The mails in her life say the nicest things

In 1957 Big Aggie got 213,820 tender sentiments from the land where WNAX Radio is King

Big Aggie carries on quite a love affair with the mails. And it's been going on for 36 years! Last year she received a whopping total of 213,820 letters and cards from every corner of Big Aggie Land—and beyond . . . 459 counties in 11 states. Such an overwhelming testimonial of affection brings a blush to Big Aggie's cheeks. But it proves an important point. WNAX-570 gives listeners what they want in radio entertainment and service; gives advertisers what they want—active listener response. Most of the mail in Big Aggie's life comes from an area spread across five of the nation's richest farming states; North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa. Big Aggie's NCS #2 Market Coverage Area takes in 175 counties with 2,217,600 population and 609,590 radio homes.

Annual retail sales amount to over $2,400,000,000. All this makes Big Aggie Land America's 41st radio market. WNAX-570 gives national advertisers a media with programs people like and listen to—popular shows that sell to people with money to spend. Your Katz man will get you a date with Big Aggie.

on radio—

"Please answer on your 7:15," the folks write Frank Field. Frank's name is legend in the Corn Belt area embracing parts of four states served by Radio KMA.

No one who knows Frank Field will ever under-estimate the power of radio.

Frank Field—
no sacred cows

For almost 18 years now Frank has been dishing it out for a quarter-hour every morning at 7:15. Weather and gardening are the chief subjects on which he is expert, but roads, recipes, egg prices, the almanac and many other subjects come within his purview.

"Frank says" is a common-place quote that starts many a conversation in the soil-wealthy provinces of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

There are no sacred cows in Frank's letter basket. He frequently disagrees with the U.S. Weather Bureau and his batting average is good enough that his detailed weather reports for a 10-state area are treated pretty much as gospel.

Everyone in KMA-land knows Frank Field. Imagine the consternation Frank caused Dr. Sidney Roslow when the good Doctor made his first area Pulse for KMA. Frank's 7:15 a.m. show came up with a 16.6 rating and a 48% share of audience.

Dr. Sidney thought his tabulating machines were playing tricks on him. So he ordered the data re-tabulated. Now, Dr. Sidney knows about Frank, too.

Dr. Sidney can tell you lots more about other KMA personalities who inspired Homer Croy to tab KMA "The Heart Beat of the Corn Country" in his famous book, "Corn Country."

They might be a little biased, but you can rely on the Petry men to give you just the facts.

NEWSMAKER of the week

This weekend, radio listeners will get their first dose of an anti-recession remedy that proved effective during the slump of '54 as The Advertising Council begins another national all-media campaign to stress the positive factors of our national economy. Tv and print will join radio shortly in promoting the theme "Confidence in a Growing America" with clients and media donating an estimated $15 million in time and faith. Heading the effort for the Advertising Council is Charles G. Mortimer, president of General Foods.

The newsmaker: Charles Mortimer, Brooklyn-born 58-year-old president of General Foods who has been named to guide The Advertising Council's prosperity campaign, is a good example of the adage. "To get a job done, pick the busy man." On three sides of a triangle, Mortimer is a busy man. In White Plains, he is the community pillar—married and father of four children. In the same community, he guides the destinies of a company whose net sales should pass the billion dollar mark this year. In New Jersey, Mortimer is a breeder of horses and dairy cattle. Now he adds to these responsibilities the task of supervising the campaign of The Advertising Council aimed at strengthening the bootstraps by which the nation can pull itself out of the doldrums.

The campaign is beginning in radio because it is the medium geared to the fastest kick-off. Copy and e.t.'s are going out to all the stations. After that will come tv, magazines and newspapers. For tv there will be three one-minute and three 20-second public service messages as well as a cartoon titled "The Hot Dog Man," the latter being the old depression story of the roadside operator who put himself out of business by running scared on recession talk. The campaign, slated to run until August, will probably be given a total of $15 million in time and faith by print and by all the networks and independent stations in addition to about $150,000 in mats and mechanical services by McCann-Erickson, the same agency that volunteered and served in the 1954 drive. Heading the Mc-E task force is Vice President Russ Johnston.

Mc-E's president, Marion Harper, is himself very much interested in the effort, and to judge by last Friday's meeting of The Council at New York's Racquet Club on Park Avenue, there are some other interested parties, for present were: NBC's Bob Sarnoff, ABC's Leonard Goldenson and CBS's Merle Jones along with Robert Anderson, U. S. Secretary of the Treasury.

"Recession begins and ends in the mind of men," says Mortimer, and ex-account exec for George Batten, who came to General Foods in 1928, rose to executive v.p. in 1952.

Mortimer is a graduate of the Stevens Institute of Technology, and the recipient of two later honorary degrees—one from his Alma Mater and the other a Doctor of Laws from Long Island University. He came into advertising through the Batten Agency, joined General Foods and became its corporate sales manager in 1938. In 1943, Mortimer was promoted to vice president in charge of advertising, four years later took over responsibility for all marketing.

Denver apparently has become the test point of Benton & Bowles' campaign against triple-spotting of tv commercials.

Lee Rich, B&B media v.p., disclosed this week that the agency has canceled all its tv spots in that city.

Meanwhile, another P&G agency, Compton, indicated that it had given one of the Denver stations a week to "clean up" any triple-spotting of Compton spots.

Rich told SPONSOR-SCOPE that B&B acted after it was informed from Denver that the changes couldn't be made right away (since elimination of third spots would involve 20% of the billings).

However, according to Rich, a goodly percentage of the stations have cleaned up their station-break schedules since B&B issued its anti-triple-spotting ultimatum.

Consensus of opinion among Madison Avenue reps: B&B eventually will have to back down, because stations will be able to sell the spots to local and regional advertisers. Remarked one rep: These advertisers, as a class, "care more about sales results than how many commercials are strung together."

National spot can expect some heavy buying out of BBDO, New York, during the next several months.

SPONSOR-SCOPE learned this week that BBDO clients have been advised that lots of prime and desirable fringe (late night) tv time has become available and they're responding with requests for recommendations.

There's also much new interest in daytime tv and prime radio spots.

Suggestion made by a BBDO timebuying executive: Expand tv packages so that the buyer can mix fringe with prime spots. A schedule would be made more flexible and the average cost-per more enticing.

The center of new national spot activity during the past week shifted markedly to Chicago.

Much of it was pinpointed at Leo Burnett, which came through with tv placements on Toni, P&G's Jiff Peanut Butter, and Marlboro. (For details see CHICAGO REPORT in NEWS WRAP-UP, page 61.)

In the Eastern sector, Eskimo Pie started placing a four-week radio saturation campaign through Cunningham & Walsh. The schedule will run in May and June.

Note: Lever's Praise is extending its heavy spot schedules to the Midwest. K&E is doing the buying in both radio and tv on the basis of predetermined schedules developed by the agency and Lever field men.

Detroit's automotive giants this week will have before them a spate of agency recommendations about next season's network tv. How long they'll take to make decisions is anybody's guess—in view of the current state of their market.

SPONSOR-SCOPE's check with the agencies on the submitting end indicated:

- The Ford line will take over Edsel's present piece of Wagon Train, canceling the Zane Grey Theatre, and continue with Ernie Ford.

- General Motors will continue with Wide Wide World and Zorro as well as Dinah Shore and Pat Boone. (McCann-Erickson's blueprint for Buick is on Detroit desks.)

- Chrysler Corp. already has O.K.'d the Welk shows; it will look at replacement or revision ideas for Climax! and explore the possibility of spot for DeSoto.

TvB this week was making book that when the list of the top 100 advertisers for 1958 comes through, it will show a grand slam for tv for the first time.

The exceptions will, of course, be the distillers, who, as a class, still are taboo in the medium.

The bigger agencies look for the start of a real breakthrough in campaign decisions toward the end of April.

Advertisers, who have been deferring decisions the past two months, are showing a disposition toward getting some of their campaigns rolling.

An estimate out of McCann-Erickson strikes this optimistic note: Advertising bills for the first six months of 1958 will exceed those for the like months of 1957 (though some of the margin will have come from rate increases).

A new line of thinking is developing on Madison Avenue: More and more agencies are expounding the philosophy that audience numbers by themselves don't make the whole story.

The new credo goes like this:

In making a choice of programs, it might be advantageous to sacrifice rating points for such factors as 1) prestige accruing to the product, and 2) higher sponsor identification.

Observed a veteran adman: The departure from complete dependence on numbers eventually will seep into the time buying departments.

Seven Up, now going through a phenomenal growth, again will put the bulk of its ad budget in air media.

Tv and radio's share will run to around $5 million, which roughly breaks down thus:

- In addition to alternate weeks of Zorro, the $4.5 million outlay for tv will cover two or three massive saturation flights for spot and network participations.
- Another half million will be spread between spot radio and network radio flights.

Sano Cigarettes (U.S. Tobacco) is using four New York stations to test the effectiveness of radio to sell 'em by the carton.

The schedule: 80 spots a week collectively on WINS, WMGM, WMCA, and WRCA.

The first flight will be three weeks for a total of $4,000.

For what it's worth, this twin-observation might be taken as a sign that the blue is beginning to filter through the murky overcast of the economy:

- 1) The makers of farm machinery are loading up their payrolls.
- 2) Stations in rural areas are finding the gleanings from local merchants much better than in over a year.

One thing that the topflight advertisers in tv have learned is that to gain the maximum advantage out of the medium you have to have long-range planning.

The successful method: Work from a blueprint that is tied in closely with product and marketing planning and the anticipated growth of the company.

In other words, instead of running with a hot pilot you operate according to a set of plans and a soundly devised strategy.

Look for mounting opposition to the Internal Revenue Service's move to enforce the excise tax on co-op advertising—just when retail sales are tightening.

The flow of this sort of money has increased considerably the past six months.

Two years ago the volume of co-op money was estimated between $200-250 million. Knowledgeable agency men figure it's now running at the rate of $400-500 million.

A three-hour interdepartmental presentation at Y&R last week on the status and outlook of tv provides a broad clue to what the big agencies will be telling clients as a prelude to recommendations.

Y&R's analysis and evaluation of the field went wide and deep into the complexities of tv; among the facets brought out were:

VIEWING: There's scant basis for talk about programing reaching the point of boredom—not when sets-in-use and average hours of viewing keep mounting from season to season.

AVAILABLE NETWORK SHOWS: The market is glutted with more material than ever. Y&R's list is over the 350 mark. (An index to the changing selling pattern of producers is the fact they abandon a pilot once it's made the rounds.)

WESTERNS: There's no immediate sight of a downtrend in popularity, and they still may prove the best bet for ratings in the coming season.

SITUATION COMEDIES: Despite a so-so record the past season, they show signs of staging a big comeback.

VARIETY SHOWS: The plethora of singer-fronted programs has given this type a black-eye. Exception: The show whose star becomes closely identified with the product—a la Dinah Shore and Pat Boone for Chevrolet.

Advertising Research Foundation, with the cooperation of the U.S. Census Bureau, has classified tv households as of January, 1958.

Highlights of the breakdown:

TOTAL TV HOMES	% ALL HOMES	URBAN TV HOMES	RURAL NON-FARM	RURAL TV HOMES
41,924,000	83.2%	28,354,000	9,959,000	3,611,000

For users of NTI here is how these tv homes are distributed regionally:

NORTHEAST	EAST CENTRAL	WEST CENTRAL	SOUTH	PACIFIC
11,650,000	7,621,000	8,063,000	8,717,000	5,873,000

Other notes from ARF's January compilation:

- Average number of tv sets per household is now 1.09.
- Total multiple-set homes: 3,417,000, or 8.7% of all homes.

McCann-Erickson's fast-rising Pete Peterson is leaving the agency for a marketing berth at Bell & Howell.

He'll start off with a floating title and eventually wind up as president, with C. H. Percy becoming chairman of the board.

Peterson, a creative operator, handled the account while in McCann's Chicago office. Marion Harper, Jr., recently made him an assistant to the president.

Named Peterson's successor at McC-E: Donald B. Armstrong, Jr., who, like Harper, started his agency career as a researcher.

There's no disposition on the part of the tv networks to repeat radio history and turn to sectional hookup selling when the going gets rough.

What little exploring that's been done on the subject shows that—technically and in other ways—the sectional concept is hardly as feasible in tv as it was in radio in the late '30s.

Then again, agencies aren't enthusiastic about tv split networks; they're making planning tough, and they're a nuisance in figuring out rebates.

Business for the radio networks this week was quite perky.

CBS added to its list such accounts as Simmons Bed, Scott Paper (Cutrite), American Home, and Chung King Foods.

NBC's newcomers included: Calumet Baking Powder (General Foods), Simmons, GMC trucks, Lever's Breeze, and Armour.

ABN: GMC, Kitchen Art Foods, Miller Brewing, Ex-Lax.

From the way network tv plans are shaping up among major advertisers, daytime business this fall may pile up to the point where all three networks will be loaded.

Price (compared to nighttime), an attractive discount structure, and daytime tv's ability to deliver buyers in multi-million chunks are the prime factors.

Of the package-goods kingpins, both P&G and Colgate are expected to pour even more money into daytime than they did last season, while Lever has upped its daytime contribution to 30% of its entire network budget. Indications are that General Foods will make it around 25%.

Network daytime, however, is headed for lean gleanings this summer. The percentage of time sold compared to time programed shows up as follows for April:

NETWORK	HOURS PROGRAMED	PERCENTAGE SOLD
ABC TV	60	34.6%
CBS TV	130	73.1%
NBC TV	120	60.0%

Source: CBS, Inc. monthly report to board of directors.

NBC Spot Sales is recommending to the stations on its tv list to extend rate protection in prime time from three to six months.

Some weeks ago the Geoffrey Wade agency put out a bid among stations in general for a year's rate protection. Results of the feeler have not been disclosed.

NBC TV thinks its new discount plan will be an effective weapon for competing with CBS TV for fall business.

The new NBC TV plan, which becomes effective 1 October, offers extra benefits to year-round and multi-program (day and night) advertisers and is so set up that present clients won't be at a disadvantage. An alternate-week evening show and an alternate-week daytime program are both entitled to a 10% annual discount, under the new plan.

Highlights of the plan:

HOURLY DISCOUNTS: Maximum for volume will be upped to 10%.

ANNUAL DISCOUNT: Maximum jumps from 10% to 15%.

LINEUP INCENTIVE: A discount scaled from 1% to 5% for over 100 stations in the daytime. Minimum lineup required to earn 5%: 136 stations.

These discounts make it possible for an NBC TV advertiser to earn up to 30% discount. CBS TV's maximum: 25%.

There's a movement afoot to do something about the mushrooming of spot plans.

Groups of reps will be holding informal luncheons during the next couple weeks to devise, among other things, ways of (1) simplifying plans and packages, (2) putting discount structures on a business-like basis, and (3) rectifying practices that militate against the integrity of spot as a medium.

Several agencies — particularly Compton — in recent months have complained about the increasing number of plans and discounts.

The IBEW strike against CBS TV—at least on the New York front—has revealed one extraordinary sidelight: that the work of 800 professionals (union people) could be performed by 300 non-pros (executives and staff employees rushed into the breach).

Some of the CBS TV directors were even amazed at the dexterity with which the amateurs—who had a maximum of 48 hours' training—handled the live shows.

Possible explanation of the phenomenon: Years on jobs where resourcefulness and fast thinking were mandatory for success.

An answer to THE RATING WEEK QUESTION

RATING WEEK A DISSERVICE

Competition in the television industry is a healthy force. We welcome it. Our ratings through the years prove we thrive on it.

But occasionally, competition can lead to unsound practices, such as "rating weeks."

A prominent trade publication recently described these rating weeks as they often occur, "You don't have to look at the calendar to know when the local TV shows are being rated. It's the week the movie telecasts stop playing re-runs of Charlie Chan and begin featuring Clark Gable and Gary Cooper — and schedule large-space newspaper ads to alert viewers."

Special programming and promotion for one week of every four is a disservice to the public — usually a one-week entertainment feast followed by a three-week famine.

It is a disservice to researchers, undermining the faith they have so painstakingly established in the validity of their services.

It is a disservice to the broadcasting industry which must have a trustworthy rating system.

And obviously the distorted measurements that rating weeks can produce are a disservice to advertisers and their advertising agencies.

NEEDED CORRECTION

Primary responsibility for correction rests on the TV stations.

They must make the decision to even out their programming so that audiences may enjoy top fare every week.

They must schedule newspaper and other promotion throughout the month, not load it heavily in one week.

In the end, TV will find this the most profitable policy, for it will build viewer loyalty not easily shaken by short-term promotions. It will build advertisers' faith in a station's ability to deliver solid ratings not for just one week, but for fifty-two.

WTVJ ABANDONS APRIL RATING WEEK SPECIAL PROMOTION

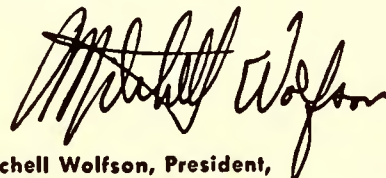

Because of rating-week competition, WTVJ had no choice but to meet it with rating-week programming and promotion of its own. That was because many segments of the advertising and television industry, while aware of rating-week evils, were not aroused. WTVJ could not combat an industry-wide practice alone. No single station could.

However, to encourage other stations to take a step that WTVJ and most responsible TV stations have long felt desirable, WTVJ has not run any special programs or intensive promotions during the April rating week in Miami. It is WTVJ's hope that it need never do so again.

INVITATION TO THE INDUSTRY

We hope all TV stations who face this problem will consider abandoning the excesses of rating week programming and promotion.

With the forthcoming NAB Convention giving all stations an opportunity to discuss and act on the problem, and with the spotlight of publicity focused on the practice by the trade press, WTVJ believes the time for united industry-wide action is here.

Timebuyers at work

Sandy Gasman, Hicks & Greist, Inc., New York, points out that, despite all the talk in the trade that buyers are primarily concerned with statistics, most buyers have been trying to look beyond the bare ratings and size-of-audience figures for some time now. "Even buyers who do buy by the book say they would rather not," Sandy says, "but have little choice because of client pressure. For the most part, there is no blind dependency on ratings—or any other single factor—to the exclusion of every other consideration. And I don't believe there is a buyer anywhere who hasn't at one time or another advised a client to weigh such things as which of two or three stations in a market has more 'prestige'; the comparative selling impact of program personalities who deliver live commercials; the over-all buying power and special buying habits of a region; seasonal conditions, broadcast times and adjacencies; and the availability of station merchandising. Nowadays, many agencies (including our own) have men traveling in the field to appraise station programming first-hand."

Doug Humm, Charles W. Hoyt Co., New York, feels that stations should revamp their feature film programming to give better product identification. "The way it is now, the commercials in feature film shows are often lost in the shuffle of the magazine concept," Doug says. "Even when an advertiser sponsors a large segment, his commercial impact is severely diluted by the impersonal nature of the feature film show. And when that happens, of what value is the big rating of the show? Yet the solution is quite simple. The stations should feature strong local personalities to give coherence and personalization to both the advertising and the programming—commenting on the films and integrating the sponsors' products."

This is the only way that an advertiser will get maximum value from his commercials. In the feature film's present format, the public looks upon commercial interruptions as an annoyance and subconsciously shuts them out until the movie returns. A strong personality would sustain the interest through the commercials and the results would be very effective."

A new standard of performance for color television systems... The RCA TM-21 Color Monitor

This new color control monitor is a reference standard for evaluating the quality of color television pictures from any source. Providing the most precise and brilliant color picture available . . . this new monitor accurately reproduces the scene as the camera sees it.

QUALITY CONTROL OF COLOR PROGRAMMING—The TM-21 is used in Color Camera Chains, Switching Systems, Master Control and Transmitting Control for monitoring color picture quality. It is the basic instrument for checking registration, shading and deflection linearity . . . color fidelity of the entire TV system . . . chroma to monochrome ratio . . . color phase or hue adjustments.

BEST POSSIBLE COLOR—When used to display color pictures in clients' rooms and executive offices, the TM-21 lets the station put its "best color foot forward." Clients will be impressed by the bright, high definition picture.

COLOR ACCURACY AIDS PROGRAM PRODUCTION—Production departments can use the new monitor for accurate continuity control of color programming. Producers and directors will get a true color picture of what's happening on the set. Costume and background colors can be seen in proper relationship. Lighting can be accurately evaluated, production aided.

SIMPLIFIED MONITOR ALIGNMENT—Initial adjustment is extremely simple. Built-in test switch reduces set-up time to minutes. Screen grid selector switch provides quick viewing of primary colors.

LONG-TIME STABILITY—Once set up, monitor adjustments "hold." Extra stability has been designed into brightness, contrast, decoder, convergence, and linearity circuits.

Get maximum return from your color TV investment! Ask your RCA Broadcast and Television representative for further information on the new TM-21 Color Monitor. In Canada: Write RCA VICTOR Company Limited, Montreal.

Check these additional technical features:

- Feedback techniques and precision components provide long-term stability.
- Automatic brightness tracking for color balance.
- Convergence circuits designed for rapid setup.
- DC restoration at black level, stabilized by feedback.
- Stabilized diode demodulators.
- All components and tubes easily accessible.
- Automatic wide-band operation during monochrome picture intervals.
- Stabilized black level shows effects of pedestal adjustments, aids close control of color in picture low-lights.

D.j. convention

I read with considerable interest your reporting on the Disc Jockey Convention in Kansas City and would like to add my own thoughts.

Last fall, after 10 years of running a local station in this medium-sized market, we decided to make a drastic change in format. Briefly, we "clammed up" our d.j.'s and disallowed the empty-headed chatter limiting their talk to commercials well presented news-on-the-hour, and public service announcements interspersed with tuneful middle-of-the-road music throughout each hour.

After three months of this we ordered a Pulse survey and held our breaths. The results amazingly justified the change.

Our conclusion, therefore, is that d.j.'s, except for the few top-ranking and highly paid showmen working in the larger metropolitan markets, are audience-killers unless controlled.

Right show, wrong station

Just want to point out that in the March 29th issue of SPONSOR on pages 62 and 63 where the Telepulse Ratings: Top Spot Film Shows were listed, there were some Baltimore erroneous listings. For example, under Sheriff of Cochise, SPONSOR has WJZ-TV as carrying the show when it is, in actuality, on WBAL-TV; under Pop-eye suddenly WMAR is carrying the show instead of WJZ-TV, the way it has always been.

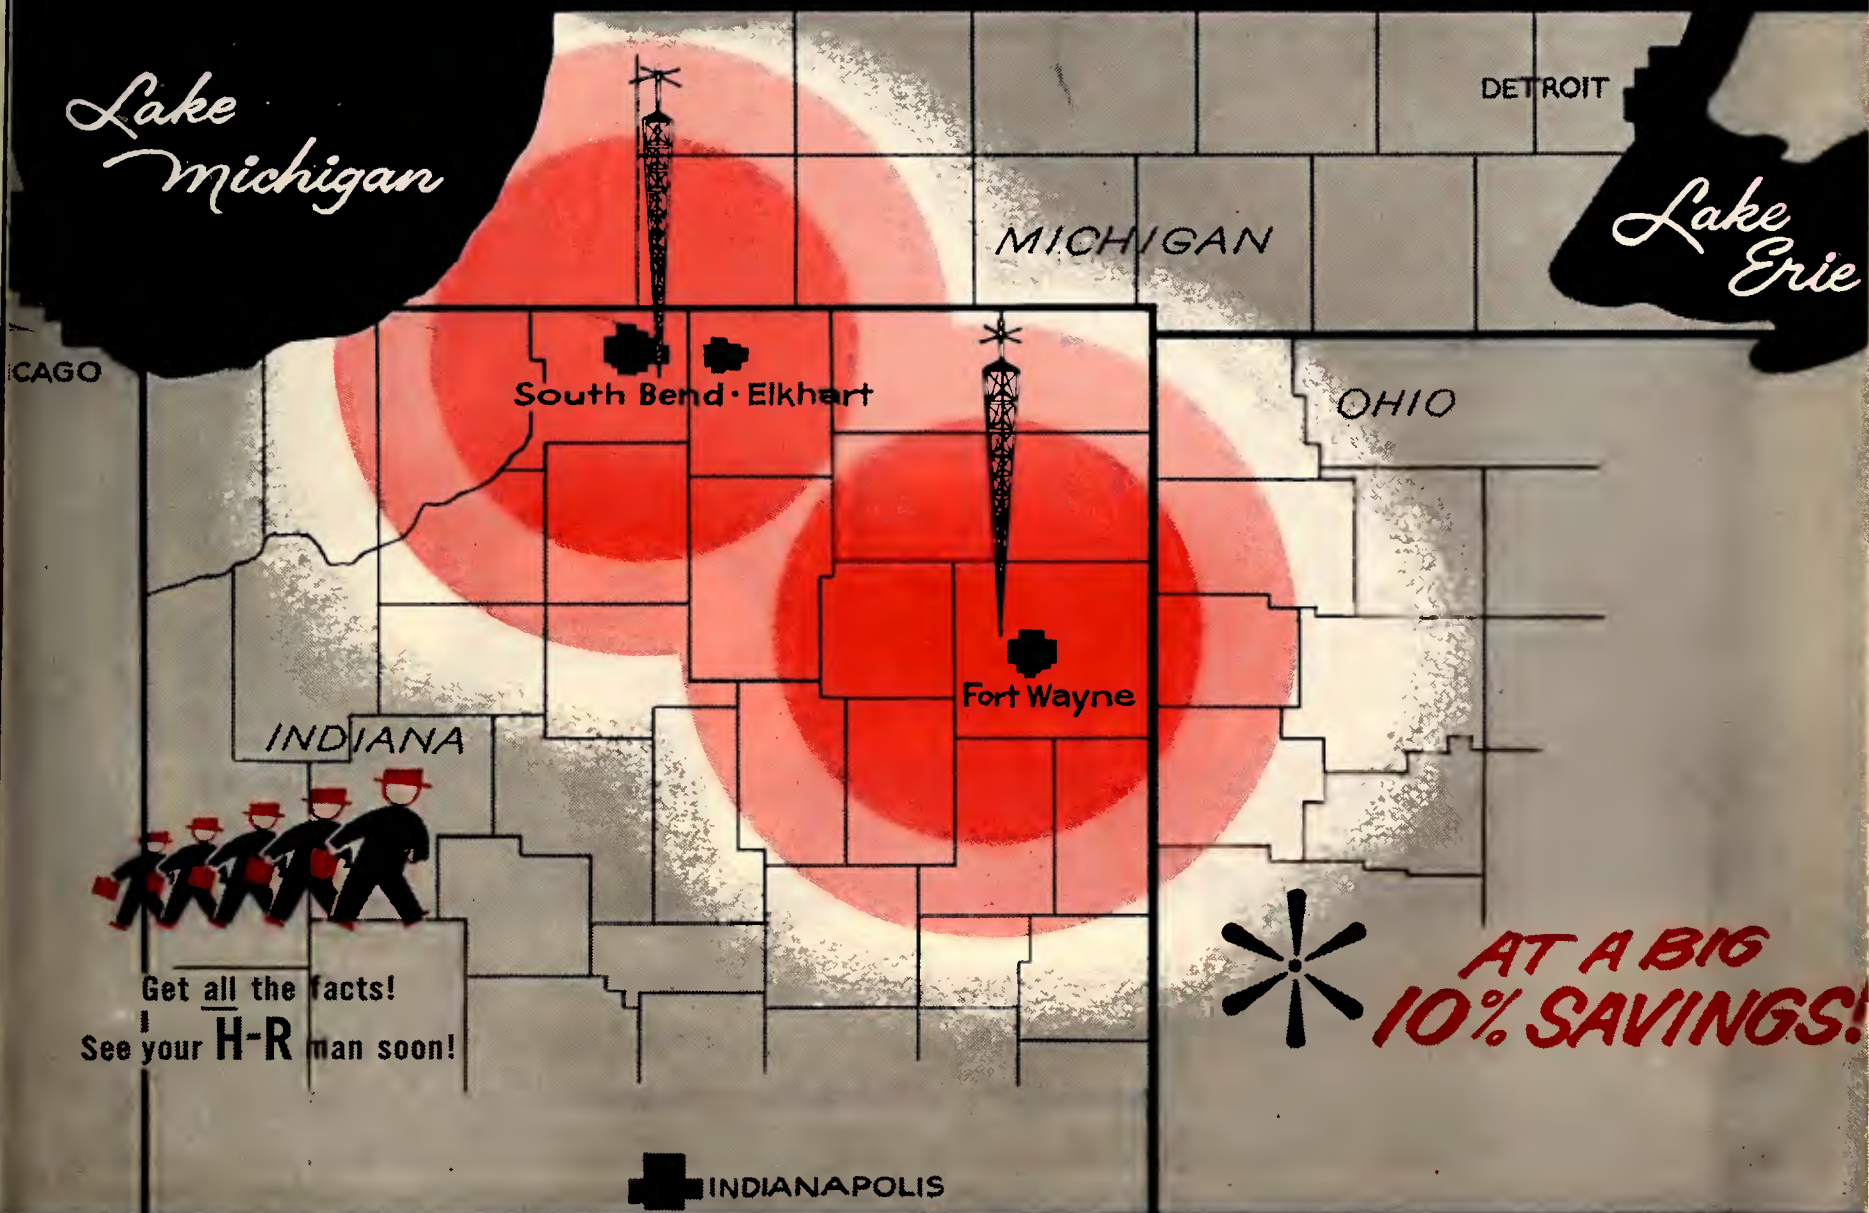

With hundreds of ratings and station call letters, it is certainly understandable that the magazine could err. This is just to point out the errors to you.

Behind the fee tv scenes

First I phoned the Olympia in Miami Beach, and was told that the house was completely sold out. When the ladies who answered the phones for the theaters in downtown Miami, and in Coral Gables conveyed the same depressing message I realized that I had vastly underrated the appeal of Sugar Ray Robinson and Carmen Basilio. I never should have waited until the very afternoon of the day of the middleweight championship tussle. But I realized, too, that if this situation held true for any appreciable number of the other 170-odd theaters, arena and other establishments around the nation, which were showing the Teleprompter closed-circuit telecast of the fight, that we were probably about to set a new high gross for a closed-circuit sports telecast.

Ned Irish, the executive vice president of the International Boxing Club, promoters of the bout, subsequently confirmed this. The IBC's end of the closed-circuit telecast take was somewhat over $300,000, and approximately $60,000 better than that taken in for the previous Robinson-Basilio tussle. Fight towns (New York, Philadelphia, Boston, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Denver, etc.) were all virtually SRO. In New York at the Loew's Broadway flagship house, the State, they were putting a $5 and $7.50 per seat bite on the customers, and had customers begging to be bitten. Practically all other Loew's and RKO houses in town put the ropes up two to three hours before fight time.

Can fee tv be stopped?

In the Cow Palace in Frisco, the State Fair Music Hall in Dallas and in arenas in Houston, Louisville, Rochester and Syracuse, local fight promoters ran the telecast preceded by a handful of live bouts. In Frisco fans spent $25,000 to catch the fight at the Cow Palace, though about 10,000 of the arena's 16,000 seats went begging. The Cow arena box-office was scaled up to $5.50. It was significant in Frisco, that in addition to the 6000-plus fans who made it at the Cow Palace, at least three theaters, the Paramount, the Golden Gate and the Telenews did from good to SRO business with the fight. The latter house, as a matter of fact, only contains 400 seats, but it had no trouble in filling all of those at $6.50 per ducat.

Irving Kahn estimated shortly after the fight that the telecast grossed very close to $1,500,000, kicked in by 364,876 fans. It takes no imagination at all to see, on the basis of this fight, why fee television cannot be stopped. Closed-circuit or Government-licensed vhf or uhf channels, I don't know. But stopped, never! As soon as more, less expensive and better-performing equipment can be built, it isn't hard to conceive of twice the 175 locations which carried the Robinson-Basilio tiff carry any number of other major sporting events. Or other key entertainment events. I do not believe the day is very far off when we will see some major event grossing $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in a closed-circuit telecast. And if—as is entirely Scheherazade sold continuity as a way of life. In her case she had to.

The mother of all soap operas did it so well that she wound up being the favorite wife of the king—which was the best kind of consumer acceptance you could have in those days.

Continuity pays off just as well today providing, of course, you've come up with an interesting story about what it is you have to sell.

That's where advertising raises its pretty little head.

Over at Jay Victor & Associates we have more "kings" to serve than our immortal lady listed above. Some 30 of them. They're known affectionately as clients. Clients seem to prefer only one type of story—the one with the word "success" in front of it.

We seem to be writing them reasonably well because our heads are still attached to our necks and more kings seem willing to listen to us all the time.

If you're seeking a new agency perhaps we can come up with something for you. We're more than willing to try. And if we can do business, believe us, we'll give you 1001 nights of effort every year.

possible—the government ever clears any substantial time for toll-television on home channels, and the fee tv forces get 30,000,000 to 50,000,000 homes equipped with coin meters or their equivalent—if that day comes, I foresee grosses of $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 on a single event. I think that if 50,000,000 seats were equipped to take quarters to receive a fee tv show, people who own half those 50,000,000 sets would have been happy to drop four quarters into the slot to see Sugar Ray and Basilio batter each other around the square. There would have been your $25,000,000. It'll come. Just wait and see!

The theater boys were happy

The bout surely made a lot of theater exhibitors happy. And it's nice to see any phase of television bring the movie men a little joy. Tv still looms as one of the top 10 forces of destruction, so far as theaters are concerned.

I have written almost as many words as there are post-1948 prints in movie studio vaults about the inevitability of the eventual release of the newer movies to television. Right at the moment we are going through a period when film production executives are assuring exhibitors that they will under no circumstances release their post-1948 product to television. I remember, quite vividly, the time when most film production executives were giving exhibitors similar assurances concerning pre-1948 product. So do large numbers of exhibitors apparently. For one of the more startling entertainment business developments of recent weeks was the move of the Theater Owners of America in this area. The board of directors of the exhibitor organization authorized its president, Ernest Stellings to explore the possibility of working out a plan to set up a non-profit organization, for the express purpose of buying up post-1948 films to keep them off television.

At first blush, and working from a totally inadequate base of knowledge about the plan itself, it strikes me as a highly impractical one. But I admire the efforts of the exhibitors to protect themselves, and I wish them well. I still believe, however, that the exhibitors have only a single, very small finger to stuff in the disturbingly large hole in the dike. Television has long since proved itself an insatiable ogre of program material of all types, Hollywood movies most indeed not excepted. When the ogre is ready for another helping of fresher film product, he'll pile the plate with some of those post-'48 goodies, TOA or no TOA.

Someone will find a way, yet

The brighter, more affluent exhibitors have long since diversified their operations, just as have the brighter and more affluent businessmen in every phase of American industry, including showbusiness. Many of them, of course, have gone into the television business themselves. And very profitably so. Many of them are working feverishly to get into the fee tv business, closed-circuit and otherwise.

As a matter of fact I know a couple of bright, affluent television men who are checking the closed-circuit video business pretty carefully. Their attitude is that they can promote a closed-circuit fight as well as the next guy, and I surely believe they are right. The truth is that here and there a bright, affluent advertiser and agency executive is day-dreaming about ways and means of harnessing this closed-circuit colt to his merchandising problems. The truth is, too, I think that one such guy will succeed.

Could cost-trimming boomerang?

- It could, say agency heads, at a time when pressure for better servicing is at peak. Danger: short-range view
- Only a handful of hard goods agencies reflect lower client spending. Madison Ave. is Caution, not Panic Street

By Evelyn Konrad

Will 1958 be a year of widespread economy drives and cost slashing among the top air media agencies?

This is the big question among management of other major agencies since mid-April, when K&E and Maxon issued their now-famous salary-cutting memos to their staffs.

The answer must be qualified:

- Many agencies with car accounts have been feeling a pinch since early this year and are reviewing operating costs with jaundiced eye. K&E, with its 10-25% salary slash above $10,000, made the most drastic move. MacManus, John & Adams, agency for Pontiac and Cadillac, has cut neither staff nor salary but is watching expenses more cautiously than ever. Campbell-Ewald, with its Chevrolet success, is actually expanding.

- Package goods agencies are split in their reaction to 1958 cost-consciousness. A handful are tightening belts on general principle, using recession-fears as an excuse for weeding out some unproductive personnel accumulated during previous boom years and holding a stricter line on expense accounts. But the majority of package goods agencies, which have suffered neither account nor billing loss, are moving ahead at the same operating level as previously, some even adding new personnel for additional or expected business—as in the case of Compton and Grey, for instance.

Says Bart Cummings, president of Compton: "We work on a cost account-

Cost-accounting expert, Ira Rubel (right), sees mounting number of agency inquiries as symptom of management concern over operating costs. Figures above are Rubel's rule-of-thumb for a healthy proportion of salaries to agency income, based on his work with top agencies. "We like to use salary ratios (% of salaries to income) from a particular agency's own experience, taking a normal year with reasonable profit as base to adjust this year's expenditures."

ing system through which we can review every 30 days just where we stand by departments and by clients. Our feeling is that total salaries should never exceed 60% of gross agency income and ours tend to fluctuate healthily between 59 and 60% at all times. This way we have both control of operating expenses and a safe cushion against sudden business changes."

On the whole, agency presidents and top management committees are reluctant to push the panic-button with staff-trimming and realignment of responsibilities. Billings forecasts for the year is favorable in most big agencies and management is aware of the dangers of false economies.

"It's historic in this business that agencies have to cut staff when there's an account loss," says Ernie Jones, president of MacManus, John & Adams. "But that's not the problem of the majority of agencies today. We might suffer some loss of billing without losing an account, but the workload remains the same. Our answer to this problem is twofold: (1) an ever-tighter control of expenses beyond (Article continues next page)

Ernest Jones, pres., MacManus, John & Adams, sees answer to profit squeeze in tight cost-accounting by clients, rather than staff or service reduction since workload is the same

Arthur Fatt, pres., Grey, warns against false economies: "We'd rather reduce profits than undermine successful agency structure."

Gil Burton, v.p., gen. mgr., GB&B, says his agency's continued growth is typical of 1958 billings expansion in food, drug advt'g.

salaries; (2) close cost-accounting by clients. Since some clients require extra services, they must be covered with fees."

More client demands

Most heads of agencies, while they agree with the latter solution to the profit squeeze, find it easier said than done. At this very moment, when billings in some product categories (cars, appliances, other hard goods) are falling off, clients are making bigger demands for services than ever before. On the one hand, they're forcing agencies to maintain large staffs to provide the extra servicing. On the other hand, they want these pulses to be thrown in gratis, particularly in return for tv package show commissions.

"The only way we're able to maintain our full staff at the moment despite some $5 million loss in anticipated billing for the year is through some pretty fierce bargaining," the president of an agency billing over $30 million told SPONSOR. "Since we can't trim our staff without loosening our hold on some accounts that expect these extra services, we've got about five different basic contracts with clients at this point. We may begin by talking 15% commission, but cost-accounting by clients guides us after that."

There is fat to be trimmed in many agency operations, but no one rule of thumb can guide the process. Some agencies overstaffed during previous years in anticipation of continued growth and have to correct this situation now. Says a BBDO executive: "There's no concentrated trimming here, but we have been correcting an over-staffed situation since the beginning of last summer. We had a big year in 1956 and we overhired in anticipation of growth at the same rate. Now we've got the same employment picture that the nation had in March: We're hiring more, yet firing at the same time."

Unlike 1948-1949, when some firing for economy's sake went on in smaller shops, the trimming down of staffs in 1958 is most prevalent in two or three gigantic agencies which showed enormous growth in billing between 1955 and now.

Says Ira Rubel, cost-accounting specialist and management consultant to agencies: "An agency's budget or forecast based on expected volume and income, current salary levels and expense estimates should provide for enough profit so that if the agency's income is cut by 10% it can still operate at a break-even (without a loss). Otherwise, an agency is in danger, because it doesn't matter so much what the financial position of an agency is, as in which direction it is moving. Even big fat surpluses can disappear in a short year or two of unprofitable operation."

Where else to cut

While salaries are the single biggest agency cost element, there is fat to be trimmed in other areas, less likely to impair the agency's service to clients. Expense accounts can add a fat chunk to the cost of operating. The president of $38 million agency told SPONSOR; "We spent an unbelievable $250,000 for entertainment and expense account payments last year, or 60% more than in 1956. Here's one area we're watching closely now."

Another area of agency cost-trimming is in the approach to new business. During the 1955-1956 boom, a number of agencies hired top-salary executives not so much for their services on existing agency accounts, but as drawing cards for new business. This strategy applied particularly to big-name tv executives at a time when personal contact with tv network brass could mean the difference between negotiating a prime nighttime buy or being out cold. Such speculative hiring is unlikely in the 1958 climate.

"Agencies may have to be more cautious about the money they invest speculatively in their efforts to attract new business," says Chet LaRoche, president of C. J. LaRoche. "But it's equally dangerous to trim in a panic. We must keep our product, that is our agency services, in good shape and not destroy it by false economies. Good tv departments are as essential as they were in earlier years and more so, and

How radio reps are boosting sales

▼ NBC Spot Sales used a sports car contest to whip up enthusiasm, boosted March sales 25% over March 1957

▼ Active rep sales policy has boosted first-quarter 1958 sales 15% above first-quarter 1957, according to SRA

Spot radio in this year's first quarter showed a healthy sales increase—thanks to hard selling.

According to Larry Webb, managing director of Station Representatives Association, spot radio sales for 1958's first three months will be about 15% ahead of the same period last year. "The increase," Webb told SPONSOR, is a tribute to aggressive salesmanship, with a high percentage of the additional dollars deriving from accounts new to the medium."

Webb's mid-April appraisal of spot radio's growth reflects invigorated and high-pitched sales activity among the reps.

"Our men are going after new advertisers, showing them what radio can do for them and creating new business that way," says John Blair sales manager, Art McCoy. (Among new accounts, McCoy cites Plymouth, Bakelite, Pittsburgh Paint, and cigarette brands.)

What makes them sell

What are the incentives that generate the selling enthusiasm among radio reps in this year of hard-sell?

One of the most novel approaches is the five-week spring sports car contest that NBC Spot Sales started among its staff members. The contest, which ended 31 March when a tv and a radio salesman each won a 1958 Corvette for maximum performance, produced the same remarkable radio sales results.

Says Thomas B. McFadden, v.p. in charge of NBC Spot Sales, who initiated the Sports Car Rally: "This contest was an important factor in raising our radio sales by a sizable amount. The winners were selected on the basis of 25 daily races or 'heats' conducted each day until the closing of the contest. Daily winners were decided by point values assigned to each sales order. As a result, spot sales in radio for March were up 42% over February and 25% above March 1957."

To whip up enthusiasm and a sense of participation among the staffers, NBC Spot Sales put a thorough promotion behind its own contest, posting hourly reports as they were received from the New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Detroit and Hartford offices.

Says George Dietrich, director of NBC radio spot sales: "The competition among the men was so keen that four were tied as the contest entered the final day, each man having won four heats. Often the salesmen worked until late evening, soliciting business through long distance telephone calls and closely scrutinizing any competitive situation."

The result: A substantial share of the increase in radio sales came from regular accounts, but the major amount came from new accounts attracted to NBC Spot Sales. During the contest, the number of such new clients was about eight times greater than the number of new clients in an average month.

The NBC Spot Sales contest, while an unusual added incentive plan, is in some ways typical of the efforts national reps are making to generate excitement among their staffs. Most common form of gearing payment to sales, for instance, is a system of bonuses in addition to salary, based on their sales. Some reps pay on a commission basis.

New spot advertisers

The result of incentive plans and encouragement tactics was apparent during the first quarter of this year. Here's a list of clients using spot radio in first quarter of 1958 who were not in the medium in first quarter of 1957:

Colgate Dental Cream, A&P Co., Anitone Co., Ting, Woodbury Soap, Butcher Wax, Quaker State Motor Oil, Kentucky Club Pipe Tobacco, Hamilton Watch, duPont Remington Mall Chain Saw, Savoy Car Wash Co., Griffin Shoe Polish, Barbasol, Taylor Packing Co., Sal Hepatica, Bayuk Cigars, Continental Baking, Sunoco, Glade, Pretty Feet, Sterling Silversmith, Ray Ben Sunglass Co., Standard & Poor, Armour Co. for chili con carne, Four Fishermen Fish Sticks, Brer Rabbit Molasses, Dovol Baby Bottles, Mrs. Wagner Pies, Somerset Records, Campho Pheneque, Save the Baby, Red L Frozen Fish Dinners, Dristan, Lea & Perrins Worcestershire Sauce, Queen Bee Royal Jelly Vitamins. ▼

The day the FCC hit the roof

by W. F. Miksch

By late 1960, the activities of the House Subcommittee on Kickbacks, Hidden Bank Accounts and Questionable Traveling Expenses (formerly the Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight), had reached a crescendo. Every day down Washington's Pennsylvania Avenue tumbrils rumbled, bearing frightened members of the various Federal regulatory commissions to "that Gethsemane on Capitol Hill."

There, in the green-walled, tear-stained hearing room crowds of spectators jammed to watch FCC or FTC commissioners stripped of their Diners' Club credit cards and drummed from the hall. Many of the women in the audience brought their knitting to while away the duller portions of the testimony, and two commissioners and one Subcommittee counsel had been jabbed by needles when they got too close.

Tv cameras panned and dollied about the chamber, and radio microphones bristled everywhere. Sponsorship of air media coverage of the hearings was a sell-out. Since many sessions ran far into the night, ratings of such tv shows as Perry Como dropped behind decimal points, and the "adult Western" trend fell apart in the face of this much more "adult" Eastern. In radio, music-and-news gave way to just plain news of which about 99% had to do with the hearings in Washington.

Concerned by what such one-sided programing might do to tv and radio, SPONSOR decided to send a reporter to Washington to study first-hand this phenomenon that had induced a whole nation to become hysterical over such relatively small matters as who paid what to get a higher tower or an added 50 watts and how much government-paid-for-breakfast should cost in Des Moines.

Thus on a chill autumn morning, the SPONSORMAN arrived—complete with box lunch and tape recorder at the Subcommittee's chamber. Outside on Capitol Hill the wind blew cold and rain slanted down. But inside, it was warm from the heated denials and quite dry despite the fresh whitewashing. The SPONSORMAN settled down between a nervous Congressman and an espionage agent for NAB, then switched on his recorder. The transcript of the hearing follows:

CHAIRMAN: Your name is Orken P. McTeagirt and you are in advertising. Is that not correct?

WITNESS: Yes sir, it isn't not correct. I am vice president of broadcast media for Finn & Haddie Agency, billings $4.5 million. But before—

CHAIRMAN: And I believe that you have on a previous occasion met FCC Commissioner Linwood Threedle, the accused? (Points across table at a slight, jaundice-colored man loaded down with chains).

WITNESS: Yes, but before I—

CHAIRMAN: On that occasion you saw the accused accept from the president of radio station WEAK a sum of money, a book of green trading stamps and a glass ash-tray inscribed with, "For signal success buy the WEAK signal."

WITNESS: The latter was only a belated Christmas gift, sir. Those ash-trays flooded our agency last Yuletide. And now before I pro—

CHAIRMAN: (Impatiently) Before you what, Mr. McTeagirt?

WITNESS: Before I proceed with my statement, I should like to clear the air on one point. I want to make public how I came to be here.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, but make it brief.

WITNESS: Lo, there I was as recently as last fortnight, ensconced in my private brainstorming cell at the agency, when behold, in barged a fellow bearing a subpoena—

CHAIRMAN: That is hardly relevant to this hearing.

WITNESS: It's relevant to me. I want to go on record as saying that I would have appeared here as a voluntary witness. You didn't have to send that subpoena fellow. I am a good citizen, duty-wise and all that. If you'd just asked me nicely, I'd have been delighted to come here.

CHAIRMAN: If your delight was so great, how come you bit the nose of the subpoena server who called on you?

WITNESS: Sir, I did not bite his nose. I simply gritted my teeth in rage and he stood too near to me.

COMMITTEE'S COUNSEL: (Leaping up) Mr. Chairman! Point of order, Mr. Chairman! We are straying far afield. We can't spend all day on this FCC case. Let's just ask the commissioner for his resignation and then get onto that ICC thing.

CHAIRMAN: (Livid) Sit down and shut up, Mr. Counsellor! And if you ever get between me and the tv camera again, you'll learn why we've had such a big turnover in Committee attorneys. (Beams at the Zoomar the leer that gets him better than 1,800 fan letters a day.) Now let's get back to our witness. Mr. McTeagirt, how did you come to know the manager of WEAK?

WITNESS: I was buying the other station in his market. It's the best way to get to know station operators.

CHAIRMAN: Why didn't you buy his station?

WITNESS: Because—and this may get very technical—the WEAK transmitter is built against the side of a mountain. Our account, the Chopped Chicken Liver Chocolate Loaf Co., is interested in the market on the other side of the mountain. WEAK couldn't get over the hill.

CHAIRMAN: The market you are referring to is Powderhorn Hollow, Kentucky—?

WITNESS: That's right. It's the 490th ranking metro market in the U.S.

CHAIRMAN: And what took you there last April?

WITNESS: I was on a field trip for the agency.

CHAIRMAN: And did you pay for your own hotel rooms. . . . I beg your pardon, Mr. McTeagirt. I forgot for a moment that you're a witness and not the defendant. Let it be struck from the record. And while you were in Powderhorn Hollow, you called on the owner of WEAK?

WITNESS: Yes. I explained what I had already told his rep. That our agency needed the other side of the hill.

CHAIRMAN: And he told you what?

WITNESS: He said that four-and-a-half feet more on his antenna would do it.

CHAIRMAN: Was anyone else present at this meeting?

WITNESS: Yes, sir. (Points to the defendant.) FCC Commissioner Threedle was there.

THREEDLE: (Trembling so hard his chains rattle.) It's a smear!

CHAIRMAN: (Turning on Threedle.) If you distract the camera crews from me once more, I'll demand your resignation! (Addresses McTeagirt again.) Did the Commissioner mention how he came to be in Powderhorn Hollow?

WITNESS: Yes, sir. He was in a sports car rally outside Washington and got lost. He'd wandered far off course, arrived by way of the Alcan Highway.

CHAIRMAN: Did he mention how much this cost the Federal government in gas and oil?

WITNESS: He said something about "somebody would pay for this." Could he have meant the taxpayers?

CHAIRMAN: It's possible. Now what did Threedle have to say to the WEAK tower problem?

WITNESS: He said it could be fixed.

CHAIRMAN: Aha! He definitely used the word "fix"—eh?

THREEDLE: (Shrilly, with chains a-jangle.) You're leading the witness! If I said it could be "fixed" I only meant the tower could be made a little higher. It was simply a gesture of friendship.

CHAIRMAN: Threedle, you're hogging the cameras again!

THREEDLE: (On his feet, chains and all.) But you're crucifying me for a lousy four-and-a-half feet of radio tower!

CHAIRMAN: Threedle, to speed up this hearing, why don't you just resign?

THREEDLE: (Huffily.) Okay, I quit.

CHAIRMAN: Tut, tut. We usually do it more gracefully than that. Like saying thank you to the Committee for its consideration and all that.

THREEDLE: I quit, and that's that. I can always get a job with Uncle Ben.

CHAIRMAN: Uncle Ben, eh? And who's Uncle Ben?

THREEDLE: The owner of WEAK, that's who.

Daytime television's quiet little

- Soap operas may be making a comeback. Half hour serials on the nets will soon outnumber the shorter ones
- Though ratings spurred interest in 30-minute drama strips, costs, better plot development are also factors

by Alfred J. Jaffe

There's a quiet little revolution going on in network television.

It's taking place during the day, and it may foreshadow a comeback for the soap opera—which never caught on in video as it did during network radio's halcyon days.

Here's what's happening. The half-hour serial is unobtrusively moving into a position of programming prominence. Within a short time there will be more half-hour soapers on daytime network television than the quarter-hour variety.

There are currently four 30-minute dramatic strips on CBS and NBC contrasted with five of the conventional 15-minute shows. Two of the half-hour strips—NBC's Kitty Foyle and CBS' Love of Life—are recent additions to the schedule (Love of Life was lengthened from 15 to 30 minutes on 14 April). In addition, two half-hour serials will be moved into the hour vacated by Matinee, NBC's 60-minute live dramatic series which came a cropper after high hopes.

As for ABC, while there is nothing definite about its future daytime program plans (other than there's going to be more of it), there is a clear leaning toward the half-hour serial in preference to the quarter-hour version.

Probable strategy will be to kick off a half-hour serial between 11:00 a.m. and Noon in the fall and then back it up with another.

As might be expected, tv bellwether P&G is intimately involved in this programming transition. It was P&G which threw its powerful backing behind the first half-hour serials on tv—As the World Turns and Edge of Night. The pair made their debut on CBS two years ago. By virtue of P&G's buys on Matinee and its dominant position in daytime network television, the soap giant will also produce—via Compton or Benton & Bowles—at least one of the 30-minute soapers which will replace Matinee. A decision on the Matinee hour was imminent at presstime.

No audience drop

The rise of the 30-minute soaper does not portend cancellations for the quarter-hour soap operas now riding the schedule. Far from it. The current crop of quarter-hour soapers are doing well in terms of audience (see box). They are the hard core of survivors which lasted out the long shake-down process in which more than a dozen 15-minute dramatic strips traveled the cancellation route, mostly on NBC. However, it is unlikely that the networks will experiment with the shorter-length serial during the foreseeable future.

There has been some discussion, as a matter of fact, about converting the Wilbur Stark-Jerry Layton produced Modern Romances on NBC to the 30-minute length. For a number of reasons, not the least of which is the competition of another half-hour soaper, nothing is planned at this point.

It's been the ratings, of course, which have stoked the interest of the networks in the half-hour soap opera. The shows that cast the die were As the World Turns and Edge of Night. Both have been doing as well as or better than the quarter-hour types after an unpromising debut.

Kitty Foyle, the only other half-hour soaper with a rating history, is far from being an audience success and there's been a recent shakeup in the staff producing the strip. The current script doctoring will modernize the story and background since it is now felt that by sticking too closely to the book, the serial had a dated quality.

Despite talk to the contrary NBC says it is far from giving up on the show. It is generally felt that the half-hour soapers require a lot of script revisions and molding before the successful story line is finally achieved.

There are other factors besides the rating story which are pushing the networks toward the half-hour form. Most programming people are convinced by now that, generally speaking, the 15-minute length is not too good for television. "For some reason," said a network daytime programming executive, "fifteen minutes seems shorter to viewers on television than on radio."

It is also felt that better plot and character development is possible with half-hour soapers. The old leisurely pace, a style developed during radio days when producers wanted to make sure that the homemaker didn't miss any part of the plot, doesn't permit too much to happen on a single day. Many admen originally believed that women would avoid the longer-length tv soap opera because they were too busy, but the audience figures indicate otherwise.

One reason ABC favors the half-hour length is that it will be easier to clear. While it is true that two 15-minute shows are just as long as one half-hour show, the fact remains that it's harder to find two good shows than one.

The cost element

Finally, there's the factor of cost. Other things being equal, 15 minutes of a half-hour show will be less expensive than a quarter-hour show. The

NEW LIFE FOR WEB RADIO ADS

A way of putting new life into sponsor identification values is being pushed by both CBS and NBC Radio.

The method: using leading performers or hosts on daytime dramatic shows to do commercials.

Sponsor reaction to the idea is not overwhelming but there is some use of this ad technique. Both Pharmacraft and Good Housekeeping use a long list of soap opera performers to do commercials on CBS. In both cases, the performers step out of character to deliver the pitch.

On NBC, Madeline Carroll, who plays the leading role in Affairs of Dr. Gentry, delivers commercials for Trushay, all over the NBC schedule but she does not sell the product in her own show.

Admen handling network radio accounts made clear that using soap opera performers (as opposed to well-known stars) must be handled with care. One soap executive said, "This is one way to get attention but you have to keep in mind that, over the years, the serials have been plugging a large variety of products, many of them competitive. You don't want to use a performer for selling a soap product when the show might have sold others soaps in the past."

Bill Hoffman, BBDO's network radio specialist, opined: "There are values in associating a soap opera performer with a product, but utmost care must be taken so that it doesn't disrupt believability."

Julie Stevens, "Helen Trent" on CBS Radio, does Pharmacraft plugs

To assure there is no such disruption CBS recommends that performers in serials be used out of character. This is so that the listeners' personal picture of soap opera characters, built over the years, is not destroyed.

In addition to Madeline Carroll, NBC has Don Ameche on tap for commercials. Ameche is now the host of a half-hour dramatic strip, Don Ameche's Real Life Stories.

quarter-hour soapers on CBS generally run about $10,000 a week, or $2,000 per segment. However, As the World Turns and Edge of Night costs about $17,000 per week or $1,700 per 15-minute segment.

If the half-hour soaper pans out the way present signs indicate it will, daytime programming men will exhale a huge sigh of relief, especially at NBC. When a soaper catches on, it can stick for a long time. The present list of quarter-hour soapers on both CBS and NBC have been running from four to seven years.

NBC, which has had more trouble than CBS in finding the right shows, started its soapers in 1953, when it filled in the 11:00 a.m. to Noon slot. These were soon replaced by Home. In 1954, NBC had a full head of steam up with nearly three hours of 15-minute dramatic strips, including a two-hour block from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. The 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. segments fell by the wayside in 1955 and by the summer of 1956 the only dramatic show on NBC during the day was Modern Romances. Now that the half-hour soaper seems to have proved itself, NBC is attempting its second try at making the soap opera succeed.

A LOOK AT TOMORROW'S RADIO

At the meeting of the Ohio Association of Broadcasters in Cleveland last week, Gerald Bartell of the Bartell Family Radio made some interesting predictions about the future of radio. Here is an excerpt from Bartell's talk.

Gerald Bartell

Tomorrow's radio will be marked by a happier union of interests between ownership and its people, with considerably more generous rewards for effective effort.

We are heading, in short, for the era of professionalism in our industry on a local level. The day of "accommodation programing" for an advertiser or agency is passé, although a sponsor who is willing to pay for a daily half hour of curling, cribbage, and whist scores from around the city will somehow find stations to take his money and program ideas. Refinement of program materials based upon audience sampling and testing will become the not-so-secret weapons of the avant garde. The era of talent selection based upon chance remarks is not in the books for tomorrow's leaders. Have you heard, "Dear, I think your newsmen is much too intense—especially for breakfast."

Aside from facilities variations, every station in every market will have essentially the same opportunity for program and sales success. Unless the course of history is reversed, there'll be no programing leg-up by network affiliation. Only imagination, study, production, salesmanship—all on a local level, with a sensitive finger on the pulse of the people to indicate the next move.

I'm not disposed to criticize research that leads to a successful conclusion. But I'm confidently looking toward a perfected method of program previewing by which management is given an indication of audience preference. I suppose it's somewhat like the Broadway producer trying his show in Boston or Philadelphia before it opens in New York. For a half dozen years, Bartell Family Radio has conducted response samplings of this kind, and I expect we get closer to a valid method with every session. But procedures are at best undisciplined, and responses quite random.

Yet how much more valid than a programing predicted exclusively upon a tabulation of the records purchased by youngsters in their early teens! This does not necessarily preclude the enjoyment of this music by adults. But the unweighted extension of the teenage taste to include all age groups—and then to program those records exclusively—is an erroneous conclusion based upon a specious premise.

Leaders of tomorrow's radio will not be formula operators as we know them today. The emergence of a dynamic programing based upon the ebb and flow of audience response factors is inevitable. And this is a much harder way of operating a radio station, but it's a lot more rewarding from many viewpoints: (1) It builds manpower by making radio people react quickly and intelligently to a changed set of circumstances. Since this reaction must be motivated by understanding, each of the elements in the personnel structure of the radio station must be convinced. In that process are molded the patterns of creative thinking as well as the sinews of company loyalty. (2) It forces constant analysis of the audience and audience potentials. Instead of looking at his audience from the Olympus of his office window, management will mingle and jostle and rub shoulders and knock knees and analyze. (3) It makes more money because a sales organization alert to change understands dollars and cents and how to make more of them. ◆

Plymouth

Plymouth, caught in a sales slump with other automobile makers, made a dramatic off-season entry into spot radio last week. Beginning Monday, 7 April, it launched a campaign to run for eight weeks on 55 stations in 20 major markets.

The campaign represents a significant expenditure. The company will not disclose the spot budget, but SPONSOR estimates it to be in excess of $190,000.

Plymouth is no stranger to spot radio; no auto manufacturer is. But traditionally automakers concentrate their spot activity at introduction time, that is when their new models come out each fall.

The company will not confirm that this is the largest spot buy (outside of introduction time) in Plymouth's history, but it does admit that there's been nothing as consequential in the past three to four years.

In the past, when auto manufacturers used spot radio, they tended to stick to traditional sales points—style, performance or economy in buying and operating. About the only variation came toward the end of the model year, when the inducement of a high trade-in value for a present car toward a new one was stressed.

Timely theme

This new campaign is based on a different theme: "Today's Best Buy—Tomorrow's Best Trade." L. T. (Lou) Hagopian, Plymouth director of advertising and sales promotion, believes the theme has a timely value in view of the current tight market in new auto sales. He explains the idea this way:

"Auto buyers today are more interested than ever in value. For that reason we are confident that this campaign will re-emphasize that Plymouth offers more for the money to buy and trade than competitive automobiles."

- Suffering from an industry-wide sales slump, Plymouth launches a heavy "off season" radio spot campaign
- Forsaking usual appeals of style and performance, this campaign emphasizes high potential trade-in value

Plymouth bets on spot radio to spur sales

Continuity for the campaign comes with a distinctive jingle which goes like this: "(Vocal group) Today's best buy . . . (male voices) in an automobile . . . (group) tomorrow's best trade . . . (male voices) in an automobile . . . (group) Plymouth! Plymouth! Definitely — best buy — best trade in the low-price three! Plymouth."

The jingle has built-in flexibility. The campaign schedule calls for 20- and 60-second spots. The jingle takes about 20 seconds and, in that time segment, is used alone. The jingle is used in a 60-second slot followed by a 20-second announcement listing exclusive Plymouth features, then concludes with the jingle again.

Wherever possible, the spots are scheduled for "traffic hours"—early morning, late afternoon and late evening—to reach motorists, the prime prospects.

The company is shooting for maximum tie-in with the campaign. It will incorporate the jingle into some commercials on its three network tv shows—The Lawrence Welk Show, Mondays, on ABC; The Betty White Show, Wednesdays, on ABC, and Climax, Thursdays, on CBS.

Also it is offering a complete merchandising kit to its dealers, including an offer of a free record of the jingle for a dealer's local use if he wishes. Participating radio stations will use their own merchandising services to bolster the dealers in their area.

As another part of the campaign the company bought a kick-off ad in 1,700 daily newspapers on 7 April, and will repeat in more than 1,200 weekly papers throughout the country. Some outdoor boards are also scheduled.

Why radio

Plymouth declines comment on why it chose to break a campaign now,

Plymouth's ad manager, L. T. (Lou) Hagopian, bases current spot radio campaign on belief that "auto buyers have new interest in value." Auto sales slump may also be factor with a spot radio foundation. It's worthy of note, however, that its two major competitors are heavy users of radio: Ford with its Road Show, 26 programs a week on the CBS radio network, and Chevrolet, which has been conducting an ambitious spot campaign since the first of the year.

Then too, Plymouth has felt the automobile sales slump as much—or more—than its competitors in the low-priced field. In fact, all Chrysler Corp. makes are down substantially in sales from last year this time. According to insiders in Detroit, this may mean some executive shifts in Chrysler Corp., including some top-level changes.

Additionally, of course, spot radio offers Plymouth several timely advantages; it can be set up fast, to provide a strong effort aimed toward selling new cars for summer driving. Besides that it permits the company, now in an unsteady market, to achieve a high penetration during a particular period, without a long-term commitment.

It's obvious that the same advantages of spot radio which appeal to Plymouth also appeal to many other advertisers. According to Station Representatives Association (see page 35), spot radio sales for this year's first quarter are running 15% ahead of last year. ■

Like many another ex-champion, network radio is finding the comeback trail a long pull. Each giant step seems offset by a touch of charley horse.

- When net radio closed its books at the end of 1957, there was an estimated percentage gain in dollar volume over 1956 of about 40%—but there still remains a multi-million deficit—hang-over from the lean years since tv.

- When the comeback bid began, all four radio nets streamlined for creative selling and programing. This played a major part in attracting the old advertisers as well as new ones—but already two networks have undergone extensive alterations of concept and realignment of personnel.

Do these qualifications to radio's triumphs mean it is in trouble, that the renaissance is at the point of stalling? Or do they simply clarify the challenge net radio faces?

"I can speak with some authority on the relationship of trouble to network radio," says NBC President Robert W. Sarnoff whose radio network has had, since 1953, a cumulative loss of about $9 million. But Sarnoff adds that "the current talk of crisis seems strangely outdated. If it were three to five years ago, I could better relate it to our own experience. Then, many network affiliates were at the breakaway point. Most of our major sponsors had pulled out; radio salesmen couldn't get a foot in the doors of the biggest agencies; the network's annual dollar volume was melting away to nothing."

How true this was is obvious from a look at the dollar volume estimates for net radio in the last decade. By 1948, the webs had hit an all-time high of about $210 million total volume, according to the estimate of McCann-Erickson's Central Research Bureau. Three years later, it had shrunk to $179 million, and by 1955 it hit a low of about $90 million. The first signs of recovery came in the following year when such advertisers as Ford and Lever made headlines with network radio buys ranging up to $5 million. Since then the downward trend of net radio has been reversed.

The road back

What factors led the old time advertising giants (see chart), some of whom had dropped completely from the net radio scene in the early 1950's, back into the fold? Here are some of those advanced by admen involved in the return:

- It is a good media value; circulation and cost are well related.
- The networks have made the medium more flexible, enabling the advertiser to move in and out quickly as he does in spot or newspapers. Short-term campaigns are now possible.
- Greater opportunity for extending the basic buy through merchandising. Such services as NBC's "Salesvertising" give clients a chance to promote his sponsorship through tie-ins, cut-ins, closed-circuit sales meetings, etc.

One of the things that sparked net radio's comeback was the drama inherent in radio—the kind of drama that print media, for example, cannot compete with. Packages incorporating big star names were made available and these helped attract into the medium not only some of the old-time mammoths but also some of the newcomers that now dot the radio clock.

However, one agency executive pointed out that the trend of the moment in web radio is now away from the star personality and in the direction of newscasts and "magazine-of-the-air" type of participating formats. To make any generalization about sponsorship can be misleading since different clients have different objectives and must relate them to their all-media strategy.

Thus the client who buys news on Mutual may buy a soap opera on CBS and the client who buys Breakfast Club on ABC may also sponsor a sportscast on NBC. Campbell's Soup which had dropped out completely from the net radio scene and which, as late as last year, used no radio except spot, is back this year on NBC. Of the top 10 net radio majors of pre-tv days, four (Sterling Drug, General Foods, Lever and Liggett & Myers) are or have been signed up to be on all four nets in 1958.

CBS Radio is projecting a gain in 1958 over last year, and NBC Radio has right now on its books more firm orders for the first half of this year than it wrote in the entire first six months of 1957. MBS, with the largest sales staff ever, is pushing hard its "immediacy concept" with the accent on news, while ABC, after the recent abandonment of its "live network" experiment, is now revising its programming in favor of more news, sports, religion and public service.

The challenge now to net radio is to build the investment volume of these clients. One thing, many admen feel, that will hasten its comeback will be for all nets to get together in making public the company-by-company dollar figures as it once did and as net television does for its clients or TvB for spot tv clients. Only then, according to these admen, will network radio be on the way back to the prestige it once enjoyed. As things now stand, with no information on actual expenditures available, no one is able to correctly measure the fresh growth of the medium.

Bell & Howell: "time to buy when"

- Bell & Howell, out to disprove "recession" thinking, has allocated record high ad budget for second quarter
- Company believes now is a good time to advertise, cites its current relief time buy at 25% off the card rate

The biggest topic of conversation these days is, as it has been for several months, the economic recession. Almost daily there are discussions about the downturn, with its cutbacks in manufacturing, basic industries at low production levels, record numbers of people drawing unemployment compensation.

This might seem hardly the time to launch a record high network television advertising campaign to sell a high ticket luxury item. But to Charles H. Percy, president of Bell & Howell Co., Chicago manufacturers of photographic equipment, it's an excellent time. Percy bases his contention on two points:

- Business in general: Suggesting that recessions reflect a negative psychological attitude, Percy says "If we keep so busy carrying out new plans and promotions, we won't have a chance to know that there is a 'recession' on."
- B&H business in particular: Percy is allocating a record-high advertising budget — $600,000 — for the second quarter of 1958. This is about triple the $200,000 the company spent during the same period last year. The major expenditure is in network tv, where the company, and its agency, McCann-Erickson, Chicago, has bought rate card time valued at $450,000.

Buy when they sell

Here too, the company is able to take advantage of the times. The time purchased is relief time. "We were able to buy the time at 75% of the original cost," Percy says, and continues, "the time to buy is when everybody else wants to sell."

This move on B&H's part is not out of character. The company has had a steady growth pattern since 1949 and has, in fact, quadrupled its sales gross between that year and 1957.

This growth represents many factors. The photography market has taken tremendous strides since the war and now represents a potential of $1 billion annually.

In 1957, according to an industry estimate, about 780,000 8mm cameras were sold, accompanied by about 520,000 8mm projectors. These are considered as being bought for home movie making. So too are 25,000 16mm cameras and 20,000 16mm projectors sold last year, though these latter represent only about one-fifth of total 16mm sales. The balance is sold for professional use.

The photo industry over-all has experienced an 80%-plus volume increase in the past 10 years. "This ties in directly to population increase," says Carl G. Schreyer, Bell & Howell vice-president of marketing.

Bell & Howell has ridden the crest of this post-war photography boom by racking up a higher-than-industry-average 125%-plus increase in sales during this period.

The company was founded in 1907 as a producer of professional filmmaking equipment. Although it offered the first 16mm camera in 1922, thereby opening the home movie market, as recently as 10 years ago the professional equipment side accounted for the majority of the company's business.

Expansion into home-use equipment has been largest since the war. The basic items have been redesigned and improved 8mm and 16mm cameras and projectors. To these the company has added slide projectors and tape recorders.

Following World War II B&H sales began slipping, reaching a low of about $13.2 million in 1949. Since then the rise has been steady and fast. They reached $45,579,069 in 1956, jumped to $52,218,476 last year.

Product research

A major factor contributing to this sales growth has been a heavy investment in new product research, development and engineering. The company spends 8% of each sales dollar for this, and it has paid off handsomely.

In mid-1956 the company introduced the first 16mm "electric eye" camera which incorporates a light-sensitive cell mounted on the front of the camera to record the amount of existing light and automatically adjust the lens setting. In 1957 the electric eye feature was added to the company's 8mm line. Sales of its 8mm cameras in 1957 were 83% ahead of 1956, a fact which Percy attributes to the new invention.

"Sales and profits should be up considerably in 1958, thanks largely to new products," Percy expects. About half the company's estimated $60,000,000 sales in 1958 will be accounted for by products introduced since mid-1956, he estimates. And new products introduced since mid-1952, will account for about three-quarters of 1958 sales, he believes.

New products also create new sales.

"More than half the sales of the new Auto Load (a self-threading 8mm movie projector) which we are introducing this year, will be made to consumers who would not otherwise have bought a movie projector," Percy says. Lest this sound unlikely, statistics show that about 6 million home movie cameras have been sold, but only about 4 million projectors are extant.

New products will be the theme of the coming network tv push. The company says that the basic approach in preparing the commercials is to stress

How valuable is a star's name in a tv commercial?

Two admen and a newspaper man tell how they feel the big-name stars can be used most effectively in carrying the product message to the television audience.

A. L. Hollender, vice president and director of radio-tv, Grey Advertising Agency, New York

Use the star to upgrade product message

The answer ranges from no value whatsoever to peak effectiveness. The yardstick we require to measure the extent of this value, is based on specific instances. Stars may be employed in commercials for spot use, or they may be engaged to present the commercial message for the sponsor of their show. Within bounds of this latter category, their participation may be confined to simple lead-ins and lead-outs, or they may be the pace-setter for the entire commercial. Values will vary in every instance, but there is one absolute common denominator: credibility.

It's the old story of engaging Marilyn Monroe or Sophia Loren to sell the nylon strength of tires. It just doesn't make sense. But let Perry Como do a commercial on Foamex Mattresses, and who'd doubt it?

Credibility, therefore, is the key to all commercials, and copywriters are learning more and more, that it is a "must" in their basic approach to the commercial concept.

Don't use a star merely for a star's sake, but only when they can heighten commercial interest; upgrade the product image, or strengthen the endorsement of the product.

These are the real values. Under these conditions, the use of stars even on spot commercials can be quite effective. However, it is important to remember that intelligent use on their own programs is of even greater importance.

The lesson that should have been learned by many during the early days of Jack Benny's "Jello Again," has apparently been forgotten by a large segment of the advertising fraternity. Watch television tonight and notice how many programs simply function as spot carriers. It makes very little sense to us to just scan ratings and forget all the other ways of using the show to heighten commercial effectiveness and increase its sales values.

Effective use of the star, credible use of the star, enthusiastic use of the star, can give you twice the sales effectiveness with half the rating.

But above all, make it credible; make it worthy of belief.

Roger Pryor, vice president, radio and television, Foote, Cone & Belding, New York

Some have proved extremely successful

I know of no scientific study determining the precise value of the use of stars' names in tv commercials. But we have had sufficient evidence of the effective use of the technique to indicate that a tasteful tying of the proper personality with product does give added impact to the sales message.

There is abundant evidence to prove that people in all walks of life are influenced by what others do. Little girls are forever found parading around the house in their mothers' clothes, boys can't wait to get into long pants, and, in the adult world, surely no one can deny that many a new automobile is purchased primarily to match that shiny new one standing in the nextdoor driveway.

Take Arthur Godfrey, for example, or Garry Moore or Dave Garroway or any of the dozens of other personalities who have proved themselves to be extremely successful salesmen. Why are these programs generally considered to be good television buys? Audiences of comparable size can be bought elsewhere. Perhaps even at a lower cost. But it is the ability of these people to move the product. It is because who and what they are.

While I can't hope to understand all the ramifications of consumer motivation, I do believe that the viewer's subconscious mind must play a large part in causing his hand to reach for the products which these and other people of similar importance are recommending. Surely somewhere along the way there must be some thought reaction which says to the consumer, "These people just wouldn't say that about a product unless they thought it was that good—and if it's good enough for them, it's good enough for me." So he buys it.

William M. Freeman, Financial-Business News staff writer, The New York Times, New York, and author of "The Big Name."

Link between star and product must be logical volume when the link between performer and product is logical.

There have been a number of costly fiascos over the years when an advertiser has not gone beyond linking an attractive product to an attractive personality. Such an advertiser, using a dancing star to sell a tractor or a rugged outdoor star to speak up for a cosmetic, makes the classic mistake of forgetting believability.

Ronald Reagan is a first-class example of how a name movie star can be used on tv to serve as a good-will ambassador and star salesman.

Mr. Reagan not only serves as host and occasional star of the General Electric Theatre, but tours the country for at least six weeks annually as a representative of the company to its employes, its neighbors and its customers. The star often plays the role of a man forced to fight against great odds, and this stereotype carries over to the in-person appearance for G.E. The company benefits by the image of the fighter-for-the-right that the public long has had of the actor.

This believable situation is quite a bit different from that in the late Twenties, when Constance Talmadge, then a reigning star of the silent screen, posed for 400 endorsement photographs in a single day. Her representatives sold the star's services as an endorser to whoever would pay the price. The advertising was a failure, and "Breakfast at Sunrise," the picture it was designed to help, was a failure, too.

Another more recent failure, is that of a well-known movie star who endorsed a leading brand of soap, then told an interviewer she never used it. This destroyed some expensive advertising.

It's good common sense for a personality to endorse a product appropriate to him on the television screen. When he enters a living room and speaks for something you believe he would logically know about, you are inclined to go along with his suggestions.

All things being equal, however, the well-known star has the plus value of achieving more immediate recognition to the viewer than the regular announcer.

Westerns are still the most marketable syndication wares, as far as station people are concerned.

FILM-SCOPE gleaned this from a questionnaire response it completed this week.

The survey, addressed to a cross-section of FILM-SCOPE's field trend spotters—which included managers, program directors and film buyers—disclosed that next to westerns the biggest demands from sponsors were action-adventure and mystery-detective series.

Several of the respondents added this observation: Regardless of type, a good, quality show will still find a buyer.

A noteworthy comment, spurred by FILM-SCOPE's latest questionnaire, came from Jack Tipton, manager of KLZ-TV, Denver:

"Local prospects for complete sponsorship have diminished because of the sharp increase in film prices.

"If gross film costs could be regulated parallel to the Class "A" half-hour one time rate, we feel sure we'd have many more local sponsors for syndicated series."

Look for a second year of production on 26 Men.

Although it's not yet renewal time, ABC Film is assured of practically 85% current sponsor renewals, so it'll start production on the second series this summer.

Some current sponsors: Winston Cigarettes, A & P, General Electric, Colgate-Palmolive, Pepsodent, Pabst Brewery, Hood Dairy, Standard Oil.

The series, on the air since October, has reached the 170 market point, in 46 states.

Next anticipated action by the Justice Department in its probing of feature film distributors is a suit against MCA and Paramount and their $50 million deal.

The latest two-fisted Government punch is the suit slapped last week on Columbia, Screen Gems and Universal. Companies are accused under both Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts of lessening competition in the industry and conspiring to restrain trade.

First blow to film distributors came last year, when MGM-TV and other groups were accused by the same department of block booking. That suit is still pending.

Note: Screen Gems sees no real challenge to its newly-acquired Universal films, will go ahead with release plans. Two packages (52 pictures each) have been released, one will be available this spring, one this fall, and another in the winter.

MARKETING WEEK

19 APRIL 1958
Copyright 1958
SPONSOR PUBLICATIONS INC.

No matter what direction economic conditions go, spot tv and radio have nothing to fear from the rise of the supermarket buying committees.

The committees are generally favorably disposed toward local media, anyway, because of their pinpointing power.

Said one agency president who has had extensive personal experience on the food broker-buying committee level: "No. 1 promotional medium with buying committees is spot tv; No. 2 is spot radio."

Buying committees, a comparatively recent development in the supermarket chain field, represent a new client-agency problem in ad communications.

Core of the problem: Should the advertiser put on a slam-bang, four-color presentation with lights and music to get a new product listed or a new promotion okayed? Or should he present the facts briefly and unglamorously?

There appears, oddly enough, a strong leaning toward the latter. The thinking here is that the committees are burdened with evaluating so much product information, a one-page fact sheet will be welcomed.

True, there are occasionally requests for details, such as the consumer advertising proposed or already at work. One timebuyer reported a chain asking for data on a radio station purchase in one market. The chain wanted to know the station's call letters, name of show, time of day, number of announcements, name of program personality, length of campaign, etc. But, the buyer said, this is rare.

Tv's coverage among "buying" households is even greater than that indicated by the ARF figure showing that 83.2% of U.S. households own tv sets.

The ARF figures, gathered by the Census Bureau in January, also disclose that 88.4% of husband-wife households have tv. The percentage owning tv for "all other" households is 66.7. Conversely, the all-other group represent a substantial proportion of non-tv homes. Nearly half, as a matter of fact.

It may come as a surprise to some that nearly 20% of all U.S. households are not of the husband-and-wife type.

There's a growing interest in contests among manufacturers.

One indication is the rise in their number. It's estimated that the number of important contests rose about 5% in 1957 over the preceding year.

Another indication is the current Hit Parade Mystery Tune contest, first major cigarette contest run in many years. This is more complicated than most, requiring identification of a mystery tune on NBC TV's Hit Parade plus a 25-words-or-less sentence completion step.

Reason for this two-step device: Contests are basically sampling devices. American Tobacco takes care of the sampling end by requiring entrants to enclose an end panel from a carton of Hit Parade. Identification of the mystery tune serves the second-step purpose of building an audience for its commercials.

It couldn't be any more natural.

Sunkist Lemons and the Tea Council are joining forces to sell iced tea with lemon this summer via television, radio, magazines and newspapers.

SPONSOR: State Theatre

Capsule case history: Using local tv as a major portion of their budget to advertise Hollywood productions has been proving very successful to movie houses throughout the country. A new attendance record was set by the State Theatre of Omaha, Nebraska, after they had purchased a saturation campaign on KETV, Omaha, to publicize their upcoming Disney production "Ole Yeller." State bought ten 10-second announcements which were run for a six-day period prior to the showing of the film. No other television station was used for this campaign. The day the movie opened, State broke an all-time attendance record for the theatre. "We have never had a more successful tv promotion than the one enjoyed on KETV," said John Mattis, manager of the State. "We had youngsters standing in line for well over a block to see the picture." In the past the movie house has used radio and television in the area, but "none of the results equalled these 10 announcements."

SPORT GOODS & EQUIPMENT

SPONSORS: Local Wholesaler and Dealers

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: A little short of a year ago, George A. Grenholm, manager of V. Tausche Hardware Co., a wholesale sports store of LaCrosse, Wis., conceived a plan whereby four local sports good stores, each in a different community of the LaCrosse trading area, would sponsor a show each Friday called Fite Nite Sport Nite, on WKBT, LaCrosse. The cost per telecast, $100, was divided proportionately among the sports outlets and Tausche Co. After launching the program, the sponsors found that in almost every case, items advertised on their show resulted in near, or complete, sellouts. The long-range sales potential of the show is demonstrated by the fact that from 70% to 90% of their advertising is devoted to this particular program. Sales figures have climbed consistently since its beginning. The first contract was signed for an eight-week test campaign. It was immediately renewed for an additional 26-week flight and again this past March for another 26 weeks.

SPONSOR: Howco Exchange

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: "Rodan," a recent fiction release, was advertised on WSOC-TV, Charlotte, N. C., by Howco Exchange, a regional film distributor. At the suggestion of WSOC-TV, Howco purchased a tv schedule on the station's 25-plan. Howco had used television in other areas of the South but only WSOC-TV was bought in Charlotte. The local theater which carried the film did heavy business. The movie house drew an almost capacity crowd each time the picture ran. Movie houses in Gastonia, Monroe, Albermarle, Salisbury and Rock Hill, all within the station's coverage area, which also showed the film, had similar successes. In fact, every theater running the film within a 75-mile area of Charlotte met with surprising box office receipts. Theaters playing the picture outside of WSOC-TV's coverage pattern did not do nearly as well as those in the Charlotte coverage area. "You can be assured we will use tv on our next campaign," stated Scott Lett, the branch manager of Howco.

AUTO SUPPLIES

SPONSOR: Economy Auto Stores, Inc.

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: Economy Auto Stores, Inc. has been a steady advertiser in Chattanooga since they opened an outlet in this city. The company had used television but had never advertised on WRGP-TV, Chattanooga. After spending considerable sums on every medium available in Hamilton County, they decided to try WRGP-TV. Working in cooperation with the copy and advertising departments of the station, the auto store prepared an effective tv campaign. "The results received from the announcements were nothing short of perfection", stated Economy's executive, Earl E. Tennyson, Jr. Tire sales alone for the month of February exceeded any other February in the store's preceding 11 years of operation. This was by far the most successful advertising campaign the auto accessory store had ever experienced. Other tv campaigns also have met with outstanding success. "In addition, we have gained customers who keep returning for additional items," said Tennyson, Jr.

CHICAGO REPORT

Despite the IBEW's strike at WBBM-TV-AM, programing and business was conducted smoothly at the station.

From the viewpoint of new business it was a good week—as can be attested from the spot buys noted below:

The Chicago highlights in the news included:

WNBQ conducted a color tv seminar for 40 members of Foote, Cone & Belding on April 15. The demonstrations of tv programing techniques and a tour of the station's facilities is part of a continuing training program conducted by FC&B.

Real, old fashioned, live radio in action was the theme of WMAQ's open house. Master of ceremonies, vocalist, musicians, guest interviewers and sports reporters were on stage before a studio audience, celebrating the 37th anniversary of Station WMAQ and the first anniversary of the Chan Show.

WGN's Research division completed a survey showing the extent of children's influence on family buying habits. Generally, the study reveals that the tricycle set is highly responsive to advertising on tv programs for children and about 85% of them almost always recognize the advertised product in the stores.

The Pet Milk Company, Station WSM Nashville and the Grand Ole Opry, and the Keystone Broadcasting System, are conducting a nationwide contest to discover a new western music star. Each of the KBS stations are holding individual contests, sending tapes of their local winners to a panel of Grand Ole Opry star judges. Gardner Advertising Company, St. Louis, Pet Milk's agency, has built the complete merchandising package being used to promote the contest.

In spite of the current domestic slump, international advertising for this year is quite healthy among consumer goods manufacturers, according to Joseph W. Biety, foreign advertising manager, Parker Pen Company. In a speech before the Midwest International Advertising Association in Chicago, Biety reported that some 30 leading companies are most optimistic for 1958 and plan to spend more advertising dollars than in 1957.

The Station Representatives Association, in a closed meeting at the Ambassador East elected these new officers for 1958: President, Jack Davis, Blair-TV; V.P., Roger O'Sullivan, Avery-Knodel; treasurer, Bill Condon, the Katz Agency; secretary, Tom Taylor, Peters-Griffin-Woodward.

as basic as the alphabet

EGYPTIAN

Peering back through the mists of time, many scholars believe that our letter B started as the Egyptian picture-sign for courtyard or house.

PHOENICIAN

Some what later, the Semitic inventors of the alphabet adapted the house-sign and let it stand for the first sound of beth (house).

GREEK

ROMAN

Liking the archaic Greek letter, the Romans carved it in stone in the rounded form we know and use today.

The FCC this week moved to break down the status of exclusive occupancy of stations on 12 of the existing 24 clear channels.

The stations involved in a proposal to add additional unlimited-time stations to these 12 channels are all located in the east and middlewest.

They comprise: WRCA, WABC and WCBS, New York; WMAQ, WGN, WLS and WBBM, Chicago; KDKA, Pittsburgh; KYW and WCAU, Philadelphia; WHAM, Rochester and KMOX, St. Louis.

How the channels will be assigned: five additional major Class I stations in specified western states, while the other seven would be assigned to additional Class II stations where needed to provide primary service.

Everybody involved in the proposed upsetting of the clear channel appecart has until 15 July to file protests, opinions and whatnot.

What the FCC has in mind for the other 12 clear channels: Possibly raise their power to as high as 750,000 watts.

Significance of all this to advertisers: No change in primary coverage for the "de-exclusivized" channels and extension of the primary coverage areas for stations subject to the huge power boost.

While the House Legislative Oversight subcommittee mulls the matter of getting back on the FCC track, a new bill affecting FCC procedure has hit the House hopper.

This bill, introduced by Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D., Wis.), "to restore confidence" would:

- Set up broad areas of equality between competing applicants for a radio frequency or tv channel, with all bidding against each other and the FCC making the award to the applicant with the strongest case.
- Give first preference to applicants with local connections and having no other interests in mass communications. Second preference to local people with interests in mass communications.
- Set up a code of ethics for the FCC, raises salaries from $20,000 to $22,000 and double the term of service from seven to 14 years.

Storer and Westinghouse both debated the advantages of local ownership in testimony before the FCC on the Barrows network study report.

Storer executive v.p. Lee B. Wailes said if the FCC would see to it that AT&T charges are more reasonable a fourth live network would be possible.

Even more to the point, Wailes argued, the commission should permit privately owned and operated intercity relay systems—providing such networks could own seven VHF stations instead of the present limit of five.

Westinghouse stations president Donald H. Gannon, who like Wailes, cited the public benefits of programing know-how deriving from group ownership, made these two points:

1. Westinghouse was not happy with the networks for refusing to permit stations to record network programs with videotape for delayed use.
2. Such delays would eliminate conflicts with the station's own programing.

Wailes had this to say in answer to queries about Storer's buying and selling of stations:

The sole purpose was to move the company into larger markets, as an alternative to growth in view of the limitation of station ownership.

Lever Bros., which has upped its ad budget substantially for the next fiscal year in support of a lot of new products, is also setting a new profit-margin target.

The desired goal: 4%, or practically double the previous mark.

Madison Avenue legalities are keeping a watchful eye on the lottery games flooding tv (even NBC TV has one on the boards).

Two likely sources of trouble: Postal authorities and states that have anti-lottery measures on the books.

Kraft is contemplating reviving the title of one of radio's most esteemed programs—the Kraft Music Hall—this fall.

Paul Whiteman was its original star, and Bing Crosby presided over the Hall for about a decade.

Most of the top-ranking film commercial producers now agree on this: The system of having them bid for a job has become pretty well outdated.

Those favoring shelving of the system argue that today's estimates show hardly any difference in prices among the five or six leaders.

A heavy user of tv appears to have incurred frowns from department stores by offering a bra free with every girdle purchased.

The stores' gripe: The customer almost automatically is in the market for a new bra after she's disposed of the girdle problem.

If S. C. Johnson pulls out of the Steve Allen show or reduces its stake to a half-hour on alternate weeks, it will be because it's plagued by a problem common to quite a few tv advertisers: too many brands thrown together.

Should Johnson quit Allen altogether, it will team up on an alternate basis with two other nighttime network half-hour shows.

Major agencies still have to make a lot of headway in getting cooperation between print copy and tv storyboard art directors.

A recent incident points up this antagonism: An art director junked a $1,000 set made for a magazine ad before the agency's tv commercial people found it would come in handy for them, too.

Ex-NBC pages—now scattered all over the business—are most amused by this recollection:

Having to memorize the faces of NBC v.p.'s in the framed photos hung on the walls of the locker room. The constant trouble was that no sooner had one set been committed to memory than a new one was substituted.

COST-TRIMMING

they continue to be important factors in client choice of agencies."

The overwhelming majority of agency heads are today as concerned with maintaining the level of service offered to clients as they are with cost-trimming. As a top 4A's executive told SPONSOR: "In a year like this when there's more account restiveness, few agencies feel they can afford to cut back their staffs except for the historic reason of specific account losses. But this is a bad time to tamper with the structure of a successfully operated agency."

There are historic precedents for the type of sweeping salary cut that K&E instituted this month. Y&R did it twice in the thirties and each time managed restitution by year-end. The philosophy behind it is that it is better to keep a full staff at lower salaries than lose hard to replace personnel.

Views about the effectiveness of such a sweeping salary-slashing move are very mixed. A top-level K&E executive told SPONSOR he felt the move had been "statesmanlike and farsighted.

We need the personnel to continue servicing our clients at peak efficiency, but costs had to be trimmed. Everyone in the agency understands this, and chances are good that an early restitution will be possible."

Outside K&E, agency management took dim views of the move, considered it a "far too public announcement of despair," according to the president of one of the top 30 agencies.

The billings ratio

While ratio of personnel to billings varies widely, agencies with the lowest, most profitable ratio of people to billing would actually be hardest hit by long-term set-backs in billings. "We've always tried to operate on the basis of having a few unusually talented people working in our shop rather than many pedestrians," says Guild, Bascom & Bonfigli's v.p. and general manager Gil Burton. "This theory has worked up to now, but it wouldn't give room for staff reduction. Salaries and bonuses represent about two-thirds of our gross income. Today we bill at a rate of $10 million a year with only eight accounts and it's been the rule rather than the exception for us to double our billing and personnel year after year."

Two symptoms point up that agency management is more concerned with operating costs this year than at any time since the 1949 business setback:

Management consultants and cost-accounting firms such as agency specialist Ira Rubel of Chicago are doing a carnival business. "The number of agencies asking for our services has stepped up considerably over the past two years," says Norman Fowler, Ira Rubel partner currently working on a cost-accounting project at McCann-Erickson. "But we tend to advise against cost-accounting by media because it could prejudice agency recommendations."

(Ira Rubel told SPONSOR of stepped-up inquiries by management of multi-million agencies during the past two or three months: "Concern over costs is at a peak. In the past two months, I've actually been responsible for the firing of some 500 agency people.")

• Executive employment agencies have seen a new pattern of job-switching develop during the last six to eight months. Walter Lowen, Maude Lennox and other personnel specialists active in ad agencies sum it up with this recent example:

"One agency with two tv copywriters (one earning $20,000, the other $12,000) felt some loss in billings recently without losing any account. The agency fired the $20,000-a-year man, raised the $12,000-year man by $500 and a few weeks later hired a $9,500 tv copywriter because the work required two men. The only trouble is, when you're paying $10,000, you're not getting $20,000-value. Agencies should watch out for false economies at this time."

Says Maude Lennox manager of tv-radio personnel, Joan Sinclair: "Major agencies which had casting directors earning $12,000 are now letting the producers do their own casting and just keep on a gal at $90 to $115 a week for SAG reuse payment book-keeping."

The tv directors of two agencies where such streamlining was put into effect in the past three months view the results with mixed feelings. According to them, it takes up high-priced producers' time and takes each producer longer than it took the experienced casting director. Conclusion: A doubtful saving at best. ▀ the exclusive features of B&H products. Besides the Auto Load these include new models of both the electric eye cameras and the "Sun Dial" cameras, with manually operated lens.

This is B&H's second sortie into tv in the past few months. Following an eight-year hiatus, the company returned to tv last fall with an eight-week schedule in 12 markets to introduce its then new 8mm electric eye camera. The tv campaign was budgeted at about $150,000. It began, but did not run to completion. Trade sources reported that the decision to cut back was based on "budget considerations."

In last fall's campaign, about one-third of the budget was allocated to tv. This current effort will put more than half the budget into tv.

"We are using tv for the introduction of these products," says Carl Schreyer, "because this medium provides graphic demonstration of new and unusual products. A large audience can grasp the idea of a new product in a few seconds when it is demonstrated on tv," he points out.

Late spring and early summer are strong sales periods for camera makers since it's then people begin making firm vacation plans. "Because tv can reach millions of people in a relatively short time," Schreyer continues, "we are using it during our major selling season to reach everybody possible."

The campaign gets under way on 30 April, runs until 30 June. The schedule includes four shows, all on the NBC network. They are: Restless Gun, Mondays, on 105 stations; Wagon Train, Wednesdays on 156 stations; Suspicion, Mondays on 133 stations, and NBC News, Monday-Friday, on 73 stations.

Plans are to use one participation a week on each program, for a total time buy of 12 minutes. The new products will be featured in situations with filmed demonstrations of the products in use.

The news approach

"We are using a 'news' kind of approach in these commercials," reports Pierre Marshall, B&H advertising manager. "Movie making is a family affair, and so we want to show our new product to the whole family. We selected these programs because they represent a cross-section of the broadest possible audience—anybody who might buy our equipment.”

This reasoning was amplified by a spokesman for McCann-Erickson, B&H agency. “We based our choice of network tv, with its tremendous exposure, on recent studies that confirmed our suspicion that there are substantial markets for our products in almost all educational and income strata.”

Wherever we can, the agency spokesman continued, “we are going for the male viewer, because in network tv at night you tend to get women anyway unless the program is something specifically for men, like sports. So we chose shows that might be considered more attractive to men.

Despite the foreshortening of last fall’s tv campaign, it had an effect on this year’s plans. “The success of the tv phase of that campaign, coupled with the need for fast, dramatic and comprehensive presentation of our new features, was behind our decision to expand the use of tv in this campaign,” says ad manager Marshall.

A continuing program of research is carried on by both Bell & Howell and its agency. Here’s how it’s used to plan the commercials. Consumer attitude surveys reveal two common characteristics of a home movie shower. One is a sensitivity to audience attitudes, the other is a fear of boring the viewers. In most cases, the survey shows, the actual films are interesting to the audience, but the preliminaries, including threading the projector, can become tedious.

The commercials, then, will stress the fact that Auto Load, which requires less than a minute set-up time because it doesn’t require threading.

Merchandising backing

Besides the network tv schedule, the company is planning ads in 10 cities in Sunday newspaper supplements, as well as regular newspaper insertions and a page in each of three photography magazines. Strong dealer merchandising, including counter cards and window displays, will add point-of-purchase emphasis to advertising.

Two contests are being run in conjunction with the campaign. One is for salesmen of the company’s retail dealers, with prizewinners receiving shares of B&H stock. Another contest will be held for the company sales force. ■

SPONSOR SPEAKS

Let's sell optimism

Radio and television stations everywhere are doing their bit to dispel recession thinking.

A cross-section of stations chiming in with encouraging and factual reports of better business conditions include WAKE, Atlanta; WFBR, Baltimore; KELO-TV, Sioux Falls; WANE, Ft. Wayne; KPHO, Phoenix; WLAC, Nashville; WYDE, Birmingham; WAVI, Dayton; WJTN, Jamestown.

Sponsor's concept of "Let's Sell Optimism" is nothing if not factual. We recommend that stations ferret out the bright spots in the communities they serve and pass them along to their listeners and viewers. You'll find that local merchants as well as your audience will love you for it.

The NAB Convention issue (26 April) will feature a "Let's Sell Optimism" theme. Back in 1949 and again in 1954 the anti-recession efforts of broadcast stations did much to chase the dark economic clouds away.

Recession fear or sound business

The Advertising Council took the bit in its teeth last week when it began work on a major anti-recession campaign to change consumer psychology as it had helped to do during the 1954 setback. (See Newsmaker of the Week page 4.)

The Ad Council's move underscores once again the importance of the advertising industry in America's economy. This is the year when agency management can rise to the challenge and accept its position of leadership.

The question today is: What has agency management done to counteract a recession psychology within its own rank as well as throughout the advertising industry?

While the profit squeeze has been a growing problem over the past two years, the danger now exists that some agency heads may use the recession fever as an excuse for wholesale cut-back, out of proportion with current billings. Such a cost-cutting stampede, weakening client services and the structure of an agency, would work against future interests of agency management. (For analysis of cost-cutting, see p. 33.)

SPONSOR congratulates Grey Advertising's president, Arthur Fatt, for his staff memorandum reassuring his personnel about the agency's future and outlining its growth pattern. This type of forward thinking will offset recession fears.

THIS WE FIGHT FOR: Network radio has regained many of the advertisers it lost in the early '50's (see page 12). Now is the time for the networks to regain prestige by getting together and revealing monthly client billings.

10-SECOND SPOTS

Agency type: A young lady, recently come to New York and hard at work in her first job with an agency media department, was asked if she had made many friends yet. "No," she replied, "but I've got lots of acquaintances-in-depth."

Synopsis: From the program log of TV Guide, this description of a movie on WNHC-TV, New Haven, Conn.—"Dangerous Number. (1937) Time approx. After returning from the Orient where he tried to forget his former sweetheart, a handsome New Yorker rushes her away on the brink of her impending wedding and marries her herself." Sounds a little too off-beat for the tv family audience.

Showcase: Horace Schwerin, president of Schwerin Research Corp., told Minneapolis Ad Club members that, "Excellent results can sometimes be obtained from sponsoring a Western, but it is not the easiest type of show with which to harmonize your commercials." Unless, of course, you're in the saddle or shootin' arn business.

Bumper crop: When Dee Sweet, of Indianapolis station WISH-TV, goes to the San Francisco convention of Advertising Women in Radio and Television she will have $832 spending money—profits from an acre of Maine potatoes she won at last year's conclave. The Maine Dept. of Agriculture, donors of the prize, packed the crop in 10-lb. bags bearing her name (Dee Sweet Brand), shipped them to Indianapolis. There, Dee herself promoted her spuds in local supermarkets. Proving there's money in farm radio.

Keeping her modest: Psyche, the White Rock girl well known in air media, is on display in New York's Grand Central station but is presenting a bit of a problem inasmuch as her white gauze sarong keeps slipping. Every few days watchful attendants haul it up into place again. The sack that failed.

Safe: Herb Sheldon, Dumont air personality uses four of his own shows to sponsor his own product—Pop-A-Day Pops, vitaminized lollypops. The best client-talent relationship to come along in a long while.

AWOL: On ABC TV's Rin Tin Tin, Benny, a trained rabbit was supposed to run away from Rinty. He did, and his trainer is still looking for him. So that wasn't the Easter Bunny you saw hopping down Wiltshire—that was Benny.

"I didn't see a well-stacked babe in the whole damn hospital!"
