A Ginger Rogers Story by James Street

The Story of How Big-Name Bandleaders Put Vaudeville on a Paying Basis, p. 34

Kate Smith Pays a Tribute to a Dear Departed Friend

THOSE of us who have danced or listened to Hal Kemp's music were deeply shocked at the news of his death. We first heard him when he came out of the South to head a band which played in New York's old Manger Hotel, and we shall never forget his grand smile and his eagerness to please those who danced while he played. Kate Smith knew him then, too, for she was a comedy dancer in a Broadway musical comedy, and still to become known as the Song-bird of the South.

On a recent broadcast, she talked of Hal in simple, sincere words. I believe all his friends will want to keep this copy of her remarks.

"I'd like to speak for a moment about a friend and fellow artist, a popular bandleader whose name most of you know well, Hal Kemp, who fought a losing battle for life last week after a serious auto accident at Madeira, California. The news of Hal's death on Saturday morning came as a shock to his many friends. I saw him on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. and Mrs. Collins and their daughter, Adelaide, and I were his guests for the holiday dinner at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles, where he and his orchestra were playing to huge crowds nightly. Then, as always, he radiated that warm, sunny personality, and spoke in that slow southern drawl that endeared him to everybody he met.

"Hal Kemp was born in Marion, Alabama, only thirty-six years ago. It was at the University of North Carolina, during his college days, that he started building his musical career. He and his classmates got together and formed a band that later was to become famous all over the country. They were just a bunch of college boys then, making music for the joy of it, and making music that was better than average. Upon graduation, they all went on tour, playing in various cities and towns in captivating staccato rhythm that quickly brought them to the attention of all who loved dancing. Crowds applauded Hal Kemp and his boys in Chicago, in New York, but it wasn't until they took Hollywood by storm that they became outstandingly popular.

"So today I pay tribute to Hal Kemp, who only a week ago was healthy and happy and busy, and who now has gone from our midst . . . Hal was one of those rare personalities that made more than a passing impression on those who knew him. He will be mourned not only by his own family . . . but by many who never saw him. He will be missed . . . and he will be remembered as a fine musician. But more than that, as a fine man."

Joe Penner

JOE PENNER died in his sleep of a heart attack on January 10. He was appearing in a musical comedy in Philadelphia at the time. We were in the studio for Joe Penner's first radio rehearsal. A radio expert whispered, "Watch this fellow. He's going places."

Joe Penner did go places. Within a few months his catchlines were on the tongues of half the nation's moppets. His salary had soared.

KATE SMITH was an old friend of fellow southerner Hal Kemp, knew him when she was a comedy dancer in a Broadway show

He was wanted for motion pictures. His radio show had one of the largest audiences in radio history.

Joe Penner, ex-immigrant boy from Hungary, worked his way to the top. Through all his success, the size of his hatband remained the same. In some far-off corner of Heaven there must be special joy these days. The old-timers such as Will Rogers and Mark Twain and John Bunny and Marie Dressler can relate their stories to new ears, while Joe Penner and Hal Kemp tell them the news of the world they left just behind.

JAMES STREET wrote in Movie-Radio Guide that Bette Davis was a one-man woman, that man being her first husband. As news-alert Walter Winchell mentioned in a recent column, Bette Davis crossed up both Mr. Street and Movie-Radio Guide by getting married to another man. Now Miss Davis (Mrs. Arthur Farnsworth) congratulates Mr. Street in the following sweet words, which came by telegram:

"Loved your life-story of me. Have followed your advice and am calling my present husband Butch. Happy New Year. Bette Davis."

We know Mr. Street will want to reply to Miss Davis. He will want to know how she succeeded in masking her intentions to wed from him and such other astute reporters as were representing Movie-Radio Guide. Until he discovers that, he will not hold up his head as a writer of the whole truth about Hollywood.

While Mr. Street sojourns in Mississippi, we have asked Kay Proctor of Hollywood to write the real story of Miss Davis' surprise marriage. You can read the exciting details in next week's Movie-Radio Guide.

GIRL ON THE COVER: For those who saw "Wagons Roll at Night," Joan Leslie will be an exciting new find for the movies. The auburn-haired, blue-eyed lass who has just celebrated her sixteenth birthday is considered by executives at Warners as much a natural for films as Linda Darnell. But the fact is, Joan—for all of her youth—is no newcomer to pictures but a staid veteran of more pictures than you can count on fingers and toes. Jean Brodel, which is her real name, was a very busy youngster in Hollywood from the time she was seven years old.

Joan Leslie

Whenever a casting-director was faced with a child picture, the first person he thought about was Jean. But today, because she has successfully crossed the chasm lying between adult actors and the "kids," she is being viewed in the light of a rediscovery. Her adult spurs were won in a sparkling short subject, "Alice in Movieland," and on the strength of her work in that she was given a role in "High Sierra." Her next part was in "Wagons Roll at Night." In this, she played with Eddie Albert, who was so impressed that he insisted upon her as the lead for his forthcoming film, "Stuff of Heroes." A VERY much grown-up young lady these days—despite the fact she has just passed her nineteenth birthday—is Universal's singing star, Deanna Durbin. Recently some 250 guests gathered at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, where Deanna—with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Durbin, and the parents of her fiancé, Mr. and Mrs. Val Paul—served as hostess. It turned out to be an engagement party, and the Durbins proudly announced the forthcoming marriage of their daughter to young film director Vaughn Paul, who for the past two years has been Deanna's constant escort. Despite her youth, Deanna has had a long screen career, starting at the age of twelve and at a salary of $150 a week. At the age of nineteen she has made an unbroken succession of hits, and her earnings last year were in excess of $170,000. Young Paul, son of a studio executive, is considered one of the most promising of the crop of young directors in Hollywood today. The marriage is expected to take place on June 7.

MISS GINGER ROGERS, the sparkler girl, learned a very valuable lesson about life very early in life. She was something of a brat as a child, and one day her temper outdid her judgment, if any, and she threw herself on the floor, kicking and screaming. Her mother slapped her pretty face.

Dramatically, Ginger got up, exposed the left side of her face and said, "I turn my left cheek. Strike here."

Her mother let her have one, taking the child at her word. She slapped a lot of temper out of Ginger's head and a little sense into her. But from that day to this Miss Rogers never has turned the other cheek, and when Hollywood pushed her around a bit she wouldn't take it. They tried to type her as a dancer, but she calmly told them, "I'm from Missouri and I'll show you that I'm an actress."

And "Primrose Path" and "Kitty Foyle" show that the Missourian has shown 'em.

We can reasonably expect an epidemic of publicity in which Miss Rogers' life will be paralleled to Kitty Foyle's. Miss Rogers was never a Miss Foyle, but her mother was and the mirrors says:

"Howard Hughes has been sweet on Ginger for some time. He gave her a square-cut emerald solitaire last Christmas and she wears it on her engagement finger. Despite reports to the contrary you can take it from me that the Hughes-Rogers romance is very much alive and that in all likelihood they will elope about the middle of next March."

"Recently a columnist said Hughes was two-timing Ginger in New York. At the moment Hughes was sitting on a davenport right next to Ginger in Hollywood. A friend telephoned her and asked if she suspected Howard. Ginger turned to Howard and said, 'Are you in New York?' Mr. Hughes said he wasn't. Miss Rogers asked, 'Are you two-timing me?' Mr. Hughes laughed."

She is not the most popular woman in films and her feud with Hearstling Louella Parsons, the metaphor mixer and verb monger, is a classic. But the friends she has she holds with hooks of steel.

She might have got into movies when she was a child, but her mother drew the line. Mrs. Rogers went to Hollywood in 1916 and did scenarios for Baby Marie Osborne. But she left Ginger with her grandmother in Kansas City. Miss Osborne now is Ginger's stand-in.

Ginger spent her formative years in Port Worth, Texas, where her mother was a newspaper columnist and drama editor. The child was dance-crazy. She even danced in the bathtub. Naturally, she accompanied her mother to the theater and the bug bit her. Over her mother's protests, she entered a Charleston contest and won. Then she went into vaudeville. When she was seventeen she married Hooper Jack Pepper and the team of Ginger and Pepper did all right as dancing partners but not so well as man and wife. They just agreed to disagree.

Her mother traveled with Ginger. She reckoned her daughter would get tired of the theater and settle down. Maybe to be a school teacher. Ginger once had expressed a desire to be a school teacher. That was when her English teacher lived with the Rogerses.

GINGER was never an ambitious girl, but she knew she could act as well as hoof—and proved it

DANCING is Ginger's favorite form of recreation. She also loves to play ping-pong, to swim, to play tennis and to ride a bike about the countryside near her modest home ognized Ginger but fell into the spirit of the thing. Subtle suggestions were dropped that "Miss Du Pont" looked like good screen material. They finally built the supervisor up to the point where, after viewing Ginger from every camera angle, he suggested she take a screen test. Coily she thanked him, every inch a Du Pont. But Honolulu was calling her.

The following night Ginger attended the opening of a play. As she got out of her car photographers shouted, "Hold it for a picture, please, Miss Rogers." Standing right next to the cameraman was the supervisor. He is still chagrined when an occasional ribber asks if he is going to give "that Du Pont girl" a screen test.

Miss Rogers labored first in the Pathe vineyard. Then she went to Warners and finally to RKO. The studio took advantage of her dancing talents and soon was working her with Fred Astaire in the best dancing shows of the movies. True, RKO was using her in dramatic bits too, but Rogers definitely was typed as Fred Astaire's dancing partner. Then she made the most important decision of her life. She served her studio the ukase that she wanted to act and they gave her a whirl at it.

SOME critics then were comparing her to Katharine Hepburn. It really was unfair to both ladies. Miss Hepburn has an acid tongue and was not exactly sisterly to Rogers. They were cast together in "Stage Door" and Ginger went to Hepburn and asked her frankly what she had against her. She told Hepburn all the persecutions. Hepburn cried, kissed Rogers and since then they have been the best of friends. RKO then began using her as a dramatic actress and Rogers quite rightfully has been put in the class with Bette Davis, Katharine Hepburn, Margaret Sullavan and Luise Rainer.

Miss Sullavan is one of her best friends and Ginger envies her her happiness, particularly her children. About a year ago Ginger began taking stock of herself. She thought a baby would make her life complete. The only hitch was she didn't have a husband. She thought about adopting a baby and her friends told her that at her age she should have her own. Miss Rogers doesn't discuss it, and the only thing we can do is wait and see. Her marriage to Lew Ayres was one of those unfortunate things that happen to professional people. It just didn't work. Ayres is an introvert and Ginger is an extrovert, and when the twain meet there's always trouble.

Just to show you how things can go in Hollywood, wife Ginger set out to get husband Lew an autographed edition of Maugham's "Of Human Bondage." It didn't take long to get the book, but by the time it arrived the Ginger-Ayres marriage was tottering. The book-dealer called her and asked if he should deliver the book to Lew. "I should say not," she said, "I wouldn't give that guy an autographed tennis ball."

She is five feet four inches tall and weighs 112 pounds. She has blue eyes and reddish-brown hair. She never wears make-up on the street because her skin is sensitive and she likes to give it a rest. She applies lipstick with a special brush and sometimes her fingernails are scarlet and the next day they'll be plain.

She and her mother live in Beverly Crest. She has a soda fountain in her playroom and a motion picture of every dance she's ever done with Astaire. She plays tennis, ping-pong and is a fair swimmer.

She also is a movie fan and likes most movies, even the bad ones. Crowds fascinate her and she likes parties. She is studying the accordion. She speaks a little French and a lot of pig-Latin and reads popular novels. She seldom reads newspapers, just glancing at the headlines, the pictures and comics.

She seldom finishes what she starts and will not write with a pencil unless it is long and has a sharp point. She has some cockeyed ideas about economics. She starts such economical tasks as knitting, crocheting and petit-point and then forgets all about them.

She wears clothes long after they are out of vogue. With a normal feminine love of shopping, she often buys a gown, hangs it up and forgets it until it is out of style, and then with perverse practicality she begins to wear it. She wants to be comfortable in her clothes, so she usually wears slacks whenever permissible. She has clothes as chic and distinguished as any to be found. She wears them as the spirit moves her, not by dictate of fashion.

Perhaps the comic illustration of Ginger's haywire economies she admits is her careful collection of paper. Whenever she receives a package, she neatly folds all the tissue and wrapping paper, and stores it in her hat closet. She is now appalled to find that, since she never draws upon her store, most of her hats are crumpled in one corner of the closet to make room for the reams of useless paper. She admits being a procrastinator. But her studio hours she observes religiously, making a point of being on time. Not so with regard to her social engagements. She is invariably late. If she has a seven-thirty appointment she begins dressing at about quarter to seven. Her friends expect it. They make a point of telling her to come early so that she will be on time.

GINGER is ever the small, impish girl. She munches an apple during a radio rehearsal here hearing her lines while driving her auto. Motorists stopping beside her at traffic signals gape while she sings, cries, or threatens.

Miss Rogers has been accused of being snooty. So what? She certainly does not run with the mob. And sometimes she does rather silly things. The famous Hawaiian incident, for example, showed that Miss Rogers' brain sometimes gets in neutral. She had been getting a bad press in Hollywood. She decided to go to Hawaii and on the way over she took her meals in her room. Some of the other passengers thought she was being upstage. If the passengers were as big a nuisance as most travelers you can't blame Miss Rogers for avoiding them.

WHEN she reached Honolulu, the well-known Duke Kahanamoku sent a note offering her the keys to the city. Now, just about as many people know the Duke as know Miss Rogers. He once was a world's champion swimmer and later was sheriff and glamour boy of Honolulu. But Miss Rogers ignored him. He was the official greeter for the city and the unfortunate incident prieked the islanders' vanity.

mother serimped and shoved until she got her child on the way up the ladder. The mother, Lela Rogers, was a white-collar girl and married family-proud Eddins McMath. Virginia McMath was born July 16, 1911, in Independence, Missouri. A cousin tried to say Virginia and it came out Ginger.

Ginger's father and mother parted while she was a child. Without father or brothers, the young lady never understood men, which might explain why her two marriages flopped. Hollywood has matched her with Howard Hughes. Her divorce from Lew Ayres will be final March 13, 1941. This correspondent refuses flatly to predict the ways of Hollywood men and maids, but Mr. Evans Plummer, Movie-RADIO GUIDE's Hollywood oracle, who knows his way around in filmdom's house of

As a matter of fact, Ginger was not an ambitious girl and she never stuck at anything very long. She still doesn't. She works herself into a lather over plans, takes up various interests and then diseards them as fads. Right today she'll come home from town with an elaborate badminton set, play a bit and then forget it. Her mother rather hoped that she would take the theater as a fad. They hot-footed around the country and eventually hit New York. Well, Brooklyn, anyhow. And an eastern motion-picture studio bagged Ginger. She did several pictures for them. They were nothing to run a temperature over. At the same time she was working in musical comedies, and after a little set-to with the movies about money she asked for her release and got it, quite willingly.

Hollywood sent for her after her work in "Girl Crazy." On the way to the Coast she bumped into Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker. Just before they pulled into Hollywood, Ross got a wired invitation to a party from a screen writer-supervisor. Ross knew that the supervisor had known Ginger in New York, so he suggested she come along.

When they arrived at the party it was most evident that the host didn't remember Ginger. Ross drew her aside. "This," he whispered, "is the ideal set-up for a gag. From now on you are Elizabeth du Pont, young millionaire on the way to Honolulu." That was okay with Ginger. Ross had a chance to build up his gag when the Marx brothers came in. They rec-

As to social activity in general, she is mercurial. Periodically she gets a strong yen to be in a big crowd. This happens about once every three weeks. However, she is quite likely to grow tired of it and retire to a remote corner to read her latest New Yorker or Esquire. Her friends are accustomed to this, too. It is still somewhat disconcerting to those who don't know her, as is her amazing and uncontrollable gift of mimicry.

If Ginger is talking with a southerner it is all she can do to keep from saying "you all" and broadcning her vowels to the deepest southern tones. Chatting with a Frenchman, she begins to roll throatily her r's. Unintentionally but invariably she adopts the accent of her conversation companion.

She has a disconcerting habit of re-once of calling her part in "Stage Door" comedy. Gregory LaCava suggested that she didn't know a character part when she played one.

Sometimes she gets her pronunciations twisted. Her worst experience was in making "Stage Door." It was a telephone scene and she was calling just as a girl she didn't like was passing. Her line into the 'phone was, "Hold it—gangrene has set in." For seven times she said, "gangrene has just set in." On the eighth time she got it right. Now she avoids the word.

Ginger is always helping someone and every Christmas she remembers a friend in Texas and one in New York who helped her get started. She will not like the fact that this is being told. It's supposed to be a secret. However,

THE phone jangled sharply at the bedside of Paul Mantz at three in the morning. Nothing out of the ordinary. Paul Mantz is Hollywood's Cupid. He is an airplane pilot, the movie village's daredevil stuntman who once made forty-nine loops in his plane. He also performs the equally perilous stunt of flying most matrimonially minded movie stars to Las Vegas and Yuma for the Great Hitching, and they all seem to get the yen to wed just before dawn's early light.

"Yeah—yeah," Mantz wheezed sleepily into the phone. "Las Vegas? Okay. I'll get the plane warmed up as quickly as possible. Okay . . . don't worry . . . I'll be ready."

"Another wedding, dear?" asked Mrs. Mantz drowsily.

"No, pet," yawned the Flying Cupid, shaking the sleep out of his eyes. An un-wedding! Now where in heck are my shoes?"

Of all the experiences Mendelssohn Mantz has had zooming Hollywood notables in his swift Lockheed, the 275 miles or so to Yuma or Las Vegas, this was the gol-durndest!

The call had come from Carole Landis. It seemed, she wailed, that earlier in the evening she and Willis Hunt, Jr., had driven to Las Vegas with every intent and purpose of getting married. Once arrived in the tiny desert town, Carole had a change of heart. The expectant bridegroom still had honorable intentions and wanted to go ahead with the ceremony, but Carole backed out. She wanted to get out of the marrying village as quickly as possible, and like a flash a brilliant thought came to her. If Mantz could fly folks to Las Vegas for the ceremony, he could fly 'em away from a ceremony.

Leaving a bewildered fiancé to figure out the vagaries of women, Carole packed her shapely body into the plane and made the trip back alone. On the way she dozed off but woke once with a start to inquire rather vaguely of the pilot, "I think mothers know best, don't you?" To this, the pilot only

OVER HOLLYWOOD

Meet the man whose airline to the altar makes elopement in Hollywood an easy matter shrugged a shoulder. The Paul Mantz pilots are trained to take an objective viewpoint on marriages and so forth.

The episode wasn't over. The next afternoon Carole and Willis and Carole's mother drove up to Mantz' office. Carole wore a smile and a cluster of orchids. Her mother had her arm around Willis affectionately and it was a very pally family threesome. Mother kissed daughter good-by, wished them both well, and then the couple stepped into the plane and were off for Las Vegas to cash in their rain-check on the marriage.

"This time I mean it," cooed Carole in the plane cabin, snuggled in Willis' arms.

Which goes to show that Carole is a girl who likes to change her mind. A few weeks later she divorced him.

Mantz sadly admits that Lockheed marriages don't stand up well. Of all the movie couples he has flown to the altar, few have survived past the paper anniversary stage.

"It's the speed with which they do it," he explains. "No matter how long the boy and girl know each other, they're always in an awful hurry to get to Las Vegas. They almost act as though they're afraid that if they waited another day they might change their minds."

Invariably they ask, "How fast can we make it?"

AN HOUR and twenty minutes in the fast plane—a little longer in the regular cabin job."

And even though the fast plane—called the "Love-in-Bloom Limited"—costs $150 against $100 for the slower ship, most couples usually choose the speedier plane to get there fifteen minutes earlier.

For, once Hollywood folks get the Las Vegas urge, nothing can stop them—neither money, fog nor sleet. They know, too, that with Paul Mantz at the controls they'll get there in one piece. Mantz has a hundred-percent record of safely carrying over two hundred Cupid cargoes on their honeymoon sky-rides.

The pre-marriage hanky-panks of the movie couples make for never-a-dull-moment in the life of Hollywood's Flying Cupid.

When Tony Martin and Alice Faye motored to the airport for their wedding flight to Yuma, Alice suddenly developed tremors about going through with it. It wasn't marriage to Tony that frightened her, understand, but the idea of taking to the air for it.

"Let's do it some other time," suggested Alice, looking apprehensively at the big ship waiting to carry them off.

Tony understood what was bothering her and performed what is probably the only case of marriage-kidnaping.

"All right," he said, "but now that we're here, let's circle over the field for a few minutes for fun."

Alice agreed. Tony packed her and the couple who accompanied them into the big plane. As soon as the ship zoomed in the air, Tony whispered to the pilot, "Now head straight for Yuma."

Alice began to perk up after a short while in the air. They were almost half-way to Yuma when she said ruefully, "Now I'm sorry I postponed it. Do you suppose the pilot can take us to Yuma after all?"

Mantz himself is no movie fan, doesn't recognize half the stars who come to him until he reads the screaming headlines of their elopement the next morning.

He remembers the early-morning call which woke him last February.

"We want to get married in a hurry. Can you have a plane for us quickly?" asked the young man.

Mantz instructed him to keep his shirt on and to come down, and meanwhile ordered a pilot to have a plane ready.

The boy and girl were breathless when they arrived at the field. The boy was particularly nervous. "How fast can you make it?"

"A little more than an hour and a half each way."

"Can't you make it faster?" asked the young man, fidgeting with his tie.

"We can lop off a couple of minutes in the faster plane, but it will cost you fifty dollars more."

"Okay, we'll take that." Glancing nervously behind as if they expected a posse to come over the horizon any minute, the couple climbed into the cabin.

The next morning, Mantz was stormed with reporters who wanted details on the surprise elopement of 1940. The nervous couple who were in such a hurry to get married were Artie Shaw and Lana Turner.

MANTZ flies folks to their divorces as well as to their marriages. He flew both Ann Harding and Harry Bannister to Reno for their unhitching. Mantz didn't like that mission very much. He prefers to marry them.

Here is the A to Z procedure of a typical Las Vegas wedding.

2:00 a.m. The couple have been out on a few parties. It's 2 a.m. and love has hit them. They must get married. RIGHT now! They can't wait.

2:05 a.m. They rout Mantz out of bed, tell him they're driving to the airport, must have a plane ready quickly!

2:07 a.m. Mantz phones Zeke, the Las Vegas marriage-chauffeur, to be ready for some customers, and instructs his pilot to roll out a plane.

2:30 a.m. They're off. In the plane Mantz minds his own business. He stares straight ahead while the couple snuggles in private in the cabin. The cabins have the comforts of home.

4:05 a.m. Arrival in Las Vegas. Zeke calls the county clerk and she gets out of bed and goes to City Hall.

4:20 a.m. They all meet for the ceremony, after running the gantlet of catcalls from the vagrants in the town jail on the ground floor of the building.

4:30 a.m. The gay wedding party is now at the home of the minister. The minister's wife stands up for the girl, for which she gets paid. Mantz acts as best man and doesn't charge.

4:40 a.m. The newlyweds are in an awful hurry. Back in the plane.

6:10 a.m. Back in Hollywood, a hot cup of coffee, then waiting reporters and photographers.

There is much rivalry between the sprawling desert towns of Yuma and Las Vegas over the honor of being the favorite hitching-post of Hollywood elopers. Both towns are about equal flying distance from Hollywood and both want the business. Yuma used to be de rigueur up to about three years ago. Now Las Vegas is the thing. Mantz is responsible for the switch, for which the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce considers him their greatest commercial asset outside of legal gambling.

The transfer was made for a practical reason only. The airway to Yuma is unlighted, while the route to Las Vegas is lit up by beacons all the way. Mantz hated to make that night flight to Yuma on the unlighted route, but most couples were in the habit of saying, "Yuma, please."

One night he picked up a couple so much under the influence of love they didn't know which way they were going. Mantz flew them to Las Vegas instead of Yuma and to this day the couple blissfully talk about their "Yuma elopement."

Since then, Mantz has taken things in his own hands and flown couples, willy-nilly to Las Vegas. No one has complained at the switch.

Mantz himself became a bridegroom three years ago during the height of his Yuma and Las Vegas season. Like you, dear reader, we wanted to know.

"Which," we asked, "did you choose? Yuma or Las Vegas?"

MR. AND MRS. FRED ASTAIRE are not often seen at Hollywood parties or night-clubs, but they do like the races, and the opening of the seventh winter season of racing at Santa Anita found them on hand

ALL-AMERICANS Tom Harmon of Michigan and Frankie Albert of Stanford find themselves in demand by the Paramount and M-G-M lots, respectively. With the backing of Bing Crosby, Harmon, who studied dramatics at Michigan, was given a successful test with Constance Moore as his foil, and there is a good chance that he will be seen in Sol Siegel's picture, "College Mystery," or possibly "Parson of Panamint," a Peter B. Kyne story owned by the Paramount lot and originally made as a silent with Dustin Farnum. Albert, phenomenal quarterback of the Palo Alto champion squad, has been made tempting offers by several studios, and visited the Metro lot the day after the Rose Bowl game. However, he has decided to return to Stanford to play football again next season.

Bloodshed for "Blood and Sand"

The recent death of Mexican bull-fighter Alberto Balderas gruesomely enough will provide timely footage for 20th Century-Fox' remake of "Blood and Sand," with Tyrone Power starring. The story, it will be recalled by those who saw Valentino in the silent version, calls for the death of the hero in the arena, so the real funeral of Balderas was photographed by the studio, and in the picture will become Power's cortege.

Hayworth Luck Sheridan's Misfortune

Rita Hayworth, who was borrowed from Columbia Studios by Warner Bros. because of Ann Sheridan's walk-out, and who, after completing "Strawberry Blonde" for that lot, was asked to remain for another picture, has been given a new term contract by Columbia more than doubling her original salary. Meantime, inside facts on "Oomph Girl" Ann's argument with her studio are that the latest Warner offer was for one thousand dollars a week but carrying many contract stipulations deemed objectionable by Miss Sheridan. At the beginning of the argument she was receiving six hundred dollars a week and was offered eight hundred dollars to make peace. Possibility of a settlement is in sight as the result of Columbia producer Wesley Ruggles' offer to buy Ann's contract; he would like to have her for the leading lady in "The Doctor's Husband."

"Blackout"

Cast: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson, Hay Petrie, Esmond Knight, Raymond Lovell, et al. A United Artists picture, produced by John Corfield and directed by Michael Powell.

"BLACKOUT" brings to the screen a vivid picture of the war and how it affects the daily lives of people in a big city. It shows how activity and hubbub carry on in the darkness of the blackout just as they do in the light of the ordered world.

This story is interesting because it actually pictures people going to and coming from work in darkness, hopping onto packed buses with only a small flashlight as a guide, reading sign-posts with just the dim glare of a tightly shaded lamp.

Conrad Veidt is cast as the skipper of a neutral Danish freighter. Stopped by a British patrol ship in search of contraband, he is forced to spend the night in an English port to await approval of his cargo. What happens to him that night makes the story.

One of his passengers, a woman (Valerie Hobson), steals his landing permit and his first mate's permit, and she and her companion get ashore. Veidt pursues them, and catches up with them on a train bound for London. When they arrive in London, in his pursuit of her, he becomes involved with the Gestapo and discovers that the woman and her friend are British agents. They (Veidt and Hobson) are captured by German agents, active in London, and he escapes, later rescues her.

Veidt gives a suave and convincing performance; Valerie Hobson rings the bell both for beauty and talent in this picture, filmed entirely in blacked-out London.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Hollywood Reporter, "An exceedingly interesting and suspenseful picture." Variety, "The tale is skillfully and convincingly told." Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), "Its effectiveness increased by the Veidt portrayal."

"Cheers for Miss Bishop"

Cast: Martha Scott, William Gargan, Edmund Gwenn, Sterling Holloway, Sidney Blackmer, Mary Anderson, Dorothy Peterson, Donald Douglas, Marsha Hunt, Ralph Bowman, Lois Ranson, Rosemary DeCamp, Knox Manning, et al. A United Artists picture, produced by Richard A. Rowland and directed by Tay Garnett, who also directed "Seven Sinners." From the novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

"CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP" is a great woman's picture—one of the most moving Hollywood has made in a long time. It's the heart-breaking story of a woman who held her ideals foremost in her life, and who never dropped the torch.

Martha Scott is Ella Bishop, a girl who enters Midwestern College on the day it first opens its doors. After graduation she becomes a teacher there, falls ecstatically in love with Delbert Thompson (Donald Douglas). They are about to be married, when Thompson confesses to Miss Bishop that in an unguarded moment he had been indiscreet with her cousin, Amy, who lives with her. After he and Amy go away, Miss Bishop finds companionship with Sam (William Gargan). Later Amy comes back home, where a daughter is born to her and she dies in childbirth. Miss Bishop adopts the child.

Years go by and Miss Bishop again falls in love, this time with Prof. John Stevens (Sidney Blackmer). Another climax comes when she learns that John is married and that his wife will not divorce him because of her religious vows. Miss Bishop decides to remain at Midwestern and grow old with it, and thus she is at peace with the world.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), "Martha Scott rates recognition corresponding to a Helen Hayes." Examiner (Louella Parsons), "Martha Scott creates new history in Hollywood's great performances." Los Angeles Daily News (Virginia Wright), "Martha Scott in the title role is ideal."

"Virginia"

Cast: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Sterling Hayden, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee, Marie Wilson, Paul Hurst, Tom Rutherford, et al. A Paramount production in Technicolor, produced and directed by Edward H. Griffith, who also directed Miss Carroll and MacMurray in "Honeymoon in Bali" and "Cafe Society."

"VIRGINIA" is an excellent romantic drama highlighted by a powerful love-story, appealing color photography, and the brilliant performance of little Carolyn Lee, first seen on the screen in "Honeymoon in Bali" and destined—if her well-to-do steel-executive father will permit the continuance of her career—to be another Shirley Temple.

"Virginia" is set in the Virginia of today, burdened with century-old traditions and struggling to make its own way without the help of wealthy northerners, who seek to buy historic old estates as playthings. Charlotte Dunterry (Madeleine Carroll) returns to the old Dunterry homestead which she left as an infant and is greeted at the depot by Stonewall Elliott (Fred MacMurray) and his little daughter Pretty (Carolyn Lee). Charlotte doesn't remember Stonewall, but he hasn't forgotten her (he used to bathe her when she was but a baby). She becomes fascinated with Elliott, her neighbor, and he with her in a most restrained fashion because he prefers to remain gallant about his wife, the mother of his baby, who to all intents and purposes has deserted him. Norman Williams (Sterling Hayden) is another Dunterry neighbor. Williams likewise becomes infatuated with Miss Dunterry and tries his best to win her, but to tell more of the story would spoil a good picture.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), "Many things both commend and recommend 'Virginia.'" Variety, "A solid, absorbing story . . . begets a wealth of entertainment." Hollywood Reporter, "One of the truly fine pictures of this or any year . . . grand entertainment."

"Romance of the Rio Grande"

Cast: Cesar Romero, Patricia Morison, Lynne Roberts, Ricardo Cortez, Chris-Pin Martin, Pedro de Cordoba, et al. A 20th Century-Fox picture, produced by Sol M. Wurtzel and directed by Herbert I. Leeds, who also directed "Arizona Wildcat." Based on the novel, "Conquistador."

"ROMANCE OF THE RIO GRANDE" comes along as a nice topper to the Cisco Kid series. It's pleasant and light entertainment, with Cesar Romero giving his all for fans who like westerns. The best of the Cisco Kid pictures so far, it brings Patricia Morison into the cast as a pleasant newcomer.

Cisco becomes involved in the romantic homecoming of young Don Carlos Hernandez, grandson of wealthy landowner Don Fernando, when Carlos is attacked by gunmen as he approaches his grandfather's ranch. Cisco rescues Carlos and discovers that they resemble one another so strongly they could easily be taken for twin brothers. When Cisco learns the story of Carlos, he puts him in the care of a friend and goes on to the ranch, pretending that he is Carlos. What happens from then on is exciting and entertaining. Cisco changes into a Mexican Robin Hood, puts the ranch in good order, then leaves, sending the real Don Carlos back on home.

Most interesting performance of the supporting cast is that of Lynne Roberts, beautiful brunette with a lovely singing voice. Patricia Morison and Ricardo Cortez give good characterizations, while Chris-Pin Martin is excellent, as usual.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Los Angeles Times (Jimmie Fidler), "The Cisco Kid rides to new adventures in the best instalment of a very entertaining series." Daily Variety, "Vast army of Cisco Kid followers will gain new recruits . . ." Hollywood Reporter, ". . . Easily one of the better numbers in the Cisco Kid series . . ."

in the Film Fame Sweepstakes

FINDING stars for America's movies is the world's greatest gamble, with a cash pay-off that makes the Irish Sweepstakes look like penny-ante. It's a sort of free-for-all that's liable to crown anybody's neighbor Queen of the May without warning.

Sending its five hundred scouts to comb every city and village in the land for talent, and spending fifteen million dollars a year to train and ballyhoo their catch into tempting titbits, Hollywood deals in fame and fortune in carload lots.

But in stirring up his dainty morsels, old man Cinema is a cook without a recipe, and doesn't know whether he's going to dish out a crepe-suzette or a roll of tripe. And it's this element of chance that makes star-picking a headache for Hollywood, and a great game for the rest of the country.

So that you can name your winners and gloat as your predictions come true, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE's "talent tout" passes out the dope herewith:

Now let's see what's on the board. Here's an entry two studios are playing on the nose for stardom: Virginia Gilmore. What's Virginia got that you and I haven't?

Not beauty, curves or glamour. Samuel Goldwyn and 20th Century-Fox aren't betting on this filly for what catches the eye. So let's discover what's different about this girl.

At the age of twelve Virginia had her heart set on joining a little-theater group in San Francisco. As they were more than a trifle radical, her mother and step-father scoffed at the idea. So Virginia took the matter in her own hands. Instead of attending school in Burlingame, she used her lunch money for carfare to San Francisco each day.

There she haunted the theater group until she got an audition and an opportunity to rehearse for the play, "Awakening of Spring."

Day after day for three months she rode the trolley between the city and Burlingame. Finally she was admitted to the group and was cast to a part. As that meant spending her evenings in San Francisco, Virginia had to confess to her mother that she had been "skipping" school and playing actress.

She discovered her deception was known, and that she had been allowed to continue it as a test of her determination, to discover if she really wanted to be an actress badly enough to surmount obstacles. She had, and since she must possess ability to win a part in a play, she could join the group.

Excited and happy, she moved into the weird abode of the players. It was one of the "earthquake houses" on Telegraph Hill. San Francisco's disaster had left it grotesquely misshapen. Its doors were cock-eyed, its windows askew, and its floor so slanted that a few hours under its leaky roof convinced one the whole world was on the bias once he stepped outside again.

The group put on every type of play, finally being taken over by the Federal Theater Project. Then Virginia's work had a wider audience. A Hollywood scout saw her, and one day a letter from the Samuel Goldwyn studios came to the old house on the hill.

Naturally, to admit interest in motion pictures was to lose face with the group. With almost every member of the group at her elbow Virginia answered Samuel Goldwyn's invitation to come down and have a test made. She was not interested in pictures, she wrote, because of her commitment to do a show in New York. What show no one has discovered to date.

Goldwyn wrote again, urging her to go to New York by way of Hollywood, and to see him en route.

Virginia dropped in on Goldwyn and was so confident of her own ability, so faintly interested in movies and so eager to get on to New York that Sam signed her without a test. In spite of the fact that she had crooked teeth, a boyish bob hacked by a member of the group and a lisp.

Whether Goldwyn saw real genius under this girl's highly individualist appearance and manner, or whether he didn't want anyone to know he signed her "as is," he hired instructors to teach her French, Spanish, music, diction and dancing. He put her in the hands of dentists, doctors, hairdressers and dressmakers.

For almost two years Goldwyn paid her a salary and wrote checks to cover everything that was done for her—without giving her a day's work in pictures.

Then, for one of the mysterious reasons known to Hollywood, 20th Century-Fox put her in a "B" picture called "Manhattan Heartbeat." Then in another "B" called "Jennie."

After that came a small part in "Laddie" at RKO.

About this time Fox got a good look at the picture "Jennie" and bought half Gilmore's contract from Goldwyn. The instant this deal was closed 20th Century signed her to the feminine lead in their super-duper "Western Union."

A year and a half without a day's work in a picture—then four pictures in five months. That was Virginia Gilmore's record. And more amazing, she was given the lead in one of the biggest pictures of the year without ever having been seen on the screen by the public.

She has just finished "Tall, Dark and Handsome," the picture in which she is co-featured with Cesar Romero, and goes to Goldwyn to make "Little Foxes" with Bette Davis. Meanwhile, Fox is wondering how they can arrange the shooting schedule on "How Green Was My Valley" to get her into that also.

THERE is only one answer to the amazing play this girl is getting. Hollywood believes she possesses real dramatic genius. She has not beauty, glamour, curves or outstanding personality. In fact, Virginia is positively miserable when she has to meet strangers, and her lisp is entirely due to self-consciousness. One thing she does possess, however, is a smile that transforms her. She has blond hair and very large brown eyes, is five feet four and weighs 110 pounds. Her real name is Sherman Poole.

In contrast to Virginia Gilmore is Veronica Lake, Paramount's ultraglamorous beauty. Like Mary Beth Hughes and Lana Turner, Veronica has dangerous curves.

Few if any youngsters have ever drawn Hollywood's spotlight as quickly and sensationally as Veronica Lake.

Though not yet seen on the screen, she has been the talk of the town for months. Paramount officials happened to see a test of this hundred-pound bomb of feminine lure that was made at M-G-M and rushed to sign her. Now her dramatic portrayal of the cafe entertainer who comes to a tragic end in "They Wanted Wings" is the talk of the studio.

Veronica's meteoric career is as much a surprise to her as to the picture colony. A bare nine months ago as Constance Keane she was plowed under by Paramount's talent head's remark: "You're just another Hollywood cutie—with really nothing to offer pictures. Sorry."

Today she is one of the most discussed players in Hollywood, and the public has never had a glimpse of her on the screen. The hard, tough row has never been Veronica's lot.

Born in Lake Placid, New York, she went to the Villa Maria convent in Montreal at the age of five. Then studied medicine at Magill University in that city.

Got the idea of being a doctor when she was given a nurse's outfit at the age of four. From that minute on spent her time patching up dolls and playing hospital.

Her father, a commercial artist, maintained homes in New York City, Lake Placid and Miami Beach, Florida. It was in the last-named that Veronica, a lover of storms who thrills to the crackle of lightning, the rumble of thunder and the whistling of gales, realized what she believes will be the biggest moment of her life. She was just six when their fifteen-room house in Miami Beach was blown two city blocks from its foundation by the hurricane of 1926.

While studying medicine at Magill, Veronica accompanied her parents on an automobile trip to California—but never went near a movie studio. They returned east—but moved out again the following year, with Veronica quitting college in the second year of her pre-med course.

This time the cinema raised its ugly head, for Veronica met Gwen Horn, who was in pictures. She accompanied Gwen to an interview at RKO and was bitten by the bug.

So she enrolled in one of Hollywood's innumerable little theaters and took part in half a dozen plays. Then she started the rounds of the studios and was practically advised by Paramount to take a dose of castor oil and forget it.

But she didn't, and managed to get bit parts in RKO's "Sorority House," Fox' "Jones Family" and M-G-M's "Forty Little Mothers." Then came the M-G-M test and the Paramount grab.

Veronica's a freckled blonde with blue eyes; is five feet two and weighs ninety-eight pounds. And as for the distribution of her curves: She has a nineteen-inch waist, a thirty-three-and-one-half-inch bust and is thirty-three and one-half inches around the hips. Which, experts in feminine form tell us, is just about 11.

ENTIRELY unlike Gilmore or Lake is Hollywood's third sensation: Joan Leslie at Warners. This auburn-haired blue-eyed youngster will have her sixteenth birthday just about the time this reaches the stands.

Unless my eyes deceived me and my ears didn't catch what the other players on the "Wagons Roll at Night" set were saying, this girl has everything: Beauty, glamour in the budding, personality and talent. She is considered as much a "natural" as Linda Darnell.

As a child actress in Hollywood Joan has played in too many pictures to enumerate—but under her real name of Joan Brodel she was a very busy youngster. The most amazing thing about her is that one hears from those who work with this girl that she is absolutely unaffected and charmingly natural—in spite of a modeling, theatrical, radio and vaudeville career that started at the age of three.

Today—and this is one of the peculiarities of motion pictures and Hollywood

—Joan is regarded in the light of a "discovery." This is due to two reasons: Because of the great physical change from childhood to young womanhood, and the often uncrossable chasm that lies between adult players and the "kids."

At any rate, Warners decided to experiment, and as a special sort of test put Joan in a short called "Alice in Movieland." Her excellent performance and sparkling personality in that film—which is being touted for the Academy Award—won her a part in "High Sierra." A glance at the rough cut of that, and the studio east her in "Wagons Roll at Night," a circus picture in which she did some scenes with Eddie Albert. As a result Eddie requested that she be given the feminine lead opposite him in "Stuff of Heroes," in which she is now working.

STERLING HAYDEN is answer to demand for a dashing he-man type

—Eugene Robert Riches

Joan is at the most impressionable age, and those who believe she is destined to be one of the great stars of Hollywood are hoping she will not lose her natural charm and become affected or theatrical. They think she won't, because of the experience that lies behind her.

Joan is five feet four inches, weighs 118 pounds and possesses a lovely figure.

And now for a glance at the best bets among the men.

STERLING HAYDEN is heaven's answer to Hollywood's plea for a real and legitimate he-man adventurer. He's six feet four, weighs 210 pounds and is a regular 1941 model of Viking.

As a youngster Sterling learned to sail Maine's rocky inlets under the guidance of salty old "Cap'n" Al McIntyre. When his career at the Brown and Nichols School of Cambridge—where he captained the crew and wrestling team—was cut short by financial difficulties, he turned to his first love, the sea.

He sailed on a schooner to Balboa Beach, California, but as his salary was only twenty-five cents a month, he returned east by freight. Next he served as captain and crew on a small yacht cruising Maine waters.

Winter didn't drive Sterling off the sea—merely out with a Gloucester fishing crew. His next sailing job took him to the warmer waters of Florida—where he was "beached" with sixty cents and a shipmate. They camped out for a couple of days in Miami's Bay Front Park, living on peanut butter and bread. Job as fireman on the steamer Florida plying to Havana, Cuba, got him off the beach.

In 1937, as mate of the schooner Yankee he cruised around the world. Later, as navigator aboard the famed Gloucester schooner, Gertrude L. Thibaud, when it raced the Bluenose in the International Fishermen's Race, Hayden was "discovered" by an eastern newspaperman. He became the subject of a barrage of letters to a Hollywood movie-talent agent. According to this newspaperman, Sterling had everything Hollywood's adventure heroes wished they had.

Meanwhile Sterling kept to his sailing, finally getting a schooner of his own.

He planned to start a passenger service between Hawaii and Tahiti but the war interfered. Also, his sailing days were numbered, as the Hollywood agent was working on him, and had brought his exploits and physical appearance to the attention of director E. H. Griffith.

Griffith, who was looking for a striking type for the picture "Virginia," had seen a picture of Hayden in a national magazine. Griffith went cast, tested Sterling and brought him back to Hollywood. And the first sneak preview of "Virginia" convinced Paramount that it had the male catch of the year.

Another world rover and adventurer, but of an entirely different type, is found among Hollywood's best bets. John Sutton's an American-born, English-educated lad of British paren-

IGNACIO RUIZ, the first man to climb to the top of Mt. Whitney (14,996 ft.) back in 1904, doffed his cap to the trail-blazing efforts of the cameramen who filmed Warner Bros.' "High Sierra," for many of the scenes were photographed on the steep slopes of America's highest mountain, and at a height greater than any yet achieved in filming an American motion picture with earth-based sound equipment. Twenty men worked four days to clear a path for the train of mountain-reared Spanish mules used to pack in the cameras and equipment. Arriving in the shadow of Mt. Whitney during the deer season, director Raoul Walsh and the more than two hundred members of the location group wore bright-colored jackets while not working to avoid being mistaken for deer by quick-fingered, eager hunters. Bogart, on a hunting-trip during the location stay, shot the first deer of the season—a two-hundred-pound buck and the second-largest killed in that vicinity in recent years. Wade Boteler, who played the sheriff, has played sheriff roles in 240 pictures since 1927, but his posse of twenty-five men was composed of Hollywood stuntmen. Stuntmen were needed for the pursuit scene in the mountains, but neither Boteler nor Bogart would permit extras to substitute for them. "High Sierra" is scheduled for release in January.

EARLE, in love with Marie, puts her on a bus, using his last cent for fare, returns to his Sierra hideout, where death from the posse awaits him

"March of Dimes" on NBC, CBS, MBS Saturday

AN INFANTILE paralysis germ doesn't have the bangs of a Hitler, the jowls of a Mussolini or the handle-bars mustache of a Stalin. But it does strike secretly, insidiously and ruinously. Its threat to American health and happiness is closer to home, more solidly entrenched than that of the foreign dictators. And the need for home defenses against it, among other domestic menaces, must not be lost sight of in the shadow of international upheavals. President Roosevelt himself has not only "seen war and hated war" but he has likewise felt paralysis, hated it, battled it to submission privately, and he now leads in the public campaign to smash it. Showman-comedian Eddie Cantor and producer Vick Knight are leaders, too. They are again combining their energies to put together one of those annual "March of Dimes" shows, which are held in connection with President Roosevelt's birthday and which invariably turn out to be not only big money producers for the Infantile Paralysis Foundation but also a brilliant highlight of the whole year's radio listening. This year's radio rally, to be held Saturday, January 25, under the expert guidance of producer Knight, promises to be one of the biggest and best yet. Leading the pep cheers for the polios will be Eddie Cantor, who is credited with coining the phrase "March of Dimes" and who has been master of ceremonies of the production since it started. Crowding the air stage will be a rooting squad of the foremost stars of radio and films. Air comedian number one Jack Benny and his company of stooges will do their bit. Breezy Bob Hope will be on hand. Rudy Vallee and John Barrymore may be expected to square off in a "Battle of the Golden Bantams." The blue-blazes songstress Dinah Shore will warble. So also will Olive Major, thirteen-year-old singer trained and introduced by Cantor. There will be contributions by Bette Davis, Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Burns and Allen, Fibber McGee and Molly, Baby Snooks, Charlie McCarthy, Amos 'n' Andy, Jimmy Cagney, Humphrey Bogart and others. Twofold piece de resistance will be a unity talk by Wendell L. BMI-ASCAP Battle Ballot

SEND us your Battle Ballot immediately! Broadcasters have formed their own music-publishing company called Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI), to combat another music pool called ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers). Since January 1, 1941, all ASCAP tunes have been ruled off the air by the networks. Only BMI tunes are now being used. As a radio listener, you have a stake in the settlement of the dispute. (See Movie-Radio Guide for Dec. 21-27.) What is your opinion of the music you have heard since January 1? Please use the ballot below to give us your answer and mail promptly.

Tear out and mail to the BMI-ASCAP Battle Poll, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.

I think the music on network programs since January 1 is ☐ BETTER, ☐ WORSE, ☐ ABOUT THE SAME. (Please mark with an X.)

Were you aware of a change in the musical quality of programs after January 1? ☐ YES, ☐ NO.

Do you think music of the sort you are now hearing will be satisfactory permanently? ☐ YES, ☐ NO.

Do you think ASCAP and BMI should get together and cooperate instead of continuing the fight which deprives listeners of some of their favorite numbers? ☐ YES, ☐ NO.

This is a confidential poll, so you need not sign your name. The ballot above can be posted and mailed on a penny postal if you wish.

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA COMPANY PRESENTS "MADAMA BUTTERFLY" BY GIACOMO PUCCINI, NBC. The cast: Madama Butterfly, Licia Albanese, soprano; Lieutenant Pinkerton, Armand Tokatyan, tenor; Suzuki, Lucille Browning, soprano; U. S. Consul Sharpless, John Brownlee, baritone; Uncle Priest, John Gurney, bass; Yamadori, Alessio de Paolis, tenor; Kate Pinkerton, Maxine Stellman, soprano. Conductor, Gennaro Papi.

One of the most tragically beautiful of all operas, "Madama Butterfly" was based on an American play by John Luther Long and David Belasco. It opens in a Japanese garden. An American naval lieutenant, rejoicing in the name of Benjamin Franklin Pinkerton, is about to marry a pretty Japanese geisha girl in a Japanese ceremony, which he doesn't take very seriously. His friend, Sharpless, the American consul, warns him against the consequences, but Pinkerton laughs at him and they drink a toast to the U. S. A. to the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" (probably the only known use of that tune in opera). Butterfly arrives, and after the marriage contract is signed an uncle-priest curses her for renouncing her faith, and the wedding guests leave, terrified. Pinkerton tries to comfort Butterfly and the act ends in an ecstatic love duet. The time of the second act, in Butterfly's house, is two years later. Pinkerton has left her but she believes firmly in his return, and describes his arrival to her maid, Suzuki. In the famous aria, "Un bel di vedremo" (One Fine Day He Will Return). Sharpless comes to read Butterfly a letter from Pinkerton, but is interrupted by a suitor seeking her hand, whom she refuses, declaring her love for Pinkerton. Sharpless hints that Pinkerton may not come back, and Butterfly reveals that she has had a child, which she has named Trouble, and brings him out to show Sharpless. Soon after Sharpless' departure a cannon booms, and, in one of the most touching scenes in the opera, Butterfly and Suzuki sight Pinkerton's ship in the harbor. They make elaborate preparations to welcome him, and settle themselves at the window with Trouble to await him. In Act III they are still at the window after an all night vigil. Butterfly leaves the room for a moment and Pinkerton and Sharpless arrive with a strange woman—Pinkerton's American wife, Kate—who, when told of the child, offers to take him. Pinkerton and Kate beg Sharpless to tell Butterfly, who, insane with grief, sends the consul away and bids him return in half an hour for the child. She blindfolds Trouble, sticks an American flag in his hand, and when Pinkerton and Sharpless return they find Butterfly dead, stabbed by her own hand.

The music is lovely from beginning to end, the highlights being the love duet in Act I, the duet between Suzuki and Butterfly in Act II, the waiting scene at the window and the tragic ending.

SILVER THEATER, CBS. Judy Garland in her own original play.

Judy Garland is getting to be quite a grown-up woman—as teen-agers go. She's being linked romantically with Dave Rose, Martha Raye's musical ex-husband. Judy has always had a big singing voice. And she has been growing fast in her screen acting, too. Now she's going to act in a play which she wrote herself a couple of years ago—and that's a woman-size job. You'll hear it on "Silver Theater" this week.

SCREEN GUILD THEATER, CBS. Alice Faye and Herbert Marshall in "If You Could Only Cook."

HELEN HAYES THEATER, CBS. "Bid for Happiness."

An auction is a commonplace institution of American life. And you'd hardly expect to find yourself bidding for an intangible item like happiness while the auctioneer's hammer pounds out the strokes of fate. You wouldn't expect it to happen to you, but it happened to two people. It makes a fascinating and unusual story—how a little trinket played a big part in two lives.

COLUMBIA WORKSHOP, CBS. Larry Robinson in "This Is From David."

If "these are times that try men's souls," what of children—and their souls? And all their future lives? For they can be bruised and scarred for tomorrow by today's circumstances working directly, and doubly by fate acting indirectly through its effects on their parents.

Children are the pawns of today's troubles, are they not? Pawns of war, crime and divorce—of public vice and private sin. Punching-bags often for punch-drunk pugs in the ring of life.

Big words, those. But to children life and the world are big. Little things are magnified. Peaks of emotion are high, depths are abysmal. Take the case, for instance, of David. Neglected by his parents, he sought happiness through the medium of letters he wrote to his mother. But could this psychological escape replace affection and companionship?

Listen to "Columbia Workshop" this week for this absorbing story of one of today's children and his pathetic problem. The leading role will be taken by young Larry Robinson, stage and radio actor.

Here it gives us pleasure to announce that this dynamic dramatic series can now be heard once again from Coast to Coast. For some time "Columbia Workshop" has been cramped into a spot where it was heard on only a few eastern stations, because "Helen Hayes Theater" was being broadcast on the network's main chain of stations at the same time. But now "Columbia Workshop" has been given two Sunday evening broadcasts, something rare for a sustaining show.

It is headline news that this series, with its impressive tradition both of technique and entertainment appeal, is returned to its rightful place in the dramatic sun.

LUX RADIO THEATER, CBS. Shirley Temple, guest.

Shirley Temple, as you must have read or heard by now, has ended her year-long retirement from the screen—to grow up. They grow up fast these days, so eleven-year-old Shirley has been signed by M-G-M at $2,500 a week. Since making her last picture over a year ago, Shirley has been going to a girls' school and following the normal existence of a normal girl her age. But she says she is happy to return to the screen, for school has been pretty dull. Virtually born with a silver screen in her mouth, film life might be expected to be her "normal existence."

Shirley's radio appearances have been collectors' items for listeners, because of both their appeal and their rarity. She made her first broadcast in December, 1939, on the charity show, "Screen Guild Theater." Only a few months ago "Lux Radio Theater" presented her in her first paid (and well-paid—at a $5,000 figure) radio performance in "The Littlest Rebel." This week, capitalizing on her return to the film fold, "Lux" again brings the little artist to the air—in a vehicle yet to be announced. You can expect showgirl Shirley and showman DeMille to make the most of the occasion with a great show.

KATE SMITH HOUR, CBS. Dean Jagger in "Western Union."

Even Abe Lincoln said it was a wild scheme. And the greatest engineers of the day said it couldn't be done.

Yet Edward Creighton fought Indians, renegades, desert heat and mountain snow to build a thousand miles of telegraph lines through the early West. He spent $212,000 to build the line from Omaha to Salt Lake City. Over a million Hollywood dollars went into the make-believe recreation of the historic episode by 20th Century-Fox in the filming of "Western Union." Zane Grey's last book before his death.

Dean Jagger was so impressive as "Brigham Young" on the screen that his role as Western Union engineer Creighton was especially "written up" for the film; and Jagger also was brought into "Western Union" for a few scenes as Brigham Young, who sent the first message over the new line to President Lincoln.

Dean Jagger will appear in scenes from "Western Union" on the "Kate Smith Hour" this Friday.

DEATH VALLEY DAYS, NBC. John MacBryde, Jean King, Geoffrey Bryant and others in "Lone Operator."

American history turns back to a well-thumbed but imperishable page this week when the Old Ranger tells the story of a solitary telegraph operator. The hero is young John M. Carnahan, who was the only operator in Bismarck, N. Dak., back in 1876. He isn't so well known to history. But his heroic loyalty to his duty brought to the nation the dramatic news of another heroic though bloody event—the story of General Custer's almost legendary "last stand."

Young Carnahan, whose frontier office and home were combined in a boxcar, was a friend of Gen. George Custer, in command of the 7th U. S. Cavalry, stationed at near-by Fort Lincoln. So it was with personal concern as well as patriotic eagerness that the telegraph operator waited for weeks for news of the historic expedition against the Sioux Indians in 1876. Then as the little town of Bismarck was winding up its Fourth of July celebration, word came that Custer and his entire command of 264 men had been annihilated on the Big Horn in Montana.

How the valiant young pioneer of the telegraph key stuck to his post for an incredible eighty hours of sending the complete story to the press and the War Department makes an exciting, dramatic episode that belongs to the colorful chronicle of the Custer Massacre.

EVERYMAN'S THEATER, NBC. Marlene Dietrich in "Madame Affame."

But don't quote us! And don't blame us if you tune in to hear the above-listed guest star and title, and then hear someone and something entirely different.

Arch Oboler has a right to change his mind about what he'll put on the air—whether he's prompted to do so by whim or by a circumstance like Bette Davis' surprise elopement (canceling her scheduled appearance in "Of Human Bondage" on "Everyman's Theater," as announced in this department two weeks ago, and moving up "Papa Jonathan," announced as last week's production). At any rate, we haven't had much luck prognosticating correctly the offerings of "Everyman's Theater."

Tune in this Friday and if you hear Marlene Dietrich in "Madame Affame," you'll probably like it. Give Marlene and Arch the credit. But if you hear something else and resent being surprised—don't say we didn't warn you!

Eastern 9:30 p.m. Central 8:30 p.m. Mountain 7:30 p.m. Pacific 6:30 p.m.

HELEN HAYES (l.) and Charita Bauer do scene in "Strange Victory" on "Helen Hayes Theater"

AGNES MOOREHEAD was one of the supporting players in Helen Hayes' "Strange Victory" Jan. 5

SEM-PRAY JOVE-NAY

The All-Purpose Face Cream

In America every woman is a queen. In her own right, and beautiful women realize the secret of feminine loveliness is a soft, clean skin. Try Sem-pray Jove-nay and learn what it will do for your skin and complexion. See how it keeps your skin clean by removing every particle of old pore-clogging make-up, and provides an ideal beauty base for a new toilette. Skin roughness caused by chapping quickly disappears and blackheads are minimized by cleansing pore openings. You'll like Sem-pray Jove-nay. Send for the generous purse size sample and use it now!

ELIZABETH HUSTED, SEM-PRAY JOVE-NAY CO., Dept. 81, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
I would like to try Sem-pray Jove-nay. Please send me the purse size container of this popular face cream. Ten cents (stamps or coin) is enclosed to cover mailing costs.

First Families OF RADIO

"AGAINST THE STORM"

CHARACTERS of this romantic serial take their cue from the symbolic title, "Against the Storm," for in its mists of distrust between lover and beloved arise, affecting their lives and setting a scene as blackly tragic as any in which radio's first families have been plunged. The story is woven around Christy Allen Cameron (Claudia Morgan), in love with Philip Cameron (Alexander Scourby) but engaged to marry Mark Scott (Chester Stratton) until she upsets everybody's apple-cart by eloping with Philip the same day she is supposed to marry Mark, Philip's best friend. Complicating this unfortunate situation is Philip's first wife, Lucretia (Anne Seymour), living in Arizona with little Peter Alden, their son, and now married to Pascal Tyler (Lawson Zerbe). Christy knows nothing of Lucretia and son.

Meanwhile, Mark Scott has become attentive to Kathy Reimer (Charlotte Holland), a little refugee girl, but it is not clear whether he really loves her, or whether she is the inevitable rebound attraction. In this atmosphere of doubt and misunderstanding, Professor Allen (Roger DeKoven), Christy's father, has wisely recognized the trouble and knows that the young people will never find contentment until they are able to look further than their own selfish desires. In trying to resolve their problems he has fallen ill, so that additional troubles—those of his other daughter, Siri (Joan Tompkins)—must wait. For listeners who like stories filled with tears of joy or happiness—but always tears—"Against the Storm" offers a look into human hearts. It may be heard Monday through Friday over NBC.

Arsene Studio Photographs

BABY OF THEATER CHAMPS is Glenn Miller, whose "in person" dates are box-office because of radio and record popularity. Glenn puts on a good show, has a bag of tricks which, among others, include weaving from side to side, dramatic manipulation of instruments, use of brass-hat mutes as above

"In Person" THEATER BAND CHAMPS

COLOR AND FLASH of an all-girl band rates Phil Spitalny as good theater. A great showman, Spitalny specializes in amateur-talent contests, cooperates with local agents of his publicity-wise sponsor to draw crowds. His Sunday broadcasts often are made direct from a theater stage

Another glittering chapter in the name-band business—the story of how bands brought vaudeville back

AMONG the few vaudeville acts that get a hearing—or make a profit—nowadays are the "in person" appearances of big-name bands. And they get a hilarious reception with a handsome profit. Fact is that the radio-famous dance bands, with their swing music, have revived vaudeville from the doldrums into which it fell when radio boomed in the early thirties. Jitterbugs wanted to see their new-found idols in the flesh and their elders wanted to know what all the hullabaloo was about, so the bands started touring the country's theaters. As a result, stage doors were unlocked, musty dressing-rooms dusted off and a key source of revenue opened to the baton-wavers. For a week's engagement theater-managers are now glad to hand out $7,500 to $12,500 to an ordinary top band, and fifty percent of gross receipts to super-sensational band attractions such as Kay Kyser and Fred Waring. Kyser has walked out of theaters after a week's work with as high as $18,000 on this basis. For those who wonder what a dance band can do, besides playing, to fill thirty to sixty minutes, there is the case of Fred Waring, who has been playing theaters since 1921. Although the Pennsylvanians' vaudeville engagements have been spasmodic since they began their current five-a-week radio show, their leader remains one of the greatest band showmen of all time. Waring innovations are endless. Megaphones for the band-singing, monkey jackets, comedy drummers, glee-club effects are a few of them. His "dancing tambourine" (illuminated pie-plates worked with flashlight switches) still closes all his shows. Hottest theater attraction today is Kay Kyser, whose appeal lies in the three-cornered, unabashed horseplay between him, his band and his audience. Most amazing theater band record of recent years was Orrin Tucker's with Bonnie Baker, when they grossed $54,000 at the Chicago Theater in one week, similar amounts from Coast to Coast. For all of the theater-band champs, there are advantages and disadvantages, but the headaches of a band gone stale on tour can easily be dismissed in view of the rich rewards reaped in the form of fancy fees, increased popularity, flesh-and-blood contact with the fans.

BELOW: Horace Heidt, an old-time footlight charmer, hung up a 100-week run at Golden Gate Theater, San Francisco, in 1935, features raft of specialties and gags—like telegraph-boy on stage

ABOVE: Famed for super-colossal theater acts, Fred Waring regularly features a large band and singing staff. Fred, always the showman, does a rope-twirl novelty act with saxophonist Ray Sax

Do You Make these Mistakes in ENGLISH?

Sherwin Cody's remarkable invention has enabled more than 100,000 people to correct their mistakes in English. Only 15 minutes a day required to improve your speech and writing.

MANY persons say, "Did you hear from him today?" They should say, "Have you heard from him today?" Some spell "calendar" "calendcr" or "calander." Still others say "between you and I" instead of "between you and me." It is astonishing how often "who" is used for "whom," and how frequently the simplest words are mispronounced. Few know whether to spell certain words with one or two "c's" or "m's" or "r's," or with "ie" or "ei." Most persons use only common words—colorless, flat, ordinary. Their speech and their letters are lifeless, monotonous, humdrum. Every time they talk or write they show themselves lacking in the essential points of English.

SHERWIN CODY

Wonderful New Invention

For many years Mr. Cody studied the problem of creating instinctive habits of using good English. After countless experiments he finally invented a simple method by which you can acquire a better command of the English language in only 15 minutes a day. Now you can stop making the mistakes which have been hurting you. Mr. Cody's students have secured more improvement in five weeks than previously had been obtained by similar pupils in two years!

Learn by Habit—Not by Rules

Under old methods rules are memorized, but correct habits are not formed. Finally the rules themselves are forgotten. The new Sherwin Cody method provides for the formation of correct habits by calling to your attention constantly only the mistakes you yourself make.

One of the wonderful things about Mr. Cody's course is the speed with which these habit-forming practice drills can be carried out. You can write the answers to fifty questions in 15 minutes and correct your work in 5 minutes more. The drudgery and work of copying have been ended by Mr. Cody! You concentrate always on your own mistakes until it becomes "second nature" to speak and write correctly.

FREE—Book on English

A new book explaining Mr. Cody's remarkable method is ready. If you are ever embarrassed by mistakes in grammar, spelling, punctuation, pronunciation, or if you cannot instantly command the exact words with which to express your ideas, this new free book, "How You Can Master Good English—in 15 Minutes a Day" will prove a revelation to you. VAUGHN MONROE, one of the coming younger bandmasters, and his orchestra take the spotlight as Movie-Radio Guide's Band of the Week. The Monroe boys are heard Fridays and Saturdays over CBS

ON THE BANDWAGON

ONE of the younger bandleaders who is attracting national attention these days is Vaughn Monroe. Born in Ohio, Vaughn is a graduate of Carnegie Tech and the New England Conservatory. In the first-named institution the young Buckeye State lad studied for an engineer's degree, which he obtained but has never used. The college course, incidentally, was financed through playing professionally with a dance band at night. Yes, you guessed it; when he finished college he kept right on playing. Began his music-making at the age of eleven, when he took up trumpeting; in 1926 won a state contest for a trumpet solo in Milwaukee. As we've said, when Monroe finished college he didn't stop playing. Probable reason was the job which bandleader Austin Wylie offered him. An association with Larry Funk's band followed, with which band he remained for three years as a baritone and trumpet-player. In 1935 switched to Jack Marshard's Boston society band, where he continued as a featured vocalist and trumpet-player. Vaughn would have remained indefinitely a plain musician had it not been for Marshard's insistence that he take over the baton-waving for one of Marshard's units. Faced with the threat of being fired if he didn't, Monroe reluctantly agreed, but was firm in his belief that he wouldn't be a success at the job. Since that time three years ago, has consistently refuted that early argument by playing highly successful engagements at leading night-clubs and hotels in Miami Beach and in and around Boston. The band which until last April was a ten-piece "society" orchestra is now a thirteen-piece affair, specializing in swing. This change from society music to swing has resulted in ever greater success, with the band getting several NBC Coast-to-Coast broadcasts weekly. At present Monroe and his lads are holding forth from the Statler Hotel in Boston, where the band's music is broadcast via CBS Fridays and Saturdays at 11:15 p.m.

EST. The band lines up in the pose as follows: Back row (left to right), Hy Levenson, drums; Jimmy Athens, string bass; Guy Scafati, guitar; Bobby "Red" Nichols, Dino Digeano and Al King, trumpets; Joe Connie, trombone. First row (left to right): Saul Skersky, piano; Vaughn Monroe, leader, trumpet and vocalist; Frank Levine, Andy Bagni, Don Falco and Ziggy Talent, saxophones; Kay Doyle, vocalist.

Completely changed in his attitude toward bandleading, Vaughn now admits that being a maestro is not as difficult a job as he had once visual-

Teddy Powell, bandleader, who reopened the Famous Door in N. Y., has sold his interest and will embark upon a tour . . . Oddity: A Summit, N. J., dance-hall proprietor who had engaged Jimmy Lunceford's band for a night, found he couldn't use them. To the band's surprise, he forked over the price agreed without an argument, commenting that perhaps later he could book them on a return tour.

Purely Personal

Two of Ted Weems' bandmen are benedicts. Rex Kelly, Weems' guitarist, married Miss Florence Burdock of Chicago, while Ralph Blank, Weems' pianist, was tied to Miss Gertrude Redenius of the same city . . . Donna King, one of the Four King Sisters, also went to the altar. She said "I do" with Ed Cole, pianist in Alvino Rey's band . . . Ditto for Fred Lowry, blind whistling star of Horace Heidt's band. He and the bride, Miss Grace Johnson, eloped to Las Vegas, Nev., December 20.

News from the Music Front

LAST week I spoke of the controversy aroused by Walt Disney's "Fantasia," as to whether it was helpful or harmful to the cause of good music. I submitted that I believed "Fantasia" would create a vast new audience for music in exposing it to an unfamiliar public, and that, hearing the music for the first time under such conditions, non-music-lovers would be interested enough to listen to it the next time they heard it on the air, instead of turning to something else. To prove it, the switchboard operator of MOVIE-RADIO Guide's New York office, Miss Renee Rinner, offered herself as a guinea pig. She agreed to see "Fantasia" and give me her reactions. Up to date and interested in everything else, Miss Rinner knows nothing about serious music and has classed it as something to be respected but not enjoyed. In her own words she declared about "Fantasia":

"I thought it was a swell Disney picture. But I loved the music, too. I think I liked the Beethoven Pastoral Symphony the best, it's so gay." (When told that this symphony is rated as fairly highbrow music, Miss Rinner registered astonishment.) "I particularly liked the opening, the Bach piece." (Interpreted by Disney in abstract swirls of design.) "I found myself wondering just how I would have illustrated the music, and I'd like to hear it again, just to see what ideas I get listening to it. In fact, I'd like to hear the whole thing over again without the pictures. I'm not sure I'd like all of it, particularly the heavier bits, but the next time I hear any of the pieces on the air I'm going to listen."

This response of Miss Rinner's does not, of course, mean that she will immediately turn into a symphony addict. But certainly a new world has been opened to her, whether she follows it up or not. And if "Fantasia" can do that, it has done its job. This discussion is now open to anyone who wants to write in, for or against.

Big news from the Metropolitan Opera is the rousing success of its two new comic productions, "Don Pasquale" and "The Daughter of the Regiment." They are the talk of New York and are playing to sold-out houses. There will certainly be more comic revivals (in English, I fervently hope) next year, which is probably why at a recent party given to Lily Pons by her husband, Andre Kostelanetz, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of her American debut, both she and several Met conductors went into a huddle at the piano over the score of the French comic-opera "Fra Diavolo," by Auber. If it is revived next year, it won't be long before someone will call it the strip-tease opera, because of a censorable disrobing scene.

John Barbirolli—his orchestra plans fete

The year 1941 marks the hundredth anniversary of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and impressive plans are in view for the centennial celebrations next fall. Both Toscanini and Stokowski are slated to appear as guest conductors, thus ending two noted feuds which both carried on with Philharmonic officials. Top-flight soloists will also appear, as well as John Barbirolli and Dimitri Mitropoulos, who scored a big hit in his recent guest appearance.

Musician of the Week

Joseph Szigeti

He looks like a Balkan diplomat;
he is a violinist for violinists

"BROADCASTING holds the thrill of a gamble," declares Joseph Szigeti, Hungarian violinist, in precise, only slightly accented English. "The performer knows that many listeners twirl the dial haphazardly, and he hopes that perhaps a phrase, a snatch of the melody he is playing will make them pause and listen further. The possibility that a few notes might convert some such listener to good music is one of the things that makes broadcasting so fascinating to me."

Szigeti, who has been called "the violinist for violinists" because of his scholarly and deeply sensitive interpretation of the classics, has started a violin series on Sunday nights with Alfred Wallenstein (MBS). For Szigeti it is a return to the strictly non-commercial and high-minded attitude of the British Broadcasting Corporation, which felt it owed a cultural duty to the people and solemnly performed rain or shine, everything from the best known to the most erudite of music. This sometimes resulted in boring and exceedingly highbrow programs. But, more often than not, it forced upon the listeners what for many was a new and unfamiliar enjoyment which they learned to appreciate. Szigeti feels that more of this is needed over here and cites the enthusiastic response to Wallenstein's Bach Cantata and Mozart Concerto Series as proof that Americans, as well as the English, listen avidly to the best in music without having to have it served up with sugar-coating.

Although he has been playing the violin in public since the age of fifteen, and made his early reputation with such a thoroughly classical work as the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Szigeti has never permitted either his playing or his repertoire to remain static. Among modern composers he is known for his sincere open-mindedness toward new music, and they delight to dedicate new works to him. Three moderns, Hamilton Harty, Ferruccio Busoni and Alfredo Casella, wrote concerti for him, and Bela Bartok composed both Rhapsody for Violin and Orchestra, and Rhapsody for Clarinet, Violin and Piano for Szigeti. He played the latter piece with the composer and Benny Goodman, whom he admires tremendously not only for his serious music accomplishments but also for his swing talents. Szigeti is one of the few serious musicians to thoroughly understand and appreciate swing, and to have a talent for making swing fans interested in his own kind of music. When the jitterbugs crowded Carnegie Hall to hear Benny Goodman go classical, they stayed to applaud Szigeti.

Szigeti, both in appearance and manner, is the epitome of that overworked phrase, "man of the world." He resembles one's idea of a Balkan diplomat more than a violinist, is tall, slender, with a delicately modeled face and dark eyes. He wears his clothes with distinction and moves with grace. He loves good food, good wine and good conversation. He is that rare creature, a musician who does not consider music the focal point of all things. His exquisite Paris apartment, filled with art treasures (of which he has only two marvelous eighteenth-century miniatures over here), was a meeting place of everyone of importance, not only musicians but painters, writers, sculptors, diplomats and statesmen. He knows how to listen as well as to talk, and possesses that disarming simplicity which seems to be the attribute of only the very great artist. He is married and both he and his Russian wife look too young to have a married daughter.

BOB HOPE has been named "outstanding comedian of the year" in a poll of radio and movie editors conducted by "Fame." The trade publication points to Hape's film hits and ever-growing air audience.

DRAMATIC was the broadcast of Ed Murrow after the Nazi bombing of the British Broadcasting Corporation. Said the CBS London correspondent: "I can tell you from personal experience that it's not pleasant to sit in a studio filled with the odor of iodine and antiseptics and talk to you at home, while good friends are being carried on stretchers along the corridor outside the studio door." The bombs hit twice, causing severe damage, injuring many and killing seven persons. Broadcasting was not interrupted.

Fred Bate Injured Again

Fred Bate, NBC's London commentator, was released from the hospital December 28 after receiving serious injuries in a bombing. A few days later he was caught in another air-raid and injured again. correct, was: "One line is all that could be drawn, because after that the sheet of paper wouldn't be blank." Listeners took exception to the Colonel, arguing that it is impossible to draw but one parallel line; that there have to be two in order to have them parallel. The Colonel got caught again the following Sunday. "Is there such a thing as 12 p.m.?" he asked. The contestant said "yes," the Colonel said "no," so the contestant got only a five-dollar prize. Then the telephone started ringing. Listeners reminded the Colonel that p.m. means post meridian, that meridian is 12 noon, and therefore 12 p.m. is twelve hours after 12 noon or 12 midnight. The Colonel admitted his error and gave the contestant another fifteen dollars to make things right.

Lord Haw Haw Unmasked

Lord Haw Haw, Nazi broadcaster with the English accent who does his fifth-columning via short wave, is unmasked in a manuscript brought to America by CBS' William L. Shirer. Titled "Twilight Over England," the book contains scripts by Haw Haw and his own autobiography. In it he says his real name is William Joyce, that he is an ex-Mosley Fascist, that he was born in New York in 1906, passed his boyhood in Ireland, spent most of his youth in England, was educated by the Jesuits, attended the University of London, taught in London University. He left London on August 25, 1939, for Berlin, where he was hired by the German government at seventy-five dollars per week for propaganda work. His identity was revealed, he says, when he deserted his wife and two children to run away with another woman. His wife heard him broadcast and said, "That's my husband."

$5,000 But No Suit

Angus McDougall, sixty-two-year-old Scot discovered living in a Chicago flophouse, was too proud to come to New York to claim the five-thousand-dollar estate unearthed for him by the "Court of Missing Heirs," because he had no "Sunday suit." Since the program was to pay his train fare to New York, authorities suggested that he travel by cheaper methods and use the difference to buy a new suit. So on January 7 he appeared on the program, resplendent in his new blue-serge suit, had his picture taken, and claimed the five thousand dollars willed him by his spinster sister of Negaunee, Michigan.

"BREAKFAST CLUB" will get a sponsor beginning Feb. 8. Swift & Company (meat packers) will paste their label on the third quarter of the hour program on Thursday, Friday and Saturday over an NBC Coast-to-Coast network. Sustaining portions of the show will be broadcast as in the past without change.

MEMBERS of the "Breakfast Club" cast, taking inventory before the program goes partially commercial, decided the only items that needed clearing out were themselves—but only for brief well-earned vacations. Contralto Nancy Martin hied herself off for a few weeks on a Caribbean cruise (the doc said the respite from the Windy City climate would do her throat good, anyway). Don McNeill and Jack Baker went to Jack's old haunts in Louisiana for a week of relaxation. Bob Brown, announcer and master of repartee, filled for emcee McNeill. Tenor Baker's substitute, baritone Robert Thomas, is a recent Northwestern graduate and a friend of Baker. Of the regular stars only contralto Evelyn Lynne remained in town, but she came down with a "strep" throat after singing a day or two on the show before giving up to the infection. Janette, who preceded Virginia Verrill as "Dog House" vocalist, has been pinch-hitting for Nancy and Evelyn.

At Last—Duplicate Prizes!

If you follow radio contests, you must have smiled or "humphed" often when you heard the familiar bromide, "In case of a tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded." Maybe you didn't think it would ever happen, but it has—and with a big prize, too! A recent "Wings of Destiny" airplane award went in duplicate to Henry T. Miller of Tulsa, Okla., and Lieut. Wyan E. Thiessen of Davenport, Iowa. Looking the gift-plane in the propeller, skeptical listeners may mutter, even in such a case as this, "They fixed it that way." I've been a judge on this show, however, and not a word was said to the judging board to influence our opinions. If the producers wanted this to happen to HEDDA HOPPER scored an unwanted radio scoop on Friday, January 10, when, as she was about to sign off her CBS broadcast, producer Jim Fonda handed her a slip of paper bearing the flash which had just come in over the Columbia news tickers. It told of comedian Joe Penner's untimely death that afternoon in Philadelphia from an unknown cause, probably a heart attack. In the Hopper studio at the time were actors Dick Lane and Harry Lang, both of whom had done much radio work with Penner. They were greatly stunned to hear the unfortunate item. Penner, Lane later explained, had been in the habit of taking sleeping-tablets for insomnia and possibly had taken an overdose. Joe was just thirty-five years of age, in apparent good health, happily married, and had amassed a comfortable fortune. He was in Philadelphia breaking in the stage musical comedy, "Yokel Boy Makes Good," which he was backing.

Jack Benny henceforth will be working for two motion-picture lots; his new contract with Paramount calls for two pictures a year and he is signed for one picture with options at 20th Century-Fox . . . The program, known as "Nobody's Children," has done much to make America conscious of its own obligation to American "refugees"—those youngsters from poverty- or death-stricken homes, or families unable mentally or financially to care for their offspring. Leading lights of the Hollywood Women's Press Club, endeavoring to continue this series, are Kay Proctor and novelist Kitty Frings.

Bob Crosby will try his acting ability once more, this time at Republic, where he will co-star with Judy Canova in "Sis Hopkins," while Ben Bernie is scheduled to make a picture for RKO—that is, as soon as his second finger on his right hand has knit sufficiently. Interesting story, that. An inebriated patron of the Beverly Hills cafe, where his band is playing, called Bernie to her table, and in all politeness the Old Maestro spoke to her. FM STATIONS RECEIVE DISTINCTIVE CALLS BROADCASTING by FM has passed the experimental stage and is now recognized as a definite commercial broadcast service. FM broadcasts provide noise- and static-free reception of an extremely high-fidelity character. FM broadcasts can be received only over limited areas; therefore hundreds of FM stations, properly spaced in relation to each other, can operate on the same frequency. FM broadcasts take place on ultra-high frequencies and can not be received on ordinary receivers. Simple converters are now available which, when used in conjunction with your present set, make it possible to receive these broadcasts. Receivers for FM reception only and receivers that will receive both FM and present-type broadcasts are now available from the majority of radio dealers at fairly moderate prices.

Frequencies assigned to FM stations (expressed in kilocycles) follow:

42100, 42300, 42500, 42700, 42900, 43100, 43300, 43500, 43700, 43900,
44100, 44300, 44500, 44700, 44900,
45100, 45300, 45500, 45700, 45900, 46100, 46300, 46500, 46700, 46900, 47100, 47300, 47500, 47700, 47900,
48100, 48300, 48500, 48700, 48900,
49100, 49300, 49500, 49700, 49900

To provide distinctive calls for FM broadcast stations, the FCC has adopted a new system of call-letters with interposed numbers.

Under international agreement the first letter of a call indicates the nationality of a station, thus, the United States is assigned the use of three letters—N, K and W. Calls beginning with N are reserved for the use of the Navy and Coast Guard. Those beginning with K are assigned to broadcast stations west of the Mississippi River; those beginning with W are assigned to stations east of the Mississippi River.

Consequently the first call-letter of an FM station must be K or W, depending upon its geographical location.

A second letter for an FM station will be assigned in alphabetical order to each station on a given frequency as licensed, thus providing twenty-five stations in each area for a given frequency. Where it is possible the city or area also will be indicated by the second letter or combination of second and third letters. Thus stations in Boston will terminate with the letter B, while stations in New York City will terminate with NY, etc.

However, between the initial letter and supplemental letter (or letters) two numbers will be utilized. These numbers will indicate the frequency assignment. This is possible because all FM stations are in the 42,000-50,000 kilocycle band, and because all FM frequencies are assigned on the odd hundreds in kilocycles. Thus the first figure and the last two figures of the frequency assignment can be dropped (glance at the frequency chart given here and you can easily see by the italic numbers how this works out).

In brief, here is how the system works: W41B would indicate an FM station in the eastern section of the country (Boston) operating on 44,100 kilocycles. By the same token, K43SF would apply to an FM station in the western part of the United States (San Francisco) on the 44,300 kilocycle frequency.

FM stations already assigned calls and which are now broadcasting or will be in operation soon are shown in the following list:

STARLIGHT on Your FASHION PROBLEMS

By Betsy Alden

JOAN CRAWFORD doesn't diet, contrary to all stories you may have heard concerning her, and she has a waistline that a Powers model might envy.

She's a tall girl with broad shoulders, a fine, high bosom and the long, slender legs we so frequently hear described as "typically American." There's something about this clear-eyed young woman, with her wide, sensitive mouth, her friendly smile, her quick, intense way of doing things that is characteristically American. Here is no dollar princess, but a young woman who has made good in a brilliant way, who also has made it in the hard way and doesn't mind your knowing it.

Talking with Joan and studying her at close range, as I had the opportunity to do recently in her beautiful hotel suite, fragrant with flowers and spilling over with the books she loves and the photographs of people who quite obviously love her, I had the feeling that this young person would never be satisfied with herself, or more literally would never permit herself the luxury of relaxation—the kind of "letting down" relaxation that makes so many women grow heavy physically and light mentally; that keeps their faces unlined but their expressions as empty and brittle as a piece of china.

Joan's face today is a young woman's face, but it is fortunately not a countenance that looks as though it had just been lifted pink and untouched from life's tissue-paper wrappings. It holds much that is gay and young and unconquered but it is also the face of a girl who has loved and suffered, who has given and will continue to give extravagantly of herself to those she loves. You may not be aware of it but that is one of the reasons why you enjoy watching her on the screen. Her expression tells you that she has not been spared the problems and heartaches and responsibilities that fall to the lot of the average person but that they have in no way affected the gallantry of her spirit or made her less responsive to the needs and expectations of other people.

(I think I should be prouder to own her kind of beauty—and she is lovelier in her dark-eyed, eager way, than her photographs or the screen indicate—than to have a face that is a composite of a hundred professional beauties or of baby-faced "starlets.")

I asked Joan if she would mind telling me for the benefit of you readers how she manages to retain that clear, fine skin texture and slenderness of figure that are two of her most noticeable characteristics. She told me with a flicker of amusement that she had no diet, exercise or cosmetic "secrets" whatever. She uses quantities of soap and water and she walks whenever and wherever she has the opportunity. Walking to Joan, however, represents much more than window-shopping or skipping down the street to mail a letter or hurrying to a street-car. In her case it means miles of brisk strolls down the avenues of New York City or cross-country hikes in Westchester or Hollywood. It also means unhampered skirts and appropriate shoes, so that she is free to enjoy every moment of her health-bringing exercise.

In addition to walking, she does this floor exercise daily, to which she partly attributes her firm abdominal muscles and the tiny waistline that gives her appearance such enviable smartness:

"Lie flat on your back with your feet held down by a piece of furniture or a strap especially made for this purpose. Clasp your arms underneath your head and lift yourself with the tensile strength of your abdominal muscles to a sitting position. Lie down again and repeat. Begin with five 'lifts' the first day and gradually increase the number until you can do them twelve or fifteen times twice a day with no resultant lameness."

Joan tells me that she has no food restrictions except moderation in pastries and sweets. (She loves cream, cereal, butter and ice-cream sodas!) She doesn't believe in starving oneself or doing without one's favorite foods in order to have a fashionably slender figure when stream-lines can be so easily attained otherwise. She doesn't believe in too much make-up either, but feels that each girl should know how to "highlight" her best features without making them startling.

Joan wears no more lip rouge than any other girl. Her mouth is normally wide and she makes no attempt to disguise its beautiful, generous proportions.

Right there, I believe, is the symbol of her temperament, the temperament that steadfastly refuses to compromise with realities, asking no more and no less of destiny than fullness of living, though fullness of living and an untroubled existence do not necessarily travel the same pathways!

FAVORITES IN THE FILM FAME SWEEPSTAKES

tage, who dotted the globe with a series of misadventures, thought Hollywood was in Florida, landed in San Pedro at the edge of Los Angeles in a private yacht and ended up flat broke in Beverly Hills when money stopped coming from England.

Minus his income, he turned to extra work and small bits in the movies; half-heartedly, with no pretense of having acting ability. During the shooting of Warners' "Songs of Liberty," director Michael Curtiz was desperate for a horseman who could ride.
With the sun setting and only time for one Technicolor shot left, an important solo riding shot was coming up.
There was time for only one shot.
Curtiz threatened that if it was muffed
he would murder the rider.

While others hesitated, an extra who had practically been raised on a polo pony and who had enjoyed disastrous ranching experiments in South Africa, crawled aboard a horse, spurred out in front of the camera and started charging up the hill.

John Sutton rode down the hill a life-long friend of the explosive and impressible Curtiz.

Naturally, with Mike Curtiz directing "Elizabeth and Essex," John had a nice soft, almost picture-length job carrying a spear. Which just fitted his estimate of himself as an actor. The only sand in the spinach was that he had to do three or four speaking shots.

However, he took them in his casual stride—with the mental reservation that from now on he'd take less ambitious parts.

But a new element threatened the calm tenor of his way. Bette Davis saw him doing a bit and told the front office he was a real actor, and that they should sign him.

When John heard that Bette had said he was an actor, he refused to question his favorite star's judgment —and went to work. He jumped at every acting bit he could get, and began demanding real parts. His work at Universal, where he had signed, caught the attention of Sol Wurtzel at Fox. He asked for and got his release from Universal.

HE CONTINUED to forge ahead until Fox signed him and gave him the romantic lead in "Hudson's Bay."
His performance in that won him the lead in "How Green Was My Valley," and at the present time M-G-M is testing him for a big part.

If you saw "City for Conquest" you would never forgive us if we failed to include Jimmy Cagney's discovery, Arthur Kennedy, in our film fame sweepstakes.

Arthur Kennedy, a Worcester, Massachusetts, boy, went to Carnegie Tech to be an engineer. After a couple of months he deserted the drafting-board to "tread the boards." He changed to the dramatic course because he thought it would be more fun.
He got to like it, spent four years studying drama and came out an actor.

At least enough of an actor to get a job with a stock company. And he was fortunate enough to become one of the Globe Theater players, along with Martha Scott, and to play at the World's Fair in Chicago.

Making Broadway was a matter of a few years and lots of hard work.
His popularity increased until he was one of the "mysts" along the Great White Way. Jimmy Cagney saw him, and we'll let him tell what happened next.

"When they were looking for someone to play the role of my younger brother in 'City for Conquest,'" says Jimmy, "Arthur Kennedy naturally came to my mind. I had read where George M. Cohan pronounced him the finest young actor on the American stage today.

"I got my brother, Bill Cagney, who was producing the picture, on the phone. 'Sign Kennedy if you can,' was my advice to him. So Kennedy came to Hollywood.

"He had never faced a camera before—but he turned in an excellent performance. He's a fine actor, has great individuality and there aren't any of his type on the screen."

Physically Arthur Kennedy is tall and rangy; a sort of carrot top, with blue eyes. His friends call him a very nice, normal sort of fellow—and very agreeable.

Which completes the list which makes up the "Cream of the Crop for '41." Naturally there are many other promising newcomers, like Gene Tierney, Bonnie Baker, Desi Arnaz, Laird Gregar, Doris Davenport, Anne Gwynne and Carmen Miranda—but the experts say if you put your money on the six named you can't miss.

MISSOURI GINGER

a girl who remembers old friends cannot be as snooty as some folks say Miss Rogers is.

That her innate goodness and belief in other people is reflected on the screen, is strikingly illustrated by two wealthy spinster women in the East who have unofficially "adopted" Ginger. From the time since they first saw her on the screen, they made up their minds that they would like to have a daughter like Ginger. They followed her every picture and wrote her many letters, all of which Ginger answered, and finally Ginger visited them in their brownstone home in the East. The kindly ladies were not disappointed. More than ever they knew then that she was the daughter they had both dreamed of in the darkened theater.

She measured up to everything they had expected from the girl they had seen on the screen; they wanted to make her their beneficiary in their wills. Ginger didn't want to hurt them and definitely refuse, yet the world has been kind to her and she is independently wealthy. Ginger and her two "foster-mothers" still are good friends, and the bets are that she is their heirress.

Miss Rogers is a fresh-air fiend and sleeps alone in flannelette pajamas.
There's something incongruous about that. Such a beautiful girl should sleep in silk, but after all, it's her business.
I don't care if she sleeps in calico, or if she sleeps. I don't care if she dyes her hair, although her public likes her best as a blonde. I don't give a whoop what she does if she'll just give us another performance like "Primrose Path."

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

Express your opinions. Write V. O. L., 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.

Anybody Know John?

Dear V. O. L.:

How about explaining who "Dear John" is on the program of the same name? I've listened to Irene Rich in this interesting play for weeks, and I still don't know who he is.

Pat Gabriel, Newport Beach, Calif.

• Maybe some listeners would like to tell the writer of the letter who "Dear John" is.—V. O. L.

Continued—Indefinitely

Dear V. O. L.:

Why don't they let the serial "Ma Perkins" end and the characters live happily ever after? It would be nice to replace it with a story about the children and grandchildren of Ma Perkins' family.

Mrs. Joy Bushart, Henry, Tenn.

• No serial would be closed as long as it had the highest rating of any strip show.—V. O. L.

More David Harum Data

Dear V. O. L.:

I'd like to correct a mistake in a recent letter regarding David Harum. In the first place his real name was David Hannum, and Homer was never Homeville except in the book. His home was never made into a hotel and is still used as a private home. The old David Harum hotel burned years ago. Ike Finn, who was the Dick Larabec in the book, is still to be seen on the streets of Cortland.

Mrs. E. L. Alvord, Cortland, N. Y.

BULLS & BONERS

Bulls and boners are a part of broadcasting. No matter how experienced the performer or how famous the star, chances are that he will make an occasional slip or a statement with twisted meaning which is extremely funny. See how good your ears are. Try to catch broadcasters in some error—the funnier the better—and send your entry to MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago. The most humorous entries will be printed in this column. Watch for your contribution!

Eddie Cavanaugh, speaking of Brenda and Cobina: "She likes to take sun baths and has appeared on many network shows."—Barbara V. Orr, Roseburg, Ore. (Dec. 26 over KFRC.)

Home Economics Expert: "Cover your liver with water and simmer ten minutes."—E. S. Woestehoff, 717 Ninth Ave. South, St. Cloud, Minn. (Jan. 2 over Station WEBC.)

Guy Savage, announcer (speaking to two small boys): "Do you want to talk? He shakes his head, both of them."—Mrs. Otto Barske, Independence, Ia. (Dec. 27 over WGN.)

Bob Hawk on "Take It or Leave It": "You should go out and find a pretty girl and that shouldn't be hard. Here comes David Ross. No telling what he has up his sleeve."—Mrs. Walter Hoskins, Stuttgart, Ark. (Jan. 5, CBS.)

You Asked for Them And Here They Are

CO-CAPTAINS of the new "Show Boat" (Mon., NBC) are comics Gill (L.) and Demling, who deal lightly in sophisticated corn

CARROT-TOPPED CROONER of the piece, Dick Todd continues a breakneck schedule of between-show recording dates in the East

BELLE OF THE BOAT, Virginia Verrill and her songs weave vivacity and glamour into "Show Boat's half-hour comedy cruise. Miss Verrill is also the star of "Uncle Walter's Dog House"

—Seymour Rudolph

BEULAH and other characters on the show are conjured up by Marlin Hurt, clever and virile young comedy star of the crowd. He is one of the veteran, popular trio, Tom, Dick and Harry
