We think that the best story the late Eric Knight ever wrote is "Lassie Come Home." We liked his "This Above All" but when it comes to "Lassie" we liked this above all.

So much for the wonderful book—now for the wonderful picture. It is called "Lassie Come Home."

We predict that the whole country will go to the dog when they hear the word-of-mouth praise from those who have seen "Lassie."

But while one of the greatest dramatic performances of the year is given by a collie, this picture is for all lovers, including dog-lovers.

Actually we don't love people who aren't dog-lovers. We like man to be dog's best friend.

Yes indeed, "Lassie" is a human thing. It takes a sudden dive to the bottom of your heart and stirs up the waves of compassion and understanding.

It is a picture of suspense—as exciting as any thriller you've been thrilled by and more artistically told.

Out at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio they're handing bouquets to young Fred Wilcox who turned in this first feature directorial assignment.

Rarely has there been a better cast in a motion picture. To name a few—Roddy McDowall, Donald Crisp, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Nigel Bruce, Elsa Lanchester. Sort of makes you think of the cast of "How Green Was My Valley," doesn't it?

Hugo Butler, who wrote the screen play from the Eric Knight "best-seller," pulled his copy out of the top drawer. And Samuel Marx produced "Lassie" with loving care.

What is it that makes a picture click? Is it the plot? The performances? The direction? Surely all these. But something more.

It is personality and feeling. And as the broad beautiful scenes in Technicolor unfold, we do more than admire. We find ourselves in the grip of a characterful drama that will be played in theatres over and over again.

Inquire of your favorite theatre when "Lassie Come Home" will be played. If you are a father, bring your wife and kids. If you are a mother, bring your husband and kids. If you are a kid, take the lazy grown-ups in hand.

Go out of the house to see "Lassie Come Home."

We're just a lion who's putting on the dog.

DOUBLES YOUR MOVIE AND RADIO ENJOYMENT

WRITE-A-FIGHTER CORPS

EVERY day radio reveals some new and potent factor for the common good. One of the most recent that held our attention is the Jack Armstrong program that originated the Write-a-Fighter Corps idea, and which also serves as a "bulletin board" for WAFC news flashes.

Organized just a few months ago, the WAFC has gone far beyond its original intention—the solemn pledge of each member to write one letter a month to a friend or relative in America's armed forces. Today, its members are not only writing their letters faithfully but are collecting tons of scrap metal, hundreds of pounds of waste fats, silk stockings, and waste paper, as well as raising thousands of dollars in war securities. In addition, they are collecting knives, radios, phonographs and records—even novelty jewelry for our fighters to use as a trading exchange in foreign lands.

What appeals to us especially in this whole idea is the fact that the WAFC serves as a powerful antidote for keeping boys and girls from hanging around dimmed-out street corners while their parents are working overtime in defense plants. Jittery from a siege of juvenile delinquency, the nation can well take heart at this surging, ever-growing border-to-border drive of Jack Armstrong's radio-born idea that keeps America's youth busy. For youngsters with time on their hands—and little or no parental guidance—are those whose names crowd juvenile court dockets.

WAFC boys and girls are turning purposefully toward the light instead of darkness because, once again, radio has found an answer to their vital need for constructive work.

Just a boy and his dog...

From the pages of Eric Knight's great best-seller (he wrote "This Above All" too, remember?) comes a great drama. No roar of guns, no bombs, no tanks, no planes here . . . but emotion deep, human and intense in a story you'll live and love. The kind of story real people like to pass along to their friends.

Growth. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios celebrated their twentieth anniversary in movie-making this year. Ex meets ex. The air was electric the other day in the Green Room at Warners, and for good reason. Ann Sheridan, coming out of the restaurant, almost bumped into George Brent, who was coming in. Cable from China. Encouraging, too, was one Robert Walker received on his first day shooting scenes for "See Here, Private Hargrove," in which he plays the title role. Cable was from the real Hargrove, who authored the popular book from which the M-G-M picture is being made. Hargrove, now a sergeant, is stationed in China. Walker, who scored a hit in "Bataan," has a feature role in "Madame Curie," and will appear with his wife in David Selznick's "Since You Went Away." Who is Mrs. Walker? None other than Jennifer Jones, who's playing the lead in "The Song of Bernadette" at 20th Century-Fox. Which all adds up to a pretty neat success story for Mr. and Mrs. Walker. Pair struggled along for years trying for theatrical recognition . . .

Scoop!

Pictures From "Madame Curie," Starring Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon

KEY to Greer Garson's portrayal of Marie Curie, the great woman scientist, were notes written in the margins of Madame Curie's family cook-book.

The first was a recipe for gooseberry jelly. Second told about her discovery of polonium, and third announced the appearance of daughter Irene's first tooth. "In these three items," Miss Garson says, "I had a perfect picture of the devoted housewife, the brilliant scientist making a routine report of her great discovery, and the proud young mother." Combined, they spell Madame Curie as Greer will play her on the screen.

RATION POINTS proved a real problem in making "Madame Curie" on the M-G-M lot. It was impossible to film the story properly without some actual cooking-eating scenes. So stars Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon gave up part of their precious ration coupons for these sequences. Dinner cooked on the set consisted of roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, tossed green salad and coffee. Above: Walter Pidgeon, in role of Pierre Curie, snitches bite of roast when wife Marie (Greer) takes it from the oven

TO PREVENT wastage in roasting, Miss Garson, who is as practical as she is beautiful, had the oven heated to 350 degrees, cooked meat twenty minutes to pound, explained that a higher temperature caused more shrinkage. Making the Yorkshire pudding, above, required a heap of beating with a wooden spoon. Pidgeon, like any boy, couldn't resist a taste of the batter as Miss Garson whipped it up. "Madame Curie" is based on life-story of the great Polish scientist who discovered radium

THE RADIO FRONT

NEW YORK
By SANDRA HOLT

Frank Talford, director of WOR's "This Is Our Enemy," told this story recently about a farmer in occupied Norway. Seems the Norwegian had received a letter from a Nazi officer demanding that he deliver more eggs. When taken to task for failing to carry out the order, the farmer said: "I took your letter to the henhouse, so the chickens could read it. After ten days they hadn't laid any more eggs than before; so I killed the whole flock for committing sabotage against the Third Reich" . . .

Recently Joan Blaine, radio's "Valiant Lady," dashed into a doorway to dodge a sudden shower, and bumped headlong into the Duke of Windsor. Ten years ago, Joan ran for cover under some trees in Banff, Canada, and bumped into the then Prince of Wales. We don't know the answer to this royalty-rain coincidence. Maybe you have one . . .

During Kate Smith's appearance at a bond rally in Washington, D. C., crowds gathered around her requesting autographs, in their eagerness overlooking a famous man sitting next to her. So while the mob milled round, Kate turned to him and asked for his autograph. The man? General Archibald Wavell . . .

Prayers read on WOR's program "A Minute of Prayer" are to be published by the Garden City Press under the same title . . .

Lucille Manners, singing star of "Cities Service Concerts," was flown to entertain a company of soldiers in the California desert not long ago. The men were weary and bored from lack of any recreation. When Lucille stepped from the plane, the commanding officer introduced her to the assembled men by saying, "Gentlemen, I give you Manners from heaven" . . .

Garry Moore, Jimmy Durante's wacky airline partner, observes that the gas shortage is so acute in the East that people now sit in their cars just to watch pedestrians whiz by . . .

Madeleine Carroll, whose program, "Madeleine Carroll Reads," is aired over CBS, got a cryptic note from KMOX recently which read: "We enjoy your program usually, but it has been pouring in St. Louis ever since you started reading The Rains Came."

HOLLYWOOD By AVERY THOMPSON

Lionel Barrymore is that rara avis in Hollywood—a modest man. Here's proof: When asked how it felt to be named "the best actor of the year" by readers of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, Lionel smiled, rubbed his chin and said, "Well, there are lots of folks in this business. I don't see how they ever found me. But I'm deeply honored and grateful" . . .

Too bad television is still lurking around the corner, because some of our lady broadcasters are that lovely they leave us breathless; especially Janet Gaynor, new mistress of ceremonies on "Hollywood Bandbox," in a stunning suit of beige challis, designed by husband Adrian, with a red pouch bag and gloves of the same color to match . . . Martha Scott guest-ing on the "Screen Guild Players" in a natty brown number with white piping on the yoke, and a brown hat over one eye sporting three big brown-and-white feathers . . .

Radio Corporation of America, which has a finger in almost every radio pic, will sponsor its own program, which goes on the air this month starring Don Ameche as the emcee of a full-hour broadcast over the Blue Network. It will mark Don's return to the airlines after an absence of more than a year . . .

Dinah Shore received a letter from an RAF training unit in Aberdeen, Scotland, recently telling her that she had been "rationed." Boys there only had one of her records left, so they rationed it to three playings a day . . .

When Bing Crosby left Hollywood for a few days at his Nevada ranch, he took son Gary along. Two of the other Crosby boys were vacationing at Lake Huntington, while the fourth was at the family home in Santa Fe. By way of explanation at the separation Bing said, "I have to scatter my guys around. The Army doesn't want that many saboteurs in one place at the same time" . . .

Odd fact about Rudy Vallee: In all the fourteen years he was on the air-planes, he hasn't broadcast a program on any night but Thursday.

Pin-up Girl

MARIA MONTEZ, the fiery Universal star, has been nominated favorite pin-up girl in over 200 military camps. Besides that, a large proportion of her fan mail comes from boys in service. While on location for "Cobra Woman," Maria gave autographs to more than 5,000 soldiers. With the exception of Dorothy Lamour, the Latin-American star has probably sold more war bonds than any other person in Hollywood. Another important chore is her regular broadcast to Central and South America to further good-neighbor relationships.

"Big Coop"

Talent Brought Gary Cooper Stardom
But Inches Earned Him His Nickname

By Carl A. Schroeder

FATHER AND SON: When "Big Coop" was making "The Pride of the Yankees" for Sam Goldwyn, in which he played the role of the famous southpaw Lou Gehrig, his dad, Judge

Charles Cooper, came often to watch his famous son on the set. Judge Cooper, an avid baseball fan, enjoyed watching scenes, admitted for the first time that his son could act

GARY COOPER once narrowly escaped death in an automobile accident. His mother and father sent him to the back country in Montana to recuperate, and that's where he learned to become a cowboy. Some years later, as a newly rich movie star in Hollywood, he purchased a bright-yellow, custom-built, low-slung Duesenberg for $18,000, and he's been fond of classy cars ever since. He likes the horse as a means of locomotion and autos for pleasure driving.

It should be the other way around, but in Gary Cooper's life many things are reversed. He's a crack marksman, but doesn't like to shoot for pleasure either. He stands for hours at a time shooting at a target, but doesn't get a great kick out of killing. Things western are not romantic to him—they are just necessities by which people live. For instance, he thinks wearing chaps is an affectation unless you happen to be riding through sagebrush country where your legs are liable to get scraped unless you have them on.

Hollywood careers are based mainly on conversation—talks with agents, arguments with producers, words press-agents think up for you, and dialog, miles of it, in every picture. Gary has cut this down to a minimum. Ever since the humiliation of his first job in (Continued on Page 59)

"IT'S GOOD! Have a taste," says "Big Coop" to small Donald Allen Davis, who idolizes Gary and visits him often on movie sets. Donald is the son of Marilyn Mills Davis, ex-screen cow-

Rose Marie Lombardo, at Seventeen Becomes Vocalist for Brother Guy!

LIKE her famous brother Guy, Rose Marie Lombardo was born in London, Ontario, Canada. Guy gave baby sister her name by playing Rose Marie at the opening of his program from the United States while his parents listened in Canada on the night she was born. Now at seventeen Rose Marie is songstress on his "Three-Ring Time," broadcast over CBS on Monday evening at 10:30 EWT. Youngest of the Lombardo clan, Rose Marie makes a face every time Guy tells her right age. Once he caught her telling someone she was twenty-one and made her go back and report the truth. She was only eight when she won her first singing honors in the annual musical festival at the university in London, Ontario. Brother Guy was sure that Rosie had won by trading on his name until Mother Lombardo proved that all contestants were identified by number only. After that, sister convinced famous brother further by winning prizes at the same festival three years in a row. Then, seven years ago, Guy moved the entire family to Greenwich, Connecticut, and Rose Marie divided her schooling between the Sacred Heart Academy and Greenwich High. But although Rose Marie had proven to Guy that she really had a voice, she had to convince him that he needed a girl vocalist. His Royal Canadians had been successful for years without one, and he could see no reason for the addition. Finally, on her sixteenth birthday, in November, 1941, Guy allowed Rose Marie to sing one song on his radio show. Mail from listeners to that single song won the day, and he took her on a theater tour. When the Lombardo orchestra opened at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria, Rose Marie was a regular member of the troupe. Reminiscing recently, Guy smiled, "It took me sixteen years to get to the Waldorf, but Rose Marie got there in one jump."

Dana Andrews Hit Movie Stardom Road Via the Gas-Station Route

DANA ANDREWS' goal in life was opera, but like many another talented young man he lacked the money to reach it. As a means to an end he was wiping windshields and filling tanks at a gasoline station in Van Nuys, Calif., when he was spotted by a friendly customer named Stan Toomey, who with complete nonchalance began to take over Dana's career. At first young Andrews was stubborn about sticking to his ambition to become an opera singer. For that was why he had left his job as an accountant in Austin, Texas, and come to California. But after several months of disappointing try-outs, he gave up, and Toomey, who was sure that Dana had what it takes to become an actor, financed a course in dramatics at the Pasadena Playhouse. He was playing bits at the playhouse when Sam Goldwyn signed him to a contract. But instead of putting Andrews in pictures at once, Goldwyn left him in training, let him play leads at the playhouse for almost a year before he called him to the studio for a small role in "The Westerner." After that came the part of Joe Lilac in "Ball of Fire." Then, in 1940, 20th Century-Fox bought half of Dana's contract with Goldwyn. Those who saw "Crash Dive," starring Tyrone Power, will remember Andrews in the role of "the other man," who almost stole the picture from the experienced Mr. Power. While all this was happening in Dana's career, Toomey was backing him, and altogether the sum amounted to around $8,000 in the young Texan's behalf. Now the two are partners and Toomey draws a percentage of Andrews' salary. When Dana finished "The North Star" he began work in "Up in Arms." Happily married, and the father of two children, Dana at present is a threat to every leading man left in Hollywood.

Radio's Lois January and Wynne Gibson of Movies

LOIS JANUARY was offered the lead in Cole Porter's Broadway hit, "Something for the Boys," turned it down to do a war job in radio. Above: At the mike. Left: As a glamour girl in "High Kickers"

AMERICA'S manpower problem today is in great measure a womanpower problem. As able-bodied men are steadily inducted into military service, the jobs they leave must be filled by women and minority groups—but mostly by women. It is impossible to continue offensive warfare without making use of more of the nation's unused womanpower. By the end of 1943, it is estimated, 17,400,000 women must be at work in all essential industries. And any job a woman takes which releases a man for military duty or heavy industrial service is a war job.

Typical of thousands of American women who have already answered the call to fill men's jobs are Lois January of radio and Wynne Gibson, prominent feature player in Hollywood, pictured on these pages at their war jobs. For the duration, both girls have tossed glamour into the discard, rolled up their sleeves and pitched into jobs that will help fight the war and win the peace.

Every morning, except Sunday, Lois leaves her New York apartment at 4:30 and is on her way to CBS' WABC studio. An hour later an engineer throws a switch, and her voice, sending cheer and song to countless servicemen, goes on the air. For a full hour she gabs with servicemen, plays records of the best popular music. Because soldiers and sailors asked her to do it, she often adjusts a headset and sings along with the recorded music. She has sung with every important orchestra in America, but the men in the orchestras didn't know it. For her songs are heard only by troops, men at naval bases, Coast Guard stations and on lonely watches. If a soldier wants a tune that reminds him of his girl in California, or another requests Lois for a song that his mother in Maine always liked, she sings them.

Her daily mail speaks eloquently of the joy she is bringing to thousands of servicemen through her radio program. Letters by the hundreds come, too, from grateful mothers throughout America, who recognize the good work (Continued on Page 60)

Sweetheart's Return

Producer David O. Selznick Brings Shirley Temple Back

SINCE word has come out of Hollywood that Shirley Temple, now in her teens, is returning to the screen under long-term contract to that master showman, David O. Selznick, thousands of letters have been pouring daily into Miss Temple's mail-bag at the studio. A good many of these contain requests for pictures showing Shirley as she looks today. For theater-goers haven't forgotten the screen sweetheart of yesterday—the little girl who tripped straight into their hearts before she was six. They don't want to wait for the release of her first comeback film to see how she has grown. As one writer put it, "I just can't wait for 'Since You Went Away' (title of Shirley's first picture) to see how lovely you must be now."

To all MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE readers who are waiting eagerly for Sweetheart Shirley's return to the screen, we should like to say that she has grown into a lovely miss, with all the winning charm—plus beauty—that she had as a little girl. And her first comeback picture provides just the right setting for her now-young-lady beauty. In fact, "Since You Went Away" is really tailor-made for her. The girl "Brig" whom Shirley portrays in the picture is just her age and, what's more, a very good friend of the little Temple.

No, that isn't double talk, but the truth. For the girl in the story named "Brig" is but a thin disguise for Abby Langdon Wilder, daughter of Margaret Buell Wilder, the Dayton, Ohio, newspaperwoman whose first novel forms the basis of the Temple screen play.

When Mrs. Wilder went to Hollywood to work on the movie adaptation of her book with Mr. Selznick, she brought her two daughters with her. So it was only natural that Shirley the "reel" Brig, and Abby the real one should meet. For Abby is also a junior miss of fifteen, which is Shirley's own age. Fact of the matter is, the whole story is woven around Mrs. Wilder and her two daughters, Abby and Jane. Briefly, it concerns the day-to-day happenings in the life of a woman whose husband has gone to war. Mrs. Wilder's husband, Donald, is now a first lieutenant in America's Army Air Forces.

It isn't often that a screen actress gets a chance to portray the role of a friend and have good times with her when the day's work is over. Shirley hopes that all screen friends will like her in the part of "Brig" as much as she has enjoyed doing it. We believe they will, Shirley, for we've all been lonesome for you in the years you've been away.

David Harding Again Matches Wits With Scheming Nazi Agents

BEHIND the guarded, massive doors of one of the big Government buildings in Washington, D. C., a group of twenty high officials sat around a conference table. It is best, perhaps, not to mention their names or positions, but it will reveal nothing to the enemy to say that these men were high in the war councils of a nation at war. Each man, in his own way, listened carefully to the sober words of the gray-haired Secretary.

"Gentlemen," the Secretary said, "we are at war, and one of the grave dangers facing us is the existence of enemy professional spies and saboteurs.

"In this connection, the work of one man has been especially outstanding. I propose to bestow upon him a special 'cover-all' commission. He will not work exclusively with any one of your departments but will be a composite picture of all of them, operating alone—cooperating with you whenever it is necessary. I refer to a man you all know very well—David Harding."

The Secretary nodded to a big, straight-shouldered man at the far end of the polished conference table. The man arose and there was an unmistakable military air in his bearing. He ruffled the papers he held in his hand and read from them in a crisp voice. It was a report on Harding.

"David Harding, age thirty-nine, height six foot one. He has been in the undercover service of this Government for eighteen years. His loyalty to his country is monumental. For many years he has been assigned to investigate the most delicate and involved international problems. The results he has obtained have been brilliant . . ."

Moments later, Harding, a tall man with the build of a football player and the intent, intelligent face of a scientist, was shown into the big conference room. His appearance, his manner and his voice suggested power, (Continued on Page 57)

MR. LEWIS and his secretary, Jean Hatton, look over some of the forty-six tons of keys which the Mutual commentator collected from listeners via his broadcasts for war-effort salvage metal

5,000,000 KEYS TO VICTORY

FULTON LEWIS, JR., is probably the only man in America who has jingled five million keys in one pocket and one thousand dollars in the other.

He got the $1,000 from the Alfred I. du Pont Awards Committee in March together with a citation proclaiming him the radio reporter of the year. In passing over such celebrated commentators as Raymond Gram Swing, H. V. Kaltenborn and Lowell Thomas in favor of a comparative youngster for its first award (it is to be made annually), the committee mentioned its "recognition and appreciation of initiative in the aggressive, independent and meritorious gathering, interpretation and presentation of news through the medium of radio."

This is the same medium that brought him the keys—quite possibly five million keys to victory. Lewis made ten brief appeals on his broadcasts over the Mutual network to listeners. He asked them to send in their spare keys—the metal they contained, he said, was critically needed in the war effort.

The response was overwhelming. More than fifty thousand individuals and organizations engulfed him in an avalanche of metal. Civic and fraternal organizations, schools, city and county governments from every state and many provinces of Canada united to give their support to the campaign.

The keys came from everywhere. They turned up in the most unexpected places. The San Diego zoo sent a big batch. Its monkeys are so smart, an official wrote, that they quickly learn to pick the locks on their cages. Hence the locks—and the keys—have to be changed often.

A self-confessed burglar from Ogden, Utah, accompanied his ring of keys with a bag of his professional tools.

"I have been reformed by your broadcasts," the second-story man wrote. "So here's my burglar kit, too. Seriously, the work is getting more and more risky. And besides, it looks as though the Army may get me soon."

Many fans turned in keys long cherished for their associations. A southern lady sent the key with which her parents as bride and groom unlocked the door to their Georgia plantation mansion and with which they again locked it fifty years later after their friends departed from their golden-wedding celebration.

From Chicago came ten identical latchkeys. The donor, with an understandable passion for anonymity, enclosed a card signed simply, "From a glamour girl."

Lewis hoped to get a lot of keys but he was totally unprepared for this Niagara of metal. So was the Washington post office. For days fifty to sixty sackfuls came in every twenty-four hours. At the last weighing it totaled 92,000 pounds (forty-six tons). And the pile assayed high in nickel and copper, badly needed. This metal is now moving into a brand-new Government refinery (location a military secret) where the nickel and copper will be recovered.

The tremendous success of the key campaign reflects the intense devotion of Lewis partisans. There are other commentators with bigger followings, but none with more loyal listeners. His fans, estimated at about three million, glue their ears five nights a week (7 p.m. EWT) to 155 stations of the Mutual network.

The words in the du Pont citation best describing the Lewis attributes are "aggressive" and "independent." In 1939 when he was just getting a good start in radio, the dynamic Lewis charged into the capitol demanding representation for radio in its press galleries. He got action, too. Both houses approved changes in rules that had endured for eighty years. Today radio reporters have the run of the capitol, and recognition in the White House and all other Government departments comparable to that accorded to newspapermen, thanks to Lewis.

Lewis is at his best when slashing at red tape, exposing special privilege or attacking unfairness. While on a lecture tour in the corn belt last winter he exposed a widespread disposition of ration authorities to hamstring farmers' operations by gasoline restrictions. He complained to the Office of Defense Transportation, which promptly took action to the effect that rubber and gasoline were more liberally allocated to carry out vital farm food production activities.

The day after the suspension of gasoline sales in seventeen eastern states he broadcast eye-witness descriptions of Government cars being used for Christmas shopping, party-going and other private affairs in Washington. He mentioned time, place and license numbers. Use of official cars for other than Government business at any time is forbidden by law.

Lewis had long been a gadfly to Washington bureaucracy and time and again had exposed bungling and viciousness in high places. Years before he got into radio as a newshound he scented irregularities in the Government's air-mail contracts with private companies. After touring the United States he amassed a pile of information and turned over 490 pages of evidence in 1934 to the Black investigating committee. In 1936 he uncovered espionage activities involving a retired Navy officer. The latter was convicted.

Lewis is that rarity—an American born in Washington who made good there. He belongs to the fifth generation of Washingtonians on his mother's side; the third on his father's. He traces his ancestry back to Mordecai Lewis, the Revolutionary War financier. He is directly descended from the sister of General George Washington, Betty Washington Lewis, wife of Fielding Lewis of Kenmore, Fredericksburg, Va. He was born April 30, 1903, the son of Fulton and Elizabeth (Saville) Lewis. He married Alice Huston, daughter of Claudius Hart Huston, then chairman of the Republican National Committee, on June 29, 1930. The Lewises have two children, Alice Elizabeth, age ten, and Fulton III, six.

Except for a period at the University of Virginia, Lewis has lived in Washington all his life. He began his reportorial experience on the Washington Herald in 1924. He joined Universal News service in 1929 and for nine years headed its capital bureau, for three years writing a column, The Washington Sideshow, which was widely syndicated. He resigned in 1937 to gamble on radio—starting out at $25 a week. Today he gets one hundred times that.

He has been consorting with politicians all his life and he is popular with them. In a poll of the members of Congress (Continued on Page 61)

Betty Grable Marries Jitterbug Trumpeter Harry James at Dawn

BETTY GRABLE, with Edith Wasserman (r.), arrives in Las Vegas, Nevada, from Hollywood at 4 p.m. on July 4, to meet bridegroom-to-be Harry James. Pair were married in Betty's room in Hotel Last Frontier at 4 a.m., July 5

BACK in Hollywood, Harry observes an old tradition, carries bride Betty over threshold of their home. House they occupy at present is one that Betty owns in Movietown. Soon as studio work permits they'll plan a new home

GREETINGS from well-wishers came to newlyweds from all over the United States. Many were from servicemen who didn't like idea of trumpeter James walking off with Betty. Some said she should have waited for them

THE little chapel near the Hotel Last Frontier in Las Vegas, favorite spot for hurried Hollywood marriages, is probably the only church ever left waiting at the altar. Time: Four o'clock on the morning of July 5, 1943, date of Betty Grable's marriage to trumpeter Harry James, sometimes called the jitterbug's Gabriel. Reason: Huge crowds collected, even at that hour, to see the famous pair before and after their "I do's."

When it comes to mobs at the Paramount Theater in New York, Harry and Betty both love them. But this was one time when they wanted to be alone. Said Betty, "I won't have my wedding turned into a circus."

So while the decorations inside the chapel wilted, and the crowds outside followed suit, Betty and Harry were married in their room at the Hotel Last Frontier.

The train bringing James from the East was an hour late, and Betty waited in a taxi near the station. Soon as the train ground to a stop, James rushed to join her, and the pair sped to the hotel. Here Betty changed from her travel-wrinkled suit into a tight-fitting ice-blue dress for the marriage.

The double-ring ceremony was observed at the wedding, with both Betty and James donning plain gold bands on respective third fingers, left hand.

Stacks of letters and telegrams received upon their return to Hollywood were mixed in their reactions. Most all writers wished them well, but a few hinted that they should have remained single.

As this is written, both Betty and her groom are hard at work on their studio chores—Betty at 20th Century-Fox and Harry at both radio and movie stints. Right now they are living in Betty's Hollywood home, but soon as work permits they plan to go honeymoon-cottage shopping and find a place that will fit movie-goers' most popular pin-up girl and the nation's tremendously sought-after trumpeter—in private life Mr. and Mrs. Harry James.

BRIEF two-hour honeymoon was all James and Betty had time for after wedding. Both returned to studio work immediately. But they took time out to pose for cameramen. Above: One of many camera-caught kisses

"The Constant Nymph"

Cast: Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine, Alexis Smith, Charles Coburn, Brenda Marshall, Dame Mae Whitty, Peter Lorre, Joyce Reynolds, Jean Muir, Montagu Love, Edward Cianelli, Jeanine Crispin. A Warner Brothers picture, produced by Henry Blanke, directed by Edmund Goulding, from the screen play by Kathryn Scola. Picture is based on the novel and play by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean.

WHEN a brilliant man, who has known the tender love and devotion of one woman, becomes infatuated with another who's determined to make of him a social lion, there's bound to be trouble. In "The Constant Nymph" Lewis Dodd (Charles Boyer), an idealistic composer, goes to the Swiss Alps to visit Albert Sanger (Montagu Love) and his four daughters. Among the peaceful surroundings of the Sanger home, Lewis composes a piece that is truly beautiful. Tessa Sanger (Joan Fontaine), who always has loved Lewis, is happy over his success until the whole household is disrupted by her father's death, and Charles Creighton (Charles Coburn) and his daughter Florence (Alexis Smith) arrive from England to look after the children. Lewis becomes infatuated with Florence's cold, strange beauty and, to the despair of Tessa, he marries her. Determined to push her brilliant husband socially, Florence succeeds only in destroying his love for her. At last Lewis realizes that Tessa is his real love. With her to inspire him, he composes a symphonic poem whose rare beauty expresses their great love for each other.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Splendid acting by a superb cast in a beautiful love-story, woven from dreams and a depth of understanding that surpasses ordinarily human emotions.

"The Fallen Sparrow"

Cast: Maureen O'Hara, John Garfield, Walter Slezak, Martha O'Driscoll, Patricia Morison, John Miljan, Miles Mander, Rosina Galli, William Edmunds, Hugh Beaumont, John Banner. An RKO picture, produced by Robert Fellows and directed by Richard Wallace. The screen play, based on Dorothy B. Hughes' best-selling novel by the same title, was written by Warren Duff.

HERE is a tough-talking, realistic melodrama of love and espionage laid in New York City, with some vivid references to Kit McKittick's (John Garfield) past adventures as a veteran in the Abe Lincoln Brigade of Republican fighters in Spain's civil war, and how he fared at the hands of Nazi agents when he was finally imprisoned. Upon his return to America, Kit, an American of wealth, recovers his health on an Arizona ranch. Well again, he returns to New York to find out who murdered his friend, Louie Lepetino, a detective. In his search he has constantly to evade and outwit enemy agents operating in America. Continually on guard, Kit is even suspicious of his lovely girl companions—Maureen O'Hara, Pat Morison and Martha O'Driscoll—whom he suspects of being enemy agents. When the last murder clew falls into his hands, Kit turns one of his fair ladies over to the FBI. We won't tell you which one, but let you guess as the story unfolds. Those familiar with the Hughes novel will find that none of the tense interest of the book is lost in the screened version of this powerfully plotted tale.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: An ace mystery thriller, guaranteed to be wholly lacking in dull moments. Thrill stacks on thrill, with John Garfield at his best as the kingpin.

"The Iron Major"

ONCE again Pat O'Brien perpetuates the name of another great figure in the history of American sports—Frank Cavanaugh, the football coach who trained the famous teams that came out of Holy Cross, Dartmouth and Boston College. In 1917, at the age of forty-one, Cavanaugh enlisted in World War I as a private, and using the same principles of strict discipline and fair play that had marked him on the gridiron, he worked up to the rank of major. After the war, Cavanaugh again pursued his love of football, coaching at Boston College and Fordham University. In August of 1933, just before he died, this man, who had for so many years exemplified clean sportsmanship, uttered his last words to his own sons: "Fight for what you believe in, and believe in three things—love of God, love of country and love of family." Today, Cavanaugh's six sons are in the armed forces of America, and his only daughter, Sara, is a member of the women Marines. Never before has a motion picture showing a man's devotion to his country been more significant.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: The story of an outstanding American and his part in the development of American sportsmanship, portrayed by Pat O'Brien and an excellent cast.

"HEAVEN CAN WAIT," 20th Century-Fox film starring Don Ameche and Gene Tierney, right, is done in Technicolor and based on Lazlo Bus-Fekete's delightful play, "Birthday." Charles Coburn adds zest to this grand movie, along with Marjorie Main, Laird Cregar

On The Screen

"Let's Face It"

Cast: Bob Hope, Betty Hutton, Dona Drake, Cully Richards, Eve Arden, ZaSu Pitts, Marjorie Weaver, Raymond Walburn, Phyllis Povah, Joe Sawyer, Dave Willock, Nicco and Tanya. A Paramount picture, produced by Fred Kohlmar and directed by Sidney Lanfield. Picture is based on a musical play by Dorothy and Herbert Fields and Cole Porter. Screen play was written by Harry Tugend, suggested by a play written by Norma Mitchell and Russell G. Medcraft.

ONE of the dizziest—and funniest—comedies of the fall season, "Let's Face It," which was a huge success on the Broadway stage, loses nothing and gains much in its adaptation to the screen. Bob Hope, teamed for the first time with Betty Hutton, Hollywood's Blonde Blitz, is the answer. Both are naturals for the roles of the two carefree youngsters, very much in love and forever hampered by the fact that they never can scrape up enough money to get married. Hope, in soldier role, is stationed near Betty's farm, where she devotes all her energy—and what energy!—to reducing obese dowagers who come from the city to regain their youthful figures. The fun really begins when Bob, in a frantic effort to earn some extra money, hires himself and two pals out as gigolos to three buxom ladies for an evening. And it doesn't end until Bob and his buddies are free from the clutches of the dowagers and their irate sergeant to the tune of maneuvers from a menacing submarine. Added enjoyment: Bob proves himself a tolerable hooper, revealing fact he once was a dancing-master.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A riotous round of laughs and tunes, given in the approved Hope-Hutton manner, with ZaSu Pitts and Marjorie Weaver contributing their share.

"Heaven Can Wait"

Cast: Don Ameche, Gene Tierney, Charles Coburn, Marjorie Main, Laird Cregar, Spring Byington, Allyn Joslyn, Eugene Pallette, Signe Hasso, Louis Calhern, Helene Reynolds, Aubrey Mather, Michael Ames, Leonard Carey, Clarence Muse, Dickie Moore, Dickie Jones, Trudy Marshall, Florence Bates, Clara Blandick, Anita Bolster, Nino Pipitone, Jr., Claire Du Brey and Maureen Rodin-Ryan. A 20th Century-Fox Technicolor production, produced and directed by Ernst Lubitsch, from screen play by Samson Raphaelson, adapted from Lazlo Bus-Fekete's play "Birthday."

HERE'S a picture that wields the lever of fantasy with irresistible charm. It's alive with a tolerance that humans are sometimes—but not often enough—gifted with. Rich in emotions with which we are all familiar, laughter and pathos wage an even battle as the story unfolds. Don Ameche as Henry Van Cleve, a rich man's son, plays the role of a self-convicted sinner who doesn't wait to be sent to the lower regions but as an aged Casanova makes application of his own volition immediately after his death. In the antechamber of hell he offers his credentials to the devil (Laird Cregar), tells the story of a half-sinful, half-virtuous, and wholly beguiling Henry Van Cleve. His whole life span from birth to death unfolds on the screen—youthful escapades, love-affairs, ten years of happy marriage to Martha (Gene Tierney), his final years as a lonely old man. The devil's speech at the end of Van Cleve's story packs a punch that thinking folk will long remember.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A tonic for everything from your funnybone to your heart. You'll leave the theater in a glow. Don Ameche in his best role. Charles Coburn, tops!

"Behind the Rising Sun"

Cast: Margo, Tom Neal, J. Carrol Naish, Robert Ryan, Don Douglas, Gloria Holden, George Givot, Wolfgang Zilzer, Mike Mazurki, Nancy Gates. An RKO picture, based on James R. Young's novel by the same title. Screen play was written by Emmet Lavery. Edward Dmytryk directed with Sam Ruman as production manager.

BASED on the best-selling novel by James R. Young, for thirteen years International News Service correspondent in Japan, "Behind the Rising Sun" is a picture that reveals grimly factual inside information on the machinations that converted Japan into a militaristic, despotic dictatorship, intent on world domination. The sequences that deal with the cruelty inflicted on prisoners of war by the Nips are authenticated by author Young's own internment for his frank reporting of the events that led to the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Specifically, the plot of the story deals with the retrogression of the character of an American-educated Japanese, Taro Seki (Tom Neal), whose background of wealth and liberalism should have made him fit the role of leadership for a new and cooperative Japan. It shows how Japan's leaders converted him into a blood-thirsty beast and the counter efforts of his sweetheart, Tama (Margo), and her American friends to set him straight. In the delineation of Taro Seki and his attitude toward Japan's "New Order" are integrated all the people of the Nip empire who follow blindly onto the road of human destruction as their leaders command.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A powerful insight into Japan, her leaders and her people—one that will give Americans a clearer picture of the nature of our yellow enemy.

How to guard your Weight and Energy during food rationing

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix $\frac{3}{4}$ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with $\frac{1}{4}$ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with $\frac{1}{2}$ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

Even the birds are patriotic these days, reports observant Frank Novak, musical maestro of "Mr. and Mrs. North." Walking with his four-year-old daughter recently, Frank was startled to hear the scarlet tanagers warbling away at the victory signal, three dots and a dash, ending with a flourish that was pure tanager. Now he's teaching his daughter to whistle the bird song.

Joke of the Week

"Senator" Ed Ford, gag expert of "Can You Top This?" laughfest, opened the laughmeter safety valve on a recent broadcast when he observed that the American and British navies drink beer, the French navy drinks white wine, and the Italian navy sticks to port.

RADIONICS*

“AYE, AYE, SIR.”

In old English “Aye” meant “Yes.” But the Navy’s “Aye, Aye, Sir” means far more. It really says... “Your order is understood and will be obeyed.” The Navy has given Zenith many “orders” since the war began. Our prompt “Aye, Aye, Sir” has, we believe, been justified by the “intelligence and initiative” (as the Navy says) with which these orders have been executed.

“the impossible we do immediately... the miraculous takes a little longer”

—ARMY SERVICE FORCES

—in days of civilian radio, Zenith was proud of its long series of “firsts”—improvements which made radio history and established leadership in the industry.

—today our viewpoint has changed—materially.

—engaged exclusively in war production, the things we have been called upon to do—the tasks we have succeeded in accomplishing, make past improvements in civilian radio literally look like “child’s play.”

—the work of our engineers in radionics has made the “impossible” possible and accomplished the “miraculous.”

*—mark that word “RADIONICS” (with its subdivisions—Electronics, Radar and Radio)—it has brought into reality and being, devices which only a year or so ago came in the “impossible” and “miraculous” categories.

—today Zenith works in the science of radionics for our armed forces alone.

—in that bright “tomorrow” when peace returns—

—we can only say—the post-war radios that Zenith will produce will contain many interesting new developments.

—that statement is based upon experience which we can not now reveal—but you may take our word that it is a fact.

BBC's Bow Bells Ring Again; OWI to Build Two New Transmitters

ACCORDING to "London Calling," the ringing of Bow Bells from Dick Whittington's church—a little more than a stone's throw from St. Mary le Bow Church—was the interval signal for all BBC services in the days before the war. When invasion was threatened and the ringing of church bells was prohibited, Bow Bells went off the air to be replaced by the tick-tock, later augmented by a brass quartet playing the three notes, B, B, C, at frequent intervals. The order prohibiting bells being rung has been lifted—and Bow Bells are again being heard in the General Overseas Service of the BBC. St. Mary le Bow Church was seriously damaged in the blitz on London in December, 1940, and the bells, which had fallen, were found lying in a heap of rubble at the entrance of the church. The present church was completed in 1680.

Recording Studios for Broadcasts

Although not itself a short-wave station, WOR in New York City is intimately connected with the production of short-wave programs originating in this country, since thousands of broadcasts short-waved from this country and from short-wave stations overseas have been recorded in WOR's elaborate recording studios. The WOR recording studios could well be called the "Crossroads of the United Nations" these days what with so many information bureaus of our various allies making recordings there. Recently records have been made for bureaus representing the Greeks, Norwegians, Poles, Belgians, Australians, Czechs and Chinese. The most recent is a record called the "Belgian Congo at War," a dramatized account of the Belgian Congo's war effort, which will be offered free to every standard and short-wave station in the country.

OWI's Radio Expansion Plans

Construction of two fifty-kilowatt short-wave transmitters, which will be the first to go into operation under the Office of War Information's plan to expand American international broadcasting facilities, has been begun in New Jersey on the grounds formerly occupied by the transmitter of Columbia Broadcasting System's key station WABC, according to E. K. Cohan, CBS director of engineering.

Realizing the urgency of putting its expansion plan into effect at the earliest possible moment, the OWI selected the CES site because of its ideal facilities, which include a specially constructed transmitter building ready to receive the new equipment.

New Australian Station

A new Australian high-powered short-wave station will be in operation by Christmas. This will be the most powerful transmitter in the Commonwealth, and will provide radio service to all parts of the world. The Australian Broadcasting Commission is already featuring sixteen short-wave programs daily, and broadcasts news in English, Dutch, French, Chinese, Japanese, Malay, Thai.

Lucy Monroe Finds Patriotic Rallies Are Exhausting but Very Satisfying

By ROBERT BAGAR

LUCY MONROE has no regular radio program of her own, yet almost anywhere you turn to on the dial you are likely to tune her in. And she might be singing the Star-Spangled Banner, or, perhaps, she might be leading some huge soldier or defense-worker audience in a community sing.

Miss Monroe is a kind of ambassador of patriotic hymnology. She tours the country, visiting the camps, the industrial plants, groups of Americans anywhere who are devoting their working hours—and more—to the war effort. She brings them a message of unity. She is a spirit of courage and hope. She sings, and she makes her listeners sing, in this way doing her stint for the upkeep of the nation's morale.

The mere statistics of her travels, those of the people who have listened to her sing are ample proof of the value of her work. Some time ago she was appointed the director of patriotic music for the RCA-Victor Corporation. For a space she worked also under the auspices of the Treasury Department. That was pre-Pearl Harbor. Now she is still carrying on under the RCA-Victor aegis. But her labors are all dedicated to the sustaining of war morale.

For instance—since figures are impressive—at the Glenn Martin plant in Baltimore, she sang before 165,000 workers. At Soldiers' Field, Chicago, 100,000 persons were present on "I Am an American Day."

About such staggering throngs of people Miss Monroe has much to say.

In the first place, she finds it thrilling to sing for them. She feels the tug and heave of humanity en masse, she responds to it as only a sensitive artist and musician can respond—giving thrill for thrill, singing out her heart, expressing the words of the pieces she offers in the most forceful, articulate and dramatic manner.

Her biggest excitement comes when she hears the roar of thousands of voices echoing her own efforts.

"There is no trouble in getting such groups to sing," she told the writer the other day. "In fact, it's a hard job to keep them from doing it. I feel like some informal cheer-leader egging mankind on to better and better achievement. That is the way I react to it all now."

Miss Monroe has appeared at many notable functions, including several at the White House. She has sung for distinguished visitors to this country; in short, she has just about run the gamut of audiences in the brief period of a few months.

She has seen many things in her unusual calling. In the South, as an illustration, she tells of great gatherings of whites and Negroes lustily giving vent to their vocal urges in perfect racial—as well as musical—harmony. She has seen the worn faces of laborers in the plants light up at the first tinklings of musical sound. She has seen joy unbounded expressed in the dynamic response of soldiers, sailors, marines, Waves, Wacs, Spars and all those in the service to the singing of songs they know and love.

In a short time Miss Monroe will go to Hollywood to make a series of shorts for Columbia Pictures. Of course, each one will represent some aspect of the work she is doing now. And she figures that the people she will have sung for, counting the in-person appearances, the numerous radio appearances and finally, the movies, will reach numbers previously unheard of.

Miss Monroe has done much work on the concert stage and in opera. She is well known in both fields. But, as they say, she heard a call. She answered it, and now she is doing just what she wants to do.

"If you ask me," she said, "there is nothing in the world like this sort of thing I'm doing. I never suspected the comfort and the satisfaction that were in it. It's a full-time job. At the end of a tour I am exhausted, perhaps, but not downed. I wait for the next assignment just as eagerly as if I were awaiting my turn to sing Tosca, or Mimi, or Violetta. Anyway, I'm happy."

To this reporter, it seemed that Miss Monroe had found her heart's desire. There was something big and mystical and religious in the way she spoke. Selah!

POPULAR MUSIC

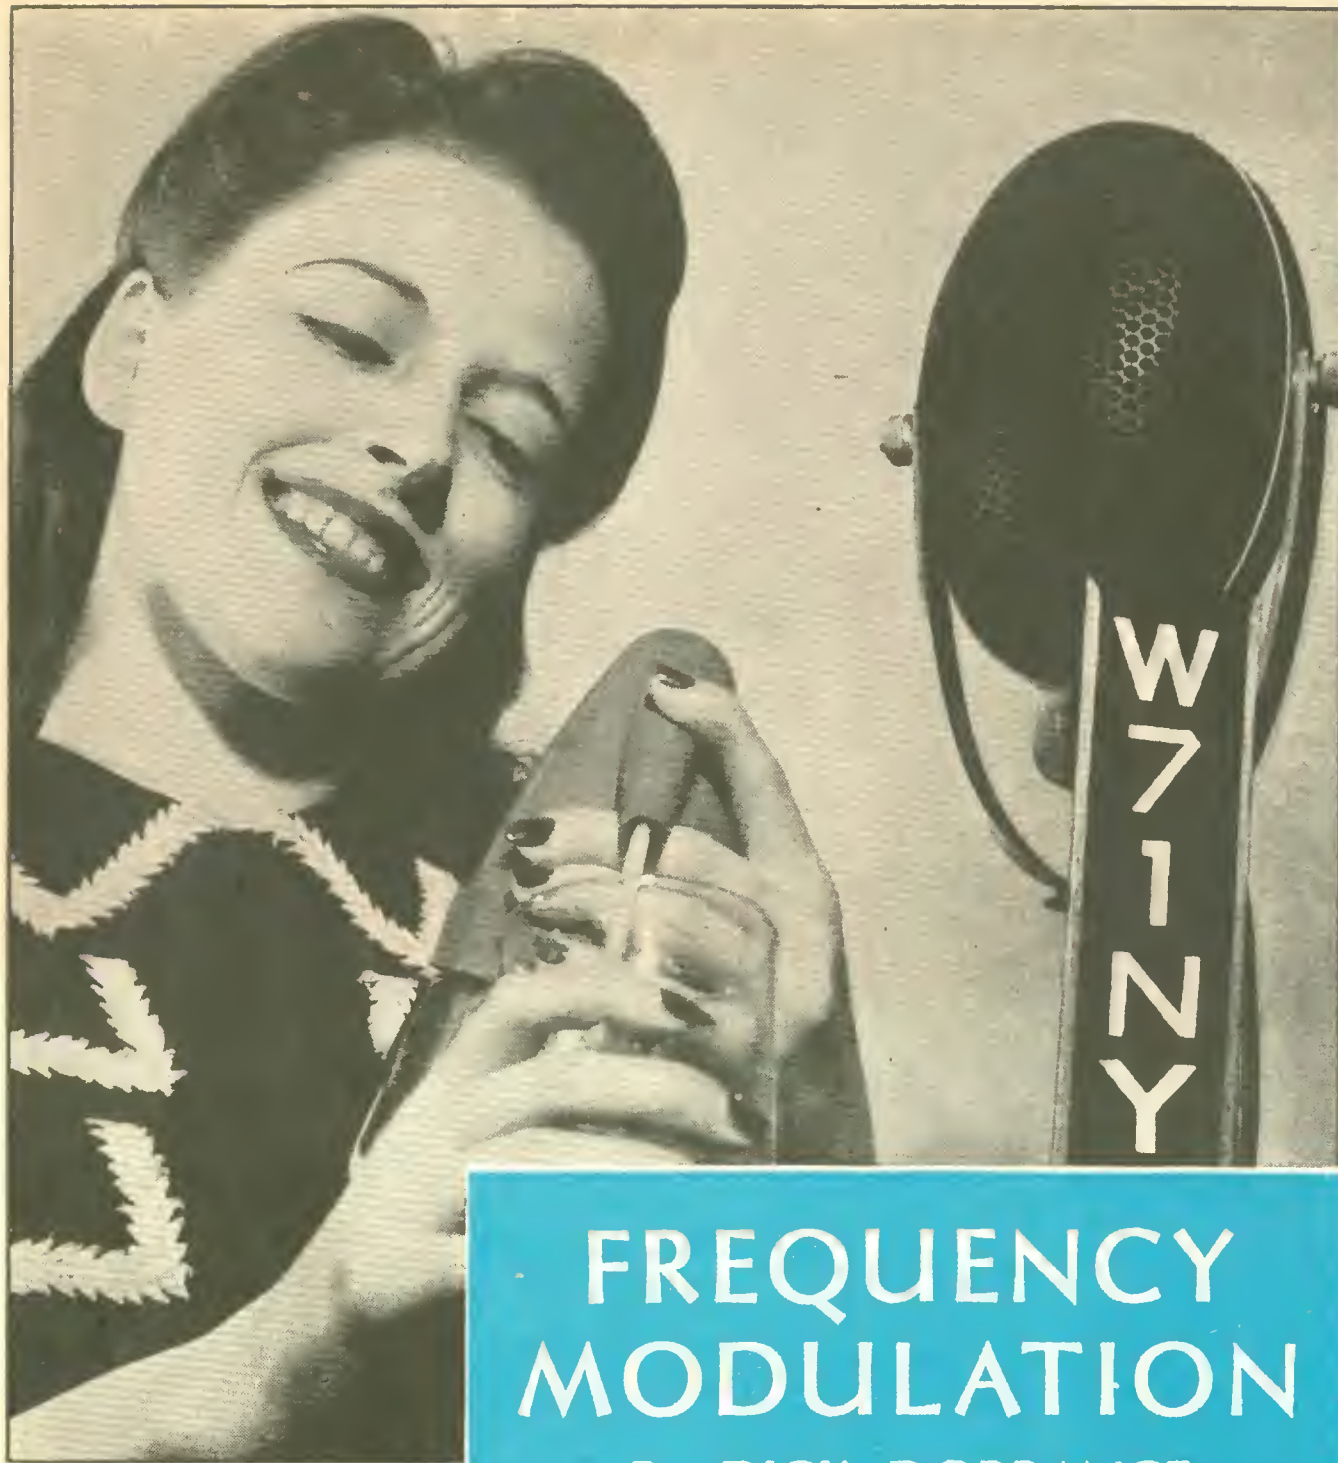

SCARCELY a line is printed these days without some mention of Frank Sinatra. This corner has done its share of plugging him. One would think that everything had been said, but somehow the young man has the ability to make news. His latest stunt is appearing with symphony orchestras in the very strongholds of the "Three B's." To date he has sung with the Cleveland Orchestra, the National Symphony and the Philharmonic-Symphony (at the Lewisohn Stadium). By the time you read this he will very likely have played soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra and who knows how many more of the nation's top musical organizations.

It seems to me that serious musicians and music-lovers are becoming aware of a thing called "popular music." They don't snub it the way they used to. They reason that a form of entertainment that can draw such huge audiences, that can drive thousands frantic with its magic—or whatever it is—must have something. And right they are.

You can't thumb your nose at an avalanche, you know. There must be something too forceful, too human and too insistent to be denied in the so-called "popular music" for it to have such a hold on numberless people. Perhaps it lacks the sophistication, the form, the scholarship, the intellectual aspects of a cultural art, but one may not overlook its immediate appeal, its simple and direct message to so many listeners.

Critics have raved and ranted over the subject of jazz—let's say—for years. The latest party line is that it has outlived its usefulness, in so far as the serious composer is concerned. I don't think so. The serious composer had better turn to the people; he had better learn what it is that the people want. And he had better give it to them in his own terms, in his own style and manner. What I am trying to say is that we still have a folk-music developing right under our noses, a folk-music that we cannot afford to kick around with airy or pedantic phrases.

FM Broadcasters Ponder Post-War Problems, Petition FCC to Change Call-Letter System

LAST month this page discussed at some length whether the broadcast band now assigned to FM (from 42 to 50 megacycles) would be large enough to accommodate all the additional noise-free, full-fidelity stations expected on the air after the war. It was pointed out that the probable rush for station licenses might easily overcrowd the forty channels earmarked for FM.

The broadcasters themselves have now taken a hand in the matter. Meeting at New York, the national association of FM stations (FM Broadcasters, Inc.) weighed two post-war alternatives. The first is to transfer the entire FM band from its present place in the radio spectrum to a new and shorter wave-length, below 100 megacycles. This, of course, would make all present-day FM receivers useless, since the stations would no longer be operating within their tuning range.

The second plan is to continue the FM band just where it is but to extend its limits so that more channels may be included.

The station owners and engineers debated these possibilities at some length and finally came to an agreement. They decided that the FM channels already being used are quite acceptable, but there definitely aren't enough of them to meet future expansion.

They intend to let the Federal Communications Commission know how they feel. Getting the extra space in the ether, however, may not be so easy. It would probably have to come from a television band right next door to where FM now operates. The FCC has failed to indicate how it feels about this proposal.

Queer Call Letters?

Another outcome of the FM broadcasters' session was the drafting of a petition to ask that the FCC change the type of call letters being assigned to FM stations. As FM listeners are well aware, the present method uses a combination of letters and numerals—such as W75NY or K49KC.

The first letter—either "K" or "W"—indicates whether the station is east or west of the Mississippi River. The numerals show on what channel the station operates, and the final letters (or letter) designate the city in which it is located. (W75NY is in New York; K49KC, in Kansas City.)

The FM broadcasters are not very happy about this call-letter arrangement—and never were, although it has now been in force for over two years. Furthermore, it hasn't proved particularly popular with FM listeners, who find the identification of their favorite FM stations harder to remember than the conventional three- and four-letter combinations assigned to ordinary broadcast transmitters.

Another trouble—and one which bothers the FM broadcasters a great deal—is the unfortunate fact that a station can spend much time and money building up a reputation associated with its call letters. Then, as sometimes happens, Washington may decide that the station should shift to another channel. This means its call letters—or rather the numerals that are part of them—undergo an automatic change so that those numerals conform to the new channel assignments. Listeners are immediately confused and think it's another station. It is even possible for a newcomer—taking over the channel just vacated—to cash in on all the public reputation the older station had worked so hard to build up in the minds of its listeners.

The FCC has previously argued there are not many more three- and four-letter combinations left that start with "W" or "K." (Under international agreement, all U. S. broadcast stations must have call letters beginning with either "W" or "K.") Despite the thousands of possible combinations, only about 950 have actually been assigned to ordinary broadcasters. The rest are used by ships, commercial shore stations, police and fire departments, airports, coastal shipping, relay transmitters, commercial television and a number of other services.

The FM broadcasters reason that some of these stations—notably the ones that have no necessity for the public remembering their call letters—might be able to use the more confusing letter-and-numeral arrangement and thereby free ample and normal-sounding call letters for FM.

No official action has been taken on this petition, and it is not likely—even if Washington shows a favorable attitude—that any changes will be attempted before the end of the war.

More, the Merrier

Mounting interest over the post-war importance of FM is reflected, incidentally, in the fact that eleven more groups have joined FM Broadcasters, Inc., during the past month. In April, twenty other new members were taken in. This means that FMBI's membership (now at fifty-five) has more than doubled since last spring and gives clear indication of the increased number of stations we may expect on the air after the war. (Only those who operate or intend to operate FM stations are eligible to belong.)

FMBI's latest members come from such widely scattered cities as Detroit, Cleveland; Ashland and Lexington, Kentucky; St. Louis, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, Louisville, Washington, New York, and Portland, Maine. If you live in or near any of these—and do not yet enjoy FM service—the chances are good that you'll have it a few years hence.

W75C on Full Time

After an extensive period of experimental broadcasting, W75C in Chicago, FM outlet of the Moody Bible Institute, has received a provisional license and is on the air daily from 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Its present Sunday schedule is reported as from 8 a.m. to the time of local sunset.

Although war-time shortages limit its power to 1,000 watts, W75C has plans to install a 50,000-watt transmitter as soon as conditions permit. The station is one of five frequency-modulation outlets now serving the Chicago area.

Transmitting equipment for both W75C and the Institute's regular station, WMBI, are located at Addison, Illinois, nineteen miles west of Chicago.

XAVIER CUGAT, maestro on Durante-Moore radio show, was born in Barcelona, Spain. Besides being a musician, he's a talented cartoonist

THE lights in NBC's silver studio in New York's Radio City are slowly dimmed. A short collegiate-looking man with a crew haircut steps in front of the curtain, stares at the audience from behind an exaggerated frown. Then he smiles and says, "Ladies and gentlemen, I am Garry Moore. We've got a whiz-bang show. Xavier Cugat's orchestra, Garry Moore, vocalist Georgia Gibbs and Garry Moore. Garry Moore and Amazon Hope Emerson, and that very funny fellow, Garry Moore. Tonight we're on the ball. We've rehearsed the show 6,689 times."

At that point he pauses for breath and a raucous voice from the rear of the studio bawls out, "What's that number again, Junior?" As Garry repeats the number, Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante dashes down the aisle and onto the stage, shouting, "Ye Gods! I've been drafted!"

But that's only the beginning of the warm-up for the Durante-Moore show, heard Thursdays at 10 p.m. EWT. From that moment on, the audience joins in. Cracks and insults fly. The weekly funfest is on. Durante explodes about every fifteen seconds. Garry, master at the art of ad-libbing, throws in his two cents' worth. The orchestra dead-pans in bewilderment. And when Toodles Bongshnook, Garry's secretary (Hope Emerson), bounces out of the wings, there are murmurs to the effect that it's every man for himself. Only sane moments in the show are when Georgia Gibbs begins to sing. Then Garry, Hope and Jimmy retire briefly backstage into a what-is-the-next-antic huddle. Soon as Georgia's song is ended, they're back again, hurling insults and gags at each other.

At the end of the show, Jimmy, Hope and Garry raise eyebrows in unison as if they are amazed that a half-hour could pass so quickly. The cast saunters into the wings. Before the audience can move from their seats, Garry dashes from behind the curtain, snarls at those in the front row and screams, "The show's over! Why don't you go home?"

HOWARD PETRIE stands six feet four, has a sonorous bass voice that matches physique. He's a direct contrast to Garry's five feet seven

Top Rating Year After Year

L UCK and long shots play no part in the year-after-year success of "Lux Radio Theater." The consistently high quality of its productions is due in great measure to C. B. DeMille, wizard producer, with his million-dollar-star contacts in Hollywood and his uncanny ability to choose plays that are adaptable to the medium of radio entertainment. Furthermore, C. B. knows how to pick assistants—men like Charlie Forsyth, who handles all the sound-effects heard on the show; George Wells, radio playwright who does the scripts. For every play from stage and screen must be "tailored" to fit radio technique. And Wells has been doing the job ever since the first airing nine years ago. Typical of the all-star casts Mr. DeMille picks for the show is the trio shown on these pages. Flawless performances given mean not only vision on the part of the producer and his helpers, but endless revision—gruelling hours spent in rehearsals that last long into the night. Work begins on the next show as soon as the Monday night performance is over. Tuesday, maestro Lou Silvers begins music rehearsals. Wednesday, the cast gets together for a first reading of script. Thursday rehearsal is an all-night chore which often continues far into the next morning. By Friday night the full script has been read at least fifteen (Continued on Page 61)

TO KEEP "Lux Radio Theater" shows in a top spot, Cecil B. DeMille scans stacks of scripts in search of material. Unerring good judgment of movie stories adaptable to airplay needs spells success for his work

7 STICKLER for detail in radio showmanship as he always has been in movies, producer DeMille isn't content with studio-made sound-effects in "Lux Radio Theater" shows, has Charlie Forsyth, sound-effects engineer, roam around for authentic "live" sounds he can incorporate into programs

JINX and the BOYS

One-Woman Barnstormer Was Jinx Falkenburg on Her USO Jaunt!

WHEN Jinx Falkenburg set out on a USO tour to entertain the men in military camps, the only item planned was her itinerary. What she did on arrival was up to her. Jinx didn't go out on a stage, sing a song, put on an act, then disappear. Not Jinx! Cary Grant was the first male star to go out on these "one-man barnstorms" and the Jinx has the distinction of being the first woman. There was no ballyhoo and no advance publicity on the trip. Her visits were always a genuine surprise to the men, for she suddenly just appeared alone, except for a USO escort, mingled with the boys, played tennis, danced, chatted for hours, ate with them, even shared their kitchen-police woes. The men loved it! Fact of the matter was, the Jinx never earned her name, for she didn't attempt to entertain formally; rather made it her business to become a part of the men's daily schedule without interfering with their regular work routine. During rest periods, for example, she would always join the men for a chat and a coke. That meant a rigorous round of early rising in order to be around for drill and class work. Evenings after dinner, Jinx dressed up, put in an appearance at service parties, danced with all comers.

Jinx enjoyed every minute of the tour, says she wouldn't go back to the regular camp tour for anything. Whisking onto a stage and whisking off isn't her idea of really entertaining servicemen. Men themselves vote a hundred percent for Jinx' warm and casual friendliness.

Talking over her trip after her return to Hollywood, Jinx said the only place she visited which put her in a tough spot was Pueblo, Colorado. There Jinx had an almost insurmountable task in erasing from the minds of the men another movie personality who had preceded her at the camp—Captain Clark Gable. "It was certainly tough following him," mused Jinx.

AT Camp Frederick, Oklahoma, Jinx took over postman's bike and load, delivered day's mail

WHILE at mess, Jinx innocently upset pet superstition of men by "short-stopping butter," which means taking a piece in passing it. Punishment for that in any Army camp is KP duty. Above: Dooning it

VISITING hospitals at the camps, Jinx spent whole mornings writing letters for injured boys to sweethearts, mothers, friends. On this chore men insisted she identify herself as letter-writer

ACCOMPANIED by an officer, Jinx inspected one of the planes at Camp Frederick. Perhaps her biggest thrill on the whole tour was the ride in observation plane with Ft. Sill's Col. Woolf

WHAT'S Cooking

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Vacationing in your own back yard can be fun—and is for Alan Bunce (Dr. Jerry Malone in "Young Doctor Malone"), who shows his sons—Lanny, 10, and Elliott, 7—how to go about roasting chicken barbecue style, and potatoes—while he keeps pot boiling with corn on the cob

EAT OUTDOORS

DID you ever stop to consider that your own back yard holds all the treats of a vacation? You can even make it an outdoor eating-place for you and your family. First of all you'll need a barbecue pit or an outdoor grill, but from then on mealtime will be picnic time until winter weather sends you indoors. Don't miss any of September's beautiful days when you're lucky enough to have a back yard to make use of—no matter how small its acreage may be.

Maybe you owe some friend a dinner and ration points won't allow a big roast for your meal. Your guests will have the time of their lives eating outdoors and your social obligations will be solved with very few ration stamps missing. There will be no dishwashing either if you use paper plates.

Eating outdoors always brings to mind the lusty hamburger and its old friend, Mr. Hot Dog. Outwit old man rationing and serve branburgers. By adding a cup of bran to a pound of hamburger, you can make two patties grow where only one was before, and you'll be putting iron and vitamin B1 in your diet as well. (See recipe.) Or maybe you'd like to try the Waltzing Dogs recipe given. Of course, if you feel particularly extravagant, you can serve chops or steaks. Chicken grills beautifully, too.

Your green or yellow vegetable can be right from your own garden. A tossed salad or corn on the cob is the delicious solution. For dessert, serve chilled fresh fruit with refrigerator ginger cookies.

Every single member of the family can join in the festivity, each taking care of some part of the meal. Outdoor meals mean less work for Mother and fun for all.

Waltzing Dogs

- 6 slices bacon
- 6 frankfurters
- 6 toothpicks
- 6 frankfurter rolls
- 3 tablespoons butter blended with
- 1 tablespoon horseradish sauce

Wind a slice of bacon around each frankfurter and fasten securely with a toothpick. Cook over low embers, turning to cook bacon evenly. Split rolls, spread with butter blended with horseradish sauce (blend inside, then take out in a jar). Toast rolls lightly and place a cooked frankfurter in each.

Cheese Potatoes

- 3 tablespoons melted fat
- 4 medium-size boiled potatoes
- $\frac{2}{3}$ cup corn flakes
- 1 cup finely grated cheese
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon salt

What to do with a Victory Garden

by BOB HOPE

1. Of course, you know what a Victory Garden is. That's a little garden where you go out and putter around for a while, and if you can straighten your back again it's a victory. It's lots of fun, though. I have a beautiful patch . . . on my right hand where the blister broke!

2. Mather Nature is really wonderful. For instance, suppose you want carrots. Well, you just drop a seed in the ground and in no time at all up comes a rabbit. Of course, if you want a bright, sparkling smile, some Pepsodent planted on your brush does wonders every time.

3. After your garden has started to grow, it's very important to use Pepsodent—the film removing tooth paste. This puts a bright gleam on your teeth . . . so if the sun doesn't come out one day, you can walk around with a big broad smile and shine on your vegetables.

4. Watch out for pests. I'm not bothered with birds any more . . . since I tossed a tube of Pepsodent into their nest. Now they haven't time to do any damage—they're too busy brushing each other's teeth and singing. "Oh, it floats away film with the greatest of ease!"

5. Well, that's all. Just don't forget the tomatoes. I find the best way to remember them is to keep their phone numbers in a little book. You know, the same book you write in when you want to remember to buy Pepsodent . . . the only tooth paste containing Irium.

How IRIUM in Pepsodent uncovers brighter teeth

Film on teeth collects stains, makes teeth look dingy—hides the true brightness of your smile.

This film-coated mirror illustrates how smiles look when commonplace methods don't clean film away.

But look what Irium does to that film! It loosens and floats it away, leaves the surface clean and bright.

That's how Pepsodent with Irium uncovers the natural cheery brightness of your smile . . . safely, gently.

Adventures in Nation's Capital

THE story of "So This Is Washington," Lum and Abner's fourth picture for RKO, concerns the adventures of the two leading citizens of radio's Pine Ridge, Arkansas, when they think Abner has discovered a formula for making synthetic rubber. The pair rush to Washington, D. C., as dollar-a-year men, where Mr. Marshall (Alan Mowbray), a bureau chief, is seeking war-time inventions contributed by the common man. In fact, the common man is an absolute fetish with Mr. M. After a series of comical difficulties, he gets Abner set for his big demonstration, only to have him conked on the head when Marshall's statue of the Common Man falls on him. The blow destroys Abner's memory. He can't remember who he is or how he made the rubber. Marshall and Lum rush Abner back to Pine Ridge in the hope of restoring his memory. How this is accomplished, and how Abner's invention turns out, proves a series of hilarious complications.

Arkansas-born Lum (Chester Lauck) and Abner (Norris Goff) are shown on this page as they look out of make-up—two personable young men who always have been friends. Present plans are to hold the premiere of "So This Is Washington" at the real Pine Ridge, Arkansas, village that changed its name from Waters on the strength of the Lum and Abner broadcasts. The village, with its population of only two hundred, has no electricity, but an exhibitor plans to take a first print of the film to Pine Ridge and show it in a Chautauqua tent. And of course Lum and Abner plan to be on hand to celebrate the occasion with their fellow townsmen.

Beauty on the CAMPUS

Don't Try to Look 30 if You're Bordering 18

By Claire Finucane

IF YOU want to be one of the cute tricks on the campus this year, you'd better grab yourself a short course in good grooming, so you'll know the ABC's of beauty to tide you through the year. Choose the coiffure that is best suited to you and one that is simple to keep. The feather-cut is attractive on most of you, so don't be afraid to chop your flowing mane. If, however, you just can't bear the thought of bidding good-bye to your long tresses, remember that a shoulder-length hair-do looks best only when it is glistening, smooth and well groomed, with a slight curl on the ends.

In order to obtain the best results from your make-up, don't shun soap and water. Even when you're sixty, be sure you use plenty of soap and water after you remove excess make-up with cleansing-cream.

It's no trick to apply make-up expertly—it is just good common sense. All you have to do is slightly accent the coloring nature endowed you with. Don't think you're more grown up when you wear a darker-than-dark lipstick or if you load on mascara heavily. Wear a light-red lipstick that is flattering, and carefully brush your mascara on so that no one can even tell it's there. Your foundation should be just a slight shade darker than your complexion. Don't spread it on like a mask. Follow the directions on the label and use your foundation sparingly. Then smooth it on carefully.

Your hands and nails need grooming, too, so be sure you give them attention. Cream your hands carefully at night and wear cotton gloves to bed so the sheets won't take a beating. Wear light polish.

Just one more thing before I finish. Don't think dirty white shoes are collegiate—they're just plain sloppy. Schoolgirls are young ladies who should look neat, clean and attractive at all times.

IT'S a difficult job to keep young actresses looking their age because of their close association with adults, but Joan Leslie, Warner Brothers star, is one whose sweet-girl looks are typically all-American. Don't miss her current movie hit, "Thank Your Lucky Stars"

THE CLASSROOM is no place to fuss around with make-up. Do your beauty chores at home and do them well, then you won't incur your teacher's annoyance with frequent mirror-peeks. Beauty tactics should be learned in private—the classroom is for school studies coolness and decision. There was that about him which inspired almost instant confidence in his listeners.

Harding quietly received a folded, official-looking document from the hands of the Secretary.

"These," the gray-haired man said, "are your official United States papers. They invest you with the authority to work however or wherever you so desire in the protection of this country from enemy agents. This commission creates a new title—Counter-Spy. I need not dwell on the importance of your work. You will . . ."

Harding listened attentively, accepted the congratulations of those about the table. He was ready to take on the job from that moment on.

Across the Atlantic at Hamburg, in Nazi Germany, meanwhile, Captain Frankein of the Gestapo was in conference with Lieutenant Herr Kurtz. They were discussing how best to use a young American-born German named Albert Froeman, who had been caught in Germany when war broke out. The Gestapo had made a careful investigation of young Froeman's background. They knew he had worked in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, at the Argo Airplane factory. They knew he had held a responsible position which he had acquitted with intelligence and efficiency. Froeman had come to Germany for the vacation he had planned for three years. He had two sisters who lived in Berlin. The Gestapo knew this, too, and the Gestapo was ready to use the information. Froeman was ordered to step into the room with Frankein and Kurtz.

The Gestapo men had not taken much for granted. Froeman, a round-faced, blue-eyed young man, had earned $4,200 annually at his job in Pittsburgh. Frankein now offered him $12,000 a year as a member of the Gestapo.

"You know America," Frankein said. "Your education is good, you will learn fast in our training. You should be a very valuable man for us in the United States . . ."

Weeks passed, Froeman was placed under the charge of Lieutenant Kurtz. His training as a German spy was thorough and efficient. The time finally came for him to return to the country where he had been born. Kurtz was to go along. Together they were to work out their mission for the Fatherland.

The method of returning to the United States was far from direct. It entailed the murder of two sailors at Lisbon, Portugal, and theft of their passports. Then came the long journey across the Atlantic and the final landing in Mexico, which, in fact, was no official landing at all. Kurtz killed the watchman on the ship on the dark night it lay at anchor. He and Froeman then slipped over the side into the lifeboat they had lowered beforehand.

Kurtz knew the proper contacts to make. A car was procured and the two spies drove northward toward the United States border. A stop was made at a Mexican ranch which Froeman was not too surprised to find was operated by German agents. A plane hidden at the ranch flew Froeman and Kurtz over the border and dropped them at a deserted spot in Texas. Their plans called for them to journey to New York, where they would separate and meet again at a designated place and time.

Froeman marveled at the smoothness with which the German plans were carried out. Everything went like clockwork. There were no hitches. He stepped from the train in New York into a waiting taxi.

"To the Warburton Hotel," Froeman said curtly.

The taximan grinned knowingly in the way of New York cabbies. "Geez, fellow, the Warburton's filled up with a convention. I can run you over to the Herman Hotel right across the street."

Froeman frowned. It made little difference to him which hotel he stopped at at this point, although the Warburton had been the one selected by Kurtz. But he took the cabbie's advice and got out at the Herman. The desk clerk assigned him to room No. 2342, and five minutes later he found himself alone with his bags—bags that had been provided by the efficient German spy system. But now a hitch developed—the first since the start of the circuitous journey.

Froeman opened a closet door and found himself looking into the business end of an automatic pistol held in the hands of a tall, athletic-looking man with a determined American face!

Froeman backed away, reaching for his own gun. The stranger was quicker.

"Easy, Froeman," the intruder said. "I'd put that gun away, too, if I were you."

The stranger's voice was quiet, almost a drawl, but Froeman was impressed with a certain quality in it that made him drop his gun almost instantly.

"How'd you know my name?" the young man asked nervously. "How'd you get into this room? Who are you?"

The stranger came forward. He put the automatic back in his pocket and sat down on the arm of an overstuffed chair. "I didn't just get in," he said. "I've been sitting here half an hour waiting for you. My name is Harding—of the United States Counter-Spies."

"A spy?" Froeman's mouth was dry. "I—I don't know what you're talking about."

Harding made a wry face. "Well, Froeman, on February 14 I received this message from Hamburg." He handed Froeman a paper. "I've decoded it so you could read it."

Froeman looked down at the paper he held in nerveless hands. "Albert Froeman, American-born German, visited Gestapo headquarters Hamburg at noon. Has two sisters in Berlin. Is training to become Gestapo agent."

The young man looked up with a puzzled expression. Harding spoke again.

"Naturally, Froeman, we investigated your past record here in the States. We have a complete file on you from the time you were born. On April 18, I received another coded message telling me that you and Lieutenant Kurtz had left Germany by plane and that your destination was Lisbon. Two days later, I learned that two Brazilian seamen had been murdered. It was simple to trace your activities when we learned two men answering the description of yourself and Kurtz were aboard the freighter Martiques, bound for Mexico and using the names of the dead Brazilians."

Froeman felt perspiration breaking out on his forehead. He wiped it away with the back of his hand. "But how do you claim to have followed us from Mexico?" he asked.

"We didn't bother," Harding said with a chuckle. "We've been working very closely with the Mexican authorities. They know all about the airplane on the ranch south of Buena Vista. Our counter-spies just covered the trunk-line trains out of Texas. You and Kurtz got on at El Paso. We knew your seat number twenty-four hours ago. You were very careless when you came out of the Pennsylvania station to get a cab. If you'd watched a few minutes, you would have noticed that the driver had been telling everybody else he was busy—till you came along. It was he who brought you here. Now if you still doubt that I'm a United States Counter-Spy, we'll go over to Governor's Island and have the War Department assure you—"

FROEMAN sat down on the bed. "It's not necessary, Mr. Harding, but I've got to explain—I wasn't going to work for the Gestapo. Honest! I was born an American and I'm loyal. I didn't dare refuse the Gestapo and I was planning to tell the United States Government all about it when I got over here—"

"We know that," Harding said quietly, then grinned when Froeman's mouth dropped open in surprise.

"You believe me?" Froeman said in amazement. "How do you know I'm not just trying to trick you?"

Harding explained the care given to the study of Froeman's record. He said he knew that Froeman had told his sisters he couldn't refuse the Gestapo and had given them money to escape from Germany.

"We know all about that, you see, and arrangements have already been made to get them safely out of Germany before—before the Gestapo learns you are working with us!"

"Working with you! Man, I thought the Gestapo was good, but you've got them stopped before they even start!"

Harding took Froeman into the next room, which had been fitted out as a laboratory. Froeman was amazed to see that through a window on one wall he could look back into the room they had just left, yet he recalled no window on that wall. Harding explained it was a one-way glass with a mirror on Froeman's side. Harding also showed the young man the whispering machine, recording equipment and a motion-picture machine.

Froeman told Harding that the first job the Gestapo had given him was to build a short-wave radio station in the United States so Hamburg could be contacted directly. Harding nodded.

"You will probably be told to work with a man named Rhiner," he said, "and a girl we have been watching for a long time by the name of Madera. Get your radio station set up as quickly as possible, locate it out on Long Island, where the reception is good. I shall duplicate it—and set one up in this room. We'll intercept every call and message your station receives."

Harding paused and looked at Froeman thoughtfully.

"I must warn you to watch every move you make," he said softly. "If they suspect you, your life isn't worth two cents."

"Nor yours, sir," Froeman concluded.

In two months the Gestapo spies had their hidden short-wave radio station operating efficiently on Long Island. One evening Froeman, with Kurtz, the Gestapo agent named Rhiner and the girl known as Madera were operating the station. Rhiner monitored the controls, while the girl stood ready at a recording-machine. Kurtz threw the switch and Froeman spoke in a monotone into the phones.

"Come through, Hamburg, come through, come through XNO."

They listened attentively as a drone began coming from the speaker.

"Here it comes," Kurtz said. "The code—listen—"

From the speaker came only a high-pitched squeal, a steady, unrelenting sound that seemed to be on one note and containing no nuances of voice inflection or the intermittent burring of international code. The squeal, however, was recorded carefully by Madera, who turned off her machine when the drone from the speaker ceased.

"Tell them to stand by while we check the message," Rhiner said, and Froeman spoke into the transmitter. "Stand by, XNO; stand by, XNO." He turned a switch. "I've disconnected so we can decode it."

Kurtz took the disk record from Madera. "Let's see," he said, "that was recorded at 630 revolutions of the turntable per minute. I'll start the turntable at the same speed we recorded it, and keep slowing it down to thirty-three and one-third revolutions per minute."

The record on the turntable whirled madly around at 630 revolutions per minute and from the speaker came the same high-pitched squeal that had come over the air from Hamburg. However, as Kurtz slowed down the turntable, the vague sound of words began coming, which became bell clear as the turntable was slowed more and more.

"Your call letters are coming through clearly," the voice on the record said. "Your voice fuzzy, but can understand. Your orders are to get the plans for the howitzer which the U. S. Government is about to start building. Relay plans according to schedule LM4—reduce to negative."

Kurtz stopped the turntable and turned to Madera, commanding her to start the recording-machine which was to take a record of his reply. He then dictated his message.

"To Hamburg. Your message clear. Already know where new howitzer plans are kept in Government building. Believe we will have photostat copies on way to you by within eight days. Have arrangements for securing them all planned. Will contact you W-613." Kurtz stopped dictating and ordered Madera to speed up the machine until his words were unintelligible.

The turntable picked up speed, the words became garbled, finally merely a high-pitched squeal as the circuit was opened to the Hamburg station.

The Gestapo spies would have been furious had they overheard a later conversation between Harding and an Ordnance Department general. Harding was making certain that the general had made the howitzer plans easily available to the German spies.

"Everything's ready," the general said. "I've followed your suggestions verbatim. I've been working with the designers for three days. We're changing the plans and dimensions just enough to throw the final results off balance. The changes are so slight that even an expert can't know it, but if the Nazis work on these altered plans they'll waste millions of dollars and months of time." The general chuckled. "If they try to manufacture from those plans, I'd like to see their faces when they try to shoot the howitzers. The rear ends will be more dangerous than the muzzles."

SO THAT was how Harding worked it for two months or more. More and more inaccurate plans were fed into the spies to broadcast in short wave back to Hamburg in the speeded-up record code. Finally, however, came the time when the spies began to suspect Froeman, and Harding called for help in the emergency. In his report to Washington, he asked to have Ben Wallace, a husky American undercover agent, report to Harding's room at the Herman Hotel immediately. The Germans were holding a meeting that night in Froeman's room, adjoining Harding's.

When Wallace reported, Harding showed him the one-way mirror through which they could watch everything that went on in the next room.

"I've got this dictaphone and recording-machine," Harding said. "I'm going to sit right here and see, and record everything they say. I've already put Tom on the switchboard downstairs."

"Yes, sir," Wallace said.

"Put Butler on running the elevator," Harding ordered. "If I have some trouble on the elevator I want his 240 pounds there."

"What shall I do?"

"Ben, this hotel is full of suspects. If we should try to take Rhiner, the girl and Kurtz at one time, there might be a commotion—and word would leak out to the others, who would scatter and disappear."

Wallace scratched his ear while he pondered the problem. "After they've had a meeting they usually go down one by one, don't they?"

"Yes," Harding said. "I want those three to just disappear into thin air! This hotel elevator has a front and back door," Harding continued. "When it stops on the ground floor, if you use the back door it opens into a small storeroom right on the street. I want you to be down there with Ted—and take care of whatever we deliver to you. Butler and I can handle things in the elevator and I don't think too gently, either."

"I get it," Ben said, "and I'll have a baker's truck backed up to the storeroom."

"That's the idea. All right, Ben, get going."

Harding sat tensely in his room that night listening with earphones to the conversation in Froeman's room. He sensed the suspicion between Kurtz and Froeman, who loyally had been playing the game with Harding. It was the showdown.

"I think we've been giving Hamburg a lot of good information," Harding heard Froeman say.

"What you think, Herr Froeman, is of no interest to me," Kurtz snapped. "Meet me in one hour in the park—alone!"

"Yes, sir," came Froeman's voice over the earphones. Harding knew the young man never would return alive if he kept the appointment.

"That is all," Kurtz said abruptly. "As usual, we'll leave two minutes apart, and walk to different floors to get on the elevator."

Harding snapped off the receiver, hurried across to his door and out into the hall, where he buzzed for the elevator. The door flew open immediately. Butler was on the job.

"I'm glad you were waiting for me, Butler," Harding said. "Now I'll pretend I'm just a guest going down in the elevator. Let them get in, then ask what floor and close the doors. While we're taking them down I'll cough if they're the right ones."

"And," said Butler jubilantly, "I'll start to work on them. Oh, boy!"

Harding grinned. "This late at night I don't expect anybody else will be getting on the elevator except those spies. If anybody does, I'll handle 'em."

The elevator had stopped for several seconds on the twenty-fifth floor when the buzzer sounded. Butler nodded his head toward the indicator. The light showed it was the ninth floor.

"Okay, Butler," Harding said calmly, "here we go. Now we've got to work quiet and quick. No slip-ups. The boys are all set at the back doors."

Butler frowned as the elevator dropped downward. "Don't make me hold back tonight, will you, Mr. Harding? I've got a kid brother in the forces in Australia."

Again Harding grinned. "No," he said softly, "you needn't hold back too much, Butler. They've all got guns. They're tricky and we can't take any chances. We're at war."

THE machinery set up by Harding worked without a hitch. The truck behind the storeroom was loaded up with three unconscious spies and Harding and Froeman crawled into the front seat with the driver. Harding shook Froeman's hand and nodded toward the back of the truck.

"Those three there have committed treason against the United States and they'll be hanged," he said.

"And," said Froeman soberly, "there will be more hanged just like them, sir."

Harding nodded grimly. He turned to the driver. "Froeman and I have got to drop off at the next corner," he said. "The Gestapo in Hamburg wants some more information by radio tonight—and I want to see they get it even if it's not exactly accurate."

Harding had not forgotten that his work must go on.

movies Gary hasn't figured that actors should do much talking. A friend of the family got him a job as an extra in a western for $7.50 a day. When he showed up on the set the director took one look and moaned, "Look at him! He's so big we'll have a dig a hole for him so we can see the rest of the cast." Everybody looked and Big Coop was embarrassed for the next six months as propmen half hid him with trees, slouched him over bars, sat him in chairs—anything so's he wouldn't dwarf the hero.

Gary got his first job in pictures by not saying anything and hasn't changed that policy since beyond uttering a single "Nope" when he turned down a role that didn't suit him. A girl was responsible for his first movie break—Marilyn Mills by name. She was working in and producing western pictures when she promised Gary's dad she'd try to give him a start. Gary showed up at her house, straw hat in hand, numbly handed her some "sophisticated" pictures he'd had taken. Something in his misery touched her and she promised to fit him in somewhere.

"Sure would be swell," he muttered, and left in a hurry.

Coop's most recent job, as Roberto Jordan, hero of "For Whom the Bell Tolls," was obtained in almost similar fashion. There was plenty of talking, but the actor did none of it. He was taking a vacation at swank Sun Valley at the same time author Hemingway was there. Hemingway told him that he had one Cooper in mind when he described Jordan in the book and Gary arranged to have DeMille look over the galley proofs. DeMille had just purchased the story of Dr. Wassell, so wasn't buying anything at the moment. Instead, Y. Frank Freeman, president of Paramount, bought "The Bell." Paramount was advised by canny Sam Goldwyn that he wouldn't loan Coop for the picture. This made Coop unhappy, and things are never good when a quiet man gets unhappy. Luckily for everyone, a wordless strike was prevented when Goldwyn bought "Pride of the Yankees" and wanted to borrow Sam Wood to direct Cooper in it. If Paramount would consent to this loan, Goldwyn explained, he would loan Cooper for "The Bell."

This accomplished, Gary proceeded to win the Academy Award with the role of Sergeant York, and everybody was happy.

There are those unenlightened souls who believe that Coop is not an actor but a big, gangling, likable cuss who walks through a role and wins his acclaim simply by virtue of being the sort of man all Americans like, from giggly schoolgirls to Grandpappy and Grandma. This can never be proven entirely wrong, for it is unlikely that Gary will ever write a book on how he does it. The facts are that when Gary first began to work in his early picture, "Wings," Hollywood had stumbled upon "underplaying" as a startling new technique. This simple device, having been used on the stage since the time of Will Shakespeare, was something the celluloid hams had disregarded. The hero in movies never shot a gun, kissed a bride or trapped a rival in a compromising situation with his sweetheart unless he first made vast and extravagant gestures. This seemed silly to Coop, and despite all directorial urging, if he was to portray sadness or despair, he never buried his head in his hands or smote himself on the forehead with his fist.

HEROINES of the HOME FRONT

this little girl from Texas is doing to keep up the morale of their sons.

What's more, Lois does this job voluntarily. A success on stage and screen, she turned down a proffered lead in Cole Porter's "Something for the Boys," now a Broadway hit, to stick to her war job on the radio—that of entertaining servicemen, more than 3,000,000 of them, who are just shaking the sleep from their eyes at 5:30 a.m., when she goes on the air.

Lois' agent thought she was demoted when she turned down the role, for he knew she had been waiting a long time for just such a break. Her answer was simple: "American boys are giving up their lives and careers in this war. The least I can do is give up a role I wanted to bring a bit of extra cheer into their lives." Which statement pretty well qualifies little Miss January as one heroine on the American home front.

Out in Hollywood, Wynne Gibson, who has appeared in films produced by all the major companies, has a fine reputation in all movie casting-offices. Now as soon as a picture role is completed, instead of dashing off for a vacation that she could well afford to take, Wynne wipes off her make-up, dons the coveralls of a war worker and reports for duty at a plant which makes precision instruments.

When the day's work is done, whether in factory or movie studio, Miss Gibson joins her company of "Minute Women" who operate casualty stations and field ambulances and manage booths at Victory House in Pershing Square in Los Angeles. In addition to these duties, her organization maintains accommodations for fifty soldiers over every week-end. At present this same group is working with United Seamen Service to provide similar accommodations for merchant seamen.

As a patriotic American citizen, and one who doesn't believe in sitting back and letting others accept responsibility on a vital war job, Wynne Gibson, too, deserves the title—Heroine of the Home Front.

Then she attended the Damrosch School of Musical Arts, Hunter College and the Juilliard Graduate School. While in her last year of school, she was auditioned by Phil Spitalny and has been with him ever since.

WHAT'S COOKING!

Pour two tablespoons fat into shallow baking-pan. Cut potatoes into one-half-inch slices and place close together in pan. Brush tops with remaining fat. Roll corn flakes into fine crumbs; combine with cheese, paprika and salt; sprinkle over potatoes. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) about fifteen minutes. Yield: Four servings (five slices each).

Branburgers

- 1 egg
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 cup milk
- 1/4 cup catsup
- 1 cup All-Bran
- 1 pound ground beef

Beat egg slightly, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of the moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Shape into twelve patties. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) about thirty minutes or broil about twenty minutes. Yield: Six servings (twelve two-one-half-inch branburgers).

Refrigerator Ginger Cookies

- 1 cup molasses or dark corn syrup
- 3/4 cup shortening
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups vitamin-fortified wheat flakes
- 2 teaspoons baking-powder
- 1/2 teaspoon allspice
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ginger

Heat molasses or corn syrup to bubbling and add shortening. Remove from heat; cool well. Sift flour, salt, soda and spices together; stir into molasses mixture. Add vitamin-fortified wheat flakes; blend well. Knead and shape into rolls about one and one-half inches in diameter; wrap in waxed paper, covering ends so that dough will not dry out. Store in refrigerator until firm. Cut in thin slices and bake on ungreased cookie sheet in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) eight to ten minutes. Yield: Eight dozen wafers (two inches in diameter).

BRIEF PICTURE GUIDE

OUTSTANDING

CHINA (VVVV): Cements a better understanding between America and her Chinese allies. Man Ladd, Loretta Young, William Bendix are fine.—Family.

MY FRIEND FLICKA (VVVV): Mary O'Hara's fine novel of the West comes to the screen in Technicolor.—Family.

SO PROUDLY WE HAIL (VVVV): Experiences of American nurses on Bataan and Corregidor, starring Colbert, Lake, Goldard.—Family.

STAGE DOOR CANTEN (VVVV): A star-studded cast at work in New York's Stage Door Canteen. "Soldier" actors steal show from big-time stars.—Family.

THE HUMAN COMEDY (VVVV): William Saroyan's story by the same title, with Mickey Rooney doing an extraordinarily fine portrayal of a boy bewildered by war.—Family.

THIS IS THE ARMY (VVVV): Irving Berlin's great stage show comes to the screen in Technicolor.—Family.

WINGS UP (VVVV): A U. S. Government picture, showing how airmen are trained. Capt. Clark Gable is the narrator.—Tops for the family.

MUSICALS

I DODD IT (VVV): Red Skelton at his zaniest with Eleanor Powell dancing against elaborate backgrounds.—Fun for the whole family.

COMEDIES

FIVE MILLION KEYS TO VICTORY

conducted by the Columbia Survey organization he was voted the best network commentator by a count of two to one. Three years ago the National Junior Chamber of Commerce picked him as one of the ten most promising young men in the nation. Last December, when he rounded out his fifth year on the air, William Shepherd, president of that organization, paid tribute to Lewis for his record of public service and enlightenment.

Big, bluff, blond and hearty, his voice and stance are full of assurance. He charges into his office a couple of hours before his broadcast and bats out his 2,200 words of copy with rarely a minute or two to spare. He subscribes to no news service; prefers to gather his information first hand. He has excellent pipelines. He is a terrific telephone addict and many of his calls go right through to Washington big-shots.

On election night, back in 1940, he telephoned fourteen national political leaders, including Jim Farley and Herbert Hoover, while on the air. A Federal communications rule kept him from putting their voices directly on the air. But he repeated immediately the gist of their comments on how the election was going.

Since the outbreak of the war Lewis has toured the uttermost reaches of the nation, reporting dozens of times from war plants and other locations where he developed his own unusual news stories.

The Lewis mikeside manner is intimate, friendly and direct. Often there is a confidential note in his voice—as if he were letting listeners in on a secret. And sometimes he is. He never pontificates, as is the failing of so many commentators, and he does not pose as an expert on global issues. His meat is the home front.

His hobbies are woodworking, fishing and farming. The Lewises spend much of their time at the country home they built in southern Maryland. Lewis expects sometime to persuade broadcasters to permit him to do most of his broadcasts from this retreat.

Here he gives thought occasionally to counterpoint, harmony and composition. In his early years his family expected him to make his mark in the musical world. He actually had two musical comedies produced. Occasionally he turns out humorous sketches for newspaper gatherings in Washington.

Currently he is occupied with some loose ends of his key campaign. One of the more baffling problems concerns a girl named Pat, who failed to hear from her boy friend, Bill, on her recent twentieth birthday. Bill meant well. He bought Patricia a nifty compact and sent it to her with all his love in an accompanying note—or so he thought. Actually he enclosed his gift and message in a box of keys he sent Lewis. The blunder was discovered only after the wrapper, which might have identified the sender, was destroyed.

Perhaps you can help Lewis with this one. A letter came recently from a lady living in Rochester, N. Y. She wrote:

"I think I must have sent you the key to my trunk. Would you mind looking through your collection? It's a small, flat one."

Fulton Lewis, Jr., may be heard over a locally sponsored Coast-to-Coast Mutual network Monday through Friday at 7 p.m. EWT, 6 p.m. CWT, 5 p.m. MWT, 4 p.m. PWT.

times, and recorded for playback. On Sunday morning, producer, writers, stars, together with the entire staff, gather and listen to the playback of the whole show, noting rough spots, marking scripts for revision. Then "retakes" are made of parts marked for revision before the second recording. Sunday afternoon, the entire program is played for an all-serviceman's audience. After that comes several more rehearsals. On Monday, another round of rehearsals starts early, continues until "dress" rehearsal shortly before the show goes on the air at 9 p.m. EWT over CBS. To that routine add some twenty-eight combined "behind the scenes" production brains, mix well with fifty-fifty portions of inspiration and perspiration of hard work, preparing for every sixty minutes the program is on the air each week, and you have the recipe for "Lux Radio Theater's" success. Show will be back on the air Monday night, September 13, at the same hour, 9 p.m. EWT. If present plans work out, the opening show of the 1943-44 season will be "Random Harvest," with Greer Garson and Ronald Colman, who starred in the screen version of the James Hilton story. But whatever the opening program may present, listeners can expect a fine performance when "Lux Radio Theater" returns to the air. For when C. B. pulls the strings that's a foregone conclusion.

He simply looked sad and the expression on his face showed that he figured all was lost. A public unused to such elemental performance, was delighted, and thereupon Cooper became a star.

One of his earliest appearances was in "It," in which he served as manly scenery for Clara Bow, a wonderful creature who had that certain something which later was to be variously described as "oomph," "ping," "glamour" and the like. Cooper ostensibly had nothing but an inability to keep from blushing when confronted by a lavish display of feminine beauty. Clara was known as strictly high power and Gary's lunge on the scene was immediately seized upon by press-agents, who built an offstage romance for the two of them. Until this time, Hollywood cinema ladies had always gone for the suave, greasy-haired Latin type of Valentino vintage. Promptly it became vogue to have in tow a rugged man of the West who could be counted on to trip over a white bearskin rug at cocktail parties. In those days everyone in Hollywood knew everyone else, and in short order people began to talk of the sensational romance between Lupe Velez and Gary.

"My Garcel!" was an exclamation frequently heard as Lupe gave interviews to fan-magazine writers at the Brown Derby. Pictures galore were made of Gary and Lupe. There was something cavemanish and excruciatingly primitive about the romance that intrigued movie-goers, but with no offense to Lupe, pictures showed evidence as time went on that Gary's face was wearing an expression of confused boredom. He went to New York, and from there to Africa to hunt big game. When he returned, the Lupe romance was a thing of the past and he was thereafter seen largely in the company of Dorothy (The Countess) di Frasso, a relationship that could hardly be seized upon as romance by the most zealous of romance-manufacturing press-agents.

Women have always found Coop exciting, but his intimate friends will tell you that this is not because, as they think, he is six feet five inches tall and romantic as all-get-out, but simply because as a non-talker he is a wonderful sounding-board. A good listening type, he is somewhat nauseated by silly chatter, and this dislike was mainly what kept him out of a state of matrimony until he met Veronica Balfe (known briefly on the screen as Sandra Shaw), a society girl whom he married in 1933. Veronica, it was assumed, would not be too successful as Mrs. Cooper because she would surround him with a perfect house and a disciplined life well staffed by perfect servants. She did just this, and in 1937 a daughter, Maria, was added to the family scene.

An imaginative movie-goer can picture Mrs. Cooper saying, "Now, Gary, you simply cannot wear cowboy boots with a dinner jacket." The thought is amusing, but all legend to the contrary, the son of Judge Charles Cooper, formerly on the Supreme Court bench in Montana, graduate of a grammar school at Dunstable, Bedfordshire, England, and later a student at Iowa's Grinnell College, is not and never has been the bear-in-the-chinashop he has been pictured.

Like many another rugged, outdoor man, Gary Cooper likes the cultured atmosphere of a beautifully run home such as his mansion in Bel Air. For such conversation as he indulges himself, talk of shotguns, fishing and childhood memories of days on a Montana ranch are a delight, and no man who hasn't a common interest finds Cooper anything but boring. Yet he is not a lion bound in a gilded cage. It is safe to assume that periodic rumors about Gary's interest in this leading lady or that are just that—periodic rumors. Wishful thinking by gossip-mongers and impressionable young ladies will hardly change the status quo.

You'll find Gary most often with his wife in the company of such people as Claudette Colbert and her husband, Commander Joel Pressman, Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor, the Jack Bennys and other solid citizens. They have a small social clique such as you'll find in any American suburb, which Hollywood is—with a Duco finish.

Gary is not a teetotaler, nor is he a party man, and experts on this phase of an actor's life could be a little confused at the sight of him showing up at Mocambo the other night and spending the evening on the right side of a glass of milk. His favorite hang-over story concerns a happening when Coop was on location in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The cast and crew, including Coop, spent a large night at the "Bucket of Blood," a local night-ery. Next morning Gary showed up at breakfast a trifle shaky, but he firmly ordered ham and eggs, a small steak, toast and coffee. A photographer with a newly acquired greenish look sat down beside Cooper, gazed glassy-eyed at this array of food and said to the waitress, "Just bring me two aspirins and a pistol."

"A pistol?" the numb waitress asked. "Yeah," growled the cameraman, "to shoot Cooper with!" Coop roared with laughter and thereafter buttonholed all in sight to retell the story.

IN PERSON, Gary Cooper has much the same qualities of the average American—and to those who aren't aware of it the average American is not a filibustering senator. Cooper smokes endless cigarettes without knowing that he does when he's worried or thinking about something. He has a strong faith in things American, and does not demand that these all be connected in fact or fancy with Washington's day. With a considerable fortune to protect from ravages of war, he invests to the saturation point in war bonds. He'll gladly show a set visitor how to twirl a six-shooter in expert fashion, and then look sheepish if he sees a visiting soldier watching him, even though now past forty he is not by any stretch of the imagination, despite picture roles, rugged enough to stand the gaff of this young man's war.

Cooper loves to dance, but he isn't a good dancer. This is not one writer's opinion—photographs prove the fact.

The one man most qualified to utter the final words in any verbal portrait of "Big Coop" is Sam Wood, director of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Sam, the most-respected director in the business, has this to say about the star of 1943's most-discussed picture.

"He worries you when a scene is in progress. Competent actors with him go through their business and it appears as though Cooper is completely dead-panning it. That night's rushes in the projection-room tell a different story. Whatever the feeling of the scene, it's there in Cooper's eyes or in a barely perceptible movement of the mouth. It's not underplaying—it's simply a complete absorption of the role to the point where even a minimum of the usual gestures and tricks are unnecessary.

"As an actor or a man, Hollywood will never have another like him."

Only 98¢

DEPENDABLE!
ACCURATE!
BEAUTIFUL!

The Windmill
Forecaster
Measures Over
8" in Height

The SWISS Windmill Weather Forecaster tells you the temperature—tells you if it's going to rain or snow or shine—predicts any weather change that's on the way—up to 24 hours in advance! The thermometer is guaranteed to be extremely accurate from 120° to 20° below zero. The amazing storm glass uses the same principle found in most expensive forecasters. When the weather is going to be fair, the crystals settle in the bottom of the tube—when rain or snow is predicted, the crystals rise to the top of the tube. It's so simple, yet virtually unfailling. This lovely "Swiss Windmill" Weather Forecaster is fashioned of hand-carved style Barwood—a masterpiece of craftsmanship—representing the colorful, rustic windmills of the Swiss landscape, with their weather-antiqued brown shingles, brightly gleaming red roof and latticed windmill blades... even the Swiss Alpine snow and the fir trees of the Alps are reproduced... with the quaint peasant clothes of the boy and girl shown in pleasing contrast to the flowers of the mountainside growing around the windmill steps. The "Swiss Windmill" adds a glowing, colorful, decorative note to any room in the house. As a weather prophet, you'll use it constantly! BE PREPARED FOR WEATHER CHANGES WITH YOUR "Home Weather Bureau." BE YOUR OWN WEATHER MAN!

THE PRODIGAL WOMEN

by NANCY HALE

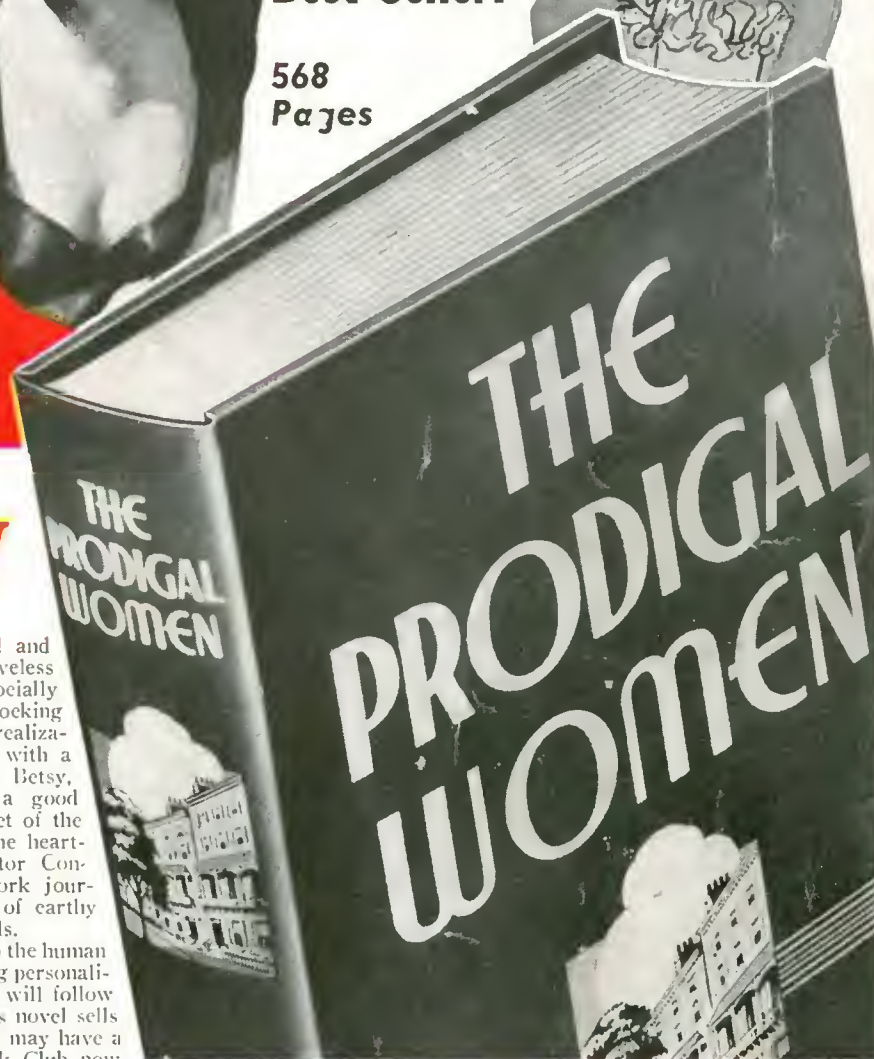

YOURS FREE with Dollar Book Club Membership—this dramatic, outspoken novel that has provoked more excitement and discussion than any other American novel in recent years.

"The Prodigal Women" is the story of three unforgettable girls and the men they loved. Leda March is the sensitive, unhappy daughter of an insignificant branch of a great Boston family. Not until the arrival in her town of the carefree, haphazard Jekyll family from the South does Leda begin to understand what companionship really is. The two Jekyll girls, blonde, popular Maizie, and the hoydenish Betsy, change the entire current of Leda's life, and the lives of the three girls from schooldays on become inextricably woven together.

It is Maizie who marries first. Her marriage to Lambert Rudd, magnetic, profane, philandering artist, becomes a living hell from which she cannot cut herself loose, even when it threatens her sanity and her life. Leda, determined and ambitious, walks open-eyed into a loveless marriage with a wealthy and socially prominent young Boston physician. Shocking to her, as the years go by, is the realization that she wants Maizie's husband with a madness she never knew before. And Betsy, the youngest, carefree and loving a good time, is first snared by the dancing feet of the erotic, jazz-mad Oren Garth. After the heart-break of this affair, she meets Hector Connolly, tempestuous, brooding New York journalist, and with him achieves a kind of earthly happiness that is denied the other girls.

"The Prodigal Women" cuts deep into the human heart. Its characters are living, breathing personalities, whose every action and word you will follow with breathless suspense. Although this novel sells in the publisher's edition for $3.00, you may have a copy free if you join the Dollar Book Club now.
