Introduction
to
"THE WASHINGTON RADIO AUDIENCE"

The information presented in this report is the result of what we believe to be the newest and most comprehensive survey of the metropolitan Washington radio audience yet produced.

It has been designed to do the following things for both the radio station and the radio advertiser:

1. Furnish a complete measurement of all radio listening by all members of the population no matter who does it or where it is done.
2. Give program audiences by quarter hours around the clock not only in ratings but in actual number of persons listening.
3. Report not only the number of persons listening to each program but the kind of people they are and where they came from.
4. Present information recorded at the time the listening took place and by the person doing it.

To attain this goal, the familiar concept of measuring radio audience by attempting to count the number of homes receiving a broadcast or the number of sets tuned to a certain program has been altered. Instead, a precision sample of 1000 individuals representative of the entire population of all ages in metropolitan Washington has been selected, and complete records kept of the personal radio listening of each individual regardless of where the listening took place.

These records were obtained by personal interview and use of a newly designed form of the listener diary in such a way that the results are completely projectable, not to numbers of homes or sets, but to actual numbers of persons in the metropolitan Washington area. In addition, a number of age, race, sex, income, education, occupation, telephone and television ownership, and other breakdowns are available for each period. Some are included in this booklet.

It is our hope that you will find the material both informative and useful. We shall be pleased to supply additional facts when required and will welcome comments and suggestions.

HOW YOU CAN USE THIS SURVEY

The factual material resulting from tabulation of nearly 1000 personal interviews and 861 completed listener diaries makes it possible to extract countless types of information from the study. Some of the immediate uses are:

- a. Size of audience to any program.
- b. Composition of the radio audience at any hour.
- c. Audience flow and turnover between adjacent programs.
- d. Duplication of audience at different hours or days and cumulative audience.

Included in this presentation are size of audience, kinds of people (by age, race and sex), percentage of audience newly tuned in, attracted from other stations, and delivered from preceding program. Much more information on any program period or station is available for specialized study.

HOW LARGE IS THE MARGIN OF ERROR?

In a precision sample of the kind used in this study, the range of error can be predicted mathematically. The size of the possible deviation depends on the size of the sample used and the size of the percentage ratings themselves. For the audience size ratings in this survey, the statistical chances are 95 out of 100 that the following ranges of possible error will not be exceeded:

With a percentage rating of	2:	0.9	percentage points either way
" "	" " 5:	1.3	" " "
" "	" " 10:	2.0	" " "

From the preceding examples, approximations can be made as to the range of error in other ratings. These tables, of course, show the largest possible error in 95 cases out of 100. Normally, where any deviation exists in the survey figures, it will be considerably smaller than the maximum.

Monday thru Friday daytime audience figures are based on 5 pages from each diary which gives a base of nearly 4,000 cases and further reduces this range of error to an almost insignificant amount.

On audience composition figures, the range of possible deviation is, of course, much higher. Therefore these figures are not furnished for programs having audiences below a selected total, but indicative breakdowns are available.

INCOME LEVEL BREAKDOWNS

At the time of the first interview, each respondent in the sample was classified into one of four income groups depending on the salary of the head of the household, general appearance of the dwelling, the occupants, and the surrounding neighborhood, plus a number of other factors. Income groups were arbitrarily set up as follows:

- Class A - High income group (roughly $10,000 per year and over)
- Class B - Upper middle ($5,000 to $10,000)
- Class C - Lower middle ($2,500 to $ 5,000)
- Class D - Low income group (Below $2,500)

Much additional value will be found in a more complete analysis of income showing distribution of the audience in each separate class. Break-downs are available by special tabulation for most programs contained in the ARB Diary but have not been included here for reasons of space and time.

DETAILS ON HOW THE STUDY WAS MADE

This Listener Diary Study is the result of personal contacts made with over 96% of a random sample of individuals representing the Washington Metropolitan area. Specially designed listener diaries running one week were placed in approximately equal numbers each day between October 14th and 25th, 1949. At the same time, interviews were made with each subject and information obtained as to his age, sex, race, income and education level, occupation, telephone, radio and television ownership, and a variety of other characteristics. At the conclusion of the study, returned and useable diaries had been obtained from 91% of the diary sample and 86% of the total sample. From tabulation of these diaries, the survey figures were obtained.

THE SAMPLE: A probability sample of individuals was chosen for the District of Columbia by using the 1948 Washington City Directory in conjunction with an area sample from the Bureau of the Census. Individuals were enumerated and selected by random choice from the dwelling units furnished by Census or the City Directory. The study was performed using a sample of 1,000 persons of whom approximately 64% were in D. C. and 36% in the metropolitan area as defined by Census. Briefly, the sample was chosen in such a way that all persons living in metropolitan Washington had an absolutely equal chance of being chosen in the sample.

Simplicity was chosen as the keynote in selecting the sample of persons to be interviewed. Each selection was governed completely by the laws of probability and no factors were introduced which would deny proper proportional representation to any population group or introduce complications of any sort. Persons of all ages, with and without telephones, and even without radios, were all taken as they occurred in the sample. In order to present a true picture of radio listening at any given moment, persons in the sample who were in hospitals, on vacation, ill or in jail were taken at that time of contact and not later in order to represent properly that segment of the population which at any one time is in those conditions.

When children old enough to hear and understand programs, but too young to keep listener diaries, were encountered in the sample, a parent or guardian was shown how to keep the child's listening record.

The result is that the sample used represents a highly accurate picture of the Washington population. Although selection was made by the probability method exclusively, after the field work was completed several characteristics of the sample were compared with known data about the entire population with an extremely close correlation resulting.

The next step was to contact personally every member of the sample without accepting any substitutions except in case of death or permanent removal of subject from the city. Professional interviewers were trained in this particular work and employed on an hourly basis with authority to make unlimited numbers of callbacks to locate the specific person whose name was selected. Although this is probably the most expensive and difficult way of performing such a study, it was felt that the more accurate results would be more than worth the effort. All types of persons were encountered, some of whom presented serious problems in placing diaries. The high percentage of returns achieved is due in no little part to the skill and perseverance of the interviewers on the job.

Diaries were placed with each person contacted (excepting 4% refusals) and the individual was carefully shown how to record only his own personal listening during the week the diary was to run. Checks were made several times during the week by the interviewer and at the end of the period the diary picked up personally by the interviewer. Diaries for children occurring in the sample who were too young to keep records were filled in by parents or guardians.

The information contained in this report is furnished for the exclusive use of ARB subscribers and no use or possession of these figures by non-subscribers is authorized. Possession of the report by a non-subscriber shall be considered making him liable automatically for the established subscription price.

It is requested that any subscribing station duplicating or publishing promotion material based on this information include the date of the survey quoted and identify any competing stations shown by some form of neutral code such as station "A", "B", "C", etc.

Ratings in this report reflect total audience for each quarter-hour period, not average coincidental audience. When listening for five minutes or more within a quarter hour is reported, credit for the quarter hour is given.

In any study of this magnitude, there is always the possibility of accidental error due to complex station program schedules or the human element in dealing with such a large quantity of data. Every effort has been made to eliminate all errors from this presentation by rechecking all material, and no responsibility can be assumed for unintentional irregularities which may occur. In all cases where the program name given is not correct, the audience figure for that period is, nevertheless, the right one.

HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

1. AUDIENCE: The figure given opposite this heading represents the actual number of persons listening to the program.
2. RATING: This figure represents the percentage of the entire population of Metropolitan Washington listening to the program.
3. AUDIENCE COMPOSITION:
Under this heading are shown the percentages of male and female, adults and children, and white and colored. Persons under 16 years of age are classified as children.
4. AUDIENCE FLOW:
Under "Same", "Other", and "New" are given the percentage of audience who were:
 - a. Previously tuned to the same station for the preceding quarter hour. (Same)
 - b. Listening to another station the preceding quarter hour. (Other)
 - c. Not listening at all the previous quarter hour. (New)

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Due to the advanced techniques used in this survey, it is no longer necessary to describe radio program audiences in terms of "ratings". Instead, the actual number of persons listening to the program is given opposite each station. However, in the adjacent column a program rating is also supplied for such times as ARB clients may wish to work with percentages instead of people.

In using the ratings supplied, it must be remembered that they represent the percentage of the entire population from birth to old age actually listening to a specific program either at home or outside the home. Most conventional ratings do not take into account the fact that radio sets usually have different numbers of people listening per set depending on the time of day, the type of program, and other factors. ARB ratings do show these differences and therefore will tend to be lower for programs presented when few members of the family are at home, or when the program appeals primarily to one member of the family, and high when the maximum number of people are home and the program has a broad general appeal.

Ratings are shown in this way to present a true and honest picture of the actual listening audience based on a scale that is constant throughout the day and evening and for each day of the week. They are comparable at all times because they are based on people and not on homes in which the number of people is continually changing as family members leave and return.
