CUBA BLOKES FREQUENCY AGREEMENT

CAB Engineer Reports On Rio Conference

Somethig resembling a money-wrench was thrown into the deliberations of the Third Inter-American Radio Conference last month, when Cuba said she was not interested in renewing wave length agreements between the Americas, which will come up for renewal in March 1946. The door has, however, been left open for further discussion the first week in December.

Reasons advanced by Cuba for taking this stand were that under present arrangements she is only able to use 75% of the frequencies on the broadcast band.

Harry Dawson, who went to Rio de Janeiro to attend the conference as Canadian Association of Broadcasters engineer, pointed out the unreasonableness of Cuba's attitude. Canada, he said, with nearly three times the population and dozens of times the area of the South American republic, uses only 55% of the channels, while Cuba is dissatisfied with 75%.

When the renewal question came up for discussion, Dawson said, Canada, through her representatives from the Ministry of Transport, asked that agreements be extended for two years, but the United States disagreed on any extension of longer duration than one year. It was at this point that Cuba lodged her objections as stated.

A meeting has been called in Washington for the first week in December, and Dawson suggests that the other countries will endeavor to make some individual concessions to Cuba, and it is hoped that a renewal will be effected for at least one year.

He points out that should they not be able to reach an agreement, there would inevitably be a return to the aggravating interference which prevailed in pre-treaty days, before 1941 when the Havana Treaty was first ratified.

The agreement, which is generally known as the Havana Treaty, but which should more correctly be termed NARGA (North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement), functions in the North American countries only, and deals practically exclusively with the sharing of frequencies by these countries.

The Havana Treaty proper, or, to give it its full name, The Inter-American Radio Agreement of Havana, originally signed at Havana in 1937, revised and renewed in 1940 at Santiago, Chile, was up again for revision and renewal at Rio de Janeiro last month, and this was the main business of the conference.

The functions of this treaty are to allocate bands throughout all the Americas for various kinds of broadcasting such as AM, FM, television, commercial, aviation, police and so forth. It also operates a control office in Cuba called OIR (Office of Inter-American Radio) to act as an international registry of radio frequencies, to keep a permanent check on frequency deviations, and to act as a liaison between all the countries and as a clearing house for their radio legislation.

Under this treaty there has now been set up an office to expand these functions to take care of many of the difficulties and shortcomings of OIR. This office is called OIT (Office of Inter-American Telecommunications).

The Rio Conference reached an agreement to be presented later to a World Conference on the assignment of frequencies of from 0 to 10,000 mc, whereas the old treaty designated services only up to 300 mc. Conforming with US recommendations it has also designated wave bands for FM and television, and has extended the standard broadcast band from the previous 545 to 555 kc.

Sounding Board

radio has furnished the following from the New Glasgow (N.S.) Chronicle.

A publication called the Canada Broadcaster has been making awards for the best broadcasts in Canada and gave first place to a knitting factory at present Singing Stars of Toronto. It is good entertainment, not carried by local stations difficult to connect with. The broadcast was declared to be by Francis who is responsible for the Shaw the Wealth. He is in a sort of slap dash artist and humor is rather strained to sell some nostrums that call a box cover and there must be a staff in the hope of hearing air names over the air and by chance winning a small prize. It is not a very high order of radio entertainment and he gathers his audience largely in cultured Toronto. It amused a few evening when a Toronto lady called to the "mike" and had the remote idea on what or the city of London was situated and failing in that went down the second question as to what river on which the city of Montreal was situated. The prompter suggested that the city of Quebec was also on the same river, but a questioned lady passed that also for lack of knowledge. The culture and education of Toronto at least have not been at the hockey line.

More ridiculous of the session was the award of first place for broadcasting was awarded, a publisher and editor of the magazine tried his hand at broadcasting and what a mess he made it.

For us we will prefer Clyde Hains of CJFX and his pal, Percy Warner of Limuore. It may be coming to the effete ears of Toronto to but listeners in the far west it ranks first and has a real morose tang.

Anonymous letters continue to reach your editor's desk. We regret that these cannot be published unless their writers disclose their right names to the editor.

Rep. Change

Reg Beattie has terminated his exclusive representation of CHML as of September 30. Reg plans to expand his operation to cover one station each in several markets across the country, and explains that his association with Ken Sobie has been brought to a friendly conclusion because, under his agreement he has been handling CHML's business exclusively, which precluded the expansion he wants to make. He says he is organizing his office on a new plan of representation with what he terms "a short hand-picked list of stations". He is keeping on his office at 217 Bay Street, Toronto.

Toronto representation of CHML reverts to Metropolitan Broadcasting Service, 21 Dundas Square, Toronto, its original reps. Winnipeg and Montreal representation remains with H. N. Stovin & Co.

Stork Market

Writer Fletcher Markle and Announcer Herb May are both handling out the cigars celebrating the dead beat arrival of their sons, which took place September 26th. Asked for views on the baby bonus, Herb said: "Well, a dollar here and a dollar there, it all mounts up."

Why Duophonic Recordings?

The Duophonic principle of recording permits unlimited frequency selection over the critical ranges, 20-100 cycles, and 4,000-10,000 cycles.

This compensates for brilliance-loss at the slow 33 1/3 R.P.M. of transcription discs, and for response deficiencies of pick-up and receiver, by boosting the higher frequencies from 4,000 to 10,000 cycles, without loss of bass.

This "QUALITY - CONTROL" is your safeguard for complete fidelity of reproduction over the whole audible range.

Coming Events Cast Their Shadows

The government's continued rape of the First Freedom — Freedom of Speech — through its Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, must be desirable to everyone except the private stations and their association, who prefer to keep their heads buried deep in the sands of complacency.

In its issue of August 4, this paper told how the government is to be preparing to make funds available to the CBC for the erection of new 50 kilowatt stations across the country.

Tears of compassion for our long-suffering fellow-citizens from the more regions glean in the CBC's crocodile eyes as they explain that they are trying to bring these fellow-Canadians within ear-shot of such programs as the CBC "Farm Forum" and the endless inundations of amber music which gush from the same source. But the fact is that establishing these high-powered outlets the CBC will be creating, for its masters in Ottawa, an even more effective broadcasting machine, government-controlled and advertiser-subsidized, to enable it to disseminate the information it wants the citizenry to hear, and also to suppress that from which it feels the public should be "protected".

So far the government is only able to broadcast its propaganda across the country by using the private stations to complete its two networks. But the day is not far distant when, having acquired an adequate number of these high-powered transmitters, the CBC will be able to give the government complete coverage of Canada without help from "independents". Then the means of the private broadcasters will ring out in every studio across the country, for the private stations ill by that time have outlived their public usefulness.

Undoubtedly the CBC will have obstacles to overcome in accomplishing this purpose, but evidence of this organization's ability to leap over hurdles is apparent on every side. May we cite one example?

Under a CBC statement of policy, programs cannot be aired simultaneously on more than one outlet in the same area. Yet only last month the CBC, unable by any artifice it could devise to convince genesis that station CJBC, Toronto, was giving Dominion Network sponsors adequate coverage in this area, made it possible to duplicate Toronto coverage by the use of CJBC and CKBY, so that programs may now be aired by the CBC, simultaneously, on two Toronto stations, to direct contravention of its own stated policy!

This arrangement will last as long as it suits the CBC's convenience, but when CJBC boosts its power to 50 kilowatts, the second station will be cast off in the hope that advertisers will be satisfied with just the one Toronto outlet operating on greatly increased power.

There is no sense in kidding ourselves, gentlemen of the radio industry. What the CBC wants, it goes after, and gets.

RADIO AND THE RETAILER

—by Phil Glanzer

Sponsors of network programs have had their share of attention since the inception of broadcasting. But there is another man who has not always been given all the attention he deserves, and that is the retail dealer who actually serves as the contact between the sponsor-manufacturer and the listener-consumer.

In the United States, radio stations have pioneered in their efforts to create a strong triple impression in the mind of the listener-consumer whenever he listens to a program or sees or hears anything which would call it to his mind. This triple impression is "product-program-dealer". It functions on a mutually helpful and co-operative basis between the station and the dealers handling the sponsors' products.

Two services which are rendered to dealers by station WKBK, Youngstown, Ohio, take the form of 'Grocery Briefs' and "Druggist Briefs", both monthly mimeographed bulletins, issued by the station for the benefit of the retail dealers in those lines. Material is compiled by national authorities in the fields, and the back pages are used to keep dealers informed on products advertised on the station.

This dealer service was started some three years ago, when a letter was sent out to druggists in the station's area, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Druggist: Very often we have found it mutually advantageous to request your cooperation in the placement of special store posters prepared for network sponsors whose products you carry and sell. We have asked your help in the gathering of local information for use in the research necessary in making a survey. In these and other requests you have always been very co-operative.

"We've very often wondered how we could demonstrate our appreciation of your friendship, and now, at last, we believe we have developed something which will be beneficial and useful to you.

"Starting this month we are buying a special druggists news-letter. Each month this letter will be compiled by experts in your trade field who will report for you the latest developments in your business. We are underwriting the cost of this service which will be sent to you without any charge.

"Henceforth you will receive your copy of "Druggists Briefs" every month with our compliments.

"We hope you find 'Druggists Briefs' interesting and helpful. If you have any suggestions or comments in connection with this service, we'd be glad to have you let us know about them.'

A similar letter was received by grocers in the area.

Since this service was started, both druggists and grocers have been kept informed on new developments and trends in their respective fields, and have learned how to take the greatest advantage of radio advertising in merchandising the advertised products in their own places of business.

A new co-operative era in promotion, merchandising and general public relations faces business in general and retail business in particular, in that it is the retailer who has direct contact with the public. This station seems to have blazed a trail in medium-dealer co-operation.

Cecil L. Berry

Canadian radio has lost one of its best-loved and most colorful personalities in the death last Sunday, September 30th, of Cecil L. Berry, owner of Radio Station CCGP, Grande Prairie, Alberta.

Cecil, who preferred to be called Mush Mush by his friends, was taken suddenly, with a heart attack.

In years he was probably about sixty. In spirit he was eternal youth.

As the news comes, it is difficult to realize that the mailman will never again deliver one of his amusing letters, that industry meetings will never more be brightened with his unpredicatable humor.

In consolation we can say that his passing was swift. And this is as he always said he wished it to be.

Keith Rogers, president of CFCC Charlottetown, P.E.I., has used newspaper announcements to acquaint his listeners with the reason for the disappearance of the daytime serials from his station's schedule. The text of the announcement, as it appeared in the press, follows: "The management of CFCC wishes to assure listeners that the removal of the daytime serial stories from CFCC was in no way due to CFCC action. This station was obliged to go on the Dominion network last year at the insistence of the CBC which is the government corporation controlling all broadcasting in Canada. For the first year we were left with the daytime commercial shows.

In this, the second year of the Dominion network operation, the CBC has, as of September 1st, removed all daytime commercial shows from CFCC—causing us the loss of many thousands of dollars—and you, our listeners—the loss of many fine programs. The business we have lost through this change has been transferred to the CBC's own station in Sackville.

We shall be glad to have a return of the Lever Bros., Procter & Gamble and Colgate-Palmolive-Peet business at any time."

FORWARD WITH CANADA

Nominations for "Bee Awards" which are coming in growing regularity suggest there are gaps in Canadian radio and probably the most significant comedy.

It is almost inconceivable in a country of twelve million people there has scarcely emerged one single individual who is to appear before the microphone with the sole purpose of making people laugh. When you consider that almost without exception the top-ranking artists in the United States dish out a fare of comedy, it is even more unbelievable that Canadian radio has completely missed out in this field.

There is no rule without exception, and we cannot pass without mentioning "The Happy Gang", which certainly contributes humor to the daytime. Neither would it be fair to pass over the many masters of ceremonies of quiz programs and other audience participation shows who undoubtedly attract people. Their programs who are more interested in a chuckle than in somebody's futile efforts to answer string of questions.

Eddie Cantor was the first daytime comedian to attract us to radio's visible potentials. Since Eddie Cantor, we have had Benny and the Hopen and others whose weekly appearance before the microphone keeps thousands of people at home when they are the only ones for the sake of hearing their programs. There has never before a medium of advertising with such power as Canadian sponsors and Canadian producers seem quite content to dismiss the comedian problem by a shrug, and the CBC who should exist to bring people programs they want to hear, made no attempt to fill this obvious gap in their schedules as they fired "The Happy Gang" since Buckingham Cigarettes failed to find "A New Harry Gang". The management of the "Stag Party".

Those who have returned from the war are quick to condemn those Canadians in the services who have been able to entertain the troops. Obviously comedy can have been entirely lacking from this entertainment. And among these entertainers there must be those who could bring a little humor to Canadian programs, and who would welcome the opportunity to do so.

This paper sincerely hopes that at least one Canadian comedian can be "discovered" and pledged to do everything in its power to promote such a comedian if or when he can be found.

It is part of the purpose of the "Bee Awards" to attempt to unearth talent which may be just hidden across the country. Radio owes it to itself and to its listeners to go out in every possible attempt to dig out what buried treasure there may be. It owes it to its listeners to deliver the best that they can.
"PROGRAMS ARE FOR PEOPLE"

Fourth in a Series of Excerpts from a Talk Given to the N.Y. City College Radio and Business Conference

By CLARENCE L. MENSER

NBC Vice-President in Charge of Programs

Anyone with an eye to the fur- nace knows that, as news drops at, news programming will have and some substitutes. It is im- proving to be possible for us to re- late news over and over again, and the probabilities are that the news picture will change as we will have the alternative either repeating many times a day or using fewer regular news programs.

So I think we need to give con- sideration to what we are going to bottle in types and methods of programming. The public has become news-conscious during these recent years. They aren't going to give up their habits easily. They are going to be just as avid in their interest in hearing what is going on when the future has great promise in the news aspect, if we will use dignity and imagination in our announcing and not rely completely on the tickers.

The facility with which we have been able to cut to all parts of the world for interesting programs will certainly enhance our interest in the ability to use the international service. In connection with the news, I should like to get off my next one idea.

Perhaps because I have had practically no newspaper experience, I have always felt that radio was the way to cut a microphone to broadcast it, it's said, and there is no calling back the spoken word. So I would like to comment, I say again, in the attitude toward 'scoops' in the news reporting end of radio, in the hope that we may take the radio industry for what it is and not for something which it is trying to imitate.

Eastern Port

Pearson McCurdy, vice-president of the Chronicle Co. Ltd., operating CJCH, Halifax dropped in at the "Broadcasters" office to tell us that the 'eastern port' is looking for considerable building activity on a number of government projects as soon as the labor situa- tion permits.

Besides widespread government activity, the general departure of thousands of service men and wo- men who have been stationed in and around the city through the war years, has been the cue for a general refurbishing which is running into hundreds of thousands of dollars in terms of paint, lumber and general building materials within the limits of available labor.

Mr. McCurdy advised us that he has received authority to boost his power to 5 kilowatts, and to locate on a lower frequency. In- stallation of the new transmitter and towers will commence as soon as the equipment is available. The transmitter and other equipment will be Northern Electric through- out.

Clyde Mitchell and Gib Liddle will shortly be announcing a move of station CKCR. Kitchener, into new and spacious quarters in the Arcade Building on King St.

FIVE AND A HALF YEARS OF WAR-CASTING

An interview with Gerry Wilmot

Canadian talent has missed its chance to earn the lifelong good-will it would have built in the hearts of front line boys, according to Gerry Wilmot, CBC’s London liaison with the BBC, who was back in Canada for a few days last month, and has now returned to London to continue his work.

The Canadian Forces Radio Service, and other agencies have always received splendid co-operation from the CBC and the private stations, he told the CANADIAN BROADCASTER in sending over recorded programs, but they have been handicapped by the lack of visiting talent from the ranks of radio.

“We have never had the privilege of airing our own talent like the Americans aired their Bob Hope, their Dinah Shore and their Bing Crosbys”, he said, “and it is a pity, first because we’d have been damn glad to see them, and, secondly, because they will never know the life-long goodwill they would have built in the hearts of the front line boys, to whom even one dissonant note from a familiar voice would have been a breath of home.”

Gerry Wilmot went to Great Britain in 1940 to “cover London for the CBC”. His instructions, he said, were to make himself useful to the BBC.

Since the dispersal of the AEF in July (issue of August 25) the Canadian Forces have been entertained and informed by the newly established CFRS, which is operated entirely by the Canadian army, with Gerry Wilmot in for good measure, and is broadcasting a regular 16-hour daily schedule 7 days a week. Announcers, writers, operators and engineers are all army and all Canadian, and he says they carry as many Canadian programs as possible.

“We have all the CBC sustainer programs on call”, he said, “some recorded and some we pick up off the short wave. We have recordings of many commercials, though of course the actual plugs have to be cut to conform with CBC regulations. Besides network productions, he said the boys were especially interested in local material, and mentioned as being especially popular “The Western Fife” from Ottawa. In reply to our question as to whether the private stations and sponsors could help, he replied “Yes—there is more enthusiasm than we can write it. “Any disc programs, commercial or otherwise, are always welcome”, he said, “and we are especially interested in stuff with a local angle. All you have to do is shout them over to Canadian Forces Radio Services, c/o the BBC, London, England.”

Operating as it does on a 112-hour-a-week schedule, Gerry pointed out that literally thousands of programs are being broadcast to the forces and to the United Kingdom, all spreading the Canadian gospel. “(Captain) Bob Farley and his Canadian Army Orchestra are in the top brackets in most music circles”, we learned from Wilmot, “but Canada’s young war-casters and networks that the only reason why he has done the most broadcasting “there” was because he has been there the longest.

Gerry dismissed his own activities as “just routine”, but we know that he has put in half a decade, including the blitz, performing as a combination news reader, disc-jockey, producer, as well as an announcer (known in the UK as a compere). Between periods he has appeared in plays and films, spoken to service clubs and so forth.

Army Officer in charge of the CFRS is (Major) Cam Ritchie, formerly with CKAC and CKWJ, and is heard on functions virtually as program director, but is also a great gun as a singer. This inspires Gerry’s comment— "Watch for him when he gets back, commercial radio."

Another member of the unit is (Pte.) Paul Charpentier, former Announcer with CKAC and on the French “Happy Gang” (Joyeux Troupes). Gerry says Paul is an expert “bi-lingual” and has developed into one of Britain’s leading Swoontrats. These artists are in great demand by the BBC, he added.

Another wellknown radio man who has linked up with CFRS is (Captain) Court Benson, once announcer on the Hockey Broadcast who returned to London and took up the CFRS after seeing considerable off-duty work as radio officer with the Canadian Army in Italy. He now is in charge of all talks and information programs heard on CFRS.

There is one exception to the army rule in the shape of Able Seaman Arthur Laing of Toronto, Ontario, who gained pre-war experience at the London Leathergoods Store on Yonge Street, but made his “radio” debut when he ran the P.A. system on his ship like a commercial radio station, with commercials (2) for the ship’s laundry, slips (stoves), etc.

Ex-Service Show

“An example of ex-service men and women may display their talents” is the CBC’s description of their Dominion Network program “The Ex-Service Show” which takes the air as this issue goes to press.

Ex-Flight Lieutenant Hugh Green, pre-war London, N.Y., and Hollywood artist, is one of 20 ex-service men who will appear on each show.

RADIO'S KHAKI COLLEGE
by Hugh Newton

The Business of Broadcasting, in both its public and private manifestations, including the CBC and CFC, is setting its own pace in the armed service's rehabilitation field, achieving a rather remarkable degree of cohesion and giving Johnny Home a concrete break, in helping set up and maintain one of the continent's most unique training institutions, the School for Electronics at the Training and Re-establishment Institute on Church and Gould Streets in Toronto.

A separate corner of this "Khaki College" in Toronto, the first of its kind to be opened in Canada and a model for similar schools to follow, has been set aside for the Electronics department. A good part of this department is being devoted to the teaching of commercial broadcasting, principally in its technical phases.

It is unique in that it is not only training young men—and a young former airwoman, Helen Cuyler, of Kincardine, Ont.—to service and handle studio and transmitter controls, but it actually has two men training as announcers. This last curriculum is still a little vague, in that it is explained, no one seems to know how one trains announcers, they are apparently supposed to train themselves.

It is, without doubt, however, the first institution in Canada to take a young man in and hand him a microphone and a typewriter and give him the run of an extremely well equipped studio and tell him to go ahead and learn to announce. The two in training now are Reg Finnemore of Toronto, formerly of the 5th Division's Westminster Regiment, and Bob Grey, also of Toronto, with the First Division in England in 1939 and just out of Christie St. Military Hospital after nearly five years on his back recovering from injuries he suffered in the first year of war.

Both are studying elementary studio control and microphone technique. Although neither has previous professional experience, Gray has a bit of an edge on Finnemore as he spent a good part of his Christie St. time handling a one-man show from the hospital. He has been assured a job by the CBC school officials state.

They read each other their own scripts, cut them and play their own voices back. The CBC is keeping an intermittent check on their work and after six months or so of studio work they will be given final voice tests.

Several men are training as technicians of some sort in preparation for entering the broadcasting field. This already has so many ramifications and is divided into so many classifications that it is difficult to categorize in this space.

Basically however, the School of Electronics is divided into those principal departments. Domestic receivers, their repairs and construction; Domestic Broadcasting, control and maintenance; Industrial Electronics, Marine and Aerial Navigation, which includes radio communications, and Theatre and Allied Sound Equipment Operation and Maintenance. Built to handle 90 students, it is already overcrowded with 105.

The student, who only has to have been in the armed services, any branch to qualify for admission, starts off by taking a 3 to 4 months basic course in which he learns how to handle a soldering iron without spilling hot lead on his shoes and how to build simple receivers, as well as a good smattering of mathematics. The announcer-trainee doesn't have to go through all this as a preliminary, as announcers aren't supposed to have to bother with such mundane things, anyway.

From here he branches into either communications or industrial electronics. We won't talk on the latter, except to mention if it covers everything from elevators to x-ray and prepares a man for an endless variety of jobs with manufacturers and research laboratories.

If the man taking communications doesn't go into sound system radio manufacturing or services, he heads into commercial broadcasting.

This could be a separate echo in itself, so vast is its potentialities. At the moment the training due to lack of equipment to discover only standard studio technique and transmitter work for standard A.M. broadcasting equipment. This is due to branch equipment as new equipment comes in.

Present equipment includes double studio and control room built to specifications of broadcasting men, plus a scattering of special technical trivia such as microphones, piano, turntables, recorders, a couple of console panels and four sample central control panels, supplied by different manufacturers. Coming into the school now, piece by piece, as it is made available, equipment for frequency modulation, television and facsimile broadcasting. F.M. theory is a ready-made teaching and television experiment and instruction will start shortly.

It is stated, yet without official confirmation, that the studio plans to hook up with Rochester, N.Y. on television and, already tests a setting conducted with Rochester receiving quality—so far, so good incidentally.

The entire course whether industrial electronics or communications, takes about a year.

China Radio

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Montreal was host to four eminent Chinese visitors recently. The experts included T. Y. Penn, deputy director of the Central Broadcasting Administration, in China; S. T. Fan, chief engineer, T. Y. King, chief architect who is also an expert on acoustics, and H. K. Hsu, program director.

The experts have been touring the U.S. and are now in Canada to study the country's system of broadcasting. They are especially interested in technical operations, in programming as well as in shortwave broadcasting.

Returns From Trip

Breakfast in Bournemouth on Thursday and a late dinner in Toronto Friday evening was the record Roy Thomson, president of Northern Broadcasting & Publishing Ltd., when he returned by plane from a lightning tour of the British Isles and Europe. During 19 days spent in Europe, Roy says he put in five in Berlin, including a visit to the Reich Chancellery. There he gathered several Iron Crosses and other medals and a piece of Hitler's desk. He jeopied and trucked through Westphalia, Central Germany and the Ruhr.

According to the grape-vine he went over to investigate the possibilities of opening up in commercial broadcasting on the Continent. On his return, he said he had nothing definite to report "on his investigation of commercial radio overseas."
"QUEBEC IS HERE TO STAY"
Paul L'Anglais Addresses Toronto Ad Clubber's

"When you come to sell goods in Quebec, you must sell them in French," Paul L'Anglais, head of the Montreal firm or Radio Programme Producers, told the Toronto Advertising and Sales Club at a luncheon meeting September 25.

The majority of advertising campaigns of English-Canadian manufacturers are good, he said, because the majority of them were adapted to the mentality of Quebec. He pointed out, however, that others failed to influence French Canadian buying because nothing was done in French or else the English campaign was merely translated into French. "When you come to sell goods in Quebec," he insisted, "you must sell them in French, in good French, and your campaign must be conceived in French or adapted to French; no mere translation is adequate."

He told the meeting that Quebec is here to stay, not only as a profitable market for the rest of the country's goods, but as a dominating force in all the fields of Canadian endeavor. "Jean Baptiste," he said, "whether you like it or not, is one of the two partners united by Confederation in 1867, and he is not a minority shareholder either. He is not one of a subject people but a partner in Empire and should always be treated so."

Mr. L'Anglais affirmed emphatically that "Jean Baptiste wants fair play, because that's what British rule means to him."

Conscription
Speaking of the conscription problem, the speaker traced the origin of the problem back to 1899 and the Boer War. "Unfortunately," he said, "the Boer War was not exactly a popular one, and there lies the beginning of the conscription issue.

Between 1900 and 1914, he continued, this "anti-Empire war attitude" took enormous proportions, and the principle of volunteer participation became the popular platform in Quebec, and was even used by the majority of English speaking political leaders when they addressed Quebec audiences. "When conscription came in with World War I," he said, "it was unexplained, unpublicized, beyond the comprehension of a province which had done its duty on a voluntary basis. The necessity for conscription was even misrepresented by the politicians," he went on, "and then and now it is the main issue in every federal election. You can't preach a theory consistently for 22 years without convincing the people you are preaching to. Had Jean Baptiste been anti-war you might have a case against him," he added, "but he was only anti-conscription not anti-war."

In corroboration of this last statement, L'Anglais pointed out that the first battalion to be fully and voluntarily mobilized was a French-Canadian unit, Le Régiment de Maisonneuve, Sixteen French-Canadian regiments completed mobilization of at least one battalion during 1939, and kept on informing them. From the beginning of the war, Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal supplied 500 officers, 12,000 other ranks, and one French Canadian unit did as well.

Citing some general statistics stated that Quebec gave the services 11½ men per family against Ontario's 1 per family. Vice posteniments in Quebec stated, were 72,473 against 68,808 for Ontario. But there were 2,606 conscientious objectors in Ontario and only 26 in Quebec.

"French Canada will remain French in culture, tradition and language," he said, "yet British parliamentary tradition will fight for its rights, its freedom within Canada, but it will also fight for Canada whenever Canada's fate is at stake."

He concluded by quoting an Enrnon Pascal Tache—"Consider us as brothers not as enemies. Let us be convinced that we will not forsake our oath of allegiance until the day when a French-Canadian will fire the last gun to be shot in this continent, for the defence of Great Britain."

New Radio Plan
Britain's radio industry planned a new system of wave length allocations to bring all-round listening for every country in Europe. It is designed to interfere as far as possible to give free and more selective listening for all.

The plan is put forward in a report of the technical committee of the British Radio Equipment Manufacturers' Association. Ports from five of Britain's biggest radio firms worked for nearly two months on the scheme, which may be sent to all interested governments.

Radio has representation in the 26th Parliament, in the person of Roland Beaudry. Well-known in radio business as president of R.C.A. and a cabinet minister, Beaudry is now the Member of Parliament for St. James, in Quebec Province. His maiden speech, delivered in the House of Commons on Monday, September 24th, reflected great credit to him. Mr. Beaudry spoke throughout in English; managed to translate into that language the rolling, polished phrases that mark his masterly French-speaking orations. He held the attention of the House, including that of the Prime Minister and several Cabinet Ministers; drew resounding applause.

In view of the heavy budget of business facing the House, it is far from likely there will be sitting of the Industry Committee before Christmas.

The "Ottawa Citizen" (and others, be it said) may yet evolve a new political philosophy. In its "let's-get-rid-of-radio" editorial for this week, the Citizen soundly criticized radio advertising; said the real reason for nationalizing Canadian nets was to get rid of commercials. The Citizen, prohibitionist and puritan, also advances nationalization of brewers and distillers to trap the Demon Rum. Originally, nationalization of certain industries was proposed by some schools of political thought because they felt the industries in question (rightly or wrongly) would thereby better serve the community. Now we come to the theory: If you have a serious competitor, or a business you don't like — nationalize it. All in the name of good clean free enterprise, of course.

The brilliant speech by the Honorable James G. (Jimmy) Gardiner the night of September 24th, set out clearly at last the real reasons for meat rationing. Getting down to brass tacks, the Minister of Agriculture pointed out that you can't produce livestock unless you have feed grains. And said "— we enter the year 1945-46 with only two months supply of feed grains in the bins of the country". Furthermore, he informed the House, it has been noted that in spite of everyone's best efforts in food production, "according to our present information over 300,000 children will die in Europe this winter for want of food".

The same Minister indicated, in opening his remarks, his approval of forthcoming steps to recognize Canadian citizenship status; and his remarks drew heavy applause from every corner of the House. It seems this particular measure will pass with almost no opposition.

The Social Credit group is preparing a vigorous attack on the Bretton Woods international finance proposals when the Government brings these down later in the session. This debate may be prolonged.

A conference of engineers is now working in Ottawa to standardize sizes and types of parts and equipment manufactured in Britain, Canada, and the States. Interchangeability of parts has been found valuable during war.

Anthony Hynka, Social Credit Member for Vegreville, asked that radio news and information broadcasts now being transmitted in Europe, be also given in the Ukrainian language.

Commander "Bill" Strange, well-known to Canadian radio, takes over the Premiership of Naval public relations, following return to civic life of H. C. Howard. One of radio's well-known free-lance writers, Commander Strange has already done a first-rate job of public relations for the Navy; will deserve the step up.

The House order paper dated September 24th, carries notice of a question under the name of M. J. Coldwell, asking: "Does the CBC own stations CBL and CJBC in the city of Toronto? Who are the owners of CKY? Has CKY been granted authority or permission to broadcast commercial American network programs over their facilities? If so, what programs and what financial arrangements are involved?"

There will also be other questions on the Order Paper concerning radio within a day or two of the time this is written.

Two-Way Short Wave

The Montreal Tramways Company is installing shortwave radio equipment on its emergency vehicles so that these may keep in constant communication with a central station at headquarters.

By using this up to date system, which played such an important part in the war, the company hopes to improve its service by reducing the time lost through interruptions of trams caused by accidents, fires, broken trolley wires, processions, flooded subways and vehicles stalled on the tracks.

As soon as the report of trouble is received, they will be able immediately to co-ordinate their emergency service to cope with the incident, and will be in constant two-way communication with every emergency vehicle of the system.

Nineteen instruments, one in the dispatcher's office and 18 on mobile units, will be progressively installed during the summer and fall. Nine sets have been allocated to the trucks which repair trolley wires and other electrical installations, seven to the emergency trucks which service street cars and buses and two to travelling inspectors of the transportation dept.

The Tramways' short-wave radio system will operate on its own, independent wavelength, on a frequency-modulated system.
SCANNING THE SURVEYS

HOW THEY STAND

The following appeared in the current Elliott-Haynes Reports as the top ten English programs. The first figure following the name is the E.H rating; the second is the change from the previous week.

Big Sister 12.2
Happy Gang 14.2
Catherine 10.4
Ma Perkins 9.3
Road of Life 9.0
Lucy Linton 8.7
Big Sister's Wife 8.1
Pepper Young 8.0
Woman of America 7.5
Happy Gang 6.3

Substantial increase in listening apparent right across the board, as is to be expected, at this season of the year. Average increase for the English programs is 2.0%, and for the French 4.3%. The only programs on the national list to show a decline are both French.
"Vie de Famille" (Procter & Gamble) dropped 1.6 when it had to relinquish the "Joyeux Trouba-dore" slot, when that program returned after the summer layoff. A similar drop for "La Metrica Rancherie" (National War Finance) is presumably attributable to diminishing interest.

In comparing these daytime rantings, it should be remembered that ratings like "Soldier's Wife" and "Catherine", standing third and fifth on national list with ratings of 14.2 and 12.8 respectively.

Two of the popular national daytime shows are back, namely "The Happy Gang" and "Claire Wallace", standing third and fifth on national list with ratings of 14.2 and 12.8 respectively.

In the Primary Area

consisting of the counties of Bruce, Grey and Huron, CKNX shows a BBM coverage penetration of 79.4%
daytime and 79% night

Duplessis Radio Plan Progresses
Expropriation Said To Be Imminent

Quebec, Que.—Negotiations for the taking over by private agreement of stations which will be included in the Quebec Radio Broadcasting Corporation or Radio-Quebec as under way, it was reported last week by Premier Maurice Duplessis. An announcement will shortly be made.

The men who will administer the new system have been chosen, it was said. The general manager is a who has been closely connected with Mr. Duplessis since the formation of the first National Union government, and his assistant is a well-known musician of Three Rivers. The broadcasting director is in charge of one of the stations to be taken over. The names will be officially announced later.

Other reports are to the effect, at the National Union Party, though Mr. Duplessis, is endeavoring to purchase a daily newspaper at the same time. The paper could be owned by the National Union Party.

The legislation authorizing the creation of a Quebec-Radio was voted last session. It authorized a Quebec Government to organize and operate a radio broadcasting system, under the direction of a general manager, and an assistant general manager, to purchase existing stations either by agreement or through expropriation, or to build new stations wherever necessary. It authorized Radio-Quebec to own and operate news services.

An expenditure of $5,000,000, as authorized to that effect, though it is understood that other sections of the province will be voted by the Legislature, whenever necessary.

Radio-Quebec is expected to own and operate stations throughout the province, in addition to Quebec and Montreal.

Need Own Paper

The party leaders have always felt the necessity of having their own organ, it was stressed, the Liberal Party being the owner of an organ, and the Bloc Populaire Canadian is openly supported in Montreal daily. The National Union party owns Le Temps de Quebec, a weekly, and is more or less interested, or openly the owner, of another weekly in Montreal.

It also owns other weeklies throughout the province. It is felt that the time has arrived to have a National Union daily, probably to be located in Montreal.

The government is negotiating with Montreal, the owners of two of the most important radio stations, both operated in conjunction with the publication of dailies and it is almost certain one of the stations will be taken over. The two most important stations as indicated, include Station CKAC which is owned and operated by the French-language newspaper, La Presse; and Station CHLP, owned and operated by La Patrie, another French-language daily. The National Union Party might also, according to reports, become the owner of one of the two papers. (This may mean that the Government intends to take over Station CHLP, and its newspaper, La Patrie).

Embalming Fluid

What with private station wave lengths, private telephone lines and heaven knows what will befalling under threat of our liberal government's electoral axe, it is to be hoped that the CAB will not be compelled to change its official to RIP.

Ambitious

On week-ends that are cold and damp we like to put on old clothes and serve as an auxiliary aide to the street cleaning department.

Detour

It appears that the CAB is endeavoring to arrange change programs with Australian stations. I learned this from an Australian trade paper.
"Let's Talk It Over"

No political party is left out when CKWX's new discussion forum, "Let's Talk It Over" takes the air each week from the Vancouver station's playhouse, and while men are by no means barred from participating, either as listeners or as guests, it is a program that puts ladies in the driver's seat, right up on the Playhouse platform.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frank Stead, prominent clubwoman in Vancouver and B.C. organizations who formerly conducted her own program, "Letters from Overseas", guests heard on the premier airing included Mrs. Minerva Cooper, identified with the Labor Progressive movement; Mrs. Grace Maclean, closely connected with the CCF; Mrs. F. J. Rolston, a Progressive Conservative and a member of the B.C. Coalition Legislature; and Mrs. Norman A. MacKenzie, wife of the president of the University of British Columbia and prominent social worker.

The opening topic was "Are Women Pulling Their Weight as Citizens?" The consensus of opinion said "Yes, within the limitations of their home and economic responsibilities, and they should have greater freedom to participate in public affairs."

Participants make three minute opening statements and then the subject is thrown open for discussion in which the playhouse audience participates.

Because of the live interest displayed during the first program, the discussion continued long after the show was signed off!

Play By Play

CBC Program Administrative Officer John de B. Payne has developed a new format for auditioning play-by-play sports commentators in Montreal. Past auditions, based on a hypothetical game, were held in a studio. New ideas use films with sound-effects, giving the commentator a chance to describe a real game with cheers, boos, popcorn and peanuts.

32 programs in a weekly mail "Quiz" series drew over 12,500 entries — a large percentage from rural communities in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and the State of Maine.

Do you SELL... or do you BUY?

Is your job merchandising?...

you should have a look at your potential market! Is your job radio time buying?... you should have a look at the facilities for reaching this market most effectively!

And when you make this review, remember that ONTARIO REPRESENTS MORE THAN 40% OF CANADA’S BUYING POWER! Remember, too, these additional factors:

Influence!

CFRB is Canada’s most influential station... this is a fact and not a boast. As the most popular station and that with the biggest coverage, CFRB is in a position to influence more people... more sales. This is demonstrated by the number of advertisers who send their messages over CFRB. Check the list... we’ll be glad to send it.

Popularity!

People know CFRB as the station where their favourites are! This reputation has been built up over years of maintaining a policy of widely varied programmes... most of the shows, by actual listenership ratings, most of the people want to hear. Added to this is the fact that CFRB is the only Toronto outlet for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Coverage!

The facts of CFRB’s coverage are clearly shown in the reports of the Bureau of Broadcast Measurement, of which this station is a charter member. Check these reports... CFRB has the largest primary coverage of any station in Ontario, largely concentrated in the densely-populated, south-western area. And CFRB operates on 10,000 watts, day and night.
