IF the old saying that variety is the spice of life still holds true, then the CBC's Outside Broadcasts and Special Events Department could probably be compared to a bowl of chili from Joe's Diner . . . hot, spicy, and full of surprises.

Certainly, none of the dozen-odd "O.B." producers spread across Canada from Vancouver, B.C. to St. John's, Newfoundland, have ever been heard to complain that their jobs were dull or routine, for what other department of the CBC can lay claim to such diverse activities as spending a week in an igloo with an Eskimo family, travelling at the speed of sound in a jet interceptor, feeling one's way through the narrow corridors of a gold mine a thousand feet underground, or dodging an enraged Brahma bull at the world's largest stampede?

On Monday, an O.B. producer could very well be rubbing shoulders with patrons of the arts at the opening of a new gallery. On Tuesday, the same person, clad in flying suit and parachute, might be in an unheated bush plane en route to a rendezvous with a northern prospector or fur trapper.

One of the difficulties that frequently beset a member of the Outside Broadcasts Department is not the travelling or the change of food as you might imagine, but instead, the problem of formulating an answer to the person who asks, innocently enough, "What exactly do you do in Outside

Have Mike - Will Travel

Hot, Spicy, and Full of Surprises - that's the CBC's Outside Broadcasts and Special Events Department

Broadcasts?" If there is a stock answer to such a query, most of us haven't discovered it. Instead, the reply is usually that Outside Broadcasts is responsible for the coverage of events and happenings that occur outside of our studios. Under "events and happenings" you could include anything from the Calgary Stampede and the Opening of a Provincial Legislature to a spectacular fire or a curling bonspiel. When I speak of these events occurring "outside" of our studios, they could be coming from an arena on the next block, or happening eight hundred miles away from home.

Winnipeg is the headquarters for Outside Broadcasts on the Prairies. From here, the two producers in the department "fan out," if two people can do that, to cover Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, as well as most of the North-West Territories, and on occasion, the Arctic. On the average, the mileage totalled up by these two runs between twenty-five and thirty thousand a year, and during the busy periods, which usually are from June to September, they might be away from home for four days out of five. A suitcase is probably just as familiar to them as a microphone.

Much of the work of this department could probably be classed under the heading of "documentary" broadcasting, which is something quite different to describing a parade, or reporting on the opening of a new multi-million-dollar hydro-electric project. These are the "events" mentioned earlier, that are broadcast "live," or tape-recorded for release shortly after the actual happening. A documentary broadcast, on the other hand, requires extensive planning and forethought before the producer ever leaves his office. As an example, we might pick just one of the dozens of Canadian Scene programs that were broadcast to the Trans-Canada network during the past five years until the series ended last fall.

The one we are using as an example centred around the south-eastern corner of Saskatchewan where recently found oil fields have changed the entire face of that part of the Province. After deciding that this particular subject would be of sufficient importance to interest a nation-wide audience, the producer went to work gathering material from numerous sources . . . boards of trade, chambers of commerce,

By Ron Hunka, regional O.B. producer government agencies, etc. — all by correspondence. After going through the reams of printed matter, he arrived at a "theme," or in other words, a peg upon which to hang the story. In this case, it was of the changes that came overnight to this typical farming area, which had been going its way, quietly and unnoticed, for many years. All of a sudden, with the discovery of oil, the whole countryside found

Monitor Stars

FIBBER McGEE AND MOLLY, the beloved McGees of 79 Wistful Vista, are among the many well-known radio and television personalities heard daily on CBC's "Monitor Stars" during TEMPO. Other "Monitor Stars" heard regularly on TEMPO are Ernie Kovacs, Archie (of "Duffy's Tavern"), and George Gobel.

itself the focus of attention. Farmers who before had barely managed to eke out a living from their land suddenly found themselves part owners of half a dozen oil wells. Towns suddenly began to burst at the seams with the influx of oil workers and suppliers. This was to be the "peg" . . . the feelings of the farmers, the townspeople, and others concerned . . . to this sudden, overnight change.

After arriving at this "theme," the producer left for the scene of activities - Estevan, Saskatchewan, in company of a technician with his recording gear. On tape, he recorded the comments, reactions, hopes and fears of a cross-section of the people concerned with the story. He went into the field to record the sound of oil rigs drilling deep into the farmlands, and to talk to the oil people who had wrought this change. And then, after a week on the scene, he was back in Winnipeg with almost four hours of tape-recorded material, all of which had to be listened to again, edited, re-arranged, and timed. The producer then wrote a script to link the various parts of the program together. The final program was edited to fill exactly 29 minutes and 40 seconds of radio time. This tape package was then played back to the full network the following Sunday in the Canadian Scene period, to listeners from Vancouver to Halifax. Two to three full weeks of the producer's time were tied up in this half-hour broadcast, through which listeners from coast to coast were able to hear, through voices and sounds recorded "on the scene," of this economic and social upheaval taking place in a corner of their country.

A few months later, TV viewers across the country were able to see these changes and developments at first hand through one of the Here and There TV documentaries. The Outside Broadcast Department is responsible for this series as well, although from an editorial, rather than performing standpoint.

Next week: An O.B. producer must be a "triple threat" man to meet many of the challenges that come his way during the course of an assignment. Sometimes these challenges may be humorous, and at other times, exciting. Several of these happenings will be described in next week's article.

WHILE the "Berlin Crisis" continues to make the headlines, normal life in this great city continues very much as usual. "Normal," however, is an odd word to describe life in a divided city which reflects in a very dramatic and painful way the division of the world today. An hour-long documentary program Monday evening on radio will attempt a kind of political profile of Berlin today.

Island in the East is not another round-table discussion on the implications of the crisis, the reasons for the Russian demands, and the reasons for the Western opposition to them; nor will there be a great deal of speculation as to what possible solutions a summit meeting may evolve. Instead, it will describe the way a completely arbitrary line has split the city and created a sharp contrast of the standards and ways of living in the western and eastern parts of it. At the same time the program will examine the limits to this division. Various western and eastern officials in fact do co-operate; a subway, for example, runs right through the borders, and the question is raised: to what extent is co-operation on a practical day-to-day level possible between communist and non-communist bodies?

Interviews with refugees and experts of various kinds will throw some light on the conditions in the eastern zone of Germany. One of the questions which comes up is whether the Russians are really prepared to surrender their authority to their German friends. There will be a sequence on the theatrical and musical rivalries between East and West, and an examination of the general mood of the Berliners, their attitudes towards Bonn, Washington and Moscow. The narrator and interviewer is Stanley Burke, CBC's U.N. correspondent.

The Jacksons Keep Growing

When Ricky Withrow and Vivian Silver are acting in "The Jacksons and their Neighbours" on the Prairie Farm Broadcast, Margaret Brown and Ed McCrea, who play the roles of their parents, get some waist-bending exercise. Vivian, who is 10, is in Grade 4 at Peretz School in Winnipeg; 12-year-old Ricky is in the Grade 6 major work class at Grosvenor School.

For the past 13 years rural listeners throughout the prairies have followed with affectionate interest the doings of a group of people who live in the mythical community of Little Coulee, and who are usually referred to as "The Jacksons." The colourful "Dollar Dick" Jackson (played by Moray Sinclair) still appears frequently on these daily programs, and his son Buddy is preparing to take over more and more of the responsibilities of the family farm.

But it is Colleen Jackson who, as Mrs. Bill Davis, more frequently appears on these daily "visits" with "The Jacksons and Their Neighbours." Bill Davis is the son of one of Dick's neighbours, and interest was high after his discharge from the army which led to the blossoming of his childhood romance with Colleen Jackson. Listeners of long standing will recall that Bill and Colleen were married in June of 1947.

Bill, in common with a lot of other men, tends to forget this memorable anniversary now and again. Their first child, Jack, was born in November, 1948, and Sally followed less than three years later. Both children have the usual capacity for creating a host of minor problems for their parents, although their doting grandparents can see them as nothing less than perfect.

The roles of Bill and Colleen in this daily radio serial are played by Ed McCrea and Margaret Brown. Young Jackie is played by Ricky Withrow and Sally by Vivian Silver. For years Sally was only heard as an "offstage voice," but about a year and a half ago it was felt necessary to have her actually appear as a speaking personality.

For the Bill Davis family, time does not stand still as it does with comic strip characters. They are like any other normal Canadian family. They grow older—Jack and Sally are both now of school age—they change and develop, they have their hobbies and interests, some of which they outgrow. To many listeners this family is as "real" as the family who live over on the next section.

JEFF HOGWOOD

and Audrey Laurie are host and hostess on the new Sunday series "Speaking of Pets," from Montreal.

PROGRAM NOTES

APRIL 19

Good Life Theatre

Religious drama series. This week—"Valley of Shadows."

Speaking of Pets

The care and training of pets, with hosts Jeff Hogwood and Audrey Laurie. From Montreal.

CBWT—Quand Paris Recoit Paris

Daniel Gelin and Françoise Soulié introduce Jacqueline François, Pia Colombo, and Jacques Verrière on this week's program. (CBC Montreal film.)

CBWT—French Film

Documentary—"Alger, Le Cap." CBC Newsmagazine

Host Gordon Burwash presents highlights of the week's news from at home and abroad.

Lassie

This week—"The Tooth." Lassie turns dentist and Timmy has a bad dream, but all ends well when Timmy awakens and finds a brand new quarter under his pillow.

Bob Cummings Show

This week—"Bob for Mayor." Bob Collins parries the thrusts of a female politico as a potential mud-slinging mayoralty race is cooled down when both candidates effect polite withdrawals.

Father Knows Best

Starring Robert Young and Jane Wyatt as the Jim Andersons. This week—"Fair Exchange." An Indian exchange student visits the Andersons.

Shirley Temple Storybook

"Hiawatha"—a dramatization of the American Indian folk tale popularized by Longfellow.

The World's Stage

True stories introduced by Dr. Frank Baxter. This week—"The Checkered Flag," a tense drama about a polio victim who wins a car race and a personal triumph. It's hard to believe a badly crippled polio victim could not only learn to drive a car, but could even become the winner in a thrilling car race. But this is exactly what happens to Bud Hand, in tonight's play. By sheer courage and determination, this young man not only thrilled car-racing fans with his exploits, but went on to greater personal triumphs. When Bud was struck down by the dread disease as a child, his future seemed bleak. But as he grew up, his obsession with cars led him to become a top mechanic. The breaks came fast. He had a chance to go into business for himself, and he got the opportunity to drive in a big race. In spite of his handicap, his fears, and his friends' cautioning, he made the decision to drive—a decision that had amazing results!

G.M. Presents

"The Talker," a drama about a man who talks too much—especially about his son, by Andrew K. Lewis. Close to retirement age, voluble but well-meaning John Haney is a successful shoe salesman in a large department store who is continually bragging about the merits of his son, Frank, who works in the same store. Anxious to see his son promoted, John is worried when Frank considers accepting a new job elsewhere.

Twentieth Century

"The Times of Teddy Roosevelt"—the story of the United States president who carried a "big stick" but did not always speak softly. The films shown of President McKinley's funeral are considered to be the first motion pictures taken in the United States.

Weekend in Sports

Reported by Steve Douglas.

This Week

Panel discussion about an important event in the week's news, or interview with a newsworthy figure.

Fighting Words

Panel quiz game based on controversial quotations sent in by viewers, with moderator Nathan Cohen. From Toronto.

IN "HIAWATHA"—Minnehaha (Nyra Monsour) and Iagoo (J. Carrol Naish) rejoice over the good corn harvest in a scene from this Sunday's "Shirley Temple Storybook."

How to Select a Wife

Doris Dickson, CBC morning commentator for Manitoba, on CBW

Hello, everyone. This is Doris Dickson. I have a passion for clipping items out of the newspaper and filing them away . . . and then weeks later, I come across the items and wonder what I intended to do with them. I can spend more time than enough reading over these odd items and puzzling over why I saved them. For instance, this ragged little article I saved on how to select a wife. I'm sure I don't know what good I thought that would do me. If there's one thing I'm certain I'll never be doing, it's choosing a wife. But perhaps I felt this might give some clues as to what type of woman to be if you do want to be chosen.

Actually, the item turns out to be a guide to the type of girl men shouldn't marry . . . and the advice is given by a lady psychiatrist, Dr. Eleanor Crissey. Dr. Crissey isn't identified any further than that . . .

but I'd judge from her comments that she doesn't really like women . . . at least not many of them. And I'd suspect from her cynical remarks that she's either a spinster herself . . . or an unhappily married woman. Any man who took her advice too seriously would probably give up the whole idea of getting married and retreat to a hermit's cave. Or he'd spend so much time trying to figure out which type his lady love was, that she'd marry the man next door while he was still deciding.

Well, here are a few of the women that Dr. Crissey warns the marriage-minded male about. First comes the ash-tray emptier, the woman who is constantly emptying ash trays, straightening furniture and plumping cushions. You and I might think this woman was simply trying to make her home an attract-

Desilu Playhouse

Tonight—"The Untouchables," the first half of a two-part, two-hour dramatization of FBI Agent Eliot Ness' autobiographical novel about the special FBI squad selected to break up the Al Capone empire. Robert Stack stars as FBI Agent Ness. The play was adapted especially for television by Emmy-winning writer Paul Monash. Others in the starring cast include Keenan Wynn, Bill Williams, Nevill Brand (as Capone), Joe Mantell, Mary Murphy, Bruce Gordon, Barbara Nichols, Paul Picerni, Herman Ruden, and Peter Mamakos. "The Untouchables" were six members of Ness' special squad of agents, hand-picked from FBI offices around the country to help wreck the vast Capone bootleg racket in Chicago during Prohibition. They won their nickname from the fact that they could not be "touched" by the Capone bribe artists. Quinn Martin will produce and Phil Karlson will direct this special drama. Desi Arnez is your weekly host.

CBWT—Crusade for a Cure

Live mobile production on cancer research. From Winnipeg.

I wish restaurants wouldn't attempt to be all things to all men—that is, to serve so many different dishes. I lose my appetite when I see one of those menus hectographed in pale purple ink, listing everything from fish to chops to roasts. I don't see how they can prepare so many dishes, and cook all of them well. And in my experience, they don't.
—Jean Hinds, on CBK.

Ghost Image at CHAT-TV

Dan and Reg McGuire.

Even those who know the McGuire brothers well sometimes find it hard to tell one from the other. The result is a good deal of merriment among the twins' co-workers at CHAT-TV in Medicine Hat.

Dan and Reg never pass up an opportunity to take advantage of the fact that they are, as CHAT-TV manager Bob Buss puts it, "as alike as two peas in a TV pod."

Born and raised in eastern Canada, Dan and Reg took the Radio and Television Arts course at the Ryerson Institute of Technology in Toronto, graduating in 1957. Having already toured Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, the boys decided to "go west," and have been with CHAT-TV since its early days of growing pains until the present smooth-sailing period.

Dan heads the continuity department at the station and doubles as production manager. Reg is in the engineering department.

In true twin form, CHAT-TV's identical twins married eastern girls—within two weeks of each other.

The boys have been used extensively in commercials, particularly in those where it is necessary to point out that a product offers "twice as much" as its competitors.

THE CHINESE PUZZLE

The sometimes mystifying present-day events in the land of the deposed Dragon Kings often stand to be illuminated by a consideration of the history which led up to them—and that is the virtue of a little book just published by the CBC. In seven chapters (originally seven half-hour talks on CBC radio in the "University of the Air" series) it reviews Chinese history from the earliest times; the author knows his subject well, having spent a good part of his life in China, which country he revisited as recently as 1957. For your copy of "An Interpretation of China" by Dr. Lewis C. Walmesley of the department of East Asiatic studies at the University of Toronto, send 75 cents (cheque or money order) to:

"The Littlest of Kings"

BUT HOW can I leave Kasrilevke, when the spring breeze drifts over the town turning everything soft and green—when the flowers come to life and the herds Israel and I used to gather—when the sun and gentle rain touch the grave of my husband—how can I leave him now?"

This is how Bashe, widow of Israel the healer, sees Kasrilevke—a shtetl or small Jewish town in eastern Europe—as she sits deep in thought at a Passover meal presided over by an orphan boy.

Around this Passover setting evolves The Littlest of Kings—a simple tale of life in Kasrilevke, as seen through the separate eyes of Bashe, Pessie, and Sossie, three widows who have pooled their bad luck and adopted an orphan who some day will be a great scholar.

It was written by Sholom Aleichem who was born Solomon Rabinowitz in a small Russian town, Peryaslav, on March 3, 1859, and died in 1916. His name was ranked with those of such literary masters as Mark Twain, Balzac and Chekhov. The pseudonym Sholom Aleichem comes from the traditional Hebrew greeting, "Peace be unto you." With it, the author hails his readers: "Let's be friends, I am one of you." The laughter-through-tears that is the essence of Jewish humour is the soul of his work. Centennial celebrations marking his birth were held throughout last month.

The Littlest of Kings will be presented this Tuesday evening in a TV adaptation by Charles E. Israel with production by Harvey Hart and sets designed by Rudi Dorn.

Of Aleichem's writing, Charles Israel has said, "If he was not the greatest of Jewish writers, Sholom Aleichem was certainly the best loved. He was a typical Jewish story teller and wrote of Jewish life in the simple, clear language of the people. He argued with his audience, tantalized them, forced them to participate in the stories he told them. He often deserted the thread of his narrative to ask questions which had nothing to do with anything, answered these questions, didn't answer them. And yet, out of this seemingly artless method of communication sang a series of biting, vital portraits of the shtetl."

"He made his readers see the cluster of tiny houses with their thatched roofs, the teeming marketplace, the synagogue, the narrow main street clogged with people, goats, chickens, and an occasional cow. In the town Sholom Aleichem created, the people were, to use his phrase, 'packed together as tightly as herring in a barrel.' This was Kasrilevke into which Aleichem put people from every stratum of Jewish life, and a boy, the

"High Noon" on CBC-TV

When?

We don't know for sure, and unless someone has fixed the Stanley Cup finals, nobody does. "High Noon" will be the first of the "Great Movies" to be televised in the N.H.L. hockey period during the summer. It will be seen April 18 if the Stanley Cup has been played by then. If not, it will be presented this Saturday, April 25. Pictured above are Gary Cooper and Lloyd Bridges in a scene from the western classic. Fred Davis will be the "Great Movies" host.

Elaine Grand Interviews James Thurber

JAMES THURBER'S grandfather had a great black beard. Every tooth in his mouth was solid gold and he liked to clench a red rose between them. The young Thurber didn't mind appearing in public with his grandfather and his red rose. In fact, all his life nothing ever embarrassed James Thurber.

"I once said to a girl before I was married, 'I never want to see you again. Goodnight.' Then instead of opening her door and walking out I walked into her aspects of composition. From Winnipeg. (CBWT-5 p.m.)

Huckleberry Hound

This week—"Be My Guest Pest." Yogi Bear visits the big city where he is used as a rug, shaken out of a window and washed in a washing machine.

Walt Disney Presents

This week—"The Wetback Hound." Narrated by Rex Allen, this is the story of Paco, a lion-hunting dog who won't hunt lions and who swims a river to become a "wetback" immigrant to the United States.

One of a Kind

Object-identification panel game, with Rita Greer Allen, Lloyd Bochner, Kathie McNeil, and Allan Manings. Alex Barris is moderator. From Toronto.

Kraft Music Hall

(Variety show), with Milton Berle and guests.

Bat Masterson

This week—"Man of Action."

The Unforeseen

"Cabin B 13," a mystery drama by Lester Powell, from a story by John Dickson Carr. A shipboard honeymoon becomes a nightmare when the young bride discovers that both her husband and their cabin have disappeared. Paul Almond, producer. From Toronto.

Close-Up

closet. Thereupon she shut the door and turned the key. That is embarrassment, but I didn't think so. I thought it was funny as the Dickens."

Thurber tells this story to Elaine Grand in a two-part interview on Close-Up, April 22 and 29. Producer Daryl Duke shot the interview in a suite in the Hotel Continental in Paris.

"Despite that location," says Duke, "Thurber seemed to carry Columbus, Ohio, with him. One could see him in the forefront of the Thurber album with his family and friends, past and present, on all sides of him. His memory is fantastic. At one point in the interview he tells Elaine he has just 68 special memories in his mental 'album' of the house at 915 South Champion Avenue, Columbus, where he lived from 1899 to 1900."

This photographic memory is now essential for Thurber's writing. He has been totally blind since 1951. Well, not quite totally blind. "I live in light," he says to Elaine. "I live in a suffusion of light. As one of my friends said, 'What is it—the white radiance of eternity?' And I said, well, I doubt that but it is. Even in a pitch dark room there is a soft suffusion of light."

Thurber lost his left eye when he was six. An infection theoretically took the sight of his right eye as well—yet for forty years he saw, and saw well enough to draw his famous cartoons.

"All the great eye doctors that ever examined me told me I was stone blind in both eyes since 1901, and that for forty years I saw without the apparatus of sight, as eye surgeons know it in their textbooks . . . apparently the thing called sympathetic ophthalmia had destroyed my sight. When I was a boy of seven I heard them say that, but I thought they were crazy. I could see so I went right on seeing."

The sight of his sightless eyes has helped confirm Thurber's belief in the existence of supernatural phenomena. Of his personal "miracle" he says, "You can call it God, or extra-sensory perception, depending on your viewpoint."

But even when talking seriously about his beliefs, Thurber does it in a uniquely Thurberish way. He tells of two friends whose New York apartment contained a ghost, a woman with a yellow dress, green beads, and blond hair.

"My friends told me, 'You know, I can never walk through that woman. I always say pardon me and walk around her.'"

Most of Thurber's friends and family seem to have this habit of treating abnormal situations in a normal manner. And Thurber has used them in his stories. During the Close-Up interview he insists that events like The Night the Bed Fell on Father and The Day the Dam Broke are all factual. He only rearranged the facts a little, and that to make them believable.

"I didn't do full justice to my mother," says Thurber. "She said to me, 'I am sorry you put in the book about my feeding the mice and the dog on different saucers during the party out in the kitchen. Those three mice each had a saucer.' But I said, 'For goodness sake, mom, you don't think anyone would believe that, do you?'"

Much more of Thurber, his self-critical attitude to writing and his free-expression in his drawings, his family, his blindness, and his belief that humorists are "tremendously troubled people with maladjustments, imbalances, fears"—all this and more comes out in the Close-Up interviews this Wednesday and next.

Of all the professions, medieval medicine has come in for the biggest share of guffaws from the miracle-drug-protected moderns. In their ignorance they allowed countless lives to slip through their germ-laden fingers. They had perhaps only one characteristic that they could share with their skilled successors of today—their inability to cure a common cold.—A. D. Henry, on CBC's "Prairie Talks."

Nursery School Time

Songs and stories for tots, with Maman Fonfon. From Montreal.

Douglas Fairbanks Presents

This week—"The Ludlow Affair," a mystery drama with Robert Beatty as "Bulldog" Drummond. (Not on CBWT).

CBWT—Mary Liz Show

Today Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kowal of Killarney tell viewers about their unique and busy work—raising turkeys and mushrooms. Mrs. A. P. Gauer tries her expert hand at a couple of mushroom recipes, and J. P. Kennedy discusses the habits of the cowbird, yellow warbler, and gold-finch. (CBWT-2:00 p.m.)

Open House

Today's program includes another demonstration of figure-preserving exercises by Gwen Vernon, assisted by pianist John Coveart, and a discussion between the wives of medical "G.P.s."

Maggie Muggins

Today Maggie and her little animal puppet friends get dressed up to take photographs. Grandmother Frog and Henrietta fly through the air in their Mother Goose costumes and go into a house by mistake. They end up in the roast pan but are saved by Maggie. From Toronto.

Pieces of Eight

Pirate adventures for children.

Whistletown

Today Mayor Jacques wanders into a sugar bush and decides to make maple syrup.

CBWT—Hobby Corner

This week Glynne Morris' guest will discuss the vanishing art of kite-making. (CBWT-5:00 p.m.)

Music Makers '59

With Jack Kane and his orchestra, and vocalist Sylvia Murphy. This week's guest is trumpeter Gordon Braund. The orchestra will be heard in a baseball medley (which includes "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" and "You Gotta Have Heart" from Damn Yankees) and a medley from the Alfred Hitchcock album, "Music to be Murdered By." Sylvia Murphy sings "Whatever Lola Wants" and "It Happens Every Spring."

Have Gun, Will Travel

This week—"Hunt the Man Down." In an attempt to reconcile two feuding brothers, Paladin finds himself marked for death.

Loretta Young Show

This week—"810 Franklin." A parole agent has an idea that he and his wife turn into an experiment to help rehabilitate ex-convicts.

Explorations

This week—"An Ill Wind," part 2 of the series "Tomorrow Is Now." Hosts Duncan Cameron and Thelma Dickman interview Ross Clark, commissioner of works of Metro Toronto; Mrs. Mary Humphries, textile consultant; Dr. Harry Salem of the department of pharmacology at the University of Toronto; and Dr. B. C. Newbury, head of the air pollution unit of the Ontario Research Foundation. (This program, originally scheduled for April 2, was pre-empted by an N.H.L. semi-final game.) From Toronto.

Playbill

This week—"The Voices of the Dead," a play about the futility of war by Eric Cameron of Montreal. The play takes place against a background of rebellion in a dictatorship. The scene is a cell block where a prisoner awaits death, not "gloriously" in front of a firing squad, but at the hands of an ignoble sergeant. The prison captain offers to free the wife of the rebel leader if the prisoner will supply information on secret rebel activities. "The Voices of the Dead" will be produced in Winnipeg by Arthur Zigouras. Leading roles will be played by Gordon Pinsent (prisoner), Brian MacDonald (captain), and Louise Walters (the girl).

ive and comfortable place for her husband (or in this case her intended husband). But that's not so, says Dr. Crissey. As a wife, the ash-tray emptier will be a dictatorial housekeeper whose home is kept spotlessly clean at the expense of her family's happiness.

Is the solution, then, to choose a poor housekeeper, one who is relaxed about the whole thing? Well, Dr. Crissey doesn't seem to have much use for them either. This is how she describes "the floor sitter" who apparently doesn't even make sure she has a clean floor to sit on. "When everyone else is sitting on chairs, she chooses the floor," the psychiatrist says disappointingly. When the evening calls for an evening dress, she turns up in dungarees or a peasant skirt. (I'll go along with Dr. Crissey on that; it could be disconcerting for the poor male to have to pin his orchids to a tartan shirt topping dungarees and moccasins.) The floor sitter has few women friends and runs through them quickly, Dr. Crissey continues. As a wife she'll be a poor money manager, an irregular cook, a slovenly housekeeper—and proud of it. (Isn't science wonderful? Imagine being able to deduce all that from the fact that she sits on the floor.)

Well, here are a few other women to steer away from, men—if you're listening:

• "The clothes horse" . . . I imagine she's a fairly familiar type. And Dr. Crissey has nothing startling to say about her. Clothes are the main thing in her life. She'll keep her husband poor paying for them. She wants flattery and admiration but she's too busy thinking of her appearance to be able to feel any deep emotions herself.

• The pigtail wearer (I wonder if this included pony tails), well, she's the innocent type, Dr. Crissey contends. She doesn't smoke or drink, and she's embarrassed by off-colour jokes and profanity. "She'll give you the feeling you're robbing the cradle," Dr. Crissey says dourly. Often she's an only daughter who has been babied by her parents, and she'll demand household help in a two-roomed apartment."

• The pass-receiver on the other hand is not nearly so innocent. She's beautiful and tempting and everyone makes passes at her, she complains. Dr. Crissey disposes of her rather weakly, I thought. She says her husband will know the truth sooner or later, that a woman who has to rely on sex appeal probably hasn't a great deal to begin with."

• The good sport, who would seem to be a good bet for marriage, turns out to be a wormwood and gall. Before marriage she'll put up with anything. You can ask her to go out at the last minute, break a date, or stand her up, and she'll come back for more. (On looking back over that, I don't know many good sports by Dr. Crissey's standards. I think of people who can stand a bit of hardship and adversity cheerfully as good sports, not those who let themselves be walked all over.) Well, Dr. Crissey's good sport will insist on going Dutch if

No Accent

• Would it interest your "Disgusted" St. James correspondent to know that I am a native Manitoban of five generations' standing, and that I use NO accent in playing Dick Jackson on the Farm Broadcast? I read the vernacular of the script as it is presented to me, with only the slightest slurring of diction—that is all. However, I suppose I should not complain. In a good many years of broadcasting for the CBC this is the first time that your influential publication has seen fit to mention my name in anything but routine, small-type credits. And as a client of mine has several times remarked: "I don't care what they call me so long as they spell my name right." I am happy that you have finally turned up something about me that you could use, and am duly appreciative of this co-operation.—Moray Sinclair, Winnipeg.

Mr. Sinclair has, quite unintentionally, been fooling people with his "accent" for many years. Even the author of "The Jacksons and Their Neighbours," Mary Rogers Pattison of Saskatoon, was amazed when she first met Mr. Sinclair and discovered that he and Dick Jackson were, to a greater degree than she realized, the same person.

Bob Willson

• I was very sorry to read that Bob Willson will soon be leaving us. He's been with CBWT since television first arrived here and I am going to miss his friendly personality and most pleasant interviews on Spotlight. May he have the best of luck in Toronto.—M. S., Winnipeg.

Bertrand Russell

• May I trespass a little further on your space to reply as briefly as I may to the correspondence aroused by my comments on the Close-Up interview with Lord Bertrand Russell. I am from firm conviction an intolerant bigot. The only word I hate in the dictionary is "tolerance." Tolerance implies the surrender of principle, the negation of reason, the denial of truth in practice for expediency. (Before some readers grow too apoplectic let me add in haste that I am speaking strictly in the context of intellect and morality).

Christ taught us tolerance, it is true—but with the clearest definition of its meaning in terms of our relations with our fellowmen. We must always tolerate and love the sinner;

we must never accept the sin. Lord Russell's sin in his public address to Canadians was to submit an unskilled, unprotected audience of ordinary folk to a subtle attack on religious beliefs by a skilled, if shallow, user of words. CBC-TV in fairness, should have provided a capable and vigorous exponent of Christianity on the same program with him to counterbalance his attack. This was the substance of my comment. My letter, I admit, was designedly provocative; its purpose was simply to stir people against too ready an acceptance of what they may hear from ill-informed and hostile sources. If it has succeeded somewhat in its aim I am left with a modest sense of achievement.—R. A. Nolan, Wainwright, Alta.

Reprints of Talks

• Could you tell me where I could obtain a written copy of Professor Lovell's six lectures on The Origin of the Universe, broadcast on CBC radio?—G. C. Fleming, Charles City, Iowa.

• It is a great help that the CBC has provided to many in the You and the Stock Market series each day for the past few weeks. I brought my transistor radio to work for the series, I found the talks so very valuable. Would you be printing the lectures?—L. W., Winnipeg.

Professor Lovell's Reith Lectures on the origin of the universe are being published by the Oxford University Press and should be available through any book store. CBC is not publishing the talks on the stock market, but the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada, which organized this series, is distributing a 59-page book entitled "Investment Terms and Definitions." This is available directly from the association, (P.O. Box 699, Winnipeg) at a cost of 25 cents per copy. CBC does publish some of its talks, however, and a number of publications now available are described elsewhere in this issue.

Jose Poniera

• By mere chance I just caught the José Poneira Show on your radio station. If this is the same José Poneira we used to catch in New York—and it sounded like him—hang onto him. Can't imagine what he's doing in Winnipeg, Canada. Excellent show—not long enough. Is it shown on TV as well? It should be.—Helen Glass, East Orange, New York.

Yes it is the same José. Yes, he has been seen on CBC television (on CBWT's "Marsh Phimister Show"). We can't imagine why Miss Glass can't imagine what José is doing in Winnipeg, Canada. Thanks anyway.

Western Fan

• In the CBC Times for March 22 to 28 the comments on Bat Masterson on page 13 occupy four inches of space. Imagine giving that much precious space to a cheap western as asinine as Bat Masterson. Is the editor a rabid western fan?—C. V. Klaehn, Humboldt, Sask.

Busy Fingers

• Before returning to our home in Toronto, my children and I want to thank CBWT for the fun and skills we have gained from your program, Busy Fingers. Away from friends and confined with your rather grim winter, we were very glad to find something new and different to do every Monday afternoon. During the two and a half months we've been here we didn't miss a show and the children developed a whole new interest in arts and crafts. The "Busy Fingers Lady," Betty Nickerson, is charming and makes doing things an enjoyable experience. I hope you tell the network about her. In the meantime, my personal thanks for your careful and intelligent programming of children's shows.—Mrs. J. M. McLean, Winnipeg.

“Serenade” Goes to Boston

CBC Winnipeg's Serenade is one of the three CBC network programs to be carried by Boston radio station WGBH this Sunday, marking Canada Week in Boston.

The other programs to be heard in Boston are CBC's radio drama showcase, CBC Stage, and the regular concert by the CBC Symphony Orchestra which this week will be conducted by Sir Ernest MacMillan and will include a performance by Winnipeg-born violinist Frederic Grinke, of Arnold Bax's violin concerto.

Our cover this week shows the Serenade principals—conductor Eric Wild, mezzo-soprano Florence Faiers, pianist Mitchell Parks, and producer Lawrence Taylor, who were photographed just before they went on the air for a recent program.

Serenade, a half hour of light music, is one of the few programs carried on both the French and English radio networks of the CBC.

MUSIC ON RADIO

by BOYD NEEL, Dean, Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto

I see that the New York Philharmonic concert on Saturday evening (April 18) commences with Concerto No. 13 in F major by Handel. This I presume to be Opus 6. No. 2, the second of the 12 concerti grossi most commonly known. This numbering of the Handel concertos has led to the utmost confusion in the past and I am sorry to see that it is still being used. The trouble all stems from the edition of Handel published by Breitkopf and Hartel some 50 years ago. In that edition some 28 concertos were numerically listed and they included such works as the Water Music, which are not concertos at all. The 12 concertos of Opus 6 were listed under numbers from 12 to 23—hence Opus 6, No. 2 became No. 13 in the B. & H. list. This unfortunate system has caused and will,

I am afraid, go on causing, endless confusion among musicians and I can see no solution until somebody does for Handel what Kochel did for Mozart. The F major Concerto is rather shorter than the remainder of Opus 6 and starts with a most beautiful slow movement. It is a pity it is not more often heard.

On Sunday morning the Piano Quartet of Richard Strauss is to be played. This was his Opus 13 and was written around 1883 when it won a prize in Germany. When we listen to it, we realize how very much under the influence of Brahms the young Strauss was at this time, but the music is none the worse for that and it remains one of the best piano quartets of the late 19th century.

On Sunday evening I am delighted to see the Violin Concerto of Arnold Bax is to be played. This is one of the later works of the enigmatic Irish-English composer. It is very hard to assess the value

Sidney Katz Probes Traffic “Suicides”

A SURVEY of fatal traffic accidents in New Haven showed that four out of five fatalities were definitely suicides. In Detroit, the psychiatric ratings of chronic traffic offenders were found to be worse than those of criminals. These are two of the startling points that Sidney Katz learned recently in interviews with groups in the U.S. doing research into the causes of traffic accidents. He describes his findings in Tuesday night's Post-News Talk on radio. At Cornell University, Katz talked with the personnel of the Auto Crash Injury Research Unit, the group who first advocated the

Meet Hal Lone Pine (Junior)

LEN BREAU

Len Breau, winner of the February 15 Trans-Canada Talent Show in Winnipeg is a talented young guitar player who has been strumming professionally since he was eight years old. Born in Auburn, Maine, in 1941, Len spent his early years travelling with his showbusiness parents. It was when Mr. and Mrs. Breau (better known to country music fans as Hal Lone Pine and Betty Cody) moved to New Brunswick that Len began playing in his father's travelling show.

Len's parents have made many records for RCA Victor, both as a team and as soloists. One of their best sellers, an original by Lone Pine called Good-bye and So Long For You was later recorded by Burl Ives.

Len came to Winnipeg with his family over a year ago. When he arrived he was persuaded to join the musicians' union, and through it he met some of the city's jazz musicians. Although he had always played western guitar, he now prefers jazz. "I play western for a living, and jazz for fun," he says. Len describes his style as "an adaptation of the Chester Atkins technique to jazz."

At the February 14 competition, which won him his spot on this Sunday's semi-final competition in Toronto, Len felt that his chances against the vocalists on the show were slim. Since his win he's had many offers to play in Winnipeg clubs and cabarets, but he's had to turn them down; he's under age.

Like the other Winnipeg semi-finalists on the Trans-Canada Talent Show, Len will be visiting Toronto for the first time when he appears on the semi-final.

SCHOOL BROADCASTS

Manitoba—"Singing Game Time," the third in a series of six broadcasts prepared and presented by Lola MacQuarrie and designed to encourage girls and boys to perform singing games with finish and spirit (Grades 1 and 2). Today the words, music and action will be taught to "When I Was a Lady." The program also includes the third in a series of six social studies broadcasts entitled "Our Latin American Neighbors," a story about a Latin American boy prepared by Elizabeth and Milburn Carlson. Today—"Portage Bien!" CBW-3:00 p.m.

Saskatchewan—"Singing Game Time," (Same as Manitoba, note above), and Ici-le francais (thirteenth broadcast), Grade 9.

CBK-2:00 p.m.

Alberta—"Great Men of the Twentieth Century," the final broadcasts in a series of three which were originally presented by the British Broadcasting Corporation (Grades 11 and 12). Today—Sun Yat-Sen. Sun Yat-Sen aided the overthrow of the Ching, or Manchu, dynasty in China and the establishment of the Chinese Republic. He founded the Kuomintang or National People's party, which later took control of the Chinese national government under the leadership of Chiang Kai-shek. Sun Yat-Sen was more a dreamer, idealist and plotter than he was a statesman and practical politician. But he was greatly concerned with the betterment of the Chinese people. The goals which he set forth in his San Min Cho (Three People's Principles) became the basis of the political reformation in China.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

"When to Wear Gloves."—To most Canadians, the presentation of calling cards, when and when not to curtsy, and when to wear gloves in the dining room are purely academic questions. Not to wives of Members of Parliament and of the diplomatic corps in Ottawa, however. Because the answers to such questions are sometimes unknown to newcomers to Canada's capital city, Mrs. Roland Michener, wife of the Speaker of the House of Commons, recently published a booklet about Ottawa etiquette. Today, Louise Conroy talks about this book.

Matinee also features the fifth in a series of eight programs of "Cooking School of the Air." Today's program is entitled "Creations from Economy Cuts." Meats are valuable foods and the proteins in the cheaper, tougher cuts are just as valuable as those in the expensive ones. With a little ingenuity and skill, the cook can make gourmet dishes of even the most prosaic meats. In her fifth cooking school lesson, Eustella Langdon tells how. She gives recipes for a navarin of lamb succulent with spices and herbs, a ham-and-veal loaf with the flavor of mushrooms and onion, and a beef paprika that is a meal in itself. Mrs. Langdon is the CBC's cooking expert.

Another feature of Matinee will be the third in a series of four programs entitled "How Does Your Garden Look?" Valuable and encouraging advice about plants for this summer's garden is given by Mary Ferguson in this series about gardening. Mrs. Ferguson is a Montreal housewife, writer and broadcaster.

Today's news commentator is Tim Creery of Ottawa. Recorded music will be introduced by Pat Gallagher, and the reading by Charles Telling is from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

RECITAL IN MINIATURE

Cellist Peggie Sampson, with pianist Snjolaug Sigurdson. Lawrence Taylor, producer. From Winnipeg.

Divertimento (1954)..... E. Maconchy

Elizabeth Maconchy is an English composer of Irish parentage. She studied at the Royal College of Music in London from 1923 to 1929, and later she was awarded the Blumenthal travelling scholarship, which she used for further study in Prague, where her first substantial work, a piano concerto, was performed under Karel Jirak in 1930. Her teachers at the R.C.M. were Charles Wood, C. H. Kitson, and Vaughan Williams, for composition, and Arthur Alexander, for piano. Although she took an A.R.C.M. for solo piano performance, her talent, which showed itself at the age of six, has been for composition.

The Divertimento is in five movements: Serenade, Golubchik, The Clock, Vigil, and Masquerade. Peggie Sampson describes the movements as "character studies in a modern style—in some cases even a little jazzy."

you're broke. You'll think she's pliable, even-tempered and agreeable—what every man wants in a wife. (Those are Dr. Crissey's words not mine; far be it from me to try to guess what every man wants in a wife). But, warns the psychiatrist, unfortunately she's endured all this because she wants to marry you. Beware! She may turn into a screaming, oversensitive shrew who thrives on scenes, quarrels and tears.

Well, it's a good thing that Dr. Eleanor Crissey's cold-blooded cynical warnings will go unheeded by the average love-blinded male, or there would be a dreadful falling-off in the marriage rate in our country. Who is there left for them to marry if they turn down ash-tray emptiers, floor sitters, clothes horses, pigtail wearers, pass receivers and good sports?

I wonder what Dr. Crissey would make of Meta Brevoort, another woman I saved a clipping about. I suppose she'd fit into the "good sport" class, and perhaps it's just as well she remained a spinster. In the 1870's Meta Brevoort made history by climbing Mont Blanc in Switzerland in a hoop skirt. And when she got there she refreshed herself with some champagne, sang the Marsellaise, and danced a quadrille with her Alpine guards.

Although mountain climbers in those Victorian days wore clothing and carried equipment that would appear ludicrous to today's climbers, Meta Brevoort's hoop skirts must have seemed odd even then. Rough tweeds and Scottish plaids were more in order. But Miss Brevoort was an inventive woman who liked to experiment with mountain clothing. To facilitate climbing in hoops, she passed a cord through the rings in the hem of her dress so that her billowing skirts could be drawn in quickly when she came to a narrow ledge. But the experiment was a flop. When she was descending snow slopes she complained that the snow entered the rings, stuffed up the hem, and made her heavy and wet.

Miss Brevoort wasn't the only woman of those days to make history by mountain-climbing. Lucy Walker was another of the pioneers. She was the first woman ever to climb the Matterhorn. That was in 1871. She had unusual ideas on the subject of nutrition, too. She took with her only sponge cake and champagne which she insisted was ideal for mountain sickness. Then there was Miss Straton, a British heiress. After she made the first winter ascent of Mont Blanc in 1876, she shocked London society by marrying her Swiss guide. If Dr. Crissey had been alive in those days, she'd no doubt have been shocked at the marriage, too. Imagine that poor man marrying not only a "good sport," but also an heiress. When she wasn't weeping or being screamingly shrewish she was no doubt demanding household help in their two-room Alpine cabin.

a re-appraisal of drama in the so-called blind medium, with some remarks upon a new series called "Four's Company"

I have sometimes been asked whether radio drama has any usefulness left now that television is here. This question seems to me to beg several other questions which must first be answered. In the course of answering them, I think it becomes clear that radio drama can still be very useful and enjoyable.

In the first place, what is radio drama? It can be divided into two major categories which, for want of less cumbersome terms, one may call the theatrical and the radiophonic. The theatrical works are, of course, stage plays adapted to the microphone and performed with maximum fidelity to the original. These works, in turn, fall into two categories: the highly conversational stage play (Shaw's Man and Superman, for instance) in which the loss of the visual element is not serious, and the more physically active stage play (Shakespeare's A Comedy of Errors, for instance) in which the adapter faces a serious problem in the loss of the visual element. On the other hand, there are the radiophonic works: these are dramatic works written especially for the radio medium and fully exploiting it; the more faithful they are to their medium the less well they will adapt to the screen or the stage—David Jones' In Parenthesis, for instance, could not be done except on radio and Dylan Thomas' Under Milk Wood suffers enormously from being televised or staged, as has recently been shown.

Is radio drama, of either sort, useful? The theatrical sort has certainly been useful in Canada in past years. Our true theatrical life is still only in its infancy and people in many areas would have no contact with stage plays at all if they did not hear them on the air. It is likely to be many years before all our sizeable cities have their own fully professional theatre. Until that time, the public appetite for plays will still have to be fed by television and radio. Television can handle much of this task better than radio can, so it is likely that radio has exhausted its usefulness in presenting the more physically active stage plays; but the more conversational plays, the plays of ideas, will probably continue to be presented, for the good reason that on television they tend to seem wordy and dull. Moreover, even when Canadian theatrical life reaches maturity, radio can still play a part in it by presenting experimental plays and winning enough public acceptance of them that they can then be profitably staged—this was demonstrated some years ago in London, when the CBC Third Program paved the way for the works of Jean Anouilh.

However, it is in the radiophonic sort of play that broadcast drama can best survive. Here it is a valid art in itself and so long as writers continue to serve it well there will always be an audience for it: not perhaps the huge audience that television can command, but anyway a faithful and appreciative audience. To expect this sort of radio to be submerged by television is to adduce the irrelevant, like suggesting that the invention of photography will abolish painting. This view is particularly absurd when you consider that in the last 20 years in the English-speaking world no indisputably great drama has originated on the stage or television, one has originated in the cinema, and two (some would say three) have originated in radio, one of these last being, in my view, the greatest play since Aeschylus. Listeners will have a chance next season to listen to radiophonic drama at its very best, when CBC Wednesday Night hopes to present a series of works that have won the famous Italia Prize.

I believe that radio has a sure and useful future in drama along

The second in a series of six programs on "What Goes on in Our Schools?" Today's program is entitled "Who Studies What and Why?" What subjects are Canadian children studying in the schools today? Well-known personalities in educational circles discuss the curriculum with Marjorie McEnaney in the second of Matinee's new education series. "Why study Latin, for example, or Shakespeare, geometry or social studies?" she asks them. "Does a rigid curriculum enable a student to develop into an adult who can exercise good judgment and think for himself?" Mrs. McEnaney is a freelance broadcaster who lives in Toronto.

Today's news commentary is by Tim Creery of Ottawa. Pat Gallagher will play some more of her favourite recordings, and Charles Telling continues his readings from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

On CBC Wednesday Night

"The Exiles" by James Joyce

A 90-minute production of Exiles, a play by the Irish author James Joyce, will be presented from Montreal this week on CBC Wednesday Night. Written in 1914, it is Joyce's only surviving work in the dramatic form. The play was first published in 1918 and has been reprinted several times.

Described as an Ibsenesque play, Exiles is largely autobiographical, as are all Joyce's works. Although it is not necessarily factual, the play does contain in one of its central themes a concrete problem with which James Joyce himself was faced. This is the problem of the exiled writer seeking to reconcile himself with his native Ireland. The play is set in Dublin in 1912, the year of Joyce's own last visit to his native city.

Exiles is a study in human relationships. The central character in the play is Richard Rowan, an Irish writer who returned to his home near Dublin after spending several years in Rome. Should he try after all to settle in Ireland and try to influence the cultural life of his country; or would he, in doing so, be driven further into spiritual exile than he would by settling abroad?

The other leading characters in the play are Robert Hand, a journalist and Richard's worldly friend; Bertha, the mother of Richard's son, Archie; and Beatrice Justice, a music teacher who is Richard's friend and Robert's cousin.

The powerful influence of Richard's mother and his attitude towards her death haunt him. The writer recalls how his mother died alone, having harboured contempt for his affairs of the heart, and without forgiving him.

In retrospect, Richard sees his many ignoble actions and sins against Bertha and their young son. He is surrounded by their innocence and his own guilt, and realizes that he has wounded his soul—a deep wound which can never be healed.

Exiles will be produced for CBC Wednesday Night by Rupert Caplan.

of his music with any accuracy. One always feels that it should be so much better than it really is, and he again and again disappoints us by an inability to carry his ideas clearly through an extended work. The Violin Concerto is certainly one of his more successful efforts, and I am delighted to see that the soloist is to be Frederic Grinke, who was for ten years concertmaster of the Boyd Neel Orchestra, leading it through some of its most exciting experiences, including appearances at the Salzburg Festival and the tour around the world in 1947. Grinke, who hails from Winnipeg, was one of nine Canadians who played for many years in the orchestra and it is good to be able to welcome him back to his native land.

At the same concert, Schumann's First Symphony is in the program and this sunny and cheerful composition has been aptly nicknamed Spring Symphony. Schumann's symphonies are always a problem for the conductor because the composer helps him not a jot with obtaining clarity and balance. Orchestration was not one of Schumann's strong points and Mahler became so exasperated with these scores that he actually re-orchestrated all four of them. Today, we often hear them played in Mahler's orchestration, but I have no idea if this will be the case on Sunday evening. When I refer to Mahler's "re-orchestration," perhaps I am not using exactly the correct term. What Mahler did was really to alter the texture and balance, rather than to change the actual instrumental colour used by Schumann. He was too good and conscientious an artist to do anything else.

On Tuesday evening from Montreal (Dominion and French networks) we should hear the Mass in

B minor of Bach sung in magnificent fashion, as the four soloists could hardly be bettered today.

Readers will be beginning to wonder whether I am playing fair in this column by asking for performances of certain works which, by the most strange coincidence, appear, as if by magic, a week or so later! I can swear that these truly are pure coincidences, as I myself have no idea what the programs for the coming weeks are to be. You will remember that one week I put in a plea for the Mendelssohn Sextet and, sure enough, it appeared two weeks later. This time it is the Spohr Nonet, which I asked for a week or so ago, and here it is on CBC Wednesday Night from Vancouver! This is something not to be missed if you enjoy, as most of us do, music superbly put together and full of the joy of life.

On Friday afternoon (Vancouver String Orchestra) I see down for performance the Serenade for Strings by Leonard Berkeley. This is a work of which I had the pleasure of conducting the first performance in London, since when it has achieved quite a popularity all over the world. Here again is clear, sane music, written by one who has a mastery of the string medium. It shows the French influence to a certain extent (Berkeley studied with Ravel), but is none the worse for that, and we could do with more string works today which are written as gracefully as this one.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Home-building is one of Canada's growing industries; in many Canadian cities, the supply of new housing doesn't keep up with the demand. And almost every Canadian thinks, at one time or another, of building or buying a house. Today, to usher in the summer upsurge in the house-building industry, Barrie Clark of Vancouver introduces a new Matinee series, "The House That Barrie Built." In six broadcasts, Mr. Clark will examine every facet of home-building, from financing through selection of a builder, specifications and actual construction to decorating and landscaping. He will include interviews with a Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation official, a real estate agent, a compliance inspector, a color dynamics consultant and a landscaper. In his first broadcast, Mr. Clark discusses financing of a house, selection of an agent and a builder, the benefits to the builder from the Central Mortgage and Housing and the National Housing acts, subdivisions and the selection of a building lot, and talks to some experts in the industry. Mr. Clark is a young Vancouver radio announcer, has written for a weekly newspaper, and does freelance writing and broadcasting. He is married and has two children.

Today's program also features a talk by Cecil Woodham Smith entitled "The Father of Modern Cooking." The availability of large quantities of well-cooked food in modern restaurants, industrial cafeterias, and in institutions is taken for granted by people today. But in the early 19th century, when Alexis Soyer moved to England from France, cooking on such a large scale was non-existent. Mr. Soyer was a cook, an artist, indeed—but he recognized the need to develop techniques which provide large numbers of people with nourishing, palatable foods. His theories were put to the test during the Crimean War and he earned the following lasting tribute from his famous contemporary, Florence Nightingale: "His death is a great disaster. Others have studied cooking for the purpose of gourmandizing (that is, of greed), and others for show, but none but he for the purpose of cooking large quantities of food in the most nutritious manner for large numbers of men. He has no successor." Cecil Woodham Smith, author of "Florence Nightingale" and "The Reason Why" talks about Alexis Soyer. The talk has been re-recorded for the CBC by the BBC.

Today's news commentary is by Isabel Wilson of Toronto. Pat Gallagher plays more of her favourite recordings, and Charles Telling continues his readings from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

these lines. However, it is not necessary that our productions should always be embroidered with the full trappings of music, sound effects, and microphone gimmicks (indeed, these devices should never be used unless they serve an essential artistic purpose, and all too often they're used as clichés). There remains a place for a less elaborate style of presentation, a style that concentrates entirely on the value of the text and the skill of the reading. It is possible for this style, if the text is well chosen, to be truly dramatic, in the sense of suspending disbelief; but it is also a good style for broadcast play-reading, as distinct from play-performances.

With this in mind the CBC has asked me to produce a weekly series of programs based on this technique. The series, which begins on April 18, will be called Four's Company and will feature a newly founded Toronto drama quartet: its members are Diana Maddox, Ruth Springfield, John Drainie, and Mavor Moore; and they will be assisted each week by guest artists.

Four's Company cannot be called a drama series in any strict sense of the term. Admittedly, we hope to include such plays as The Importance of Being Earnest from time to time, but much of the series will be less like a drama than a good conversation, a sharing of books. For example, we are starting with the Book of Job; in May we shall devote a program to the Art of Courting, illustrated with scenes, advises, warnings, and reminiscences from Ovid to today; in July we shall examine a hysterically controversial cause célèbre through the scrupulously objective eyes of a Supreme Court Justice; and in August we shall do some scenes from picaresque novels. This will give some idea of the variety we are aiming for, both in the source of the material and in its content. As Mavor Moore says on the opening program: "Quite often we hope the material will be amusing; sometimes it'll be serious; but when it is we hope it won't be stuffy." That seems to me to sum the matter up.
