whom proper credit is now given. We regret that a misunderstanding caused us to attribute them to Mr. Ransom Sherman.

Tale of the Tarheel whose tomfoolery led him to radio fame and fortune. His name—
Professor Kay Kyser

By

James Street

—Gene Lester

Kay Kyser, graduate of the University of North Carolina, today conducts his own "College of Musical Knowledge" (NBC, Wed.) as a part of his popular band broadcasts

FOR the next two lessons, our specimen for study and observation is a Tarheel of the genus Ridge Runner, which is somewhere about midway between a Hill Billy and a Mullet Chaser and slightly up the ladder of evolution from a Swamp Bug. And to prevent a shower of protests from the Swamp Bugs at the seemingly deliberate slur, I hasten to boast that I am a Swamp Bug and, with my tribe of Swamp Rats and Peckerwoods and all other creatures reared in the lowlands, really believe that Swamp Bugs are a jump up the scale from Ridge Runners. But the Swamp Bugs can afford to be generous this week with this Tarheel Ridge Runner. After all, he's our guest for examination.

He is afflicted with an epidemic of names—James King Kern Kyser—and, anchored to such a chain of K's, it's easy to understand why they call him Kay, although his folks call him James. It's a wonder somebody didn't call him Klux back in the Old North State. Maybe somebody did. He calls himself Professor Kyser and behaves as a freshman. Actually, however, Mr. Kyser is a sensitive student of his business, an intelligent southerner, vintage of 1906, and a graduate of one of the really great universities of the nation, University of North Carolina.

Mr. Kyser drives a Model T jalopy, the first car he ever owned. There's an anchor on the running-board. The car's name is Passion because, the professor says, "it heats up so quick." That's almost the sub-freshman touch, but Mr.

—Bruce Bailey

Kyser is a showman and Passion is a great prop. Passion looks swell in pictures and other publicity riggings. In fact, Passion is swell anywhere.

Mr. Kyser smokes nickel cigars and brags about it. He plugs Lucky Strike cigarettes, but the professor, as democratic as hash, says, "I like nickel cigars. I'm always gonna like nickel cigars. I like hominy grits. Even if I get to be a millionaire, I'm gonna like hominy grits. I won't change over to caviar just because I've got money."

Now, this department has no grudge against "hominy" grits. It and sidemeat make an excellent daily diet if a fellow enjoys a nice quiet siege of pellagra. It is made of corn, the foundation of many excellent things, but Mr. Kyser, being a milk-drinker, wouldn't know anything about that, even though he is a Tarheel and of the Ridge Runners who never confined corn wholly to the prosaic task of, with the aid of lye, converting itself into "hominy" grits, which are simply swollen bits of corn that leave the stomach in the same shape. If Mr. Kyser goes very far beneath the Smith and Wesson line and insists upon calling them "hominy" grits, he will be rebuked. They are just grits and, if you are very hungry, they can be taken twice daily with ham gravy. But any man who says grits are better than caviar is either in the show business or is running for office and trying to kid the Peckerwood vote. But, after all, Mr. Kyser is a North Carolinian, which has given us many things, including Mr. Buncombe, for whom a county down there is named. Mr. Buncombe gave us a word for it. There is positively no connection between Mr. Kyser and Mr. Buncombe. But we suggest that when Mr. Kyser talks with northern press-agents and reporters about the glories of nickel cigars and grits, he's haunting the memory of the lamented Brother Buncombe and is pulling the legs of the damyanks, which, although it's fun, is not a test worthy of the renowned professor's skill.

Mr. Kyser was born in Rocky Mount, and don't ever trim it to Rocky Mt. It's one of those pleasant, proud southern towns where the folks have beaten their plowshares into spindles and resent being called the nation's economic problem children.

But James King Kern Kyser was a problem child. This department contends that any man who likes grits better than caviar still is. His mother, Mrs. Paul B. Kyser, is seventy-five and, ac-ording to the New York reporters who fake cynicism and love sentiment, is just about the most remarkable lady who ever held the pack at bay in an interview. From her the boys really got some information about James King Kern, so forth.

She and her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Noell, came to town recently, watched her boy dash here and yonder, and reckoned "the Lord didn't intend anyone, bird or chicken, to live at the pace James sets for himself. One of these days he's going to fly apart."

Then she recalled that it was back on June 18, 1906, that she looked at James and said, "You're a strange-looking baby; wonder what kind of a druggist you'll make."

BEING druggists was a habit with the Kysers, and it just never entered the mother's head that James wouldn't follow the family tradition. His father, Paul Kyser, was a good druggist. A druggist in a town like Rocky Mount is not just a pill-roller. He's an institution. He must be a bit of a doctor, lawyer, preacher, philosopher and a wizard of a financier, for folks hate to take medicine almost as badly as they hate to pay for it.

Mrs. Kyser had read pharmacy books to her nearly blind husband, and they had taken the state exams together. He got the best mark ever made in the state and she was only a whisker behind him. So they reckoned James would follow suit.

"I'm seventy-five," said Mrs. Kyser. "I don't know why I confess it. I could say I am seventy or sixty-nine. There's no record of my birth. The family Bible was burned.

"James was a cut-up as a boy. He was into everything, always breaking the neighbors' windows and such. One day I got him to say a prayer in the hope he would turn over a new leaf. He asked the Lord to make him a good boy and stop the wind from blowing the branches of a tree, outside his room, against the wall and scaring him. Then he got up and lammed his sister, Virginia, in the stomach because she had snickered at him."

"I got even, though," said Virginia, who is Mrs. W. C. Noell. "Once I went away on a vacation and was just beginning to have fun when mother wired for me to come home and look after James. When I got back he was in bed and nobody could make him take any medicine. I found a handful of change under his pillow, bribe money from mother. James took one look at me and opened his mouth. I poured the medicine down.

"Mother had the babies, but I reared them. James hated liver."

"That's right," James cut in. "But if I didn't eat it, Virginia would whale the daylight out of me."

"One day when we had liver," Virginia laughed, "James looked at it and told me, 'All right, Virginia, let's go out to the woodshed and get it over

NEW YORK.—Many radio listeners were plenty burned when "Joyce Jordan, Girl Interne" left the air without any advance notice while it was in the midst of an interesting sequence. Letters of complaint poured into CBS and also this desk, which was evidence enough to prove the popularity of the program. A new sponsor brings the serial back to the airlines starting next Monday at noon EDT, and it will be heard five times weekly . . . Another avalanche of letters poured into NBC when they took Ted Malone and his "Between the Bookends" program off the regular schedules, so this popular show will also return on Monday. Your reporter is sure that it will make at least two of his listeners very happy. One is Mrs. K. M. of Atlanta, and another K. M., who listens regularly from her home in Trinidad.

"For Men Only" has changed its title and is now known as "George Jessel's Celebrity Program."

Bert Parks joins the Benny Goodman show as master of ceremonies when the swing band moves over to NBC starting July 8 . . . John Gunther, famous war correspondent and writer of "Inside Europe" and that new book, "Inside Asia," is now across the seas working for NBC as a roving reporter. He will be heard from many European points . . . Ernest Cutting, former NBC talent-scout and director of auditions, has opened an office of his own, where he will continue his work as free-lance talent-scout and advisor . . . Another quiz show may be added to the networks featuring Barbara Weeks, star of "Her Honor, Nancy James" . . . According to reports, very few television sets are being purchased in the New York department stores. The public seems to be waiting for further developments.

Purely Personal

The stork left a baby girl weighing eight pounds and ten ounces at the home of Lebert Lombardo. They've named her Susan Ann . . . CBS announcer John Allen Wolf passed cigars around when a boy arrived at his house recently. Eugene Kendrick Wolf weighs almost eight pounds . . . NBC announcer Jack Fraser will be celebrating—and for the same reason—almost any day now . . . Ditto for Patti Pickens, one of the famous Pickens Sisters, who will become a mother sometime in August . . . Frank Lovejoy, actor on "Gang Busters" and other airshows, married Frances Williams, singing star at Billy Rose's Aquacade.

Reminders: When Tommy Dorsey opened recently at the Roof Garden of the Hotel Pennsylvania, Dave Rubinoff was on hand, looking more like the old Rubinoff now, but insisting his long illness was no fun . . . Baritone George Griffin is a frequent companion of Bob Ripley's niece-secretary, Louise Ripley . . . John J. Anthony became a godfather on Father's Day to fifty children. The above personalities are pictured on this page . . . Tin Pan Alley was shocked when they learned that bandleader Chick Webb died after an operation. Few people were aware of his illness.

While I was having lunch in the restaurant in the CBS building the other day, Martin Gable (Dr. Wayne of "Big Sister") walked in, pulled out his wallet and handed announcer Dan Seymour some money. It seems that these two boys lunched together the day before and Seymour said he got a tip on a horse but didn't know where to make a bet. Gable said, "I'll take your bet," and Dan gave Martin two dollars. The horse won, paying 6 to 1, and Gable had to fork over twelve dollars. He has taken plenty of razzing ever since . . . Announcer Kelvin Keech has his breakfast at the corner drug store near his home every morning and he doesn't finish drinking his coffee until he has completed his daily cross-word puzzle.

Most of Kay Kyser's bandmen got a lucky break when they had to move to California. They were able to sub-lease their apartments to some of the boys in Jan Garber's crew who just arrived in New York with their families . . . Ran into Lew Lehr, that man who thinks "Monkeys is the cwaziest people," and he told me he had just recently moved into his new house in King's Point, Long Island, but that he wasn't afraid of too many visitors moving in on him during the World's Fair. He says he has double protection—a lookout tower which commands a view of the countryside and an automatic contrivance on his front gate which causes a "smallpox" sign to drop down on his front door when the gate is opened.

Alice Frost will not be heard on the "Big Sister" serial for the next couple of weeks. She's vacationing in New Hampshire with her husband . . . Jim "Ask-It-Basket" McWilliams spends most of his time between broadcasts at his home in Virginia Beach—the lucky guy . . . On Father's Day, Johnny Kaonohi Pineapple, of the Phil Baker show, called his father in Hawaii, the call costing him fifteen dollars, which he tells me is the exact amount his dad gave him when he left his native island ten years ago . . . When Bob Trout left his native land to fly the Atlantic aboard the American Clipper for CBS, his wife forgot to get him a Portuguese visa, so when they landed in Lisbon, Mr. Trout was placed under arrest and was guarded by two policemen for the twenty-four hours the Clipper remained there. Announcer George Hicks, who made the same trip for NBC, will get back home in time to start his annual vacation.

Behind the Scenes

I was in good company the night I appeared on the Kate Smith program to present the "Songbird of the South" with RADIO GUIDE's plaque for being voted radio's outstanding femme singer of popular songs. Being on the same program with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave me an added thrill. The first lady of the land is indeed a very charming person, as everyone backstage that night will agree. When she walked in she greeted everyone, including the musicians in the band. It's a shame the program wasn't televised so that you could have seen the gorgeous orchids she was wearing. There was standing room only for both programs, which is something unusual, as they seldom permit standing in the studios.

When Abbott & Costello walked in they had the new issue of RADIO GUIDE in their hands and were showing everyone they finished in the first ten in the list of comedians in the Star of Stars Poll, and the only ones among them that didn't have a program of their own. Announcer Andre Baruch came in holding a handkerchief over his right eye. A piece of dirt flew in it and it was so annoying he could hardly read his script during the program. Between his announcements, he kept washing it out with boric acid, but it didn't seem to help much, and as soon as the program went off the air he was on his way to the corner drug store to try to have the dirt removed.

Hollywood Showdown

By Evans Plummer

HOLLYWOOD.—If you've been worried for fear "Gone With the Wind" would blow itself onto the air as a dramatic serial, lay aside your cares. Mr. David O. Selznick, the movie-producer, assures your reporter that despite one breakfast-food maker's offer of $100,000 for the rights to microphone the ponderous tome daily for fifty-two weeks, and many other offers to grab off various members of the film's cast, he won't let 'em. He has nixed all sorts of schemes to use radio to promote the picture (at least until after it has been finished), and he won't ever allow Vivien Leigh, its Scarlett, to go on the air while his contract with her is in effect. He intends to make John Q. Public pay to see and hear Leigh and G. W. T. W.

Just when the customers may rush to the box-office isn't as problematical as it was several months ago. Now some twenty-six reels of G. W. T. W. have been filmed (nine minutes per reel) and, within the next three weeks, the final six reels of war scenes will be completed. When rough-cut and cut again, the picture will be sixteen reels long, will require three hours to run off for road-show audiences, and, so as to reduce their fidgets, an intermission is planned in the story right after the screening of the burning of Atlanta . . . (P. S.—After G. W. T. W. has been road-shown and first-run, your reporter wagers the air will be full of it—with the permission, cooperation and connivance of Mr. Selznick.)

Off Live Mikes

That new champion swing-band king should stop making cracks about disliking jitterbugs; in other words, quit biting the bacteria that are feeding him . . . "The Circle," resting after July 9, has been renewed for fall—only it will have a new day, a new time, a reduction to thirty minutes, and a new form. Maybe the renewal edition of it should be called "The Spot" . . . If you wondered June 18 about the hoarseness of Connie Bennett when she played opposite Don Ameche on the Chase and Sanborn Hour, it was because Connie was almost unable to go on the air because of laryngitis; Dr. Joel Pressman, husband of Claudette Colbert, applied emergency measures an hour before program time and saved the day.

"Professor" Kay Kyser collects $12,500 for a week's appearance at the San Francisco Fair—and, after all the bickering, the Musicians' Union has finally okayed his nice bread-and-butter gesture in behalf of the Golden Gate's Bal Tabarin owners, his first champions. Kyser will play there a week starting July 14 . . . It's whispered that "Big Town," in transcription form, will continue on the air this summer. Meantime, auditions are on to fill the void created by the resignation of Claire ("Lorelei") Trevor, winner of RADIO GUIDE's best-radio-actress star-poll award. When Burns and Allen return to Hollywood, they will bring with them a Zenith radio nurse as another weapon to thwart kidnapers!

Rom-Antics and Such . . .

Eddie Anderson, the colored comic "Rochester" of the Benny cast, who stole his every scene in the film "Man About Town," celebrated his screen success by wedding the beautiful high-brown gal he's been squiring places for the past year . . . Randolph Scott saw Dorothy Lamour off on the June 18 American Airlines eastbound sleeper; next morning she was greeted at the Fort Worth, Texas, airport by Herbie Kay. Business or reconciliation? . . . Which reminds your observer that Tony Martin and Alice Faye haven't been seen places together since his return.

Bennys Entertain Taylors

June 17, birthday of little Joan and mother Mary Livingstone Benny, turned out badly for both and Jack when the three had to delay plans for Joan's natal party because they were made ill by a slight attack of arsenic poisoning from insect spray on fresh vegetables. Mary and Jack recovered sufficiently, however, to go through with the party they had planned that night at the Trocadero for a group of a dozen-odd close friends. Latter was in honor of Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck, the newlyweds, and Bob, maintaining his public appearance as a he-man (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's orders?), scowled and frowned furiously whenever he posed for the photographers present!

Charlie McCarthy Can't Tie This

Thora Taylor, alias "Miss KLO," winner of the Ogden, Utah, radio-station beauty-contest, was feted, dined and dated under the watchful guidance of Frances Scully, the NBC Hollywood Radio City press aide, but out of her big week emerged the crush that Edgar Bergen developed for the pretty Miss. And thereby hangs a yarn most laughable. Ventriloquist Bergen called at the Palomar Ballroom one night to pick up Miss KLO. He came in chauffeur-driven town car—and wearing smart sport clothes with fancy shirt unadorned by a necktie. But it so happens that the jitterbug ballroom has its standards. "No necktie—no admittance" is rule one. Bergen or no Bergen, he couldn't get into the place without a tie. So he had to rent one (50 cents a night, 50 cents deposit) in order to get in, and he has been trying to keep the incident a secret so that McCarthy won't twit him about it during their Sunday tete-a-tetes.

Grouch Club Baits Champ Grouch

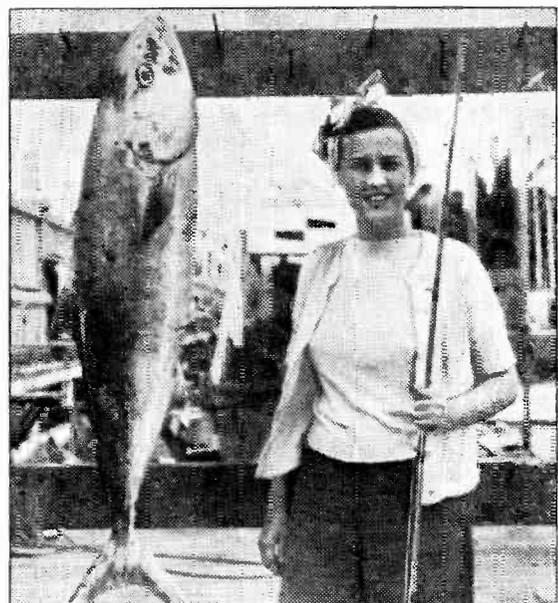

Not to be outdone by the recent visit of England's king and queen to the United States on a good-will mission, Corn Kix Grouch Club has cabled Britain's George Bernard Shaw, world's champion grouch, to be guest of honor July 16 at the National Grouch Club Convention to be staged here at Hollywood Bowl and to air his pet grouches concerning America and Americans. Should G. B. S. accept and win the capital prize of the fifty to be offered convention "delegates," he may find himself elected "World's Grouchiest-Looking Guy" and the recipient of a three-day all-expense-paid trip to San Francisco's Treasure Island, where he may stand with thousands of others and stew and fret at Sally Rand's Nude Ranch.

The McGees Disband

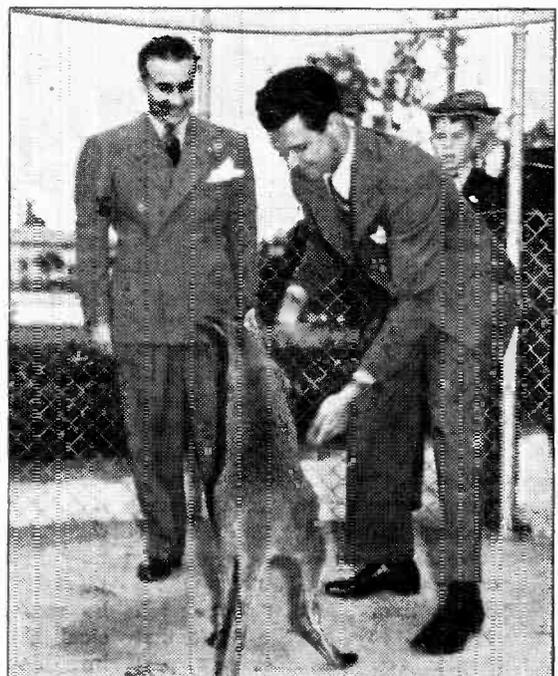

Winding up their Johnson programs for the summer on June 27, Fibber McGee and Molly focused their attention on their forthcoming "Home-Grown Lunch Party" they intend to stage July 2 for friends, to whom they'll serve only food grown and bred on their San Fernando Valley farm. But absent will be dialectician Bill Thompson, who flew to Chicago to open June 29 for ten weeks in Ransom Sherman's NBC "Smile Parade." Bill's departure was not without its misgivings for another reason, too, a pretty brunet Scotch lassie, Marvel Maxwell, who sings with the band now ensconced in Santa Catalina Island's Casino!

MUSIC WITH GOOSE PIMPLES

By Francis Chase, Jr.

—Gene Lester

Raymond Paige, radio conductor extraordinary and purveyor of goose-pimple music, is heard on "99 Men and a Girl" over a CBS network on Friday nights

AT FIRST you may have thought you were listening to two stations at once as you caught the unmistakable strains of a symphony orchestra and, at the same time, the equally unmistakable strains of a modern melody that—only yesterday—was being hummed by the telephone girl in your outer office. But you weren't. You were listening to Raymond Paige and his "99 Men and a Girl" program over the CBS network—a program which offers the unusual combination of a full symphony orchestra playing music that people know and love. Behind that program lies a story of ten years of constant struggle on the part of Paige to sell his idea, which is—simply—that people love the deep, voluminous tone of a full orchestra, that people love light classics and popular music, and that a program combining these two elements was bound to click.

The unfortunate part about the whole affair, Paige thinks, is that it took ten years to convince the radio world that it was practical. The fortunate part about it is that Mr. Paige was a determined man and dogged enough to keep the dream close to his heart until it blossomed into a hit radio show.

It took ten years of dreaming and fighting but Raymond Paige showed the experts it could be done—with the aid of a hundred WPA musicians

"It costs too much," was the first objection that was advanced against it when—as conductor of a twelve-piece orchestra over KHJ, Los Angeles—he tried to get studio officials to enlarge his orchestra to thirty-five pieces. Other technical arguments followed: "The mike won't take the volume," "If the mike would take it, the receiving set wouldn't," "Twelve men amplified sound just like thirty-five," they insisted.

"It isn't a matter of amplification," he would say. "It's a matter of musical balance and tone quality. And how do you know the mike won't take it if you don't try?"

More to silence Paige than in any great hope that the experiment would be productive of anything good for radio, Don Lee, operator of the chain of stations to which KHJ belonged, finally assented to a single program by a thirty-five-piece orchestra. Lee was cruising on his yacht near San Francisco the night the program was broadcast. When it was over, he hurried to port to telephone his congratulations to Paige. This was a first triumph and one whose effects were felt all over, for other studios hastened to put in larger studio orchestras after that.

Now was the time to press for even more musicians, but getting a hundred men together for an audition—musicians weren't paid for auditions then—was a stumper. His task was a three-fold one; to prove, first, that the large orchestra offered no technical difficulties for radio; second, that a large orchestra playing popular and light classical music had something that neither the small orchestra, playing popular music, nor the symphony, playing "heavy" music, had in the way of popular appeal; and third, that any expense attached to the larger orchestra was well worth the additional cost. He had—after a fashion—proved his first point.

His opportunity to prove both his second and third points came when he was invited to appear, as guest conductor, with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. He announced a program of light classics and popular music, and, as he expected, the hall was thronged with people who stomped and cheered their approval long after the program was over. This was what Paige had been waiting for. On the basis of the public reception of his program, he now made arrangements to use the Philharmonic for an audition which he ruefully described later as a "successful operation in which the patient died." But his diagnosis was wrong. The patient hadn't died. He had merely suffered a relapse from which he was not to re-KING GEORGE VI and Queen Elizabeth are no different from anyone else, as far as real, honest-to-goodness niceness is concerned. Why, they're just folks.

That's what I was thinking two weeks ago as I left the White House after singing for Their Majesties and President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

I had arrived in Washington the night before that, Wednesday, June 7. It was the first time I'd been in Washington—my home town—to sing since 1933. I spent the night with my family. It was very cool and pleasant and everyone was happy about that. But the next morning when we went to the WJSV studio to rehearse for my regular Thursday night broadcast the temperature was in the nineties and rising fast. I rehearsed in the studio from twelve o'clock until two that afternoon. After that Tony Gale, my accompanist, and I rehearsed songs I was to sing at the White House. Then we returned to the hotel for a cold supper, and at seven o'clock I went back to the studio for my regular broadcast. Right after the broadcast I hurried to my hotel to get ready for the big event. The dress I'd had made especially for the occasion is of black marquisette-sheer, and I was mighty thankful for the cool and filmy material that hot night. It is styled very sleek from the shoulder down to the knee, and from the knee down it has oceans of fullness of the same material, dotted with hundreds of rosebuds so placed that they appear and disappear as I walk. The neckline is in a sharp V, the sleeves are long, with built-up shoulder and puffed marquisette, reaching to the wrist with a point over the back of the hand to the third finger. I'm going to wear that dress just once more, and then I shall put it away and keep it as a souvenir of a very memorable and thrilling occasion.

I WAS still dressing, at 9:30, when the phone rang and I was told Mrs. Roosevelt was on the wire. That gracious lady was calling to tell me that she understood the necessity of my leaving the White House in time to make my repeat broadcast to the West Coast at 11 o'clock. The dinner, she said, was running behind schedule, and since I was to have sung next to last on the musicale following the dinner, she would switch the program around so that I would be first and therefore able to get away as quickly as possible. With all the minute details that must have been pressing Mrs. Roosevelt, she remembered that I had a repeat broadcast to do that night, and she took the time and the trouble to call me up, "Don't worry," she said, "I have everything in hand and I'll have a police escort and a White House car to take you to the studio."

At ten o'clock Ted Collins, Tony Gale and I left the hotel for the White House. Incidentally we entered the White House by the front way, which I was informed later was used only by the King and Queen, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and a very few guests. Nearly everyone else used the east door.

The instant I stepped inside, a butler came over to me with a letter. It was an air-mail letter from some of my listeners in California and it was addressed to Miss Kate Smith, the White House, Washington, D. C. You can imagine what a thrill that gave me. I was so happy about it.

One of the President's aides escorted us to the second floor and informed us that Mrs. Roosevelt was going to arrange a private presentation for us. The other artists appearing on the musicale were all to be presented to the King and Queen after the recital.

At about twenty-five minutes to eleven an aide escorted us down to the main floor. He introduced me to the President, who said, "How do you do, Kate Smith. It is good to see you." Then turning to the King, he said, "Your Majesty, this is Kate Smith, one of our greatest singers. Miss Smith is going to sing first in the recital tonight because she has a broadcast scheduled at eleven o'clock." His Majesty said, "How do you do, Miss Smith. I am anxiously waiting to hear you sing." Then, presenting me to the Queen, he said, "Her Majesty," and I said, "How do you do, your Majesty," to which Queen Elizabeth replied, "It's charming to meet you."

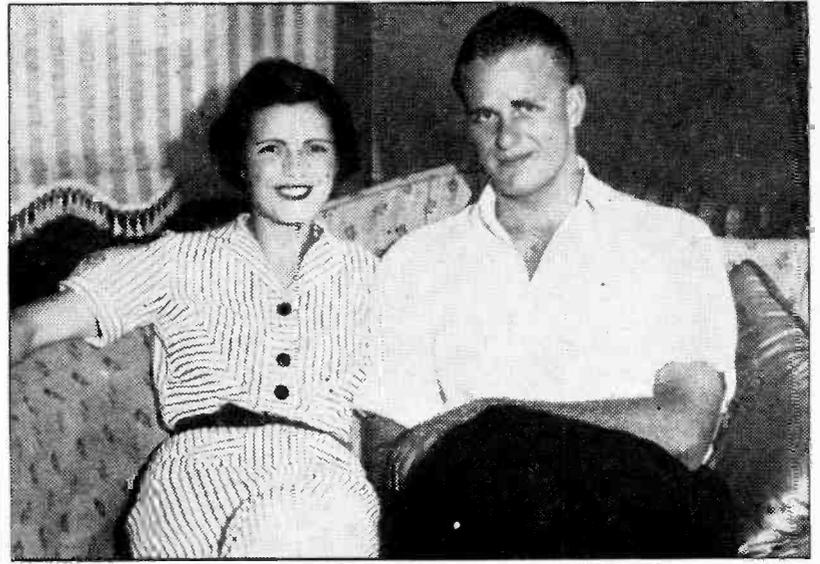

Earlier in the evening, when I spoke to Mrs. Roosevelt on the telephone, I asked her what I should say when I was presented to the King and Queen. Mrs. Roosevelt told me, "Just say 'How do you do, your Majesty,' and shake their hands. That's what I did."

THE Queen looks simply beautiful. She's much, much lovelier than any of her pictures. Her skin is an incredibly delicate pink-and-white. The only comparison I can think of is the finest Dresden china. She has clear blue eyes and sparkling white teeth. That night she wore a white tulle dress, sprinkled all over with tiny gilt paillettes which shone like flecks of gold as she moved. She wore a diamond and ruby tiara and a diamond necklace. She certainly looks every inch a queen. The King is a very gracious man, charming and poised. He was very tan, having been in the sun so much during the tour, but in spite of that he did look tired.

Next on the receiving-line was Mrs. Roosevelt. She said, "It's nice to see you again, Miss Smith. I've arranged everything. There's nothing to worry about. You'll be out of here in plenty of time." And I would have been, too, if the Queen's tiara hadn't become loose. She and her ladies-in-waiting went into a little room to fix it, and that extra few minutes' delay did make me just a bit late for the broadcast.

The musicale was held in the east ballroom. Mrs. Roosevelt herself announced the change in the scheduled appearances, and then introduced me. I sang "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "These Foolish Things Remind Me of You," an English song which I introduced in America several seasons ago, "Macushla" and "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain." That song, incidentally, was a request from the King himself. I had intended singing "Home On the Range," one of the President's favorites, but he told me that

THE PRESIDENT'S SON CARVES A RADIO EMPIRE

By Carl Prentiss

At home Elliott Roosevelt was a problem child, at Princeton a flop, at cattle-raising a dabbler. Today he's the big noise of Texas radio

IN WHATEVER he is doing, Elliott Roosevelt likes to be head man.

As far as the rest of the Roosevelt family, and most of America, is concerned, Franklin Delano is head man.

That's why Elliott and the President sometimes have their spats.

For Elliott, who inherited his famous father's jutting jaw and all the pugnacity that goes with it, is out to carve himself a personal empire. He has picked Texas as his field of operations, radio is the banner behind which he'll travel, and he's on his way. Whatever or whoever crosses his path, from the President down, is in for a scrap. Because that's the way the boy operates.

Elliott is today radio's newest commentator. He has just started a three-times-a-week series on the Mutual network. Every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday he's on the air for fifteen minutes (7:15 p.m. EDT, 6:15 p.m. EST, 6:15 p.m. CDT, 5:15 p.m. CST, not available to West) of Rooseveltian say-so. It's his first appearance before the country at large in his chosen role. The questions before the house are: Will it be his last? If not, why not? What has this young man got on the ball? Is he merely riding on the all-powerful family name, or is he moving under his own steam? Where does he think he's going, and how does he plan to get there? Is he on his way to being another Boake Carter, another Lowell Thomas? What has he got to give radio, and what does he want to take out of it?

Now, take a look at the record.

"Elliott Roosevelt," said one of his close associates to this writer day before yesterday, "is, in two words, a hell-raiser. He's a big, tough guy who knows what he wants, and he doesn't care what stands in the way of his getting it. He's as subtle as an Army tank.

He goes in head first, and generally he comes out with a pocketful of blue chips. Like all the Roosevelts from Teddy down, he has an instinctive flair for personal publicity, and, like Teddy again, he's thoroughly bull-headed. If he really has his heart set on being a cracker-jack radio commentator, then I'll bet that's just what he does. And I'll say that without ever having heard him on the air."

There are plenty of people who have heard Elliott Roosevelt on the air who'll say "amen" to that. The judgment of the radio industry is that we're going to hear a lot of this young man, this native New Yorker gone Texan. The ink is hardly dry on his fifty-two-week contract with the Emerson Radio Company and people whose job it is to know about such things say that even though the contract does have thirteen-week options, Elliott is certain to be on the air for the full year. And that, for a young man with little previous broadcasting experience, is something to wonder at. How did Elliott get up there in such a hurry?

EVERY big family has its black sheep, its enfant terrible. Elliott has the distinction of holding down that niche in the Roosevelt household. "Elliott," Mrs. Roosevelt once said, "is our problem child."

But yes! For instance: The President, and all the other Roosevelt boys, went to Groton to prepare for college. Groton is just about the snootiest boys' prep-school in America. But not Elliott. He wouldn't hear of it. He would not go to Groton, and that was that.

It was the same with Harvard, the other traditional Roosevelt school. Elliott went to Princeton instead. But not for long. Six months of freshman rules, eight-o'clock classes, compulsory study, compulsory this, that and the other thing, were enough for him. He renounced higher education forthwith, got himself a job—a succession of jobs, in fact—a wife, and—a son. At last, Elliott Roosevelt was on his own. For a while, immediately after his father's election to the Presidency, he worked as a salesman for Anthony Fokker, famous Dutch-American airplane designer and manufacturer. The salary was $20,000, plus commissions.

Everything was splendid and Elliott was planning a selling trip to Europe when, in the course of the Congressional investigation into the Army airmail affair, his name began to be mentioned, linked with the word "lobbyist." Apparently with every justification, young Roosevelt denied the allegations and the matter was forgotten. But F. D. R., even though he does believe in letting his children live their own tialities. He wanted something he could grow with, and, last and most important, something with money in it. For Elliott Roosevelt is money-minded. He found what he wanted in radio. Together with his wife, he bought three small stations in Texas. He began to be a power in Texas broadcasting. A "natural" salesman, he soon had business booming. Three stations were at least twenty stations too few for him. The boy needed room to move around in. When last heard from, he had twenty-six stations in his little Texas State Network, twenty-six stations affiliated with the Mutual Broadcasting System. He was on the air himself with a nice little program called "Texas in the World News." Not bad for a young fellow still in his thirties, not bad at all.

That was the state of affairs until a couple of weeks ago. Elliott Roosevelt had Texas in the palm of his hand. He was a high-ranking officer in the Young Democrats of Texas. He was fighting Texas' battles more effectively—and more loudly—than anybody else in sight. And he had made it perfectly clear that he would just as soon take on his father in these little tussles as he would anyone else. In the recent fuss over the President's order to purchase Argentinian canned beef for the U. S. Navy, Elliott's stentorian bellow, "Texas beef is the best beef in the world," was to be heard above all others. He is also in the record as saying, for instance, "I don't believe the Old Man [F. D. R.] ever caught a damn fish." Elliott probably knows better than that. However, when you stack that statement up against the frequent press reports of the President's prowess as a fisherman you have page one. And Elliott Roosevelt would rather be on page one than anywhere else he can think of.

PEOPLE close to the President say that the elder Roosevelt gets a big kick out of the "problem child." Too, Franklin Roosevelt loves a scrap, and he'd probably love his own sons less if they felt differently about the matter. So Elliott can say things like this and not be haled into the Presidential woodshed for it: "The President of the United States" (said Elliott in a broadcast of last April) "the other day offered the South a word of advice that should be followed if this section is to climb out of its dubious role as the number one economic problem of the nation. 'The South,' he said, 'must get out of hock to the North. It must put its own capital into the establishment of its own enterprises.'

"How true, those words, yet how seemingly impossible under existing conditions. How simple that solution, yet how vague and distant when one begins to analyze the ills to overcome."

In other words, Son Elliott, sitting at his microphone down in Texas, says to Father Franklin, sitting behind the big desk that goes with this world's toughest job, "You mean well, Dad, but really, you don't quite understand these things. Let me straighten them out for you."

Well, whatever else it may be, at least that attitude does indicate plainly enough that Elliott Roosevelt is his own man, taking instructions from nobody, and that, like a soft voice in a woman, is a swell thing in a radio commentator.

THE boy has a few other things that will come in handy, too. He's a hard worker. Big, husky, aggressive, he can and does maintain a pace that would wear out a lesser man. When the King and Queen of England were here, for instance, Elliott was, on successive days, in Washington, Hyde Park, New York, Chicago and back in New York. And he has his name, the magic cognomen of Roosevelt. On this, there are two schools of thought. One maintains that most of his progress to date can be attributed to the potency of that name, and not much else. The other school believes that Elliott would get just as far just as fast if he were named Zilch. The truth is probably somewhere in between. Unquestionably he does use his name for what it's worth, and it's worth a great deal. But he does not trade on it. To illustrate: When Elliott Roosevelt has something to sell, he'll use his name to gain entree, because he knows well enough that nobody sends an office-boy out to tell a Roosevelt that he can't get in. Once in, however, he strikes out on his own. He does his own selling, and he's good at it.

To sum the matter up, Elliott Roosevelt is a young fellow who proved that while Horace Greeley may be a long time dead, his advice is still good. Elliott Roosevelt went west to grow up lives right up to the hilt, felt obliged to turn thumbs down on Elliott's projected trip to Europe. That was the end of the aircraft industry, as far as Elliott was concerned. He was free to search for greener pastures.

This time, he found what he wanted in Texas. First of all, he found his present—his second—wife in Texas, in Fort Worth, Texas, which is today his home. Her name was Ruth Googins, and Elliott's marriage to her, shortly after he had obtained a Reno divorce from Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, was the talk of the land. The Roosevelts settled down on a big Texas ranch—everything in Texas is big, that's one reason why the boy likes the state so much—and for a time Elliott dabbled in the business of cattle-raising. But that didn't take.

He wanted something with big poten-

RADIO'S NO. 1 WRITER IS A WOMAN

Who are the people behind the people who move across radio's dramatic stage? And what of the lives and natures of these word-artists who write so broadly of life? These are questions that RADIO GUIDE readers have been asking. Consequently, we have selected four writers, two individuals and a team, who are outstanding among the men and women whose fertile brains and facile typewriters create the characters and incidents of the popular serials. The authors who will be presented in a series of portrait-stories are Irna Phillips, Carlton Morse, and Frank and Anne S. Hummert. The first of the series is herewith presented.—Editor.

TO BE the parent of sixty children is quite a job. The old lady who lived in the shoe didn't know what to do, but Irna Phillips, whose busy typewriter creates life in fifteen-minute batches, who writes "The Guiding Light," "Woman in White," and "Road of Life" discovers no difficulty whatever.

Radio presents no more interesting brain children. A young surgeon, Doctor Brent, healing the sick in a city hospital; a kindly cleric, Reverend Ruthledge, showing people how to live; and a grand Irish mother named Moran rearing her children. And almost sixty others.

Nor does radio present a more interesting writer. Or a more successful one. For producing three serial dramas at her Ontario Street office in Chicago, this slight, sharp-featured woman receives an estimated $3,000 a week, which sounds like a lot of money—and is. After mulling over a few incidents, though, most people are inclined to say she earns it. For example, when they learn of the two million words she must write in a year just to keep her radio family alive, or of the headaches in the job of guiding the lives of sixty characters in their proper orbits. There is also the little matter of Miss Phillips' responsibility for weaving those sixty characters into a story which will keep ten million listeners interested.

Yet Irna Phillips does all of that, and enjoys doing it.

A most intriguing thing about her, though, is the story of how she got into radio script-writing. That is the story of her life.

On July 1, 1902, up on Chicago's North Side, a tenth child was born into the home of papa Phillips, every-day American, groceryman by trade. The new Phillips was a girl and they called her Irna. Irna didn't get to know much about the grocery store. A few bright recollections of "helping" her father keep store, of forbidden trips on the old horse-drawn delivery-wagon—then, when she was seven, her father's death.

Except for the tragic interludes of death, the little Phillips girl lived mostly in an imaginary world of paper dolls, rag dolls—any kind of dolls. Since she didn't see much of other children, except the eight who comprised the Phillips brood, her child-world centered about the family. That was normal, but significant. For even then she was learning the interesting quirks of family life which have formed the backbone of her radio stories.

Grammar school bored Irna. A queer illusion that nobody liked her grew into a persecution complex. The few pleasant schoolday memories she has are of the plays she saw given by the stock company at the College Theater. Equipped with a startling memory, she would come home to plague the rest of the Phillipses with impersonations of every character in the play. Nevertheless, seeing those plays was the genesis of a passion for the stage.

THE introvertish youngster wandered through Senn High School as in a dream, finishing in three years just to get it over with. Turned down for a part in a school play, she was deeply hurt, crawled into her shell a little farther, and didn't try out again. The one class which did interest Irna was story-telling. There she did her first piece of writing, a hero-worship ditty about a brother who went overseas in 1917. Somewhat sentimentally, she broadcasts poems not unlike that first one at Senn every Memorial Day on her "live-script" shows.

High school left Irna with a negative outlook which she carried over into the first year of college. Living at home and commuting to Northwestern University in Evanston, she made few friends, reacted like the typical unsocial person. After a year of loneliness, she took the first bold, independent step in her life. It was an ultimatum to her family: Either she would go away to school next year or not go at all. She won.

Next September found her on the green campus of the University of Illinois, where she was to meet a personality whose influence would reorientate her whole life and eventually lead her to the career she now follows. That personality was Dr. Charles Wolbert, head of the University speech department. As the months passed, a more society-conscious Irna budded under the guidance of Dr. Wolbert, whom she worshiped and intended to follow. Wolbert was a genuine scholar whose ideal was the happiness of man. Strangely, he took the trouble to practice his philosophy in his dealings with students.

Irna gained in charm and self-assurance, became president of her sorority chapter, decided to become a teacher of speech, chiefly because Professor Wolbert was a teacher.

At Fulton, Missouri, and later at Teachers' College in Dayton, Ohio, Miss Phillips, teacher of dramatics and public speaking, was apparently happy at her job, contented with an annual salary less than she now earns in one week.

That is, until 1930, when a new ex-

Today's children get acquainted with thrilling facts of today's world through radio-education

By Sterling Fisher

SOME strange and wonderful things are happening in this radio world these days quite aside from and unknown to the field of strict entertainment. For example:

Out in a fruitful valley of southern California, a class of twelve-year-old girls listens to a group of French school-children singing in Paris, six thousand miles away. When the broadcast is over, one of them sits down and writes this letter—not under a teacher's guidance but of her own free will.

"Dear Boys and Girls in Paris: It is now 11:45 a.m. on Thursday morning, and we have just listened to your program. We thought it was very interesting and enjoyed it greatly. One group of our room has studied about France and her colonies. One member of the group has traveled in your country, and the rest of us would like to do so some day. We would appreciate it very much if you would tell us something about your schools, the games you play, and the city in which you live."

In a little mining-town in Pennsylvania, a group of boys sits listening to a dramatization about community health and the work of the Visiting Nurse Association. When the broadcast ends, they beg their teacher to ask the local visiting nurse in their town to come in and tell them how they may help her in her work.

A CRIPPLED boy, bedridden for three years, lies in a little cabin on a wind-swept mountainside in Tennessee. For three years radio is his school. His mother follows the Teachers Manual of the "American School of the Air" and builds each day's lessons around the broadcasts. His father writes to us: "For many months your programs have been the one bright spot in our child's life."

A letter written by a little girl in the sixth grade of a school in Tacoma, Washington, and signed by every member of the class, says: "My dear Mr.

Fisher, the children in our sixth grade have had the pleasure of listening to your exceptional program called 'New Horizons,' with Dr. Andrews in charge. The program has taught us all many interesting things and the plays have been acted out splendidly. We will not be able to listen to it next semester, for this coming June we are graduating to another school, but I almost wish we could all stay back just to hear the first chapter next September. We all thank you for the pleasure and entertainment you have given us this past year, and while we will be disappointed, we will have the pleasure of knowing that someone else is enjoying and learning things about exploration and discovery in the world."

A FOREIGN-BORN boy, studying the automotive trade in a vocational school, listens to a broadcast about American foreign policy, and in the discussion which follows exclaims to his teacher: "Gosh! I hope the President heard that broadcast today. I want him to know us kids don't want war!"

Things like that are happening all over America in an unprecedented quantity. They are happening so widely and so rapidly because more than six million children in the United States are getting at least a portion of their education by radio. At the Columbia Broadcasting System, our mail brings us a rapidly increasing stream of letters that show how deeply radio programs have penetrated the classrooms of America. These letters, thousands of them, show us that the work in educational radio is having a widespread effect on American children, that radio programs designed for the schools actually are important to individual boys and girls—so important, in fact, that we are told of a whole class which did not want to graduate for fear of missing another chapter to come.

More than six million children in the United States listen in their schoolrooms to the "American School of the Air." Four hundred city school systems have compulsory or optional listening to these programs. Thousands of rural schools use them as supplementary material. These are large figures, particularly when one realizes that radio's educational facilities are little more than

THE RADIO PLAYBILL: "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

"WHEN A GIRL MARRIES" is the story of an across-the-tracks romance. Joan Field, a member of a well-to-do "first family" in the little town of Stanwood, and Harry Davis, a struggling young lawyer from the mill section of town, are the principals. Their fight for happiness is against family interference, difference in social position, and small-town gossip. And their lives and backgrounds were worlds apart; that is, until they met and fell in love. It was on the very day of her engagement to Phil Stanley, playboy scion of Stanwood's oldest family, that Joan met and fell in love with Harry. CBS, Mondays through Fridays at 2:45 p.m. EDT; 1:45 p.m. EST; 1:45 p.m. CDT; 12:45 p.m. CST; 11:45 a.m. MST; 10:45 a.m. PST.

JOAN FIELD (played by Noel Mills) is a romantic young girl, full of idealism. She adores her father, is loyal to her mother, and is torn by the separation between them. For the first time in her life she has met a man who has his way to make in the world, and who doesn't belong to her own wealthy crowd. Harry Davis, she knows, is the only man for her

HARRY DAVIS (played by John Raby) came suddenly into Joan's life, upsetting all Mrs. Field's well-laid plans and sweeping Joan off her feet. His life has been one long fight against poverty. Having graduated from law school with top honors, but no money, he's hoping to land a job as junior clerk in Samuel Field's office. He is in love with Joan, but knows he should not marry her

PHIL STANLEY (played by Michael Fitzmaurice) carries on the name of Stanwood's first family. Perhaps because life has been so easy for him, he has never taken it very seriously. He is only serious about one thing—his desire to marry Joan. Furious when she tells him of her love for Harry, he refuses to break the engagement, still confidently expects to marry her

SAMUEL TILDEN FIELD (played by Ed Jerome), Joan's father, is a successful attorney. Having made his own way in the world, he, more than anyone else, understands what Harry Davis is up against. The Fields are divorced—theirs was an early, impulsive marriage. Field means to see Joan marry the man she wants in spite of Mrs. Field's ambitions

STELLA FIELD (played by Frances Woodbury), Joan's mother, is a tiny dark woman of forty-three, who hopes to be taken for much younger. She is kind and generous to her friends, but feels that no one should enter their small circle without proper credentials. That explains her coolness to Harry Davis. Ambitious for her children, she has never understood Joan, who resembles her dad

EVE TOPPING (played by Irene Winston) is Joan's best friend, but she has always wanted Phil Stanley for herself. Hoping that something will happen to destroy his devotion to Joan, she plays her hand quietly, waiting her chance to marry a Stanley and become the first lady of Stanwood. Eve is small, dark, and quiet, but plays a deep game and is not to be trusted Fine work!

Mighty proud parents were Henry Weber, MBS musical director, and his wife, the former Marion Claire, operatic prima donna, when they visited a grade school near their Lake Bluff home recently. Their six-and-a-half-year-old boy, Heinzl, played a Beethoven sonatina by memory on the piano in a school concert; the boy's teacher is a Mr. Henry Weber . . . Another six-and-a-half-year-old making rapid musical strides under his father's tutelage is the son of director-violinist Harry Kogen.

Crossroads Court of Honor

It's an ill wind in the Windy City that blows nobody good. For lo, these many "Farm and Home" programs Everett Mitchell has been plugging away with his "It's a beautiful day in Chicago!" So now Chicago's NBC chief announcer draws a little sir echo for his cheery proclamations. He has been proclaimed official "Ambassador of Good Weather" by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Once when Everett discontinued his weather trade-mark, a listener phoned from Cape Cod to protest the discontinuance, and among the thousands of letters with the same message were some bearing Florida and California postmarks, believe it or not. The philosophy behind the "beautiful day" slogan is plenty okay; the idea is that it may be blowing or blazing in Chicago or anywhere else, but every day is a great day to be living and trying.

Gookisms

If you visit radio's "small house half-way up the next block," home of Vic, Sade and Rush Gook, you are undoubtedly well acquainted with Gookisms, for that's where they originate, thanks to the memory of author Paul Rhymer, who heard many verbal Gookisms in his boyhood in Bloomington, Illinois. Gookisms are like when Sade "scrubs the kitchen floor till you could wash your face with the piano." Or like when Vic and Sade are "sitting at home with our teeth in our mouth." Some of Vic's friends "squeeze the pennies till the eagles howl." And Rush knows some "monstrous big high-school gentlemen who like to whip over a fork and spear a potato."

The Real McCarthy

Dear V. O. L.:

I am blind, so I have never seen Charlie McCarthy or a picture of him. Yet to me he's very real. I see him as a peppy little rascal, full of life, with red hair and a devilish gleam in his eyes. Perhaps he's more real to me for having never seen him. I'm having my mother write this letter to tell you that radio has made a whole great world for me, peopled with voices and shapes of my own imagining, therefore wholly my own. My picture of Charlie is typical of that world.

August Rysinger, Charleston, S. C.

● One of the fine things about radio is that every person can mold it somewhat to his own imagination. Alec Templeton, famous blind pianist, has a similar conception of Charlie McCarthy, a red-haired lad with red cheeks and roguish eyes, who is never still. Charlie wouldn't be so popular if he were not so successfully real.—Editor.

Radio and Employment

Editor, Radio Guide:

I'm sure you often receive complaints about radio being a soft job for a few milk-fed, overpaid performers. I've heard many such complaints and they prompt me to make a defense, for radio furnishes me a livelihood.

I'd like it generally known that radio furnishes a living directly or indirectly to nearly 400,000 workers and their families, over 1,000,000 people. More than seven hundred stations and several hundred factories create many thousand jobs. There are even more than fifty thousand businessmen who sell radio products and many other thousands of workers in the servicing field. And all these are as much a part of the radio industry as the comparatively few often-maligned artists.

Byron Crissman, Kansas City, Mo.

● And even beyond these interesting statistics, radio furnishes a wealth of profit that cannot be measured in dollars and cents.—Editor.

Home, Sweet Home

Editor, Radio Guide:

Irvin Jackson's recent letter about "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" suggests interesting facts about another famous song.

I wonder how many Americans know that "Home, Sweet Home," which is such a vital part of our musical American tradition, was written in Paris in 1822, first performed in the composer's play, "Clari, or, the Maid of Milan," in London's Covent Gardens, thus being intimately associated with three countries besides America. Moreover, the composer, John Howard Payne, in self-imposed exile from home, died in Tunis, after serving as American consul there.

L. T. Steager, St. Paul, Minn.

Summer Sketches

Editor, Radio Guide:

Can't we have more dramatic sketches with a true-to-life plot and a humorous punch? Give us something to smile about.

Mrs. Craig Dillon, Columbus, Ohio.

● There will be several on that pattern for your summer listening. "The Aldrich Family" will substitute for Jack Benny, "Blondie" for Eddie Cantor.—Editor.

Where From?

Dear V. O. L.:

In your issue of June 3, on page 8, you state that the Vass Family are from "No'th Carolina." I beg to disagree—they are from South Carolina, city of Greenville. I know, because I am a native of that city and used to live just a few blocks from them. Their father was a professor at Furman University in Greenville when they were children.

Meta Callaham, Abbeville, S. C.

● The Vasses are probably most intimately associated with South Carolina, though they have resided in a number of different states, including North Carolina, where Frank attended the state university. We probably agree their songs are good no matter where they hail from.—Editor.

Shut-In Corner

Editor, Radio Guide:

I'm a young woman, mother of three children, and I'm an unfortunate cripple. I haven't walked for ten years, because of arthritis. I can't afford a wheel-chair, but the Comfort magazine gives an invalid a rolling-chair for selling subscriptions. I see no prospect of ever obtaining the wheel-chair I need so badly unless my friends help me. I'm sure all who read this, radio listeners and perhaps radio stars, will understand my motive. A wheel-chair would enable me to escape from the confinement of my room and let me get a peep at the beautiful outdoors. I hope through your kindness to get many subscriptions and make new friends.

Mrs. Irene Normandin,
Newport Centre, Vermont.

● Good luck, Mrs. Normandin! We hope you get the subscriptions, the wheel-chair, and the new friends.—Editor.

Who Named America?

Editor, Radio Guide:

The Americanism wave sweeping the country and especially radio is all right, but I wonder if it wouldn't be well for many of us to brush up on our American history and sharpen our civic responsibility along with it.

For instance, many authorities now believe that our great land was not named for the explorer Amerigo Vespucci, but rather for the great Scandinavian adventurer, Leif Ericson, who beat Columbus to this continent by a half-century. The Scandinavian name given the newly discovered continent was "Amt-Eric," Eric's land.

Lowell Deane, Boston, Mass.

● Walter Winchell, one of the head radio-banner carriers, scores here, for he had essentially this same information in his column not many months ago. Mr. Deane's point is well taken that a more intimate acquaintance with our history and tradition would be a boost to real Americanism.—Editor.

Clipping Cliches

Dear V. O. L.:

As an old cliché-hater I'd like Radio Guide to start an active campaign against radio clichés.

For instance, how many times have you torn your hair out every time you heard these old bromides eke out from your loudspeaker:

"And now we present—"

"Until tomorrow we say—"

"The program originally scheduled for this time—"

There are a flock of others. I'd like to hear from other cliché-haters.

Bob Hawk, Mutual Broadcasting

New Radio Game

Editor, Radio Guide:

Here's an idea for a lively radio game based on Bingo and Screeno. We've tried it and it's lots of fun. Mark the cards into squares as in Bingo, but instead of having squares numbered, use words commonly heard on the air in announcements and songs, etc.—words such as love, moon, broadcasting, buy, presenting, swing, and many others. Then tune in any program or tune around among several. Whenever any player hears a word that appears on his card, he can mark it. Of course the first player getting five in a row yells "Radio!" and wins.

Mrs. A. G. Dawson, Memphis, Tenn.

● This unique game should be worth something to sponsors, because the players will listen to the commercials for key-words!—Editor.

LISTENING TO LEARN

—National Park Service, Rocky Mountain National Park

High in the Colorado Rockies the Moraine Park Museum rests in the midst of nature's wonders. It is the base of operations of Raymond Gregg's Junior Nature School, the starting-point of the weekly field trips

Rocky Mountain Park Naturalist Raymond Gregg (in uniform) takes the Junior Nature School for a stroll among the trees. NBC picks up the informal wayside chats as he interprets the out-of-doors to his class

Wall-less School

A tall, thin man with sun-bronzed face, garbed in the regulation khaki uniform of the National Park Service, starts down one of the many trails leading from Moraine Park Museum. He towers head and shoulders above the excited youngsters who are following him. It is Saturday morning in Rocky Mountain National Park and Raymond Gregg is taking his Junior Nature School to their wall-less classroom in one of nature's most beautiful and bountiful wonderlands. Bringing up the rear are two NBC engineers carrying short-wave pack transmitters. Theirs is the job of sending fifteen minutes of this informal out-of-doors class session to a Coast-to-Coast audience.

The Junior Nature School is a free government-conducted, wall-less school, where, during the summer, children can enjoy walks along the trails through field and forest and beside snow-fed streams in the company of a park naturalist while their parents vacation in this national playground. Dr. Gregg, a native southerner transplanted in the Rockies, is conductor of the school, a noted teacher and field naturalist. He has an unusual talent with children, and in his approach to the child attracts the adult as well. He is a fluent speaker with a keen understanding of human nature and a well-developed sense of humor—excellent qualifications for this radio assignment.

The broadcast that is picked up along the trail every Saturday morning is designed to stimulate interest in nature as a recreational outlet. Challenge to further exploration lies in the introductions to the various fields of natural science. Details and dogma have no place in this mountain nature school, which is really a "get-together club" to introduce people to the fascination of the natural world about them, wherever they may be. Use of nicknames is a typical Gregg device: the Magpie he calls "the noisy magician"; the chipmunk he refers to as "a little convict"; the Alpine fir is "a Christmas tree with its own candles"; the wild geranium,

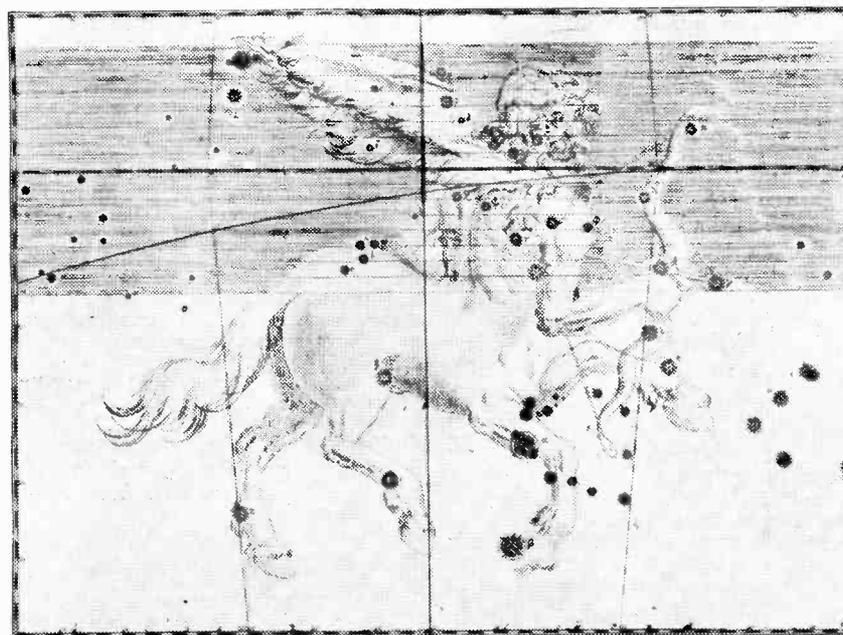

"a flower with a bill." Things previously taken for granted are brought to life, given character and personality in the interesting and quaint stories and illustrations used by Mr. Gregg.

The July 1 (Saturday) broadcast will come from the floor of Moraine Park, a broad glacier-formed mountain valley where flowers bloom in great profusion. Here Mr. Gregg will have his class for a lesson on early summer wildflowers, and as usual he will lead the ad-lib trailside discussion, interpreting the out-of-doors in absorbing fashion by relating nature's creations to commonplace objects and experiences of every-day life. Listeners would enjoy it much more, of course, if they were with the class in person; but as this is not possible in too many cases, the program picked up along the way comes as a welcome substitute to once-a-week radio members of his Junior Nature School.

Twelve weekly broadcasts are planned for this series, of which the July 1 program is the second. Others to follow are:

July 8—"In Beaver World."

July 15—"A Stroll Among the Trees."

—The Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History

July 22—"Wildlife at the Roadside."

July 29—"Keeping Up with Wildlife."

August 5—"Scouting the Trailside."

August 12—"Flowers of the Fading Season."

August 19—"Six Legs, or Eight?"

August 26—"Plant Journeys."

September 2—"Reading the Mountains' Story."

September 9—"A Museum Visit."

The broadcasts in this series are made possible through the facilities of station KOA, Denver, Colorado. Plans have been worked out with Park Naturalist Gregg through Mr. C. C. Moore, program director of KOA, to give RADIO GUIDE readers a weekly series of "visual aid" pictures to supplement the programs. The first will appear on this page in next week's issue of RADIO GUIDE.

"Nature Sketches" may be heard Saturdays over an NBC network at:

EDT 11:45 a.m. — 10:45 a.m. EST

"Men Behind the Stars"

The July 7 (Friday) program in this series is devoted to the constellation Sagittarius, depicted with drawn bow in the picture (below) from Bayer's Uranometria, rare star atlas first published in 1603. Sagittarius belongs to the Zodiac, that imaginary belt around the sky along which the planets, sun and moon move. The Zodiac is shown as the shaded band in the picture (below). Sagittarius is the southernmost constellation of the zodiacal twelve and may be seen in summer but not in winter because the sun in its apparent motion crosses this region in December.

In Greek mythology we read of Chiron, who changed himself into a horse to elude his wife, Rhea. Ovid tells us that Hercules killed Chiron with a poisoned arrow, and that Jupiter placed him (Chiron) in the sky. Some associate Sagittarius with Chiron, who is called the wisest of the Centaurs. Near midnight in July we find him over the south point in the Milky Way.

"... glorious in his Cretian Bow,
Centaur follows with an aiming
Eye,
His bow full drawn and ready to let fly."
—Creech's "Manilius"

NOTES OF INTEREST

The Zodiac is divided into twelve parts, called "signs of the zodiac," which 2,000 years ago corresponded to twelve constellations bearing the same names. Sagittarius was the ninth of the signs of the zodiac.

The centaur is a fabled monster having the head, arms and body of a man from the waist up, united to the body and legs of a horse.

Ovid was a Roman poet (43 B.C.-17 A.D.); banished by Augustus and died in exile.

"Men Behind the Stars" may be heard Fridays over CBS at:

EDT 5:45 p.m. — 4:45 p.m. EST
CDT 4:45 p.m. — 3:45 p.m. CST
MST 2:45 p.m. — 1:45 p.m. PST

● Thousands of teachers must be flocking into San Francisco by now for the annual summer meeting of the National Education Association. Details of the broadcasts from this convention may be found by referring to "This Week's Programs," pages 20 to 36.

6,000 MILES FOR THIS

Lawrence Tibbett, America's great baritone, crosses and recrosses a continent to enjoy a few days of relaxation on his "Honey Hill" farm

To spend a few hours on his Wilton (Conn.) farm, pruning grape vines, for example, Tibbett eagerly flies 3,000 miles from the Hollywood "Circle" (NBC) and back

Work on "Honey Hill" is never finished. That's one of the pleasures of owning such a place, Larry says

Here Mrs. Tibbett receives instruction in the operation of a tractor. Besides the farm, the Tibbetts maintain a large apartment on East River, New York

This scene should explain the 6,000-mile air trip. The Tibbetts have eight dogs at "Honey Hill," some of which are Belgian police dogs and sheep-dogs. One is a setter; another, Mrs. Tibbett's favorite, is a Scottie named Mac

Some 250 yards from the farmhouse are the chickens—White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks. Working about the place in old clothes, Tibbett says he feels a great sense of independence on his Connecticut farm

The March of Music

Edited by LEONARD LIEBLING

"... An ampler Ether, a diviner Air..."—Wordsworth

Bantering the British

SIR ADRIAN BOULT, music-director of BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) conducted some Carnegie Hall and radio concerts (short wave) recently while on a visit to New York. Voyaging to this country with him were the distinguished English composers, William Walton and Arthur Bliss, and the famous London oboe virtuoso, Leon Goossens, brother of Eugene, leader of the Cincinnati Orchestra. To honor the eminent guests, the Lotos Club of New York gave them a luncheon, at which the dais also held Solomon, the English pianist; John Hogan, president of Interstate Broadcasting (station WQXR), and Leonard Liebling, toastmaster. Scattered among the 150 lunchers one noticed Frank Black, Howard Barlow, William Primrose, Roy Harris, Charles O'Connell, Deems Taylor, Davidson Taylor (CBS), John Royal (NBC), Marks Levine (NBC), Samuel Chotzinoff (commentator of the Toscanini concerts), Pitts Sanborn, Mishel Piasastro, and other well-known musical and radio personages.

The toastmaster decided to keep the occasion in light summer spirit, so he told the guests of honor that he would prove to them how musical we Americans are by asking a series of questions to be answered spontaneously by various persons called upon at random. This was the result:

Toastmaster: "Mr. Black, will you name six orchestral instruments?"

Frank Black: "Three violins and three violas."

Toastmaster: "Mr. Chotzinoff, what is America's national instrument?"

Chotzinoff: "Er—let me see—the cocktail-shaker."

Toastmaster: "No, no, Mr. Chotzinoff, I said 'instrument,' not 'implement.' Now, Mr. Sanborn, will you tell us what is America's national instrument?"

Pitts Sanborn: "The cash-register." Toastmaster: "Mr. Coppicus, what is musical form?"

F. C. Coppicus: "Lily Pons' . . . I am her manager."

Toastmaster: "Mr. Zirato, what is perfect pitch?"

Bruno Zirato: "As assistant manager of the Philharmonic, I don't know a thing about baseball."

Toastmaster: "Mr. Evans, what are scales?"

Lawrence Evans (musical manager): "Good Lord, man, haven't you ever seen a fish?"

Toastmaster: "Mr. Deems Taylor, describe in a few words your impressions of Wagner's cycle 'The Ring of the Nibelungen.'"

Deems Taylor: "Loud and long."

When Mr. Bliss arose to make a short speech, he said among other things, "We English listeners dimly suspect that the questions and answers were prepared in advance." And he was right. But altogether impromptu was somebody's remark that "BEC" stands for "Boult is a Bully Conductor."

Speaking Up

By V. Vidal

There is a rumor around to the effect that a certain popular tenor, noted for his "oomph" as well as his voice, is really quite bald. But instead of hiding under a toupee, he paints part of his head black. Recently he was out at a party during a heat wave. Perspiration ran freely, the paint ran with it, and the tenor, leaning against a wall, left a nice large headprint. The libel laws are still functioning very well or else I'd tell you who it was.

Have you noticed the good work of the Gulf Chorus on the "Gulf Musical Playhouse" programs? Many of them belonged to the old General Motors ensemble which did such brilliant work several years ago. And a few of them are outstanding soloists in their own right. Two who were heard in solo passages in the arrangement of "None But the Lonely Heart" were Martha Lipton, heard frequently on the "Music Hall of the Air," and Garfield Swift, first-rate young baritone. It's a pity they weren't credited for their fine work, brief though it was.

People who complain that most of the good music goes off the air during the summer will be surprised to know that there are just as many, if not more, symphonic hours on now than in the winter, with more to come. The "Toronto Promenade Concerts" brings the number up to seven. The Robin Hood Dell, Chautauqua Festival, Boston Pops and Grant Park series are promised for later in the summer.

Josef Hofmann's son is allergic to dust, so the entire Hofmann family is moving to a Pacific island. Whether or not this means Hofmann's definite retirement from the concert stage, he has not yet stated. However, music-lovers all over the world sincerely hope not. Both concert stage and radio would suffer a calamitous loss. Particularly radio, which already has only too few good pianists.

Just what is this tradition that every radio program has to be made up of a little bit of everything? Why? Are we so restless that we can't listen to an unbroken half-hour of song, piano music or violin-playing? Why hasn't some sponsor put on a half-hour weekly recital with top-notch artists? His only expense would be the artist's fee and the broadcasting time.

A French program of modern-romantic music is a welcome change from some of the regular symphonic bills of fare.

Chausson's quartet is suave, skilful matter, subtly melodized. He was a pupil of Franck, and has some of that master's lyrical mysticism. Debussy is more of an impressionist, and his two pieces offer rhythmical and atmospheric suggestion rather than any opportunity to use them for dancing purposes. More impressionism comes from Ravel—how he always resented to be bracketed in any way with Debussy!—and in the form of some particularly pensive and lovely pages.

Reynaldo Hahn wrote so many successful songs that some of his more imposing compositions are not generally known. Among them are operas, chamber essays and much incidental music for plays. Hahn has a distinct melodic vein, always aristocratic and beautifully embellished with fluent and imaginative craftsmanship.

Mozart wrote "Die Entfuhrung aus dem Serail" (Abduction from the Seraglio) when he was twenty-six. The plot and music are happy—and no wonder, for the work was completed in 1756, the year that saw the composer's marriage to his charming Constanze, with whom he lived until his death. Incidentally, the name of the heroine in the opera is also Constanze. Captured by Selim Bassa, she is intended for his harem. However, she loves Belmonte, and that doughty swain finally abducts her successfully and they gain the pardon and blessing of the thwarted Selim. This opera antedated "The Marriage of Figaro" by four years and "Don Giovanni" by five.

Richard Strauss has done only one composition for piano and orchestra, but it is an outstanding effort, even though rarely played. The title means "in a burlesque manner," and so Strauss romps in a jocose vein, with the piano and the orchestra chattering busily and probably burlesquing the superficial brilliancies of the average display concerto.

at nineteen, after studying at the St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) Conservatory. Before he was twenty, he had finished his first symphony, which made a sensation because of its boldness and originality. He cast aside tradition, and instead of the usual "development" system made each measure of his work an independent entity, different from all the others, repeating nothing and using his orchestral voices in such a way that they never duplicated one another.

Efrem Kurtz first came to America with the Ballet Russe, and has led its orchestra also during the subsequent visits here of that celebrated dancing troupe.

When Mendelssohn was a mere lad he went to visit the great Goethe, Germany's famous author, poet and dramatist. He asked the youthful wonder to play some Bach for him, which Mendelssohn did, choosing one of the more extended fugues. The boyish performer became nervous because of his distinguished auditor and after a few minutes suddenly lost his memory and Bach's continuity.

Mendelssohn later developed into a master of fugue himself and some of his works in that form can well stand comparison with those of Bach.

The most-played violin concertos are those of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Brahms and Tschaikowsky. The last-named leads the others in frank emotionalism and fiery abandon, but as a refreshing contrast has a middle movement of infinite grace and tender sentiment.

Something About Chopin's Piano Solos

FREDERIC FRANCOIS CHOPIN'S name and music evoke warm response in the mind and heart of every true lover of the piano and its compositions. He died ninety years ago, but remains as vibrant and compelling as when he first fascinated tonal circles in the earlier part of the nineteenth century. The literature of the keyboard, without Chopin, would seem an almost impossible conception. No one has surpassed him in individuality of creation and utterance. No one else has so been the very soul of the piano, so enriched its eloquence and technique.

Chopin's published compositions total 206, of which 180 are for piano solo. Because his output is almost exclusively for the piano, he has frequently been denied equality with the greatest of the composers. That is of course sheer nonsense. A short poem may have more genius than an epic; a miniature painting may be more inspired than a huge canvas. Some of the little preludes or mazurkas by Chopin are infinitely more important (and lasting) than many an uninspired symphony.

Up to his sixteenth year, the most significant effort from Chopin's pen was his variations on the lovely Mozart air, "La ci darem la mano," from "Don Giovanni." Already the harmonies showed originality and novel charm. At twenty, the two piano concertos were completed, premiered, and generally recognized as a new and vital voice in music.

Chopin's twenty-seven etudes brought about a veritable revolution in piano technique. Previously an etude had usually been a dry mechanical study; Chopin developed it into an art form. The third, in E major, is the one of which the composer himself wrote, "I never in my life have conceived another such melody." The fifth is the sparkling etude which has the right hand playing on black keys only. No. 12 is the "Revolutionary" etude, its tempestuous fire expressing the composer's concern over the fate of his native Poland, then revolting against Russia. No. 13, "Aeolian," won the excited admiration of Schumann, with its harp-like effects and the richness and softness of its harmonies. Only for the most skilled virtuosos are Nos. 18 and 20, the first in gossamer and prestissimo thirds, the second in finger-breaking sixths. The entrancing but somewhat morbid "Cello" etude is No. 19. Who does not know the irresistible "Butterfly," No. 21? "Winter Wind" is the popular title of No. 23, with its rushing passages and tumultuous finale. Of the final three etudes, published after Chopin's death, No. 2 is the best—dreamy music of lingering sweetness, even though each hand plays a different rhythm.

When Schumann first saw the Chopin preludes he wrote, "He is the boldest, the most poetic soul of his time." The twenty-five preludes range in length from two lines to four pages, but all are gems and encompass every mood from playfulness to deepest tragedy. The favorites are the miniature A major and C minor examples (because nearly every amateur can play them), and of course the "Raindrop." Anton Rubinstein considered the preludes "the pearl of Chopin's music."

The impromptus are four, with the "Trilby" (A flat) and the Fantasia Impromptu in C sharp minor leading in general favor. From the slow section of the latter, a gentleman named Carroll lifted bodily the melody for his Tin Pan Alley song, "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

Fifteen waltzes, preponderantly gay but touched here and there with nostalgia and gentle reflection, led to the estimate that they are "aristocratic dances of the soul and should be stepped only by princesses and countesses." Will the "Minute" waltz ever lose its charming appeal? Hardly.

The twenty nocturnes must be considered tone-poems, not all of them merely sentimental but some bitterly complaining and tensely dramatic.

With the four ballades, Chopin reaches compelling heights, and the ones in A flat and G minor remain a perfect musical story-telling, although the F minor surpasses them in grandeur and variety of emotion.

Most national of his creations, the forty-one mazurkas contain typical Polish rhythms and often that Slavic people's characteristic yearning called "zal." Ironic, sad, sweet, joyous, morbid, whimsical, the mazurkas have aptly been termed "Heinrich Heine songs on the piano."

The B flat minor is the best known of the four scherzos, but the C sharp minor is the most soaring and poignant. The three sonatas (the B flat minor has the great "Funeral March") are not strictly classical in form, but that does not lessen the inspired content of the second and third. The first was written in Chopin's pupil days.

Huneker, usually correct about Chopin, thinks his Fantasia in F sharp minor "the grandest piece ever written for the piano." The opinion is more enthusiastic than true, but the "Fantasia" nevertheless has its high value. Some rondos and other minor compositions need not detain us, but a parting tribute should go to the shimmering "Berceuse," the soulful and stirring "Barcarolle," and the rippling, passionate "Tarantelle," played not nearly often enough.

In retrospect, we can fully agree with Huneker this time: "One is loath to believe that the echo of Chopin's magic music can ever fall upon unheeding ears. He may become old-fashioned, but, like Mozart, he will remain eternally beautiful."

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL

It is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections
No MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet when using an F & H Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Anyone can connect it in a moment's time to the radio set—occupies only 1 1/2 inch by 4 inch space behind the set, yet enables your radio to operate without an aerial and tune in stations over the entire broadcast band frequencies and short wave channels.

ELIMINATE THE AERIAL FOR GOOD

Attach this unit to your radio—make your set complete in itself—forget aerial wires and troubles—move your set anywhere—no more roof climbing, unsightly lead-in or aerial wires.

NOT NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED

On the market five years, 100,000 customers in U.S. and foreign countries.
In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception. Cannot harm set—Easily connected to any radio, including radios having no ground or radios for doublet aerial. Note: It will not operate on battery or automobile radios.

5 DAYS TRIAL Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.00 plus a few pennies postage on delivery. If not entirely satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.

JUST MAIL THIS COUPON.

F & H Radio Laboratories, Dept. 90, Fargo, N. Dak.
Send F & H Capacity Aerial. Will pay postman $1 plus few cents postage. If not pleased will return within 5 days for $1 refund. Check here if sending $1 with order—thus saving postage cost—same refund guaranteed. Check here if interested in dealer's proposition.

WHAT USERS SAY
LaPorte, Tex. After using the Capacity Aerial Eliminator over a year on my 1935 small 7 tube set can say it brings in reception with fine volume and clarity, pulling in stations from Japan, Europe, South America, and broadcast stations from all over the U. S. Efficiency proven, I took down my old outside aerial. Signed:
Davenport, Ia. Received your Radio Aerial Eliminator and it sure works fine. Also works swell on Short Wave band. Wish I had found it long ago. Signed:

Complete
Does away with Aerial entirely —Just place an
F & H Capacity
Aerial Eliminator
(size 1 1/2 in. x 4 in.)
within your set.
Simple instructions
furnished in unit.
Easily connected by anyone to aerial and ground of set. Your radio will then operate and tune in the same manner as if it were connected to an aerial. Operates on both short and long waves.

 End of Friday Programs

cover for three years, when the un-sinkable Mr. Paige met Bill Lewis, CBS program executive, and told him of his idea. Lewis was interested, wanted to hear an audition. And then Paige's troubles started all over again.

There was the problem of getting a hundred musicians together, a problem solved when the WPA Symphony Orchestra agreed to be guinea-pig for the experiment. Then the unions had to be placated. He went to the local and explained what the success of such a program would mean to musicians all over the country and gained a final consent to go ahead. When this minutiae was cleared up, there was no studio large enough to handle such an orchestra, and he finally arranged to hold the audition on a vacant sound-stage at a movie studio. Technicians got sick, facilities were lacking, but the audition went ahead, and all who were present that day felt the idea was workable, worth while, and offered possibilities.

But in order to do anything with the idea, he had to go to New York. At that time, Paige was conducting the orchestra on the "Hollywood Hotel" program and couldn't get away until that program went off the air. And then more troubles. It was too late to sell the program. Sponsors had already contracted their show and, the few sponsors who had not, thought it too expensive. It was heart-breaking to know that he had a hit show in his pocket and that—from the way things looked—it was apt to stay there.

There were other offers for Paige, personally, but he clung steadfastly to the dream he had nursed so long and, after a grueling six months, he had the deep gratification of watching workmen tear seats out of the CBS Radio Theater No. 1 to make way for his orchestra, sound-engineers treat the walls for better reproduction of the fine and delicate shadings of tone he would give to the world from that room. And he pinched himself to see that he was not still dreaming, that he actually had eight trumpets, eight trombones, four oboes, four bassoons. He went on counting the pieces on his fingers until he reached 99.

There is nothing new in "99 Men and a Girl" except the combination. Popular music, music people love, is as old—almost—as man. Neither is the symphony orchestra a newcomer to the world. But a symphony orchestra, playing music which is popular, is new. Perhaps Raymond Paige is better qualified than anyone else to tell the advantages that such an orchestra has over the smaller groups. When a man battles for ten years to wield a baton over such a group, he knows its advantages and soon learns the disadvantages when he tries to sell his idea. So let's listen, for a moment, to Raymond Paige discoursing on his favorite subject.

"The reason such an orchestra sounds so thrilling is pretty technical," he said, "but in simple terms, it's this. No two instrumentalists sound exactly alike, and when you put eight trumpeters together they produce a subtle blend of overtones that is fuller and rounder—sometimes even softer—than a smaller number of horns. You can't get it any other way than by using eight horns. You can take four horns and step up the volume, but it doesn't give anything like the eight trumpets playing together. Symphony conductors know this. So did the old composers.

"That's why our orchestra has the same thrilling surge that a symphony orchestra has and which cannot be obtained except with adequate instrumentation. Music everybody loves, played by a full symphony orchestra—that's an unbeatable combination. And," he adds more quietly, "it was worth dreaming about and fighting for for ten years."

Perhaps the most vivid description of the music that comes to you each Friday night on the "99 Men and a Girl" program was given by a salesman of the firm sponsoring the program. He said:

"It's music with goose pimples!"

Raymond Paige may be heard Friday nights conducting "99 Men and a Girl" over a CBS network at:

MASSA OF THE HOT, HOT SOUND

with so I can enjoy the rest of the meal. I didn't make him eat it."

The Kysers are religious folks but are not fanatical church-goers. Back in Kay's youth, the family often got together on Sunday evenings and sang hymns. Every member of the family could make music of some sort. The neighbors got to dropping in, and it was then and there that James began being an orchestra-leader, although he never intended to make his living at it.

Mrs. Noell was in New York shortly before Kyser left for the West, and her brother's background is understood when Mrs. Noell tells a few things about the Kysers. Right off the bat, she sets out to clarify a few ideas many persons have about southerners. The idea that many persons think southerners use "you all" (pronounced yawl) in the singular irks her.

She explained that "you all" is used as a collective expression. "We're educated people," she said. She still likes to bristle about the War Between the States. "We don't say Maw and Paw," she said.

Mrs. Noell neglected to explain that the South is a huge section and that its people speak many different dialects. And while it's true that, in many classes, "yawl" and "Maw" are not used, it's also true that among some persons "Pa and Ma" are used, as is "we-uns." The expressions were good enough for Shakespeare. There is no need of trying to explain Kay Kyser's accent. It's North Carolinian. It wouldn't fit a Texan or a Mississippian. The expression "he has a southern accent" is silly. Prof. Kyser has a North Carolina accent. There is no standard of dialects in the South. The section was settled by Scotch, Irish, English, Spaniards, French and Africans, and no two states have the same dialects.

"We say 'Mama' and never 'Maw,'" Mrs. Noell explained. "James often writes to Mama and says, 'Mama, I wouldn't take a nickel for you.' He still is as boyish as he was when he went to school back home.

"He likes to baby Mama. In a way, he was a holy terror as a youngster. When he would come home from school, he'd be bubbling over with energy. He'd barge into the house, run to the dining-room table and pick up his knife and fork and beat a rat-a-tat-tat on the cups and saucers. We'd tell him to stop and he'd say, 'Aw a fellow can't do anything around here.' Then he'd beat the silver again and go, 'a boom-boom, boom-a-de-boom-boom.'"

When Kay was about a year old, the family house burned. All the family possessions, even the Bible, were lost. A new house was built and Mrs. Kyser took in "paying guests" (roomers, not boarders) and helped pay off the loss.

"Mama took James to the Jamestown Exposition when he was two," Mrs. Noell recalled. "He ran away and she found him near the drummer in a brass band.

"James is a human dynamo and he must eat often to replenish his energy. He's a clean-liver. He doesn't drink and he doesn't allow any of the boys in the band to drink."

Ever since Kay has been away from home his family has kept up a steady flow of correspondence with him. Mrs. Noell was surprised when she came across a packet of letters she had written to him over a period of years. They were in one of his trunks. She began to read them. The abundance of quotations from the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick which she had included in her letters interested her. Such quotations as, "If you can be pleasant till 10 o'clock in the morning, you can be pleasant the rest of the day."

Mrs. Kyser saw her reading the letters and demanded, "Why are you reading James' letters?"

Virginia said, "Because I wrote them."

The Kyser family, Virginia said, was reared on the principles of education, culture and "your word is your bond."

"YOU must be a good-liver," Virginia said. "You must have unlimited credit. The more honor you get, the more humble you must be. Labor hath its rewards. James has gotten where he is without any outside pull or finances or help from anyone. Hard work and being eternally on the job is what did it for him."

Whoa! What do you mean "no help from anyone"? With a family like his, what else could a fellow do except go out and make them proud of him. It seems to us that Prof. Kyser had a heap of help—from his mother and sister.

Kay romped his way through school in Rocky Mount and then went over to Chapel Hill to the university, determined to study law. He was a leader right off the bat and was accepted into Sigma Nu and Alpha Kappa Psi. And he won many honors, including leadership of the junior prom, and was elected to the orders of "The Grail" and "The Golden Fleece."

It was in 1926 that he turned seriously to music, quite by accident. He could make noise of a sort on a clarinet. He discovered the university was without a dance orchestra, so he set about to organize one. The boys elected him leader—not because he was such great shakes as a musician, but because he was so popular in college. He intended to give up the band when he was graduated.

In college he produced a minstrel show in his freshman year, another in the sophomore year. And as a junior he wrote, directed, produced and did everything for three extravaganzas. After that he went in for the more serious arts, the "Carolina Play Makers," producers of original folk-plays. He also was cheer-leader.

But the band began to hog his time. "I was musically inclined," Kay said. "Got it from my mother's side. She taught piano and voice, and with her relatives we were able to have a small symphony which gathered at our home on Sunday afternoons. My sister, Virginia, has taught music appreciation and history of the opera for about twenty-five years."

His college band was so popular and so busy that Kay began thinking about making music his business. Six of the fourteen present members of his band were in his original. The band's first pro engagement was in Oxford, N. C., in the fall of 1926. The band got $60, had six members, and knew only six songs.

"We were not smart enough to mix the order in which we played our numbers," Kay said, "and about the third time around the audience began to call the next tune for us."

Kyser still had the idea of completing his law course in the back of his mind until his band got so popular. Several members were graduated a year before him but stuck around and played.

But in 1928 the band was rehearsing in Girard Hall and Kay noticed a middle-aged couple sitting in the back. That was in April.

"The man later approached me," Kay said, "and said he was driving back north from Florida and was stopping to see the university. He decided to offer us a contract for the summer at his resort, eighteen miles from Cleveland, known as Mentor Beach. After conferring with the boys, we decided to take it if he would agree for me to return to the university in June to receive my diploma. He agreed, and my next problem was to get the professors to allow me to double up and complete my courses about a month prior to the end of school. This was arranged and we set out to fill our first long contract. It began on May 19."

Mr. Kyser forgot all about Blackstone. He forgot about his clarinet and directed his band without an instrument, except the baton, which he still does.

The band had selected "Thinking of You" as its theme because it was the first tune the boys played back in 1926, when it was composed. They played it about forty of the leading schools of the Nation, and then set out to make a real name for themselves. It is one of the most democratic bands in the business. Kyser is the boss because he was elected. Hal Kemp had organized a band at North Carolina a few years before Kay, and the two men still are fast friends. His other good friends in the business are Fred Waring, Guy Lombardo, Rudy Vallee, Benny Goodman and Ted Fio-Rito.

HE WAS known in radio several years ago. But he wasn't a big name. His sense of tomfoolery was popular, but he wasn't getting the audience, although he played sustaining programs on national hookups and even had sponsors.

Then one day he went into a huddle with himself and decided a sort of a musical college, with questions and all that, might click. So Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge was founded, endowed by the boys, and Kay became the professor. It began clicking. One day Kay was shaving and a friend turned on the radio. A band was playing and the friend asked Kay the name of the song. Kyser hummed the melody to himself and then named it.

"Hey!" He put down his razor. "That's an idea. Instead of announcing titles, we'll sing them."

The band employed Ginny Simms as vocalist and immediately the word got around that she and Kay were either married or about to be. He watches out for her, sees that she gets the publicity breaks and all that.

Then one day, not so long ago, Mrs.

Kyser opened a letter from Kay which began like this:

"Ginny says I must tell you first—" Mrs. Kyser gasped, "Oh, Lord, he's done it."

"Done what?" asked sister Virginia. "Married Ginny Simms, I suppose," said Mrs. Kyser.

Sister Virginy took the letter to see what had happened to Kay and Singer Ginny. What the letter really said was, "Ginny says I must tell you first, I've just signed a contract with the American Tobacco Company." (Lucky Strikes, and it was one for Kyser.)

On the subject of marriage, Sister Virginia says, "I'd like to see him married. That's the ultimate thing."

Mrs. Kyser says, "Ginny's a lovely girl."

Prof. Kyser says nothing and makes hay.

Kay Kyser's program may be heard Wednesday over an NBC network at:

EDT 10:00 p.m. — EST 9:00 p.m.
CDT 9:00 p.m. — CST 8:00 p.m.
MST 7:00 p.m. — PST 6:00 p.m.

"US KIDS"

ten years old. But more important still is the effect upon the boys and girls of this national use of radio education.

Radio, to most boys and girls who hear it in school hours, is not an instrument by which education is poured in their ears without consideration of what they want. It brings the voices of famous people into their classrooms. It brings living authors to chat about books and to make appreciation of literature real. It brings explorers whose adventures have taken place in strange corners of the globe. It has the technical facilities to make even the most complex subjects dramatic. To make history real, it reproduces word for word, sound for sound, some event of the remote past. To give life to a science broadcast, it picks up the hiss of an atom-smasher or the voice of a great living scientist.

But it is doing still more for our boys and girls. It is bringing them into the picture, and making their opinions, their interests a living lesson for millions of other boys and girls like them in America.

Last spring, on the "American School of the Air," we encouraged more and more student participation. "Frontiers of Democracy," a program of current American problems, was produced every Monday afternoon in a large CBS radio theater. Each week school-children from New York and its vicinity were invited to attend. They watched a brief dramatization of the current problems by professional actors, and then, after a short summing up, they discussed that problem. A trained leader guided them, but the opinions that went out from that theater to the millions of school-children in their classrooms were not adult opinions. They were opinions of young folk just like those listening in.

On Short Waves: Edited by Chas. A. Morrison

President, International DX'ers Alliance

Times given are Eastern Daylight Time. For EST and CDT subtract 1 hour; CST, 2 hours; MST, 3 hours; PST, 4 hours.

ON MARCH 14, 1938, the British Broadcasting Corporation inaugurated a service of news bulletins in Spanish and Portuguese for the benefit of listeners in Latin America. The interest in these Latin periods was very great, but repeated requests for "more Spanish and more Portuguese" could not be denied, so two more new transmitters were added to the large number already in use at Daventry and an all-Latin transmission to be inaugurated on Monday, July 3, will be broadcast daily thereafter from 7:25 to 10:15 p.m. EDT, over Daventry stations GSO (15.18) and GSC (9.58). The former will serve districts south of the Amazon River, the latter will serve districts north of the Amazon. News in Spanish will be given daily at 7:30 and 10 p.m., while the news in Portuguese will be given at 8 p.m. EDT. Simultaneously with the opening of the special Latin program, slight changes in the timings for transmissions five and six have been made. The former will now be heard daily from 7:20 to 10:15 p.m. over GSB (9.51), GSD (11.75) and GSF (15.14), while the latter will be broadcast from 10:40 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. EDT, over GSB (9.51), GSC (9.58), GSD (11.75) and GSI (15.26).

The popular "Jamaica on the Air" program, which has been heard over HH2S (5.98) of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Wednesdays at 9:30 p.m. EDT, has folded up for the summer.

Outstanding sporting events which will be described in eye-witness accounts over the Daventry stations this week include: The Oxford vs. Cambridge cricket matches, to be broadcast on Saturday, July 1; Monday, July 3, and Tuesday, July 4, each day at 8:15 a.m. EDT; the all-England Lawn Tennis Championships, from the famous center court at Wimbledon, to be broadcast on Saturday, July 1, at 12:15 p.m. and on Friday, July 7, at 12:30 p.m.; the feature polo match, in which a team picked by the native princes of India, plays an opposing team made up of the world's finest players, to be broadcast from Hurlingham, on Monday, July 3, at 10:45 a.m. EDT, and the British Open Golf Championship matches, to be broadcast from the Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews, on Friday, July 7, at 8:30 a.m. EDT, all the above features to be heard over GSF, GSG and GSJ.

Martin J. Olthoff of Independence, Kansas, reports the mystery station on 15.41 megs, which broadcasts nightly from 9:55 to 11:15 p.m. EDT, is "Radio Bucharest," a new 50,000-watt short-wave station at Bucharest, Roumania. A woman does most of the announcing.

SHORT-WAVE SHORTS: John Larsen of Geneva, N. Y., reports that COCO of Havana, Cuba, has increased power to 5,000 watts and has shifted to a new frequency of 8.695 megs; that HI1J of San Pedro, D. R., is now on a frequency of 5.92 megs; that COJK, Camaguey, Cuba, has shifted in frequency to 8.65 megs, and is only being heard from 9 to 9:30 p.m. EDT, and that YV4RD (6.3), is the only Venezuelan still broadcasting on its old 49-meter band frequency, all of the others having moved to their new channels in the 62-meter band. A construction permit for a new coastal harbor radiotelephone station on Mackinac Island, to use frequencies of 2.738 and 2.55 megs, has been granted. According to the DIEA, the power of "Radio Guadeloupe" (7.44), at Pointe-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe, is to be raised to 1,000 watts, at which time a new broadcasting schedule, evenings from 10:30 p.m. to midnight EDT, will be adopted.

As soon as the new set-up is put into effect, announcements in English will be made on each period.

The Rattlesnake Placer Mine, near Downieville, Calif., has been granted a permit to operate two 20-watt short-wave transmitters, using the calls of KQDK and KQDL, on a frequency of 2.726 megs. Broadcasts from XPSA (7.01) at Kweiyang, China, heard daily from 6:30 a.m. to noon EDT, open with the Chinese National Anthem and close with the "Song in Memory of Dr. Sun Yat-sen."

NBC's television programs broadcast over W2XBS (sight 45.25; sound 49.75) are so popular that it has been decided to more than double the number of program hours offered to home viewers in the New York City area. Hereafter studio presentations will be seen on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. EDT, while outdoor telecasts relayed by the NBC mobile television station will likewise be stepped up to three hours weekly, including periods on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons. Very fine definition television images continue to be received in a little shack atop Pinnacle Point, a 1,600-foot elevation in the Helderberg Hills near Schenectady, N. Y., which is 130 miles from the New York station. On June 15, the General Electric Company put a complete line of television receivers on sale. Most of these are of the direct-view type, so arranged that the image can be viewed directly on the front of the cabinet rather than using a mirror to reflect the picture. The largest set uses a total of thirty tubes, with the picture image seven and one-half by ten inches.

with the land—and with radio. In ten years, at this rate, he'll be the biggest thing in Texas, where only the big things count. In twenty years—well, write your own ticket.

To the business of radio he's bringing a fresh untrammelled point of view, a lot of that old fight, and the independence of a bull moose. He expects to get out of radio just as much as he puts into it—and a little more. He wants a national reputation, a reputation just as good and just as big, say, as Lowell Thomas'. He wants money and he wants power.

He has one terrific advantage over every other commentator in the business, although it's an advantage that may back-fire: He can always be sure of having plenty of red-hot material. He may not be an ardent New Dealer, but he knows his way around in Washington, and before he'd been on the air a week he had scored two big scoops: One on the refusal of Santo Domingo to accept the S.S. St. Louis refugees, the other on the Garner-for-President boom. To ingratiate themselves with him, to be able to boast, "I gave Elliott the material for a terrific broadcast the other day," press-agents and politicians, big-shots and little-shots all over the country will send him choice behind-the-scenes material. That's all to the good. There will be others, of course, anxious to put any Roosevelt on the spot, who'll deluge him with carefully prepared misinformation, propaganda. That's bad.

But at any rate, he'll be something to listen to. So stand back and give the big guy room to work in.

Elliott Roosevelt may be heard Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday on MBS at:

EDT 7:15 p.m. — EST 6:15 p.m.
CDT 6:15 p.m. — CST 5:15 p.m.

"US KIDS DON'T WANT WAR!"

At CBS we plan to extend this pupil participation. In the 1939-40 school year, some fifty thousand children in New York high schools will witness the programs, and nearly five hundred will take part in the discussions on the air. We also plan to give boys and girls of other states an opportunity to air their opinions before the microphone. To do this, we will introduce the following technique in October. In the "This Living World" series, a period of about ten minutes at the end of each program will be set aside for student discussion. Every CBS station in the country carrying the "American School of the Air" will be notified in advance. As soon as the dramatized part of the program ends, a cue will be given to all stations, and each will thereafter be at liberty to switch off the network and present a local discussion by the students of its own community. In this way the children of more than one hundred individual American communities will have a chance to present their views for the benefit of their immediate neighbors. This plan, fully utilized, will put a thousand pupils on the air each week.

Year by year we learn a little better how to make knowledge more attractive and the presentation of that knowledge a better radio show. Slowly we attain our goal in encouraging more pupils to participate actively in their own education by making learning about such subjects as history, geography and science a thrilling experience.

The CBS educational series, "American School of the Air," heard Monday through Friday during the fall and winter season, has been discontinued during the summer, but will return as usual to CBS in the fall.

perience caught the school-teacher's imagination—stirred a dormant passion.

Visiting her family in Chicago, Irna thought it would be fun to visit a radio station, and if she could, to meet Pat Barnes, whom she liked on the air. When she came to Pat, he mistook her for an audition-seeker. Before she could explain, he had steered her through a reading of "The Bow-Leg Boy," by Eugene Field. A week later, word came that the audition was good and that she could expect a call. She went back to Dayton, unimpressed.

But that chance audition began to stir her once passionate ambition to act. Perhaps radio could lead her, in some way she couldn't see then, to the stage. Less than a year later, she had resigned her teaching position, come to Chicago, and was acting on several WGN dramatic programs.

Then fate intervened—in the guise of a studio-director who asked her to write a Memorial Day program.

"But I can't write," protested Irna. "I've never even tried to write. I'm an actress, not an author."

The director insisted. What she wrote so impressed the station executives that they advised her to stop acting and concentrate on writing. Looking back, Irna Phillips recognizes that interview as the beginning of her real career.

FOR several months, she wrote a family serial drama for WGN. She was puzzled but happy. Puzzled to think that she—Irna Phillips, school-teacher—was now a writer! Happy in the thrilling experience of creative effort! Her mind was full of plots; everybody she met was potential character.

When that first serial had run a year, the young script-writer accepted an offer to write for WMAQ, NBC's key station in Chicago. Collaborating with Walter Wicker, she launched "Today's Children" in 1932 as a local program over WMAQ. The story of Mother Moran and her children of "today," it was the serial which won her fame, and which, though discontinued now, is still considered by many to be her best.

After a long run as a sustaining show, WMAQ officials decided to drop "Today's Children" unless listeners protested. But protest they did. So indignantly and so volubly that instead of being scrapped the sketch was promptly put on the NBC network as a sponsored program.

Irna Phillips had arrived!

But she had yet to achieve the title Fortune magazine gave her in 1938—radio's No. 1 author. It was not until 1937 that her radio family began to multiply. First came "The Guiding Light," tale of a clergyman in the melting-pot area of a large city. The Reverend John Ruthledge, its central character, expounded Miss Phillips' theory that ministers should show, not tell, people how to live. There must have been something in the theory, for the serial skyrocketed to popularity almost instantly. Adding twenty-one more characters to the author's quickly growing family, "The Guiding Light" also required ten thousand more words of writing a week.

The extra load seemed not to hamper Miss Phillips a bit. She took it in stride, breezed through reams of scripts with the ease of a thoroughbred. Before 1937 was over, in fact, she had introduced yet another serial—"Road of Life." This one, a story of young surgeon Doctor Jim Brent, upped her radio family another twenty-odd, meant another ten thousand words a week.

BUT Miss Phillips still had her trump card to play. In 1938 she persuaded her Pillsbury sponsors to junk "Today's Children," which had then run five years and was credited with the largest audience of any daytime serial. Junk it they did. Only to see their prodigious writer come back with a substitute story, "Woman in White," which leaped to the same rank as its predecessor within three months.

Today, Irna Phillips organizes her work on a scale commensurate with its gargantuan proportions. Established in a suite of offices on Chicago's swank near North Side, she comes to work each morning at eight o'clock, most likely meets her "grand" secretary, Gertrude Prys, at the door. The suite has three rooms, all furnished in exquisite taste with colorful oriental rugs and Georgian furniture.

Darting back and forth across the workroom, Miss Phillips dictates the scripts of her three serials to Miss Prys, falling into character as she proceeds. Miss Prys identifies each character by the change of inflection, most of the time knows what sound-effects to insert without being told.

THERE are lots of ways of illustrating the immense amount of writing Irna Phillips turns out. If you can't imagine two million words a year, break it into novels. Counted in novels, her production is twenty-two a year. Such a record puts most famous volume writers to shame. Carlton Morse, her nearest radio rival, has consistently trailed. Kathleen Norris, who boasts sixty-six novels plus, isn't even in the running. But Irna Phillips isn't interested in mere bigness. What does interest her is life, and life—even in fifteen-minute batches—is just naturally big.

That is perhaps as good an explanation as any for the prodigious energy she lavishes on her huge family, for the thousand words she flashes through every working hour that its members might live for the enjoyment of a great listening audience. But it doesn't explain how Irna Phillips, quite unlike the old lady who lived in a shoe, obviously does know what to do and does it superbly well.

"Woman in White" may be heard Monday through Friday over NBC at:

MY VISIT

the King had asked for "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain." While I was singing it I looked at the President, and he made a little gesture. I can't really describe it, it was so subtle, but it was a gesture of tremendous encouragement and approval, too.

The whole affair was regal, but very democratic. That's the only way I can describe it. It had all the elegance and grandeur of majestic England, yet at the same time it was typically American. And let me tell you, Their Majesties enjoyed every minute of it. They were just having a splendid time, and anyone could see that they were charmed by our American way of doing things.

Another thing that impressed me a lot was the homey atmosphere of the White House. That House looks lived in. I remember that when I visited the White House fifteen or sixteen years ago, when I was in grade school, it impressed me as being a museum. But not this time. For instance, near a beautiful statue one may see an inexpensive ash-tray with ashes in it; on the President's desk, the stub of a baseball ticket; under a lovely painting, a toy belonging to one of the Roosevelt grandchildren.

As I came down the stairs on my way back to the studio I passed a little old Negro woman near the cloakroom. I was so excited that as I passed her I said, "I'm so thrilled to have met the King and Queen that I can hardly speak. I'm just floating on air."

And that little attendant—I found out later that her name was Lizzie Macuffy—then said something that made me choke up. She said, "Miz Smith, we's just as happy to see you here as we is to see the King and Queen."

On the dot of eleven we stepped out of the White House into waiting cars and rushed to the studio. Then I added one more thrill to a long day of many thrills when I gave to our West Coast listeners my first account of what had actually happened at the White House.

I'll never forget that day, not as long as I live.

Kate Smith's Songs and Varieties, heard Thursday nights during the fall and winter months, has been discontinued during the summer, but will return as usual to CBS this fall.

MR. FAIRFAX

Mr. Joe Basse, Manhattan, Kan.—Wayne King has not abandoned his orchestra and entered a seminary, although this rumor is circulating in many parts of the country. King is still leading his orchestra and at present is heard over the Mutual Broadcasting System from the Hotel Roosevelt in New York. This department checked with King personally, while he was still playing at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, to see if there was any basis to this rumor. Although Mr. King is aware of the rumor, he is unable to explain it . . . does not know where or why such a tale could have started. He emphatically stated that he has no intentions of entering the religious field. He may be tuned in on Monday and Wednesday nights.
