MAY FORCE NETS OUT OF MUSIC BIZ

A PARADE OF song writers, composers and music educators converged on Washington during the past month to testify before a US Senate subcommittee which is considering legislation to force radio and television broadcasters to get out of the music publishing and recording business.

The musicians' complaint is that rock 'n roll and other teenage-sliced popular music is being promoted at the expense of classics and other "adult" music. Moreover, they claim, the broadcasters are engaged in a conspiracy to discriminate against music by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The companies chiefly under fire are NBC and its record affiliate, RCA Victor; CBS and its subsidiary, Columbia Records; and Broadcast Music Incorporated, whose output is controlled by the networks. BMI, in reply to charges of discrimination, said it provided competition where ASCAP once had a monopoly.

Lead-off spokesman for the musicians was Oscar Hammerstein II, co-author of Oklahoma and South Pacific. He said the networks were forcing the public to listen to music controlled by them.

CATERING TO PRE-SHAVERS

In Kansas City, Mr. Hammerstein found support from an unexpected source, band leader Mitch Miller, who is also head of the popular music division at Columbia Records. Miller told the First Annual Disc Jockey Convention that too many record shows were being pointed toward the pre-shave crowd. They had abdicated, he said, "to the corner record shop; to the eight to 14-year-olds, to the pre-shave crowd that makes up 12 per cent of the American population and zero per cent of its buying power -- once you eliminate pony tail ribbons, popsicles and peanut brittle."

The convention seemed to favor at least reducing rock 'n roll programming, but many felt that it had its place -- and a few were strongly in favor of it.

One speaker, Jack Lacey of WINS-Radio, New York, said: "I believe in the public demands, and we give it to them.

Phil Stone of CHUM-Radio, Toronto, commenting on audience ratings and I believe in the music surveys. Of course, there should not be strictly one type of music, but the rated songs sell. They are what the public demands, and we give it to them.

MYRNE DOWN NOTEBOOK

Every Week-end, the population of St. John's goes UP from 80,000 to 120,000 or more! Shoppers like these flock in to do a week's purchasing at a time, and stores stay open late to accommodate them. They go home with bulging shopping bags, for the average Newfoundland family is the largest in Canada -- 5.1 per household. They know all about prices and "Week End Specials" before they leave home -- they listen to CJON -- and St. John's has the HIGHEST Sets-in-Use Percentage of ANY CITY IN CANADA.

Recently the Acting Premier of Newfoundland made this statement, which was seconded by the Leader of the Opposition and the Speaker of the House: "Without Radio here in Newfoundland, it would be impossible to reach the majority of our people."
This day to my apothecary’s shop for a jar of Vaseline, which I have used for many a scrape and sore — and indeed nothing better, too, for keeping saws and chisels free from rust. While there, did spy my old and good friend, John D. Wilson, who does direct the Sales and Advertising of Chesebrough-Pond’s (Canada) Limited, and repaired with him to the coffee-house. Did compliment him on the new venture by that Company in becoming the joint sponsor of the popular Jack Kane Show over the C.B.C. Television network, and did inquire if this meant they were forsaking their old love — Radio. Whereon he did laugh and tell me that TV would be an important extension of the Company’s advertising, but by no means a replacement of its time-tried, time-proven Radio methods • • • Much gratified, but indeed did expect no less from a Company which has used Radio for over 20 years, and did sponsor the famous “John and Judy” drama series, which old-timers like Pepys still recognize as a noteworthy milestone toward wooing audiences and winning sales • • • Today, as for years past, Pond’s do, in strong schedules of 1-minute Radio Spots in 12 months of the year, and some Programs, support such of their well-known beauty products as Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Dry Skin Cream, Angel Face Pressed Powder, and Angel Skin Hand Lotion, which "stops chapping before it starts". Pepys did offer the smallwhimsy that he hoped it did not keep the chops away entirely; and was at once reminded that on the contrary, Pond’s went after the men with many good products for their own use — such as Vaseline Hair Tonic, Wonder-Foam Shampoo and Valacream; besides Petroleum Jelly and Pertussin Cough Syrup for the whole family • • • “All these”, said Mr. Wilson, “are growing in volume, and it is our belief that Radio has played a very important part in our sales growth over the years”.

The Department of Transport is now prepared to consider applications for power boosts for regional and local radio stations in Canada. Under existing regulations, regional stations are limited to a maximum power of 5,000 watts and local stations to 250 watts. Stations permitted to operate in excess of 5,000 watts are known as "clear channel" stations. The Department of Transport announcement said that the reason for the move is that "with the rapid growth of metropolitan areas, the existing power ceilings (of regional and local stations) no longer were adequate to provide the proper service in many places." This step is the direct result of many years of campaigning on the part of Wilbur B. Smith, Superintendent, Radio and Regulations Engineering, Department of Transport, to get the necessary change made in the North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement (NARBA); by means of which powers and frequencies are controlled in both Canada and the United States. Engineers point out that all stations will not be able to take advantage of this move, because geographical and other special conditions will make it impossible for them to boost their power without creating interference. This will apply particularly in the case of stations located in the more congested areas. But the change will be welcomed, especially by the smaller stations, in cases where a power boost is technically possible. In the past, when these stations have been faced with the need for a power increase, they have had to consider a six figure investment in surveying for a new frequency, buying a new transmitter site, erecting new towers with the necessarily complicated and greatly expanded antenna arrays, besides installing a new transmitter. With the power ceiling lifted, they may be able to continue operations at the same frequency up to the maximum power of 30 kilowatts. In some cases they may be able to use the same towers on the same site with modifications to provide adequate protection, at a cost which may be as low as $20,000.00.

Most authorities feel that the trend will be towards increases, where possible, of from 250 watts to 1,000 watts for the local stations and from 5,000 watts to 10,000 watts for the regionals.

The Department’s statement does not say to what extent power boosts will be permitted, but it is understood that the permitted power will be granted so long as the new power does not create interference with other stations.

Stations contemplating these power boosts will make application through the Department of Transport and the CBC in the usual manner.

THE MAGIC TOWER
(A Fairy Tale of Facts)

Many years ago, there was a small town nestled in a lovely valley beside a beautiful river.

The town people, and the people in the valley, worked together happily and the whole valley prospered. And because it prospered, of course, the people moved from the valley.

There were happy times and sad times in the valley. The rains were sad times but they brought many men and their families to a big valley camp near the town in the valley. And the camp, too, grew and grew until today there is only one bigger in all the land.

Then more men, very wise men, came to the lovely valley and near our town built strange buildings to study what they called the atom. And their wives came and their children too, and another town grew.

And in this time, a magic tower grew in our town, soaring toward the sky and from it came words and music for all the people in all the towns in all the valley to hear.

And so, the magic tower which the people called CHOY became a part of the valley and its town.

And the people came to heed the words from the magic tower because they told them of news at home, and in other lands, and of products and services they could buy, and they were happy. And those who told of their products and services by the magic tower sold happily ever after.

(No wonder! The valley market had a $91,000,000 net buying income.)

An astonishingly large number of Liberal candidates is going to be more than justified next week in blaming the Conservatives for their state of unemployment.

Yes, we are as certain as that about the March 31 voting, and the reason for our confidence is a simple one.

This election campaign has been fought by each of the two major parties in a way which can be very clearly defined. It has been a case of Diefenbaker for the positive and Pearson for the negative. In addition to this, the Liberals have countered Conservative promises, which consistently echo the demands made by the PC's when they were in opposition, with undertakings to outmatch the Conservatives by promising the things the Conservatives are promising, even though they steadfastly refused to do them when they were in power themselves.

In the field closest to us, the field of broadcasting, Mr. Diefenbaker has intimated that second television stations will be made possible in due course. Immediately on the heels of this statement, a Liberal cabinet minister made the oracular announcement that the time is now ripe for second television stations.

While they were in office, the Liberals could only spare $46 a month for old age pensioners. Then Mr. Diefenbaker raised it to $55 and now the Liberals are promising even more.

The Liberals have consistently refused to reduce taxes since the war. They sneered when the Conservatives suggested from the opposition benches, early in 1957, that they could be reduced by several hundred million. Then, when the PC's gained power, they did this and the Liberals promptly proclaimed that they should be reduced by $100,000,000 more.

The Liberals invoked their "tight money policy" to reduce the volume of construction as an anti-inflation device. Then the Conservatives poured $300,000,000 into new housing and reduced the NHA down payment requirement to 10%. Now the Liberals are promising even greater latitude.

As soon as the Conservatives negotiated tax realignments with the provinces, the Liberals, who have consistently disregarded this need, have set out to outbid them.

The Liberals perpetually by-passed problems concerned with Maritime power development and Prairie irritation, until the Conservatives gave such matters their first consideration. Now the Liberals have done a faceabout, and have become deeply solicitous for these previously neglected areas.

And so on, and so on and so on.

In his short stay in office, Mr. Diefenbaker and his government made it amply clear that he takes his promises seriously. An examination of the debates while he was leader of the opposition discloses an accurate forecast not only of his campaign promises, but of legislation he actually introduced while he was in power.

The people of Canada have a clear choice in front of them. This choice lies between the consistency of the Conservatives and the fickleness of the Liberals. They have a choice of recording their vote either for the positive or for the negative.

What do you say?
MUSIC AND NEWS IS AN EXACTING FORMAT

"THE FIRST CONCEPT to remember is that CKBB will henceforth be programmed for listeners - not for the pleasure of the announcing staff or management."

This dictum, leading off a tersely-worded two-page memo circulated last summer to the staff of CKBB—Radio in Barrie, Ont., sets the whole tone of the program policy Ralph Snelgrove calls "the new sound in radio."

To the casual skeptic, what hits the air might easily be brushed off as "just music, news and sports - the easy way out."

But there is nothing easy about CKBB's programming, and a lot more to it than simply "music, news and sports."
The technique, and within three months the ratings indicated it was a successful one, was to pare down and eliminate everything which did not have direct, proven listener appeal. It just so happened that when the editing job was finished, the only elements left were carefully selected popular music, brief but frequent news bulletins, brief sports summaries - and public service programs stripped of all their verbiage.

It's the rare script that can't be cut convinced them that they have periods when adults determine the choice of fare and when teenagers determine it; there are also definite periods calling for bouncy music and definite periods calling for standard fare.

Not only is the music categorized, but so are the adult and teenage listening times. "A" time is adult, "B" time is the younger audience. The period from 4 to 5.30 pm, for instance, is considered "B" time and during that period only music from categories 1 and 2 can be played. In the early morning period, an "A" time, the music is bouncy. By 9.30 or 10 am, the period is still "A" time, but the music has moved into Category 3, CKBB's Standard List.

"But while the music has softened up," Ralph says, "we still keep at the announcer to keep his talk down to a minimum. If he has no announcement to make between records, the chatter is restricted to eight seconds. We feel that each announcer should write out in long-hand what he's going to say between records, to avoid repetition and to give him some security in knowing what he is going to say. However, the procedure isn't compulsory as long as the announcer keeps to the station policy. If he gets wordy the program director jumps him."

Insofar as straight talk shows are concerned, the news bulletins are the longest items on the air. Reports of provincial agricultural reps, which used to get 15 minutes, now get three minutes. "We take a blue pencil to the script if it's too long," says Ralph. "It's the rare script that can't include all the facts inside three minutes."

On CKBB's Homemaker Show, which uses a male and female announcer, policy dictates that a record will be played if telephone conversations with listeners exceed two minutes. What has been the overall effect of this staccato format on the listener?

"The change was made August 25, 1957," Ralph said. "We had had an audience measurement done in the preceding May, and we had another done in November. Our 7-9 am period showed an increase of 41 per cent, 9 to 11 am was up 12 per cent, and 11 am - 4 pm was up five per cent - and our nighttime audience, when we program strictly for the younger listener, went up 141 per cent."

Seek High River Licence

A GROUP OF CALGARY businessmen, are reported to be "well along" in their long-range plans to establish a radio and television station at High River, 40 miles south of Calgary, to compete with "both the Lethbridge and Calgary advertising markets."

The Calgary Herald says application for a radio licence will likely be made soon and that once obtained, the station would begin broadcasting 24 hours a day in about four months. The TV application would be made once the radio permit is approved.

DON'T BE AN "OFFICE ERROR"!

The pretty young gal who does the woman's program on a top-notch Western station wrote a revealing letter to us the other day. She wrote:

"Dear Sirs — It has been brought to my attention that the script 'Listen Ladies' has, through an office error, been cancelled. Would you please reinstate my subscription, and if possible send through the ones that were missed because of this. I find it an excellent service and use just about all of it."

So look, boss, if you're cutting costs around your broadcasting station, don't start on "Listen Ladies" ... unless you want to be tabbed as an office error!

Instead, give the gals who put woman-interest in your schedule a break. Subscribe, now, to "Listen Ladies" — the script service that brings phone calls, fan mail, ratings — and sponsors.

"Listen Ladies" costs you only $3 per month. All the bigger, better stations subscribe ... at least ALMOST all of them. How's about making it unanimous?

TWO MORE OF THE EFFECTIVE "NORTHERN GROUP"
GENERAL APPROVAL of the work of the Bureau of Broadcast Measurement in qualitative audience surveys, and keen queries on the prospects of qualitative measurement were the dominant points in a lively meeting of members of BBM in Toronto’s King Edward Hotel, March 13.

Representatives of sponsors, agencies, stations and station reps were given the floor for nearly two hours to air their questions, complaints and suggestions. Chairman of the meeting was BBM Executive Vice President C. C. (Bud) Hoffman, assisted by their Director of Research and Development, Wilf Hudson.

The following points emerged:

1. Most users are happy with the accuracy and honesty of BBM’s qualitative surveys.
2. Some would like a degree of qualitative reporting, ranging from figures on the income of respondents to their abilities to properly fill out a ballot.
3. BBM can provide qualitative surveys if members can agree on what they want and are willing to pay for it.
4. The cost of such surveys could be astronomical - as high, Hoffman said, as $10 millions. He qualified this statement by saying that no attempt had been made for an exact figure, but that the cost of adopting all of the measurement recommendations of CARF’s BAM report could range between $25 millions and $10 millions.
5. Present surveys are being taken too literally; i.e., an audience rating of two per cent is being accepted as exactly double the rating of a station showing one per cent. At this low figure, Wilf Hudson pointed out, both ratings are estimates - too inconclusive to be accepted precisely.
6. Some of this problem could be eliminated by intelligent use of the table of errors at the front of each survey report.
7. Thought is being given to country-wide classes on how to use the reports.
8. A common misconception is that a larger sample size must be used in, say, Toronto, than in Truro. Repeated examples by Hudson and speakers from the floor showed that conclusions reached on the basis of 100 returns varied little when the returns were multiplied by even 10 times. The statistical accuracy remains constant whether the 100 returns come from a hamlet or a metropolis.
9. There was general agreement that flaws and shortcomings still exist in the BBM service, and the assurance was given by Hoffman and Hudson that BBM is constantly striving to solve problems.

INCREASING THE RETURNS
This last point kicked off the question and answer period, when Andy McDermott of Radio and Television Sales Inc., who represents VOCM, St. John’s brought up the difficulty in getting back ballots from Newfoundlanders. He complained that while VOCM had a poor rating in a particular time spot according to BBM, this station had 1,351 telegrams from entrants in a contest aired in this same timespot. He produced his proof that the station had a better rating than BBM had shown - 1,351 actual telegrams wedged into a suitcase!

Hoffman agreed that Newfoundland returns were slow and said a Newfoundland PO box was now being used to encourage respondents.

BIGGER AND BETTER BALLOTS
This discussion raised suggestions on improving the ballot form. These included:
1. Making it bigger. Some people found the small type hard to read. This suggestion was taken under consideration.
2. Making up separate ballots, one English-language, the other French-language, on the grounds that some potential respondents were irritated by the double printing. This was rejected in principle on the grounds that it was impossible to tell, as Hoffman put it, “that a man named MacDonald is going to necessarily be English-speaking. It happens in French-speaking areas that people with English names sometimes speak only French, and vice versa.”
3. Re-wording of the section dealing with “out of home” use of radios. Some people, it was suggested, might not realize this meant portable and car-radio use. This suggestion was accepted.

HOW MANY BALLOTS?
Lyman Potts of CKSL, London, presented a detailed point for consideration, most of which had already been the subject of correspondence with BBM. Among them was the suggestion that the number of ballots returned in a survey should be mentioned on the survey report. He said that if the report is apparently based on 100 returns, and in fact only 230 ballots were returned, the calculations would be inaccurate.

Hudson said that while BBM is prepared to quote numbers of ballots returned, the figures were not in...
"... but it's going to be expensive" accurate. He reiterated that it was a statistical fact; as remarkable as it may seem, that beyond a certain point - about 100 returns - the size of the sample does not greatly affect the accuracy of the conclusions.

Hudson also pointed out that there was a danger in publishing figures on returns. Non-statisticians could easily draw inaccurate conclusions.

Muriel Murray of Walsh Advertising suggested that Hudson illustrate some of the mathematics involved in reaching conclusions on ratings. Hudson, using a blackboard, obliged with the equation of the standard deviations and the resulting error at varying probability levels.

He went on to point out that it was a statistical fact that to reduce error by one half, it would be necessary to increase sample size by four times; to reduce it to one third, nine times the original sample was necessary; and a reduction to one quarter the original error demanded 16 times the original sample size.

QUALITY COMES HIGH

Qualitative surveying was brought up repeatedly by members of the audience, and Hoffman replied that various aspects of it - particularly in the light of the CARF-BAM report - were under consideration.

"But it's going to be expensive," he said. "One man tells me that unless there are some clarifications in the BAM report, we could conceivably be forced to use a quarter of a million homes as a sample. If so, we could possibly be spending two and a half million dollars just paying the families to keep their diaries." Mr. Hoffman said it was his understanding that there were some clarifications coming up.

CARF Chairman Adrian T. Gamble, speaking briefly on qualitative surveys, said: "It is not impossible to give you any kind of survey you like - as long as you're willing to pay for it."

BBM has sent its comments on the BAM report to CARF, pointing out the need for clarity in that section of the report dealing with sampling sizes. At the same time the BBM letter emphasizes the desire of both organizations - whose directors come from the same source - to co-operate in bringing about the type of survey which would satisfy the needs of all concerned.

Mr. Gamble told THE BROADCASTER that the BAM committee is aware that misinterpretation of certain sections of the report might lead one to feel that its implementation would be excessively expensive.

"But," he said, "our specifications and criteria are to be considered as a suggested guide and not an inflexible rule. In those cases where it would be excessively expensive in view of the results, to measure up to our specifications and criteria, some modified system would be worked out."

Last Fall Radio Representatives supplied advertising agencies and advertisers with File Boxes containing information relative to radio stations and statistical data on the markets they serve. From time to time, we have supplied additional data like revised coverage maps pertaining to station's power increases, etc., in an effort to make the File Box of even greater value by keeping the information up to date. Changing personnel and programming at the station level, combined with fluctuating economic conditions sometimes change the face of a station and the community it serves, that keeping pace with such changes becomes a problem.

With this in mind we are currently in the process of updating all information in the File Box. This data will be released within the next few weeks.

Suggestions for improving this service are always welcome.

Prime Minister's Promise

WILL END CBC SWAY AS BROADCASTING'S JUDGE AND JURY

PRIME MINISTER Diefenbaker's announcement last week that his government would introduce legislation "at a very early date" to set up a separate regulatory body for all broadcasting in Canada has been warmly received throughout the industry.

Speaking in Kenora, Mr. Diefenbaker said, "The time is long overdue to assure private stations in competition with the publicly-owned national organization that their cases shall be judged by an independent body.

"They should not be judged by those who are actually in competition with them, and are in fact their judge and jury," he said.

Vern Dallin of CFQC, Saskatoon, president of the CARAB, and Jim Allard, executive vice president of the private broadcasters' organization, both expressed themselves as being delighted with the news.

Contacted by telephone, Dallin said that "having the private stations and the CBC both regulated by an independent board is the only fair way. The private stations," he continued, "have never advocated abolition of control, but control by a competitor cannot be fair, however scrupulous that competitor may be.

Allard expressed his pleasure at "this recognition by a party leader of the fairness and equity of the CARAB's repeated requests for a regulatory system, consistent with established legal and constitutional principles, and designed to encourage maximum growth of the Canadian broadcasting industry."

"What the CARAB has sought is a Telecommunications Board dealing with all aspects of telecommunications in the interest of order and efficiency. The Fowler recommendation appeared to visualize a board dealing with the broadcasting aspect only. This, we feel, would not be as efficient or orderly an arrangement."

"The Board of Transport Commissioners," he explained, "consists of five members including a full-time chairman, whereas the Fowler Commission suggested a 15-man board with a part-time chairman."

"The CARAB concept was that of a semi-judicial tribunal dealing impartially with state and private broadcasting, whereas the Fowler plan was for a board having some policy or planning connections with the CBC."

"The prime minister's announcement was so phrased," he said, "as to indicate some leaning toward the Telecommunications Board concept."

Neil LeRoy, president of the Council of Broadcasting Unions, said he had no quarrel with the idea of setting up a semi-judicial body to regulate all broadcasting in Canada." What he takes exception to, he said, is Mr. Diefenbaker's statement that the private stations are being regulated by their competitor, the CBC. "The board of governors is not the management of the CBC," he said. "Mr. Dunton and the board of governors are the governors of broadcasting, which includes both CBC and private stations, but it does not represent or speak for the CBC as a broadcasting body."

"However," he continued, "Mr. Dunton has so closely identified himself with CBC management matters that it would seem advisable to have a governing body which is not as apparently close to CBC management, and let Mr. Duncan run the CBC as a national broadcasting organization, as its president."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, in his Kenora speech, also indicated his government's intention to pave the way for TV expansion in Canada. He told his audience that the first responsibility of any government would be "through the CBC or private station, to make possible the expansion of TV in areas where it is not available today."

A Toronto Star report that the door is closed to competitive TV in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver angered the prime minister into a statement to the effect that it "was invented without any foundation in fact and entirely reflects the imagination of the writer. James Nelson, the prime minister's press secretary, is quoted as saying, "He said nothing of the kind". The Star said it had come out of a press conference in Fort William, to which Nelson answered: "Besides, there definitely was no press conference in Fort William."

Earlier, in Halifax, Revenue Minister George Nowlan predicted in a radio address that various centres in Canada would soon have competing television stations. It was only a matter of amending the existing act, he said, but the step required the approval of parliament.

Contacted in Ottawa, CBC Chairman A. Davidson Dunton replied with his traditional "no statement". Spokesman for the ACA-CAA joint committee on radio and television were inaccessible at press time.

ITS SLICK INFORMALITY TAKES THREE WEEKS TO ATTAIN

By IAN GRANT
CB Staff Writer

The high-rated "Front Page Challenge," CBC's answer to such US "game shows" as "What's My Line?" and "I've Got A Secret," may have a breezy air of informality to the viewer but this is far from being the case, because there are about fifty people, in a very small studio, running around keeping the show going, not to mention the 150 odd members of the audience who came in to see it live.

Actually, the show, on which a panel is challenged to identify a front page newspaper story, starts about three weeks before it goes on the air, when producer Jim Guthro and writer John Aylsworth put on their thinking caps and decide what they want to use as news events. The bulk of these ideas come from the mail. Each week viewers are asked to send in suggestions for future shows. Jim Guthro explained that in many cases they get a number of letters with the same suggestion, so they pick the earliest postmark and send $25 to the writer concerned. "On odd occasions we think up the ideas all by ourselves," says Jim.

After the news events are chosen the research team goes to work digging up newspaper clippings and film clips of the event they want. When this is gathered, Jim and John go through the material and decide whether they have a show or not. Then, says Jim, "we have to find someone directly connected with each story to act as challenger. More often than not this presents a problem." To prove his point Jim cited a couple of examples.

"Once in a while I think that we should have some event connected with the last war. On one such occa-

Mock show comes first

Jim said that one point he would like to make clear was that Challenge placed the emphasis on the news event and not on the challenger.

Once they have decided on the events and the persons connected with them, John Aylsworth writes out a skeleton script for the use of the panel of old-time radio directors and of course Jim Guthro.

Every Tuesday evening at 6:30 the dress rehearsal gets under way with everybody, except the challenger, running through what they will be doing on the air 90 minutes later. To make things more realistic two performers take the place of the challenger and have questions thrown at them about a news event that actually happened but will not be used in the show.

In one such warm-up, the event was the winning of the US open golf championship by Sandy Summerville in 1932 and the actor-challenger was portraying his caddy. After the panel had disposed of the event, the challenger took the chair for the interview.

At this point panelist Gordon Sinclair insisted on taking the actor's place because back in 1957 Summerville's caddy on that occasion was none other than Sinclair himself. "In case anybody wonders why Gordon Sinclair was a caddy then, it is because the London Free Press was trying to set up the story for themselves and he wanted the story himself for the Toronto Daily Star."

"We are always waiting for the unexpected to happen," said Jim.
"...there's always some comical thing"

Guthro, "and we try to be prepared for it. For example, during the recreation of one event on the screen, the film broke, and moderator Fred Davis went on with the show, not realizing what had happened. Since then we have had a phone installed from the studio floor to the control room. Fred also has a small receiver under his desk so that he can see what is actually going out on the air.

Speaking for the panel, Gordon Sinclair said there is always some comical thing happening. One he remembered, was when the panel was using the kind of microphone that hangs around your neck. The one that female panelist Toby Robins was using, broke and disappeared down the front of her dress.

THE REASON WHY

The question why Young & Rubicam, the controlling agency, picked Front Page Challenge to do a job for Lever Brothers, the sponsor, was answered by Bob Lee, the agency liaison man.

"From watching the US networks
we realized that there were a number of low cost quiz shows that were getting a good percentage of the audience. In view of this, a quiz show seemed a logical idea and besides that, the CBC was not carrying any commercially sponsored quiz program. Another factor," said Bob, "was that prior to this Lever Brothers had used musical comedy that was not particularly successful.

When asked how they know how Front Page Challenge, which costs between seven and nine thousand dollars weekly, is doing a job for its a Lever Brothers spokesman had this to say.

"The only way to measure whether television is doing a job for us is to test it. For example, we can put a 10 cent special on Breeze and adver-sit it on Challenge alone. Then if the results are good you have two choices. One is that the television did a selling job and the other is that nobody else had a special on the store shelves at that time."

He also thinks that the high measure of identification created by the fact that they alone sponsor two complete half hour shows weekly, Challenge and Tugboat Annie, produces better results than if they only sponsored half of them.

made news in the columns of the TORONTO DAILY STAR. Gordon Sinclair had said, in his column, thatchallege was really riding high according to the Elliott-Haynes ratings.

William Drylie, another columnist for the same paper, wrote that he expected Sinclair and producer Jim Guthro did not go completely round the bend celebrating because the MacDonald Research ratings, for a certain week, had placed Challenge-way down on the list of national shows.

Drylie's retraction appeared in the next day's edition after he discovered that for the week that the MacDonald survey was taken Front Page Chal-
lege was replaced on the air by the Liberal Convention.

Prime Minister's Promise

WILL END CBC SWAY AS BROADCASTING'S JUDGE AND JURY

Prime Minister Diefenbaker’s announcement last week that his government would introduce legislation "at a very early date" to set up a separate regulatory body for all broadcasting in Canada has been warmly received throughout the industry.

Speaking in Kenora, Mr. Diefenbaker said, "The time is long overdue to assure private stations in competition with the publicly-owned industry."

Contacted by telephone, Dallin said that "having the private stations and the CBC both regulated by an independent board is the only fair way. The private stations," he continued, "have never advocated abolition of control, but control by a competitor cannot be fair, however scrupulous that competitor may be."

Allard expressed his pleasure at "this recognition by a party leader of the fairness and equity of the CARTB's repeated requests for a regulatory system, consistent with established legal and constitutional principles, and designed to encourage maximum growth of the Canadian broadcasting industry."

"What the CARTB has sought is a Telecommunications Board dealing with all aspects of telecommunications in the interest of order and efficiency. The Fowler recommendation appeared to visualize a board dealing with the broadcasting aspect only. This, we feel, would not be as efficient or orderly an arrangement."

The Board of Transport Commissioners," he explained, "consists of five members including a full-time chairman, whereas the Fowler Commission suggested a 15-man board with a part-time chairman."

"The CARTB concept was that of a semi-judicial tribunal dealing impartially with state and private broadcasting, whereas the Fowler plan was for a board having some policy or planning connections with the CBC."

"The prime minister’s announcement was so phrased," he said, "as to indicate some leaning toward the Telecommunications Board concept."

Neil LeRoy, president of the Council of Broadcasting Unions, said he had "no quarrel with the idea of setting up a semi-judicial body to regulate all broadcasting in Canada." What he takes exception to, he said, is Mr. Diefenbaker’s statement that the private stations are being regulated by their competitor, the CBC. "The board of governors is not the management of the CBC," he said. "Mr. Dunton and the board of governors are the governors of broadcasting, which includes both CBC and private stations, but it does not represent or speak for the CBC as a broadcasting body."

"However," he continued, "Mr. Dunton has so closely identified himself with CBC management matters that it would seem advisable to have a governing body which is not as apparently close to CBC management, and let Mr. Duncan run the CBC as a national broadcasting organization, as its president."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, in his Kenora speech, also indicated his government’s intention to pave the way for TV expansion in Canada. He told his audience the first response to any government would be "through the CBC or private stations, to make possible the expansion of TV in areas where it is not available today.”

A Toronto Star report that the door is closed to competitive TV in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver angered the prime minister into a statement to the effect that it "was invented without any foundation in fact and entirely reflects the imagination of the writer.” James Nelson, the prime minister’s press secretary, is quoted as saying, "He said nothing of the kind.” The Star said it had come out of a press conference in Fort William, to which Nelson answered: "Besides, there definitely was no press conference in Fort William."

Earlier, in Halifax, Revenue Minister George Nowlan predicted in a radio address that various centres in Canada would soon have competing television stations. It was only a matter of amending the existing act, he said, but the step required the approval of parliament.

Contacted in Ottawa, CBC Chairman A. Davidson Dunton replied with his traditional “no statement”. Spokesman for the ACA-CAA joint committee on radio and television were inaccessible at press time.

ITS SLICK INFORMALITY TAKES THREE WEEKS TO ATTAIN

By IAN GRANT

THE HIGH-RATED Front Page Challenge, CBC’s answer to such US “game programs” as What’s My Line and I’ve Got A Secret, may have a breezy air of informality to the viewer but this is far from being the case, because there are about fifty people, in a very small studio, running around keeping the show going, not to mention the 150 odd members of the audience who came in to see it live.

Actually, the show, on which a panel is challenged to identify a front page newspaper story, starts about three weeks before it goes on the air, when producer Jim Guthro and writer John Aylsworth put on their thinking caps and decide what they want to use as news events. THREE SMALL CITIES MAKE ONE MAJOR MARKET

Three communities, in the Interior of British Columbia, none of which would have been able to have a TV station of its own for many years to come, if ever, have combined their resources with a station and two satellites, covering the entire area with one operation.

CHBC-TV, the Okanagan Valley, is the offspring of the three radio stations which serve the area. From north to south, they are CJIB, Vernon; CKOV, Kelowna; and CKOK, Penticton. Populations of these three cities and their trading areas are, in round figures respectively, 27,000, 31,000 and 32,000. While none of these areas is large enough to justify a television station of its own, the combined population is 100,000, and the total retail sales figure is around $100,000,000.

The Okanagan Valley produces 85% of British Columbia's total tree-fruit output and lays claim to being "the greatest fruit-growing area in Canada".

THE BIG TRANSFORMATION from Smith Garage to CHBC-TV is shown in this pair of "before and after" photographs. Even the cars seem to have taken on the New Look which came to the Valley with the advent of CHBC-TV.

Vernon is situated at the north end of Lake Okanagan; Kelowna is half way down; and Penticton is at the south. The Valley runs north and south, between the Cascade Mountains and the Coast Range, extending to the south into the northern part of the State of Washington.

Besides economic reasons, no one television station could hope to cover this $25,000,000 fruit and vegetable belt, because mountains do strange things to sound and picture waves. They distort the signal, and, however much power is used, they keep them fenced into a very limited range.

SATELLITES ARE THE ANSWER

The answer to this problem was found in the satellite set-up adopted by the broadcasters in the Valley. CHBC-TV operates its master transmitter from its main studios in Kelowna. In Vernon and Penticton, they have established unattended satellite repeaters which pick up the Kelowna signal from Channel 2 and send it out on Channel 7 out of Vernon and Channel 13 out of Penticton.

These three stations cover virtually the whole Valley, but already, after less than five months on the air, districts outside the stations' fringe areas are casting envious eyes, and at least two of them are doing something about it.

In Revelstoke to the northeast and Beaverdale to the southeast, Initial public response was great local companies have installed community antennas designed to receive CHBC exclusively. In the case of Beaverdale, the mines, which employ the majority of residents, are bearing the major part of the cost. In Revelstoke, it is a straight commercial enterprise.

The three Okanagan radio stations jointly incorporated the Okanagan Valley Television Company Ltd. They are represented by a board of directors composed of two from each station. Jim Browne of CKOV, Kelowna is the president, and Mrs. J. W. B. Browne, president of CKOK, is vice-president and treasurer. From CJIB, Vernon, are Charles Pitt, vice-president of the TV company and Richard Peters, secretary-treasurer. Maurice Finnerty of CKOK, Penticton is another vice-president and Roy Chapman, from the same station, is managing director of the new company and general manager of the station.

Key people on the staff are Dick Sharp, sales manager (formerly with the PENTICTON HERALD); Stan Lettner, program director (ex-C-FUN, Vancouver); Tom Wyatt, chief engineer (from RCA); Al Johnson, chief announcer (ex-C-KWX, Vancouver and CKOC, Hamilton); Norman Williams, promotion manager (formerly C-FUN and CKOK, New Westminster); Russ Richardson, film editor (late of CJOB, Winnipeg and CKOK).

THEY CONVERTED A GARAGE

CHBC got on the air September 21, with top equipment, including one studio camera and the two satellites, for about $300,000.00. In spite of having ten miles of road to hack out of the rock to the main station and satellites, and about $30,000 to spend on power lines, they accomplished this by securing economical quarters.

They leased a garage in the centre of Kelowna and renovated it for their offices and studios, including a main studio measuring 45 by 55 feet. Roy Chapman dug up his drafting instruments and drew the plans. Then he did his own contracting, buying the materials and hiring all his labor by the hour.

THREE MARKETS IN ONE

Initial public response was great, as is the case with all new TV stations. At this writing, there are ten thousand sets in the Okanagan Valley. With twenty-five to thirty thousand homes to draw from, they feel that fifteen thousand by the end of 1958 is a conservative estimate.

Many national advertisers see in this set-up a means of covering the three separate markets, which, individually, would not be worth bothering about, as one major one.

Merchants in the three cities have responded well too. The obvious object of radio is to sell a Kelowna retailer, spending money to cover Vernon and Penticton seems to have evaporated because they now see prospects of expanding their activities into the other two areas. Other stores operate branches or offer delivery service in all three centres and find the three-in-one plan highly economical.

CHBC started life as a supplementary station of the CBC network. It is programming an hour a day of live shows, which include news, weather, sports, a children's quiz show, a sports panel and western and "pop" musicals.

One interesting reaction to the first months of Okanagan TV is a new spirit of alliance between the three Valley cities. They still battle it out furiously on the ice and the baseball diamond. But, as Roy Chapman puts it: "There seems to be a new feeling of working for the good of the Valley as a whole. This", he points out, "is as it should be, because in the Okanagan, we all live directly or indirectly from the agricultural industry and the tourist trade, and the well-being of an individual community can only stem from the prosperity of the entire Valley.

NBC Criticize FCC

PROPOSED NEW REGULATIONS for American TV network operations might destroy television service as the public now knows it, President Robert W. Sarnoff of NBC told a Federal Communications Commission hearing in Washington recently.

He was criticizing a report of a committee headed by Dean Roscoe L. Barrow of Cincinnati Law School, which spent two years and some $200,000 in a study of network policies. This study suggested outlawing the "option time system" under which networks have first call on some of the best viewing hours of their affiliates. It also called for a prohibition against networks selecting the lineup of stations for program sponsors, and suggested that networks give up some of the large city stations they now own.

Sarnoff said these suggestions "would seriously impair, and ultimately might destroy the ability of television networks to perform their essential functions.

"These functions are now being performed effectively, in a framework of intense competition among networks and between the network medium and other national media," he said. "They have been the foundation of the miraculous growth of television over the past decade, and they are essential to its development.

"We oppose these recommendations on the ground that they seek to extend government regulation into new areas of business enterprise without need or justification," he said, adding that "government intervention in these fields would involve it in business judgments and responsibilities which are better left to the forces of competition and a free economy."

TV Station In Flin Flon

AN APPLICATION TO PROVIDE Flin Flon, The Pas, Swan River and other Northern Manitoba centres with television has been put before Transport Minister George Hees by G. H. Parker of Toronto. Mr. Parker stated he was president of Northwest Electronic Company, which is still in the formation stage, but which is expected to be based at Flin Flon. A formal application to the CBC is to be made shortly.

The PLACE is the Royal York Hotel, in fact it is all over the Royal York Hotel; the event is the Toronto Press Club's twelfth annual By-Line Ball, the date is April 11. Music will be supplied by Denny Vaughan, who, with his orchestra, will be making his final appearance in Toronto before he moves into the new Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal.

Besides the dance band, attractions will include Paddy Conklin's Midway, with its games of skill and chance for the Steve Brodies. There will be strolling players for talent devotees.

There will be a gargantuan bar for the thirsty.

There will be saloons, in keeping with this year's (adult) western motif, for the bee drinkers.

You are asked to come disguised as fugitives from Gunsmoke, but resourceful Dave MacDonald, who forcibly fed me this propaganda, said that "dudes" will be admitted — provided they have the price.

The above-mentioned price, incidentally, whether you come in western attire or play it straight, is $2.50 per person for admission, after which it is up to you, so let your conscience dictate the amount of "small change" you should carry.

All sorts of gimmicks are in the mill, like an electronic computer to help the highly fallible human judges choose a Miss By-Line 1958, who will be paid off with fame and $300 as the down payment on a rich husband, as well as a week at Ted Wright's Muskoka lodge, Cleveland's House.

Let me see. What else? Oh yes.

Dave reports that there are dozens of door prizes, including a week-end for two in New York and no questions asked. (This is through the courtesy of Travel House Ltd.). It includes transportation to and from New York by American Airlines, accommodation at the Waldorf Astoria; tickets for My Fair Lady and other top flight shows; a dinner party with someone celebrated, and fifty dollars mad money, presented by the Press Club.

Indications are that there will be newspaper and broadcasting people galore at the ball. The mixed media committee includes George Retzlaff and Steve Douglas from the CBC. June Dennis, this year's president of the Canadian Women's Press Club, and of course our informant, Dave MacDonald, of the Globe & Mail. MacDonald paid off for all this publicity by letting me beat him at one game of crib for two bucks.

And this reminds me of the two young male dears who told an equally young lady ditto that they were out to make a little dough, to which she replied: "I wouldn't mind making a couple of bucks myself."

McQuaig does not limit his activities to the States though, as is evidenced by the fact that he is conducting a clinic on "How to Pick Men" in Toronto next month. The two day meeting will be conducted under the sponsorship of the Ad &

Sales Club of Toronto at the Park Plaza Hotel, April 21 and 22. (He says he finds a two day meeting comes off best with a day out in between).

In this meeting, McQuaig says he will be exploring problems connected with "hiring and promoting the right men". He will list specific questions to ask job applicants which reveal the facts. He will explain how to interpret the facts in a man's history which indicate his strengths and weaknesses.

McQuaig's sacred cow is "work potential". "If you hire a man with this quality you save yourself headaches and dollars and head for profits", he says. His formula discloses just this. His presentations at these clinics which occur from twice to four times a month are described by people who attend them as a refresher course in solutions to employment problems.

He has been conducting these sessions for the past seven years, and comes to Toronto from Albuquerque and Memphis.

THE PLAY IS THE THING

A S AN enthusiastic attender of plays, I am not always enraptured over the efforts of Toronto's enterprising Crest Theatre. This is especially a fact when they aim their sights at such arty efforts as The Cherry Orchard and Tamburlaine.

Currently, however, they are packing the house with Visit to a Small Planet, and have had to hold it over for an additional three weeks.

I saw this show, and have been singing its praises ever since. It is true that Barry Morse turned in a superb performance in the leading part, but even the lesser luminaries shone with almost equal brilliance and I think I know the reason. In a word, it is because this - "The play is the thing".

Without a shadow of doubt, from a literary standpoint there have been far finer examples of the playwright's art. But sometimes these more literary plays take a lot of playing, and let us say because of the time limit on rehearsals that any repertory company has to face, they just don't get cooked right through.

One of the reasons why Visit to a Small Planet is such a success is that although farce is generally acknowledged to be the most difficult kind of show to do, it was at least down to earth in that it spoke everyday language, which was understandable to the actors as it was to the audience.

Aiming high is commendable only so long as it does not project over the audience's heads. Arty gems of literature in drama form bring considerable pleasure to the performers. The only thing is, if anything else is "the thing" besides the play, it is the audience.

And, speaking of audience, if I have any left after this review, it's good policy to lower the curtain while they can still take more, so buzz me if you hear anything won't you?

THE WOMEN’S ADVERTISING Club of Toronto celebrated its 25th birthday with a Silver Anniversary Dinner at the Park Plaza Hotel in Toronto last week with between 300 and 400 members and guests in attendance.

Guest speakers were T. M. Atkinson, president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, and Elton Johnson, president of the Canadian Association of Advertising Agencies.

From a nucleus of several dozen members in 1933, the Women’s Ad Club now boasts a membership of 217, many of them highly placed in the advertising world.

Both speakers dealt with various aspects of Canada’s growth and expansion in their addresses. Mr. Johnson, on the subject, “Consumers of Tomorrow,” said population statistics show the number of family units in Canada is on the threshold of a tremendous increase. “The demands for new homes, motor cars, appliances, schools, hospitals, and roads will bring about inevitably a new surge of prosperity,” he said.

Increased leisure time would give “explosive force to the power of consumption,” he added, introducing a “decade of the consumer” which would present the greatest challenge ever to the men and women in advertising and marketing.

Mr. Atkinson, who is the advertising manager of Du Pont, speaking on “Products of Tomorrow,” said Canada was just beginning to experience the benefits of plastic products. The family of polymers was capable of producing an infinite variety of products, and the time was already at hand when man-made materials would revolutionize our living habits.

New products, new packaging processes, new concepts of quality and durability would all make the job of selling and promotion more complex. The new era, Mr. Atkinson said, “will require promotion people who are well-informed about the characteristics of these new materials. It will also present a challenge to all of us to educate the buying public, to assist them--through better labelling, through honest and informative advertising--so that they can select intelligently.”

CBC PLANS CANADA-WIDE ELECTION COVERAGE

A NATIONWIDE viewing audience will be able to watch the CBC’s election coverage for the first time this year, through recent expansions of the CBC’s TV network and the use of US facilities.

The CBC-TV connected network now extends to Calgary and Edmonton in the west and the four Maritime provinces in the east. US facilities will complete the extension to British Columbia.

Both the radio and television service will sweep the country twice each hour, picking up reports from each station in their respective networks.

Radio service will be improved by the setting-up of a reporting team in each province. Only six teams were used last year.

The system to be used is designed to keep the listener informed as to "who is winning," by party, insofar as national coverage is concerned, and by individual, in the case of local contests. This means statistical data will be kept to a minimum, in favor of “trend analyses” done in Toronto by J. B. McGeachy of the Globe & Mail and Earl Cameron and Lamont Tilden of the CBC. Author Morley Callaghan will do personality sketches on leading political figures.

On TV, Charles Lynch and Blair Fraser will broadcast national trends. Stanley Burke will interview prominent political figures, and Rex Loring will report party standings with charts.

Stations will cut away twice an hour, starting at 6:50 pm EST to report local developments.

When the outcome is known, party leaders will address the whole TV network audience.

TV Conference Is Held

More than 300 broadcasters from around the US gathered at Baltimore's John Hopkins University this month for a conference, operated by the Westinghouse Company, which dealt with educational TV, children's programs, and the handling of news.

The conference was told more than one billion hours of television are watched each week by US children, and that youth's pre-occupation with the medium put a tremendous burden of responsibility on TV stations. The speaker was Professor Robert Goldenson of Hunter College, New York, who said TV was steadily upgrading the tastes of children and was helping to stimulate their curiosity.

"Television," he said, "should not be on the defensive, but should be on the offensive. It is beginning to meet the needs and interests of the child, providing a broader canvas, a richer diet for children" rather than it did five or six years ago.

Another educator, Dr. Bergen Evans of Northwestern University, who is a well-known author and TV performer himself, said television faces a difficult problem in attempting to put on shows with "a serious intellectual content" and still make them attractive to millions. He said, however, that the public wants educational shows and it wants them intelligently presented, not "sugar-coated" to disguise the educational content.

In the sessions on news, TV newsmen were advised to make broader use of their technical facilities for on-the-spot coverage. It was pointed out by several speakers that radio had done this successfully with audio remotes, and had increased its ratings as a result.

Film Farm Musical

Cockshutt Farm Equipment Ltd. used a filmed half-hour musical over 13 rural-market TV stations this month to introduce its new line of tractors. Cockshutt Charivari, a fast-moving package of songs, dances and humor with all-Canadian talent will also be shown in Western US rural areas. A color film is available to farm organizations.

Charivari has a strong rural flavor, making it easy to integrate Cockshutt's commercial messages, handled by Joel Aldred.

Among the cast are Barbara Bricker, Don Parrish, Barbara Hamilton, Jack Duffy and the Midge Arthur Dancers, with Art Hallman's Orchestra.

Charivari opened March 15 on CFPC-TV Charlottetown and CKWS-TV Kingston; March 16 on CKVR-TV Barrie; March 17 on CHEX-TV Peterborough, CBWT Winnipeg, CFPL-TV London, CKX-TV Brandon, and CHAT-TV Medicine Hat; March 18 on CKBI-TV Prince Albert; March 20 on CFJI-TV Swift Current and CKCO-TV Kitcheiner; March 22 on CHCT-TV Calgary; March 23 on CFQC-TV Saskatoon; and is scheduled for April 7 on CJLH-TV Lethbridge.

CLBL Covers Oslo Hockey

With the co-operation of 12 private radio stations from Montreal to New Westminster, B.C., radio station CLBL, Oshawa, home station of the Whitby Dunlops, made it possible for listeners across Canada to hear the day-play-by-play broadcasts, originating from Oslo, Norway, of all the games played by Canada in the World Hockey Tournament, held early this month.

CLBL started the ball rolling by giving Canadian player, John Henderson, 48 tapes, before he left for Oslo, on which to record interviews with players, officials and celebrities. These were returned to the station and broadcast on behalf of the Consumers Gas Company. The name of the interviews was The Dunneys Abroad.

Then on February 27, Sportscaster Bill McKissock, Station Manager Gord Garrison and Technical Director Bill Marchand left for Oslo to broadcast the last half of every game in the tournament which the Canadians played in.

In the absence of Gord Garrison, Program Manager Fred Oliver took over the station. In the view of the costs involved in this venture it was decided to release the broadcasts to other stations out of the Lakeside Broadcasting Company's listening area. As a result they were heard on: CFPC, Montreal; CFRA, Ottawa; CKWS, Kingston; CJJOY, Guelph; CJET, Smith Falls; CHOV, Pembroke; CKPC, Brantford; CKY, Winnipeg; CKNW, New Westminster; CFQC, Saskatoon; CKXL, Calgary and CJKR, Regina.

CFRB sent: Wes McKnight and Bill Baker to Oslo to send back McKnight's daily 10-minute broadcast to CFRB and a group of private stations. Foster Hewitt, CKFH, Toronto, did a play-by-play description of the Russia versus Canada game for the CBC.

Radio Station CJMS in Montreal is at present busy completing its study of over $15,000 house-to-house calls, made by over two hundred students during the past three months in various sections of Greater Montreal.

Each student called on a certain number of homes and completed a short interview on the listening habits, tastes and other factors concerning radio in Montreal.

The main purpose of this very extensive study is to see if many accepted radio program ideas have any real practical value. When the survey and study have been fully complete, CJMS hopes to publish its findings as a public service to the industry.

On March 16 French radio station CKAC in Montreal started broadcasting from its new 50,000 watt transmitter located 30 miles west of Montreal at St. Joseph du Lac. The transmitter was designed and manufactured in Canada by the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. It was officially opened by Cardinal Leger and official opening will take place in June.

Reports from G. N. Mackenzie include the sale of the five-minute show Bob & Ray to CJBC, Toronto; CJRH, Richmond Hill; CJSP, Leamington; CFAN, Calgary; CJCA, Edmonton; CKRC, Winnipeg; CKRM, Regina and CJCH, Halifax. In April there will be 260 episodes of the half-hour show Curtain Time available to stations.

PRELUDE to BEAVERS

The remainder of this issue is devoted to "Prelude to Beavers" or, in other words, a selection of stories chosen by our staff from those which appeared in this paper during 1957 and which are reprinted here on the strength of the contributions to radio and television broadcasting they represent.

These stories will be closely studied by our Beaver Awards Committee, which will regard them in the light of nominations, and select from them three to nine. To the stations involved in these stories the committee chooses, the 1957 Beaver Awards will be presented.

In selecting these "nominations", our staff has concentrated on stories which point up the broadcast medium's power for good. This may mean the good of the community, in terms of education, meeting of emergencies, public information, public health, citizenship and just plain entertainment. There is also the important economic function of promoting the sale of merchandise.

We believe that the nineteen stories are typical of the many public services that are being rendered to people wherever radio and television stations are heard. We regret that more such stories have not been accessible to us, but we hope that "The Beavers" will encourage broadcasters to enhance the fine works they are performing continuously in the public service with a better job of proclaiming their accomplishments and so encouraging others to follow their fine examples.

There are no categories or specifications for Beaver Awards. All Canadian stations - radio or television - are eligible to receive awards for conduct deemed by the judges to reflect distinction on these two kinds of broadcasting. Awards take the form of framed copper plaques.

Miniature reproductions of the awards won by their stations will be presented to individuals who, in the opinion of the judges, are directly involved in the award-winning enterprise.

The committee will be appointed and the final selections made in time for the winners to be announced in our issue of May 8th, which will be dedicated to the Association of Canadian Advertisers and the Canadian Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters during their 1958 Conventions. Presentation of awards will be made in the home territory of each winner, if possible before representative groups of influential business people.

In commending our Beaver Awards project to the industry, the national advertisers and their advertising agencies, we would like to point out that it is designed to enhance the power of radio and television, for the good not only of the industry but of audience and sponsors as well.
MOST LOCALS USE CFGP

E V E R Y B U S I N E S S in Grande Prairie, Alta., which has opened its doors during the nineteen years that CFGP has been on the air, has advertised at one time or another on the station.

An impressive number of sponsors have been with the station continuously since its inception and 85 per cent of the businesses in Grande Prairie are currently using CFGP facilities.

Along with these facts, Jack Soars, assistant manager of the station, claims that “public service has been the watchword at CFGP.”

“How else is Mrs. Joe Doakes at Deadwood to know that her husband won’t be home tonight as planned?” he asks. “There’s no phone within 50 miles of Deadwood. Joe tells Mrs. Joe by radio.

“Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bloke come to town, and before they can start back, the car breaks down.” Soars continues. “Over the radio goes the message: ‘To John Soak at Hinton Trail, We won’t be home tonight, the car broke down. Please throw the cow over some hay.’”

He points out that there are no daily newspapers in the area and therefore people have to get their news from the station.

Stressing further the necessity of radio in the community, Soars states that “no mother will send her child to school until she has heard CFGP’s weather forecast and school bus report. She has to know how to clothe him and whether the bus is running. He has five miles to walk to reach the school bus. Then if a blizzard comes up she listens to the radio for assurance that he is okay and is billeted in town overnight because the bus can’t get through.

“Our whole day of broadcasting is in the public interest— it just has to be,” Soars reports.

He points out that the bank clearings in the community of 8,000 are almost a million dollars a week.

“The area is booming like a blowing oil well and people have lots of money,” he claims and adds that the station is doing very well, commercially.

“Let the metropolitan stations have their tremendous promotions,” Jack writes. “There’s an awful lot of satisfaction in really knowing that you are serving people—that you are truly in the public service.”

HALIFAX Tops For INCOMES

"WITH ONLY 130,000 people to reach, we can't possibly afford to have one single viewer dissatisfied with his or her station." This was the way Conrad Lavigne, builder-owner-operator of CFCL-TV, Timmins, expressed his philosophy, and whether it is that approach or his pleasing Gallic personality, or a bit of both, it seems to be working out. Conrad started out with his French language CFCL - Radio in 1932. He added the TV station to his activities in June of last year, after spending the winter as an active member of his own construction gang.

On July 1, 1956, there were sixteen sets in the Timmins area. On November 21, the BBM survey showed 16,000. Today Con claims around 19,000 and guarantees at least 20,000 by the next BBM.

How did he do it? I think he thought the two main requisites were work, and a happy faculty to infect everyone with his own enthusiasm. His staff of fifty-five, with only one from outside the area, work as a closely co-ordinated team. And outside the studio, people from all walks of life talk about CFCL as "our station." I know, because I heard them.

By Dick Lewis

The North calls it "Our Station"

President Conrad Lavigne hacked his station out of the rock.

Lavigne only goes on the air once a week, although he is a professional night-club performer of long standing. His program - a weekly ten-minute spot on the nightly Focus - is called The President's Corner. He gets literally scores of letters each week - I picked out one bundle and there were 96 - and he reads a good many of them, good, bad or indifferent.

He showed me one from the local PTA and it asked him if he could do something about getting the kids to go to bed. Now, at eight o'clock, a slide appears on the screen showing a child sleeping in its crib and indicating the time. The announcer says: "All right, children, it's time for bed" and that according to reports, makes it official.

Fifty per cent of the people in his area are French-speaking, and Lavigne explained that French people have to be "very bi-lingual" to follow programs and commercials on radio. "In TV, though," he continued, "the picture helps French-speaking people understand quite readily."

They do one or two French programs, although the station is basically English and once received a complaint from an English youngster because he couldn't understand L'Aigle Noir, a French-language serial. Conrad suggested on his program that it didn't seem unreasonable to give the French kids just one show in their own language. He was deluged with letters of appreciation from French-speaking parents and children.

Then he heard from an English-speaking woman who watches the English Plouffe Family on Thursday evenings. She wondered if he couldn't carry it on Fridays in French - for the benefit of a neighbor who spoke no English, and also for herself.
to her help refresh her high school French.

TV EDITORIALIZING

CFCFL-TV carries sixteen hours a week of live programs with one camera, and most of it is sponsored, except for some of the news.

Right now they are in the middle of a campaign for a university for Timmins. Representatives of all social groups appear on the air in a panel each week, and do what they can to stir up local interest in the project.

The angle is that outside of the new Sudbury University, students have to go to Ottawa or Montreal, and many of them cannot afford the distance.

It is station policy to get as many local people on the air as possible. On every sportscast, Gaston Bergeron shows a picture of a local team, and often has them there in person with the captain introducing the players to the viewers. The teams which have appeared in this way make an all-embracing list, including school teams, juniors, seniors, midgets, mercantile, miners, bushmen and others.

FAR AND WIDE

Monday is audition day at CFCL, and an average of thirty local performers show up to try out for the Porcupiney Meet The Gang. Half a dozen of them make the grade and they hail from all directions, from Rock and Lake, which is 83 miles away to 140 mile distant Kapuskasing and intervening points. Once a month a high school student goes with what they need them.

Somewhere in Northern Ontario takes over the show for half an hour. The student announcer introduces the school emcee and that's all there is to it.

Anyone is liable to bob up on Meet The Gang. One was the Canuccio, champion baton twirler of three states', who appeared later on the Ed Sullivan Show, Kraft Variety and the Canadian Hour. Then there was Christine Michalis, ten year old pianist from St. George, New York.

Meet The Gang is sponsored by Ideal Furniture and Hardware. This is a competitor of Levigne's, who includes in his general interests Vanity Fair Furniture.

FOCUS ON TALENT

News, sports, local talent, interviews, weather and news in French are part of the daily (6-7 p.m.) Focus. The program is produced by Program Director, Don Baxter, with a background of 14 years in show business and a strong leaning towards live talent.

Each program ends with a feature. Tuesday it's Sketching with Harold. CFCL-TV Art Director Harold Lyon stands at a blackboard and does this and that, but on drawing Harold discusses such basic art principles as depth, movement, density and so forth, illustrating his words on the board. Schools send Harold their student's best drawings and he shows them to viewers, adding his own comments. Sometimes they are paintings or pastels from the Porcupine Art Club. One local art teacher, when she first saw these, alerted all teachers and principals to watch.

Harold's daily routine is the station's art department where he turns out slides at the rate of about one an hour. Since June 15, he has made 650 slides, and also has thirty backgrounds ranging from 8 x 10 feet to 10 x 20.

In his free time he does station promotion on the air, such as cleaning up sale and they call it "Meet The Gang." He must a quarter century you can depend on the answer, because nine chances out of ten he was there and remembers.

After the show I asked him how young he was. He pulled a print reflectively on his enormous pipe and said: "Maybe your readers would like to know this way I started writing a weekly newspaper when I was 18 years old. I was fifty years in the business, twenty-nine of them as an editor of the PORCUPINE ADVANCE. I took on a regular radio program when I was 72 and started in TV at 76.

70-LIVE ARTISTS—70

On the community service side, they have free interviews every day for anything from a bake sale to the Red Cross drive.

When I arrived they were still cleaning up after a Sunday evening Red Cross impromptu drive which ran from 10 p.m. until everyone was exhausted at a quarter to three. It was just a regular Red Cross Blitz and they were several thousand dollars over their objective, so the station set up to make it tidy up for them to the tune of $3,000, with pledges still being received.

The whole thing was un-rehearsed and un-prepared and a typical number was Lavigne doing a dance to singing Elvis Presley's Blue Suede Shoes for a fifty dollar pledge. "If I had known how it was going to go", he told me, "I'd told two hundred". All turned out for Seventy artists in to do their stuff special buys and the third is institutions. Right now they are in the middle of a proof of purchase contest for twelve sewing machines.

HISTORIAN OF THE NORTH

The Wednesday feature is called Reminiscent With Macdonald. This might be described as the unofficial historian of the North. He reminisces about the old days in the very quiet intereting manner, and when he talks about something that happened at the turn of the last century you can depend on the answer, because nine chances out of ten he was there and remembers.

After the show I asked him how young he was. He pulled a print reflectively on his enormous pipe and said: "Maybe your readers would like to know this way I started writing a weekly newspaper when I was 18 years old. I was fifty years in the business, twenty-nine of them as an editor of the PORCUPINE ADVANCE. I took on a regular radio program when I was 72 and started in TV at 76.

MASCUPLICITY A LA MODE

A regular feature on the Timmins station is called Clark's Trends. It made my first contact with the program like this. The studio doors swing open and in drove, a swinging scarlet MC which pulled up to the general area of the camera, stopped, with a grumph, to let out a man and his dog. The former, a neat-but-not-gaudy fortysome man about-town stepped onto the set and started to talk in a quiet authoritative way.

It was Reg Clark, owner of an exclusive men's shop. Clark's Menswear -- in thirty mile distant South Porcupine. He started to talk about clothes, how to wear them, when to wear them and also what to wear for special occasions, and you could sense from the attention he gained from the boys around the studio that he was being listened to far and wide.

Not being authoritarily inclined myself, I probably did not do any good but I found out how to tie a tie, make up my suit material and particular kind of neck. Hats should be chosen according to the shape of face. What should I make of what path on what occasion is duck soup the way Reg Clark puts it.

On and off I heard he uses to great effect is to show pictures of well-known personalities around town before and after the Clark treatment. At Clark the mechanics of the show, he never mentions prices or quality. Everyone knows you get only the best at Clark's it is the little extra that will make the trick. Perhaps if you told him this, he must work, because people look at the show -- both the men and the women -- and then, even if they live in Timmins or further, the wife shoots him off to South Porcupine to get properly clothed as only Clark can do it.

SELLING FOOD ON TV

CFCL-TV has two food stores on the air -- Mike's Supermarket and the Red & White Stores, which each have their own programs.

Mike's Supermarket uses Dollar A Second, a live quiz, which is now in its fourth month. It is a Sunday night show, designed to keep store traffic through the generally slack Monday - Wednesday period. Three department heads handle the commercials which consist of a variety of links, gimmicks and skits.

The Red & White Stores use a live western music show Saturday nights called Red & White Jamboree. It's quite a professional crew that does this one, the emcee and fiddler both having worked on Grand Old Opry out of Chicago in the old pre-TV radio days. Two spots point up the station's name.

THE STORY OF A CHILD

On the serious side, the station recently signed a deal with Gilbert L. Desroches, chief constable of nearby Ansonville. The chief's letter in part has found since TV is in operation that my calls concerning juveniles, after currfew hours, skatimg on roads, minor disturbances in public places, One of the biggest problems in operation because I am waiting for him. The pugilistic view was never heard from again, but the mail was terrible and -- if it matters - all favorable.

TRIAL AND ERROR

I don't know what it proves, but CFCL-TV which started from scratch nine months ago, is doubling its national spot and network business on the local front, and set sales are promised.

The way Lavigne puts it -- "We had never seen TV, so we made a lot of mistakes at first. But fortunately we were not in the news business, so we had never seen it either." In his car, on the way to the plane after an intriguing day, he thought the world was a clear blue sky: "I'm still the best butcher in the north, so we'll always be able to fall back on that." I don't think they'll have to trouble you."

SPONSOR SEES FIRST OF SERIES -- COMES QUIETLY

Camera man Hans Hugo doing some agile footwork, made the one studio camera do the work of three, with the aid of slide inserts.

To produce the first play, the station used its own staff and several local players in their large studio.

The following day, the Saya Fuel Company of North Bay bought a whole series based on the format of the first show, and the series is now called Hi Flame Studio Presentation.

March 31 saw the presentation of the second play, Mill of the Gods. It was written by Angus McLellan and directed by Wilf Davidson, both CKGN-TV staff members. Included in the cast of five in the two-act production were Bill Hart and Bill Bennett, also of the station.

The third show, scheduled for last Sunday, April 26, starred announcer Bill Crane. This play, called Peace, Perfect Peace, carried a cast of ten, six of them speaking parts, and was written especially for the series by Angus McLellan.

Future presentations will include a half-hour drama called Never Ride With A Stranger, based on a short story by CKGN-TV promotion manager Barry Penhale.

The driving force behind the whole series is Bill Hart. Bill, who was born of theatrical parents, believes that in time it will be possible for CKGN-TV and local actors and actresses to build up their own company.

The sale of the series came about by accident.

The first program was presented as a one-shot sustainer with no thought of a series or sale in mind.

No solicitation was made at all. The sponsor telephoned CKGN-TV the next day and asked if he could purchase a series of that type running over the next thirteen months, and the Playhouse was on its way.

PLAYING THE LEAD in CKGN-TV's first live drama, "Desperate Decision," is production manager Bill Hart. This is the play that sparked the Saya Fuel Company to take on a series of thirteen dramas.

FOLLOWING the presentation of their first live drama show, CKGN-TV, North Bay has sold one of the hour-long shows a month for the next thirteen months to a local sponsor.

The first show, done as a one-shot February 17, was called Desperate Decision. It was directed by CKGN-TV production manager Bill Hart who also played the male lead along with two other performers.

FOR OAKVILLE'S UPPER CRUST

"This is the White Oaks Station" is a phrase radio station CHWO, Oakville, Ontario, never forgets to add when signing on or off the air. For Oakville, with its surrounding communities, is the White Oaks country, and this fact has a great deal to do with shaping the pattern of CHWO programming.

Even before Marco de la Roche made "White Oaks" famous in her Jane novels, the phrase had always figured prominently in Oakville's aristocratic, tradition-steeped past. When the original gentlty settlers purchased the townsite from the Mississauga Indians in 1805, founder Colonel William Chisholm shipped to white oak timber down a 16-mile creek and thence to England for barrel staves and ships.

This White Oaks past, with its somewhat uppity, country-squire flavor and elegance and grace of living, which were characteristic of the first settlers, also typified later arrivals. After the original settlement, the first big wave of newcomers were multimillionaire tycoons (including a few with sparkling new British titles). They moved from nearby Toronto during the Roaring '20s and built park-like, stone-walled estates under the shade of the century-old Willow trees that lined Oakville's Lake Ontario shoreline. CHWO's working president, Howard Caine, points out that this group "has la-de-da tastes, to put it mildly."

The present post World War II decade of prosperity brought a third wave of well-heeled sophisticated newcomers who are currently dotting the lakefront with expensive, daftly hund-low ranch bungalows, complete with swimming pools and patios. This group Caine describes as "junior executives types commuting from Toronto's thriving advertising agencies, newspaper offices, broadcasting stations and industrial plants. In any case," he adds, "they just couldn't be more finicky or sophisticated in their program tastes."

Country type community like this, CHWO programs inevitably have to avoid much of the sensational, schmaltzy type of fare that goes over in less exacting markets. News editor Cy Young says, "that's why we stick pretty closely to three sure-fire types of programming - (1) editorialized, non-gory newscasts, (2) a constant flow of high-quality, sometimes even high-brow music and (3) fairly intellectual, 'talky' programs on topics like art, books, and theatre chatter."

CHWO programming is kept carefully general and is seldom specifically tailored to either men or women listeners. This means there are no women's shows, as such. "Oakville housewives", says Jean Caine, Howard's wife and hostess on three programs a day, "send a far more attentive ear to world affairs and local events than to household hints. Perhaps that's because so many of them leave domestic worries to their cooks."

With the one exception of a Saturday-morning program, Mainly for Men (which is so general almost as many women as men listen to it), CHWO provides no special programs for Oakville males - who also share their wives' wide, non-specific range of interest. The station doesn't offer any quiz or variety shows either - not even any how-to shows.

Says Bob McLaughlin, chief announcer "We don't want to sound smug, but how to fix a broken window sash is a subject most Oakville homeowners will dial away from. We leave things like that to the local carpenter. Our listeners prefer to hear about things that are more than an inch away from their own noses."

RURALS ARE REMEMBERED

McLaughlin feels that interest varies within the community itself, according to social geography. "It's a hard, cold fact", he said, "that CHWO listeners in the well-heeled lakefront area are more interested in Cy Young's news editorials than in sports news. Further inland, in the more workaday areas like Milton, Bronte and Cooksville, interest increases in sports, decreases in news."

Nevertheless CHWO is careful to give these less sophisticated listeners their fair share of program attention. A highlight of the recent Millen Centennial was Cy Young's interview with a 76-year-old blacksmith, one of the few remaining full-time blacksmiths in Ontario, and the last of a family that has shoeed Oakville's horses for four generations.

Also tailored for "average" listening is Curly Slater's twice-a-week binge of western music. Curly also runs the snack bar downstairs. Again with a slightly patronizing eye on what it calls its "minority groups", night-time announcer Garry Ferrier interrupts his Monday through Friday stretch of egghead-type programs with a once-a-week hour devoted to minority groups with special interests like jazz."

For the most part, however, CHWO music runs strictly from hi-fi to hi-brow. In fact "quality music", morning, noon and evening, takes up a bigger chunk of air time than anything else.

Caine feels that the constant flow of serious music is responsible for a large number of listeners, outside CHWO's own bailiwick, who switch their dials to Oakville, including a great number from multi-stationed Toronto. When he first told some radio friends how he planned to start up a station specializing in high-buttoned music, they told him he was crazy, that it "wouldn't go over, and that the old cornball routine of quiz and variety shows, jokebox music and give-away programs was the only sure-fire pattern for success." Grinning complacently, Howard points to his daily mail bags of praise.

NEWS FOR BLUE-BLOODS

CHWO news coverage receives almost as lofty an accolade as its music. Cy Young, interviewed across the roar of the Broadcast News teletype machine that fills the CHWO newsroom, said "I deliver news that interests responsible, thinking people, and only that kind of news. To the best of my ability I ignore everything else."

Cy's principal newsroom in Your World Today, at dinner time. Usually he begins it with the highlights on world news and ends up with an editorial-type comment. Queried on his editorial policies, Cy stressed the fact that he will "avoid no subject regardless of how controversial, as long as the thinking behind the editorializing can be kept non-partisan and objective."

Recently he tangled with two powerful oil refineries that have just set up shop in Oakville. Cy loudly opposed their intention of upsetting previously established zoning regulations by building in residential areas. Whenever there's no big fighting question like the battle of the zones on Cy's horizon, he gets restless and uses his standard store of controversial small-talk to rile listeners into a mood of healthy indignation. One of his pet ways of rubbing salt into community wounds is to twit Oakville about its pro-British bias, comparing the town with Victoria's "long-stocking" community. So seldom does this fail to jack up Oakville's red-white-and-blue blood pressure that Cy is surprised and hurt when he doesn't get a letter threatening to "kick him out of the British Empire."

But not all of Cy's misbehavior over the air is intentional. Like all veteran newscasters he has some radio "biffs" to his credit. He once excitedly informed listeners that a local hockey player has "scored his third goal in the season."

CAINE'S WIFE IS ABE

Suave and poised Jean Caine does three programs a day. Second Cup (breakfast chatter and music), Radio Close-Up (midmorning celebrity interviews) and Showcase (afternoon show music and theatre talk-about-town). Jean's program usually proceed with a smooth serenity and absence of "goofs". When Mazo de la Roche's autobiography, Ringing The Changes recently came off the press, Jean felt that Oakville's historian was a natural choice for an interview on Radio Close-Up, but got turned down. Eventually she consented to have her cousin and lifelong intimate, Caroline Clement, appear on the program. Also present during this memorable Jean Caine interview was Jack Stoddard, sales manager for MacMillan's, her publishers. He told Jean's listeners that the White Oaks novels are responsible for the picture most Europeans have of Canada.

Three times a week Jean's Radio Close-Up interviews are transcripted from New York, hosted by Jinx Falkenburg and her husband Tex McCrary. These New York-originating programs interview such celebrities as Laurence Olivier and Joe Louis. On the other two days of the week Jean interviews local personalities from Oakville and vicinity, plays records and discusses topics like the royal family and theatre news.

With all these Jean's goats are rare. Once though she told her listeners that a Miss Joy Parsons, administrative supervisor of Oakville Memorial Hospital, is "the only non-religious lady hospital administrator in this country. As a result she somewhat upset the "non-religious Miss Parsons" cousin who happens to be the Bishop of Winnipeg.

WHEEL CHAIR SPORTSCASTER

Johnny Black, a paraplegic who broadcasts CHWO sportscasts from his hospital room, is former rising Oakville athlete, who became paralyzed from the neck down as a result of a football tackle. Every night the station rushes BN teletype releases to Johnny by taxi. However, much of the material for his sportscasts come from local listeners of all kinds who make a habit of phoning him. He talks with them by means of a specially constructed telephone attachment that fits over his shoulder.

However, Johnny is far from being a shut-in. The local Rotary Club has provided him with a special truck and driver permanently at his disposal. He also runs a ticket agency in downtown Oakville.

Another CHWO personality is Garry Ferrier who does the two-hour, sign-off-time Night Party, sponsored by Port Credit Motors. It is on Night Party that CHWO makes its most significant departure from its high-brow musical norm. Garry plays what he calls "crazy music and off-beat tapes".

In mock interviews on Night Party, Garry assumes strange voices and aliases like "Gilbert Guggenhoffer". Somewhat in the manner of Max "(Rawhide)" Ferguson, he pokes fun at personalities in the news, at other programs and at commercial messages. Recently he posed as an "express abstractionalist" and interviewed himself, much of his own audible hilarity, on the subject of the Prelude To The Afternoon Of A Green Bull Moose.

When Garry is not spoofing commercials, once in a while he actually delivers one. The phrase "once in a while" can be applied to CHWO's overall policy on commercials. Naturally they would like more, but Caine points out that next to comments from listeners on the station's high-calibre music, they receive most comments about the restraint and infrequency of commercials. "We're still new," Howard mused whimsically. "and the restraint may let up a bit - I hope - but Oakville people simply wouldn't tolerate being persecuted by radio commercials.

"Advertising has to be as brief and unobtrusive as possible," he said, "but that doesn't mean that we don't believe in giving our sponsor a fair shake. What happens is that many of our local sponsors have the same restraint and discriminating good taste that characterizes the whole community. This means they're often quite content with a brief public-service type announcement."

Of course some CHWO sponsors insist on a full-length commercial, but even these are chaste and free of bombast as possible. Sponsors are beginning to go along with the station's advertising policy. Even the Shell Oil Company, which recently blasted on his editorial on zone regulations, just last month bought a healthy chunk of CHWO air time.

CKWS MAKES SCOUTING DOCUMENTARY

WHEN THE Scouts of the Kingston, Ont., district held a two day camp to celebrate "Baden Powell Year", the fiftieth anniversary of the Boy Scout movement, a mobile unit from CKWS, Kingston, went right along with the boys to record an on-the-spot show.

A total of 150 Scouts from the Kingston Boy Scout Association took to the woods of Grenville Park in the outskirts of the city at the beginning of May, to put into practice the lessons and skills learned during the winter months.

Announcers Floyd Patterson and Bryan Olney, with operator Ken Peebles, took the CKWS mobile unit right along to be on hand for the event. Some three hours of material was gathered and edited to an hour long documentary called Scouterama '57. It consisted of tape recorded interviews, actuality material and descriptive narratives. Highlights of this program included the impressive opening ceremonies which attracted wide interest in the Kingston area, and a visit to the opening night campfire which was attended by some 400 visitors. On Sunday morning a scout's own church service was held in the open air, and more visitors arrived to watch the routine of camp life and the special projects.

At the request of the Eastern Ontario Commissioner of Scouting, a specially prepared recording of Scouterama '57 was presented to the Kingston Association.

CBC WINS PLAUDITS FOR ELECTION COVERAGE

LISTENERS and viewers from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver Island, found added excitement in election day this year, thanks to the two five-hour "spectaculars" CBC radio and TV devoted to covering the event.

Election results moment - by moment sped from The Canadian Press and British United Press wires. On TV, continuous use was made of visual gimmicks like maps, charts and film inserts. Viewers were even able to watch the IBM "Thinking Machine" compute results for Norman DePoe to proclaim gloat-

TRENDS WERE PREDICTED on the IBM Computing Machine from progressive returns by ex-newsman Norman DePoe of the CBC, who was brought into the TV act at regular intervals from the IBM plant in Suburban Toronto.

About two hundred CBC news staffers and outside commentators had a share in The Night. Charles Lynch of the CBC and Blair Fraser of Maclean's Magazine carried the ball with their comments and flashbacks as it was thrown to them by Bruce Marshall.

On radio, CBC's James M. Minifie, Hamish McGeachy of The Financial Post and Paul Fox of the University of Toronto were hard at it interpreting the trends.

CBC International radio beamed the news to such points as Britain, Australia, New Zealand, the West Indies, South America, Europe and Canada's own North West Territories.

In radio, CBC's coverage was made available to all 164 English-language as well as to all 20 French-language stations in Canada. All connected TV stations were offered the CBC service as well. Among the independent radio and TV stations which contributed to the broadcasts were CKCK-TV, Regina, from where PC Leader John Diefenbaker was seen and heard by both TV and radio networks and CFGP, Grande Prairie where Sacred Leader Solon Low spoke for both radio and television.

In addition, various stations came in on a regional basis.

SUSPENSE WAS KILLING More than 800 telephone calls poured into the CBC information Bureau in Toronto alone from listeners and viewers, many of whom claimed that the suspense was killing them. One listener reported that he was perspiring so heavily that he had to take a 2 a.m. bath.

At CBC Central in Toronto, radio anchor man Lamont Tilden held fort for seven hours straight, tying in additional results as well as local reckonings. At 2 a.m. with only two or three of the 293 seats uncertain, he called it a day, saying everyone was exhausted.

SHOW HARNESSES MISCHIEVOUS KIDS

In Kingston, Ont., teenagers who want to get into radio are given a chance by CKLC in cooperation with the local YMCA. This youth assistance program came about when they had a teenage problem and turned to the YMCA for help.

What started out as a radio programming problem has been turned into a successful public service venture.

When it first went on the air in 1953, the station introduced to the city an audience participation program for teenagers called High Time. For three years the program drew 40 to 50 youngsters into its studios every weekday afternoon to listen to records, win prizes, and give dedications.

In the fall of 1956, CKLC program director John Berlingham and assistant program director Ken Phillips got together and decided it was time for a change. Teen-agers were still coming to the studio for the program, but they were beginning to lose interest in just listening to records. They started gathering in small groups in the studio and talking while the show was on the air, and once in a while some had to be put out of the station for misbehavior.

Al Tyler, director of Kingston's YMCA was consulted, and the result was an entirely new daily program called The CKLC-YMCA Teen Announcers' Program.

The program is still originated live each day but now it is done direct from the YMCA. Any boy or girl who wants to participate in the show has to register as a "teen announcer" at the YMCA. They are then assigned to do a special feature for the show, such as making a class survey for the record of the week, or deliver a report on teen-age fashions. The show has been running this way ever since and has been flooded with applications.

WINGHAM TV AND RADIO FOCUS ON FARMERS

FARM VIEWERS in and around Wingham, Ontario, get a barnful of programs over CKNX Radio and TV designed to educate, instruct and inform the farmer; to tell city and town viewers what the farmer does; to sell the farmer the sponsors' products. These programs cover such topics as, up-to-the-minute market information, latest farming methods, editorial comment and opinions on current topics, and farm news and events.

The "farmers" at CKNX are Bob Carbert, farm director, and Rodger Schwass, his assistant. These two produce a nightly 10 minute show called Focus on the Farm sponsored by the United Co-operatives of Ontario and the Federation of Agriculture. This program caused some comment at the last TV Sales Seminar, (CB&T Feb. 7).

On Friday nights, from 9 to 9:30 the farm department produces a half-hour show called Almanac which normally deals with controversial subjects such as the future of the rural fall fair, fire prevention on the farm; and curtailment of service by the railroads and its effect on the area. Many of these shows take the form of a round table discussion conducted by Bob Carbert, while others are in the form of interview shows.

Every fourth week, the show is directed to Junior Farmer organizations and 4-H clubs which make it a regular part of their educational programs to watch the show and discuss it.

On these shows Rodger Schwass presents subjects of particular interest to the young farmer. It may be a live demonstration of beef cattle judging; a demonstration of sheep shearing techniques; a musical program by the Perth County and Huron County junior farmer choirs, a film on bee keeping and many other topics.

FARM EDITOR BOB CARBERT on the set of "Focus on the Farm." This 10 minute program which is on TV five nights a week, has been sponsored for 15 months, and renewed, by a joint co-operative enterprise, with the local Co-ops, Federations of Agriculture, Hog Producers Association, and Co-operative Insurance. Below: Bob Carbert and his assistant Rodger Schwass interview farmer Bill Cruickshank, after a fire destroyed his modern dairy barn.

Long Play Recordings

Canada Will Hear Newfoundland Folk Music

Here is the men's choir in costume rehearsing for the Newfoundland folk song "Lykey's Boat", which is included in the first LP record shortly to be released by RCA.

The CJON Glee Club, under the direction of Ignatius Rumboldt, CJON's musical director, has just finished making the master cut for a recording of Newfoundland folk music for RCA who are pressing the first in a series of long-play records featuring the Glee Club. They will be issued under their own label.

These records will be distributed all over Canada. On the jackets will be a picture of a typical Newfoundland scene with the story of the Glee Club on the back.

Started as a radio venture, the Glee Club now presents twelve concerts each year over CJON-Radio and CJON-TV. These are un-sponsored and last for an hour and a half. They feature local talent and talent from regional U.S. bases when available.

The concerts are each dedicated to a public service. The first one in the fall will be devoted to the Retarded Children's Campaign. During the program the campaign manager will be interviewed, and films of some of the children and their progress under the plan will be shown. The program, appealing to viewers to contribute to the fund, will be used as kick-off for the whole campaign.

The following concert, the next month, will be dedicated to the Cancer Campaign, the next one to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, and so on.

Because Newfoundland is now taking on more and more of the characteristics of a Canadian province, much of the old folk music is being lost. To prevent this, CJON this year sent out a recording crew to all the outlying areas to record the folk music of the island province.

All profits from the sale of the records will be donated to charity.

CKRC's "WEEKEND" IS HOLIDAY GUIDE

For the weekend ending Winnipeg, at the beaches, driving a car or staying put comfortably at home, radio station CKRC has built its entire schedule around a single, weekend-long format called Radio Weekend.

Beginning Friday at sign-on time, Radio Weekend opens with special promotion announcements incorporating gags, transcribed flashes, gimmicks and the Red River Valley theme. Friday noon's weather forecasts include reports of conditions at local beaches and resorts, phoned in from the various holiday spots. These reports feature not only information about accommodation, but on-the-spot tips about weather as well as road and traffic conditions. Then, on Friday night, in-town listeners are briefed on special events taking place at home.

On Saturday, the morning weather reports are directed especially towards drivers starting out on the highways. They include further on-the-spot reports about resort conditions. Saturday night music is selected for people entertaining at home or at the beach.

Sunday mornings feature reports from fire rangers as to fire hazards in the woods and finally on Sunday nights, special CKRC mobile units, on the highways and in the air, report traffic conditions for home-bound drivers.

In addition to reporting traffic conditions on the weekend, CKRC devotes the weekday hour from 8 to 6 p.m., when city traffic is heaviest, to the Traffic Show sponsored by participating BA Oil dealers in Winnipeg. Bill Guest reports from the mobile unit on traffic in various sections of the city, warning motorists of tie-ups, weather and road conditions.

During the Traffic Show, Guest chats back and forth with George Knight in the studio, awards prizes for lucky house numbers chosen and waves to passing motorists who have picked up the habit of honking a greeting to him as they pass the now familiar CKRC mobile unit on the road.

SAFETY KEYNOTES KID'S SHOWS

POLICE CHIEF ED TSHIRHART looks on with approval as Jack Ruttle, CKBB's program director, awards the station's trophy to the winner of Barrie's Safe-Riding Roadeo, 12 year old Gary Banting.

WHEN THE KIDS return to school each fall, the program schedule of CKBB, Barrie, along with those of most other stations, makes room for programs directed at district youth.

Starting one week before school starts, CKBB presents constable Roy Laney of the Barrie Police with Tips for Tots and Teens on the topic of safety to and from school.

This program goes on the air at 8:25 in the morning as a last minute reminder before the kids leave for school, and runs on school days throughout the year.

Each year CKBB promotes Barrie's Safe Riding Roadeo Sponsored jointly with the Barrie Police Depart- ment, the roadeo tests bicyclists' and even tricyclists' ability to handle their vehicles under typical road conditions. In order to compete the youngsters must have mechanically sound bicycles, a safe riding record and a thorough knowledge of road rules. The winner receives the CKBB safety trophy.

Just For You Young Folks is a mid-morning program, heard every Saturday. To help provide material for the show CKBB visits local parks taping interviews with park supervisors and the kids who use them.

PARENTS SIT IN ON STUDENT BROADCASTS

Three times a week over CFJR, Brockville parents of students attending Brockville Collegiate can sit in with their kids and hear about their various school activities in sports, drama, glee club work, orchestral presentations and the big annual variety show.

CFJR carries these programs throughout the school year, direct from the school auditorium, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 to 9:15. They have a four mike setup at the school and one of the students does the operating under supervision of the station.

This series has been aired over CFJR for the last ten years. It consists of regular presentations by the Collegiate Glee Clubs, Cadet band and orchestra. Each morning one of the pupils handles the scripture reading which is followed by the entire student group singing the Lord's Prayer.

Individual efforts include reports on sports activities by the students, instrumental and vocal offerings, elocution and often humorous readings based on some of the school happenings.

The annual dramatic presentations and school concerts also form a part of these broadcasts and the programs themselves provide a means of conveying items of interest to parents and the general public, forming a close liaison between the home and the school.

Project With A Purpose

AA PROGRAMS ARE HUMAN AND HELPFUL

NOW I KNOW what it is like to wake up in a jail, flop house or mercy mission not knowing how I got there. The speaker was an ex-alcoholic appearing on CFPL-TV London's newest public-service show Twelve Steps, produced in co-operation with Alcoholics Anonymous each Sunday evening at 7:30 pm.

The half-hour is conducted as a regular AA meeting. Making up the studio audience are those who seek help for themselves or for others. Each evening someone tells of his own experience in overcoming alcoholism and then answers questions from the audience as to how to overcome their problems.

Emcee of Twelve Steps is Rev. Don Joyce, who has done a great deal of work with alcoholics and who conceived the idea for the TV show. He introduces the show with a brief interpretation of AA, and then, at the end, discusses the causes of alcoholism, inviting those who need help to write in and ask for AA assistance.

The identity of those taking part is concealed by masks. Lighting is set up behind both audience and platform speakers so as to obscure faces. The program's title is based on the twelve steps forming the content of the AA creed, each of which deals with a different aspect of overcoming alcoholism. Each program in the series deals with one of these twelve steps.

MOST REWARDING PROGRAM

After the first program the AA's got fifteen letters from wives and husbands requesting help and a steady stream has been pouring in since. Here is a typical letter:

"Dear Sirs,

Last evening while waiting for the Sunday night movie, your program The Twelve Steps came on. At first we were disappointed but now I can tell you we're glad.

My husband has always been a good man but in the last year or so he has started to drink heavily. He doesn't go on for days like some of those men on the program but every night now, he comes home and just sits and drinks until nothing pleases him and he argues with everybody.

He has started to hide the bottles because he is ashamed and people have stopped coming to see us or inviting us over, because they know he will get drunk and loud.

After your program last night we had a good talk and he has agreed to try AA. Can you tell us how we can join?"

CFPL feels that Twelve Steps is one of the most rewarding programs we have ever carried. Simple, yet packed with human drama, it is a natural for late-evening viewing - a time when alcoholics need help most. Therefore, every program ends with the famous AA prayer: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can and the wisdom to know the difference".

DISPELLING DREAD IS THE FIRST STEP TO HEALING

By BART GARDNER
CB Staff Writer

The majority of cancer cases can be cured, particularly if detected early.

This was the aim behind a TV program, "Cancer - Killer No. 2," which was one of a series called Medical Library, broadcast Tuesday evenings through the summer over CKCO-TV Kitchener.

The series of ten live programs dealt with the grim realism of diseases from rickets to cancer, but in simple layman's terms calculated primarily to dispel fear.

Produced by the Wellington County Board of Health, the Library was written, arranged and emceed by the county health unit's health educator, Doug Geekie. The health board sent Geekie to New York for training in TV techniques specifically to help him prepare for writing the series.

The Library's first installment on July 9 was a general introduction to preventive medicine in which Geekie and local MD Dr. B. T. Dale, medical officer for the county health unit, explained to viewers how the various parts of the body function. This they illustrated with a plaster torso model named "Oscar," whose removable parts could be detached and held aloft for the viewer to see. Additional illustration was provided by means of charts, films and slides and by pathological and bacteriological specimens.

CANCER CAN BE CURED

Following the introductory program a week later was the second segment of the series, titled "Cancer-Killer No. 2." Says Geekie, "One of the main aims of this program was to get ordinary people to talk or even think about cancer, since for many people this disease still has a stigma attached to it, a sense of shame combined with a panic, fantastic fear. In the program we stressed the fact that the majority of cancer cases can be cured, particularly if detected early.

Guests on this program were familiar Fergus MD Norman Craig and Dr. Ivan Smith, who is recognized as being one of the top cancer specialists in Canada and the first in this country to use cobalt bomb radiation to treat cancer. In the course of discussing their subject they asked questions like: What is cancer? What causes it? Who gets it? How can it be prevented?

The two doctors showed films, taken in actual treatment centres, of cancer treatment by surgery and cobalt radiation.

Following "Cancer-Killer No. 2" was the third program in the series, "Cancer - Facts and Fallacies," Dr. Smith, again feature guest, was accompanied on the program by Mrs. H. Krug, president of the County Cancer Society and William Walker, warden of Wellington County. Under Geekie's chairmanship, guests Krug and Walker posed as the average man and woman and asked the most common questions submitted, via note, by the viewing audience.

FIVE TO TEN TONS OF BLOOD

Guest on the Library's fourth program, which dealt with the methods they might have imagined. A sample of the script for this particular program, will serve to illustrate how dramatically the material was presented. Opening the program was an eerie film sequence showing an organ of the body pulsating violently, followed by a close-up of Geekie saying:

"Good evening and welcome to the Library. This program will deal with the subject of heart disease. The heart is one of the body's most important and efficient organs. Its function is to pump blood to all parts of the body. If the heart muscles are weakened, its effectiveness is impaired, and the patient suffers. One of the most common causes of heart disease is atherosclerosis.

"Atherosclerosis is a condition in which the walls of the blood vessels become thickened and hardened, and the blood flow is restricted. This condition may affect any part of the body, but it is particularly dangerous to the heart. The heart receives the blood which is pumped by the lungs. If the blood supply to the heart is interrupted, the heart muscle itself may be damaged, leading to heart failure. This condition is called coronary artery disease."

DISPELLING DREAD IS THE FIRST STEP TO HEALING

The Library will continue its series with programs dealing with other aspects of cancer and other diseases, aiming to educate the public about the prevention and treatment of these conditions. The program will continue to highlight the importance of early detection and the role of preventive medicine in the fight against cancer and other diseases.
Films of actual water and sewage works were shown illustrating how each can be treated to prevent transmission of disease. Pasteurization of milk was also explained with application to the local scene so that the work of area dairy and farm inspectors would be understood.

HARDLY HURT AT ALL

Last and tenth program of the series was titled "The Wonder Needle", and was actually a follow-up to the preceding program in that it dealt with communicable disease control by means of immunization. Describing the program Geekie says, "Because so many people are still petrified by needles, we thought this would be an excellent opportunity to eliminate public fear." As a result, Susan, Geekie's five-year-old daughter received a PDT needle right before the viewers' eyes. After Susan had explained that it had hurt hardly at all, Geekie told viewers that this was because she was relaxed which meant that her muscle tissues didn't tighten from fear and present a skin surface difficult for the needle to penetrate.

More Walt Disney films were shown to illustrate how vaccines behave once they enter the body, producing immunity.

BEYOND EVALUATION

The Wellington County Health Unit itself received an average of 35 letters a week commending the program and asking for more information while CKCO was literally snow-stormed with mail. Doctors in the area reported a steady stream of patients coming into their offices as a direct result of the series - and, in nearby Fergus, this included one woman with skin and another with breast cancer, who had, so far, not disclosed their condition to anyone.

Medical reaction further afield was even more emphatic. Said Dr. Ivan Smith, director of Ontario Cancer Research Foundation, London Clinic: "The value of such a series of broadcasts is beyond evaluation. However I am absolutely convinced of the fact that through such a program, one can reach more people, more effectively in one half hour than you would in a whole year's distribution of publications."

Dr. S. J. Hawkins, medical superintendent, Freeport Sanitorium, Kitchener states: "This series of television broadcasts has been one of the finest public health projects I have ever witnessed."

Geekie describes the philosophy behind his library series as "An attempt to familiarize the local layman with those aspects of preventive medicine which had hitherto seemed strange and frightening to him. We tried to remove the terminological fog from around preventive medicine in general, by phrasing our programs in down-to-earth but not descending language. Furthermore our aim to make the unfamiliar, familiar we asked as many local, well-known general practitioners as possible to appear on the program, so that our message would spark utmost confidence in the viewer's mind."

FIRST OF ITS KIND

None of the people involved in bringing the Medical Library series into being have underestimated its possible repercussions, nor under-valued its importance. Promoted by CKCO itself as "the first time any TV station in Canada has done a medical series", the Library is described by Geekie as "the first attempt by any board of health in Canada - local, provincial or federal - to present a series of this kind."

And there is every evidence that the Library will inspire the production of many similar series on preventive medicine by other TV stations across Canada. After watching Geekie's series, deputy director Ted Watts of National Information Services, Department of Health and Welfare, Ottawa was moved to say: "There is no doubt that Wellington County's Health Unit is acknowledged to be the leader in public health education in Ontario, if not in Canada." Judging from reactions such as these, there are very good reasons why Geekie himself should say that he has "high hopes that Medical Library will influence other boards of health across Canada - and not merely local boards either - into launching similar TV projects."

POWER BOOST EXPANDS FARM SERVICE

CJGX, YORKTON, Saskatchewan, has just finished its “4-H Calf Contest”, for which tickets were sold at 25 cents each and the money raised — $1,300 — was presented to 4-H Councils in the CJGX area. The winner a 9-year-old farm boy drove home a purebred Hereford heifer as prize.

This was part of what CJGX calls its “realistic farm radio service”. This service which has covered 30 years of broadcasting to Saskatchewan and Manitoba farmers was given great new scope this summer due to the station’s recent power boost.

Serving an area which it claims “consistently earns the highest farm cash income on the Prairie Provinces”, CJGX aims its entire program schedule at the farm family. Though it boasts that it is able to do so “realistically” by never forgetting “that the farmer wants facts”, the station also programs on the theory that farm families “also want entertainment and imaginative reporting of events and trends as they affect them”, because “farmers are the same as most people in most ways.”

In addition to providing 22 newscasts and four weather roundups daily (covering the complete prairie picture), from its remote studios in Winnipeg, CJGX also airs, Monday through Friday, a market quotation service, a livestock report, a produce market report and a market quotation service, thus providing listeners with direct contact with the Manitoba capital’s basic grain, live stock and produce markets.

During the week, the station broadcasts Farm Bulletin Board; Saskatchewan Farm Reporter; and Saskatchewan and Manitoba Road Report. Lunchtime every day features Farm and Home Hour with news, sports, weather, and seasonal farm topics. Dinnertime brings the 4-H Club Reporter.

ROVING REPORTER

Farm Director, Doug Sherwin travels throughout Manitoba and Saskatchewan, visiting farm groups and reporting on their activities, usually with tape-recorded interviews. Doug himself is a young, practical farmer, aware of farm problems and what radio can do to help.

Special events, such as the Yorkton Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition, call for additional CJGX coverage — five or ten minute reports every hour on the half hour in the case of the Yorkton Exhibition. “The hallmark of approval for such reports”, they point out, “is that they are invariably sponsored.” Local acceptance is also illustrated by the habit of fair executives of considering it essential that CJGX’s farm director attend and report.

The 1300 4-H Clubs throughout Manitoba and Saskatchewan (with their 21,000 members) have come to be a frequent theme in the station’s overall program policy.

Every Sunday evening the 4-Club Reporter airs reports and ideas from clubs throughout the two provinces. Groups of boys and girls from the clubs often appear on the program, telling the story of their groups’ activities. The station itself calls this 4-H service “one of our most important” and thinks of these youngsters as “the farmers of tomorrow.”

MOBILE LEADS SEARCH FOR LOST BOY

SAILORS FROM HMCS NADEN take a breather by the CKDA mobile unit during a search for a missing boy in which Radio Victoria played an important public service role.

AFTER POLICE had failed to find a missing 7-year-old boy in the thickly-wooded area around Saanich, BC, a mobile unit belonging to CKDA, Victoria, was called in to assist searchers.

The boy, Miles Hoffer of Saanich, disappeared one morning last month and an eight-hour routine police search failed to bring him home.

The CKDA mobile unit, with news director Andy Stephen and production manager T. J. Tippin O'Neill, in answer to the call for their aid, began broadcasting progress reports on the search and descriptions of the missing boy shortly after 3 pm. The truck's powerful public address system was used by officials to co-ordinate the activities of the searchers who included members of South Vancouver Island Rangers, Saanich police, RCMP and forty sailors from HMCS Naden.

The truck moved from location to location in the thickly-wooded area, tracking down clues which came in from CKDA listeners tuned in to the emergency broadcast. At 6 pm, in response to radio appeals, five hundred voluntary searchers assembled for a concentrated sweep through the dark woods.

Shortly afterwards, Hoffer was found wandering by a CKDA listener who recognized the lad from broadcast descriptions.

CKDA news room also participated last month in the search for a 3-year-old girl's parents. The news room received a phone call from a beauty parlor in the James Bay area of Victoria that the little girl had lost her mother. An appeal was broadcast for the parents of the child and within minutes, the Victoria police department phoned CKDA's news room to say that she had been re-claimed.

Youngsters Themselves Make Teen Shows Click

THE MOST IMPORTANT part of a teenage show, as CHNS-Radio, Halifax, sees it, is its usefulness. Whether this is achieved by entertainment or education, it is almost entirely the result of the interests and talents put into the program by the youngsters themselves.

All through the school year, CHNS carries fourteen shows in which the boys and girls participate. One of these, IQ Tournament, has been broadcast since 1945.

In this quiz-type program, teenagers from twenty-nine schools in the Halifax area match their brains in a fast-paced contest of questions and answers. The competition is organized as a play-off; two teams meeting on each program and each broadcasting, incidentally, from a separate studio.

Each team alternately takes its turn at answering four sets of questions designed to test teenage knowledge on subjects ranging from current events to literature and mathematics. A keen spirit of rivalry has developed among the schools and it is a high honor for a teenager to be chosen to represent his or her school. Interest in the program is evidenced by the capacity studio audiences.

Program sponsor is a leading Halifax milk producer, Farmers’ Inc., who uses the show for his advertising message.

YOUNG WILFRED HATCHER, ONE OF THE CANDIDATES for this year’s scholarship on the CHNS, Halifax, program “Your Children Sing”, talks to emcee Clive Schaefer. Two such entrants are heard each week. Members of clubs and community organizations (right), making up the specially invited studio audience, listen to another round of “IQ Challenge”, a novel panel quiz program. Emcee is John Funston.

YOUR CHILDREN SING
At the conclusion of the competition a banquet is held when the IQ Tournament Trophy is awarded to the victorious team. An award is also made to the teenager who has scored the highest number of individual marks during the Tournament.

IQ Challenge is a half-hour quiz show which grew out of IQ Tournament. Sponsored by L. E. Shaw & Co. Ltd., a large brick manufacturing company, it provides an opportunity for the top-scorer of the week on Tournament to match his wits with adult panel members who were themselves on the teenage program ten years previously.

Your Children Sing is another example of a CHNS program that features live participation by teenagers. Now in its eleventh consecutive year, Your Children Sing is a weekly half-hour sponsored by the Nova Scotia Light and Power Company.

On the program, teenagers gain valuable experience in singing before a live studio audience and are acceptable. Tap dancing, singing, reciting and the playing of any musical instruments, all have their turn.

The program is sponsored by W. H. Schwartz & Sons Ltd., a local coffee and spice manufacturer, and is one more example of CHNS’s belief that the best way for a teenager to get acquainted with radio broadcasting is to participate in a live studio show.

KITCHENER

Call Jos. A. Hardy in Toronto or Montreal, Weed Television Corp. in the United States; or John N. Hunt and Associates in Vancouver.
WHEN DEALING with public service programs CJOR, Vancouver has adopted the policy that if program material is not first rate then the offer of free air time will be withdrawn. Without this condition CJOR feels that giving air time is the same as throwing it away.

When air time was given free to public service groups, CJOR felt that these groups were treating it in an "easy come, easy go" manner. Meanwhile labor organizations and other groups who bought air time at card rates used every minute of that time efficiently.

It was this fact which prompted CJOR to revise its attitude to public service broadcasts.

CJOR realized that these groups lacked people who possessed ideas on how to make use of broadcast time made available to them. They felt the answer was to furnish the assistance of the station's production staff. In this way, groups would be encouraged to use new techniques and angles to stimulate their thinking, generate pride in their own radio showcase and increase listener appeal.

LACKED APPEAL

A case in point was the local Council of Women's program. Several years ago this group, representing one hundred local organizations, was given air time within the framework of a commentator's program. During the course of the program the Council broadcast news of teas, social gatherings and resolutions before the government or city for the betterment of the community. They broadcast this news with exactitude but it had no form and lacked listener appeal.

Preparation of the program was taken over from the Council's production staff. The scope of the group's activities and interests was reviewed and it was found that the organization was actively interested in everything from child-birth to atomic energy.

It was decided that the best format would be the interview style with the CJOR man, a seasoned interviewer, in the chair. This would serve to relieve the monotony of a one-voice presentation. The program was given, in addition, its own fifteen-minute segment once a week.

Interviewees were selected and suggested by the Council's radio convenor. Some of them were sent back to the Council because they had not prepared themselves for the broadcast and had nothing interesting to say. This policy was tough but paid dividends and the program has now become an adult education feature on CJOR's schedule.

Today the Council under its radio and TV convenor frequently supplies its own interviewer and topics covered have included "The Peaceful use of Atomic Energy", and "Better Housing Development in our City."

While in the case of this Women's Council it was discovered to be a good policy to make public service broadcasts stand on their own, CJOR has found that in other cases the reverse is true.

PERSONALITY BROADCASTERS

For example, one program of club notes and activities of local organizations that attracted little listenerhip had been delivered in a ten or fifteen minute segment. It was broken up and the various announcements were distributed to some of CJOR's strong personality broadcasters to use scattered throughout the framework of their own programs.

Under this system the same number of announcements were given without detracting from the appeal of the personality programs on which they were carried.

When the UBC radio society asked for a five-minute daily broadcast of campus and alumni news, the station asked for and was given a feature program making full use of the tape recording and other facilities of the Radio Society.

CJOR told the society "you are students of broadcasting and we must ask you to exercise your knowledge and faculties to the best advantage in this time period." Since then CJOR has offered the society a complete Saturday afternoon program as they wish. A UBC research team is now planning the broadcast without direction from CJOR.

On another occasion the Vancouver Art Gallery requested time for broadcasting to publicize their place in the community.

Here again the program was integrated with an established program, this time with in the framework of a semi-classical music show, House of Music. Every week the Art Gallery supplies a speaker who talks in a free and easy, almost ad lib fashion on events and exhibits at the gallery.

Through these broadcasts, Vancouverites are discovering that the Art Gallery is not just a home full of dull paintings surrounded by dull people, but rather a place in which to enjoy themselves with its programs of dancing, music appreciation groups, home planning and decorating.
