INTRODUCTION

In the beginning, there was the iconoscope and the kinescope, the primitive tools for the fledgling field of broadcast television.

Today, color TV sets can fit in your pocket, TV cameras are the size of a loaf of bread and portable video recorders can be held in the palm of your hand.

One thing, however, hasn’t changed that much through the decades of technical innovation: our fascination with the dramas and comedies, specials and sitcoms, that fill the airwaves.

Our interests, however, aren’t limited just to the shows being produced today. Through the magic of reruns, we can effortlessly transport ourselves to a different time, a different place—reliving an era long past, or discovering it afresh. With the flick of a dial, we can escape from the harsh reality of the 1980s to the comforts of a simpler life and time, at least as it appeared on television.

Click. On one channel, there’s Uncle Bill and Mr. French, wondering what to do about Buffy and Jody and Cissy. Click. Turn the dial again, and watch as Kojak gets the bad guys every time. Click. Turn again, and ride tall in the saddle with Wyatt Earp and Bat Masterson, or even with Buck Rogers or Captain Video, if you’d like.

And then there are the shows worth watching again and again and again, just for the fun of it.

You know what’s going to happen to Lucy and Ethel when they get that job at Kramer’s Candy Kitchen. We know Mr. Spock isn’t going to die at the hands of the Romulans. And we know that once in each and every episode, Ralph is going to threaten to punch Alice right in the nose (“One of these days, Alice! One of these days!”).

But we watch anyway. And we love it all over again.

This book has been designed with that warm, nostalgic feeling in mind. We scoured photo collections across the globe to find just the right rare photos for each show. We tried to come up with questions that were more than just cold recitations of dry facts. In short, we’ve tried to bring the past to life.

Of course, there’s no way to include all of the shows worth including. And there’s no way to ask all the questions worth answering. So what did we do?

We tried to choose shows representative of the best television has had to offer over the last thirty years. If your favorite is missing, we’ll try to get to it next time.

And we hoped to offer a range of questions that would challenge experts and novices alike. We don’t think you’ll know all the answers to every question, but we expect you’ll know at least a few.

So sharpen your pencils, find a comfortable chair, and get ready to sample the odd and the offbeat, the remarkable and the redoubtable. Good luck!
