A NEW, REVISED, EXPANDED OF Radio's

AND GREATLY EDITION Golden Age

The Complete K BUXTON Reference Work

- -Who was that masked man?
- -Do you remember who played the "Aunt Fanny" who sang "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" for the Don McNeill Breakfast Club?
- -Remember who "the true-to-life story of mother love and sacrifice" was about?
- -The star of "Junior G-Men"?
- -The fellow who kept insisting "It's da condishuns dat prevail!"?

With this fact-filled compendium of casts, backstage talent, program themes, stars, stock lines, theme songs, and more from music, drama, and sports programs, quiz shows and variety hours, you can easily recall or first learn about all that went into the making of radio when radio was the most entertaining and informative communications medium in America.

In these pages you can almost hear Meredith Willson saying, "Thank you, Miss Bankhead, sir," on the opening of The Big Show; Bob and Ray giving Mary Magoon's Thanksgiving recipe for "Mock Turkey"; Doctor I.Q. paying nineteen silver dollars to anyone who could repeat "The Monument to Memory"; Ozzie and Harriet appearing as vocalists on The Red Skelton Show, or Orson Welles becoming a sometime-voice of "The Shadow."

An indispensable reference to early radio, The Big Broadcast was first published in 1966 as Radio's Golden Age, which Saturday Review called "indescribably delicious nostalgia," and which Variety praised as "a memory-jogging and fascinating catalogue of old casts and credits." Now the authors have greatly expanded and revised the book to include new articles on such topics as announcers, commercials. newscasters, soap operas, and professional screamers—everything from when the laughmeter came in to who handled the sound effects for Gangbusters.

Countless new dates, network originations, excerpts from popular scripts, sponsor names, and jingles have also been added, and there are one hundred fifty rare photographs and a comprehensive index.

Introduction by HENRY MORGAN

The "radio" part of Radio City is the National Broadcasting Company, which is housed in the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, New York. The building was finished sometime in 1933. Five minutes later the third floor of NBC was crowded with actors. A series of broadcasting studios ringed a large central lobby in which the actors congregated before, during, and after broadcasts. About thirty of them did ninety per cent of the work. The rest sat around waiting for lightning to strike. What they wanted was for lightning to strike some working actor so that a job would become available. They realized—but couldn't bring themselves to acknowledge the fact—that if a bolt actually struck Santos Ortega at the last minute the producer wouldn't rush into the lobby and grab Axel Ramsfutter, he'd look for and find Leon Janney... or Bud Collyer ... or Luis Van Rooten. These were real (i.e., working) actors, and a producer knew them and their work and the outsider didn't have a chance.

The system was simplicity itself. At WMCA, for example, a man named Charles Martin got the idea of doing a daily March-of-Time type of broadcast and sold the idea to the station management. All radio was live then and the time had to be filled one way or another, and Charlie's way was as good as the next guy's, or sounded as good. A little stock company of unemployed Broadway actors was hired at thirty dollars a week apiece. The company included Martin Gabel (a recent graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Art), Garson Kanin, Alice Frost, and, quite often, one of the page boys (H. Morgan.) Since Mr. Morgan was already being paid eight dollars a week in his other job, there was no need to pay him extra to "act." At the network stations the actors worked for what they could get. There was no union. no hours. Hugh Conrad, a staff announcer at WMCA, doubled as the "Voice of Time" on the regular weekly network program using his true name, Westbrook Van Voorhis. When I became a full-time staff announcer in 1932, the chief announcer told me to change my name since no one would understand my true one, Henry von Ost, Jr. What about Harry Von Zell? I asked. Or, for that matter, Van Voorhis? The chief, resplendent in a name he had conjured up for himself (A. L. Alexander), was adamant.

An announcer spent his long days making up introductions for the "acts" that followed one another for sixteen hours a day. None of them was paid unless some advertiser picked up the program, and then it was a matter of five or ten dollars a show. Hungarian twopiano teams, Polish oompah bands, Madame Charme the beauty expert, Elmo Russ at the studio organ, the Lord himself knows what came through in the course of the day.

Over on the networks the serials had started, and those who played leads became the gentry of the business. Graham McNamee, an aspiring baritone, had been sent out to do a sports broadcast and, his enthusiasm overcoming his lack of knowledge, was the first announcer to become gentry in that field. David Ross read poetry in a rich, faky voice and won a "diction" award. Paul D. Fleisher dropped the Fleisher and, as Paul Douglas, would holler into the innards of an open grand piano, "Buck . . . Rogers . . . in the twenty-fifth . . . CEN . . . tury!" It had a nice hollow effect.

In the thirties I spent half my life in Harlem. All the great bands were up there, and we would broadcast them every night from ten until three in the morning. I was announcer for Don Redman, Fletcher Henderson, Teddy Wilson, Lucky Millinder, Claude Hopkins, Chick Webb, Father Hines, the Mills Blue Ribbon Band, Cab Calloway, Willie Stephens Bryant, Andy Kirk and His Clouds of Joy—are you sure they're not coming back?

Once, thirty announcers auditioned to replace Norman Brokenshire as the announcer on the Chesterfield program and I won. By the time I got upstairs Ted Husing had been assigned to the show. I listened in that night and was a bit surprised to hear Paul Douglas. It went that way more often than not.

I was too fresh for A. L. Alexander at WMCA and he fired me --possibly because I had laughed at him. He was the voice that introduced Tom Noonan's Chinatown Mission on Sundays, and Alex took it big. Each week his intro got flossier, until the day he said. "Here within the confines of the broadcast enclosure . . ." It was mean to fire the youngest full-time staff announcer in the country, and I rushed over to NBC to audition for Pat Kelly, their chief announcer. He said he'd send me to Cleveland, but I knew I was good enough for New York, so I rushed over to CBS, won an audition, and was sent to Philadelphia. It went that way too.

The head man at WCAU Philadelphia for announcer types was Stan Lee Broza. He fired me for laughing during the "Missing Persons" report and for getting stuck in the elevator while running it myself at night and for throwing burning wastebaskets in on my roommate while he was working and for knocking off in the afternoon to go have a drink with Paul Douglas. The fact that in a few years Douglas would be a big star in Born Yesterday didn't impress Broza a bit.

This sent me to WEBC Duluth. I told the boss I was twenty-six, and he made me chief announcer.

The following year I went to WNAC Boston to replace a staff man who was going to New York to seek his fortune. In twenty-five short years he went from Dan Seymour, announcer for Aunt Jenny, to the presidency of J. Walter Thompson.

By 1938 I was up to forty a week at WOR back home. One day the management came around and suggested that I kidded around too much on the air, would I mind taking fifteen minutes to get it out of my system? I wouldn't mind. About this time the station sold a program called Superman, which went on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at five-fifteen. Would I mind doing Tues., Thurs., and Sat.? No. I introduced myself as "Here's Morgan" but then would state that I was better known as "Super-Morg." They made me cut that out too.

Meanwhile, back at NBC's third floor . . .

The "gentry" of the early thirties was now an aristocracy. The American Federation of Radio Artists had been formed and salaries had gone up. John's Other Brother now had a house in Westchester and no longer suffered the indignity of having to audition for a job. There was a telephone-answering service that did nothing but keep track of radio actors and their jobs. There were direct telephone lines to the third floor, to CBS, even to a couple of the restaurants where the actors went for coffee. Some of them had left for other things; Frank Lovejoy, John Hodiak, Burgess Meredith, José Ferrer had gone. Rudy Vallee and Eddie Cantor had given impetus to some of the more talented. Major Bowes had created "units" that criss-crossed the country and made the Major richer and richer but, more important, kept a lot of actors eating.

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Morgan, meanwhile, having announced his way in and out of a number of jobs, was hired to do the sell on Lone Journey. This was the first program to peddle a detergent (Dreft), and it took five minutes to explain what that meant. Another three minutes were used for the "lead in"—the business where the announcer explains what has happened to date.

The rest of the fourteen and a half minutes were devoted to the story.

A word about "kidding the sponsor." I started this in 1938 (Arthur Godfrey did it in a much different way a few years later in Washington, but neither of us knew of the other). But this was a canard, because I didn't kid the sponsor at all.

I kidded bad advertising, including my own. If Old Man Adler, one of my clients, handed me a piece of copy that said his shoes were the greatest in the world. I would say that they hadn't been tested out quite that far but that perhaps they were the second greatest. Once he brought out a new spring line of some kind of hinky-dink canvas numbers in dreadful colors, puce, lemon and lime, stuff like that. I said that I wouldn't wear them to a dogfight but that perhaps some of the listeners would like them. Adler got mad and threatened to cancel his advertising. The following night I retracted. I said okay, I would wear them to a dogfight. It made him happy.

Television warmed up after World War II, and radio started its dive somewhere around 1951 or 1952. Radio actually died when Stop the Music got higher ratings than Fred Allen. Bert Parks went on from Music to become the celebrated singer on the Miss America pageants, which are still thrilling people who get thrilled by things like that, but all that's left of radio is in the pages that follow.

Foreword

Five years have elapsed since the publication of Radio's Golden Age, the first encyclopedia of old radio programs. In the intervening years our research has continued, aided by readers who had knowledge or evidence of additional information. The result of it all is this book: The Big Broadcast 1920–1950.

Compared with Radio's Golden Age, this new book is bigger and better in every respect. There are now special narrative sections on "Announcers," "Big Band Remotes," "Comedy and Comedians," "Comic Strips to Radio," "Commercials," "Cowboys," "FM," "Hollywood Reporters," "Interviewers," "Musicians," "Networks," "News and Newscasters," "Orchestra Leaders," "Quiz Shows," "Religion," "Singers," "Soap Operas," "Sound Effects Men," "Sports and Sportscasters," "Women's Programs," and a catch-all titled "Animal Imitators, Baby Criers, Doubles, Mimics, and Screamers."

Countless dates and network origination information have been verified and added to the program listings along with more actual script excerpts and the names of sponsors.

That's not all. We've unearthed forty-three more rare photographs to enrich the book. And the added feature of an index makes it easier to find quickly the particular information you are seeking.

Whether your question is:

Who played Pepper Young? (Mason Adams wasn't the only actor in that role)

How did they always get the audience to laugh at the beginning of Truth or Consequences?

What was the theme song of Young Widder Brown? Did Bill Stern ever broadcast a World Series? (nope) Did a man really play Beulah? (yep, for a while) Who handled the sound effects on Gangbusters? How did Walter Winchell open his show? Who sponsored Buck Rogers in the 25th Century? What was the history of The Fitch Bandwagon? Who was the announcer for The Lone Ranger? --you'll find the answer within these covers.

Many kind words have been written about Radio's Golden Age. However, we remember best a complaint from a reader who said our book deprived him of sleep; every time he looked up something, his attention was arrested by another item—and he invariably read on and on through the night.

So here it is. The result of a total of eight years' research and the cooperation of literally hundreds of people: your guide to radio as it was way back then!

Catch-phrases:

COSTELLO. I'm only thwee and a half years old.

COSTELLO. Hey, Abbott !!!

- COSTELLO. I'm a b-a-a-a-d boy!
- COSTELLO. Now I got it? I don't even know what I'm talking about!

This series was first heard over NBC in 1942. Abbott and Costello's "Who's on First?" routine, used frequently on the program, is a comedy classic.

WHO'S ON FIRST?

ABBOTT. All right, Lou. I'm the manager of a brand-new baseball team.

COSTELLO. Great. I would like to join your team.

ABBOTT. Oh, you would.

- costello. I would like to know some of the guys' names on the team so if I play with them I'll know them . . . or if I meet them on the street or at home I can say "Hello" to them.
- ABBOTT. Oh, sure. But you know baseball players have funny names . . . peculiar names . . . nowadays.

COSTELLO. Like what?

- Aввотт. Well, like Dizzy Dean . . . and Daffy Dean . . .
- COSTELLO. Oh, yeah, a lot of funny names. I know all those guys.
- ABBOTT. Well, let's see now. We have on our team, we have Who's on first . . . What's on second . . . I Don't Know's on third . . .
- COSTELLO. That's what I want to find out, the guys' names.
- ABBOTT. I'm telling you. Who's on first, What's on second, I Don't Know's on third . . .

THE ABBOTT AND COSTELLO PROGRAM

- costello. You're going to be the manager of the baseball team?
- ABBOTT. Yes.
- COSTELLO. YOU know the guys' names?
- ABBOTT. Well, I should.
- COSTELLO. Will you tell me the guys' names on the baseball team?
- ABBOTT. I say Who's on first, What's on second, I Don't Know's on third...
- COSTELLO. You ain't saying nothing to me yet. Go ahead, tell me.
- ABBOTT. I'm telling you! Who's on first, What's on second and I Don't Know is on third.
- COSTELLO. You know the guys' names on the baseball team?
- лввотт. Yeah.
- COSTELLO. Well, go ahead! Who's on first?
- лввотт. Yeah.
- COSTELLO. I mean the guy's name.
- АВВОТТ. Who.
- COSTELLO. The guy playing first.
- аввотт. Who.
- COSTELLO. The guy playing first base. ABBOTT. Who.
- COSTELLO. The guy at first base.
- ABBOTT. Who is on first.
- costello. What are you asking me for? I don't know. I'm asking you who's on first.
- ABBOTT. That's his name.
- COSTELLO. Well, go ahead and tell me.
- АВВОТТ. Who.
- COSTELLO. The guy on first.
- ABBOTT. That's it. That's his name.
- COSTELLO. You know the guy's name on first base?
- ABBOTT. Sure.
- COSTELLO. Well, tell me the guy's name on first base.
- ABBOTT. Who.
- COSTELLO. The guy playing first base.
- 2 ABBOTT MYSTERIES

- ABBOTT. Who is on first, Lou.
- costello. What are you asking me for?
- ABBOTT. Now don't get excited. I'm saying Who . . .
- COSTELLO. I'm asking a simple question. Who's on first?
- лввотт. Yes.
- COSTELLO. Go ahead and tell me.
- ABBOTT. That's it.
- COSTELLO. That's who?
- АВВОТТ. Yes.
- COSTELLO. I'm asking you what's the guy's name on first base?

A. L. Alexander's Good Will Court

Advice

Featuring: A. L. Alexander

Directors: Henry Souvaine, Carl Caruso

Albert L. Alexander started in radio as a cub announcer in 1025. During his early career he broadcast a manin-the-street program, among others, by strapping a portable transmitter to his back and interviewing people on the sidewalk. In 1936 his Good Will Court was broadcast over New York station WMCA and sixty-six stations of NBC. The program dispensed legal and marital advice to anonymous couples who aired their domestic problems. Later that year the New York Supreme Court, on a recommendation of the New York County Lawyers Association, forbade lawyers to give legal advice "in connection with a publicity medium of any kind." That ended the Good Will Court. Alexander then began Alexander's Mediation Board, with a panel of educators, teachers, and social workers instead of lawyers, and this program continued in various forms for some twenty-five years. The motto of Alexander's Mediation Board was "There are two sides to every story," and one of Alexander's personal goals, as reflected in the spirit of his radio program, was to have national and international problems solved by the process of mediation rather than by warfare.

A program of similar nature was The Goodwill Hour, presided over by Mr. Anthony (which see).

Al Pearce and His Gang came to radio in 1933 over NBC Blue. While sponsored by the Ford Motor Company, the show was called Watch the Fords Go By. It was also sponsored by Pepsodent.

Among the memorable characters were "Elmer Blurt," "Arlene Harris," and "Tizzie Lish." "Elmer" was a shy door-to-door salesman who rapped on the door in a distinctive pattern and then said, "Nobody home, I hope, I hope, I hope." "Arlene" carried on non-stop telephone conversations about domestic troubles with her friend "Mazie," who was never heard, and Tizzie Lish gave recipes that were ridiculous. She (or "he" because Tizzie Lish was impersonated by a man) would start out with a hearty "Hello, folksies!" and would always wait until you got a pencil so you could write down the recipe.

ALL THE NEWS

This fifteen-minute Mutual network newscast, heard Monday through Friday nights in the late 1940s, was unique in that it was an attempt to popularize a new format of news reportage. Instead of having one newscaster, the program used two Mutual announcers who introduced themselves and then promptly raced through the news, alternating the reading of items. By reading at top speed but still intelligibly, the two announcers succeeded in easily outdoing other news programs in the quantity of items covered, making the program a high-speed newspaper of the air.

This program was required listening in many American classrooms. It was first heard over CBS in 1930 and dramatized history, current events, and great literature. The original title of the show was School of the Air of the Americas.

A popular segment of the program was "The Hamilton Family," which was on for about three years in the mid-thirties. The American School of the Air was on every weekday afternoon, concentrating on a different subject. "The Hamilton Family" presented the geography lesson with the family touring the world. The cast included Gene Leonard as Father, Betty Garde as Mother, and John Monks, Ruth Russell, Walter Tetley, and Albert Aley as the children. These segments were first directed by Knowles Entriken, later by Kirby Hawkes.

AMOS 'N' ANDY

Gosden and Correll made their debut on radio on January 12, 1926, as the blackface characters Sam 'n' Henry. The program was carried over WGN Chicago. On March 19, 1928, over WMAO Chicago, they introduced Amos 'n' Andy, which went on to become one of the most popular and longest-running programs in radio history. The series ran six nights a week for a while, then five nights, first at 11:00 P.M. and later at 7:00 P.M. The first network broadcast was over NBC on August 19, 1929. During the height of its popularity almost the entire country listened to Amos 'n' Andy. Department stores open in the evening piped in the broadcasts so shoppers wouldn't miss an episode; movie theaters scheduled their features to end just prior to 7:00 P.M. and to start again at 7:15, while they too piped in Amos 'n' Andy; and the program was frequently referred to in the Congressional Record.

"Amos," "Andy," and many of the other characters belonged to the "Mystic Knights of the Sea Lodge," of which "George Stevens" was "The Kingfish." "Amos" and "Andy" ran the "Fresh-Air Taxi Company," with the more stable, married "Amos" doing most of the work while "Andy" chased girls. One of the bestremembered sequences was the time "Andy" almost married "Madame Queen." Each year at Christmas time, "Amos" interpreted the Lord's Prayer for his little daughter Arbadella in a perennially popular sequence.

During the first years of its run Amos 'n' Andy was a fifteen-minute program. It was sponsored by Pepsodent from 1929 to 1937 and by Campbell's Soup from 1937 to 1943. Later the program ran once a week, was thirty minutes long, and was sponsored by Rinso and then Rexall. In the 1950s Amos and Andy performed in a weekly half-hour series called The Amos'n' Andy Music Hall.

Animal Imitators, Baby Criers, Doubles, Mimics, and Screamers

Most of the programs in early radio were "live"--not recorded or taped. Thus, since animals, babies, and often actors couldn't always be relied upon to bark, cry, or scream precisely on cue, a number of people were gainfully employed during radio's Golden Age to create the howls of wolves for Renfrew of the Mounted, to cry for baby Robespierre (Baby Snooks' brother), or to scream for other actresses in the horrific situations on Lights Out.

14 THE ANDREWS SISTERS EIGHT-TO-THE-BAR RANCH

Among the better-known animal imitators were Brad Barker and Donald Bain, who could imitate with their voices anything from a single canary to a pride of lions. Like all actors. Barker and Bain "lived" their parts and often seemed to take on the appearance and manner of the animal they were impersonating. Mary Jane Higby, in her book Tune in Tomorrow, relates that once an actor jokingly told her that he had just seen Brad Barker running down Madison Avenue carrying Donald Bain in his mouth! Other animal imitators were David Dole, Earl Keen (Lassie), Clarence Straight (Animal News Club), Harry Swan, and Henry Bovd. whose clear bob-white whistle was used on the Rinso White commercials.

Several actresses spent a lifetime crying like babies. It was a strange sight indeed to see an otherwise welldressed and distinguished-looking lady walk to the microphone and suddenly gurgle, whine, or bawl like an infant. Some of them used a pillow to cry into to help achieve the desired effect. Among the more familiar "babies" were Sarah Fussell, Madeleine Pierce, and Leone Ledoux.

Imitating other people's voices kept many radio mimics busy too. On such programs as The March of Time the voices of actual celebrities in the news were re-created by imitators. In addition, many variety programs featured the skills of such mimics as The Radio Rogues (Jimmy Hollywood, Ed Bartell, and Henry Taylor), Sheila Barrett, Arthur Boran, and Florence Desmond.

Many actors and actresses "doubled" for other performers in cases where the voices of the originals were either too heavily accented or where someone had deemed their speaking voices "not right for radio." While Dave Rubinoff, for instance, actually played the violin on The Eddie Cantor Show, his speaking voice was done by Lionel Stander or Teddy Bergman. On Shell Chateau, Mary Jane Higby was the speaking voice of singer Nadine Connor, who, someone decided, sounded just fine singing but not right talking. Allyn Joslyn did the same thing for Lanny Ross in the early days of Show Boat.

Finally, while most actresses were adept at reading their lines, when it came to screaming with fear they were often unable to do so or risked the possibility of straining their voices. "Screamers" were employed to fill the gap—actresses who made a specialty of screaming loud and clear—such as seventeen-year-old Nancy Kelly to whom fell the responsibility of screaming on Gangbusters, Front Page Farrell, and The March of Time.

Announcers

The announcing profession has undergone a genuine metamorphosis since the days of radio's heyday. The announcers of that era were considered glamorous figures, often ranking on a level with the programs' stars. They were nationally known and were frequently integrated into the program content as characters who made specific contributions to the plot, not just disembodied voices who "announced" the shows. Good voices and stylish delivery were valued assets, especially in the very early days of relatively poor transmission and reception. Diction and pronunciation were also important, and announcers were expected not only to be authorities on the English language but to be able to pronounce correctly the names of obscure foreign composers and conductors. While the announcers of that era were not often required to depart from a prepared script, the ability to ad-lib was an asset too. The goal of every announcer was perfection. A fluff or mispronunciation would strike terror into the heart of the announcer who committed it and would be the subject of discussion by network executives and alert listeners for days.

An announcer had several functions. He usually introduced the program and its star, often read the commercials, and frequently was called upon to act as straight man for the comedian. In addition, a number of network announcers were used before the actual broadcast to "warm-up" the studio audience. They would walk onstage a few minutes before broadcast time, tell a few jokes, and give instructions on how and when to applaud. Their routine would usually call for them to introduce the cast. Some programs were constructed so that they began with applause or laughter, and it was the warm-up announcer's duty to time such audience reaction so that it would be up full just as the program took to the air. The announcer would go to any lengths to trigger audience laughter -a sure-fire way was to drop his trousers unexpectedly.

Some of the standard gags used during warm-ups included the announcer's instructions to the audience, "When we wave at you, it means to applaud. Don't wave back!": "Okay, folks, we have thirty seconds to go . . . if anybody has to!": "Now be sure to clap real loud so the folks back home in Des Moines can hear you!"; and, after telling people that they should get acquainted with each other, "Now, just turn around and shake hands with the fellow behind you." When they did turn around, of course, the fellow behind was also turned around. Another favorite gag was to tell everyone to hold hands and then ask a man on the end of the aisle to stick his finger in the electric socket.

One of the most elaborate warmups took place on Truth or Consequences. The warm-up actually started some thirty minutes before the program went on the air, and most of that time was taken up with picking the contestants for that night's consequences. At about three minutes before airtime two men from the audience-usually sailors or other servicemen-were brought onstage to participate in a contest. Each was given a suitcase and told that the first one who could get dressed using the contents of the suitcase would win a prize. The suitcases were filled with women's clothes-bras, girdles, slips, etc.--and the contestants' struggles with these garments never failed to bring the audience to peaks of laughter just as the program went on the air with the announcer saying, "Hello, there. We've been waiting for you. It's time to play Truth or Consequences!"

Few announcers of that era were able to escape reciting dreadful clichés, which somehow, despite constant repetition on hundreds of broadcasts, didn't seem as trite as they do today. A common line used as a transition in a narrative would be something akin to "Meanwhile, back at the ranch. . . ." In signing off a program the announcer might be required to say, "Well, the little clock on the studio wall tells us it's time to go . . ."; or, "Keep those cards and letters coming in, folks." Frequently the announcer (or the star of the show) would have to get the show off the air with, "We're a little late, folks, so good night!"

Some of the early announcers were identified only by letters since the station managements usually preferred their announcers to remain anonymous. Thomas Cowan, generally credited with being radio's first announcer, was known only as ACN ("A" for announcer, "C" for Cowan, and "N" for Newark) in the beginning.

Many of the top announcers were identified with a particular program for long periods of time such as Don Wilson (Jack Benny); Ken Carpenter (Edgar Bergen, Kraft Music Hall): limmy Wallington (Eddie Cantor, Burns and Allen); Milton Cross (Metropolitan Opera Broadcasts): Harry Von Zell (Eddie Cantor, Burns and Allen): Bill Hay (who introduced Amos 'n' Andy with "Here they ah"); Pierre André (Little Orbhan Annie): Franklyn MacCormack (Iack Armstrong); George Ansbro (Young Widder Brown); Harlow Wilcox (Fibber McGee and Molly): Fred Foy (The Lone Ranger); Bill Goodwin (Bob Hope, Burns and Allen); André Baruch (Your Hit Parade): Ford Bond (Manhattan Merry-Go-Round); Verne Smith (Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge): Dan Seymour (Aunt Jenny); and Hugh James (The Voice of Firestone). Bill Hay was also famous for his Bible readings, and Franklyn MacCormack for his poetry readings.

Among the other outstanding announcers of radio's Golden Age were Mel Allen, who became one of radio's top sportscasters; Ken Banghart (also a noted newscaster); Martin Block (one of radio's first disc jockeys): Norman Brokenshire ("How do you do?"); Graham McNamee (who became the most prominent of the early sportscasters); Bert Parks. who became one of radio's voungest announcers after serving his apprenticeship as warm-up man and applausecuer on Kate Smith's A & P Bandwagon; David Ross (an outstanding poetry reader); Ed Thorgersen (also a prominent sportscaster); Bill Slater

Arthur Godfrey Time

Variety

Host: Arthur Godfrey

- Vocalists: Patti Clayton, Bill Lawrence, Janette Davis, Lu Ann Simms, Frank Parker; The Jubalaires, vocal quartet; The Mariners, vocal quartet–James Lewis, Martin Karl, Thomas Lockard, Nathaniel Dickerson; The Chordettes, vocal quartet–Jinny Osborn, Dottie Schwartz, Janet Erlet, Carol Hagedorn
- Orchestra: Hank Sylvern, Archie Bleyer
- Announcer: Tony Marvin
- Producer-Director: Will Roland
- Director: Frank Dodge
- Writers: Bob Carman, Chuck Horner, Henry Miles, Andy Rodney, Charles Slocum, Tom Gorman
- Themes: "Seems Like Old Times," "In the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia"

Arthur Godfrey, who was described by Fred Allen as "Peck's Bad Boy of Radio," started his professional radio career in Washington, D.C., on WTOP in the early thirties. Known as "Red" Godfrey, he would chat and sing and play the ukulele, and his casual, relaxed style soon caught on with listeners in the Washington area. One of his sponsors was a furrier, and Godfrey's description of the moth-eaten stuffed polar bear that stood on the sidewalk in front of the store became the subject for running comment—and business for the furrier.

Walter Winchell was partly responsible for bringing Godfrey to New York. He had heard Godfrey while in Washington and urged the executives in New York to bring him to the network headquarters. For many years Godfrey was "the morning man" at the CBS station in New York, then called WABC, and was as casual and unpredictable in that time-slot as he always was anywhere on the dial. Often he would show up late—the program started at 6:00 A.M. -and the on-duty announcer would simply say, "This is the Arthur Godfrey Show. Arthur's not here," and play records until Godfrey arrived. Even then, Godfrey's penchant for using humor that bordered on questionable taste was evident. One of his sponsors, for instance, was Bayer Aspirin and somehow when Godfrey said it we heard three words-bare ass prin. No matter-the audience loved it, and "Did you hear what Godfrey said this morning?" was the daily talk of businessmen, housewives, and even school kids. Godfrey was one of those fascinating personalities to whom you simply had to listen or be out of the mainstream of conversation in New York.

In later years Godfrey left the local morning show and appeared as the star of a daily morning variety hour whose format differed only in that the music was live and the chat was now passed around among the cast members. The latter program was on the CBS network and proved to be one of the longest-running programs in radio history.

Godfrey's immense appeal was based upon his intimate style of delivery. He was just like a friendly neighbor, or someone with whom you were personally acquainted, and his abilities to entertain and sell products were a prime asset of CBS for many years. His description of the funeral procession of President Franklin Roosevelt was moving and sincere and probably affected more people than any other commentator's remarks. The others were, as usual, dispassionate. Godfrey wept.

Many performers came to prominence on his program, including Julius La Rosa (who joined the cast in October 1951, outside the scope of our book), and The McGuire Sisters (Dorothy, Phyllis, and Christine). The on-the-air dismissal of La Rosa and others by Godfrey is well remembered by listeners of that time.

Bachelor's Children was first heard over CBS in 1935 for Old Dutch Cleanser and ran until 1946. It received the Movie-Radio Guide Award of 1941 as "radio's best daytime serial program." It was also selected by the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs as "the most representative script on the way of life of an average American family."

As a typical soap opera, Bachelor's Children was a fifteen-minute program broadcast five days a week. It originated in Chicago. Rehearsal was at 7:30 A.M., with the first show at 8:45. This broadcast was for the East and Midwest. Since there was no audio tape in those days, a "repeat for the West Coast" was broadcast at 2:30 P.M. Olan Soule, who played the part of "Sam Ryder," once suffered the embarrassment of missing a repeat performance when his watch stopped!

Behind the Story was a fifteen-minute, five-times-a-week, early evening program heard over Mutual from 1949 to 1957. For a time it was broadcast on the full Mutual network; later it ran on the Don Lee division of Mutual, which covered the Pacific and Mountain time zones. The series was originally written in the Schwimmer & Scott offices in Chicago. The subsequent West Coast shows gave many successful television and motionpicture writers their first commercial experience. All the stories were completely factual and well researched but concerned little-known incidents. The programs were presented as yarns, interspersed with dialogue scenes or direct quotes, with Marvin Miller doing all the characters, as many as thirteen in one show.

- Announcers: Harlow Wilcox, Bob Brown, Harry Von Zell
- Writers: Albert G. Miller, Parke Levy, Gary Stevens, Alan Lipscott

Closing:

Bernie's closing theme was a familiar sound on radio. Since he couldn't sing well, he closed with this monologue spoken over the music:

- And now the time has come to lend an ear to--
- Au revoir. Pleasant dre-ams.
- Think of us . . . when requesting your themes.
- Until the next time when . . .
- Possibly you may all tune in again.
- Keep the Old Maestro always . . . in your schemes.
- Yowsah, yowsah, yowsah.
- Au Revoir . . .
- This is Ben Bernie, ladies and gentlemen,

And all the lads

- Wishing you a bit of pleasant dre-ams.
- May good luck . . . and happiness, Success, good health, attend your schemes.
- And don't forget-

Should you ever send in your request-a

Why, we'll sho' try to do our best-a Yowsah.

Au revoir, a fond cheerio,

a bit of a tweet-tweet, God bless you . . . and Pleasant dre-ams!

Ben Bernie, "The Old Maestro," conducted his orchestra's renditions of "sweet" music on various band remote broadcasts and on his own program during the 1930s. In addition, he's remembered for his "friendly feud" with Walter Winchell-the two of them exchanging humorous insults on their respective programs.

Dick Stabile later became a wellknown orchestra leader. Colonel Henry Prager's greatest fame came from his singing of "The King's 'Orses."

BEULAH (sings):

(Chuckles)

ANNOUNCER. Yes, sir, it's . . . Beulah! (Applause)

The character of Beulah, a Negro maid, was first portrayed by Marlin Hurt, a white man, on Fibber McGee and Molly. One of the peculiarities of radio was that it was possible for such a situation to occur-a white man playing a Negro woman-with no one the wiser among the home audience. As a matter of fact, great use was made of the surprise element on Fibber McGee and Molly since Hurt stood quietly with his back to the mike as Beulah's entrance neared and then suddenly on cue whirled around and screamed out her opening line. The studio audience never failed to register surprise, laughter, and applause.

Later, as a "spin-off," Beulah became the central character on the Beulah show as a half-hour, once-aweek CBS program sponsored by Tums. As the above script excerpt indicates, it was also known as The Marlin Hurt and Beulah Show. Following Hurt's death in 1947, the program was revived on ABC, also in a half-hour, once-a-week format. Finally, it moved to CBS as a fifteenminute, three-times-a-week, early evening broadcast with the startling innovation of letting an actual Negro woman play Beulah. Bob Corley was twenty-two years old when he took over the Beulah role. He later became a television director in his hometown of Atlanta, Georgia. He claimed that "age and hormones" eventually prevented him from being able to do the Beulah voice.

During the era of the big bands-in the 1930s and 1940s-most bands spent a good portion of their year playing one-nighters in ballrooms from coast to coast. The networks had permanent broadcasting installations in the ballrooms of major cities and could easily set up temporary lines in small clubs in smaller cities. Since these originations were from outside the studios the broadcasts came to be known as "band remotes," It was not unusual, late on a Saturday night, to be able to tune in to half-a-dozen band remotes from as many locations. Typically, a local announcer would be sent out to introduce the program, the bandleader, and the musical numbers, and you might hear:

- ANNOUNCER. From the beautiful Westwood Room of the fabulous Park Sheridan Hotel in downtown metropolitan Buffalo, New York, it's the danceable rhythms of Claude Hudson and His Twentyone Gentlemen of Swing!
- MUSIC. Band theme up full, then under . . .
- ANNOUNCER. Yes, once again the Mutual Broadcasting System is proud to bring you a full half-hour of music for your listening and dancing pleasure. The happy crowd here is ready for your first number, Claude. What'll it be?
- CLAUDE. Well, Bill, here's the lovely Ginny Parsons to ask the musical question, "Do You Remember Me?"

MUSIC. "Do You Remember Me?"

Not all the bands were as obscure as our mythical Claude Hudson. Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman ("The King of Swing"), Gene Krupa, Harry James, the Dorsey Brothers (Tommy and Jimmy)—all the major musical groups of the time were heard frequently from remote locations such as the Trianon and Aragon ballrooms in Chicago, the Glen Island Casino in New Rochelle, New York, and the Mocambo in Hollywood.

Among the other orchestras were Blue Barron (Harry Freedlin), Charlie Barnet, Nat Brandwynne, Henry Busse, Cab Calloway, Carmen Cavallaro ("The Poet of the Piano"), Russ Columbo, Bob Crosby ("Bob Crosby's Bobcats"), Xavier Cugat, D'Artega, Meyer Davis, Eddie Duchin, Duke Ellington, Shep Fields ("Rippling Rhythm"), Ted Fiorito, Larry Funk ("The Band of a Thousand Melodies"), Jan Garber ("The Idol of the Airlanes"), Glen Gray ("The Casa Loma Orchestra"), Johnny Green, Lennie Hayton, Richard Himber ("The Studebaker Champions"), Ina Ray Hutton (leader of an all-girl band), Isham Jones, Dick Jurgens, Hal Kemp, Wayne King ("The Waltz King"), Ted Lewis ("Is everybody happy?"), Guy Lombardo* ("The Royal Canadians-with the sweetest music this side of Heaven"), Vincent Lopez** ("Hello, everybody. Lopez speaking."), Jimmy Lunceford, Abe Lyman, Enric Madriguera, Chico Marx, Barry McKin-

* Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians became well known for their traditional radio appearances on New Year's Eve. Guy was the most famous member of the musical Lombardo family. Musicians Victor, Carmen, and Lebert often appeared with him, as did their sister, vocalist Rose Marie Lombardo.

JON ARTHUR. Hi . . . hey . . . hello there!

Big Jon and Sparkie originated in Cincinnati in 1948 and ran on ABC from 1950 to 1958. It was on the network for an hour a day Monday through Friday. A similar show called No School Today was heard on Saturday mornings for two hours. Jon Arthur thereby had one of the largest blocks of radio network time ever assigned to one performer-seven hours per week. The daily program was eventually reduced to a fifteen-minute show entitled The Further Adventures of Big Jon and Sparkie.

BIG JON AND SPARKIE 35

This was one of radio's last big variety programs. As evidenced by the above opening from the December 17, 1950, NBC broadcast from Hollywood, the guest list was always spectacular. Among the best-remembered portions of the show were Miss Bankhead's predilection for calling everyone "dahling," Meredith Willson's acknowledgment of her introduction with "Thank you, Miss Bankhead, sir," and Miss Bankhead's closing, when she sang in her husky voice "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You."

Bob and Ray

Comedy

Bob and Ray started doing comedy together when they were both staff announcers on local radio in Boston. Their program, Matinee with Bob and Ray, preceded the Red Sox baseball games, and whenever the game was rained out Bob and Ray stayed on the air all afternoon. Eventually they were brought to network radio with a Saturday-night program on NBC, and subsequently they appeared from time to time on all the networks at various hours. Bob and Ray played all the parts of the regular cast characters as well as all the characters in their dramas. Among the fairly regular features were:

"Wally Ballou" on remote location interviewing various people. Wally always started his reports with his mike turned off so that he was first heard in the middle of a word. He announced himself as "Wally Ballou, winner of over seven international diction awards," or, "Radio's highly regarded Wally Ballou." His microphone was usually turned off before he was quite through. Occasionally "Wally" would refer to his family, his wife "Hulla Ballou" and his son "Little Boy Ballou." He denied being related to either the "Beale Street Ballous" or the "Wang Wang Ballous."

"Mary McGoon's" recipes. At Thanksgiving, "Mary" had a recipe for "Mock Turkey" which was made of mashed potatoes shaped into the form of a turkey with hot dogs for legs and wings.

"Steve Bosco," sportscaster, calling in with what was supposed to be a sports story. He always seemed to be a little bit drunk and was perpetually worried about getting the connection cut off. He usually asked for some money to get himself out of some financial scrape and then signed off with, "This is Steve Bosco rounding third and being thrown out at home."

"Biff Burns," the other sportscaster. He usually displayed an egotistical ignorance of his subject and signed off with, "This is Biff Burns saying, until next time, this is Biff Burns saying good-by."

"Mary Backstayge, Noble Wife"a take-off on soap operas. It opened with announcer "Word Carr" saying, "And now, for the many fans who wait for her on the radio, we present the interesting story 'Mary Backstayge, Noble Wife,' the story of a girl from a deserted mining town out West who came to New York to become the wife of handsome Harry Backstayge, Broadway star, and what it means to be the wife of the idol of a million other women."

"Tex Blaisdell," Bob and Ray's cowboy country and Western entertainer, who traveled and performed with the "Smokey Valley Boys." "Romeo" was the comic rustic with the "Smokey Valley Boys." Tex did rope tricks on the radio and perpetually plugged his upcoming appearances at county fairs and supermarket openings.

"One Feller's Family."-a take-off on "One Man's Family." Bob played "Father Butcher" and mumbled a lot to himself, ending with "Fanny, Fanny, Fanny." Ray played "Mother Butcher" and usually wound up exasperatedly telling Father Butcher to "shut up and stop mumbling, you senile old man." It always ended with the announcer saying, "One Feller's Family' is written and directed by T. Wilson Messy. This has been a Messy Production."

"Lawrence Fechtenberger, Interstellar Officer Candidate"--a take-off on adventure serials--which was brought to you "by chocolate cookies with white stuff in between." Ray played "Lawrence," and Bob was his side-kick, "Mugg Mellish," always sneering.

"Widen Your Horizons"—a program of self-help in which experts would explain how to put salt in salt shakers, how to look up names in the telephone directory, etc.—brought to you by the "Croftweiler Industrial Cartel, makers of all kinds of things out of all kinds of stuff."

"Dean Archer Armstead," Bob and Ray's agricultural expert from the "Lackawanna, New York, Field Station." His theme was a scratchy record of a piano version of "Old Mac-Donald."

"Natalie Attired," Bob and Ray's "Song Sayer." Played by Ray in his "Mary McGoon" voice, "Natalie" would "say" songs. She was accompanied by her drummer, "Eddie" (Bob), and would merely speak the words of popular songs to Eddie's drum accompaniment.

"The Bob and Ray Gourmet Club." Here "Claude" and "Clyde" would describe the colorful ceremony attending the presentation and unwrapping of some celebrity's sandwich, which would subsequently be placed on a velvet cushion in a place of honor where the guests of "The Gourmet Club" could dance by and look at it.

Bob and Ray signed off each broadcast with:

RAY. Write if you get work . . .

BOB. . . . And hang by your thumbs. (In their very early days, Ray spoke both lines and Bob added, "And remember, it's milder . . . much milder.")

- Sound Effects: Parker Cornell, Walter Snow

Theme: "Thanks for the Memory"

Catch-phrases:

HOPE. Who's Yehoodi? COLONNA. Greetings, Gate!

Bob Hope entered radio, after a successful career in vaudeville and on Broadway, as a guest on The Rudy Vallee Show, followed by brief appearances on such short-lived programs as The Bromo-Seltzer Intimate Hour, The Atlantic Oil Program, and The Woodbury Soap Hour. Then came the long-running, extremely popular program sponsored by Pepsodent, which was first heard over NBC Blue in 1934. Many wellremembered sequences developed on this Tuesday night show on NBC, among them Colonna's phone calls to Hope:

- COLONNA. Hello, Hope? This is Colonna.
- HOPE. Professor! Where are you?
- COLONNA. I'm here in England building a bridge across the Atlantic.
- HOPE. Nonsense, Professor. You can't build a bridge across the Atlantic.
- COLONNA. I can't??? [Pause] Okay, boys. Tear it down!

"Vera Vague" was a man-chasing character, as were "Brenda" and "Cobina," vague parodies of the then prominent real-life society girls Brenda Frazier and Cobina Wright, Jr.

In one sketch Jack Kirkwood appeared as a street-corner Santa Claus with a little kettle and admonished Hope to "Put something in the pot, boy," which became an oft-repeated catch-phrase.

Judy Garland was virtually a permanent cast member for over a year although she was usually accorded "guest-star" billing. In addition, Hope had as frequent guests many Hollywood stars, including Madeleine Carroll, Mickey Rooney, William Powell, Paulette Goddard, Pat O'Brien, Olivia de Havilland, Dorothy Lamour, Constance Bennett, and his "feuding partner" Bing

THE BOB HOPE SHOW 45

Crosby. At one point Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce appeared as "Sherlock Holmes" and "Doctor Watson" to help Hope find his mythical Yehoodi. They finally concluded that Yehoodi was the little man who pushes up the next piece of Kleenexl

Frequently there were rumors that Hope had been cut off the air for allegedly using racy material. While he often skirted the bounds of what was then acceptable, the stories of his being censored on the air are apocryphal.

During the years of World War II, Hope began what was to turn out to be a life-long career of entertaining servicemen at various United States and overseas bases. His tireless efforts were a major factor in boosting American morale, and the laughs, whistles, and applause were not only indicative of the appreciation of the servicemen but also provided a lift for the home front. Hope usually started each of these broadcasts with something like "This is Bob, Camp Pendleton, Hope saying that if you want to help out our boys in blue, send them some socks . . . and some kisses, tool" (Whistles, cheers, and applause.) He also made frequent use of the local names and customs wherever he was, again to much appreciation by the audience. (See also The Woodbury Soap Hour.)

SOUND. Thunder roll on drum

ANNOUNCER. (With echo effect). Buck Rogers in the Twenty-fifth Century!

This program was based on the popular comic strip created in 1929. The idea for the strip was conceived by syndicator John F. Dille, who selected Dick Calkins as the first artist and Phil Nowlan as the first author. Much that occurred on the show from 1931 to 1939 seemed fanciful at the time but eventually became plausible and even commonplace. "Dr. Huer" invented such things as the psychic restriction ray, the teleradioscope, the atomic disintegrator, the molecular expansor and contractor beams, radio transmission of power, force rays, ultrasonic death rays, robot rocket ships with "radio-vision" transmitters.

Listeners could become "Solar Scouts" by responding to premium offers, and they could receive such items as "planetary maps" and sketches of the principal characters by sending in "two inches of the strip of tin that comes off a can of Cocomalt when you open it."

- Directors: Ralph Levy, Al Kaye, Ed Gardner

Writers: Paul Henning, Keith Fowler, Harmon J. Alexander, Henry Garson, Aaron J. Ruben, Helen Gould Harvey, Hal Block, John P. Medbury

Theme: "Love Nest"

George Burns and Gracie Allen were among the many vaudevillians who attained great success in radio. George was essentially the straight man for Gracie's addled responses. Often, when their time was up or his patience exhausted, George would end their comedy routines with "Say good night, Gracie," which Gracie would cheerfully do. (See also The Robert Burns Panatela Program.)

One of the best-remembered characters on the program was "The Happy Postman," played by Mel Blanc, who was the antithesis of his description. Speaking in a voice just on the verge of tears, he spoke of cheerful things in a most depressing tone.

Catch-phrases:

BUSTER BROWN. I'm Buster Brown and I live in a shoe

This is my dog Tige, and he lives there too.

SMILIN' ED. Plunk your magic twanger, Froggie!

The Buster Brown Gang was also known as The Buster Brown Show and The Smilin' Ed McConnell Show. It was a revival of an earlier show called simply Buster Brown that had first appeared on radio over CBS in 1929. The sponsor of both programs was Buster Brown Shoes, which had acquired the use of the Buster Brown character from the comic strip by R. F. Outcault.

The Buster Brown Gang, featuring singer Ed McConnell, turned up on NBC in 1943 and was broadcast from Hollywood on Saturdays from 11:30 A.M. to 12:00 noon before an audience of hundreds of youngsters. Mc-Connell played the piano, sang simple songs, and offered comedy sketches featuring such characters as "Froggie the Gremlin" and "Squeakie the Mouse." He then narrated a story that usually dealt with one of four heroes: "Baba"-an Arabian boy with a horse; "Ghangi"-a Hindu lad with an elephant named Teelah; "Little Fox"-an American Indian boy; and "Kulah," who had a "Jug-Genie." The four young heroes were played variously by Bobby Ellis, Tommy Cook, Tommy Bernard, Billy Roy, Jimmy Ogg, and Peter Rankin. Lou Merrill was the "Jug-Genie."

Camel Caravan

Variety

This title was given to a number of programs sponsored by Camel cigarettes. Some were quiz shows (The Bob Hawk Show) and others were variety programs. The Camel Comedy Caravan in 1943, for instance, featured Freddie Rich's Orchestra, Connie Haines, Herb Shriner, and M.C. Jack Carson.

Probably the best remembered was a Camel Comedy Caravan series that was on the air in 1943. With the unlikely teaming of Jimmy Durante ("the Nose") and Garry Moore ("the Haircut"), a very successful comedy-variety program was born. This series featured many of the performers who appeared on The Jimmy Durante Show—announcer Howard Petrie, vocalist Georgia Gibbs, and Roy Bargy's Orchestra-but was really popular because of the chemistry between Durante and Moore, the former a knock-about word-mangling comedian and the latter a crew-cut literate humorist. Durante didn't understand Moore and nobody understood Durante!

One of the funniest weekly segments was Moore describing to Durante one of his various previous occupations, and Durante repeating the material in his garbled version. For instance, Moore would zip through, at top speed and without a mistake, "I used to work in Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, in the Water Works, as a reasonably reliable referee for the refrigerator repair wreckers, recluses, and renegade rum runners, Jimmy."

And, after a long breath, Durante would proceed to plow straight through to a strangled finish—hitting about every third word vaguely correctly. Moore's ability was all the more remarkable since as a youth he had had to overcome a rather bad case of stuttering.

Other features of the Durante-Moore Camel Caravan were the standard opening in which Jimmy called in to Moore from some remote location from which he couldn't seem to extricate himself; a Garry Moore "song"-Garry would start singing a quiet ballad, stop to tell a story of a tragic love affair that ended in violence, then pick up softly the last few bars of the ballad; and Durante's standards, such as "Inka-Dinka-Doo" and "You Gotta Start Off Each Day with a Song."

Durante and Moore were also sponsored for a time by Rexall. (See

Campbell Playhouse

Drama

This drama series featured radio adaptations of famous books. Orson Welles supervised the adaptations, which included: A Farewell to Arms by Ernest Hemingway, starring Katharine Hepburn; The Glass Key by Dashiell Hammett; Arrowsmith by Sinclair Lewis; State Fair by Philip Duffield Stong, starring "Amos 'n' Andy" (played by Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll) and Burgess Meredith.

This program was sponsored by Campbell's Soup and was first heard over CBS in 1939.

- 56 CAMPBELL PLAYHOUSE

STARK. Harry Hershfield . . .

- HERSHFIELD. Howdy!
- STARK. Joe Laurie, Jr. . .
- LAURIE. Hel-lo!
- STARK. And now, here's your master of ceremonies for Can You Top This?, Ward Wilson.
- WILSON. Thank you, Charles Stark. Can You Top This? is unrehearsed and spontaneous, and our top rule is "keep 'em laughing." Anyone can send in a joke, and if your joke is told by our storytelling genius, Peter Donald, you get ten dollars. Each of the three wits tries to top it with another joke on the same subject. Each time they fail to top you, you get five dollars . . . so you have a chance to win as much as twenty-five dollars. But regardless of whether you win ten or twenty-five dollars, you will receive a recording of Peter Donald telling your story on the air. Laughs are registered on the Can You Top This? Laugh-Meter in full view of our studio audience, and, in all cases, the decision of our judges is final.

Closing:

WILSON. And thus ends another laugh session of Can You Top This?, originated by Senator Ford. Join us again next week . . . same time, same gang, other jokes, some new, some old. Until then, we remain yours for bigger and better laughs . . .

FORD. Senator Ford . . .

- HERSHFIELD. Harry Hershfield . . .
- LAURIE. JOE LAURIE, Jr. . . .

DONALD. Peter Donald...

WILSON. Ward Wilson . . .

STARK. And Charles Stark. This is the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Can You Top This? was first heard over Mutual in 1940. The "Laugh-Meter" (also known as "the Colgate Laugh-Meter") was simply a volumemeasuring meter connected to the audience microphone.

Senator Ford used "Ditsy Bomwortle" and "Mrs. Fafoofnick" as the central characters of his stories. Ford's actual name was Edward M. Ford. He became "Senator" in his early twenties when he was mistakenly introduced as "Senator Ford" at a club dinner.

- Writers: Jay Sommers, Jack Mc-Carthy

The Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street, which made its debut over NBC Blue on February 11, 1940, featured swing music with a tongue-in-cheek commentary in the long-hair style. It was dedicated to "The Three B's-Barrelhouse, Boogie-Woogie, and the Blues." There were some fourteen musicians who doubled between such groups as Henry "Hot-Lips" Levine's Dixieland Octet ("the Barefoot Philharmonic") and Paul LaValle's Double Woodwind Quintet ("The Woodwindy Ten"). Henry Levine was also known as "The Gabriel of the Gowanus."

Among the guests who appeared on the program were the duo-piano team of Henry Brant and Richard Baldwin, who played the first swing treatment of Haydn's "Surprise Symphony"; and harpsichordist Sylvia Marlowe, who played Mozart's "Turkish March," retitled "Old Man Mozart on the Mooch." ### The Chase and Sanborn Hour

Comedy-Variety

This program started as an all-music show in 1928. Chase and Sanborn hired Maurice Chevalier at the unheard-of price of $5000 a week to star on the show. Later Eddie Cantor took over the broadcast, and it became the top-rated radio program in the country for several years. Abbott K. Spencer was the director. The head writer was David Freedman with help from Bob Colwell, Phil Rapp, Everett Freeman. Carroll Carroll, Sam Moore, and many others. It was produced by the J. Walter Thompson Company. When Cantor took time off in the summer, the show went on with other comedy stars, such as Jimmy Durante and Bert Lahr. It was finally taken over by Edgar Bergen. (See also The Eddie Cantor Show; The Edgar Bergen and Charlie Mc-Carthy Show.)

Cheerio

Talk

Featuring: "Cheerio"

Talk shows were extremely popular in the early days of radio. Among the most listened-to personalities of the late 1920s and early 1930s was a talkshow host who identified himself only as "Cheerio." His name was actually Charles K. Field. The program was first heard over NBC in 1927, originally six times a week at 8:30 a.m.

The Chesterfield Supper Club

Music

- Vocalists: Perry Como, Mary Ashworth, Don Cornell, Dick Edwards, Laura Leslie, Bill Lawrence, Kay Starr, Jo Stafford, Peggy Lee, Frankie Laine, The Fontane Sisters (Geri, Marge, and Bea), The Satisfiers (Art Lambert, Helen Carroll, Bob Lange, Kevin Gavin), The Pied Pipers, Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians
- Orchestras: Ted Steele, Sammy Kaye, Mitchell Ayres, Glenn Miller, Lloyd Schaefer, Paul Weston, Dave Barbour

- Announcers: Paul Douglas, Martin Block, Tom Reddy
- Producers: Bob Moss, Eldridge Packham
- Directors: Ward Byron, Eldridge Packham
- Writers: Frank Moore, Dave Harmon, Mike Dutton, Bob Weiskopf Sound Effects: Sam Hubbard
- Themes: "A Cigarette, Sweet Music and You," "Smoke Dreams"

One of the non-music segments of the program was the reading of the baseball scores. A high note was sounded by the orchestra following the score of the winning team, and a low, dismal note was played after the loser's score. If the victorious team scored an exceptional number of runs, the note was played with extra enthusiasm.

- Creator: William A. Bacher
- Directors: Fritz Blocki, Joe Ainley, Kenneth W. MacGregor, Jack La-Frandre
- Choral Director: Bob Trendler
- Assistant Choral Director: Ray Charles

This long-running program was first heard over Mutual in 1940 and originated in the studios of WGN Chicago, which was owned and operated by the Chicago Tribune. In fact, the Tribune's slogan, "World's Greatest Newspaper," provided the call letters For WGN. The Chicago Theatre of the Air was a tremendously popular "live" program, and every Saturday night Chicagoans and tourists lined up for blocks to get in. It was eventually broadcast from the huge Shrine Auditorium in Chicago.

As the feature attraction, a musical comedy or "familiar" opera (Carmen, Faust) was performed with Marion Claire as the leading lady supported by Robert Merrill, Richard Tucker, Igor Gorin, etc. A dramatic cast doubled for the singers in the speaking parts.

One of the highlights of the weekly program was a talk by the publisher of the Tribune, Colonel Robert Mc-Cormick, who considered himself one of the world's leading authorities on the Civil War. Between the acts he gave a five-minute (or longer) lecture, frequently based on a celebrated military incident.

Although The Circle ran only a few months, it became the most talked about failure in all radio. The concept was the forerunner of the discussion-panel-entertainment shows which many years later became popular on late-night television. The M.C. duties rotated among the all-star cast. They talked about current events, literature, drama; they acted, played music, told jokes. In short, it was way ahead of its day.

BILL STERN. Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is Bill Stern bringing you the 225th edition of the Colgate shave-cream Sports Newsreel . . . featuring strange and fantastic stories . . . some legend, some hearsay . . . but all so interesting we'd like to pass them along to you!

Closing:

BILL STERN. And that's our three-o mark for tonight!

This was one of the most successful and most listened to shows in radio history. Sportscaster Bill Stern dramatized events in the lives of sports heroes and also of people who were somehow related to sports. The stories were often capped by Stern's comments-"Portrait of an athlete!" or "Portrait of a man!"

The Sports Newsreel was on the air from September 1939 to June 1951 once a week and earned consistently high ratings. Stern was also famous for his coverage of countless sports events, including football bowl games, National Football League championships, tennis, golf, basketball. horse-racing, crew racing. hockey, track and field (including the 1936 Berlin Olympics and the 1948 London Olympics), fishing, bowling, skiing, rodeo, and boxing (including most of Joe Louis's title fights). He covered baseball, of course, though he never broadcast a World Series. (See also Sportscasters.)

The Columbia Workshop

Drama

The Columbia Workshop, as its name implies, was a workshop for unknowns and for newcomers to radio. Many prominent actors were involved, as well as up-and-coming young performers, writers, directors, and producers. Among the writers whose works were featured were William Saroyan, Archibald MacLeish ("Fall of the City"), Lord Dunsany ("The Use of Man"), Irving Reis ("Meridian 7-1212"-Reis was also a founder of the Workshop), Wilbur Daniel Steele ("A Drink of Water"), Ambrose Bierce, Dorothy Parker ("Apartment to Let"), and Norman Corwin. Among the production personnel were Orson Welles, William N. Robson, Max Wylie, Douglas Coulter, and Davidson Taylor. The series made its debut over CBS in 1036.

Comedy and Comedians

Radio developed a unique form of comedy. In other entertainment forms the basis for most of the comedy effects were visual—a funny face, a physical move, a humorous setting. Radio comedy, however, was totally reliant upon words and mental pictures supplied by the listener's imagination. The listener, then, was not just a passive receptor but actually took an active role in developing the comedy.

Take, for instance, Fibber McGee's closet. In reality the sound-effects men simply dropped and rattled a lot of hardware and tin pans and then topped this off with a little tinkly bell. In the mind of the listener, however, Fibber actually opened the door of the hall closet at 79 Wistful Vista, and a ton of personal itemstennis rackets, golf clubs, cardboard cartons, raccoon coats, bicycles, etc. --cascaded out of the closet.

Consider, too, the fact that the character of Beulah, a Negro maid, was played originally by a white man. And how odd that ventriloquism, which depends upon a visual illusion for its basic effect, became a mainstay of several successful programs. The audience not only accepted these unconventional circumstances but through the use of "the theater of the mind" actually contributed to the final comedic result.

There were several types of comedians who became popular-ventriloquists, comedy actors, dialecticians, monologuists-and a majority of these came to radio from vaudeville. They developed lasting characters and styles, and even though many of them were already top vaudeville stars they found their greatest fame in radio. Among these were Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Burns and Allen, and Phil Baker. Benny, in particular, developed the "Jack Benny character" to such a degree that today, many years after radio, it is still instantly identifiable even to people who never heard him on radio.

Because of the necessity of entertaining an audience week after week, many comedy stars surrounded themselves with a stock company of superb supporting players, most of whom got the good comedy lines, which used the star as the butt of the jokes. This was a variation of the "stooge" technique common in vaudeville. Phil Baker had Beetle and Bottle; Phil Harris had Frankie Remley; Judy Canova had Pedro; Eddie Cantor had The Mad Russian; and Jack Benny had Rochester, Don Wilson, Mary, Dennis, and all the rest. In this way the star could go on forever while the stooges came and went.

Radio would not, on the surface, seem to be a particularly satisfactory medium for ventriloquists. After all, anyone who could alter his voice could simply do a program in a studio without using dummies and bill himself as a ventriloquist. Who would know whether he could actually throw his voice? Still, a number of ventriloquists achieved popularity on radio, with home audiences apparently trusting that the performers actually were skilled at their craft.

The most successful, however, was not necessarily the most skilled. Edgar Bergen was clearly the top-ranked ventriloquist of radio's Golden Age, but his dummy, "Charlie McCarthy," often kidded him about the fact that Bergen's lips moved perceptibly. Bergen's secret was in the excellence of the character development of his dummies-"Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," and "Effie Klinker"-and in the high quality of the scripts. Ranking just behind Bergen was Tommy Riggs, whose alter ego, "Betty Lou," was a major attraction. Other ventriloquists who appeared frequently on radio were Kay Carrol, with her dummy "Tommy"; Shirley Dinsdale with "Judy Splinters"; and Paul Winchell with "Jerry Mahoney."

Sometimes grouped with comedians, but really quite different, were the unique entertainers properly classified as humorists. Fred Allen certainly falls into this class although he is generally referred to as a comedian. Among other humorists who appeared from time to time were Robert Benchley, Irvin S. Cobb, Will Rogers, Herb Shriner, and Cal Tinney.

A number of outstanding comedians turned up as guests on different programs or were featured on programs that had brief runs-such performers as Morey Amsterdam; Joe E. Brown; Joe Cook; Stuart Erwin; Joe Frisco, the stuttering comedian: Harry Gibson, known as "Harry The Hipster"; George Givot, "the Greek Ambassador of Good Will": Rube Goldberg, a newspaper cartoonist known for his amusing inventions; Jack Haley; Sir Harry Lauder, a Scottish entertainer; dialectician Lou Holtz; Tony Labriola, playing a character named Oswald whose catch-phrase was "Ooooh, yeah!"; Bert Lahr; Pinky Lee, known for his lisping speech; Lew Lehr ("Monkeys is duh cwaziest peepul!"), known as "Dribblepuss"; Jerry Lester; Robert Q. Lewis, who was a frequent substitute host on such programs as Arthur Godfrey Time; Jack Oakie; Georgie Price; Slapsie Maxey Rosenbloom, a former boxer; Phil Silvers; Ned Sparks, who played a sourpuss character; and dialectician Georgie Stone.

Among the top comediennes were Belle Baker, Gracie Fields, Beatrice Lillie, and Martha Raye, all of whom were singers as well.

Then, too, there were the comedy teams-Fishface and Figgsbottle (Elmore Vincent played Senator Frankenstein Fishface while Don Johnson was Professor Figgsbottle); Gaxton and Moore (Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore); blackface comics Honey Boy and Sassafras (Honey Boy was George Fields and Sassafras was Johnnie Welsh); Howard and Shelton (Tom Howard and George Shelton); Olsen and Johnson (Ole Olsen and Chick Johnson); Pick and Pat (Pick Malone and Pat Padgett); Potash and Perlmutter (Joe Greenwald played Abe Potash and Lew Welch played "Mawruss" Perlmutter): Sam 'n' Henry (played by Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll in the days before Amos 'n' Andy); Tony and Gus (Tony, the Italian, was played by Mario Chamlee and George Frame Brown played the part of Gus the Swede); The Two Black Crows (blackface comics played by the team of Moran and Mack-George Moran and Charlie Mack); Van and Schenck (Gus Van and Joe Schenck); Weber and Fields (Joe Weber and Lew Fields); Wheeler and Ladd (Bert Wheeler and Hank Ladd): and Wheeler and Woolsey (the same Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsev).

In addition, there were the manand-woman teams of Block and Sully (Jesse Block and Eve Sully); Carol Dee and Marty Kay; and the female duo of Nan and Maude (Nan Rae and Maude Davis, who were actually sisters Nan and Maude Clark).

Finally, there were three people in particular who we feel made a major contribution to comedy Americana during the heyday of radio. One was Fred Allen, whose wit and erudition crossed all lines to appeal equally to truck drivers and college professors. Another was writer Don Quinn, the genius behind Fibber McGee and Molly, who brought to all America a lasting friendship with a dozen or so characters in comic conflict who reflected the way we, too, would act in similar situations. The third was writer Paul Rhymer, whose bizarre and hilarious Vic and Sade ambled through many years of Midwestern life surrounded by "just folks," who complicated one another's lives by tracking mud through the livingroom, going to washrag sales, and sending one another postcards from "exotic places" a few miles away. One way of judging the depth of an artist's work is to see if it stands the test of time. Any Fred Allen, Fibber McGee. or Vic and Sade broadcast preserved on tape is as hilarious today as it was then.

This is not to say that all of radio comedy was great. Many of the situation comedies, such as Blondie and The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, were as bland and time-filling as their counterparts on television. Nor was all radio comedy timeless. Most of Bob Hope's monologues were topical and therefore relatively meaningless today.

Much of the credit for the success of the comedians has to go to the writers who devised the characters, developed them, and sustained them through years of exposure. No matter how brilliant the performer, he could not have been so successful without a good script. We've already mentioned Paul Rhymer and Don Quinn as outstanding in their field, but probably the best comedy came, as now, from the combination writerperformer-Goodman Ace, Fred Allen, Ed "Archie" Gardner, Bob and Ray, Henry Morgan, and the like.

Comic Strips to Radio

Many popular comic strips served as the basis for successful radio programs with the leading characters transferred directly to the air. Often the same continuity was employed for the radio program's plot lines. Among them were Blondie: Bringing Up Father: Buck Rogers in the 25th Century: Buster Brown: Dick Tracy; Don Winslow of the Navy; Flash Gordon: Gasoline Alley: The Gumps; Harold Teen: Joe Palooka; Jungle Jim; Li'l Abner; Little Orphan Annie: Major Hoople: Mandrake the Magician: Mark Trail; Mr. and Mrs.; The Nebbs: Popeye the Sailor; Red Ryder; Reg'lar Fellers: The Sad Sack: Skippy: Smilin' Jack; Superman; Terry and the Pirates: Tillie the Toiler; and The Timid Soul.

Commercials

In the very early days of radio there were no commercials since most programs were presented as "a public service." But then the people who were supplying broadcast materialmusic publishers, artists, etc.-began to ease in low-key references to their companies or product. In bits and pieces advertising came to radio in such diverse forms as a lecture on the history of beards that ended with a few sentences about the joys of shaving with a safety razor (curiously enough invented by a man named Gillette), and with the introduction of orchestras like the A & P Gypsies and the Clicquot Club Eskimos.

74 COMIC STRIPS TO RADIO

Probably the first fully sponsored program was The Eveready Hour, which made its debut in 1923.

As radio advertising grew and grew, sponsors became more interested in moving goods.

Much early advertising was "institutional"-designed to sell a company name rather than a specific product. This practice carried over through the Golden Age with such sponsors as Bell Telephone, United States Steel, Hallmark, Texaco, and Firestone.

The point of a commercial was to sell a specific product:

"Rush right down to your neighborhood drugstore and ask for . . ." "Get some . . . TODAY!"

"Don't forget to put it on your shopping list."

Through constant repetition-"L.S./M.F.T., L.S./M.F.T.,* L.S./ M.F.T."-or the use of celebrity testimonials or any one of a number of advertising gimmicks, radio proved to be a tremendous sales tool for the advertiser.

Sponsor identification, of course, was extremely important. The best way to achieve the highest percentage of sponsor identification was to integrate the commercials into the show's content, to involve the star in the commercial, to work the sponsor's name into the show's title, or for a sponsor to remain associated with one particular program or time-slot for a long run. Among the sponsors who achieved the best sponsor identification over the years were Oxydol ("Oxydol's own Ma Perkins"): Wheaties (lack Armstrong): Iell-O ("Jell-O again, this is Jack Benny"); Chase and Sanborn (Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy); Lucky Strike (again Jack Benny); Campbell's Soup (Amos'n' Andy); Rinso (again Amos 'n' Andy); Ipana ("For the smile of beauty") and Sal Hepatica ("For the smile of health"-Eddie Cantor); Ovaltine (Little Orphan Annie); Ralston ("Tom Mix and the Ralston Straight Shooters are on the air"); Pepsodent ("This is Bob 'Pepsodent' Hope, saying that if you brush your teeth with Pepsodent you'll have a smile so fair that even Crosby will tip his hair!"); Eversharp (Take It or Leave It); Kellogg's (The Singing Lady); Johnson Wax ("It's the Johnson Wax program, starring Fibber McGee and Molly"); Kraft ("Hi, this is Bing Crosby here in the old Kraft Music Hall"); Fitch Shampoo ("Laugh a while, let a song be your style, use Fitch Shampoo" on The Fitch Bandwagon); Mars candv (Doctor I.Q.); Campana Italian Balm (The First Nighter): H-O Oats (Bobby Benson's Adventures); Pall Mall (The Big Story): Colgate ("Bill Stern the Colgate shave-cream man is on the air . . ."); Coca-Cola (Morton Downey); Helbros watches (Quick as a Flash); Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder (Manhattan Merry-Go-Round).

Sponsors who maneuvered their names into program titles included The A & P Bandwagon, Maxwell House Showboat, The Fitch Bandwagon, etc. Many newspapers balked at listing the programs by these titles since this constituted free advertising, so they simply put "Bandwagon" or "Showboat" or the name of the star.

A few curiosities of radio advertising included "Little Miss Bab-O," who was only known as such on-theair but was in reality child star Mary Small; and the early singing duo. Ernie Hare and Billy Jones, who were known practically simultaneously as "The Tastyeast Jesters," "The Best Foods Boys," and "The Interwoven Pair" for various sponsors. There was a well-publicized law suit involving Tallulah Bankhead-when Prell Shampoo introduced their unbreakable plastic tube, they attempted to establish a commercial character. "I'm Tallulah, the tube of Prell." Miss Bankhead got a "cease and desist" order, claiming that she was the one and only Tallulah-and the courts agreed.

Probably the most famous "living trademark" was the shrill-voiced bellboy named "Johnny" who worked for Philip Morris cigarettes. To the tune of "On The Trail" from Ferde Grofé's "Grand Canyon Suite," Johnny would shout, "Call for Philip Mor-rees!" The part of Johnny was usually played by Johnny Roventini, occasionally by Freddy (Buddy) Douglas, both midgets. Pictures and life-size blow-ups of Johnny were prominently featured in cigar stores; on the radio Johnny was described as "stepping out of thousands of store windows across the country." It's alleged that one night in a restaurant when a waiter dropped a tray of glasses, Groucho Marx filled the silence by shouting, "That was Johnny you heard . . . stepping out of thousands of store windows across the country."

Listing all the catch-phrases and jingles identified with particular products over the years would be impossible, but here are some of the landmarks, highlights, and bestremembered ones:

THE PEPSI-COLA JINGLE

Pepsi-Cola hits the spot, Twelve full ounces, that's a lot. Twice as much for a nickel, too. Pepsi-Cola is the drink for you. Nickel, nickel, nickel, nickel, Trickle, trickle, trickle, ....

Composed by Austin Herbert Croom Croom-Johnson from an old English hunting song "D'ye Ken John Peel?" with lyrics written by Alan Bradley Kent (later just Alan Kent when he became an announcer). This was one of the earliest "singing commercials" on a national basis. It was written in 1939 for the now defunct Newell-Emmett advertising agency and was originally performed by a vocal trio called The Tune Twisters, comprised of Andy Love, Gene Lanham, and Bob Walker. Even though it has often been referred to as the first singing commercial, there had been several others prior to 1939, such as the one for Barbasol and the tunes sung by The Happiness Boys for their various sponsors.

Coronet Storyteller

Drama

Narrator and all voices: Marvin Miller Announcer: Vic Perrin

Directors: Alan Fishburn (Chicago), Ted MacMurray (Hollywood)

Coronet Storyteller was a five-minute broadcast heard five nights a week on ABC from 1944 to 1947. It featured stories adapted from Coronet magazine, its original sponsor. Later it became a portion of an early-morning news program sponsored by Kellogg's. The stories were generally factual, but if a piece of fiction appeared in Coronet, it too might be adapted.

Dear Mom made its debut over CBS in 1941 and ran for one year as a twenty-five-minute, Sunday show sponsored by Wrigley. It related humorous incidents in a boot camp during the days of pre-World War II mobilization. "Stubbs" was a classic not-too-bright buck private who wrote of his experiences in his weekly letter home to his mother (hence the title). "Foster" was a perfect soldier. "Monihan" was a tough, roaring topkick. The program was dropped abruptly

Dorothy Gordon

Dorothy Gordon had one of the most distinguished careers of any woman in radio. She was in charge of the first radio program for children, which was carried over WEAF New York in 1924. She also directed music programs for The American School of the Air, served as hostess of Yesterday's Children, and moderated The New York Times Youth Forum. The Youth Forum, which had its première in April 1943, was a weekly broadcast over WOXR New York. Children from various schools chose their own representatives as panel members. Originally the panelists were nine to eleven years of age; later, older children and college students served as panelists. The programs were recorded, and study outlines were supplied to schools. Many outstanding adults appeared on the programsamong them, Fannie Hurst, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Norman Thomas, William O. Douglas, Dr. Ralph Bunche, and Robert M. Hutchins. Dr. I. Q.

CAST:

Dr. I. Q., the Mental Banker: Lew Valentine Jimmy McClain Stanley Vainrib Announcer: Allan C. Anthony

Creator: Lee Segall

Directors: Harry Holcomb, Paul Dumont

Writer: Bob Schultz

Opening: ANNOUNCER. Presenting Dr. I. Q.1 AUDIENCE. Applause. ANNOUNCER. Mars Incorporated, makers of America's most enjoyable candy bars, bring you another halfhour of fun with your genial master of wit and information-Dr. I. Q., the Mental Banker! And now here is that wise man with the friendly smile and the cash for your correct answers. . . Dr. I. Q.!

AUDIENCE. Applause.

DR. I. Q. Thank you, thank you, Mr. Anthony. And good evening, ladies and gentlemen. My assistants are stationed throughout the audience with portable microphones which will enable members of the theater audience to remain in their seats while answering questions which I ask from the stage.

This quiz show, sponsored by Mars Incorporated, makers of Snickers, Milky Way, Three Musketeers, Forever Yours, and Mars bars, was broadcast from different cities where it played in a local theater. At the start of the program, Dr. I. Q. would introduce several announcers who were stationed in various parts of the theater with hand-held microphones. The announcers would select contestants in the audience, and frequently you would hear, "I have a lady in the balcony, Doctor." Then Dr. I. O. would say, "I have ten silver dollars for that lady if she can tell me . . ." (The amount of money varied with the difficulty of the question.) Winning contestants were paid in silver dollars, and losers received a box of the sponsor's candy bars and "two tickets to next week's production here at Loew's Victoria!" Dr. I. Q. frequently told losing contestants, "Oh, I'm so sorry but I think you'll find the answer is . . ."

One of the regular features was "The Biographical Sketch," which was worth seventy-five silver dollars if the subject of the biography was identified correctly on the first clue. The prize diminished with each succeeding clue, but the amount not earned was added to the $250 awarded to the listener who submitted the clues. Thus a home listener could earn as much as $325. Another feature was "The Monument to Memory: the Thought Twister." A typical Thought Twister (which the good doctor cautioned he could say "one time and one time only") went like this:

"Jim is slim," said Tim to Kim.

"Jim is slim, Tim," to him said Kim.

The program was first heard over NBC in 1939 on Monday nights. Announcer Allan C. Anthony became well known for his ability to make the sponsor's candy bars sound so appetizing as he drooled over such words in the commercials as "nougat," "creamy," "chocolate" and "delicious."

Barton Yarborough

Announcers: George Fenneman and Hal Gibney

Writers: James E. Moser, John Robinson, Frank Burt

- Sound Effects: Bud Tollefson, Wayne Kenworthy
- Theme: "Dragnet" by Walter Schumann

Catch-phrases:

FRIDAY. My name's Friday. I'm a cop. (This was part of opening narration.)

FRIDAY. Just the facts, ma'am.

Dragnet featured dramatized cases taken from the files of the Los Angeles Police Department. Police Chief William Parker was always acknowledged at the close. The announcers reminded listeners, "The story you have just heard is true. Only the names have been changed to protect the innocent." Then, following a commercial break, the results of a trial or a hearing in the case were given. The dramas were made all the more authentic by Friday's frequent references to the time-"Twelvetwenty-eight. We were working the day watch out of homicide"-and by the attention paid to the mundane details of police work in tracking down criminals. The program was also noted for its "natural" writing and acting and its frequent use of "punch-lines" at the end of each segment.

The program was first heard over NBC in 1949. The theme became known for its first four notes-dumde-dum-dum-and was thoroughly parodied, a sure sign of success.

Dreft Star Playhouse

Serial Drama

- Guest Stars: Gale Page, Rosemary De Camp, Les Tremayne, et al.
- Announcers: Terry O'Sullivan, Marvin Miller
- Directors: Les Mitchel, Axel Gruenberg

Dreft Star Playhouse was heard on NBC from 1944 to 1945. Using famous movie scripts, it attempted to accomplish in a five-times-a-week soap-opera format what Lux Radio Theatre had done in the night-time format. Each story ran from one to five weeks on Dreft Star Playhouse.

- ARCHIE. Hello. Duffy's Tavern, where the elite meet to eat. Archie, the manager, speaking. Duffy ain't here. Oh, hello, Duffy. . . .

The program, which made its debut in April 1941, was sponsored by Bristol-Myers (Trushay, Sal Hepatica, and Minit-Rub) and was heard for a time on Tuesday nights at 8:30 on NBC. It also appeared on NBC on Wednesday nights. The character of "Archie" was created by Ed Gardner and George Faulkner for a CBS show called So This Is New York, which lasted for a brief period on the airjust long enough for Gardner to develop "Archie" and decide after extensive auditions that he himself should play the role. In 1949 Gardner moved to Puerto Rico and transcribed Duffy's Tavern there to take advantage of a twelve-year tax holiday declared by the government to attract new industry to the island. Incidentally, "Duffy" never appeared on the program.

Writer: Goodman Ace Theme: "Manhattan Serenade"

Easy Aces, first on the air from Kansas City, Missouri, in 1930, moved to network in Chicago in 1931 and to New York in 1933, where it continued through 1945 as a fifteen-minute program. All the scripts were written by Goodman Ace.

It was a witty, urbane "domestic comedy," with Goodman Ace as the long-suffering husband of the slightly addled Jane. Jane's malapropisms were legendary—"You've got to take the bitter with the batter," "I'm really in a quarry," "This hang-nail expression," and "Up at the crank of dawn." To these and similar misuses of the English language Goody often replied, "Isn't that awful?" Jane often referred to her brother Paul who hadn't worked in twelve years "because he's waiting for the dollar to settle down."

The show was revived in 1948 in a weekly thirty-minute format under the title of Mr. Ace and Jane. The scripts were all based on the original fifteen-minute story lines but with revisions and added gags to accommodate a live audience's reaction.

The show at first presented standard Greek, Turkish, and other Near East tunes: but in a few weeks most of the available material had been used up so the von Hallberg brothers contributed their own numbers, giving them fanciful Near East titles. The tunes had such an authentic flavor that requests poured in from people of Near East ancestry for information as to where they could purchase the music. However, the material was never published.

The Ed Sullivan Show

Catch-phrases:

THE MAD RUSSIAN. How do you do? THE MAD RUSSIAN. You min it?

Eddie Cantor was already an established vaudeville and Broadway star when he made his debut on radio on Rudy Vallee's program in February 1931. He started his own program in September of that year and continued for many years, under many sponsors, with one of the most popular comedyvariety programs on radio. He introduced many "protégés," such as Deanna Durbin, Dinah Shore, and Bobby Breen. He often joked about his wife Ida and their five daughters: Marjorie, Natalie, Edna, Marilyn, and Janet. He acquired the nickname "Banjo-Eyes" during his career on the musical stage and often made comedy references to his enormous eyes. Some of the songs he was famous for singing were "If You Knew Susie," "Makin' Whoopee," and "Now's the Time to Fall in Love."

Dave Rubinoff actually played the violin but his lines were spoken by Lionel Stander and later Teddy Bergman (who worked under the name Alan Reed after 1939).

The Eddie Cantor Show was also known as The Chase and Sanborn Hour and later Time to Smile.

THE EDGAR BERGEN AND CHARLIE MC CARTHY SHOW

97

Catch-phrases:

- CHARLIE. I'll clip ya! So help me, I'll mow ya down!
- EDGAR. Mortimer, how can you be so stupid?
- ERSEL TWINC. Friends, and you are my friends. Friends. . .

This popular Sunday-evening program was also known as The Chase and Sanborn Hour, a reference to the show's long-standing sponsor, Chase and Sanborn. ("What Mr. Chase didn't know about coffee, Mr. Sanborn did!") Bergen and McCarthy joined The Chase and Sanborn Hour on NBC in 1936. "Charlie" was Bergen's principal dummy. He wore a monocle over his right eye and generally appeared in formal dress, including a top hat. He never seemed to run out of quips about pretty girls, his troubles in school, and his friend "Skinny Dugan." "Charlie" also persistently needled Bergen about the ventriloquist's lips moving during their act. "Mortimer" was a stupid, good-natured, buck-toothed character from the country. "Effie" was an unattractive old maid whose chief interest was in catching a man. "Charlie" and "Mortimer" appeared regularly on the program while "Effie" turned up occasionally. Coca-Cola took over sponsorship of the broadcast toward the end of its long run. (See also Comedy and Comedians.)

the town of "Sandy Harbor." Rarely was anyone other than "Ethel" and "Albert" heard, as the program was primarily a duologue between these two, with other characters talked about. "Baby Susy," "born" March 15, 1946, was the first voice heard on the show other than "Ethel" and "Albert." The first other adult character was Paul Whiteman, who played the part of a door-to-door salesman. Also appearing on occasion were Ed Begley, Raymond Edward Johnson, Leon Janney, Julie Stevens, and Don MacLaughlin.

The program was also known as The Private Lives of Ethel and Albert. There was a fifteen-minute and then a thirty-minute version of this durable comedy series, which was first heard over ABC in 1944.

This was the first big variety show on radio. It made its debut on December 4, 1923, over WEAF in New York. The premiere program had a concert orchestra, a jazz band, and a one-act play—"The Bungalow," with Gene Lockhart, Eva Taylor, and Lawrence Grattan.

The Eveready Hour was sponsored by the National Carbon Company, makers of Eveready batteries. It was a truly spectacular program, even by today's standards. Among its most popular features, besides the appear-

Radio adaptations of historical events and plays, such as "Joan of Arc" (starring Rosaline Greene as the Maid) were presented. In 1924 Wendell Hall, The Red-Headed Music-Maker, was first presented. His most remembered song was "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'." He became such a big star that his wedding was solemnized on the program.

Father Coughlin

Commentary

Father Charles Edward Coughlin, a Roman Catholic priest who broadcast from the Shrine of The Little Flower in Royal Oak, Michigan, was one of the more controversial figures of early radio broadcasting. His first broadcast was on October 17, 1926, over WIR Detroit. He was later heard over CBS, usually at 4:00 p.m. on Sundays, until they refused to carry his broadcasts in the mid-thirties. He then formed his own network of forty-seven stations. Originally a booster of Franklin D. Roosevelt, he later called FDR a "great liar and betrayer." He aligned himself with Huey Long of Louisiana and eventually chose his own presidential candidate, William Lemke of North Dakota. Father Coughlin guaranteed that he would never broadcast again if Lemke did not get nine million votes in 1936 as the Union Party candidate. Lemke polled 891,858 votes. Father Coughlin did leave the air for a few months but returned to present his plans for a "Corporate State," which proposed the scrapping of Congress.

He once had millions of listeners, and in 1934 a poll showed that he was considered the most important public figure in the United States except for the President. Twice attempts were made on his life. By the early 1940s his audience had dwindled, and he left the air after a censorship board was set up by the Church to examine his scripts prior to broadcast.

McGee. sis. Why, mister, why, mister, why, mister, why?

Fibber McGee and Molly had its early beginnings as a program called The Smackouts, which Don Quinn wrote and the Jordans played as a five-times-a-week serial over NBC. Jordan played a garrulous grocerystore proprietor who was always just "smack out" of everything. He spent most of his time spinning yarns. The Smackouts lasted for four years, from 1931 to 1935. "Fibber" and "Molly" were created in 1935 for Johnson Wax, which was looking for a new program to sponsor. The show, for a time, was known as The Johnson Wax Program with Fibber McGee and Molly. The company became the long-time sponsor, and its commercials were among the first to be integrated into the show itself with the announcer playing a character in the story. "Fibber" often addressed announcer Harlow Wilcox as "Waxy." Wilcox, to Fibber's consternation, invariably steered his casual conversations with Fibber into a commercial for Johnson Wax.

Fibber McGee and Molly stayed on the air until 1952, for the most part at 9:30 p.m. each Tuesday (which was promoted, quite properly, as "comedy night on NBC").

Actually there was no "story" to the programs. Usually a situation was established and then various characters would enter the McGee home at 79 Wistful Vista and help or hinder the action. The program introduced two characters who moved on to their own programs—"Gildersleeve" and "Beulah." (See also The Great Gildersleeve; Beulah.)

108 FINAL EDITION

Many of the characters, situations, and catch-phrases became familiar nationwide. A weekly occurrence was Fibber's opening of the hall closet door, much to the horror of Molly. As soon as the door opened, everything in the closet fell out, ending up with a small tinkly bell. This sequence of sound effects became one of the most familiar sounds in radio. The crash would be observed by Fibber, who then would declare, "Gotta straighten out that closet one of these days."

Each character was a distinct individual. "Doc Gamble" and McGee argued all the time and the Doc was usually the victor. "Mrs. Wearybottom" spoke with a monotone without pausing for punctuation. "Sis" was a little girl from next door who harassed McGee. "Mrs. Uppington" was always one-up on McGee in repartee. "Wallace Wimple" was a henpecked husband who referred to his wife as "Sweety-Face, my big fat wife." There were several characters who never appeared but were referred to frequently such as "Myrt, the telephone operator," and "Fred Nintny of Starved Rock, Illinois." (See also Comedy and Comedians.)

The Fire Chief

Variety

The Fire Chief: Ed Wynn Announcer: Graham McNamee Writers: Ed Wynn, Eddie Preble

Catch-phrases:

WYNN: S00000-0-0-0.

WYNN: The program's going to be different tonight, Graham.

Ed Wynn, as Texaco's "Fire Chief," pioneered many innovations in broadcasting. One of the first performers to insist on a live studio audience to react to his comedy antics, he also wore costumes and make-up and created a "theater atmosphere" for his broadcasts.

The Fire Chief made its debut April 26, 1932. Wynn had previously broadcast an entire Broadway stage show—The Perfect Fool—on June 12, 1922. Subsequently he appeared on radio on Gulliver (1935–36), The Perfect Fool (1937), and Happy Island (1944). At one time he attempted to form his own radio network with WNEW in New York as the key station. In fact, the E and W in WNEW stand for Ed Wynn.

Fireside Chats

Talks

During his four terms in office, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt frequently used radio as the medium to reach as many Americans as he could in as intimate a manner as possible. These talks were called Fireside Chats because his style and manner of presentation gave the impression that he was seated by a roaring fire in his den, talking to an individual listening at home. So natural was FDR's style that during his fourth Fireside Chat (July 24, 1933) he stopped and asked for a glass of water, which he sipped while on the air.

At one point the President was voted the most popular personality on radio, with Jack Benny and other top stars finishing behind him. The announcer who introduced the President was usually Robert Trout, who has generally been credited with creating the title.

This program, which was first heard over NBC Blue in 1929, simulated a theater atmosphere. The dramas were billed as being broadcast from "The Little Theater off Times Square," although it originated only in Chicago and Hollywood, never in New York. "Mr. First Nighter" was always shown to his seat by an "usher" just before curtain time. At intermission, between the acts, an usher would call out, "Smoking in the downstairs and outer lobby only, please!" After the commercial a buzzer would sound and the usher would call out, "Curtain going up!" First Nighter left the air in 1953.

Use Fitch Shampoo.

Don't despair

Joo uous based

Use your head, save your hair Use Fitch Shampoo.

The Fitch Bandwagon had its beginnings in 1932 when F. W. Fitch decided that after many years of sales exclusively to barber shops he would market his shampoo to the public through drugstores. An advertising and marketing test was made, primarily in Iowa, using Wendell Hall (The Red-Headed Music-Maker), who was then on tour and was heard on WOC Davenport. The first program was also carried by WHO Des Moines. It was a fifteen-minute show with a talent cost of sixty dollars.

The test proved successful, and in the fall of 1933 the show was expanded to the basic NBC network, which at that time consisted of twenty-three stations. The talent cost for this fifteen-minute program soared to $2,046.71. Various talents appeared on this version of The Fitch Bandwagon, including Irene Beasley, The Morin Sisters, and The Ranch Boys. Jerry Belcher did an interview segment called "Interesting Neighbors."

In 1937 the program became a half-hour on Sunday night. It was then that the "bandwagon" idea came to be as a format, featuring the name bands of the day. During this time it was written and produced mostly by Ward Byron and was aired from New York, Chicago, and later Hollywood.

One of the most popular features of the program was the yearly opening of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus at Madison Square Garden in New York. For this program the circus band, on its own bandwagon, opened the show with a parade around the circus ring before an audience of hundreds of New York area orphans. The Ringling Band was directed by Merle Evans, and every year F. W. Fitch donned a musician's uniform, climbed aboard the bandwagon, and faked trombone.

Even though many people thought that The Fitch Bandwagon was lucky to be sandwiched in between Jack Benny at 7:00 p.m. and Edgar Bergen at 8:00 on NBC, the Bandwagon program actually occupied its Sundaynight-at-7:30 time-slot long before the other two programs were added to the Sunday line-up. The Bandwagon, in fact, pioneered in Sundayevening entertainment programing because prior to its appearance most broadcasters felt that Sunday programing should be of a more religious or serious nature . . . even in the evening.

Some of the program's summer replacements included Richard Diamond, Vic and Sade, and The Cass Daley Show, which featured Cass Daley (a comedienne), Larry Keating, Henry Russell, Francis "Dink" Trout, and Freddy Martin's Orchestra.

FM

FM radio was developed in the 1930s by Edwin Armstrong, a professor at Columbia University. FM is the abbreviation for Frequency Modulation and involves the transmission of radio by varying the radio signal. FM is also used for the sound portion of television. There are a number of advantages over the older method of transmission, called AM (for Amplitude Modulation). Among them are a higher quality sound through greater freedom from static, interference, hum, fading, and signal drift; the ability to transmit a wider range of frequencies, which is better for stereo transmission; and the further capability of a single band being able to transmit two or more different signals simultaneously. However, the FM signal is greatly limited in range compared with AM.

In 1941 the Federal Communications Commission authorized FM experimentation. The nation's first licensed FM station was WSM-FM Nashville. But FM was of virtually no significance in radio's Golden Age, not only because it was on an uncertain course in terms of its eventual role in broadcasting, but for the added reason that few radios were then equipped with FM bands.

This program made its debut over CBS on October 23, 1932, as The Linit Show, which was also known as The Linit Bath Club. It was subsequently known as The Salad Bowl Revue (for Hellmann's Mayonnaise), The Sal Hepatica Revue (The Hour of Smiles), Town Hall Tonight, The Texaco Star Theater, and, finally, The Fred Allen Show. It ran as an hour show thirty-nine weeks a year for eight years and was the last full-hour comedy program on radio before it changed to a half-hour format after the program of June 28, 1942. It ran as a half-hour show for another seven vears.

Among the many features were "The News Reel"-later "Town Hall News" and still later "The March of Trivia"; "People You Don't Expect to Meet"; "The Workshop Players" (a take-off on the popular The Columbia Workshop), which was later called "The Mighty Allen Art Players"; Portland's comedy spot; and "The Average Man's Round Table." Various comedy sketches were performed using the visiting guest stars; among the best remembered are the parody on Oklahomal with Allen and Bea Lillie, and the early-morning "Mr. and Mrs. Show" parody with Allen and Tallulah Bankhead. Allen frequently portrayed an Oriental detective, "One Long Pan," who warned everyone that "He has a lewolewer!" as he solved various crimes in comedy skits.

Beginning performers appeared, and many later became famous, such as Frank Sinatra, Connie Haines, Bob Eberly, Beatrice Kaye, Jerry Colonna, and Garry Moore.

During the early days somebody connected with the program liked organ music, so Ann Leaf played the organ at the Paramount Theater some two miles away from the rest of the broadcast, and the "startling" fact that the music was being played from two miles away was dutifully announced.

One of the most famous continuing sequences was the "feud" with Jack Benny, which began on December 30, 1936, when Allen had as a guest ten-year-old violinist Stuart Canin, who played Franz Schubert's "The Bee." Allen ad-libbed that "a certain alleged violinist" should hide his head in shame for his poor fiddling. Benny picked this up on his next broadcast, and the needling jokes flew fast and furious until the comedy feud culminated in the broadcast of a fight between the two from the Hotel Pierre in New York on March 14. 1937. The fight, of course, never came off, but the "feud" continued over the years.

The most popular feature was "Allen's Alley" which made its debut on December 13, 1942. For the first three years various characters came and went in the Alley. Among these were "Socrates Mulligan" (played by Charles Cantor), who eventually migrated to Duffy's Tavern, where he became "Clifton Finnegan"; and "Falstaff Openshaw" (played by Alan Reed), who recited such poems as "Back the patrol wagon to the sidewalk, Sergeant. That step's too high for my mother." In 1945 the Alley settled down to the characters best remembered-"Senator Claghorn," "Mrs. Nussbaum," "Titus Moody," and "Ajax Cassidy."

"Senator Claghorn" was a politician from the South who responded to a knock on his door with, "Somebody, Ah say somebody's knockin' on mah door!" He constantly made puns on well-known names. For example: "Senator Glass is all broken up about it!" and "They're goin' to bring Senator Aiken back—achin' back. . . ." He would wind up with his most famous catch-phrase, "That's a joke, son!" He referred to the Nashville Philharmonic as being conducted by Arturo Tuscaloosa, playing "The Poet and the Sharecropper."

"Mrs. Nussbaum" was a Jewish housewife who would answer her door with, "You were expecting maybe the Fink Spots?" or "You were expecting maybe the King Cohen Trio?" She referred frequently to "mine husband, Pierre."

"Titus Moody" was a taciturn New England character who always answered his door with, "Howdy, bub." His allusions were usually bucolic, and when he laughed it was an obvious effort.

"Ajax Cassidy" was a garrulous Irishman who greeted Allen each week with, "W-e-e-e-e-l-l-l, how do ye do?"

Interestingly enough, these four stereotype characters were never criticized as being anti-Southern, anti-Semitic, anti-New England, or anti-Irish. The warmth and good humor with which they were presented made them acceptable even to the most sensitive listeners.

Fred Allen, who wrote ninety per cent of what was heard on his program, was one of the all-time great American writers. Among his bestremembered lines were his two definitions of Hollywood:-"Hollywood is a nice place-if you're an orange" and "You can take all the sincerity in Hollywood, put it in a flea's navel, and have room left over for three caraway seeds and an agent's heart." He also wrote that the Holland Tunnel was built "so commuters can go to New Jersey without being seen." Many of his most famous ripostes were with network and agency brass. He described an agency vice-president as "a man who comes into his office at nine o'clock in the morning and finds a molehill on his desk. It's his job to make a mountain out of it by five o'clock." After Captain Ramshaw, a pet eagle, had gotten away from his trainer during a 1940 broadcast and deposited a rather obvious bird trademark in NBC's studio 8H. Allen referred to "l'affaire eagle" as having resulted in Mr. Rockefeller's carpet receiving a "ghost's beret." Allen's wit was not confined to the typewriter though. He often ad-libbed so brilliantly while on the air that frantic cuts had to be made in the program. It would seem likely that Fred Allen used the expression "We're a little late, folks, so good night," more than any other performer.

In the later years of The Fred Allen Show some unexpected competition arrived on another network (ABC) in the form of Stop the Music, a bigmoney quiz show with home participation. There was much scrambling to woo back his audience, including Allen's guarantee to award $5,000 to anyone who was called by Stop the Music while listening to Allen, but to no avail. The last Fred Allen broadcast took place on June 26, 1949. Appropriately enough, Jack Benny was the guest. (See also Comedy and Comedians.)

Closing Theme: "Sleep"

Catch-phrase:

DAVID ROSS. Mellow. Mellow as a cello. [A reference to both Waring's music and Old Gold cigarettes, Waring's first sponsor.]

The Fred Waring Show appeared at various time periods in different formats. Waring's first broadcast was carried by WWJ Detroit in the early 1920s. For five years he was the star of The Chesterfield Supper Club. In the early thirties his sponsor was Old Gold cigarettes on a Wednesdaynight CBS show.

The Goldbergs was originally called The Rise of the Goldbergs and made its first appearance on the Blue network on November 20, 1929. It remained an extremely popular "soap opera" for many years. It differed from most of the other "soaps" in that its leading characters lived through relatively normal situations. Even though it was the story of a poor Jewish family in New York, it had identification for a wide segment of its listeners.

The famous singer Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink asked Miss Berg if she could appear on the show, so she was written into the script and made three appearances. Metropolitan Opera star Jan Peerce appeared on the show to sing on Yom Kippur and Passover. Among others who performed on The Goldbergs were Marjorie Main, Joseph Cotten, Keenan Wynn, Minerva Pious, Van Heflin, Philip Loeb, and George Tobias.

ANNOUNCER. As a bullet seeks its target, shining rails in every part of our great country are aimed at Grand Central Station, heart of the nation's greatest city. Drawn by the magnetic force of the fantastic metropolis, day and night great trains rush toward the Hudson River, sweep down its eastern bank for 140 miles, flash briefly by the long red row of tenement houses south of 125th Street, dive with a roar into the two-and-onehalf-mile tunnel which burrows beneath the glitter and swank of Park Avenue and then...

- SOUND. Escaping steam from locomotive . . .
- ANNOUNCER. Grand Central Station ... crossroads of a million private lives ... gigantic stage on which are played a thousand dramas daily!

(The opening featured the sound of chugging steam engines although all trains to Grand Central Station were, in fact, electric.)

Grand Central Station was heard in various time-slots over the years. It was first heard over NBC Blue in 1937 as a Friday-night-at-8:00 series.

The Grand Ole Opry, which made its debut on November 28, 1925, was broadcast over the facilities of WSM Nashville (Tennessee). It featured country music and comedy. Every big-name performer in the country music field appeared, as well as other entertainers such as Marguerite Piazza and Helen Traubel.

The Opry originally emanated from a small studio at WSM with no audience except a few friends and relatives of the performers. Then the program was moved into a larger room called Studio B, where the walls were knocked out to accommodate an audience of 200. Later, when a new wing was added to the building and Studio C was built, the program was broadcast before a studio audience of 500. Soon the program moved again—this time to the Little Theater on Belcourt Avenue, which had a seating capacity of 750. The show eventually outgrew this facility and went to the Dixie Tabernacle on Fatherland Street, which could accommodate an audience of 3500. Later the program was broadcast from the War Memorial Auditorium. In 1042 it moved to the Ryman Auditorium, which had a capacity of 3300. In 1961 the Ryman Corporation sold the auditorium to WSM. Inc., and the structure became known as the Grand Ole Oprv House. In 1070 plans were formulated to erect a new 4340-seat auditorium, using the planks from the stage of the Ryman Auditorium along with some of the old bricks and a few of the pews.

The program originally lasted one hour and five minutes and was first known as The WSM Barn Dance. George D. Hay changed it to The Grand Ole Opry in February 1926 after he heard Dr. Walter Damrosch allude to "Grand Opry." Within two years it was a three-hour program and its time was steadily increased over the years until it reached a Saturdaynight broadcast of five full hours. It was always broadcast in its entirety and never was pre-empted, never had a summer replacement, never had an intermission. In October 1939 NBC began to carry thirty minutes of the show on the network. Prince Albert tobacco sponsored this network portion. Only the network broadcast used writers-the rest of the broadcast was never scripted. There were many sponsors of the non-network portion among them, Schick, Kellogg's, Coca-Cola, Lava, and Pet Milk.

Catch-phrases:

GILDERSLEEVE (exasperated). L-eeeeeroy!

PEAVEY. Well, now, Mr. Gildersleeve. I wouldn't say that.

"Gildersleeve" originated as a character on Fibber McGee and Molly. On his own program, which began on NBC, August 31, 1941, Gildersleeve was the bachelor uncle of two children—"Leroy," a pestiferous boy who called Gildersleeve "Unk," and "Marjorie," a teenager. They lived in the town of "Summerfield," where Gildy was the Water Commissioner. Many attempts were made to marry him off, particularly to the Southern belle, "Leila Ransom."

This series featured radio adaptations of such plays as Biography by S. N. Behrman, The Truth by Clyde Fitch, and The American Way by Kaufman and Hart. Great Plays was first heard over NBC Blue in 1938.

The Greatest Story Ever Told

Religious Drama

CAST: Jesus Warren Parker Announcer: Norman Rose

Directors: Marx Loeb, Henry Denker Writer: Henry Denker Sound Effects: Terry Ross Musical Director: Jacques Belasco

This series of dramatizations of the life of Christ was based on the famous book by Fulton Oursler, which was, in turn, based on the Bible. It was first heard in 1947 on Sunday at 6:30 p.m., sponsored by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. The only announcement of its sponsorship, however, came at the end of the program when the announcer said simply, "The Greatest Story Ever Told has been brought to you by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company." No other commercial or sponsor identification was given.

THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD 131

During its tenure on the air this program featured most of the regular New York dramatic radio actors; the only continuing role was that of Jesus. The sound effects were particularly unique. Instead of modern footsteps, for instance, the sound of sandals had to be employed; and unusual door effects had to be devised since there were no doors with modern latches and hinges in Biblical times.

NEWSBOY. Special extry! Murderers in jail! City saved from deadly ray gun! Read all about it! Green Hornet still at large! Special extry! Paper!!!

MUSIC. Theme up full

Although the Green Hornet helped to bring criminals to justice, the police were constantly trying to capture him. They never did, though. The Hornet used a gas gun to subdue his enemies, but they were only temporarily immobilized—just long enough for him to leave his Green Hornet seal and escape before the police arrived.

"Axford," the reporter, was an Irishman with a thick brogue who was always kidding "Miss Case," the secretary, and using the expression, "Holy crowl" They worked at the newspaper that "Britt Reid" published, "The Daily Sentinel." One of the good stories of radio's Golden Age is that the faithful valet "Kato" was Japanese until December 7, 1941, when he suddenly was referred to as "Reid's faithful Filipino valet, Kato." Our research, however, uncovered no evidence of such an abrupt change.

Both The Green Hornet and The Lone Ranger were created by Fran Striker and George W. Trendle and were broadcast from Detroit, where a stock company of solid actors appeared on both programs. There were some interesting parallels between the two programs. The Green Hornet's name was Britt Reid, and The Lone Ranger's name was John Reid. Britt Reid was referred to as "The Lone Ranger's grand-nephew." Each had his "faithful side-kick"-Kato and Tonto, respectively. Each had a superior means of transportation, the Black Beauty and Silver. And each one fought crime, but not as part of formal law-enforcement agency. a Rather, they carried out their adventures as semi-fugitives from the law. always disappearing just before the law took over.

The Green Hornet was broadcast over Mutual beginning in 1938.

Opening:

ANNOUNCER. The Guiding Light, created by Irna Phillips.

The Guiding Light first appeared on NBC in 1938 and originated in Chicago. It told the story of "the Reverend Ruthledge," a kindly cleric who showed people how to live a good life through patience and understanding.

Irna Phillips was known as "the queen of the soap operas." She had dozens of writers in her stable. Her shows were produced by Carl Wester & Company, and the advertising agencies, sponsors, and networks had little control over them. Wester took it upon himself to be responsible for casting and announcers.

The Happiness Boys

Music

Starring: Billy Jones and Ernie Hare

Theme:

(If your memory is long enough you'll remember it.) "Howdo-you-do, everybody, how-doyou-do;

Don't forget your Friday date,

Seven-thirty until eight;

How-do-you-do, everybody, howdo-you-do!"

Jones and Hare are closely associated with the development of early radio as they were two of the medium's first big stars. On October 18, 1921, they sang and told jokes for ninety minutes over WJZ New York. This launched them on an eighteen-year radio career, which ended on March 9, 1939, when Ernie Hare died. His daughter Marilyn continued for a while as the Hare of Jones and Hare until November 23, 1940, when Jones died.

Jones and Hare sang their vocal duets of comic songs and sentimental ballads for various sponsors and, depending upon which sponsor, they were variously known as "The Happiness Boys," "The Interwoven Pair," "The Best Foods Boys," and "The Taystee Loafers."

MORGAN. Morgan'll be on this same corner in front of the cigar store next week at this same time.

Henry Morgan was one of radio's "angry young men." His acerbic satires left very little untouched. His first shows were on for fifteen minutes in the early evening on WOR New York, and he would play crazy records from his own collection and give his sponsors the needle. His penchant for satirizing even his own sponsors often cost him their patronage. Among the earlier sponsors were Adler Elevator Shoes, which was ripe for Morgan's kidding, and Life Savers, which Morgan claimed were "mulcting the public" because of the hole in the center. A later sponsor was Schick Injector Razors, whose slogan was "Push, pull, click, clickchange blades that quick." At one point Morgan referred to the slogan as "Push, pull, nick, nick." He once started the program by announcing that Schick had called him on the carpet because sales were dropping, implying that his show was the reason. Morgan announced, "Frankly, I don't think it's my show. I think it's their razor!"

Theme: Brahms' "Lullaby"

Hilltop House was "dedicated to the women of America. The story of a woman who must choose between love and the career of raising other women's children." The program was carried by both Mutual and CBS in its first year on the air-1937. In March 1941, Hilltop House became The Story of Bess Johnson (which see). The Bess Johnson character and the actress moved from the orphanage, where she was a matron, to become the superintendent of a boarding school.

Variety

M.C.: Kenny Delmar Announcer: Bill Cullen Producer: Louis Cowan Director: Gordon Auchincloss

Hollywood Jackpot was first heard over CBS in 1946. One of the most popular segments was the "Hollywood Screen Test." Members of the studio audience would be invited to take a screen test. They were asked to perform absurd stunts, such as to fly to the balcony or to read a part for Lassie, the famous dog. Guest stars appeared to plug personal appearances or new movies. Kenny Delmar played a character named "Rasputin X. Delmaroff."

Over the years, the gossip of Hollywood held a great fascination for listeners, and a number of people made entire radio careers by simply gathering rumors and bits of information and relating them on the air. Hedda Hopper, Jimmy Fidler ("Your Hollywood Reporter"), George Fisher, Sheilah Graham, and Louella O. Parsons ("My first exclusive . . .") were the most popular. Miss Parsons was the best known through her Sundaynight broadcasts on which she often had a guest star for an interview. Her distinctive voice and speech pattern were freely imitated by various radio comedians. Impersonators often drawled, "Now, Mar . . . vin," which she said frequently to Marvin Miller, who was her announcer during the entire run of her fifteen-minute. Sunday program from 1945 to 1951. She occupied the second half of a halfhour for Jergens. Walter Winchell was on from New York during the first fifteen minutes for Jergens Lotion, and Louella Parsons followed from Hollywood for Woodbury Soap. Her constant fear was that Winchell would scoop her on a hot Hollywood item-which he often did.

Creator-Writer:	Carlton E. Morse
Director: Mel Ba	iley
Writer: Michael	Raffetto

Theme: "Valse Triste" by Sibelius

Catch-phrase:

DOC. Honest to my grandma, son!

I Love a Mystery related the adventures of three men who met in an Oriental prison. Even though they were reported dead after a bombing in Shanghai, they survived and continued to roam the world solving crimes. Each had a specialty-"Jack" had an analytical brain, "Doc" could extricate himself from tight spots by picking complicated locks, and "Reggie" was exceptionally strong. "Gerry Booker" was a beautiful secretary who combined sleuthing with shorthand. The motto of the A-1 Detective Agency was: "No job too tough, no mystery too baffling."

Carlton E. Morse produced One Man's Family in addition to I Love a Mystery. In fact, the actors who originally played "Paul," "Cliff," and "Nicky" in the former series (Michael Raffetto, Barton Yarborough, and Walter Paterson) played "Jack," "Doc," and "Reggie" in the latter. The series was heard at various times on three networks--NBC Red. NBC Blue, and CBS. It was first heard over NBC Red in 1939 as a five-times-aweek program at 7:15 p.m. but moved to NBC Blue the following year as a half-hour, once-a-week series.

INFORMATION, PLEASE! 151

Panel: Oscar Levant, John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams (FPA), Guests

Announcers: Ed Herlihy, Milton Cross, Ben Grauer

Producer-Director: Dan Golenpaul Pianist: Joe Kahn

Opening:

SOUND. Rooster crowing

ANNOUNCER. Wake up, Americal It's time to stump the experts!

Information, Pleasel made its debut over NBC Blue on May 17, 1938, and was on the air for fourteen years. The original panel was comprised of Fadiman, Adams, and Kieran, Levant was added when Fadiman became moderator. Such guests as John Erskine, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, Warden Lewis E. Lawes, and Stuart Chase appeared to help the panel answer rather difficult and specialized questions submitted by listeners. A listener who stumped the experts received a set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. When cash awards were given, the sound of a cash register could be heard.

Among the program's sponsors were Canada Dry and Mobil Oil.

Interviewers

Although every announcer and sportscaster found himself with the task of interviewing a guest occasionally, a number of performers refined the art and virtually made a career of interviewing people on radio. Jack Eigen developed a massive following with his nighttime interviews from Chicago. For many years he broadcast from the Chez Paree. The husbandand-wife teams of Tex and Jinx (Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg) and Peter Lind Haves and Mary Healy conducted countless interviews on their respective programs. Cobina Wright conducted an interview program called Your Hostess. Other prominent interviewers were Mary Margaret McBride, Maggi McNellis, and Bob Elson, one of baseball's top play-by-play broadcasters. (See also Bob Elson Aboard the Century.)

It Pays to Be Ignorant

Comedy Panel

Quizmaster: Tom Howard

Panelists: George Shelton, Lulu Mc-Connell, Harry McNaughton

Vocalist: Al Madru

Vocal group: The Esquires

Announcers: Ken Roberts, Dick Stark

Creators: Robert and Ruth Howell

Producer: Tom Howard

Director: Herbert S. Polesie

Writers: Tom Howard, Ruth Howell

Catch-phrases:

- SHELTON (following the mention of a city). I used to work in that town!
- MCNAUGHTON (after mention of a particularly unpleasant item). Now we're back to Miss McConnell.

IT PAYS TO BE IGNORANT 153

MCNAUGHTON (after a bad joke). Hoo, ha, ha, ha. Hoo, ha, ha, ha. Hoo, ha, ha, ha. I don't get it.

MCNAUGHTON. I have written a poem.

MCCONNELL (to male guests on the show). What's your name, honey? Are you married, honey?

Theme: (Sung by Al Madru)
It pays to be ignorant
To be dumb, to be dense, to be ignorant.
It pays to be ignorant
Just like me!
When I was just a school kid
I wasn't very bright.
I had a pretty teacher
Who made me stay each night.
So you see

- It pays to be ignorant
- Just like me!

It pays to be ignorant

To be dumb, to be dense, to be ignorant. It pays to be ignorant Just like me!

Just like me

I took my girl to dinner

We had a wonderful time.

I let her pay the check

Because I didn't have a dime.

So you see

It pays to be ignorant

Just like me!

It pays to be ignorant

To be dumb, to be dense, to be ignorant. It pays to be ignorant

Just like me.

They say that I am stupid

And dumb in every way.

But ever since I joined this show

There's one thing I can say:

Ho, ho, ho!

It pays to ignorant

- Have no brain, be inane, just ignorant.
- It pays to be ignorant

Just like me!

This was a carefully written show in which the panel members failed to answer such questions as "What color is a white horse?" and "Which player on a baseball team wears a catcher's mask?" The three panelists exasperated Tom Howard with their lack of intelligence. Howard attempted to help them answer the simple questions, but Harry McNaughton, a stuffy Englishman, and his colleagues George Shelton and Lulu McConnell were beyond help and interrupted frequently with inane questions of their own. After groping unsuccessfully for the answer to an extremely easy question, one of the panelists would often respond with, "Would you repeat the question, please?" Tom Howard frequently signed off with, "Good night . . . and good nonsense!"

The program idea, a take-off on radio panel quizzes such as Information, Please!, was conceived by Tom Howard's daughter Ruth and her husband Robert Howell while they were working for WELI New Haven (Connecticut). They named the show Crazy I.Q.'s and submitted it to Howard. He liked it, wrote a sample script, and sent it to several people in radio as It Pays to Be Ignorant. However, nobody seemed willing to risk doing a program with such a name. Finally WOR New York agreed to put it on the air. It was first heard in June 1942. From WOR the show moved to WABC New York and later to the CBS network, where the show remained for most of its run. Eventually it switched to NBC, where it remained until it left the air. Its bestremembered sponsor was Philip Morris cigarettes. In England the show was known as Ignorance Is Bliss.

Have you tried Wheaties?

They're whole wheat with all of the bran.

Won't you try Wheaties?

For wheat is the best food of man!

<sup>1</sup> There were several versions of the theme, and there is great difference of opinion about this line in particular. Some claim it should be "Every fellow should be a champion"; others remember it as "Ever fight to be a champion"; or, "Ever challenging we champions." The line was apparently sung differently from time to time.

They're crispy and crunchy the whole year through.

Jack Armstrong never tires of them And neither will you.

So just buy Wheaties

The best breakfast food in the land!

Opening:

- voices (echoing and reverberating). Jack Armstrong, Jack Armstrong, Jack Armstrong...
- ANNOUNCER. The All-American Boy!!!!!

The long-time sponsor of Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy was Wheaties, Breakfast of Champions. For the appropriate box-tops-and money-you could receive such premiums as Jack Armstrong whistling rings, Jack Armstrong hike-o-meters (a simple sturdy pedometer), Jack Armstrong secret decoders, and Jack Armstrong Norden bombsights. "Uncle Jim Fairfield," the "father image" of the series, was an adventurer, explorer, and pilot of his own amphibian, "The Silver Albatross." Originating in Chicago, the program made its debut over CBS in 1933 and left the air in 1951. In 1946 "Uncle Jim" and "Betty Fairfield" were replaced by "Vic Hardy," a scientific crime investigator, and "Jim Butterfield," a teen-age "junior announcer" who assisted regular announcer Bob McKee. THE JACK BENNY PROGRAM 157

- MR. KITZEL (sings in Jewish accent).
  - Pee-kle in the mee-dle and the mustard on top!

lack Benny became virtually an institution in broadcasting. He made his radio debut on The Ed Sullivan Show on May 2, 1931; in 1932 he appeared on his own program for Canada Dry over CBS, and then was sponsored by Chevrolet. After that came his long associations with Jell-O and Lucky Strike. Among the many running gags on his show were his "feud" with Fred Allen; Benny's perpetual age of thirty-nine; his stinginess: his ancient Maxwell automobile: the vault in his basement where he kept his money and where the guard hadn't seen the light of day since the Civil War: the polar bear named Carmichael that lived in Benny's basement and allegedly ate the gas man; Jack's blue eyes; his attempts to play the violin; etc., etc. The development of Benny's character was so complete that it was only necessary for a hold-up man to accost Benny with, "Your money or your life!" for the audience to react by laughing longer than any other studio audience in radio history. Their reaction, of course, was brought about by Jack's apparent inability to decide between parting with his money or his life. When the prolonged laughter finally subsided, the hold-up man repeated his demand, and Benny brought down the house again with the annoyed reply, "I'm thinking it over!"

Jimmy Durante was nicknamed "the Schnozz" for his more than ample nose, or "schnozzola." He was well known for several catch-phrases, such as "Everybody wants ta get inta da act!" and "It's da condishuns dat prevail!" He also created several characters who never appeared but were referred to with affection, such as "Umbriago" and "Mrs. Calabash." Durante usually signed off with

"Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are!" Candy Candido contributed the catch-phrase, "I'm feelin' mighty low," done in a deep, guttural voice after using a high-pitched voice to lead up to the catch-phrase. "Hotbreath Houlihan" always spoke in a low, sexy voice, saying such provocative things as "C'mere, . . . Big Boyl" (See also Camel Caravan; Jumbo.)

Producer: Billy Rose

This super-colossal production was another of the spectacular ventures of the flamboyant Billy Rose. In 1035, while the stage play Jumbo was on at the Hippodrome Theater in New York, Rose conceived the idea of transferring it to radio as a weekly series. Each Tuesday night over NBC at 0:30. Jumbo was broadcast from the stage of the Hippodrome before a live audience of 4500, probably the largest regular studio audience in the history of radio. The plot was simple -two warring circus owners, Considine and Mulligan, their offspring as the romantic interest and for other complications, and Durante as the frantic press agent of the "Considine Wonder Show." Jumbo was sponsored by Texaco Fire Chief gasoline and appeared as a replacement for Ed Wynn's Fire Chief program.

The King Sisters (Alyce, Donna,

Producer: Frank O'Connor Directors: William Warwick, John Cleary, Harry Saz, Ed Cashman Writers: Richard Dana, Martin Stark Theme: "Thinking of You"

This popular Wednesday-night series on NBC made its debut in 1038 and featured musical numbers interspersed with quiz segments done in a light, humorous vein, using a mock college format. The various quiz segments were referred to as "midterms" and "final exams." The questions were frequently so easy that a broad hint from Kyser would tip the answer to the contestant, particularly for servicemen contestants, who never seemed to walk away empty-handed. After practically telling the contestant the answer, Kyser would shout, "How'd he get that?" In the event the contestant didn't get the answer. Kyser would call out, "Students?" and the audience would give the answer.

One segment was a true or false quiz using "right" or "wrong" as answers. When the answer was true and the contestant was incorrect, Kyser would exclaim, "That's right, you're wrong!" If the answer was false and the contestant was correct, he would declare, "That's wrong, you're right!"

Kyser was referred to on the program as "The Old Professor" or just "Fes." The wearing of caps and gowns at the broadcast was obligatory, and even Verne Smith, the announcer, was called "Dean."

Host: Bing Crosby

- Featuring: Bob Burns, The Arkansas Traveler; Jerry Lester, George Murphy
- Regular Guests (about one year each): Mary Martin, singer; Connee Boswell, singer; Victor Borge, pianist-comedian; Peggy Lee, singer
- With: The Music Maids and Hal, vocal group
- Orchestra: Jimmy Dorsey (one year); John Scott Trotter
- Announcers: Don Wilson (one year), Roger Krupp, Ken Carpenter
- Directors: Cal Kuhl, Ezra MacIntosh, Ed Gardner, Bob Brewster
- Writers: Carroll Carroll, David Gregory, Leo Sherin, Ed Helwick, Manny Mannheim

Kraft Music Hall, sponsored by the makers of Kraft dairy products, was first heard in 1934, starring Al Jolson with Paul Whiteman's orchestra and Deems Taylor. It was a two-hour show written by Carroll Carroll and heard locally in New York. It later went network with Paul Whiteman. Ramona, and Johnny Mercer. Many of the great names in jazz were featured on this program-Jack and Charlie Teagarden, Frank Trumbauer, Roy Bargy, Joe Venuti-and also Oscar Levant on the piano. The theme was "Rhapsody in Blue." Whiteman also presented guest stars from the New York theater, opera, sports, and vaudeville. Lou Holtz had a long run as a star comedian.

In 1936 the program moved to the West Coast, where Bing Crosby was the host for ten years. During that time countless people from all walks of life appeared with Crosby to sing and joke with him. Most listeners thought the show was ad-libbed but it was all written by Carroll Carroll, who had moved west to continue his job.

Still remembered are the stationbreak spots that featured Ken Carpenter as a student at KMH and Bing as Dr. Crosby, the dean. Each spot led into the sounding of the NBC chimes. When ASCAP pulled its music off the air, Crosby's theme, "Where the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," had to be omitted. The Kraft Music Hall theme then became "Hail KMH," the fight song of the mythical school of the station breaks:

Hail KMH, hail, rain and snow Onward to victory Forward we will go Stamping out our adversary Like a dauntless dromedary Tramples on its foe

KRAFT MUSIC HALL 171

Forever . . . Hail KMH, our motto cry Be brave and love each other Wear the old school tie Like an eagle loose aloft Wave the pomegranate and puce aloft Rah, rah, rah, rah, rah, rah, rah With a hey-nonny-nonny-and-ahotcha-cha Hail K. . . M. . . H.

The final three notes were those of the NBC chimes. At that time they were struck manually.

When Bing left Kraft Music Hall in 1946, the program moved east and had a series of stars. The most notable of these was Al Jolson, who returned as host for two seasons while making a comeback in show business. His broadcasts featured Oscar Levant and Lou Bring's orchestra. Manny Mannheim and Charlie Isaacs became writers for the show, and Ken Carpenter continued as announcer.

While the program was out west, the summer shows featured such hosts as Bob Crosby, Frank Morgan, and Don Ameche; and for two summers starred Nelson Eddy and Dorothy Kirsten with Robert Armbruster's orchestra. (See also The Bing Crosby Show.) Ladies Be Seated

Theme: "Land of the Lost" (original music)

Land of the Lost was first heard over ABC in 1944. Red Lantern was a big, red fish who glowed under water. The children, Isabel and Billy, used him as their guide on each adventure. The episodes included meeting such characters as a sea horse or a lump of coal. The underwater characters sent messages by "shellaphone" and "shellagraph."

Writer: Hobe Donovan Organist: John Duffy

This was the story of a collie named Lassie. The real Lassie of movie fame was owned and trained by Rudd Weatherwax and did the actual barking in the radio series on cue from Weatherwax or his brother. Growls, whines, and pants were done by animal imitator Earl Keen. The many youngsters in the studio audience were fascinated by the on-cue barking and Keen's imitations. The series began over ABC in 1947.

Opening:

CHILDREN'S CHORUS.

Cream of Wheat is so good to eat That we have it every day. We sing this song, it will make us strong

And it makes us shout hooray.

It's good for growing babies

And grown-ups too to eat.

For all the family's breakfast

You can't beat Cream of Wheat.

ANNOUNCER. Cream of Wheat-the great American family cereal-presents Let's Pretend!

The show was originally known as The Adventures of Helen and Mary. "Helen" and "Mary" were played by Estelle Levy and Patricia Ryan. In 1934 the title Let's Pretend was adopted. Miriam Wolfe was often cast as a witch, while Marilyn Erskine frequently played a fairy godmother.

CBS, as a matter of prestige, refused for years to permit commercials on Let's Pretend. However, in the 1940s they were finally forced to yield to economic pressure and sold it to what became its long-time sponsor-Cream of Wheat.

Liberty Baseball

Sports

The Liberty Broadcasting System

was launched in March 1948 and promptly became a major network. Its principal function was to re-create major league baseball games, though it also branched out into other sports as well as music and news. The baseball play-by-play announcers were Gordon McLendon (The Old Scotsman), Al Turner, Lindsey Nelson, Jerry Doggett, and Wes Wise. On days when there was no game, Liberty often re-created an old-time ballgame featuring players such as Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, and Walter Johnson. The listener occasionally heard re-creations of games played in the nineteenth century. In such games the announcer might remark that a score had just come in by Pony Express: that the count was six balls and three strikes; that the young catcher Connie Mack was experimenting with the idea of wearing a mask while catching; or that the batter was ordering the pitcher to throw the next pitch a little lower. The broadcasts reached millions of listeners daily until the network went out of business in May 1952.

Opening: As with most serial dramas, the opening for Life Can Be Beautiful changed many times over the years. At one time it was simply Papa David saying, "Come in. Come in. The door is open." A typical opening later in the program's history was:

MUSIC. Theme

ANNOUNCER. John Ruskin wrote this —"Whenever money is the principal object of life, it is both got ill and spent ill, and does harm both in the getting and spending. When getting and spending happiness is our aim, life can be beautiful!" Life Can Be Beautiful is an inspiring message of faith drawn from life, written by Carl Bixby and Don Becker, and brought to you by Spic and Span. No soap, no other cleaner, nothing in America cleans painted walls, woodwork, and linoleum like Spic and Span.

Life Can Be Beautiful was known to people in the radio industry as "Elsie Beebe," from the sound of the first letters of the show title. The program came to radio over CBS in 1938. Much of the action took place in "The Slightly Read Bookshop."

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE 181

Director: Alan Wallace

Writers: Roland Martini, Ferrin N. Fraser, Day Keene and Wally Norman

Catch-phrase: ANNIE. Leapin' lizards!

Little Orphan Annie was based on the comic strip by Harold Gray. "Mr. and Mrs. Silo" were Annie's parents by adoption. Obviously they were farmers. "Joe Corntassle" was the shy kid down the road who had a crush on Annie.

At the opening of the program "Uncle Andy"—announcer Pierre André—introduced the theme song:

Who's that little chatterbox? The one with pretty auburn locks? Who can it be? It's Little Orphan Annie. She and Sandy make a pair. They never seem to have a care. Cute little she. It's Little Orphan Annie. Bright eyes Cheeks a rosy glow There's a store of healthiness handy. Pint-size Always on the go If you want to know "Arf," goes Sandy. Always wears a sunny smile. Now wouldn't it be worth your while, If you could be Like Little Orphan Annie?

Other verses included:

Gather closer, girls and boys, Mustn't make a bit of noise, For we will hear– Our Little Orphan Annie.

182 LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE

Everybody loves this miss. A happy little girl is this. Come lend an ear To Little Orphan Annie. She is bringing all her friends, We will have a party that's dandy. You'll meet each and every one, Not to be outdone, "Arf," says Sandy. And before she goes away. We know that everyone will say, "She is a dear"-Our Little Orphan Annie.

Little Orphan Annie's here, The little girl so full of cheer. Who doesn't know Our Little Orphan Annie? Be as quiet as a mouse, Tell everybody in the house. They'll want to know, It's Little Orphan Annie. Tell your mother and your dad. You know something better than candy. If you drink it once or twice, You will think it nice-Oooh - how dandy! Later on we'll tell you more, But now we have a treat in store-On with the show, And Little Orphan Annie.

As was the case with many of radio's themes, the lyrics varied from time to time. For example, the first verse listed above was taken from an actual broadcast and was not the same as the published sheet music, from which the other verses were taken.

The reference in the last verse of the theme song was to Ovaltine, the long-time sponsor of Little Orphan Annie. Among the premiums offered were an Ovaltine shake-up mug and a decoder for the daily clues given at the end of the broadcast.

The series was first heard over the Blue network in 1931.

In 1030 George W. Trendle established a statewide radio network in Michigan with WXYZ Detroit as the key station for the Michigan Radio network. He began a search for a program dedicated to youth. In his mind he imagined a program that was action-packed without emphasis on violence, one that would entertain as well as quietly instruct and inspire, one that would have appeal to children but would also be logical and interesting to adults. Eventually Trendle decided on a story set in the pioneer days in the West and hired Fran Striker, a writer from Buffalo, New York, to create the hero. Trendle's instructions were that the hero must be realistic, serious, and soberminded, a man with a righteous purpose, a man who would serve as an example of good living and clean speech. The hero also had to be a man of mystery and be motivated by a burning desire to help the builders of the West and to do it, not for personal credit or gain, but purely for love of country.

The first broadcast of The Lone Ranger was on January 30, 1933. The show was scheduled for three complete half-hour adventures every week. To handle problems of production costs, Trendle called upon Allen H. Campbell, an advertising salesman for the Hearst organization. Campbell sold the program for broadcast not only in Detroit, but also in New York and Chicago. Campbell established a three-station hook-up with WXYZ feeding the program to WOR New York and WGN Chicago. The hook-up was called the Mutual Broadcasting System (MBS). The final broadcast on a nationwide basis was on September 3, 1954.

Brace Beemer narrated the program during the time that Earle Graser played the part of the Ranger. Graser was killed in an auto accident on April 8, 1941, and for a period of several broadcasts the Ranger was portrayed as being very ill and wasn't heard except for heavy breathing. After a sufficient time had passed, Beemer became the Ranger. Thus, there was no sudden change of voice for the Lone Ranger.

Tonto's horses were named White Feller, Paint, and Scout. Tonto's conversations with the Lone Ranger often included the phrase "Kemo Sabe" –which is translated "Faithful Friend." Another familiar part of the show was the closing, which usually involved someone asking, "Who was that masked man?"–and as the Lone Ranger and Tonto galloped off into the distance, the reply would come, "Why, don't you know? That man was...the Lone Ranger!"

Trendle and Striker also created The Green Hornet. There are some interesting parallels between the two programs, as noted in the listing for The Green Hornet.

Lux Radio Theatre

Drama

- Hosts: Cecil B. DeMille (June 1, 1936, to January 22, 1945); William Keighley (December 1945 to June 6, 1955); Irving Cummings (occasionally as substitute)
- Announcers: Mel Ruick, John Milton Kennedy, Ken Carpenter
- Directors: Antony Stanford, Cecil B. DeMille, Frank Woodruff, Fred MacKaye, Earl Ebi
- Writers: Charles S. Monroe, Sanford Barnett, Stanley Richards, Carroll Carroll, Ed James

"Lux . . . presents Hollywood!" was a familiar phrase to Monday-night radio listeners from June 1, 1936, to June 6, 1955. When this Blue network program was originally broadcast from New York on Sunday afternoons, beginning in 1934, under Antony Stanford's direction, it featured hour-long adaptations of Broadway plays starring Broadway actors. In 1936 Lever Brothers moved the show to Hollywood, where Cecil B. DeMille took over as host and director, and from then on The Lux Radio Theatre featured radio adaptations of famous motion pictures using movie stars as the leading actors. Sometimes the same actors who appeared in the radio version had appeared in the movie, but more often other stars assayed the roles.

The first program based upon a film starred Marlene Dietrich and Clark Gable in "The Legionnaire and the Lady," an adaptation of the motion picture Morocco. The following program was "The Thin Man," starring Myrna Loy and William Powell. Over the years Don Ameche appeared more than any other actor, playing leads in eighteen different productions. Fred MacMurray was next with seventeen appearances. Barbara Stanwyck starred in more productions than any other actress-fifteen. Claudette Colbert and Loretta Young tied for second with fourteen each.1

In 1945 DeMille relinquished his position as host-director under rather unusual circumstances. As required of all performers, DeMille was a member of the American Federation of Radio Artists (AFRA), the radio performers' union. In the fall of 1945 a proposition regarding closed-shop union rulings was to be voted on in the California election. AFRA was in favor of closed shops and assessed its members one dollar each to help support a campaign in this regard. De-Mille, adamantly opposed to closed

DeMille. shops, refused to pay the assessment on the grounds that his payment of one dollar would nullify his opposition vote. AFRA ruled that anyone who did not pay the assessment would be suspended and thereby prevented from appearing on the air. Thus De-Mille was banned from the air because he would not pay the one dollar or allow anyone else to pay it for him. After a year of on-the-air auditions of various possible hosts, William Keighley was selected as the new permanent host.

ANNOUNCER. And now . . . Oxydol's own Ma Perkins.

This serial drama was set in the town of "Rushville Center" where "Ma Perkins" operated a lumberyard. It made its debut over NBC on December 4, 1933, and was on the air for twenty-seven years for a total of 7065 broadcasts, with Virginia Payne playing "Ma" for the program's entire run. Ma Perkins had perhaps the best sponsor identification of all the "soap operas" through its long association with Oxydol.

The Make-Believe Ballroom

Music

Host: Martin Block

This was the first commercially successful record program, though its title had been used earlier in Los Angeles by Al Jarvis.

Martin Block scored a hit with The Make-Believe Ballroom in New York (on station WNEW) by referring to the various orchestras playing on the mythical stages in the "Crystal Studio" of WNEW during the radio coverage of the Hauptmann trial. Block generally devoted fifteenminute segments of this two-hour program to an individual singer or orchestra's recordings. The bestremembered theme was "It's Make-Believe Ballroom Time," written by Martin Block and Mickey Stonner and recorded by Glenn Miller. Its lyrics included:

- It's Make-Believe Ballroom Time And free to everyone.
- It's no time to fret.
- Your dial is set
- For fun.
- For run.

Just close your eyes and visualize In your solitude.

- Your favorite bands are on the stands
- And Mister Miller puts you in the mood.

fourth lines of the theme. After listening to recordings over and over, we found the lyrics to be as follows, with the third and fourth lines still uncertain:

- Jump on the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round
- We're touring alluring old New York town.
- Broadway to Harlem a musical show
- The orchestra tunes up to your radio.
- We're serving music, fun, and laughter

A happy heart will follow after.

- And we'd like to have you all with us
- On the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round.

Opening:

- ORCHESTRA AND CHORUS. Theme, then under . . .
- FORD BOND. Here's the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round that brings you the bright side of life, that whirls you in music to all the big night spots of New York town to hear the top songs of the week sung so clearly you can understand every word and sing them yourself.

This program, heard Sundays at 9:00 p.m. over NBC, began in the early 1930s and was made up of a series of imaginary visits to night spots around Manhattan. The show became thoroughly identified with its long-time sponsor, Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder (announcer Ford Bond always stressed the word "Powder" when he read the script). Many listeners, through the years, became curious as to what the "L" stood for in Thomas L. Thomas. It was a Welsh name-Llyfwny.

Documentary

Narrator: Marvin Miller Producer: Joseph McCaughtry Writer-Director: Larry Young

This was a syndicated series of fiveminute programs (260 in all) recorded in 1948 and 1949. It was subtitled "Prelude to Greatness" and always dealt with a famous man who faced a crisis in his life or career and managed to solve it. The name of the man was never revealed until the last words of the program. Marvin Miller narrated and did all the voices.

In 1958 CBS ran another series using the same title. Miller again was the narrator and handled all the voices. This series was directed by Max Hutto, Harfield Weedin, Gene Webster, and Jack Rebney and written by Robert Turnbull, Marvin Miller, Elizabeth Dawson Miller, and Catherine Christopher. The scripts for this series were basically the ones used on Mutual's Behind the Story.

Variety

Featuring: Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers

Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart," and Buddy Rogers, "America's Boy Friend," an actor and bandleader, were husband and wife. Miss Pickford was the first major movie star to be identified by name. Previous actresses had been identified only by titles, such as "The Biograph Girl" (Florence Lawrence). Despite her vast experience as an actress, she developed a bad case of "mike fright" in her first radio appearances. NBC engineers camouflaged her microphone with a lampshade so that she

Mayor LaGuardia Reads the Funnies

Talk

In 1945 Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia made radio history with his reading of the Sunday comics. This came about as a result of the strike by newspaper deliverers, which deprived the area of its prime source of Sunday recreation. Instead of the Mayor's usual weekly program on municipally owned station WNYC, Talk to the People, the Mayor read "Dick Tracy" and other Sunday comics to the kiddies. He embellished his reading with histrionics, vocal sound effects, and, most important, with comments on morality. He referred to Dick Tracy's slim figure and asked why his New York policemen couldn't be that trim.

WNYC donated its recordings of the programs of July 8, 1945, and July 15, 1945, to the Brooklyn Public Library, where they may still be heard.

The Mercury Theatre on the Air

Drama

Host: Orson Welles Producers: Orson Welles, John Houseman

The Mercury Theatre on the Air was a pioneer program of quality drama and experimental radio presentations. It made its debut over CBS in 1938. Orson Welles ("Your obedient servant") wrote, produced, directed, and starred on many of the broadcasts and developed such actors as Joseph Everett Sloane, Cotten, Agnes Moorehead, and the man Welles once called the greatest of all radio actors -Ray Collins. Various classics were dramatized, such as Jane Eyre by Charlotte Brontë.

On Sunday evening, October 30, 1938, The Mercury Theatre on the Air, as a Halloween stunt, presented Howard Koch's adaptation of H. G. Wells' The War of the Worlds. This dramatization of an invasion by space creatures at Grovers Mills, New Jersey, was so realistic that thousands of listeners were panic-stricken. Although disclaimers attesting to the fact that the broadcast was fictional were given on the program, such a furor ensued that the federal government was requested to take steps to insure that no such program could be broadcast again without making absolutely certain the listeners would understand it was fiction. Orson Welles played the lead in the Howard Koch (pronounced "Kotch") script: "Professor Richard Pearson of Princeton University."

The Mercury Theatre on the Air also performed a spectacular sixepisode dramatization of Victor Hugo's Les Misérables with Welles as "Jean Valjean," Martin Gabel as "Javert," and Alice Frost as "Cosette." Others in the cast included Ray Collins, Richard Widmark, John Mc-Intire, and Agnes Moorehead.

ple Square in Salt Lake City, Utahas it has done since 1929. It is the oldest continuous nationwide network series in American radio. The choir is composed of 375 singers from all walks of life-farmers, housewives, bankers, teachers, etc.-all of whom are unpaid professionals.

Originally the broadcasts were carried over NBC by the local affiliate, KSL. In 1932, KSL switched to CBS affiliation, and the broadcast went with it. The original director of the choir was Professor Anthony C. Lund of Brigham Young University. The producer and announcer was Earl J. Glade. In 1935, with the death of Professor Lund, J. Spencer Cornwall was appointed choir director and held that position until 1957. In that same year Richard L. Evans took over the job of producing, directing, and announcing the programs. Both Cornwall and Evans were the voices who gave "The Spoken Word" each week, a message of inspiration and stimulation. Among the organists were Alexander Schreiner and Frank Asper. The Musical Steelmakers grew out of an industrial program presented each week on WWVA Wheeling (West Virginia). The series started on November 8, 1936, and featured people employed by a local steel corporation. John Wincholl, for example, was an accountant in the general offices. J. L. Grimes was credited with putting together the particular program that caught on with the listeners; this led to a network series over Mutual in 1938 from Wheeling's Capitol Theater. The Steele Sisters, incidentally, were not all sisters; the group was originally a trio, then became a quartet.

Musicians

Music comprised an important segment of radio entertainment. Among the well-known musicians of radio's Golden Age were organist Jesse Crawford ("The Poet of the Organ"); violinist-composer Emery Deutsch; pianist-composer George Gershwin: singer-pianist Art Gillham ("The Whispering Pianist"); pianistcomposer-orchestra leader Johnny Green; guitarist Tito Guizar (also a singer); xylophonist Yoichi Hiraoka; violinist Jules Lande ("The Troubadour of the Violin"); violinist Florence Richardson; Honey Chile Robinson (a precocious child pianist); Shandor (a Gypsy violinist); Eddie South (a violinist billed as "The Dark Angel of the Violin"); Alec Templeton (a blind pianist-composer); singer-violinist Anthony Trini ("The Romantic Fiddler"); singer-pianist Happy Jack Turner; and pianist Leo Zollo.

There were also many teams and groups of musical performers who turned up on various radio programs. Among the most prominent were Bennett and Wolverton (singerpianist Betty Bennett and guitarist Joe Wolverton); the piano team of Braggiotti and Fray (Mario Braggiotti and Jacques Fray); Borrah Minevitch and His Harmonica Rascals; the piano team of Muriel and Vee (Muriel Pollack and Vee Lawnhurst); and Carson Robison and His Buckaroos, a Western music group comprised of Carson Robison, John and Bill Mitchell, and Pearl Pickens, who was actually Mrs. Bill Mitchell. # NBC Symphony

Music

The NBC Symphony Orchestra was formed in 1936 under the conductorship of Maestro Arturo Toscanini and performed each week over the NBC network. The Maestro was coaxed out of retirement in Italy after David Sarnoff of NBC made up his mind that such a program could make a great contribution by bringing fine music to the masses. Every effort was made to gather together the world's finest musicians, and NBC raided the country's leading musical organizations in an effort to build the ninety-piece orchestra. The special radio studio constructed at Rockefeller Center in New York for the orchestra was known as "8H." It was described as the world's only "floating" studio because of its unique construction.

Dr. Frank Black appeared frequently as conductor of the NBC Symphony. Ben Grauer was the announcer on most of the broadcasts.

The Networks

In the early days of radio, stations in various parts of the country began broadcasting independently of one another. Among the earliest stations broadcasting regularly were those which eventually became WWJ Detroit and KDKA Pittsburgh. The station claiming the record as the oldest in the United States is KCBS San Francisco, which was broadcasting regularly as a 15-watt school station in 1909 and is still on the air.

It wasn't long, however, before the independent stations began to provide programing for one another, and eventually they joined together in what came to be known as networks. In 1926 General Electric, Westinghouse, and RCA formed the Broadcasting Company National with David Sarnoff as its leading organizer; and the next year Arthur Judson, a concert artists' manager, formed the Columbia Broadcasting System along with George A. Coats and J. Andrew White. In 1934 the Mutual Broadcasting System was formed and became the largest of the networks. The difference, however, was that Mutual owned no stations whereas NBC and CBS owned and operated many of their own network stations.

During the late 1930s the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) launched an investigation into "chain broadcasting" and the possible monopolistic tendencies therein. NBC at that time owned two separate networks, the Red network and the Blue network. Simultaneously with the release of the FCC's report, recommending the end of multi-network ownership, NBC decided to sell NBC Blue. The sale of this network in 1943 to Edward J. Noble, the owner of Life Savers, eventually led to the formation of the American Broadcasting Company. After that, the Red network became simply NBC.

There were several regional networks too-among them the Don Lee network in California, The Yankee network in New England, and the Liberty Broadcasting System, which was set up primarily to carry sports broadcasts. The "regionals" were mostly formed to act as convenient clearing houses for sales packages and with some exceptions didn't do anywhere near the volume of programing as the big four networks.

News and Newscasters

There were literally hundreds of newscasters, both locally and nationally, who brought the news of the world into our homes. Thus radio, particularly during World War II, made a major contribution toward keeping Americans informed.

Among the most famous newscasters and reporters were Gabriel Heatter, whose opening line, "Ah, there's good news tonight!" reassured millions of Americans each evening; Floyd Gibbons, who pioneered onthe-spot remote news broadcasts (his trademark was a white patch worn over his left eye); Boake Carter ("Cheerio!"); Elmer Davis, whose flat, unemotional, midwestern voice seemed to offer a reasonable perspective on the news; Paul Harvey ("Good . . . night!"); Edwin C. Hill with "The Human Side of the News"; H. V. (Hans von) Kaltenborn, whose clipped speech was parodied by President Truman following the commentator's inaccurate forecast of a Dewey victory in the 1948 election; Fulton Lewis, Jr. (". . . and that's the top of the news as it looks from here"); Herbert Morrison, who described the historic explosion of the German dirigible Hindenburg on May 6, 1937; Drew Pearson, whose outspoken comments often made headlines themselves (his announcer introduced him with, "And now, Drew Pearson, whose predictions have proved to be eighty-four per cent accuratel"); and Lowell Thomas, who started in radio in 1930, substituting for Floyd Gibbons, and who signed off each night with "So long . . . until tomorrow."

Edward R. Murrow deserves some special attention. In the late thirties his nightly broadcasts from London ("This is London . . .") brought news of the impending war in Europe, and Americans were alerted by his commentary to the threat of Nazi Germany. Murrow's social conscience and broadcasting acumen helped to launch such successful news documentaries as Hear It Now, which brought a new dimension to radio's comments on the news of the day.

Other well-known commentators and newscasters were: Cedric Adams; Martin Agronsky; Robert Allen, who teamed with Drew Pearson for a time; H. R. Baukhage (Hilmar Robert Baukhage), who always opened with "Baukhage talking"; Morgan Beatty; Cecil Brown; Clellan Card, who often impersonated people he quoted, such as FDR, Churchill, etc.; Sheila Carter (Boake Carter's sister); Henry Cassidy; W. W. Chaplin; Raymond Clapper; Upton Close; Charles Collingwood; Bob Considine; John

Charles Daly, whose voice we heard announcing the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor; Alex Dreier; George Fielding Eliot; Cedric Foster; Pauline Frederick, who was one of the few successful female commentators (the others were Lisa Sergio and Dorothy Thompson); Arthur Gaeth; Don Gardiner ("Monday Morning Headlines"); Earl Godwin; Peter Grant; Taylor Grant; Royal Arch Gunnison: John Gunther (also a distinguished author); Arthur Hale; Richard Harkness; Joseph C. ANNOUNCER. One Man's Family is dedicated to the mothers and fathers of the younger generation and to their bewildering offspring. Tonight we present Chapter One of Book Six, entitled "Three Months Between." [Other sample chapter titles: "Clifford Throws a Party," "Christmas Eve at the Barbours'," "Paul Meets the Widow," "The Gathering of the Leaves."]

One Man's Family made its debut on radio on Friday, April 29, 1932, from 9:30 to 10:00 p.m. PST, over NBC stations in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Seattle. Two or three weeks later the rest of the western NBC network was added. The program began broadcasting on the entire NBC network on May 17, 1933, and was the first serial to originate in San Francisco for the entire network. In order to bring the rest of the country up to date, the network broadcasts from May 17, 1933, until January 5, 1934, were devoted to presenting a somewhat condensed version of the Barbour family story from its beginning.

The format consisted of thirtyminute programs, broadcast once a week, through Sunday, June 4, 1950. Then the programs were fifteen minutes in length, five days a week, from June 5, 1950, through May 8, 1959, the last broadcast. In the bookchapter identification, the last broadcast was Chapter 30 of Book 134. There were 3256 episodes in all, not counting repeats for different time zones.

Measured by the calendar, One Man's Family was the longest-running serial drama in American radio. It told the week-to-week (and later dayto-day) story of the Barbour family, who lived in the Seacliff section of San Francisco.

Henry and Fanny Barbour had five children:

Paul, a World War I aviator, was the all-knowing oldest brother to whom all the others took their problems; he was a writer and lived in an attic with his adopted daughter Teddy.

Hazel was almost an old maid when she married dairy farmer Bill Herbert; they had twin sons, Hank and Pinky, and a daughter. Some years after Bill died she married Dan Murray. Claudia was a rebel until her second husband, British Army Captain Nicholas Lacey, tamed her to only occasional flare-ups; they were aboard a ship that was torpedoed during World War II, but were rescued and interned in a German concentration camp until after the war.

Cliff, Claudia's twin, was a kind of ne'er-do-well, unable to make up his mind about anything serious. His only period of tranquillity was during his marriage to his second wife, Irene, who was killed in an automobile accident. When actor Barton Yarborough died in 1951, the authors sent Cliff to Scotland, where he became successful in business and married for a third time.

Jack, the baby, married the girl down the block while he was still in college and ultimately showed signs of being the one who would succeed Father Barbour as head of the family. He and Betty had six daughters, three of them triplets.

In its last years the series was built around the lives of Hazel's twin sons, Hank and Pinky. Hank was the solid one who always did the right thing, while Pinky was in and out of trouble most of the time.

The cast over the years included many actors and actresses who were already or were later to become well known, most of them playing relatively small roles. They include Edgar Barrier, Hans Conried, Dick Crenna, Rosemary De Camp, Ted de Corsia, Larry Dobkin, Betty Lou Gerson, Vivi Janniss, Jack Kruschen, Lyn Lauria, Richard Legrand, Elliott Lewis, John McIntire, Howard Mc-Near, Ruth Perrott, Hal Peary, Cameron Prud'Homme, Isabel Randolph, Alice Reinheart, Anne Stone, Gil Stratton, Jr., D. J. Thompson, Les Tremayne, Lurene Tuttle, Luis Van Rooten, Theodor von Eltz, and Barbara Jean Wong.

Marvin Miller played more roles than any other actor in the series; he played twenty different parts, sometimes two or more of them in the same broadcast.

Orchestra Leaders

One of the most important facets of radio was music. Orchestras were hired not only for musical broadcasts and the big variety shows but even for dramatic programs. In such an unmusical program as Mr. District Attorney, for example, the orchestra was important in providing unobtrusive but vital musical backgrounds and bridges. In addition to those in the program listings and those included in Big Band Remotes, the following orchestra leaders appeared frequently on radio:

Irving Aaronson, Don Alberto, Mario Antabal, Jeno Bartal, Leon Belasco (also an actor and dialectician), Maximilian Bergere, Fred Berrens, Charles Boulanger, Del Campo (also a singer), Reggie Childs. Jolly Coburn, Emil Coleman, Bernie Cummins, Ben Cutler, Eli Dantzig, Jack Denny, Angelo Ferdinado, Felix Ferdinado, Max Fransko, Fran Frey (also a singer), Richard Gasparre, Emerson Gill, Jean Goldkette, Edwin Franko Goldman, Arthur Jarrett, Johnnie Johnson, Merle Johnston, Roger Wolfe Kahn, Al Katz, Al Kavelin, Alexander Kirilloff, Bennie Krueger, Frank La Marr, Eddie Lane, Enric Madriguera, Dolphe Martin, Don Marton, Marti Michel, Kel Murray, Leon Navara, Nick Orlando, Lee Perrin, Mischa Raginsky, Don Redmond, Joe Reichman, Leo Reisman, Freddie Rich, Sam Robbins, Willard Robison (also a singer, known as "The Evangelist of Rhythm"), Buddy Rogers (also an actor), Luis Russel, Paul Sabin, Harold Sanford, Scotti, Ben Selvin, Irving Selzer, Ray Sinatra, Ted Steele (also a singer), Harold Stern, Paul Tremaine, Anson Weeks, Fess Williams, Frank Wine-Gar, Gleb Yellin, and Horacio Zito.

Among the many famous symphony conductors were Arturo Toscanini and Dr. Frank Black, who led the NBC Symphony Orchestra; and Alexander Smallens, who was long associated with programs sponsored by Ford. See also Big Band Remotes; Musicians; Singers.

ANNOUNCER. Our Gal Sunday . . . the story of an orphan girl named Sunday, from the little mining town of Silver Creek, Colorado, who in young womanhood married England's richest, most handsome lord, Lord Henry Brinthrope. The story asks the question—Can this girl from a mining town in the West find happiness as the wife of a wealthy and titled Englishman? Our Gal Sunday, which evolved from an earlier CBS program called Rich Man's Darling, made its debut on March 29, 1937, and was heard over CBS consistently at 12:45 p.m. It was sponsored variously by Anacin, Standard Brands, and American Home Products. The program's locale was the state of Virginia; "Lord Brinthrope's" manor was "Black Swan Hall."

- Writers: Louis M. Heyward, Mike Sklar, Eugene Wang
- Sound Effects: Al Cooney, Adrian Penner

A group of studio contestants were pitted against one another. Each contestant was assigned a different colored flash of light, which he activated by pressing a buzzer in front of him. If he thought he knew the answer he pressed the buzzer. If he answered correctly he won the round, but if the answer was wrong he was disqualified until the next round. The final round was a mystery featuring a guest detective such as "Nick Carter," "The Falcon," etc. The first contestant to spot the clue that solved the mystery won the round. Occasionally no one could unravel it, so the guest detective gave the solution himself.

The Quiz Kids

Quiz

- M.C.: Joe Kelly
- Announcers: Fort Pearson, Roger Krupp

Producer: Louis G. Cowan

Writers: John Lewellen, Maggie O'Flaherty

The Quiz Kids was one of the bestknown programs of its era. M.C. Joe Kelly posed difficult questions for a panel of exceptionally intelligent youngsters. The questions were tough even by adult standards. For example, the very first question asked of the panel on the première broadcast on June 28, 1940, was: "I want you to tell me what I would be carrying home if I brought an antimacassar, a dinghy, a sarong, and an apteryx."

The youngsters, all under sixteen years of age, comported themselves quite well with such questions. However, lest parents of today make comparisons with their own offspring, it should be pointed out that, many years after the final broadcast, it was revealed that the panelists were given advance knowledge of some of the questions. Nevertheless, the youngsters on the show displayed great wit and intelligence and provided inspiration for many schoolchildren throughout the United States.

That first broadcast of The Quiz Kids was as a summer replacement

THE QUIZ KIDS 247

Directors: Jack Callahan, Riley Jackson, Forrest Owen, Ed Simmons, Clint Stanley

for a program starring the blind pianist-composer Alec Templeton, Friday nights on NBC. In the fall The Quiz Kids switched to the Blue network on Wednesday evenings and later moved back to NBC on Sunday afternoons. The Quiz Kids appearing on the first broadcast were sevenyear-old Gerard Darrow, Joan Bishop (thirteen), Van Dyke Tiers (thirteen), Mary Ann Anderson (fourteen), and Charles Schwartz (thirteen).

Chronologically, the first fifty Quiz Kids, in addition to the preceding, were: Lois Jean Ashbeck, George Coklas, Cynthia Cline, Joan Alizier, Virginia Booze, Richard Kosterlitz, Linda Wells, Lloyd Wells, Mary Clare McHugh, Marvin Zenkere, Clem Lane, Jr., Emily Anne Israel, Robert Walls, Jack Beckman, Davida Wolffson, Edith Lee James, Richard Williams, Geraldine Hamburg, Jack Lucal, Paul Kirk, Tim Osato, Muriel Deutsch, Elizabeth Wirth, Lucille Eileen Kevill, Barbara Hutchinson, Gloria Jean (a guest), Jack French, Gloria Hunt, Arthur Haelig, Richard Frisbie, Frank Mangin, Jr., William Wegener, Claude Brenner, Lois Karpf, Sheila Brenner, Pat Chandler, Corinne Shapira, Sally Bogolub, Joan McCullough, Nancy Bush, Joann Cohen, Lois Jean Hesse, Nanni Kahn, Nancy Coggeshall, and Inez Fox.

Later Quiz Kids included Harve Bennett Fischman, Ruth Duskin, Joel Kupperman, Patrick Owen Conlon, Ruel (Sparky) Fischman, Lonny Lunde, Sheila Conlon, Gunther Hollander, André Aerne, Nancy Wong, Norman D. (Skippy) Miller, Richard Weixler, John C. Pollock, Rochelle Liebling, Naomi Cooks, and Robert Burns.

Quiz of Two Cities

Quiz

Producer: Dan Enright Director: Ray Kremer

Two cities, represented by studio contestants, were pitted against each other on this quiz program. The rival cities were New York vs. Chicago, Minneapolis vs. St. Paul, San Francisco vs. Los Angeles, etc. The M.C. in New York was Michael Fitzmaurice. He would conduct the quiz in New York, then switch to Chicago for that city's turn.

Quiz Shows

Quiz shows were consistently ranked among the most popular programs. Professor Quiz and Uncle Jim's Question Bee are generally regarded as being the first major quiz programs on the air. A number of others soon filled the airwaves, including Take It or Leave It, Vox Pop, Dr. I. Q., Double or Nothing, Quick as a Flash, Quiz of Two Cities, Quizzer Baseball, and Spelling Bee. Some used straight question-and-answer formats. but many had such production values as an M.C. who could handle comedy interviews with the contestants. Stars such as Phil Baker, Garry Moore, Bob Hawk, and Groucho Marx excelled at this, and the actual quiz became secondary to the interview.

Music was the basis for many quiz shows, such as Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge and Beat the Band. There were also some rather esoteric formats, such as Grand Slam, which was based on the rules of bridge. Youngsters got their chance to shine intellectually on The Quiz Kids. Then there was It Pays To Be Ignorant, a fully scripted comedy quiz that was a take-off on the panel quiz Information, Please! The prizes on radio quiz shows didn't involve immense jackpots until Stop the Music came along in 1948, offering a dazzling jackpot for the listener correctly identifying the "Mystery Melody."

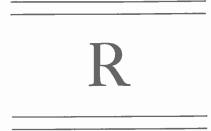

Most quiz shows were legitimate, and the M.C. often had to admonish the studio audience with, "No help from the audience, please." However, some programs took the liberty of telling contestants prior to air time how to answer certain questions so as to provoke a laugh. For instance, one contestant on Give and Take was told in advance to respond to the question, "What is the difference between bailing out of an airplane and bailing out of a boat?" by declaring, "Well, you better not use a bucket when you bail out of an airplane!"

Drama

Featuring: Guest Stars Announcer: Fred Collins Producer: Richard McDonough Director: Harry Junkin Sound Effects: Jerry McGee, John Powers

In one memorable program in this NBC series, John Larkin played a scientist and Bill Lipton a jet pilot who experiments with speed, crashes through the time barrier, and suffers a loss of age. When the pilot and wreckage are finally discovered, the pilot is an infant almost smothered in the uniform. Unfortunately, the show was on the air the same evening as an Air Force defense drill. Many listeners had not heard about the drill, and when they saw lights searching the skies for "the enemy" and were bombarded by the sounds of jet aircraft, they assumed the radio show was describing the real thing. The broadcast was in a documentary style so it was easy to jump to the wrong conclusion. The program marked the end of such realistic radio scripts.

MARVIN MILLER. Ladies and gentlemen, The Railroad Hour!

This popular Monday-night NBC program was sponsored by the Association of American Railroads. It had a brief run as a forty-five-minute program on ABC before turning up on NBC in 1948 in a thirty-minute format. It was a high-budget series and survived until 1954.

The Railroad Hour presented famous musical comedies as well as original stories with music. The guests opposite Gordon MacRae were top names, such as Jo Stafford, Rise Stevens, and Jane Powell. During the summer a standard female vocalist was vis-à-vis MacRae-some years it was Dorothy Warenskjold, others Lucille Norman. A large dramatic cast was also used on the program, with announcer Marvin Miller often doubling in acting roles and even singing occasionally.

Religion

In the very early days of radio Sunday was devoted mainly to religious programs or programs of serious intellectual content. In fact, many stations in those days were owned and operated by religious groups or individual churches, and the general feeling among broadcasters was that it was not appropriate to have any other kind of programing on Sunday. The Fitch Bandwagon has generally been credited with being one of the first big variety shows to break into the Sunday line-up. Eventually religious programing was relegated to Sunday mornings for the most part.

Several religious personalities emerged as early radio "stars." Billy Sunday, a former professional baseball player who became the foremost evangelist of his day, preached with great fervor on radio. His program first appeared over CBS in 1929 and was called The Back Home Hour. Another noted figure was Elder Michaux, whose full name was Solomon Lightfoot Michaux (pronounced "Me-Shaw"). The theme used by this Negro preacher was "Happy Am I." But the most famous-and most controversial-religious personality of the day was Father Coughlin.

The Reverend Charles E. Fuller presided over The Old-Fashioned Revival Hour. In its early days it was broadcast from the Hollywood Women's Club, with a studio audience of only fifty persons. In 1940, in order to accommodate the large crowds, the Reverend Fuller rented the 4400-seat

Long Beach Municipal Auditorium in Long Beach, California. By 1943 he was the biggest buyer of time on the Mutual network for his religious broadcasts. The program's theme was "Heavenly Sunshine."

Toward the end of radio's Golden Age, Billy Graham, the stirring evangelist from North Carolina, became a familiar voice on radio on The Hour of Decision. He applied the Bible to modern times instead of dwelling upon its historical aspects. His theme was "How Great Thou Art." The Hour of Decision was first heard nationally over ABC in 1950.

Among the other long-running religious broadcasts were:

The National Radio Pulpit—a series featuring the Reverend S. Parkes Cadman, first broadcast nationally over NBC in 1926. In the 1930s the Reverend Ralph Sockman was featured.

National Vespers—a program conducted by the Reverend Harry Emerson Fosdick; it began over NBC in 1927.

The Catholic Hour-featuring guest speakers and music of the Church; it began on NBC in 1920.

The Mormon Tabernacle Choir, which began in 1929 and featured a sermon referred to as "The Spoken Word."

The CBS Church of the Air-a series that began in 1931.

Religion in the News-a discussion of religious topics conducted by Walter Van Kirk; it began over NBC in 1933.

Message of Israel-a pioneer Jewish religious series founded by Rabbi Jonah B. Wise in 1934 over NBC. The Gospel Hour-a series featuring religious speakers and music; it was first heard over Mutual in 1936.

The Lutheran Hour-a program of religious speakers and sacred music, featuring for many years the Reverend Walter A. Maier; it began in 1938 over Mutual.

Radio Bible Class—a series first broadcast nationally over Mutual in 1940.

Young People's Church of the Air -first presented over Mutual in 1940.

The Voice of Prophecy-first broadcast nationally over Mutual in 1941.

The Hour of Faith-a series first heard nationally over ABC in 1942.

The Back to God Hour-a religious broadcast first heard nationally over Mutual in 1948.

The Robert Burns Panatela Program

Comedy-Variety

- Starring: George Burns and Gracie Allen
- Orchestra: Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians
- Director: Herschel Williams
- Writers: Carroll Carroll, Willy Burns, John P. Medbury, George Burns, Harry Conn

The Robert Burns Panatela Program began over CBS in 1932 and featured thirty minutes of comedy and music. Because Burns and Allen and the Lombardo band were frequently in different places, this was one of the very first variety shows to integrate music and talk originating in widely separated locations. The show rapidly rose to a highly ranked position among network programs following an all-network search for Gracie's "missing brother."

This was basically a publicity gimmick to help build the audience. Conceived by Bob Taplinger, head of publicity for CBS, the idea was for Gracie to start talking about her "missing brother" on the program, then plant stories in the newspapers. and finally actually walk into the middle of other radio programs looking for her brother. This was unheard of at the time, but the idea worked and garnered a great deal of free publicity in the short ten days that it lasted. The final touch was having Gracie appear on Rudy Vallee's program on the rival NBC. NBC said she couldn't mention her brother on that show, but Vallee did, and NBC took the show off the air. More publicity ensued from that. Through it all. Gracie's real brother simply wanted to get lost! (See also Burns and Allen.)

Roses and Drums featured dramatizations with a Civil War background. Professor M. W. Jernegan of the University of Chicago edited and checked the scripts for historical accuracy. The program made its debut over CBS in 1932 and lasted until March 29, 1936. The roses of the title signified love and romance, and the drums symbolized progress, war, and adventure. In the final episode, "Betty Graham" married "Captain Wright," the Yankee, after having been wooed by him and "Captain Claymore," the Southerner.

Roxy's Gang was broadcast from the Capitol Theatre, the Roxy Theatre, and Radio City Music Hall during its tenure on the air. It was the first radio show to broadcast from a theater. Roxy led the orchestra although he couldn't read music. All he needed to know was the general tempo-fast or slow-and he'd take it from there. He would honor musical requests and dedications, and he closed the show with "Good night . . . pleasant dreams . . . God bless you." His was the first show on radio to broadcast a complete symphony, a complete opera, and a complete oratorio. His initial network appearance with his gang was over NBC Blue in 1927.

- Producer-Director: Tom Hargis
- Producer: Art Rush
- Directors: Fran Van Hartesfeldt, Ralph Rose
- Writer: Ray Wilson

Roy Rogers, the self-styled "King of the Cowboys," had several programs featuring music and Western adventure. In 1944 his sponsor was Goodyear Tire and Rubber: the show presented Rogers and the Sons of the Pioneers. In 1948 his program featured himself. Dale Evans (his wife). and Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage. It was sponsored by Quaker Oats and Mother's Oats. The theme was "Smiles Are Made out of Sunshine," and the commercial jingle had such lines as "Delicious, nutritious, makes you ambitious." One of the premium offers was for branding-iron ring with the Double R Bar brand. This program was heard on Sunday nights. Then Post Sugar Crisp became the sponsor, and later Dodge automobiles (1953-55). Pat Brady replaced Gabby Haves during the Post series and the theme was "It's Roundup Time on the Double R Bar." "Happy Trails" was the theme when Dodge became the sponsor.

Catch-phrase:

RUDY VALLEE. Heigh-ho, everybody!

Rudy Vallee was host and producer of The Fleischmann Hour, which began broadcasting in 1929 and ended on September 28, 1939. During this time Vallee proved himself a pioneer of radio variety programs and also pointed the way for radio drama, situation comedy, and documentaries. His program showed careful attention to production detail, good writing, and quality performers. Beatrice Lillie, Ezra Stone, Edgar Bergen, Tommy Riggs, Carmen Miranda, Eddie Cantor, Milton Berle, Phil Baker, Alice Faye, Olsen and Johnson, Bob Burns, Lou Holtz, and many others made their première appearances on the air on his show.

Among the program segments that later became programs in their own right were The Aldrich Family and We, the People. The program also was the first to use stars of the theater in dramatic sketches written especially for radio rather than in scenes from Broadway plays, which had been the custom up until then. Later, Vallee was the star of The Sealtest Hour which co-starred John Barrymore. In 1945 and 1946 Vallee starred in a show from Hollywood carried by NBC and sponsored by Drene Shampoo. It was on this version that Marvin Miller served as commercial announcer. He also took part in comedy sketches. The directors of this series were Art Daly, Howard Wiley, and Jim Wright. Vallee was associated with many songs-foremost of them was "My Time Is Your Time." He is also remembered for his frequent salutes to Maine and his affection, in the early days, for a cheerleader's megaphone.

"The Shadow" made his first appearance on a program for Street & Smith's Detective Story magazine, which, of course, featured dramatizations of stories from the magazine. A young writer named Harry Charlot came up with the idea of the announcer being "The Shadow." Dave Chrisman and Bill Sweets of Ruthrauff and Ryan Advertising Agency carried the idea still further and had him become a narrator-an ethereal. disembodied voice that knew everything. The first actor to play the part was James LaCurto, who gave it up within a few weeks to appear on Broadway. He was succeeded by Frank Readick, who did the part for several years. The program became so successful that in order to copyright the idea Street & Smith began publishing a new magazine called The Shadow. Later the "Lamont Cranston" character was developed and became the model for such celebrated crime-fighters as "Superman," "Batman," and "Captain Marvel," who also lived two lives. By the time the series appeared on Mutual in 1036. "The Shadow" was no longer just the narrator but the principal character in the show.

RECORD. Swell . . . fade out behind

Although this ABC program was not on the air until after 1950, which would put it outside the scope of this book, it has been included because it was a radio milestone; when it went off the air on March 10, 1955, it virtually marked the end of top-flight radio adventures. It made its debut from Chicago on July 5, 1951.

Silver Eagle, Mountie was created by James Jewell, who was dubbed "Dean of the Adventure Stories," having also produced The Lone Ranger and The Green Hornet from their inception until 1938. At that time he moved from WXYZ to WWJ (Detroit stations), where he originated and directed the series titled The Black Ace, which introduced Danny Thomas in his first running comedy role in radio. Jewell's next writing and directing assignment was Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy (1943-51).

Singers

In addition to the many singers whose names appear in the cast lists, there were a number of other familiar voices that were not associated with any particular show. Among them were:

Sopranos Berenice Ackerman, Countess Olga Albani, Durelle Alexander, Josephine Antoine, Marion Claire, Vivienne Della Chiesa, Jean Dickenson, Eileen Farrell, Helen Jepson, Maria Jeritza, Ruth Lyon, Jeanette MacDonald, Lucy Monroe (famous for her renditions of "The Star-Spangled Banner"), Grace Moore, Lily Pons, Rosa Ponselle, Jane Powell, Bidu Sayao (from Brazil), and Jean Tennyson.

Contraltos Rose Bampton, Ruth Carhart, and Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink.

Baritones John Barclay, Clyde Barrie, Jack Berch ("I'm a-whistlin'... are ya listenin'?"), Phil Brito, Walter Cassel, Jerry Cooper, Nelson Eddy, Wilbur Evans, Michael Loring, Everett Marshall, Barry McKinley (also an orchestra leader), Tommy Mc-Laughlin, Robert Merrill, Vaughn Monroe (famous for singing "Racing with the Moon" and also an orchestra leader), Titta Ruffo, Whispering Jack Smith, John Charles Thomas ("Good night, Mother"), and Jerry Wayne.

Tenors Ron Alley, Gene Austin ("The Whispering Tenor"), Jimmy Brierly, Donald Dame, Tito Guizar (also a guitarist), Nino Martini, Johnny Marvin ("The Lonesome Singer of the Air"), Richard Maxwell, John McCormack, Bill Perry, Phil Regan, Lanny Ross, The Silver Masked Tenor (played by Joseph M. White, whose identity was kept secret from listeners), and Smiling Jack Smith ("The Singer with the Smile in His Voice").

Lee, Margo, Howard Marsh, Tony Martin, Mary McCoy, Edward Mc-Hugh ("The Gospel Singer"), Johnny Mercer (also a well-known composer of popular music), Helen Morgan, Edith Murray, Gertrude Niesen, Donald Novis, Olive Palmer, Jack Parker, Ramona, Leah Ray, Virginia Rea, Doris Rhodes, Lillian Roth, Genevieve Rowe, Olive Shea (also a noted actress), Sally Singer, Amanda Snow, Ted Steele (also an orchestra leader), Tamara (Tamara Drasin), Mel Tormé ("The Velvet Fog"), Arthur Tracy ("The Street Singer"), Anthony Trini (also a violinist), Sophie Tucker ("The Last of the Red-Hot Mamas"), Happy Jack Turner (also a pianist), Vera Van, Lee Wiley, and Willard Robinson (also an orchestra leader, known as "The Evangelist of Rhythm").

Certainly the best known of all the vocal quartets was The Ink Spots. The original members of this Negro group were tenor Ivory (Deek) Watson, bass Orville (Hoppy) Jones, baritone Charlie Fugua, and tenor Slim Greene. Later members included Bill Kenny, Herb Kenny, Billy Bowen, and Harold Frances. Bill Kenny, who joined the group in 1934 when Slim Greene died, provided the high tenor voice that became a trademark of The Ink Spots. During a recording of "If I Didn't Care," Orville Jones is said to have forgotten the tune and resorted to reciting the lyrics, a technique that became another trademark of the group.

Among the other famous vocal quartets were The Baker Boys (Will Donaldson, Frank Luther, Jack Parker, and Phil Duey-known for their "Yo ho, yo ho, yo ho"); The Cavaliers (tenors Morton Bowe and Jack Keating; baritone John Seagle, bass Stanley McClelland, and pianistarranger Lee Montgomery); The Charioteers (tenors Wilfred Williams and Eddie Jackson, baritone Ira Williams, bass Howard Daniel, and pianist James Sherman); The Deep River Boys (Vernon Gardner, George Lawson, Edward Ware, and Harry Douglass); The Four Southern Singers (brothers Owen, Robert, and James Ward and Annie Laurie, the wife of James); Maple City Four (Art Janes, Fritz Meissner, Pat Patterson, and Al Rice); The Martins Ouartet (Ralph Blane, Hugh Martin, and sisters Phyllis and Jo-Jean Rogers); The Mills Brothers (brothers John, Jr., Herbert, Donald, and Henry -when John, Jr., died in 1935 their father, John, Sr., took his place); and The Southernaires Quartet (bass William Edmondson, baritone Jay Stone Toney; tenor Homer Smith, soloist Lowell Peters).

Among radio's other singing groups were The Andrews Sisters (Patty, Maxene, and LaVerne); The Boswell Sisters (Connee-originally spelled Connie-Vet, and Martha); The De-Marco Sisters (Lily, Mary, and Ann); The Dinning Sisters (Lou and twins Iean and Ginger); The Double Daters (Chuck Goldstein, Helen Carroll, Ruth Doring, and Ray Charles); The Fontane Sisters (Geri, Marge, and Bea); The King Sisters (Donna Driggs, Louise Driggs, Alyce Driggs, and Yvonne Driggs); The King's Guards (Ken Darby, Bud Linn, and Jon Dodson-later known as The King's Men, which added Rad Robinson); The King's Jesters (John Ravencroft, Fritz Bastow, and George Howard); The Landt Trio (Dan, Earl, and Jack Landt-"Sing along with the Landt Trio"); The Mc-Guire Sisters (Dorothy, Phyllis, and Christine); The Merry Macs (Joe, Ted, and Judd McMichael, Cheri McKay, and Helen Carroll); The Modernaires (originally comprised of Chuck Goldstein, Harold Dickinson, Bill Conway, and Ralph Brewsterlater members included Paula Kelly, Virginia Maxey, Marian Hutton, Mel Tormé, Alan Copeland, Francis Scott, and Johnny Drake); The Pickens Sisters (Jane, Helen, and Patti Pickens); The Pied Pipers (John Huddleston, Jo Stafford, Chuck Lowry, Allen Storr, and Lee Gotch ): The Revelers (James Melton, Wilfred Glenn, Lewis James, Elliott Shaw, Frank Parker, and Robert Simmons); The Rhythm Boys (originally Bing Crosby, Al Rinker, and Harry Barris-later Ice Switzler, Al Dary, George MacDonald, and Ray Kulz); The Satisfiers (Art Lambert, Helen Carroll, Bob Lange, and Kevin Gavin); The Smoothies (a trio including at various times Charlie Ryan, Babs Ryan, Little Ryan, Babs Stewart, Daisy Bernier, and Lilyan Perron); The Tastyeast Jesters (Dwight "Red" Latham, Guy Bonham, and Wamp Carlson); The Three Debutantes (Betty, Margery, and Dot); The Three Marshalls (Peggy, Kay, and Jack Marshall-actually Peggy and Kay Marshall and Hugh Martin); and Tom, Dick and Harry (Bud Vandover as Tom, Marlin Hurt as Dick, and Gordon Vandover as Harry).

There were also a number of singing twosomes: Betty and Buddy (Betty Barton and Buddy Arnold); The Blossom Sisters (Helen and Dorothy Blossom); The Delmore Brothers (Alton and Rayburn); The Eberly Brothers (Bob Eberly and Ray Eberle -the latter changed the last letter of his surname); The Frazee Sisters (Jane and Ruth Frazee); The Gold Dust Twins (Goldy and Dusty, played by Harvey Hindermyer and Earle Tuckerman); The Lane Sisters (Priscilla and Rosemary Lane); and The Luther-Layman Singers (Frank Luther and Zora Layman).

Soap Operas

Soap operas were so called because these serial dramas, aimed mainly at the daytime women's audience, were often sponsored by one soap product or another. The usual form was a fifteen-minute broadcast on Monday through Friday somewhere between 10:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., at which point the "soaps" gave way to the children's adventure serials. The contents of the "soap operas" rarely varied-marital difficulties, terminal illnesses, amnesia, long-lost relatives, and all the other horrors of real life seemed to settle endlessly on the soap opera heroes and heroines. The sympathetic characters were almost always given Anglo-Saxon names, while the villains often had names with a "foreign" ring.

Determining the first "soap opera" is a difficult task, but our research has shown that the prototypes were Clara, Lu, 'n' Em; Painted Dreams; The Stolen Husband; and Marie, The Little French Princess-any one of which could well lay claim to being the "first" one on the air. A program called Henry Adams and His Book, produced by Patt Barnes over WHT Chicago in 1925, has also been considered a prototype of serial dramas. During the late 1920s and early 1930s, these and other programs featured continuing stories about continuing characters. Many were simply read by an actor playing all the parts, but eventually there evolved the system of actors and actresses, organists and sound effects, that became the familiar method of production. The category of "soap opera" is somewhat arbitrary when you consider that Vic and Sade was most often broadcast as a fifteen-minute, Monday-through-Friday, daytime program, but it was no more a "soap opera" than was, say, The Fred Allen Show.

Most of the serial dramas were broadcast from Chicago or New York, and some of them proved to be programs of great longevity. Indeed, many actresses made a career of playing one character every day for many years: Virginia Payne as "Ma Perkins," Anne Elstner as "Stella Dallas," Mary Jane Higby as "Joan Field Davis" in When a Girl Marries. Among the male performers, Arthur Hughes, regarded as one of the most gifted actors in the business, spent nearly all of his career in the role of "Bill Davidson" on Just Plain Bill.

The production team of Frank and Anne Hummert turned out more major "soap operas" than any other producer. Of the nearly two hundred serial dramas listed in this book, the Hummerts produced, among others, Amanda of Honeymoon Hill, Backstage Wife, David Harum, Evelyn Winters, Front Page Farrell, John's Other Wife, Just Plain Bill, Lora Lawton, Lorenzo Jones, Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, Nona from Nowhere, Orphans of Divorce, Our Gal Sunday, Real Stories from Real Life, The Romance of Helen Trent, Second Husband, Skippy, Stella Dallas, The Stolen Husband, Young Widder Brown-a remarkable record indeed. The Hummerts also produced a number of programs well outside the realm of "soap operas," such as Manhattan Merry-Go-Round and Mr. Chameleon.

Few people came to know the Hummerts intimately. Most of those associated with this husband-and-wife team regarded them as a stern, Victorian couple who expected their employees to adhere to a rigid moral code. Employing many writers and directors who worked in conditions not unlike a sweatshop, the Hummerts personally supervised every story outline, all the scripts and character development, and every aspect of the on-the-air production. The success of their serials attests to their meticulous craftsmanship.

uals (who have been classified somewhere between performers and technicians since they were a little of both), radio comedy and drama would have been considerably less effective, if not impossible. Their work was, in general, taken for granted by directors and casts. To the listeners of dramatic scenes, they didn't exist-at least they didn't exist if they were doing their jobs properly. The principal assignment was to create the appropriate mood and environment for various scenes. For example, a scene in a city might be introduced by traffic noises, while a rural scene might call for the sound of chirping crickets. Other commonly used, artificially created sounds were thunder, ocean roar, lapping water, horses' hoofbeats, coyote howls, gunfire, singing birds, office typewriters, marching soldiers, frying foods, various automobile and airplane effects. opening and closing doors and footsteps.

Footstep effects are a good example of the lengths to which the more imaginative sound-effects men would go for authenticity. A woman's footsteps would be made to sound different from those of a man so the listener wouldn't become confused. The speed of the walk would be important too, so the listener would know at once whether the character was sneaking, running, or just strolling leisurely. In action, the late Gene Twombly would slip on his special "walking" shoestight-fitting and with wooden soles and heels-and, standing in one spot on a board, seem almost to tap dance as he produced the effects of one man walking or two men running or "a fat lady in a tight girdle walking up stairs." As one of Jack Benny's soundeffects men, Gene was not allowed to do Benny's footsteps until he had practiced for many months and finally passed the approval of Benny himself.

In most instances the sound was unobtrusive and subtle. On comedy shows, however, the sound-effects man was often required to exaggerate for comic effect. Easily the most famous of all comedy sound effects was the weekly routine opening of Fibber McGee's hall closet (for details, see Fibber McGee and Molly). The horrendous cacophony of sirens and alarms when Jack Benny opened his vault and Mel Blanc's vocal sound effects as Benny's Maxwell automobile are other well-remembered comic sound effects.

As mentioned, occasionally a sound effect was produced vocally, but usually the reliance was on mechanically or manually produced effects; halfcoconut shells pounded rhythmically in a small box of dirt for a posse of cowboys; a large balloon filled with bird shot shaken vigorously for thunder; and a huge wooden tank of water in which a plunger was inserted when a dive into water was required. Simultaneously a three or four turntable amplifier would be employed to play records of rain, waves lapping, automobiles and airplanes, and other effects not possible otherwise. The need for an unusual effect called for great imagination on the part of the creators. One of the most famous occurred on Lights Out where the writer described a man being turned inside out. The sound-effects men solved this one by slowly and excruciatingly removing a tight rubber glove from one hand while the other man crunched strawberry boxes to represent the breaking bones.

The importance of the soundeffects men became obvious when a cue was missed or the effect was not convincingly performed. In such instances the scene could be ruined, and, particularly in the years when shows were live, such a slip might destroy the scene and cause the director to explode in anger or send the cast into fits of laughter. One of the most famous of these "fluffs" was when, in a dramatic moment, a sound-effects pistol jammed briefly, causing this sequence:

ACTOR. You swine! I'm going to take this pistol and shoot you. Take this! SOUND. Silence

ACTOR (thinking quickly). My gun . . . it's jammed! Luckily I have this knife and I'll stab you with it. Take this!

SOUND. Gunshot, loud and clear

Sound-effects men-and that expression is not totally accurate as a few women learned the trade, notably Ora Nichols-were part of one of the pioneer radio unions, AGRAP (American Guild of Radio Announcers and Performers, which also included directors in its membership).

Among the busiest men in sound effects, in addition to those listed under specific programs, were Jack Amerine, Ed Blainey, Joe Cabibbo, Fred Cole (the penguin in the Kools commercials), Manny Cramer, Keene Crockett, Ralph Curtis, Jerry De Carlo, Jimmy Dwan, Ray Erlenborn, Harry Essman, Ronald Fitzgerald, Agnew Horine, Elliott Grey, Ray Kelly, Gene Twombly, Harold Johnson, Jr., Fred Knoepfke, Billy Gould, Bud Tollefson, Ed Ludes, Ray Kremer, Edward Fenton, Ross Martindale, Jack Wormser, Lloyd J. Creekmore, Ross Murray, William McClintock, Harry Nelson, Kjell Pederson, John Powers, Bob Prescott, William B. Hoffman, Clem Waters, Ted Slade, Jimmy Rinaldi, Jim Rogan, Terry Ross, Zale Dillon, Fritz Street, Walter Gustafson, Vic Rubi, James Flynn, Harry Saz, and Max Uhlig.

Sports and Sportscasters

Sports were an important element of network radio from the earliest days on. Even now, many fans insist they enjoyed the radio descriptions of great sports events more than they enjoy watching them today on television, which somehow doesn't always capture the glamour and excitement created by the great sportscasters in those early days. The standard events covered by radio included the World Series, the All-Star baseball game, the Army-Navy and post-season football bowl games, the Kentucky Derby, championship boxing matches (in Joe Louis's heyday they were among the greatest of all audience draws), and the Indianapolis 500.

In the early days staff announcers were frequently assigned to describe sporting events as routinely as they might be sent to cover a news story or broadcast a band remote. Then these announcers gave way to specialists with a thorough knowledge of sports. Eventually the networks began to hire famous sports personalities, such as Tom Harmon, dubbed "Old Number 98," his uniform number at Michigan, where he was an All-America halfback; Harold "Red" Grange, the Illinois All-America halfback known as "The Galloping Ghost"; and Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, the great pitcher for the Cardinals and Cubs and the bane of English teachers for his ungrammatical expressions ("He slud into third" and "They throwed him out at second"). In 1932, long before the networks employed these athletes, a former Cleveland Indians outfielder named Jack Graney broadcast Cleveland games, thereby becoming the first well-known athlete to become a sportscaster.

On April 11, 1921, Pittsburgh sportswriter Florent Gibson described over KDKA Pittsburgh the lightweight boxing match between Johnny Ray and Johnny Dundee-the first live sports event ever broadcast. On July 2, 1921, Major J. Andrew White, a news commentator, relayed the description of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight from Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City, New Jersey. The bout was broadcast over WJY. However, the listeners heard not White's voice but that of technician J. O. Smith, who repeated White's description into the microphone. (Dempsey won with a fourth-round KO.) On August 5, 1921, Harold Arlin did the first broadcast of a baseball game. It was carried over KDKA Pittsburgh. (The Pirates beat the Phillies 8-5.) Arlin was also the first sportscaster to describe a football game and a tennis match.

Among the other early sportscasters were Truman Bradley, Pat Flanagan, Tom Manning, Hal Totten, Ty Tyson, and Gunnar Wiig. But the most renowned of all was Graham Mc-Namee, who was also a top-flight program announcer. (He served as a foil for Ed Wynn on The Fire Chief.) McNamee pioneered many of the sportscasting techniques and expressions that are still in use today. He is properly known as "the father of sportscasting."

Ted Husing is also in a class by himself and is regarded by many fans as the greatest of all sportscasters. Clem McCarthy stands foremost as the top horse-racing sportscaster of his day. It wouldn't have been an important horse race if Clem McCarthy was not at the mike to growl into the microphone his familiar, terse greeting: "Racing fans!"

The most controversial sportscaster of radio's Golden Age was Bill Stern. His emotionally charged, piercing delivery made him ideally suited for play-by-play action, but he had a tendency toward exaggeration and overdramatization. A common complaint was that a fan watching the game while listening to Stern describing it over a portable radio would not recognize it as the same game. A routine pass play, for example, often generated this excited description: "There goes a long, long, LONG, LONG pass!!!" A player dropping a pass would often evoke such compassion as: "He had it and he dropped it! How do you think that boy feels now?" During broadcasts of Notre Dame games he often remarked: "There's a little lady listening to this game today," a reference to the widow of Notre Dame's immortal coach Knute Rockne. When the ball rested at midfield Stern occasionally interiected: "Please don't ask me whose fifty-yard line!" His vivid imagination carried over to his highly rated Sports Newsreel program, where he elevated Dwight Eisenhower to the All-

America roster, revealed that Pope Pius XII had been a baseball player in his youth, made super sports stars of countless prominent politicians, actors, and other celebrities who had, in fact, only dabbled in athletics, and on one occasion related the story of a baseball player who suffered a fatal heart attack between third base and home and was dead when he scored the winning run! Despite such flagrant fictionalization, Stern created tremendous interest in sports, particularly college football. He was clearly the most listened-to sportscaster of his day. Those who criticized his lack of concern for veracity admitted to his great talent as an entertainer, and few questioned his knowledge of sports, his energy, sense of timing, and announcing skill.

A number of sportswriters became well known as sports commentators. Among them were Bob Considine (also a noted news commentator): Grantland Rice (his All-America selections were considered by many fans to be the most authentic of all); Halsey Hall; and Bill Corum, who appeared at countless World Series and prizefight broadcasts to make succinct comments on the action in his gravel-voice. Certainly the most prominent boxing announcer was Don Dunphy, who became famous for his ringside descriptions of championship fights.

Several sportscasters (including Ford Bond, Ed Thorgersen, Paul Douglas, Bill Slater, and Mel Allen) served as program announcers in addition to covering sports. Allen eventually specialized in sports, and for many years this native of Birmingham, Alabama, was "The Voice of the Yankees." He was also a fixture on broadcasts of the World Series and the Rose Bowl. His catch-phrase "How about that?"—which he often used following an outstanding play became a household expression.

Among the other famous sportscasters of radio's Golden Age were Sam Taub, Walter Lanier "Red" Barber ("The Ol' Redhead"), Jim Britt, Bill Munday, Gordon McLendon (see Liberty Baseball), Sam Balter, Bill Brandt, Russ Hodges, Bob Elson ("He's out," Bob would say casually following a close play at first base), Stan Lomax, Arch MacDonald, Quin Ryan, Jack Drees, Joe Foss, Jack Brickhouse, Bert Wilson ("I don't care who wins just so it's the Cubs"), Harry Wismer, and Van Patrick.

Many sponsors picked up the tab for broadcasting sporting events, but, without question, the most consistent sports advertiser was the Gillette Safety Razor Company, whose commercials were a part of countless sports broadcasts that made up The Gillette Cavalcade of Sports.

Writer-Director: Hobart Donovan

This program made its debut over Mutual in 1944. One of the M.C.'s (Jack Bailey) was the villain who tried to upset and distract the studio contestants and make them give wrong answers. The other (Marvin Miller) was helpful, steering contestants to the correct answers.

Stop the Music

Musical Quiz

M.C.: Bert Parks Vocalists: Kay Armen, Dick Brown Orchestra: Harry Salter Also: Happy Felton Director: Mark Goodson Writer: Howard Connell

On this program, which made its debut over ABC in 1948, musical selections were played. If the number was sung, the vocalist hummed the song title but sang the rest of the lyrics clearly. Meantime, a telephone call was placed to a home somewhere in the United States. When the connection came through, a telephone bell was sounded and Bert Parks called out, "Stop the Music!" If the person at home could name the selection, a prize was awarded. In addition, contestants had a chance to guess the "Mystery Melody" for a giant jackpot.

Stop the Music was an immediate success; so much so that Fred Allen, who was on at the same time, announced a bond guaranteeing $5000 to anyone who was called by Stop the Music while listening to The Fred Allen Show.

This Is Your Life

Biography

M.C.: Ralph Edwards Director: Axel Gruenberg Writer: Jerry Devine On this program, which made its debut over NBC in 1948, Ralph Edwards related the life stories of the honored guests. Important people from the subject's life, such as teachers, employers, friends, and relatives, appeared on the program to surprise him. The producers of the program went to great lengths to keep the subject in the dark about his appearance on the show until the last possible minute. Usually he would be invited out for an evening with friends and then driven to the studio.

310 TOM MIX

The Ranch Boys-Shorty Carson, Jack Ross, Curley Bradley

Announcers: Don Gordon, Les Griffith, Franklyn Ferguson

Producer: Al Chance

- Directors: Charles Claggett, Clarence L. Menser
- Writers: George Lowther, Roland Martini, Charles Tazewell
- Theme: "When It's Round-up Time in Texas and the Bloom Is on the Sage"

Tom Mix was a popular cowboy movie star of the 1930s. However, he did not play himself in this radio series which originated in Chicago and made its debut over NBC in 1933. Instead, the actors listed above took his part.

Radio's "Tom Mix" lived on the "T-M Bar Ranch" in "Dobie Township." As in the films, his horse was Tony, the Wonder Horse, who often played a part in rescuing Tom from bad guys. Tom's friends and cohorts were "Straight Shooters," and one of the main moral points of the program was that "Straight Shooters always win."

Premiums were offered to listeners by the sponsor, Ralston, if box-tops and money were sent to Checkerboard Square, St. Louis, Missouri.

"Amos Q. Snood" was the Scrooge of Dobie and was known for his "Pink Pills for Pale People." "The Old Wrangler" would spout such homilies as, "Well, I'll be a lop-eared kangaroo with big black eyes, if it isn't round-up time!" Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou

- AUDIENCE. Laughter
- ANNOUNCER. Hello, there. We've been waiting for you. It's time to play Truth . . .

ORGAN. Glissando

ANNOUNCER. . . . or Consequences! sound. Razzing buzzer twice music. Theme

This program was the radio version of the old parlor game in which contestants must pay the consequences if they don't tell the truth. It made its debut over NBC in 1940. The questions were usually very silly and were seldom answered correctly, as it was almost expected that the contestant would rather participate in whatever stunt was planned than collect the money for a correct answer to the question. If the studio contestant didn't answer the question in the required time, Bob Prescott, the soundeffects man, activated Beulah the Buzzer, indicating that the consequence would have to be paid. The contestant was then launched into some kind of elaborate stunt, which might prove humorous, embarrassing, or sometimes sentimental—as when long-lost relatives were reunited through the designs of the stunt.

314 TUNE DETECTIVE

The program conducted some of radio's most famous contests, including "Mr. Hush" (Jack Dempsey), "Miss Hush" (Clara Bow), and "The Walking Man" (Jack Benny). Clues were offered concerning the identity of the foregoing celebrities, and a huge jackpot was eventually awarded to the winner of each contest. In another elaborately publicized stunt, the town of Hot Springs, New Mexico, changed its name to Truth or Consequences, New Mexico. (For a description of the elaborate warm-up for this program, see Announcers.)

"Hello, Little Friends, Hello"

(to the tune of "My Caroline")

I'm glad to see you look so fine.

How's Mama? How's Papa?

But tell me first just how you are.

"Hibbidy Gits"

Hibbidy gits, hass hah,

Rainbow ree, Sibonia,

Skividee, hi-lo-dee,

Horney-ka-dote, with an alikazon,

Sing this song with your Uncle Don.

"Uncle Don" broadcast locally to children in some eighteen nearby states over WOR in New York for twenty-one years. Although the program had only one brief year (1938– 39) as a network program, it is a classic among children's programs and is fondly remembered, somehow even by people who never heard it.

Uncle Don made its debut in September 1928, from 6:00 to 6:30 p.m., and continued in that time-slot until February 9, 1949. "Uncle Don" also read the funnies on Sundays at various times. The program was a combination of original stories and songs, advice, personal messages, birthday announcements, and lots of commercials. "Uncle Don" told stories about a typical girl and boy, "Susan Beduzen" and "Willipus Wallipus," and he sang songs about such unsavory children as "Meanwells," "Slackerminds," "Talkabouts," "Stuckups," and "Cryterions." A typical birthday greeting would congratulate a child (whose mother had written in with the pertinent facts), chide him for some bad habit (thumb-sucking and swearing were the biggest crimes), and then tell him he would find a present under the couch or behind the radio.

"Uncle Don" frequently arrived at the studio in his imaginary autogyro, which he called a "puddle-jumper." On Monday nights he would have a parade of "Earnest Savers," who had accounts at the Greenwich Savings Bank-or at least small tin banks that he gave out as a premium.

He held "The Uncle Don Healthy Child Contest" and had an "Uncle Don Talent Quest" for several years which included a trip to Hollywood and a screen test for the winners. He was a tireless worker for various charitable causes and frequently entertained in children's wards at hospitals and in the homes of extremely sick children. For them, and frequently on radio, he played his favorite song, "The Green Grass Grew All Around, All Around."

The program set a much-imitated standard for "kiddie" shows. Don Carney broke new ground in radio broadcasting, and among his many "firsts" were: personally checking out sponsors and their products before accepting them for the program; sampling sponsors' products on the air; and accepting free merchandise for his own use from non-sponsors in exchange for free plugs.

The one story about "Uncle Don" that has been told the most never even happened. The story alleges that he signed off the broadcast one night and then, thinking he was off the air, said, "I guess that'll hold the little bastards." Supposedly this went out over the air, and he was taken off the air for a period of time. None of it is true, even though you can find people today who swear they heard it, and even though there is a recording of so-called "on-the-air mistakes" that alleges to include this infamous fluff. It simply never happened. A columnist in Baltimore, where Uncle Don was not heard, made up the story to fill space on an otherwise dull news day. And the story just grew and grew.

To add to the confusion, two other radio performers are supposed to have said the same thing-John Daggett, who played "Uncle John" on KHJ Los Angeles, and John Keough, who played "Big Brother" on KPO San Francisco. If true, apparently Daggett wasn't fired while Keough was. And there it stands. (See Bibliography: Treadwell, Bill. Head, Heart, and Heel.)

The University of Chicago Round Table

Discussion

Directors: John Howe, George Probst

This long-running public-affairs program arose from a suggestion made by someone that the spirited luncheon conversation at the faculty club of the University of Chicago, which took place across the traditional large. round oaken tables, might be of interest to radio listeners. An inquiry was directed to NBC, which responded that it might be worth a try. On February 1, 1931, three professors sat around a card table at WMAQ Chicago discussing the Wickersham Commission report on prohibition. The public responded enthusiastically, and within two years NBC was carrying the show weekly, on Sunday afternoon, on the network. For more than twenty-four years the Round Table was the most popular discussion program on the air, consistently beating commercial shows in the ratings. At its peak it was carried by ninety-eight network and twenty educational stations and ranked among the nation's ten most popular radio shows. It drew as many as 16,000 letters in response to a provocative broadcast. Over 21,000 persons subscribed to the transcripts, which totaled nearly half a million copies annually. Programs were rebroadcast in Canada and England. Countless professors, writers, and public figures appeared on the broadcast, which had a relaxed, informal atmosphere.

A number of important firsts were scored by the Round Table. It was the first regular network program to be produced entirely without a script; it was the first regular network program to win a Peabody Award; and it was the first program to establish beyond all doubt the existence of deep public interest in non-commercial programing.

The final radio broadcast on the Round Table on June 12, 1955, was devoted to a discussion of the use of mass communications by the academic world, to clarify the issues of our society for the general public.

"Vic and Sade" were a married couple who lived "in the little house halfway up in the next block," in "Crooper, Illinois, forty miles from Peoria." "Vic," "Sade," "Rush," and "Uncle Fletcher" were the regularly featured characters on the show, with the others appearing occasionally, and with the "invisible characters" referred to frequently. "Vic" (whose full name was "Victor R. Gook") worked for "Plant No. 14" of the "Consolidated Kitchenware Company." "Uncle Fletcher" is best remembered for his nasal, rambling reminiscences about his friends and acquaintances, usually ending with, "... later died." He used to hang out at the "Bright Kentucky Hotel" and often watched the trains go by. His response to practically everything was "Fine."

Occasionally the announcer gave a credit at the conclusion of the show: "Sade's gowns by Yamelton's Department Store, Crooper, Illinois."

Opening:

WINCHELL. Good evening, Mr. and Mrs. North and South America and all the ships at sea . . . let's go to press!

Walter Winchell built up one of the highest-rated programs in radio history. Usually working in the studio with his hat on and operating a codesignal key to accent his dramatic, rapid-fire style of newscasting, he was heard by literally millions of American families on his Sunday-evening broadcast. During his tenure on the air he not only reported the news; he influenced the news with his tips and hints to prominent people.

Winchell had several sponsors. While Jergens Lotion was the sponsor the program was called The Jergens Journal, and Winchell wished his audience "lotions of love." Richard Stark was the announcer when Richard Hudnut was the sponsor, and Winchell introduced him with, "Now, here's Richard Stark for Richard Hudnut." Under Lucky Strike sponsorship, Winchell appeared on The Lucky Strike Magic Carpet.

What's the Name of That Song?

Musical Quiz

M.C.: Dud Williamson Bill Gwinn Director: Loyal Hays

A songfest was conducted in the studio prior to airtime to uncover people with reasonably good singing voices as contestants. Those selected were asked during the broadcast to listen to excerpts from three tunes. If a contestant could identify one of the three played during his turn at the microphone, he received five dollars. He could earn additional money by singing the first line and still more by singing the entire song. The program was first heard over Mutual in 1944.

At this type of Hollywood broadcast, contestants were often accosted outside the studio doors by operators of nearby recording studios who offered to sell them a recording of their participation on the program for five dollars. Naturally, most of the contestants were excited at the opportunity to hear themselves on the air, and with money still in the winning contestants' hands, the operators did a thriving business.

Producer-Director: George Allen

- Directors: Sherman Marks, Sterling Tracy
- Sound Effects: Berne Surrey, Gene Twombly

Opening:

THE WHISTLER. I am The Whistler. And I know many things, for I walk by night. I know many strange tales hidden in the hearts of men and women who have stepped into the shadows. Yes . . . I know the nameless terrors of which they dare not speak.

"The Whistler" was identified by the mournful whistling of the theme music. He never actually participated in the dramas. He observed the actions of the participants and commented on the ironies of life.

The original version of this longrunning program was heard in the Pacific and Mountain zones over CBS as a half-hour, Sunday-evening broadcast for Signal Oil. Bill Forman was "The Whistler" in that version, with Marvin Miller as the announcer (1945-54). Miller also played the part for six months while Forman served in the Army. The director in that period was George Allen, and Wilbur Hatch conducted the orchestra. Hatch also wrote the catchy theme.

For a short time the series was produced independently and simultaneously in Chicago, with Everett Clarke as "The Whistler" and Sherman Marks as director. For another brief period it was a CBS sustainer, except in the West, with Sterling Tracy as director. The two-octave range of the theme made it an extremely difficult assignment for whistlers, and the only person who ever mastered it was a girl, Dorothy Roberts.

A large segment of each broadcast day was allotted to women's pro-The fifteen-minute serial grams. dramas or "soap operas" made up the great bulk of such programs, but there were also many lecture and conversation programs for the ladies. The most listened to personality was Mary Margaret McBride, who had her own programs on which she chatted with her audience and interviewed celebrities. She also appeared as "Martha Deane," which was a house name belonging to WOR New York. The program featured homemaking discussions as well as interviews. Bessie Beattie and Marion Young Taylor later took over the role of "Martha Deane."

Betty Crocker was one of radio's earliest recipe programs. It began on NBC in 1926. Various actresses, including Zella Layne played the part of "Betty Crocker," the General Mills homemaking expert.

Eleanor Howe dispensed advice on Eleanor Howe's Homemaker's Exchange. Ed and Polly East entertained and enlightened their female audience on Kitchen Quiz. Allen Prescott conducted a popular program called Wife Saver.

Among the other leading personalities on women's programs were Adelaide Hawley; Alma Kitchell; etiquette authority Emily Post; Nell Vinick, who discussed good grooming and beauty tips; Edna Wallace Hopper (grooming and fashion ideas); Frances Scott-her program was called It Takes a Woman; Richard Willis, a charm expert who helped women to look their best through beauty and grooming advice on Look Your Best; and cooking experts Ida Bailey Allen and Mary Lee Taylor.

Creator: Goodman Ace Director: Robert Lewis Shayon

334 YANKEE DOODLE QUIZ

Writers: Irve Tunick, Michael Sklar, Joseph Liss Sound Effects: Jim Rogan

Don Hollenbeck and other CBS correspondents described re-enactments of famous events in history, using modern news-broadcasting techniques. Guy Sorel was the signature voice, and the only permanent actor in the cast; he played such roles as William the Conqueror, Napoleon, etc. The program had its première in 1947 and was originally titled CBS Is There.

You Bet Your Life

Quiz

Host: Groucho Marx

- Announcers: George Fenneman, Jack Slattery
- Orchestra: Billy May
- Producer-Director: John Guedel
- Producer: Harfield Weedin
- Director: Bob Dwan
- Writers: Bernie Smith, Hy Freedman Theme: "Hooray for Captain Spaul-
- ding" by Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar

Groucho would interview the contestants and then ask them the quiz questions. If any contestants said "the Secret Word" they received a bonus. "The Secret Word" was usually an everyday word such as "fence" or "chair"; it was frequently said quite by accident by a contestant in the course of the interview. The couple who won the most money in the quiz was eligible to win more in a final big-money question. Groucho often aided contestants who weren't doing too well in the quiz by asking an alternate question, such as "Who is buried in Grant's Tomb?" You Bet Your Life was first heard over ABC in 1947.

Director: Lee Strahorn

Writers: Gail Ingram, Richard Dana, Bunny Coughlin, Tom Langan, John Henderson Hines, Jacques Finke, Paul Dudley

Theme: "Lucky Day"

Your Hit Parade presented the top popular songs of the week "as determined by Your Hit Parade survey, which checks the best-sellers in sheet music and phonograph records, the songs most heard on the air and most played in the automatic coin machines-an accurate, authentic tabulation of America's taste in popular music." There were also a few "Lucky Strike Extras," songs not on the charts at the time. The climax came when the number-one song of the week was announced-it was always the concluding number. Its identity was not revealed until the actual introduction of the song.

The program made its debut over NBC in 1935. In 1938 W. C. Fields appeared often as a guest, doing sketches with Hanley Stafford, Elvia Allman, and Walter Tetley.
