The Royal Journey

The title of the world-wide Christmas broadcast this year is also the subject that is uppermost in the minds of all members of the Royal Family, and of all loyal citizens of the Commonwealth, as they prepare to celebrate Christmas. The following article was cabled from Sydney, Australia, on December 1 by the director of the program, a veteran BBC producer who has been in charge of this annual radio feature since its inauguration.

By LAURENCE GILLIAM

This year the BBC's Christmas Day program comes of age, and its 21st birthday will be spent in the Antipodes. As the Queen will send the Christmas Day message to the Commonwealth from New Zealand, the world-wide exchange of greetings which precedes the Queen's speech will be centred on Australia. This new orientation of a traditional London broadcast brings many exciting consequences in its train.

Technically, this year's program presents problems of rare complexity, and the radio communications experts of Australia, the United Kingdom and New Zealand have pooled resources to do all that is humanly possible to make this intricate world-wide hook-up smooth and efficient. Some idea of the technical problems behind the broadcast can be gathered from the arrangements that have been made to ensure that the Queen's broadcast from Auckland, New Zealand, will be heard clearly throughout the world.

The Royal message will travel first by land-line from Government House in Auckland to Wellington. Wellington will send it on by five different routes: by radio-telephone to Sydney; by radio-telephone to London; by broadcast transmitters to Sydney and to London; by Royal New Zealand Navy transmitters directly to the Admiralty in London; and across the Pacific to San Francisco, then to New York and London.

Sydney in its turn will send the message on by radio-telephone to London, by Radio Australia's broadcast transmitter direct to London, and also by way of Ceylon and by way of Singapore. These radio paths, across the poles, across the oceans and continents are the communications veins of the Commonwealth body.

If this year's Christmas broadcast is successful, first thanks and first praise go to the hundreds of radio men who will spend Christmas Day and many days before at lonely transmitters and relay stations—the New Zealanders at Himitungi and Wayourou, Wellington and Auckland; the Australians at Melbourne, Sydney and Perth; and those on duty at Singapore and Colombo, Montreal and London, and at intermediate points throughout the world, on the production as well as on the technical side.

This year's program will be a team job. Alan Burgess and I have flown to Sydney to work with the Australian Broadcasting Commission feature team of Neil Hutchison, Mungo McCullum and John Thompson. Charles Ladbrook and Bill Perry of the BBC will be working with Australian technicians on the production.

The narrator this year will be the well-known Australian broadcaster and war historian Chester Wilmot, and the music, too, will have an Australian flavour, for it will be written by the Australian composer John Antill and played by the Sydney Symphony Orchestra.

The new, exciting fact about this year's Christmas broadcast is that it will be made for the first time from outside the U.K. The young Queen takes an established tradition and gives it a new summer dress. We shall begin and end our circle of family greetings in the Antipodes. The first people heard will be New Zealanders, Maoris of Rotorua preparing to welcome the Queen with their rousing ceremonial chant, the haka. The last voice, too, will be that of a New Zealander, the Mount Everest conqueror Sir Edmund Hillary, speaking from the home of his sister in Norfolk, 20 miles from the Royal residence at Sandringham, England, sending the Commonwealth's Christmas greeting to the Queen, who will be speaking from his own home town of Auckland.

In the 60 minutes between these two New Zealand greetings, Chester Wilmot will call in some 20 points in the Commonwealth radio chain.

From Australia, there will be two contrasting speakers: Bill Harney, a rugged individualist of a bushman from Darwin, and Syd Loder, a New Australian, formerly of Berlin and one of thousands of Europeans who have found a new and freer home in Australia. Loder will be "Father Christmas" at a Sydney children's party. Australia's greeting to the Queen will be sent by 10-year-old Ian Paterson, a sheep-shearer's son from Mudgee, New South Wales, who has been undergoing speech therapy at the Far West Children's Home in Manly, New South Wales.

Then back to the U.K. for a west-countryman's reminiscence of the Queen's departure a month ago, before the program moves along the westward path of the Queen's journey. The first call will be at Jamaica and then Canada's contribution will be heard. It will open in Quebec, where the Royal Visit of 1951 will be recalled by the Little Singers of the Wooden Cross, a choir of French-Canadian school children who sang for Her Majesty when, as Princess Elizabeth, she began her tour of Canada. From ancient Quebec, the broadcast will swing to a very different scene—the pioneer nickel-mining town of Lynn Lake in northern Manitoba. A Lynn Lake woman will tell how the entire community—people, houses and stores—was transported by caterpillar tractor some 150 miles across the snow.

Next we shall move south to the Pacific islands, to Fiji and Tonga, where Wynford Vaughan Thomas introduces a Christmas message from Queen Salote, that well-loved visitor to the Coronation. Then Chester Wilmot will pass the message on northwards to New Guinea, a battlefield where many brave Australians died in defence of their homeland.

Northwards, then, to Korea where peace breathes again this Christmas Day over a newer battlefield, for messages from the Commonwealth Division and the United Nations relief workers who are helping to rebuild on the ruins of war.

The line runs next across Asia—blazing, crowded, hungry Asia. Here the Christmas message takes on the accents of many races—Chinese from Hong Kong; Dyaks from Borneo; Malay, Chinese and Indians from Singapore; Hindi, Pakistani, Singhaliese. The strange rhythms of eastern music sound from pagoda and temple, mission hut and jungle longhouse. But beneath the rich and strange surface the message is the same—good news of the silent, desperate struggle which the peoples of Asia are fighting for food, health and knowledge; news from India of a strange holy man, Vinobve Bhave, a disciple of Mahatma Ghandi, who is travelling the length and breadth of India persuading rich and poor alike to give land to the landless; news from Ceylon through the voices of young girls, pupils of an agricultural college at Kundasale, where the young women of Ceylon are being trained to take their part with the men in the battle for food production; news from Pakistan of vast new plans for more food.

We move south across the Indian Ocean to Cocos Island, a new junction in the Indian Ocean for the airways linking New Zealand and Australia with South Africa and Singapore. An Australian airman speaks for the lonely community on this coral airstrip. Then westward to the island of Mauritius, where we are greeted by the voices of children singing a French carol in the island patois, and by an ex-sergeant of the Pioneer Corps who fought in the Western Desert.

The chain of greetings swings south to Capetown, to the top of Table

QUEEN SALOTE of Tonga, photographed at the microphone in London, England, last June. She will send greetings on behalf of the people of her island in the world-wide Commonwealth broadcast on Christmas Morning. Queen Salote captured the hearts of the English people at the Coronation when she braved the drenching rain in her open carriage, during the return procession from Westminster Abbey.

ALAN MILLS. On his program today Alan Mills will include the unusual English game song, There Was a Pig; and a rarely-heard Spanish game song called, Fum-Fum-Fum; also the traditional English carol, King Herod and the Cock; and the 12th century English stable carol, The Friendly Beasts. From Montreal.

W-12:00 noon K-11:00 a.m. X-11:00 a.m.

JUST MARY. This week's story tells of a certain Miss Merry Berry, who kept a toy shop. A woman came in with a length of grey velvet, and asked if Miss Merry Berry would make her an elephant in time for Christmas. When it was all completed except for the ears, she left the elephant and the two small ears on the counter and went out for dinner. A mouse came along and chewed the ears up for his nest. Then the toys came to life and told the mouse how sad Miss Merry Berry would be when she found out, for she had no more velvet for new ears. But the mouse was very clever and, with the aid of the moon, put matters right in a most unusual way. From Toronto.

W-12:15 p.m. K-11:15 a.m. X-11:15 a.m.

WAY OF THE SPIRIT. The Christmas story of the birth of Christ will be told in a play in two episodes by Clare Slater. The first, to be heard today, is called the Incarnation and deals with the trip to Bethlehem, the finding of lodging in the manger, the visitation of the Angels, and ends with the visit of the Shepherds. The second part, on December 27, is called the Manifestation and begins with the journey of the Kings to Bethlehem. There is an interesting encounter between the Kings and the Shepherds which serves to point out the play's theme that Jesus is the promised One for all men, for all nations, and for all time. The plays have been described as "delicate and beautifully written." These are the first radio plays by Clare Slater who has written plays in England for the religious drama foundation. From Montreal.

CUCKOO CLOCK HOUSE. The mummies' play to be heard on the program today will be a faithful copy of the Christmas mummies' plays which have been presented in England for hundreds of years. Babs Brown, who writes the scripts, says the word mummer means mask or disguise. The people who disguised themselves were farmers, cobblers and stonemasons—not actors but ordinary people who got together at Christmas time to put on a play. A highlight of the program will be the singing of the first Canadian Christmas song—the Huron Carol, written by Father Jean de Brebeuf for Indian children 300 years ago. From Toronto.

Dom. 3:00 p.m. MST

FIDDLE JOE'S YARNS. It is Sunday, December 20, 1907, in the imaginary village of St. Christophe and almost all the townsfolk are in the church. They have remained in their seats after Vespers to hear the annual Christmas presentation by the St. Christophe Dramatic and Choral Societies of the legend, The Tree of Dreams. The legend concerns a wood-carver who was famous in all the land for his art and his faith in God. Into one of the many dolls he carved at Christmas time as gifts, he breathed the spirit of his faith because it was to represent the Christ Child in the creche at the foot of the altar on the Holy Eve. But on his way to the church through a forest, many obstacles were thrown in his path to confuse him and shake his faith. But neither beast nor man could move him and he arrived at the altar to find that he clutched in his arms a living child, a symbol of the living light within him. Listeners are invited to listen to the re-enacting of St. Christophe's presentation of the legend which also features the choir in some of French Canada's favourite Christmas carols. From Montreal.

Mountain where a commentator describes the Christmas-morning scene and recalls the Queen's visit to South Africa with her father and mother. Now north through Africa to Rhodesia. From Salisbury, John Parry introduces Pat Gleeson, an Australian mine manager at Broken Hill, Northern Rhodesia. Speaking for Nyasaland will be Captain Flint of the Lake Nyasa steamer Ilala; and R.S.M. Elijah of the Rhodesian African Rifles, one of the African soldiers who lined the route of the Queen's Coronation, will send greetings to her in New Zealand in the name of his fellow Rhodesians.

Two more calls remain in Africa. Nigeria speaks for West Africa, and Kenya for East Africa. From Kenya we shall hear from a Kikuyu chief; and then, from the Treetops Hotel in the Aberdare game reserve at Nieri, the romantic bungalow in a tree where the Queen's reign began, comes a description of the forest scene on Christmas morning.

Before calling on Sir Edmund Hillary in Norfolk for the final greeting, we shall link the Australian meteorologists at MacQuarie Island, in the Antarctic, with their fellow scientists of the British North Greenland Expedition.

So the family circle of the Commonwealth is complete, waiting to hear the Queen's message from New Zealand.

VANCOUVER THEATRE. The Travellers by E. G. Perrault is a play for Christmas, set at a train whistle stop in the Canadian Rockies where three mysterious visitors bring home the meaning of Christmas to a lonely couple - the station master and his wife. Perrault, a Vancouver man, has spun a wistful, simple yarn that relies for its impact on the locale, and the experience of two humble people, whose chief excitement for years has been listening to the roar of the expresses as they thunder by on the main line. From Vancouver.

W-11:30 p.m. K-10:30 p.m. X-10:30 p.m.

New Zealand Yule

A New Zealander, David Delany, contributed to London Calling the following note on Christmas in the land where Her Majesty will be spending Christmas Day.

A New Zealand Christmas is full of contradictions. Christmas cards remain, on the whole, stubbornly English in spirit; there are many depressed, snowbound robins on ivy branches; and Christmas dinners remain obstinately faithful to steaming pudding and hot roast turkey, prepared by a perspiring housewife while the thermometer settles itself anywhere between 70 and 80 degrees in the shade.

But this sort of Christmas does not please everyone. A day or two before December 25, thousands bundle holiday gear, a tent, and two or three friends or the family into a car and trundle off to some secluded seaside bay for surf and sunshine salads. Our Christmas flower, the pohutakawa, straggles in scarlet splotches over hills and banks; the countryside is rough and a little burnt, and near the shore, under pine trees, small mushroom colonies of tents and caravans spring up.

Christmas is a season of song. Here MARY GYNN, soprano, and KERR WILSON, baritone, well-known Winnipeg artists, are joining heartily in the chorus, with ERIC WILD conducting. They are heard regularly on Curtain Melodies, from Winnipeg on Fridays and Saturdays. They will be off the air for Christmas week.

I remember several glorious Christmases of this kind on the Canterbury coast. We would have a swim before breakfast, riding the surf on a willow board, and later go for a walk along the coastline. Christmas dinner was out of a hamper and the afternoon was spent fishing and sunbathing.

Christmas, to me, is also strongly associated with the sound of bees and the smell of honey. When I was a boy we often spent the day at my uncle's apiary in Canterbury. Just at that time the new season's honey is coming in, and after having Christmas dinner outdoors under the peach trees we would pay a ritual visit to the extracting house at the other end of the estate, where the air was aromatic with the scent from the new combs and the tanks were full of liquid gold.

I have had many outdoor Christmases in New Zealand - camping, fishing, sunbathing - from the Tarawera hills to Queen Charlotte Sounds, and all of them blissfully far from hot roast turkey and Christmas pudding.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE. Today: What's New in Fashion—Thelma LeCoq; The Metre Reader—Tommy Tweed; Canadian Kitchens—Mrs. J. Humphrey Jones; News Commentary—Constance Garneau; Songs—Joyce Sullivan.

CONCERT HOUR. Program of recordings. From Winnipeg. Today: Dicken's Christmas Carol with Basil Rathbone as Scrooge. The program concludes with familiar carols.

JUBILEE ROAD. Mary Grannan's play-series about the adventures of three children in a small town will show where determination lands them when they set out on a large-scale project. Having learned that they can acquire a pony for Christmas by collecting 600 wrappers from Star Bubble soap, they dream up all sorts of unusual schemes to bring them nearer to their goal. The outcome will be revealed this afternoon. From Toronto.

CHRISTMAS STORIES. Tonight's story The Clown of God, tells how a group of wandering musicians in Normandy made a statue of the Virgin smile with their songs and dances. Maimie Simpson, who tells this Christmas story, is Dean of Women at the University of Alberta.

Thurs. Dec. 24, W-7:15 p.m.

CBC Wednesday Night

CBC SYMPHONY. CBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Geoffrey Waddington. From Toronto.

Pineapple Poll Suite, arranged by Charles Mackenran from Gilbert and Sullivan Suite, John Field.

CHRISTMAS READINGS. Andrew Allan, Budd Knapp and John Drainie will present Christmas readings from contemporary, 19th, 17th and 14th century works. The Canadian works to be read, Allan says, will be more interesting for their historical than for their literary qualities; they date back to the beginnings of our country.

THE JOYOUS MYSTERY. The Joyous Mystery, a nativity opera in three acts with words and music by the Italian Nino Cattozzo. It will be sung in English by the Royal Conservatory Opera Company (in co-operation with the Opera Festival Association). The orchestra will be conducted by Ernesto Barbini. From Toronto.

Soloists: Louise Roy, James Milligan, Trudy Carlyle, Leslie Zubrack, Mary Morrison, Lavone Skaven, Sylvia Grant, Catherine Akos, Nellie Smith and Roma Butler.

THE SPIRIT OF DICKENS. Ronald Hambleton will consider Charles Dickens as "the inventor of Christmas," a reputation he gained through his novel, A Christmas Carol. Dickens wrote four other novels about Christmas which go pretty well unread, although most people are familiar with the title of one—The Cricket on the Hearth. Hambleton has just re-read it, as well as the other four, in an effort to find out why all but A Christmas Carol are virtually forgotten. Among other things, he found what he calls "the ghost of Christmas-that-never-was." From Toronto.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS. A BBC-transcribed Even-song service by the St. Paul's Cathedral Choristers under Dr. John Dykes-Bower.

Western Music.—Western Canada has contributed many programs of light music to CBC networks. Some regular broadcasts are Curtain Melodies, the Bob McMullin program, the Prairie Schooner, Cafe Continental, Here Comes the Band, Here's Juliette, Stu Davis, Sons of the Saddle, and Rhythm Pals.

CBC News Roundup.—CBC News Roundup brings first-hand coverage of international and domestic events to listeners five nights a week.

Sleigh Ride

Wishing will do wonders sometimes, and with the use of a little imagination almost anything is possible—even a sleigh ride in Vancouver. So, on Christmas Day, listeners can tune in on this miracle. Here are some of the participants: Maestro Ricky Hyslop holding the reins; behind him singing stars Betty Phillips, Juliette and Harry Mossfield. And coming up behind the sleigh, Barney Potts. To round out the affair, the Dreamers and the Rhythm Pals will be on hand with their own inimitable arrangements of popular and western tunes appropriate to the season.

CONCERT HOUR. Program of recordings. From Winnipeg. Today: music of George Frederick Handel including selections from The Messiah.
K-3:15 p.m. X-3:15 p.m.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE. Today: What's New at U.N.—Ada Siegel; School for Parents—Your Child Studies the Arts—Dr. S. R. Laycock; Story—Against the Snow, by Robert Blackburn; News Commentary—Constance Garneau; Songs—Joyce Sullivan. Robert Blackburn's short story, Against the Snow, will be a Trans-Canada Matinee feature on Christmas Eve. The scene is a church Christmas concert in a small Canadian community. An unintentional error on Santa's list threatens to leave one child with his faith badly shaken. A surprising amount of suspense is built up before the Christmas spirit dissolves the problem.
W-3:30 p.m. K-2:30 p.m. X-2:30 p.m.

THE SNOWFLAKE CHILDREN. Story written by Bruce Raymond, and based on characters created by the Danish writer, Jens Hanson. From Montreal. Once upon a time, Santa Claus was very sad. He had finished his annual visit to the Christmas trees of the world and as his empty sleigh carried him back to the North Pole, a tear glistened in the corner of his eye. But why was Santa sad? Well, he felt that all year long he slaved at his workbench making toys for little boys and girls and the only time he heard from them or saw them, was at Christmas. He wanted a little boy or girl who would love him summer and winter alike. This was more than his reindeer could stand, especially Comet, the youngest, and right under Santa's very nose, they hatched a plot to give Santa a Christmas Day present of a boy and girl. Alan Mills and Irene Salemka will play and sing the roles of Santa Claus and the Snow Queen respectively, and Roger Newman will be heard as Comet.

W-4:30 p.m. K-4:45 p.m. X-4:45 p.m.

THE CHERRY TREE. Replacing Cross Section on this Christmas Eve is The Cherry Tree, a warm, cheerful BBC program about the "tree" of Christian society. It blends the friendliness and colour of traditional Christmas music with thoughts on the beliefs from which it springs.
Dom. 9:30 p.m. MST

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB. A program of Christmas music directed by Ward McAdam. From Toronto.
W-10:15 p.m. K-11:15 p.m. X-11:15 p.m.

WINNIPEG DRAMA. The Reluctant Martyr, by Isobel McFadden, deals with the story of Shadrak, Meshak and Abednigo—not so much, indeed, with the predicament of these three stalwarts as it is recounted in the Old Testament, but rather with the times, the characters, and the intrigues surrounding their adventure in the fiery furnace. Isobel McFadden has invented and introduced several interesting characters to support and expand the Biblical story. Emrys Jones, producer. From Winnipeg.
W-10:30 p.m. K-10:30 p.m. X-10:30 p.m.

VANCOUVER CONCERT. Two contemporary composers—an American and an Englishman—will be represented on tonight's broadcast by the CBC Vancouver Concert Orchestra under the direction of John Avison.

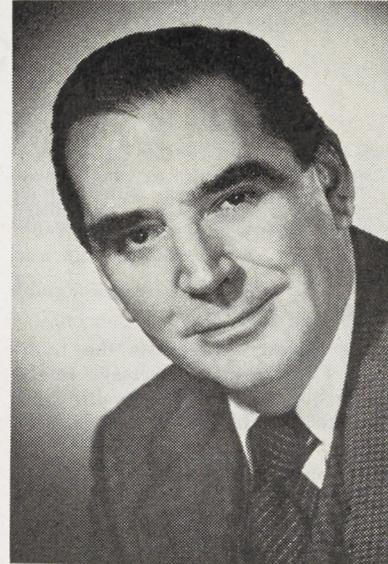

Magnificat (Norman Dello Joio); Overture to the Wasps (Ralph Vaughan Williams).

The Magnificat, written in 1943, won for its composer a Town Hall award. It is based on the original plainsong chant associated with the vesper service. The Vaughan Williams work was incidental music for the play, The Wasps, by Aristophanes, written for a production at Cambridge in 1909.
W-11:00 p.m. K-10:00 p.m. X-10:00 p.m.

III—J. B. McGeachy

WHEN his friends are asked to say, in a word, what constitutes the essential charm and humanity of James Burns McGeachy, well-known CBC radio and television commentator and famous Canadian journalist, an argument usually ensues. One refers to his extraordinary scholarship, his broad knowledge, both of life and literature; another says simply "detachment," his ability to be in, but not of a company or community, and to keep apart somewhere a rich stream of life and thought which goes on unimpaired in spite of external circumstances; a third goes deeper, and says it is something nearly allied to plain courage, the "magnificent nonchalance with which he flings away his small patrimony of life from day to day."

Whatever it may be, J. B. McGeachy, Scottish scholar and jouralist, born in Glasgow in 1899, has become one of the prominent personalities of Canadian radio and television, as he was of British radio in the war days, when he worked on BBC through the worst of the blitz.

Mr. McGeachy came to Canada in 1913, at the age of 14, settling in Saskatoon. He was graduated in arts from the University of Saskatchewan, later took an M.A. at Toronto, and did further post-graduate work at Princeton. Though he won a Rhodes Scholarship, he did not take it up, and Oxford's hallowed halls saw him only as a visitor.

Mr. McGeachy's journalistic career began in Saskatoon, and continued in Winnipeg, in Ottawa, in Washington, and in London, as an editorial writer and political correspondent.

After the outbreak of the second world war, he joined the BBC, and there originated the famous "BBC Newsreel," which brought more cheer to people overseas during the dark days than almost any other influence, with the possible exception of Winston Churchill. As chief commentator for the BBC Overseas Service, he broadcast daily to many parts of the world. In 1941, he visited Canada and the United States as a BBC commentator, covering war effort activities in both countries.

Mr. McGeachy returned to newspaper work in Toronto in 1946, and is now an associate editor on a Toronto daily. For some years he has been a regular contributor to the CBC's Weekend Review and CBC News Roundup programs. He is also the moderator of a quiz program, Now I Ask You, and is very busy on television.

His home is a quiet one, in a Toronto suburb. Music has been a favourite diversion all his life. He is a gifted pianist, and a tireless student of the musical classics.

Church Service

From the Church of St. Stephen, Fort Chambly, Quebec, conducted by the rector, Rev. T. L. F. Beattie. The stone church of St. Stephen (see picture, page 12) has stood near old Fort Chambly, 15 miles southeast of Montreal, for 133 years. It was built for the British garrison at the adjoining fort, and is surrounded by ancient tombstones in a beautifully-kept churchyard. The building is colonial and the box pews are still in use. Hand-hewn timbers can still be seen. Fort Chambly was built with native timber in 1665 by Captain Jacques de Chambly of the Regiment de Carignan, as a stronghold against the Iroquois, and was rebuilt in stone in 1709. New England settlers who survived the massacre of Deerhorn were imprisoned there. Land for a church, parsonage, schoolhouse and churchyard was given by the British government, along with a donation of £200, a considerable sum in those days. The only condition was that the gallery of the church should be reserved for garrison troops.

His settings of the Passion are important and interesting. George Little's Bach Choir is dedicated to the task of presenting music in a style appropriate to the period in which it was written—doing for vocal music what Roland Leduc's Little Symphonies program does for instrumental. It has been heard on the CBC Trans Canada, French, and International Service networks. Its 25 members represent a variety of occupations, from stenographers to office managers. The Prairie Gardener

Summary of Broadcast of December 6, 1953.

Growing House Plants from Seed

1. If you want choice house plants exactly like some you have seen in a florist shop or neighbour's home, you will have to buy them or get cuttings to root. Most house plants don't come true from seed.

2. If you want house plants in quantity and variety there are many easily grown from seed. Examples—coleus, flowering maples, asparagus ferns and geraniums.

3. Sow coleus seed in sandy soil in a warm room. Sow in January for strong spring plants or March for a summer display.

4. Flowering maples are best grown as large pot or tub plants. Pruning to stimulate free branching is desirable as flowers are produced terminally on new growth. Seed sown in January will produce flowering plants by mid-summer.

5. Asparagus "ferns"—both plumosus and sprengeri—are easily grown from seed. Sow seed in January for plants to be used next winter.

6. To build up a collection of geraniums try growing them from seed. Seed sown in February-March will produce flowering plants by mid-summer. Bed the young plants in the garden for summer and select ones to be carried over by means of cuttings.

Outhindemithed!

(The following letter came in response to a broadcast of French composer Edgar Varese's Ionization, scored for 13 percussion players. It was heard in the Thursday-night program Music in Our Time.)

It's a very long time since I felt so happy. Ah, these brave young fellows! Especially when I imagined how mad people like Hindemith must be after listening to Signor Varese's Boiler Factory Symphony. He out-hindemithed Hindemith. You see, I had a thing to settle with Hindy on account of a very dear aunt of mine. She had a ticket for an all-Brahms evening, but by mistake went one day too early and found herself listening to Hindemith's opera Mathis der Maler. I am sorry to say that after a quarter of an hour they had to carry her out and her expensive tortoiseshell lorgnette got broken.—C. S., New Liskeard, Ontario.

Our Gracious Queen

By THOM BENSON

RECENTLY, while I was in Jamaica reporting the visit of Queen Elizabeth to that country, I met an American gentleman who said something which I am sure expressed the feelings of many people who live in countries outside the Commonwealth.

The American had returned late at night from the reception held at the Governor's residence in Kingston. He came into our hotel room where we were editing tape-recordings of the events of the day. He listened for a short while to the commentaries, then said, "You know, I am more and more convinced that this is something that we in the United States need in the worst way."

I asked him what he meant, and he replied, "A government for and by the people is a wonderful thing. It is the only way of life that Americans will ever tolerate; but, you Canadians have something which I think is even better—you have a democratic government, and you have your Queen, too. When your government bogs down or goes off on tangents which are disturbing or incomprehensible to the people, you have something good and clean to cling to—something untouched and untouchable by graft or scandal or selfish motive. I wish we Americans were as fortunate."

I had never thought of the Monarchy in just those terms. Many of us are inclined to think of the Queen—and the Throne she holds—as a symbol. But, that man's words impressed upon my mind the fact that our Queen is much more than a mere symbol. She is a living, breathing embodiment of all that is decent and good in a world where decency and goodness are virtues too often suspect.

I saw the Queen first as a Princess in Quebec City at the start of the Royal Tour of Canada. Then, she was a shy and nervous person. We Canadians are a less restrained lot than the English or European people and we enthusiastically flashed bulbs in her face wherever she went; we followed her every move and reported on it through the press and by radio; we talked of how she handled her knife and fork; we were concerned that she didn't smile enough and we told her so in the newspapers; we quarreled amongst ourselves about the arrangements for her visit—arrangements we had approved months before. We shall never know how great a strain those first days in Canada were to our young Princess. It is small wonder that at times she appeared diffident and uncertain.

It is a fact, I think, that during the Royal Tour of Canada we developed a sort of parental affection toward the then Princess. Our hearts were so touched by her simplicity and charm that we wanted to put our arms around her shoulders to comfort and strengthen her for the ordeals which filled her day from dawn to dark and beyond. The President of the United States did just that—and we were glad.

And now, as Queen, she is embarked on a tour of the Commonwealth.

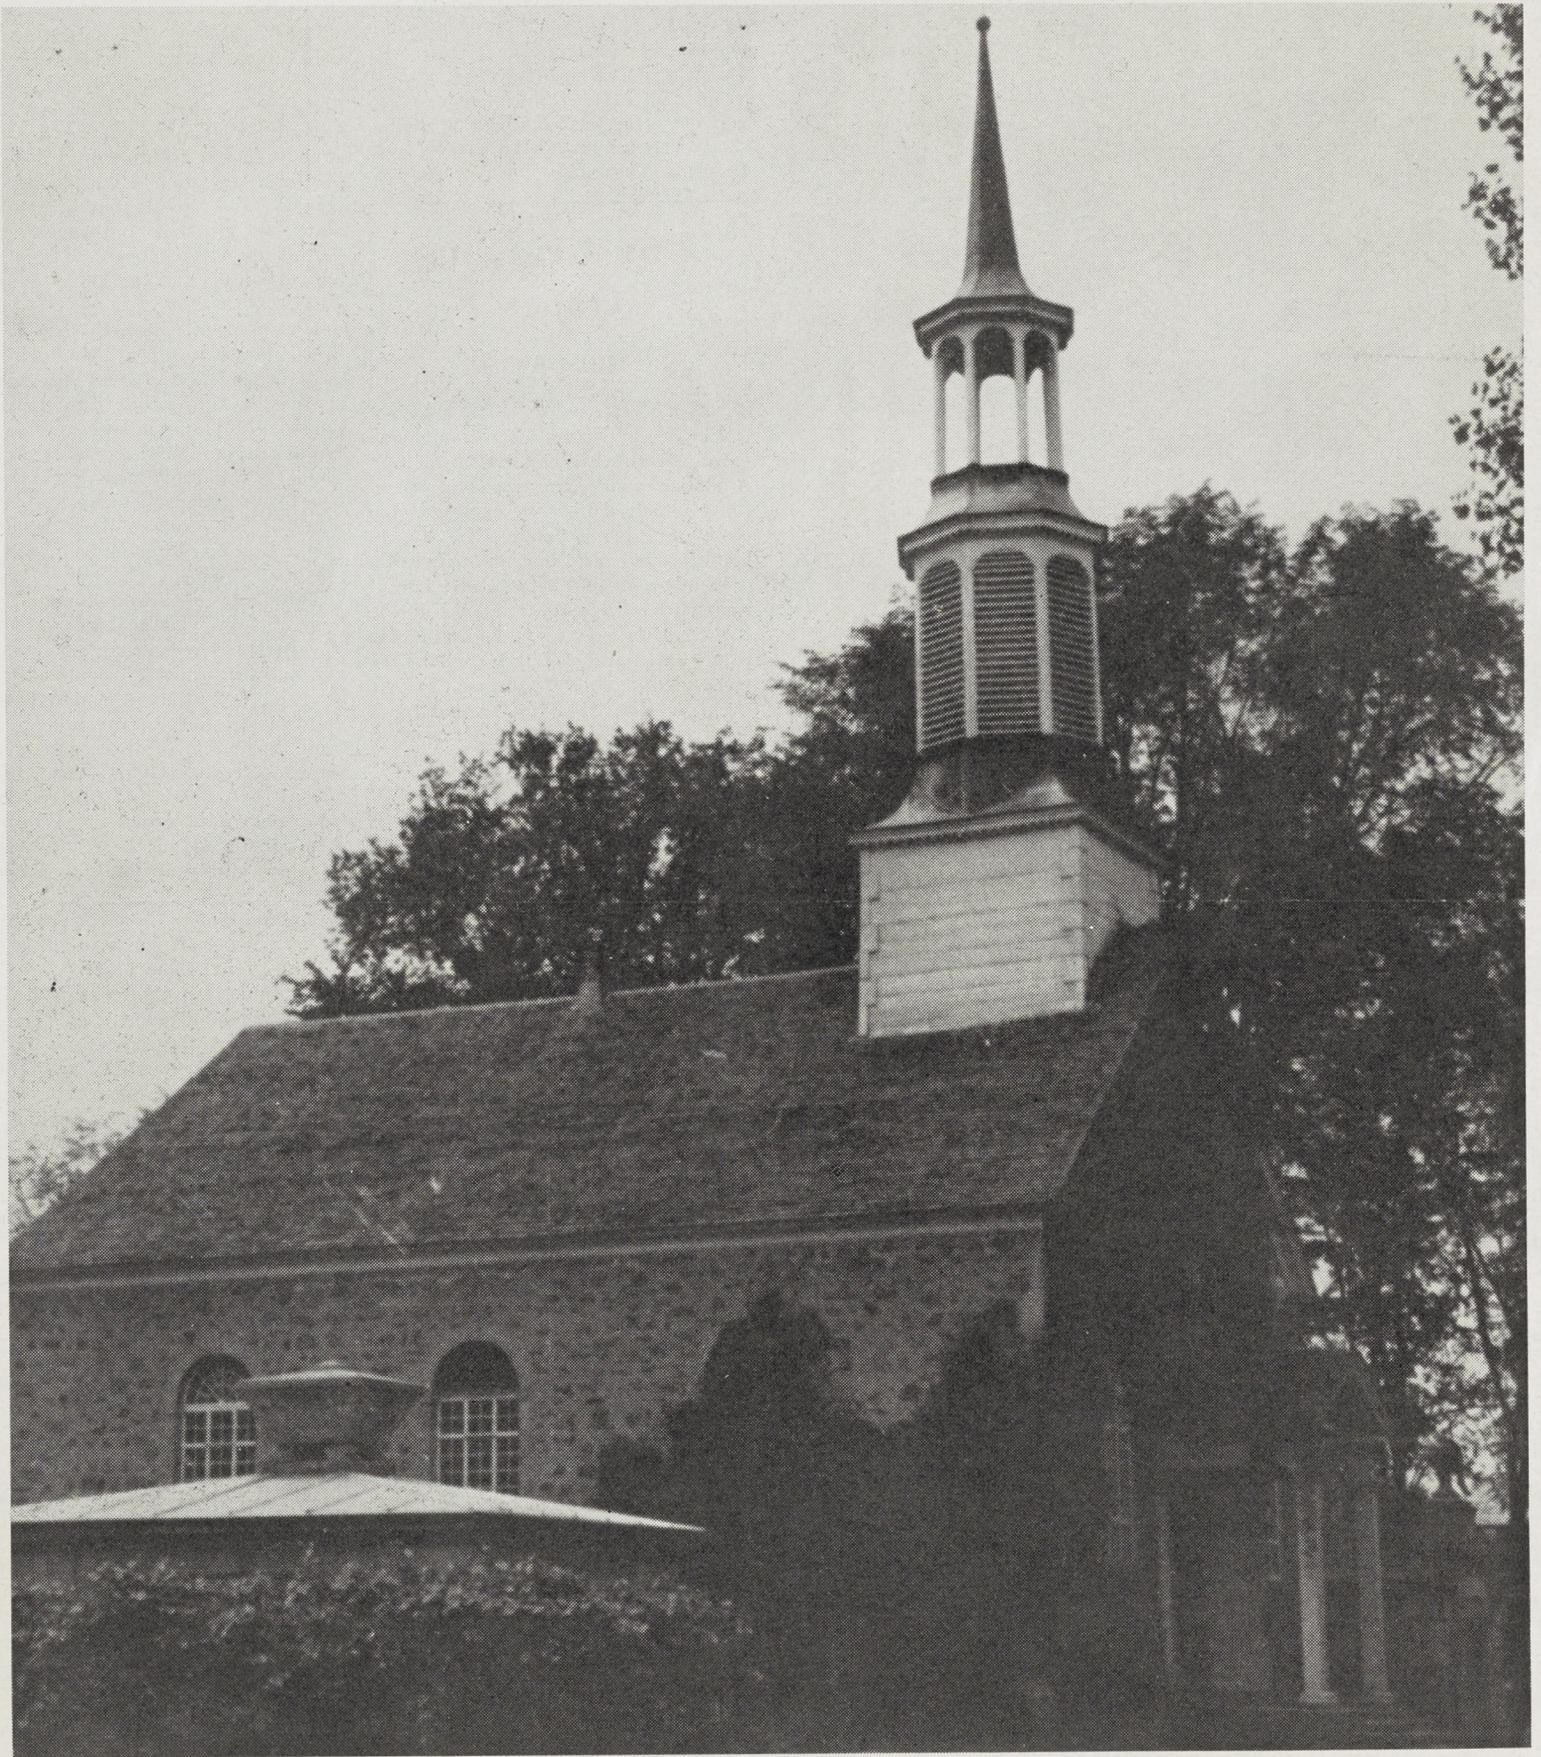

I saw Queen Elizabeth step off the Royal Stratocruiser at Montego Bay in Jamaica, and I was present at nearly all the public functions attended by Her Majesty and Prince Philip during their stay on that tropical island. And I think that if the Queen were to visit Canada today the people would react quite differently—they would gain an altogether different impression.

This lady of Royal blood is no longer a shy young Princess. Queen Elizabeth is an assured and confident person. She speaks with authority and firmness. Instead of a parental affection toward her, you would feel, I think, a humble pride in, and respect for, a noble and gallant woman whose office it is to serve and rule our great Commonwealth of nations. A Princess who conquered our hearts is become a Queen worthy not only of our love, but of our devoted service and loyalty to the end that the free nations guided by her hand shall go on to attain ever greater strength and unity.

The American gentleman said, "You have something good and clean to cling to"—and at no time in our history as a community of nations have we needed it more. The prayer that is our anthem rings around the world this Christmas day, and there are many outside the circle of our Commonwealth family who will sing with us, "God save our gracious Queen—Long may she reign."

Jan Rubes

A highlight in the career of basso Jan Rubes (star of the CBC series Songs of My People) was an appearance in Pittsburgh as Mephistopheles in Gounod's Faust, with members of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Since he came to Canada from his native Czechoslovakia in 1948, he has often been featured with the CBC Opera Company. In fact, just a little over a month after arriving in this country (and speaking little English) he was engaged by the CBC to sing in a CBC Wednesday Night production of La Traviata—his 72nd performance in that opera. He will sing in it again in another CBC Wednesday Night presentation on January 27. Last summer he sang at the Chicago Grant Park Concerts, and as a result was invited to appear with the New York City Opera Company on October 11 in the Sunday matinee performance of Puccini's La Boheme at City Centre. Earlier this month he was guest artist at a Toronto Pop Concert.

Historic St. Stephen's Church in Fort Chambly, Quebec— scene of the service which will be broadcast on Christmas Morning.
