LEW AYRES, SOLDIER

THIS is a salute to a soldier who hates war. It is a salute to a lonely man whose thoughts led him off the beaten track of majority opinion. It is a salute to a man who, but a few months ago, was booed and cursed.

Lew Ayres has made a second comeback. It is a far greater, deeper one than the comeback which returned him to screen favor.

There is no need here to retell the familiar story of Lew's pacifism and vegetarianism, his troubles with his draft board and his assignment to a work camp for conscientious objectors.

What is important is that Lew made up his mind that he was willing to do his share in the great struggle facing all of us. He would, that is, do anything except kill. He found that an army fights to save life as well as to destroy it. He found, in short, a field of service he could conscientiously accept in the Medical Corps of the Army of the United States.

Lew Ayres has just completed his basic training as a private at Camp Barkeley's Medical Replacement Training Center. On this occasion the Army has allowed the no-publicity ban it put on the screen actor to lift briefly so that Americans can see how he is progressing.

Lew's commanding officer calls him "an excellent soldier." A junior officer at the post says, "I wish I had a whole battalion of men just like him."

Lew has put on weight. He has come up through the grind of menial jobs to the position of hospital ward instructor. He has asked no favors.

Where and how Lew Ayres will finally serve his country neither we nor Lew know. He has said he would welcome service under fire, but his future is entirely in the hands of the military authorities.

FIGHTER FOR MERCY is Lew Ayres, star of the screen's Dr. Kildare series. Conscientiously opposed to killing, Lew has proved a fine soldier in the Army Medical Corps

Lew, a few months ago, was a symbol of the futility of pacifism in a world at war. Today he is a symbol of the unity of our nation. He is proof that, no matter what our differences, we stand together in the fight for freedom.

This much is sure—the screen's Dr. Kildare is doing his job as a citizen and as a soldier!

EVER since the blazing dawn of June 22, 1941, the steel and shell of Hitler's mechanism of destruction have sought to paralyze the world's toughest realists into a state of submission. What the Nazis thought would be just another campaign developed into a war; and two millions of the Aryan horde, their crumpled bodies deep in the earth of Russia, bear mute witness to that fact.

The race of Prussian steel to Moscow, we were told in Berlin, would take but six weeks at the outside. Flames of revolt would sweep the country; its "oppressed" people would welcome with open arms the "crusaders" of the Hooked Cross! Come November 29, and the explosion at Rostov-on-Don. There the myth of Nazi military invincibility burst before the eyes of an incredulous world. The German flood began to recede. Hitler's war machine was being shot

ALL RIGHT— SO I'M NOT BEAUTIFUL!

By

JOAN DAVIS

—Lester

NO GLAMOUR-PUSS is Joan Davis, but she doesn't care—much. Joan's slapstick humor and comic appearance have won her a spot in Hollywood that many beauty-contest winners must envy mightily

A Curled Nose and a Cracked Voice Helped Joan Davis Gain Star Rating

OFF STAGE, Joan is Mrs. Si Wills. She's shown here with hubby and daughter Beverly

CARRYING THE TORCH for Rudy Vallee is Joan's stock performance on the Sealtest program Thursday nights. It's a good gag, but in real life Joan's happily married

KIDDING ASIDE, Joan's pretty when make-up and lights aren't sabotaged

THE other day one of my friends who means well came to me very worried and said, "Joan, why do all the people on the Rudy Vallee program say such terrible things about your looks? You even do it yourself! And all your friends know you're not as funny-looking as that"—she took a closer look—"not quite, anyway."

It was a fair question. Last week when I came home from a broadcast, my nine-year-old daughter Beverly, who listens to all my programs, stared at me a while and then asked anxiously: "Mother, do you think I'll grow up to look like you?"

And my mail! You should see my mail. Guaranteed cures that will take the curl out of my nose, the detour out of my legs, and educate me right on through the third grade in ten easy lessons.

But I don't want to be beautiful. The world is full of beautiful women. One of the prettiest girls I ever met brought my sandwich at a drive-in restaurant the other evening. She came to Hollywood to get in pictures.

Nowadays you need more than a pretty face and a sweater to land a film contract. You've got to act or be funny.

So I'm a comedienne. All my life, in fact, I've earned my living making funny faces, falling flat on my nose (see why they call me "Curly Nose"?) and indulging in other acrobatics calculated to leave the customers rolling in the aisles. Though they didn't roll often enough to suit my booking-agent, they did help bring me to Hollywood, the films and radio. Who am I to squawk?

If I am gifted with features that don't mesh, a voice that cracks in the right places and a chassis that was a model for the first jeep, I figure nature didn't plan me for a "cover girl" and I should go along with her gag.

Putting together a comedy radio show week after week is not an easy job, and I serve a very useful purpose to the writers of our program. They're bound to run out of jokes occasionally, and that's where I step up and say, "Well, boys, what am I doing this week?" They look at me, their worried frowns disappear and they dash for their typewriters yelling, "I got it! Gopher-puss! . . . Poison-pan!"

I'm in a nice spot, too, when television comes along. There'll be a lot of shuffling then and some of today's glamour gals will be going in for character parts—but I'll just go along being "Goon" Davis. Those lights and cameras hold no terrors for me. Give me the proper amount of bad lighting and wrong camera angles and I'll revive the "Witches' Tales." But get the kiddies to bed early.

No, sir, I don't want to be beautiful. (Boy, what a liar I am!)

(Joan Davis may be heard on the Rudy Vallee show over NBC Thursday nights at 10:00 p.m. EWT.)

To give you new glamour, more allure SILKIER, SMOOTHER HAIR... EASIER TO ARRANGE!

So romantic—this lovely new "up" hair-do, designed around a center part. Before styling, the hair was shampooed with new, improved Special Drene containing hair conditioner!

Improved Special Drene, with hair conditioner in it, now makes amazing difference! Leaves hair far more manageable . . . silkier, smoother too!

Would you like the man of your heart to find you even more alluring? Then don't wait to try the new, improved Special Drene, which now has a wonderful hair conditioner in it! For if you haven't tried Drene lately, you just can't realize how much silkier and smoother your hair will be, because of that added hair conditioner. And far easier to manage, too, right after shampooing!

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Special Drene! For Drene removes that flaky dandruff the very first time you use it—and besides does something no soap shampoo can do, not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers". Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

So, for extra beauty benefits, plus quick and thorough removal of flaky dandruff, insist on Special Drene. Or ask for a professional Drene shampoo at your beauty shop.

Avoid That Dulling Film Left By Soaps And Soap Shampoos!

Don't rob your hair of glamour by using soaps or liquid soap shampoos—which always leave a dulling film that dims the natural lustre and color brilliance! Use Drene—the beauty shampoo which never leaves a clouding film. Instead, Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre! Remember, too, that Special Drene now has hair conditioner in it, so it leaves hair far silkier, smoother, easier to manage—right after shampooing!

IT'S EVERYBODY'S WAR!

Stars Wake to Realities of War, Shun Gold Braid, Seek Front-Line Service

WHEN this war was young, many Hollywood stars, like other people of fame and wealth, thought they deserved places of rank and ease in our armed forces. They sincerely believed they were too valuable to be common fighting men.

But this war isn't young any more, illusions have crashed in battle, and the buck private on Bataan has become a more glorious figure than any star.

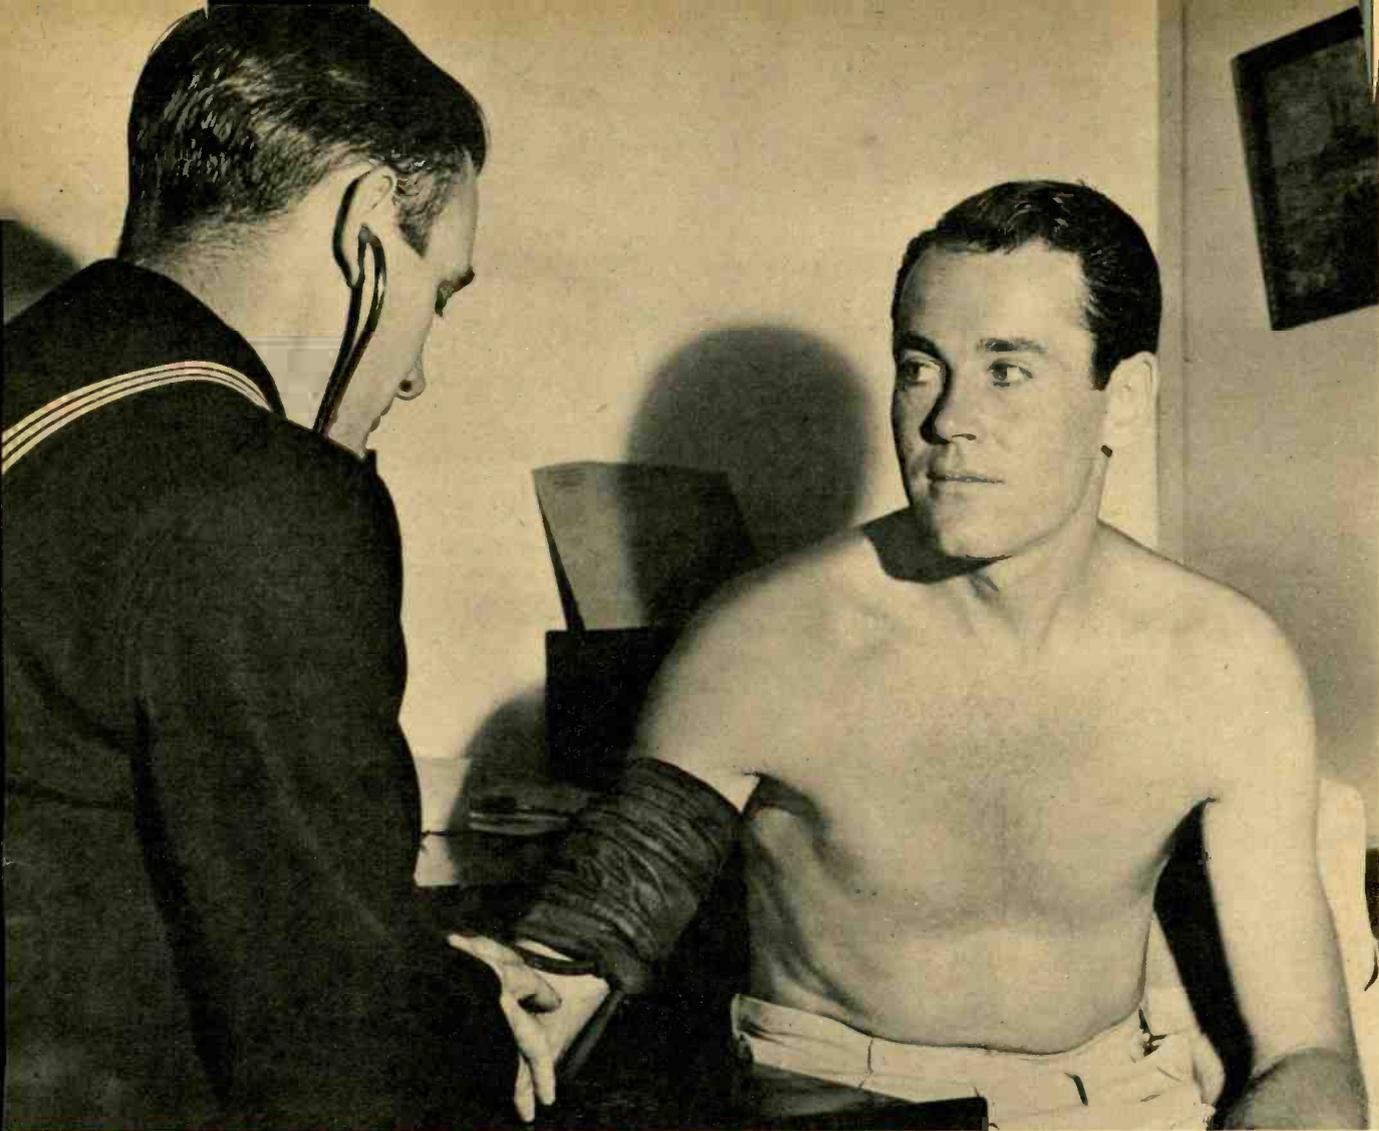

Today our movie greats are accepting war service in the humblest and most dangerous branches of the service. They ask only for a chance to fight and help win this bitter struggle for freedom.

Gene Raymond was over Germany last month on a bombing mission that should forever still any "pretty boy" sneers.

Tyrone Power, scorning an easy recruiting job, has joined the Marines as a private, and is looking forward to the tough, rugged training of a "boot."

Henry Fonda simply strolled into a Navy recruiting office to become an apprentice seaman—without warning either his studio or his wife. Clark Gable is a corporal. Lyle Talbot, though too old to be a pilot, has joined the Air Forces in hopes of becoming a machine-gunner.

Hollywood men have learned that this is their war. They have also learned that movie experience does not qualify them automatically for high positions.

—Acme

NO BALLYHOO surrounded the enlistment of Henry Fonda, shown above taking his Navy physical examination. The screen star made up his mind that this was his war and joined the colors as an apprentice seaman without warning his studio or his wife. He declined a specialist's rank to seek active service

FIRST LEATHERNECK among Hollywood's name stars is Tyrone Power, who is being sworn into the Marine Corps as a private in the picture below. Proof of Tyrone's determination to share the bitter job ahead is his choice of the toughest, fiercest, fightingest branch of our armed forces, the Marines

—Bachrach

OVER GERMANY soared Gene Raymond (r.), carrying a load of bombs to blast the Nazis. Gene, husband of Jeanette MacDonald, was the first film actor to fight in German skies

SKY-FIGHTER is Lyle Talbot (l.), who recently enlisted in the Air Forces. He is thirty-eight, far past pilot age, but hopes to become a bombardier or machine-gunner on active service

PART 5

8:30 a.m. PWT, sponsored by General Mills for Bisquick and Gold Medal Flour.

Joan Scott left Fairville, Ohio, to go to Chicago after the death of her husband. The couple had been falsely accused of crime, and Joan was determined to build a new life and clear her husband's name. At the Chicago station, a stranger threw his arms around her, introduced her to his father, swept her off in a limousine. He was Jeff Clark, son of T. R. Clark, wealthy publisher. Jeff was involved with Margie Cook, a fortune-seeking dancer. He had told his father that his fiancée was arriving, and the older man decided to meet her at the train. Jeff, knowing that T. R. Clark would not approve of "Cookie," took him to the wrong station, saw Joan, and begged her to play the part of fiancée. Joan agreed only because detectives were about to arrest her and the introduction offered a chance to escape.

T. R. takes a liking to Joan and, without warning her or Jeff, places an announcement of their engagement in his paper. Joan is angry when she reads it. Going to Jeff's father, she explains what had happened and informs him that she refuses to become further involved. He is surprised at first but, when she proves she is not trying to blackmail him, he offers her $25,000 to stay until the affair blows over. She refuses just as Jeff comes into the room and, under "Cookie's" jealous influence, orders her to leave. In the face of his accusations she accepts his father's offer.

When "Cookie" reads the announcement she furiously informs Jeff that she is going to call on his father in person. But when she arrives at the Clark mansion the butler, sensing trouble, leads her instead to Jeff's room. She insists that Joan Scott leave at once, becoming adamant when Jeff tells her of his father's plan to keep Joan in the role of his fiancée for another month. He finally quiets "Cookie" and she leaves to complete the trousseau-shopping spree she'd started that morning. Jeff then went to Joan's room and apologized for his earlier accusations.

When T. R. receives the bills for the clothes "Cookie" is charging to his account, he rushes to take the matter up with Jeff. But he first meets Joan, who, after listening to his raving, chides him for the way he's handled Jeff and advises him to change his attitude toward Jeff's marriage to "Cookie." "With no interference from you," she suggests, "he may find he's not as much in love as he thinks." Now go on with the story.

—THE EDITORS.

JEFFREY CLARK sat in the den, smoking a seemingly endless chain of cigarettes. Mr. Brennan, his father's secretary, had called and told him not to leave the house under any circumstances. Jeff, quaking with fear, waited for the moment he was to face his father. He got the surprise of his life.

The young man found his father in an unusual benevolent mood. He knew about Cookie and yet he didn't try to blow Jeff's head off!

"Now, don't get excited, son," he said. "I'll admit that I'm not exactly in favor of—ah, Cookie. But if you say you want to marry her—well, I suppose there isn't much I can do about it."

Jeff was too surprised to speak for a moment. "What's the catch?" he finally asked.

"No catch," the senior Clark replied. "There must be! You wouldn't give in this easily."

"No," Clark said reluctantly, "I suppose I wouldn't. But I had a talk with Joan a few minutes ago—"

"Oh. That's how you found out about Cookie, eh?"

"I thought you understood," Clark said tolerantly. "That dress-shop called me at the office to okay the bill Cookie ran up. When I came home, I asked Joan. At first she didn't want to say a word. Then she turned around and gave me a lecture."

"She told you how I felt about Cookie?"

"She told me you wanted to marry her." Clark paused and looked at his son with sober eyes. "Well, Jeff," he said after a moment's silence, "if you're set on it, I suppose I've been wrong. Miss Cook's probably a very fine girl."

"You didn't think that up by yourself," said Jeff skeptically.

"No," Clark admitted, "I didn't. Most of it came from Joan."

Jeff lighted a cigarette, carefully blew out the match and placed it in a tray on his father's desk.

"Let's get something straight, Dad," he said. "You're telling me that if I want to marry Cookie, I can. Right?"

Clark rubbed his chin and frowned. "Mmm, of course there's one thing I'm going to ask of you . . ."

"Yes?" said Jeff suspiciously.

"I'd appreciate it, son, if you'd continue this—this little game of being engaged to Joan. I'm sure that if you spoke to Miss Cook she'd be willing to wait a month."

Jeff was so relieved he wanted to jump up and kick his heels together. Everything was turning out far better than he had planned. And he knew he owed it all to Joan. He meant it sincerely when he promised to continue the fake engagement with Joan Scott. All that remained was to talk Cookie into agreement.

"Now," said his father, "to show you that I really mean all this, why don't you ask Miss Cook over to dinner some evening?"

Jeff was honestly amazed. "You're not kidding?"

"No," said his father, chuckling gruffly, "I'd like to get to know my future daughter-in-law—the real one, I mean."

"Well, gee!" Jeff was bubbling over. "All right! Say, thanks, Dad. It's—it's awfully nice of you to—"

"Don't thank me, boy," said Clark, "thank Joan. She's the one who sold me on it."

Jeff, as excited as a youngster at his first ballgame, dashed about the large house looking for Joan. Mrs. Evans, the housekeeper, told him that Joan might be outside. He found her out in the back garden, the one between the north wing and the garage. She was standing there between the rows of prize-winning flowers, looking across the drive out toward Lake Michigan.

TIME for the showdown had come. Walking into Joan's booth, Cookie ordered the girl to turn off the drier. Then she turned to Joan

Valiant Lady

"Say," he said happily, "you're an angel, Joan. It was swell of you to fix things up the way you did. Everything's all set and I'm going to invite Cookie over to dinner some night. Isn't that swell?"

"That's wonderful, Jeff. But, honest, I didn't do a thing. Your father is much more agreeable than you give him credit for. All he really wants is for you to be happy."

Jeff nodded soberly. He then told Joan that the agreement to pretend to the engagement for a month still held and he asked if he could take her out for a date that evening.

"Just to make Dad feel good," he said, "and then, too, because I'd like to enjoy your company. It'll be nothing big, you understand, just a nice quiet evening away from home."

Now, "a nice quiet evening away from home" coming from anybody other than Jeff would mean a movie and later, maybe, an ice-cream soda. But to Jeff it might mean anything. Joan looked forward to her "date."

Jeff called Cookie as soon as he returned to the house. He was bursting to tell her the good news and she was properly surprised.

"Well," she said when Jeff had finished, "you certainly did a wonderful job of it, Jeff. And to think that your father has even invited me over for dinner. Now, that's something! You know what, sugar, I think we ought to remember today for a long time! I think we ought to go out tonight and really celebrate."

But Jeff had to explain that he was going out with Joan, and Cookie reluctantly admitted that it was wise.

Joan, meanwhile, had gone to her rooms to dress. Half an hour later the housekeeper, Mrs. Evans, knocked softly at the door. She had a little box that Mr. Clark had sent up to Joan. The box contained a pendant—the most beautiful diamond Joan had ever seen. With the pendant was a little note from Mr. Clark.

"This," the note read, "belonged to Jeffrey's mother. Will you please wear it for me tonight?"

Joan was touched. Clark might appear to be hard and blustery, but he really had a soft heart. Joan hoped that things would work out so that he and Jeff could find real happiness, mutual understanding and contentment.

Jeff actually was bowled over with amazement when Joan came down that evening.

"Gosh," he cried, "you certainly look wonderful!"

"Those are strong words," said Joan, smiling. "Flatterer."

"No," Jeff said seriously, "I mean it. You're—well, I don't know why I hadn't noticed it before, but—you're awfully pretty—beautiful!"

Joan did indeed look charming. The dress that Mrs. Evans had selected from the clothes Mr. Clark had ordered did justice to Joan's slender figure and complemented the dark beauty of her hair and creamy complexion. Jeff was so pleased that he suggested they stop in the library and say good night to his father.

"We could sort of surprise him, and—well, I'd kind of like to sort of show you off to Dad. If you knock his eyes out like you knocked mine—"

"Jeff," Joan protested, "you just want to show him what an obedient son you are. You want to prove that you're taking me out like you promised."

"That's not it at all! You have everything."

The elder Clark was pleased and happy when the two young people came to the library. He complimented Joan on her dress, told her she looked beautiful.

"It was very sweet of you, Mr. Clark, to ask me to wear this pendant," Joan said.

"Not at all," Clark said benevolently. "I was just noticing it. It becomes you very well, my dear."

They finally said good-bye and left the house. Jeff helped Joan into a taxi, told the driver the address, then settled back comfortably. He glanced over at her. Joan was smiling at him. He decided she was even prettier than he'd thought. Definitely, he told himself, he was going to have a good time. Then he thought of Cookie. With a shrug, he put her out of his mind.

Cookie, meanwhile, lay stretched out on the chaise longue in her hotel suite. In one hand she held a magazine. The other hand was in constant touch with a box of chocolates on a near-by table. This was a pleasant enough way, she decided, to spend the time until Jeff called, as he had promised, after his "date" with Joan.

But Jeff did not call that night. He and Joan had such a wonderful time together that he forgot Cookie completely.

Now, Joan had spent a pleasant evening, but she awoke the next morning facing stern reality. Brennan had arranged for her to meet the newspaper reporters, and thought of the coming interview frightened her. Could she bluff the tough-minded reporters into believing that she had a society background instead of being plain Joan Scott, a fugitive from justice? And what if Jolly Rogers, the insurance detective, saw her name in the papers? Would she ever have a chance, then, to clear poor Tubby's name and her own?

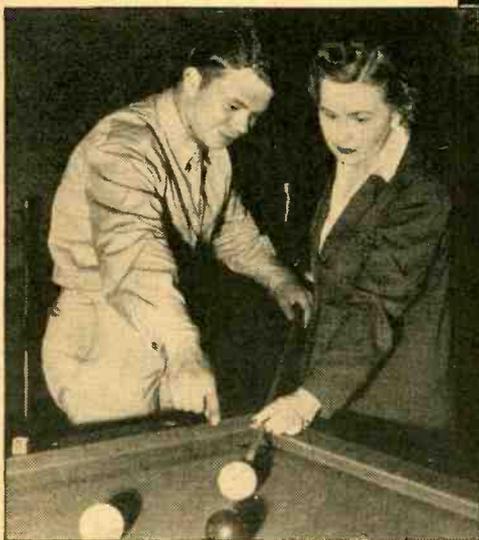

And to top it all, this was the day that Pamela Stanley, Jeff's cousin, was to arrive. Joan Scott was made of stern stuff, but she couldn't help but dread meeting Pamela, who Jeff had described as being "one of the best-dressed women in the world."

Pamela, aside from that somewhat outlandish honor, actually was a personality respected and admired in Chicago. The daughter of a wealthy midwestern and admired banking family, she made her debut into Chicago society during the middle twenties. Her coming-out party was one of such proportions that to this day it is still spoken of with envy. At the age of twenty-two Pamela married Roger Mottram Stanley. Although they saw little of each other after the first five years of married life, their relationship was perfectly amiable—occasionally enjoyable. Roger Stanley made it

Hollywood's Canteen is really going to town. Organized by Bette Davis—who always gets things done—organization swelled its funds a neat $5,500 in one swoop at Ciro's last week. The occasion was the informal premiere of "The Talk of the Town." All money collected for tickets and the Ciro party afterward went to the Canteen. First of the new dimout premieres, it was strictly informal, dominated by a "Hi, there" atmosphere from start to finish. At Ciro's Lana Turner jitterbugged for spectators with new husband Steve Crane. Feature of the premiere itself was the dressed-up air-raid warden patrolling the premises in a steel helmet. Stars arrived in station-wagons rather than the customary black sedans. And Jack Oakie, a la Diogenes, carried a lantern. Ronald Colman and Cary Grant, stars of the show, bought a block of two hundred seats for servicemen. Next dimout premiere in Movietown will be "The Pied Piper," with proceeds going to the Coast Guard . . .

Feather in the Wind. More and more stars are moving out of palatial homes in the film colony. Various and sundry reasons for this have been given; but one of the most pertinent is due to the fact that they simply can't get people to care for them—they've all taken defense jobs if they aren't in active service . . .

MOVIE REVIEW

"The Pied Piper"

Monty Woolley in title role of "The Pied Piper"

Type of Picture: Tense drama and heart-warming whimsy balance a delightful entertainment. This is the Story: Monty Woolley as a crotchety old Englishman named Howard is vacationing in the French Alps when the tragedy of Dunkirk occurs. Howard, who lost his son in the R. A. F., makes plans to leave immediately for England, when fate gangs up on him and he finds himself shepherding a group of children across the channel to safety. Complications that arise through this unexpected task are rich in drama and pathos. The picture makes the author's characters live as they did in the book. Roddy McDowall keeps the laurels he won in "How Green Was My Valley"; Anne Baxter, as a French girl who risks her life to help the Pied Piper, does a capable job. Monty Woolley as the irascible Piper who considers children a nuisance gives a fine performance. Verdict: Theater-goers will be delighted with the children as they gradually worm their way into the Piper's heart.—Family.

WAR CHIEFS CHEER STARS . . . NICKY OF "ONE MAN'S FAMILY" FOUND DEAD

Kay Kyser Tells Bigwigs to Plan for Victory; Blue Bond Sales Win Treasury Praise; "First Nighter" to MBS; "Bachelor's Children" to CBS

WASHINGTON

By LT. COL. CURTIS MITCHELL

There is a sign in a certain office in the War Department which says, "The difficult we do immediately. The impossible takes a little longer." Which pertains, in this instance, to the radio show called "Command Performance." No American listener has heard it unless he has tuned in on Sundays to those eighteen short-wave stations which beam it to our forces overseas, or unless he has attended the recording session at which the program is captured on wax.

We sat in the second row of the National Theater, in the midst of the greatest gathering of generals, admirals, senators, Government heads ever assembled during this war.

Bing Crosby came east to be master of ceremonies and to sing both as soloist and in combination with Connie Boswell. Kay Kyser brought his entire orchestra from the West Coast, paid all their expenses, to play "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle" for our troops. The stars all left comfortable, happy homes to fly here. It is no easy hop in bumpy air from Hollywood to Washington.

Paul Douglas opened the show with a curtain-raising speech that got the distinguished audience in the proper mood. One star afterward confided, "I peeked through the curtain for ten minutes before the show started. I wanted to see what real celebrities looked like." Douglas introduced a sober, unsmiling Crosby, who looked scared for perhaps the first time in his life. But his clothes weren't scared. Even in Washington, the Bing lived up to his name for sartorial exuberance.

Hedy Lamarr did a short skit with Bing that was probably more interesting to us in the audience than to soldiers in Africa. She has developed a mannerism that the women seemed to like. Her hair-bob is long, at least four inches below the neck, and she wears it loose, one side droops down across her eyes and she shakes it back with a robust sweep of the head.

It was Abbott and Costello who almost doubled up Mr. William Batt, our production expert. Mr. Batt has a round, pleasant face to begin with, and when it is under the influence of the madman gags of Bud and Lou, it positively beams.

It was Kay Kyser who stole the show, however. Washingtonians had heard of his "talks," which he has delivered wherever he has appeared with his now famous Bondwagon. They asked that he give a talk to the Government officials. Now, Professor Kyser is an astute and engaging individual. He has turned buffoon only because that is the way in which he achieves the greatest personal success. For a buffoon to become serious is usually fatal to enjoyment, but here is one instance to the contrary.

I can still see Kyser shaking his long forefinger under the noses of a dozen great statesmen and leaders, telling them to get busy with their planning. Kyser may achieve greater personal success in other years, but he will never spend a more useful minute than that one in the National Theater at the conclusion of the "Command Performance" broadcast.

On the following day, all Washington was invited to buy bonds and to see the screen stars—Bing, Walter Abel, Abbott and Costello, Hedy Lamarr, Greer Garson, James Cagney, Martha Scott, Ralph Bellamy, Ginny Simms, Irene Dunne, Virginia Gilmore, were in Washington. Hollywood and its citizens are becoming old friends with many of us here in America's No. 1 boomtown. We admire them officially for their great enthusiasm and desire to help. We like them personally for themselves.

I know of one colonel whose life will never be the same. Coming home after a hard day, he found Bing Crosby and Dinah Shore sitting at his piano in his own apartment. They were singing singly, together, and in harmony. Everything from ballads to boogie. Even the war news, that evening, went unheard while Bing and Dinah delivered, at current rates, about a million dollars' worth of music into the apartment's smoky air.

balls pitched by the Axis.

Dinah Shore, than whom there is no finer in the state of Carolina or elsewhere, had a busy week-end. She did three shows at Army camps in California, flew to New York to attend the bond rally mentioned above, and then went on to Washington for another songfest. She finished just in time to catch a plane back to the Coast . . .

Comedian Jerry Lester had his audience rolling in the aisles when, during a Stage Door Canteen show, he cautioned them to laugh a little faster, as he's 1A . . .

William F. Grimeson, nineteen, of Hillside, New Jersey, was barred from the Navy because of a physical handicap. Grimeson submitted to an operation to meet the high Navy physical requirements. Major Bowes read the story in the newspapers and invited him to appear on the Bowes program for induction. When Grimeson left the CBS studios he had the major's best wishes, a check for one hundred dollars to "help him get started in the Navy," and the cheers of the nation. It's understood the major will produce a Broadway musical, proceeds to be turned over to Navy relief . . .

Ted Collins has been awarded a scroll "for his efforts through his radio program to inspire the American public with the will to win the war." The presentation was made by the Honorable James J. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany and honorary chairman of the We Will Win Committee. Collins is the first American citizen to be so honored . . .

Saturday night is the big night for mothers and fathers of boys in the A. E. F. now headquartered in England. More than five hundred have spoken to their relatives and friends through Mutual's American Eagle Club meetings. They are oral letters and a source of great comfort to home-folks . . .

"The Joyce Jordan" series, as a result of the great work it has done to stimulate enlistments for U. S. Army service, has received a letter of commendation from the National Nursing Council for War Service. Betty Winkler, who portrays Joyce Jordan, will be on hand to meet the nurses when the first class graduates . . .

Campbell Soup has bought a radio program based on articles in Reader's Digest which will start September 13 over the CBS Network . . . The Government will have a new show, "Our Finest Hours," directed by Bill Bacher, producer of the "Camel Caravan Hour" and the Treasury shows . . . Mark Warnow was married to Helen McGowan by John White, justice of the peace and music publisher . . .

NO BLUES FOR BLUE when the network's "Blue Bond Night" raises $14,000,000 in War Bond sales in a single evening. Seven-hour program, which featured stars throughout the land, won official praise from the secretary of the treasury. Above are some of the show's celebrities (l. to r.): Jack Pearl, comedian; singer Lanny Ross, and actor Orson Welles

Ann Rutherford, Dinah Shore.

It was the opening of the billion-dollar bond drive and it took place on the steps of the Treasury at noon. A girl from Virginia arrived at seven-thirty that morning with a sandwich and $18.75. She was first in line and bought the first bond. She also got an orchid and an autograph from the excited Miss Lamarr.

Lou Costello screamed, "Money doesn't mean a thing if you ain't got that swing, and we'll all swing, by the necks, if Hitler comes over."

The crowd bought over a million dollars' worth of bonds while the stars

Death struck at the cast of "One Man's Family" early this month. Walter Paterson, portrayer of Nicholas Lacey in the top NBC weekly serial, was found dead in his auto. A hose attached to the exhaust pipe carried the fumes into the body of the car. Paterson was born in South Africa, appeared on the English stage and came to San Francisco to act in radio twelve years ago. A widow and four-year-old daughter survive. Nicholas Lacey was written out of the script on the first broadcast following Paterson's death, the excuse being that he had received orders to go on Government work. Since it has been the serial's policy never to substitute one actor for another, plot developments will probably make Nicholas' absence permanent . . .

Zero Mostel has proved to be a drastically different comedian. Making twenty-five dollars a week not longer than five months ago, his spot on "Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street" shot him skyrocketing in no time. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has brought him to Hollywood, signed him to a contract which will pad his paycheck to the thickness of $1,750 a week. At the studios Zero clowns just as much for the benefit of studio co-workers and executives as he does for radio audiences . . .

Cutest communique of the week was received by a friend of Edgar Bergen. Bergen wired from Juneau, Alaska, while on Army tour there, telling how busy he was. The telegram reads, to wit: "On way home; did five shows a day for twelve days. Charlie didn't see any Japs but swears he could smell 'em" . . .

CHICAGO

By BILL ANDREWS

I've been reading much of the greatest columnist of them all, Samuel Pepys, which explains what follows . . .

Up betimes of a glum morning, and so to my rounds. At Mutual-on-the-Boulevard they annoy me mightily by releasing news of the switch of "First Nighter" from CBS to MBS but three days before the players return to the air after a summer lay-off. Pleased, however, to learn that 'twill be a Government show for four weeks before the commercial sponsor shoulders responsibility. And that Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy will again walk the boards . . . And I find it noteworthy that Albert ("Answer Man") Mitchell's daughter, Dolly, doth now sing bravely for Paul Whiteman. But I do raise my eyebrows at the press-agent tale that Albert, on hearing of Dolly's birth eighteen years ago, did tell King Paul, in whose employ he was, that he hoped the tiny babe might one day sing for the very same King of Jazz . . .

So away through the rain to Gum Palace and the Columbia ministry, where I do find all in a considerable dither about great festivities for war bonds. Jimmy Cagney, the Lord Mayor and the Governor were feted at a luncheon—at $2,500 war bonds per plate—with Ben Bernie as toastmaster. A million dollars—a mighty sum—were raised . . .

Courtiers lounging in the coffee-shop whisper busily that Eddie Firestone and Jane Webb, who play at Joey Brewster and Minerva, are carrying affection beyond the boards and are frequently together. It may, perchance, be naught but a passing fancy . . .

Then along the river to Merchandise Mart, where, among vendors of textiles and raiment, I wend my way to the chancellery of NBC. There I do learn the startling fact that Mrs. William T. Luddy, newly arrived from the western provinces to announce her daughter Barbara's marriage on the eighteenth (which I did report last week), is a mighty warrior. She descended from the Challenger stage in the full uniform of a lieutenant of the Communication Corps of the Civilian Defense, Fourth Interceptor Command Area . . . And I did hear gnashing of teeth over the fact that "Bachelor's Children" has renounced allegiance to NBC and accepted the protection of CBS beginning September 28 . . . There were cheers, however, for George Boutsas, accomplished director of musical performances at NBC, who is to accept Army service September 11. He did discover the Dinning Sisters, and has directed "Roy Shield and Co." . . . And we hear that the stork flies to the home of Fort Pearson, NBC announcer, come January next. Fort already has one son . . .

I prowl next to the bailiwick of Blue to learn that Don McNeill, that chattering of the early dawn, is scribbling a book about "Breakfast Club," with stories and pictures of its former great ladies and gentlemen: Fibber McGee, the Merry Macs and many others. 'Tis not yet done, so do not write for copies . . . And Curley Bradley becomes emcee of "Club Matinee" Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays beginning September 17 . . .

And so to sup and to the Army War Show, which does make a mighty noise and is a most impressive performance. I heartily recommend it to the attention of Clevelanders and their neighbors, in whose province it plays next . . .

And so to bed.

BERNARD HERRMANN EXPLORES NEGLECTED COMPOSITIONS FOR CBS SERIES

New Recording Company Debuts With Three Albums; Victor Records Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite by Indianapolis Symphony, Fabien Sevitsky Conducting

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

ONE of the most unusual musical programs in radio is the CBS "Exploring Music," whose conductor is Bernard Herrmann, a young man of thirty-one. "Exploring Music" endeavors to do no less than its title indicates; that is, to bring forward works long neglected in the dustbins of time, unfamiliar contemporary works, and others that might properly be classified as having been "explored."

Mr. Herrmann is like unleashed lightning on this search of his. He haunts the musical dictionaries, the biographies, the encyclopedias omnivorously for clues to possible candidates, and after four years of doing that he can truly claim a musicologist's distinction—a musicologist of the unknown.

It would have been easier, no doubt, for the young musician to devote himself to all the well-known, almost hackneyed audience favorites for this program. His batonistic technique is good and his musical taste praiseworthy, so that the chestnuts of the concert repertory would have suffered no strange ills under his ministrations.

To the casual music-lover, such names as Samuel Butler, Samuel Pepys, King Henry IV, Henry of Navarre and others signify nothing musically. Yet these men, so eminent in other fields, have composed music that the conductor considers good. What's more, not too long ago he presented excerpts from Jean Jacques Rousseau's "Le Devin du Village," an opera which had a sixty-year run of success in France and environs. Mr. Herrmann considers it much better than some of the earlier dramatic pieces of Mozart.

Right here is where it ought to be told that Mr. Herrmann has done some extensive reading in his time. He can quote from memory whole pages from the great literary works—and with the proper cadences and subtle turns of phrase. His pursuit of the literary is avocational, but it has helped immeasurably in the uncovering of much hidden music.

Who has ever heard of the Delius Violin Concerto? Certainly not this inveterate reviewer. And who has heard all the Miaskovsky symphonies, of which there are oodles. The answer is Bernard Herrmann. It is safe to say that if he did not have a program to devise weekly for "Exploring Music" he would do all those painstaking researches out of sheer fun just the same.

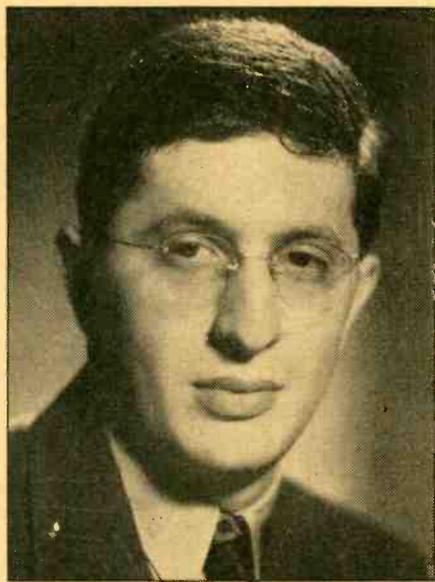

The proof of that might well be found in the fact that the programs for his other broadcasts—the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony occasionally, the Columbia Concert Orchestra regularly—are as remarkable for their newness. If you were listening to the Columbia Symphony's broadcast of the thirteenth, for instance, you heard this unusual piece of program devising: Cherubini's "Medee" Overture, Roussel's "Le Festin de l'Araignee," J. C. Bach's Double Symphony in D, and the Sibelius "Swanwhite."

Mr. Herrmann admits that the radio and the radio alone permits of such a lavish experimentation. No concert-hall symphony, no matter how heavily subsidized, could afford thus to indulge the insatiable curiosity of its conductors. And the beauty of it is that if the listeners to these radio programs don't like what they hear, they can just turn to another station.

Mr. Herrmann, of course, doesn't mean that his hearers can like it or leave it, and Tchaikowsky take the hindmost. He is too concerned with pleasing his audiences, with winning their good-will and their interest to dismiss them so blithely. His point is that the audience knows whether it wants to hear a certain number or not—and very likely after only a couple of bars have been played. But if that audience remains for the number and the next number and the whole program, he has won some converts to music that has been given the lordly snub by the concert-hall conductors.

He is thoroughly sympathetic, however, with the plight of said conductors. They must play what the public wants. An unfamiliar composition is scheduled once. If it does not meet with immediate favor, the chances are that it will not soon get a second hearing. Then, too, there are business and management problems connected with the maintenance of a great symphonic body that would not warrant giving the conductor unlimited freedom.

Mr. Herrmann, a New Yorker, who attended the Juilliard Graduate School, is a composer with several performances of original works to his credit. He did the scores, as you know, for the films "Citizen Kane" and "All That Money Can Buy." He has composed background music for a number of radio shows, notably "Suspense" and the Columbia Workshop presentations. And his "dramatic cantata," "Moby Dick," was given its premiere by John Barbirolli and the Philharmonic Symphony in Carnegie Hall two seasons ago.

("Exploring Music," conducted by Bernard Herrmann, is broadcast Mondays over CBS.)

Concert Records

A new company has recently made its debut. Its name is Bost Records and it proposes to "enlarge through the medium of active listening the knowledge of the music-loving world." In keeping with that worthy ambition it has released three albums, each of which, it appears, is the first of a series.

The three albums consist of (1) "The Evolution of Piano Music," prepared by the noted musicologist, Curt Sachs, and illustrated on the harpsichord by Sylvia Marlowe; (2) "The Songs of Early America," as compiled and directed by Elie Siegmeister, assisted by Helen Yorke, soprano; Rebekah Crawford, contralto; Earl Rogers, tenor, and Emile Renan, baritone; and (3) "Latin-American Typical and Folk Songs," done under the supervision of Irma Labastille, aided by Carlos Spaventa and Graziella Parraga.

The merit of these recordings is not to be minimized. In the first place, the disks are particularly smooth-sounding, there is a minimum of surface noise, and the sound reflects in all possible ways an expert technique.

Victor presents one of the durable items of music, the "Peer Gynt" Suite of Grieg, which is performed by Fabien Sevitsky and the Indianapolis Symphony. It is program music of the sort that used to make the ladies swoon with delight once upon a time. Even now the piece has its qualities, and you can't dismiss Grieg's sure hand in the construction of his rather interesting trifle. The conductor and orchestra labor con amore to produce a very appealing recording.

POPULAR MUSIC

Lovely Jane Froman forsook journalism for radio

IT'S about time, I think, to take up the subject of vocalists—you know, the popular vocalists who are so heavily featured with the big bands or just featured. In general, I'd say that there is very little good singing going on in those departments. It must be admitted that these young ladies and gentlemen who give us the sung choruses of the country's hits have certain individualistic qualities that are appealing.

Of course, there is something to be said also for the musicianship of a goodly number of the vocalists. As a matter of fact, some of them are such good instinctive musicians that they put many of the highly trained concert and opera artists to shame.

But there is such a thing as a voice, you know. And lots of the popular singers sing without ever having given that a thought, it would seem. You hear cute little vibratos, you hear thunderous tremolos, you hear nice flatterings, you hear all sorts of strange sounds, and how they still can manage to convey sentimental ideas is beyond me.

There are exceptions. Ginny Simms has a natural voice. True, it could stand improving, but it is natively a voice, and the young lady knows full well how to use it, too. Barry Wood has a voice, what might be really called a well-emitted voice, though in his case, too, there are many things that could be done to it.

Jane Froman and Kate Smith both have lovely voices, particularly Miss Smith, whether you like her old-fashioned delivery or not. There is a singer who could have made the Metropolitan Opera grade if she had made it her business to do so.

Bing Crosby, with that little sentimental slant of his, sings badly from the standpoint of tone production. His voice is throaty and he fakes a goodly number of high tones. And again, you have an especially gifted young man who could have done things in a serious way with his voice. At any rate, he is one of the most individualistic of popular singers. He has a style all his own and the truth of that is attested by the number of imitators he has had through the years.

There isn't room to go into the whole story. But these are some of the thoughts I have been mulling over. One of these days it might not be a bad idea to go into the subject thoroughly, pulling no punches.

NBC COMMENTATORS HEDGE ESTIMATES OF THE LENGTH OF PRESENT WAR

Earl Godwin Rounds Out Thirty Years on the White House Beat;
Murrow's Victory Prophecy Hangs on Developments in Russia

By BILL ANDREWS

A Question for the Third Year

THREE years ago this month our war began. We are still far from peace and victory. That fact raises to all commentators—as to all other citizens—the question, “What are we doing to bring victory?”

This question is closer to commentators than to other radio folk for two reasons. First, they are the current historians of the war and the most powerful molders of public opinion on war issues. Second—and this is a brutal truth—commentators as a class are almost the only large group in radio to profit from the war. Look at an old issue of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE—say for 1935—and compare it with the current issue. You'll see how much more news commentary rolls over the networks—and how much more of it is sponsored!

Most, though not all, of our commentators can make a fair answer to the burning question. Not a few, like Murrow and Kaltenborn, were early prophets of the disaster to come. Some like Shirer, Dreier and Sevareid did their best, from posts in Axis lands, to squeeze the truth through the wringer of fascist censorship.

But to these gentlemen, and to their colleagues, we have a right to say, “What are you doing?” We have a right to demand of these masters of radio news the kind of responsibility that is placed upon military commanders in the field—the responsibility that carries professional disaster as the penalty for error or weakness.

There must be no more blunders like Cal Tinney's on the post-exchange story. There must certainly be no more tolerance of the kind of dithering that marked much of the commentary of last December 7.

The struggle to avoid such errors and to adjust to the straightjacket of censorship—which certainly is necessary in war—is no excuse for wishy-washy stuff, for a play-it-safe line. The commentator is in this war up to his neck, and he must do his part to help win it. If he can't do it well, national interest demands his removal.

This is harsh. This is unkind. But it is exactly the kind of burden that the humblest lad who wears a second lieutenant's bars carries on his shoulders. The only difference is that the officer who either blunders or fails in initiative may pay with his life as well as his professional standing.

So, you gentlemen, the experts to whom we look for wisdom and understanding and information, settle down to your tough and professionally dangerous job. Let us get our humor from the good comedians. Let us get our sentimental relaxation from those able sentimentalists of the radio dramatic programs. Your job is facts and ideas—the arming of the American public with the knowledge our enemies dare not give to their people.

Above all, gentlemen, remember that, just as we forgave your sins of the past, so we have forgotten your good works. We must judge your service as soldiers in a war by tonight's broadcast and tomorrow's—not by yesterday's!

How Long Will the War Last?

NBC took a poll of its commentators on this question as the war ended its third year September 1. The results are worth consideration, though the experts hedged their answers with justifiable caution.

John W. Vandercook, Earl Godwin, Alex Dreier and Don Goddard all stress the importance of the Russian front. Best statement of the lot comes from Dreier, who says bluntly, “Unless pressure on Russia is effectively relieved as soon as possible, the war will last not years but decades . . .” Vandercook simply reports the obvious facts that Germany and Russia have been weakening each other and that our resources are the United Nations' greatest hope. Godwin and Goddard stress the important difference between Russia “bending” and “breaking.” Goddard makes the flat assertion, “I do not believe they (the Russians) will break, even if Stalin-grad should fall.”

H. V. Kaltenborn, off on one of those tangents he so loves to follow, emphasizes the single point of transportation and mobility of forces. He skips consideration of detailed situations. Cesar Saerchinger expects the Axis to attempt to cut our communication lines by land attack while the United Nations hammer at Japan by sea and at Europe by air. He says, “The greatest single problem is to increase shipping by building more ships and by eliminating the U-boat menace.”

Upton Close has his own individual ideas. He says we must, to win, have “a dominant American philosophy of the war, a professional American war command over industry and all fighting forces, and a strategy based on an American master plan rather than merely keeping others fighting. In such a strategy the most strategic spots will be the Aleutian Islands, the British Isles, the bulge of China, and the bulge of Brazil.” He is silent on Russia.

Cross Talk on the News

The Kaltenborn trip to London was smart journalism, a commercial exploit of real value, and good for the war effort. We need more of our commentators moving around, getting fresh impressions, keeping up with the situation at first hand. H. V. himself senses this, as witness his statement that reporters (which I take to include radio reporters) should accompany troops wherever they go. H. V. is a bit past the age for such arduous campaigning, but plenty of fine radio reporters are young and husky. American journalism has a grand tradition of war reporting—Richard Harding Davis, Floyd Gibbons, Vincent Sheean—but radio still has its mark to make in that field. The only case that comes to mind is that of Cecil Brown, who was aboard the Repulse when she was sunk off Singapore. And did that make a story!

Ed Murrow, CBS London man, spoke bluntly three years ago. He said, “This country (England) is not in a mood to accept temporary solutions.” Recently he spoke again on this theme, saying, “That statement is as true now as it was then.” His latest prophecy is worth noting: “If the Russians hold out for another two months, we may see something more tangible than the headline mirage of victory emerging before the fourth year of this war ends.”

Commentator Comment

Announcements to the contrary notwithstanding, the Upton Close weekly series, “World News Parade,” will originate from Chicago, at least for the first few weeks. Close will present a guest commentator each week to help him present a digest of world news. Series begins September 20 at 3:15 p.m. EWT on NBC . . . Frazier Hunt is scheduled to circle the Midwest the first half of this month. His Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday broadcasts will come from various points at 6:00 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. EWT on CBS . . . Blue has reorganized its staff for the “Weekly War Journal,” putting in Roy Porter (who spells Godwin on the Ford news programs) as editor of ceremonies in place of Morgan Beatty. Other newcomers are Major General P. B. Malone (retired) and Deane Dickason, authority on oriental and Pacific problems. MacVane, Tomlinson and Baukhage remain on the show, heard at noon EWT Sundays . . . Earl Godwin recently completed his thirtieth year as a White House reporter.

THIRTY YEARS a White House correspondent is the record of Earl Godwin. The veteran news analyst is aired Sunday through Friday over the Blue Network at 8:00 p.m. EWT. Godwin declined to permit his fellow correspondents to celebrate his service anniversary with festivities

PRESENTING PLAYS FOR CHINA POSES PECULIAR PRODUCTION PROBLEMS

Britons Report on War Production; Ankara Station Back on Regular Schedule; "Voice of Free India" Uncovered as Nazi Station in Europe

England's War Production

IT SEEMS to be the consensus that Britain is doing all she can in the way of producing the materials of war. "England has reached her peak of production and can expand no more," says H. V. Kaltenborn, who recently returned from a flying trip to Great Britain. "Manpower," according to the analyst, "is Britain's bottleneck today."

Captain Littleton, speaking from London the other night, had this to say: "I don't think the extent of our war effort is fully understood in America. We want you in the United States to know that although our population is only one third of yours our war effort is at least equal to your own. Out of every one hundred men and women in England fifty-five are working directly in war industries. To reach our present level you would need 40,000,000 working in industry. Guns are manned here up to over seventy percent by women. The average working week for men here is 56 hours. Our industries are not only turning out huge masses of material but most of it is of very high quality. For example certain types of our ack-ack guns are equal or better than anything in the world. Our latest tanks have no superior."

Sir Walter Citrine, famous British labor leader, put it this way: "Practically all of Britain is mobilized in the war effort. Vast numbers are also employed part time. Some six million women are now in war industries. In some factories seventy percent of the workers are women. Production in this country is comparable to any in the world. In addition all of these people are working under far from ideal conditions. On account of blackout regulations it is necessary for many to work constantly under artificial lighting and with poor ventilation. They work long hours, and in addition most of them spend at least one whole night a week at civil-defense jobs. Despite the strain they are under, they carry on. One can not pay too high a tribute to the common men and women of Great Britain."

China Hears Pearl Buck Plays

"Lao pai hsing," the man-in-the-street in China, will learn about America's man-in-the-street through a series of eight plays by Pearl S. Buck, entitled "America Speaks to China" and broadcast to the Orient by KGEI in San Francisco.

In these plays Chinese students in this country take the parts of such typical Americans as "Tony, who builds bombers," and "Freda Borsch, a German refugee who is now an air-raid warden."

The series was arranged by the East

By CHARLES A. MORRISON

President, International DX'ers Alliance

and West Association and translated into Mandarin for use by the Chinese cast of the Office of War Information.

Production of the plays for radio transcription at NBC gave rise to many unforeseen problems. While the cast, composed of Chinese, understood what they were reading, the American engineers and directors in the studios did not understand a word of Mandarin. They were forced to memorize sounds to get the proper cues for music or sound-effects in the plays.

One helpful actor developed the habit of breaking the continuity of the play by turning to the production men and shouting "Music" so they would know when to bring up the background effects. Before he was broken of the habit, three records were ruined.

"Through Eastern Eyes"

Princess Indira of Kapurthala broadcasts every Monday at 7:15 a.m. EWT in the Eastern Service of the BBC. The program, called "Through Eastern Eyes," consists of a weekly summary of proceedings in the House of Commons. Musical programs are also frequently presented by Princess Indira, who is the daughter of His Highness the Tikka Sahib of Kapurthala, son and heir of the present Maharajah. The program "Through Eastern Eyes" is best heard over GRE (15.39).

Meet Braddon Mitchell

Born September 14, 1910, spent childhood on farm in Victoria's fertile Upper Murray River Valley, educated at Wesley College and University of Melbourne, graduated in law March, 1934.

Spent three years on London stage, appearing with Nancy Price's People's National Theater productions—including "Lady Precious Stream."

Returned to Australia at end of 1937; in radio, ran popular children's session, and was heard often in plays. Now announces in American short-wave transmissions from Australia, does "on the spot" broadcasts, arranges and introduces boys in "American Voices Calling Home from Australia," and answers letters from listeners to Australian short-wave broadcasts.

Has been married five years; has one child—Martha, aged two; likes fishing of all descriptions but, till end of war, hobbies restricted to "digging for victory" in kitchen garden and growing flowers for fun.

Nazis' India "Freedom Stations"

The "Voice of Free India," supposedly a clandestine station operated from "somewhere in India" by those Indian elements opposed to British imperialism, is actually a Nazi-sponsored-and-operated station which is located somewhere in Germany or occupied Europe. It is now broadcasting on a new frequency of 15.22 megs from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon EWT. An English period is broadcast from 11:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon EWT. The station also broadcasts nightly on 9.40 megs from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m., with news in English at 11:00 p.m. EWT. J. W. Young of West Lawn, Pennsylvania, informs me that within the last few days another "phony" Indian station has taken the air. This one, identified as "National Congress Radio," is also being heard on 15.22 from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m. EWT. Axis propaganda in English and Hindustani is featured. Since it uses the same frequency, it is probably the same transmitter as that used by the "Voice of Free India." It is possible that these broadcasts are being radiated over Nazi-controlled station DXL15 (PCJ) of Huizen, Holland, which broadcasts afternoons on 15.22 megs.

Heard on Short Wave

Frederick Kuh, head of the London office of the Chicago Sun, made the following prophecy concerning the coming year: "This fourth year of war will be much tougher than you think. Russia will still be a great offensive striking force and not just a small annoyance beyond the Balkans. Hitler will awaken this year to find that his worst nightmare, a war on two fronts, has happened" . . . Frank J. Cuhel, speaking from Australia about the recent Milne Bay successes: "There have been land successes here and the Aussies are receiving congratulations. The lads from Australia did the work of pack-mules before the Milne Bay offensive. Everything was in readiness and for once the Japs were beaten at their own game of jungle fighting. This is a strange kind of a war in which the real stuff men are made of comes out. In this jungle fighting it is up to you to take care of yourself. The heat is insufferable. It is dripping wet above you and below you. You wear little clothes. You can't sleep at nights. Even the bombers have trouble here on account of the ever low-hanging clouds and fogs."

News About the Stations

After some weeks off the air, TAP (9.465), Ankara, Turkey, is again broadcasting regular programs, daily to 3:45 p.m. EWT, at which time the national anthem is played. This station also broadcasts program pick-ups for American networks, irregularly between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. EWT . . . Tokyo's latest propaganda stunt is a telephone conversation between Charlie and Ray, alleged Americans, which is heard two or three times a week at 2:15 or 2:45 a.m. EWT over JZK (15.16) and JZJ (11.80).

Eunice Howard, Linda of "Pepper Young's Family," seldom is seen around the NBC studios these days. She dashes in for rehearsal and then skips right out after the broadcast. Eunice has been assigned to duty with the Emergency Motor Unit of the A. W. V. S. She won't tell what her duties are or where her post is but she does let a word slip now and then about the majors and colonels she drives about the city.

Mountain-Music Lover

Jimmy Atkins, vocal soloist of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, once was a hillbilly guitarist-singer. He still likes the style.

Initial-Knitters

Peggy Joan and Marianne Moylan, the seven- and ten-year-old harmony team, have worked out a novel coat-of-arms for their sports clothes. Into a field of pale blue they have knitted their initials in music notes.

Quiz Kids Win Scholarship

Claude Brenner, fourteen, the "Quiz Kid" with the British accent, has been named the winner of a scholarship to Lake Forest Academy, Lake Forest, Ill., one of the oldest preparatory schools for boys in the country. The award is based upon high scholastic standing, personality and the qualities of leadership.

Claude, who came to this country from South Africa only three years ago, has been attending Senn High School in Chicago. He will enter Lake Forest Academy this fall as a junior, and upon graduation, hopes to enroll in the engineering school at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Accent Your Youth

ALMOST every woman looks back to her teen age and exclaims wistfully, "Ah, those were the carefree days!" But were they, actually? Time has a way of erasing from the memory all but the golden hours, and while the ills that irk the adolescent are comparatively trivial matters when you've arrived at adulthood, the tribulations of a teenager are none the less serious. Parents can be wonderful allies in the major skirmishes, but often as not they're looking the other way when an adolescent's personal appearance is in the making. They bend over backward getting their sixteen-year-old Betty into the swing of the younger set's social life; but when she fails to make a go of it, it never occurs to them to attribute her defeat to imperfect grooming, untidy hair, or a not-so-flawless complexion. These things, however, are very important and have a definite bearing on the future of a youngster's life.

There's a natural bloom in most young complexions that doesn't require elaborate preparations and heavy creams to bring it out. Soap and water is still the tried-and-true formula for youthful radiance. And if the skin is not too tender, a complexion-brush is an excellent stimulant for working circulation into the facial tissues. In addition, there's nothing that boosts young feminine morale more than to have a small array of intriguing toilet articles on her boudoir table. It helps to remove her from the three R's rut, plant her firmly in the grown-up groove and make her conscious of her appearance.

There are complexion kits on the market designed especially for this purpose. They're absolutely harmless, light in scent, texture and tones, and packaged prettily to key in with the young spirit. The Helena Rubenstein unit—containing washing-grains, a powder lotion, a tube of cream, a little jar of ointment for occasional spots, a box of face-powder and a healthy, ruddy shade of lipstick—has been proven popular with the sub-deb crowd. However, skins—young or old—should have at least one good washing a day, and a thin layer of lubricating-cream smoothed on overnight.

If you've soaped at night, all you need in the morning is a thorough rinsing with warm water, followed by a good dousing with cold. And incidentally, this "cool follow-up to a warm wash" is of especial importance to young skins. When warm water is applied to the skin, the pores automatically open, thus allowing the dirt to be removed. Cold water closes the pores, and if this step is omitted, the

"Married—to an Iceberg"

HOW A YOUNG WIFE OVERCAME THE "ONE NEGLECT" THAT OFTEN RUINS A MARRIAGE.

1. At first, we were the most romantic couple! Happy as larks. But little by little, Dick grew neglectful of me. I couldn't think why his love had cooled off so soon.

2. Then my nerves cracked, and Dick's uncle, who's a doctor, guessed the truth. "Poor child," he comforted me. "So often a devoted wife is guilty of this one neglect. She's careless about feminine hygiene (intimate personal cleanliness). Now if that's your case . . ." And understandingly, he set me straight.

3. He told me how, today, thousands of modern women use Lysol disinfectant for feminine cleanliness. "You see," he explained, "Lysol is a famous germicide. It cleanses thoroughly, and deodorizes, as well. Just follow the easy directions on the bottle—it won't harm sensitive vaginal tissues."

4. Today, I use Lysol disinfectant regularly for feminine hygiene. I'm thankful it's so inexpensive, so easy to use, too. But best of all, Dick's kisses aren't icy—not any more!

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and thus virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely no matter how often it is uncorked.

full of holes; the death toll was appalling. The Nazi blitz had washed out. Farther to the north, in the hard-packed snow before Moscow, the Reds had counterattacked, threw back the vaunted mechanized divisions of Germany's Panzer wizard, Guderian. The home front reeled. Goebbels, for once, was speechless. The German High Command sputtered apologies, said that a defensive period had set in. Hitler shouted: "We are fighting not men but beasts!"

Prior to the advent of the Russian war, the two years of Hitler's military adventures were to the German people but sideshows scarcely reverberating in the Nazi nerve-center. They had never felt the full impact of war until their Fuehrer wheeled his armies around from the southeast, chose the morning of June 22 as the date to herald "Europe's salvation." Then it began.

German stomachs, never too full, yet much fuller than those of the people of the conquered countries, shrank painfully. The precious points of the food-ration cards steadily yielded less than they promised; and what they got wasn't as good as before. Hitler had set into motion the "greatest mass movement of men in world's history"; never before were so many German killers on the loose. Nazi propagandists, mindful of empty cupboards, apologized, bellowed to the people: An army marches on its belly! The cry recalled Napoleon's dictum, and with it that ambitious little corporal's fate. As the winter drew near, Goebbels ordered that the nation strip, give up every piece of warm clothing that it didn't need for the shivering men on the front, and hinted that good Germans would even give up what they did need! The loot of the conquered countries wasn't enough.

The dogged Russian resistance had done all of this and more. It visibly shook German morale. Once the people were simply indifferent to the trade of butter for cannon; but the rising thunder of bomb and bullet in the East shattered their nerves.

Where was victory? Certainly not in the reaches of that vast enigma which daily drains more of their fathers, husbands and sons; certainly not in the person of the Fuehrer, who had promised so much, delivered nothing but more suffering and hysterical outbursts.

Hitler admits having miscalculated the degree of military preparedness of his foe. What he hasn't admitted is the classic revelation of a people who would rather die on their feet than live on their knees. The war of "weeks" is now in its fifteenth month—what further proof?

The high morale of the Russian people and the valiant fight of their army in this global war for survival has its roots neither in socialist nor communist theories. Their homes, the lush fields that feed them, the young industries that hold forth the prospect of a better future—these are the things which inspire them, not Marxian slogans. They call this war Otechestvennaya Voynah, the War for the Fatherland. It's the same name they gave their war against Napoleon when history, as today, threw upon their shoulders the task of halting the world's arch aggressor—this for their own sake and for the sake of freedom-loving peoples everywhere. That is why Russians, the world over, including those who fled the Reds, support the armies of Stalin. This is a war of the people.

Morale has been kept high by a leadership which not only understands but applies the principles governing a total war. The Soviet is the only nation among the United Nations that has gone really total. Those not killing the enemy work for the industrial machine, and even they are trained in the art of guerrilla warfare.

But now Russia is gasping for breath. Hitler's offensive might is again in high gear. Nazi claws of steel threaten to choke off the lifeblood of the nation's industry and collectivized agriculture. If the invaders succeed, Russia as an offensive power would be a thing of the past.

It was wishful thinking to contend the Soviet, after the loss of the Texas-size Caucasus, could effectively fight on with the resources east of the Urals. Defense alone never won a war. This the Russians know, and so their demand for relief, for time to get their second breath that they may once again strip the gears of the Nazi juggernaut.

The Russian battlefield is the critical front of this war. There will fall the decision determining the duration of this global struggle—years or decades.

The Russians have blasted more of the enemy than all of the United Nations put together, and their resistance has given us much-needed time. Now they justly demand that we draw off the Nazi leeches, effect a phalanx of diversions melting into a second front before that crucial moment of history arrives which would make a second front meaningless.

Once Hitler is able to swing his armies from the East to the West, a successful invasion of Europe would no longer be a probability but would become an extremely remote possibility. A breaking of the Russian back could sufficiently fire the Nazi machine to make Europe virtually impregnable to land assault. Food and oil Hitler would have in abundance. His slave-labor market tremendously boosted, his industrial machine could soon out-produce Britain and United States. Stating it bluntly, a breaking of the Russian back could spell eventual defeat for the United Nations, place this globe under the complete sway of the Axis, smother liberty for all time. Such might well be the consequence of a Nazi triumph in the East and it is not defeatism to reckon with a collapse of the Russian position. The Russians themselves, weighing their chances coolly and soberly, have plainly indicated time and time again that such a possibility not only exists but may well materialize in the near future. The Russians, unlike the rest of the United Nations, never have committed that unpardonable military sin of underestimating the enemy.

Axis ruthlessness must be met by a ruthlessness just as vigorous and heartless. This nation of ours, as the pivotal arsenal of the democracies, must strip itself to the bone—this if we are to survive and to maintain our way of life. Sacrifice or slave, there is no other choice.

Alex Dreier may be heard Coast to Coast on NBC Saturday at 5:45 p.m. EWT, 4:45 CWT, 3:45 MWT, 2:45 PWT; and Monday through Friday in the Midwest only at 7 a.m. CWT, sponsored by the Skelly Oil Co.

Valiant Lady

his business to plunge in and out of the few remaining unexplored jungles of the world. His wife was more conservative. She traveled to only the better-known resorts and watering-places.

Now, at the age of thirty-five, Pamela was tall, with an appearance that commanded immediate attention upon her entrance into a room. Her hair was jet black, her complexion olive, her features perfect. And, in reality, Joan had nothing to fear from her. Pamela liked Joan from the moment the two women met. And Joan found that she liked Pamela.

Joan's admiration for Jeff's cousin grew after the interview with the reporters. Joan explained how she feared meeting them.

"Don't tell me you're one of those shy people," Pamela said. "You're not afraid of reporters, are you? Good heavens, they're the easiest things in the world."

"Sure," said Jeff. "You wait, Joan, and take it easy. Pamela'll run the whole show for you."

"Of course I will." Pamela paused and then asked quizzically, "Nothing wrong, is there? There's nothing you want to hide?"

"No—no, of course not," Joan said quickly. Then, turning bravely to Nelson, the butler, Joan said, "Ask the reporters to come in, please."

She felt like a schoolgirl called down before the principal. Her stomach seemed to be filled with butterflies and green apples. But she offered up a silent prayer, hoping that the reporters wouldn't ask too many questions—too many to give the whole game away.

And yet she had nothing to fear. When Pamela promised to see her through the experience, Pamela meant it. From the start, the older woman got the jump on the hard-boiled boys from the press when she waved them toward the small service bar that one of the servants had wheeled into the room. Then, as they began asking questions, Joan was surprised to observe how adroitly Pamela handled everything. The interview went off like clock-work and the reporters were happy. Somehow, when the interview was over, Pamela herded them away from the bar and out the door. That was that. Pamela and Joan were fast friends.

Under Pamela's charge, Joan rested easier, but she couldn't know that the interview had been such a success that it would get banner headlines on the society pages of all the Chicago papers. Nor could she know that Cookie would read the stories and see red!

Cookie was jealous. She had been jealous before at reading about Joan's night out with Jeff in Button Riley's gossip column. This new story only added fuel to the fire of Cookie's wrath. She had the feeling that somehow she was being made a sucker. To Cookie, that meant a showdown—and as soon as possible.

It came sooner that she expected. It was on the day that Pamela and Joan went to Pierre's beauty salon.

A word of description of Pierre's. To qualify this palace of beauty with flowering adjectives would be useless. It stands head and shoulders—or should we say, hips and lips?—over any other purveyor of cosmetic beauty. It is four stories high, and all four floors are devoted to the problems of keeping the wealthier women of Chicago streamlined and pretty—as well as informed of the more choice bits of gossip.

There are 1,346 individual treatments, or services, which may, for a price, be obtained at Pierre's. And Cookie was there—in booth number six—for the works.

There was nothing unusual about that. What was unusual was the fact that Pamela Stanley sat in booth number five and Joan Scott sat in booth number seven. Cookie and Joan were within talking-distance of each other and didn't know it!

But, since gossip is the second most important product of Pierre's, it wasn't long before Cookie learned of Joan's presence in the neighboring booth. Despite the fact that her face was thick with cream, her hair disheveled, and she herself dressed in a white smock, Cookie, of a sudden, decided to pay Joan a visit. The time for the showdown had come!

"You say the girl Jeff Clark's going to marry is next door?" Cookie asked the beauty operator. "Ha, that's a laugh!" She paused and her voice became hard. "All right," she said, "get me out of this contraption."

"But, Miss—" protested the operator.

"Look," Cookie said. "I don't care if I'm finished or not! Get me out of it!"

The operator was properly squelched. She promptly undid the things that had to be undone. Metal clips and gadgets were unfastened and at last Cookie was able to stand up.

"That's better," she said. "And now I want to meet that dame."

Cookie pushed aside the curtains, flounced out into the corridor, turned right and walked into booth number seven. Joan was having a shampoo and a finger-wave. The drier was on, but Cookie didn't let a little thing like that bother her. She ordered the girl to turn it off. Then she said to Joan:

"Don't get up," she said easily. "Sit right where you are. I want to talk to you. You're Joan Scott, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Joan puzzled.

"Well," said Cookie, "I'm Margie Cook. Surprised?"

"Yes," Joan said after a slight pause. "But won't you sit down?"

COOKIE pulled a stool over toward the chair in which Joan was seated. She made herself comfortable. "Jeff has told me all about you," Joan said in a friendly voice.

"I'm sure he has," snapped Cookie. "Well, we might as well get started, Miss Scott." She looked at Joan appraisingly, and said, "You're a bit different than what I thought you'd be. You know Jeff didn't tell me you were—you were as good-looking as you are. I don't mind saying you set me back on my heels for a minute. I imagine the two of you must make quite a snappy couple when you hit those night-spots."

Joan was at a loss just what to say. She didn't want to hurt Cookie's feelings, but she couldn't understand the purpose of the whole interview.

"We haven't been out very much," she said. "As a matter of fact, the first time Jeff and I spent an evening together was the other night—"

"Yeah," Cookie said sarcastically, "at the Sirroco. I read about it in the papers. Button Riley's column gave you a pretty nice write-up. Let me ask you this, Miss Scott: How come you don't go out with your own friends and leave Jeff to me? There's no law that says you have to carry this act of being engaged to him too far."

Cookie's voice had become hard and menacing. Joan suddenly knew that Cookie was jealous—and angry. She tried to explain that she had no friends in Chicago, that she simply had come there to find a job.

"Oh," said Cookie, "I get it. This is a job. You know, I never did believe Jeff when he told me that he met you at the railroad station for the first time. It sounded too pat to be true."

"It is true, though," Joan said.

"You mean the minute you got off the train, you walked right into a job?"

"I'm afraid," Joan replied, "that you're going off on a tangent. This isn't a job."

"Well," Cookie argued, "Old Man Clark's paying you, isn't he?"

"No. No, he isn't."

"You wouldn't kid me, would you?" "Hardly."

Cookie pushed a button for an operator. When the girl came, Cookie asked for a cigarette. Service is of the best at Pierre's and Cookie got what she wanted.

"Let me get things straightened out," she said. "I've been around a little—enough to know that you're not playing this game just for the exercise. You've got a stake in it somewhere. Now you can let your hair down and tell me. What're you after?"

Joan smiled and replied quietly, "I'm not after anything, Miss Cook."

"Cookie'll do," the other said. "I don't like to be formal. Hand me that ash-tray, will you?" Joan reached for the tray and pushed it toward her visitor. "Thanks," Cookie said. "Well, I'm waiting. What's the score?"

"Nothing to nothing," Joan said, smiling. "I don't want a thing out of the Clarks."

"Oh," said Cookie. "A publicity hound, eh? You're just one of those people who goes batty for seeing your name in the papers. I don't mind if you get a few notices, but get this: I'm going to marry Jeff in a month and I want you to understand it and I don't want you filling up too many lines of print as his girl. I know what you publicity bugs can do, and—"

"That's where you're wrong, Cookie," Joan said interrupting. "I don't want any publicity. In fact, the less this appears in the papers, the better I'll like it! And just one more thing. I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to keep your voice down a bit. Jeffrey's cousin, Pamela, is sitting two booths away. She doesn't have any idea that the engagement is only a ruse."

"Well," said Cookie, "it might be a good idea if the rest of the Clark family found it out." But she lowered her voice just the same. "Now," she continued, "I'm going to tell you something and I want you to get it the first time. I'm going to marry Jeffrey Clark. Me—Cookie. I've worked on him for a long time, and I've played my cards smart. And I'm not going to let a little snip like you crab my style."

"I see," Joan said quietly.

"I'm glad you do. You and old man Clark and Jeff don't want any notoriety. Okay, Miss Scott, it suits me. But you either follow the leader or I'll have your picture on the front page of every newspaper in the country!"

Joan stared after Cookie as she flounced out of the booth. She realized that Cookie had made no idle threat. She meant every word she'd said. And then came back that strange feeling of insecurity. She knew at once that Cookie held the trump card. Any great amount of publicity, and Joan's effort to clear Tubby's name—and her own as well—would be ended.

THE MOVIE FRONT

a little piqued the other night. Rumor has it that Jeff and Margaret have been seen together several times. When questioned about his heart interests in Movietown, Jeff said he had "no attachments." Score is still nothing to nothing on developments. But as everyone knows anything can happen in Hollywood, and most everything does . . .

Ginger Rogers gets Army okay. Fans argued long and hotly a few years ago when Ginger changed from her natural reddish-blond hair to brownette. Now it can be told that Ginger, being a regular gal herself, liked her hair the way nature colored it best. Tennyrate, making the decision to go back to the original color was put off until production was about to start on her new picture, in which she co-stars with Cary Grant. When the showdown came, Ginger left the decision to the boys in uniform. She invited them to a party tossed for that purpose. Poll of guests was unanimous for return to reddish-blond locks that won her fame. Uncle Sam's boys knew what they wanted! Now Ginger and her director are "making it official." We agree with the men in the armed forces! . . .

Air-raid meeting, so runs the inside story, led to Jane Withers' present Republic contract and star role in their "Johnny Doughboy" production. How come? Well, Mr. and Mrs. Withers are both air-raid wardens and attend meetings of that group faithfully. Becoming friendly with the various members, they met producer-director John Auer of Republic, who's also an air warden in the vicinity. In casual conversation Auer kiddingly asked Jane's Mom and Dad why she didn't sign with Republic. That led to a serious discussion. Next, Jane was meeting the bigwigs at Republic. And—presto!—a contract resulted . . .

Quite a Guy! And we believe you'll agree when you read what Grant Withers said on the set with Fred MacMurray. They were doing a fight scene in "No Time for Love," and Fred and Grant were supposedly whaling the tar out of each other. Bout ended with Fred landing a straight to Withers' jaw that was a honey! Withers crashed into a wall and slid to the floor on his back, sans any feather-bed softness. He got to his feet, undisturbed by the impact of the wallop, shook himself, gazed admiringly at MacMurray and mused, "You're quite a guy; you know I've always wanted an autographed picture of you, Fred. How about it?" Which is quite a finale for fight scenes in movies, where feelings as well as jaws are sometimes bruised . . .

This and That: If George Brent, Oomph Girl Sheridan's present husband, becomes a flying instructor at Oxnard, California, he will be stationed at the same field and in the same job as Ann's ex-spouse Eddie Norris . . . While on vacation Paul Henreid, who gives Bette Davis such excellent support in "Now, Voyager," worked for ten days to help harvest the peach crop at San Jose, and not a soul among the peach pickers knew he was a Hollywood star . . . Lt. Louis Hayward, now with the Marines at the Quantico Base, makes nightly long-distance calls (collect) to wife Ida Lupino in Hollywood. Says Louis to Ida, "If you want to hear your husband's voice, you'll have to pay for it." P. S. Ida isn't complaining. She loves it!

Strips the veils from a small town where everybody THINKS he knows everybody else!

IT'S a nation-wide best-selling $2.75 novel! And, at the same time, it's a smash-hit movie! Why? Because KINGS ROW digs down into the lives of people in a small town—and brings up the TRUTH! It tears away the veils of sham, prudery, suppressed passions. You see the people of KINGS ROW as they ARE—their pent-up desires, secret thoughts, loves, hates—what they are REALLY doing, thinking, feeling!

You get the "inside stories" of fascinating characters like JAMIE WAKEFIELD, whom people secretly called "too pretty for a boy." CASSIE TOWER, the town's prettiest girl, who was always kept at home by her father, a physician who lived mysteriously well without patients. Cruel-faced DR. GORDON, who so often claimed that his patients' hearts were "too weak for chloroform."

"A Powerful and Passionate Book"

DR. PARRIS MITCHELL, the town's psychiatrist, tears off the masks of these people; and their tangled lives make an extraordinary, exciting, fascinating story. You meet the revered doctor, practicing his secret sadism. The district attorney, pursuing his schoolboy hatreds even to the gallows. The town grave-digger, with his speculative way of looking at a man's neck.

Here is a truly great American novel which the N. Y. Times called "a grand yarn, full of the sap of life." And the N. Y. Herald Tribune said of it, "Rich in sentiment, powerfully felt—a moving, passionate book."

Also Yours—Nearly 100 Stories by de Maupassant

IN ADDITION TO KINGS ROW, you will ALSO get (for only $1.39) this great 502-page volume—the greatest works of literature's most daring story-teller! Here, complete and unexpurgated, are the frankest, most realistic, stories of love, hate, intrigue, passion, madness, jealousy, surprise—tales imitated but never equaled!

Read FORBIDDEN FRUIT—in which Henrietta, tired of marriage, begs her husband to take her out for an evening as he would a mistress! Read "BALL-OF-FAT," demi-mondaine who alone could save a party of more respectable people in a dash through German-occupied France—and what she did!
