We've Had A Birthday

One year ago this week the first copies of the new, enlarged CBC Times were mailed to subscribers and put on the newsstands.

And we're both proud and happy to be able to report a year of phenomenal growth. The prairie edition of the CBC Times has, in fact, become one of the three most widely-read weeklies published exclusively for prairie residents.

We appreciate the interest and support of our many listeners and viewers, and to mark the first anniversary of the new format we've arranged a

SPECIAL OFFER

UNTIL DECEMBER 31, 1959—$3.00 for two one-year subscriptions, $1.50 for each additional one-year subscription. Subscriptions due to expire before January, 1960 (indicated on mailing label) may be renewed at this special rate if a new subscription is submitted with the renewal. (Regular rates—indicated elsewhere on this page—will apply to single subscriptions).

Back on the air —→ “In a trice, nay in a thrice” THE GOONS (this Thursday in fact)

THERE may be some people listening to this program who have never heard The Goon Show. Many will have heard it and made nothing of it. And there will be others who, like me, consider it almost the ultimate triumph of radio.

The Goons have used sound with such originality that they have created something like a new language, in the same way that Al Capp has created a new language in the comic strip, Li'l Abner. Indeed, one of England's best literary critics has said (albeit lightheartedly) that in their extraordinary use of language the Goons are the sole successors to James Joyce.

But what they have also done is to bring into the living room the sort of crazy inverted logic that one finds occasionally in the best stories of James Thurber. Thurber manages to be both funny and tragic. His characters are worked upon by a cruel Providence that turns the logical sequence of events upside down, and leaves them (since they are normal men and women) stranded and confused.

There is none of this tragic note in the Goons. They create their own crazy environment and are always in complete mastery of it. Nothing catches them unawares. If some word in the dialogue catches their fancy they are quite likely to rush off on some mad tangent, nagging at a new idea until they leave it helpless on the ropes.

On one program, for example, the Goons found that one of their characters, Moriarty, was lying on the road. Someone asked, “What is that piece of junk lying in the road?” and the word “junk” was enough to set them off. Neddy Seagoon set off, as a matter of fact, “in a flash, in a trice—nay, in a thrice,” pointed north, riding a water buffalo in search of the identity of the junk.

The next thing we knew we were in a court where the junk was officially declared treasure, and then it was being stolen from the official safe of the Bank of England by Moriarty himself. Seagoon bought up all the junk in England and stored it in a monster warehouse where a man had formerly kept his wife. Why his wife? Because, said the man, she's a monster. Seagoon finally traced the piece of junk he sought to a cave three miles from the Corsican coast where it was on sale for eight pounds, six feet four inches. At this point British junk was devalued, Seagoon was ruined, and the half hour was up.

A word of warning

Now this, of course, is nonsense. But it is inspired nonsense, and the Goons are as fertile in their use of language as in their plots and extraordinary sounds. “I was nearer to him than you,” claimed one character, and then he added with loony irrelevance, “and you were further away.”

“This junk has only a sentimental value,” said a character. “Yes,” said Seagoon, “but that sentimental value is worth money.”

“Odds bodkins, how can we sink so low? A low sink is the right height for you, sir.”

In short, if you are one of those people who appreciate wild irrelevancy, slapstick, upside-down nonsense; if you like Chaplin, the Marx Brothers, Jacques Tati, and sometimes a little corn, do try the Goons. I feel sure you will find that they have a rare and wonderful genius.

The three Goons are Spike Milligan (who is co-author of the script with Larry Stephens), Peter Sellers and Harry Secombe. Milligan plays the roles of Eccles, Miss Minnie Bannister, and Moriarty. Born in India, where his father was an officer in the British Army, he later moved with his family to Burma (where his schoolboy activities included climbing his school's 300-foot steeple) and Ceylon. His first job in England was in an engineering works, but after getting his hair caught in a machine he lost his enthusiasm for industry and tried being a van boy, draughtsman and salesman before becoming a double-bass player in a dance hall. Writing music, painting and gardening are his favourite hobbies.

A Popular Gift At Christmas

Take advantage now of our special anniversary offer—CBC Times for $1.50 per year for each of two or more subscriptions. (See page 2 for full details).

Many people send CBC Times as a Christmas reminder. If you request it, just before Christmas we will send a gift card bearing your name, and delay the mailing of the CBC Times until after Christmas. With one gift subscription or more you may renew your own subscription at the $1.50 rate, provided it is due to expire before January, 1960.

Long after the local beaches were littered with ladies clad in bikinis and far more revealing costumes than anything depicted in the Glanyafon Art Gallery, the Custodians continued to group their Nudes in a special room where they might be studied by the student with less inconvenience to the General Public.—Wynford Vaughan Thomas speaking in the BBC's General Overseas Service program "Small Talk."

He didn't intend to be an entertainer, his own guests often outshine him in versatility, his voice plays tricks with him, he has no sense of rhythm, and he's almost 50. Why is he the most popular of all male vocalists?

Mr. C. Thanks Lady Luck

PERRY COMO is the seventh son of a seventh son—a legendary sign of good luck. Lady Luck is a gal he often quotes, although his fans believe in a thing called talent. But whatever it's called, it has made Perry Como a million-dollar-a-year star.

Born 47 years ago to Italian immigrants who had settled in Canonsburg, a small Pennsylvania mining town, he was the first of their 13 children to be a citizen of the U.S. by birth.

Perry's first ambition, it's well known, was to be the best barber in Canonsburg. At 10 he became an apprentice, and by the time he was 14 Perry opened his own shop as an after-school money maker, and when he graduated from high school he turned it into a profitable enterprise. It was a small town where he knew all his customers by name, and where it wasn't strange for a barber to sing while clipping hair or stop to strum a guitar because he was in the mood.

In 1933 Perry went to Cleveland on a two-week vacation. While there his friends urged him to audition for Freddy Carlone, a bandleader well known throughout Ohio. Perry agreed, more as a concession to his friends than from any desire to get into showbusiness. A few weeks later he was offered a job at $28 a week. It was a hard decision for the young barber. During a good week his own shop was bringing in $125 a week. The depression years had just begun, and security was a hopeless word. But his parents convinced him he could always pick up where he left off at the shop if the singing business folded.

So Perry married his childhood sweetheart, Roselle Belline, and moved to Cleveland where, during the next two years, he built up a following and learned poise, the intricacies of sheet music, and how to adjust to the strange night-time life of a musician.

In 1936 Perry almost doubled his salary—to an overwhelming $50 a week — by joining Ted Weems and his band. The tie-up with Weems marked Perry's first tentative steps toward the top. It was with him that Perry reached Broadway, made his radio debut and his first recordings.

Back to Barbering?

As recently as 1942, when the Weems band broke up, Perry seriously considered going back to barbering. Since the birth of his first child, Ronnie, two years earlier, travelling with a band had its drawbacks. In an attempt to maintain family life Roselle and Ronnie joined Perry on the road, but the parents knew that this was not the way to raise a boy. When the Weems band folded, Perry was flooded with wires and phone calls from booking agents and bandleaders, but Perry was more interested in trying to work out a deal with a Canonsburg real estate man for a barber shop. General Artists Corporation offered Perry a deal two hours earlier than the real estate man—$100 a week for a CBS radio show and an RCA Victor recording contract.

It was not long until those who had known Perry Como only as "Ted Weems' vocalist" woke up one morning to find that Perry was one of the hottest properties in showbusiness. In 1945 he established a record by selling over a million copies of 'Till the End of Time, and in a single week during 1946 four million Como recordings were turned out, surpassing the output of any artist in the history of record-making.

Perry's popularity was not only immediate, but also lasting. He stayed with his first sponsor for 11 years—five years on radio (five times a week), one year on radio and television (half-hour of each per week), and five years on TV alone (three 15-minute programs a week).

12-Year Contract

The five-year-old, 15-minute TV shows on CBS ended in May, 1955, when Perry signed an unprecedented 12-year contract with NBC-TV. He is also under two-year contract with his present sponsor.

In spite of the fact that he no longer does cross-country tours,

Today Perry operates in luxurious offices high up in the Americas Building of New York's Rockefeller Centre. A recent count of the staff involved with the production of a Como show totalled 248. The Perry Como Show is owned and "packaged" by Perry in the name of Roncom Productions — an abbreviation of his eldest son's name — Ronnie Como.

Although in spite of his heavy schedule he's relaxed and easy-going, Perry once told a newspaperman who commented on his

CBC Premieres British Series On Australia

CBC-TV's new Friday night film series, Flying Doctor, is a Commonwealth effort. Made by a British company and filmed in Australia, it got its first showing in Canada. The 39-week series started on October 2.

Australia's wild, thinly settled and partially unexplored outback, where isolated farm homes are sometimes 500 miles apart, is the 2,000,000 square mile setting for Flying Doctor.

American actor Richard Denning stars in the adventure series as an American doctor on loan to the Royal Flying Doctor Service. Co-starring in the series are Peter Madden, a BBC actor whose television experience dates back to 1938, Australian actor Alan White, and British TV actress Jill Adams.

Richard Denning signed with Paramount Pictures in 1937, served for four years in the U.S. Navy, then played leading roles in 23 Hollywood movies. He co-starred with Lucille Ball in the series My Favourite Husband, and later played the male lead in the Mr. and Mrs. North series which ran for 14 years on radio and five years on television in the U.S.

Flying Doctor is produced and directed by David Macdonald, a former associate of Cecil B. DeMille. Now one of Europe's most experienced television directors, he has made movies in both Hollywood and England. His wartime documentary, Desert Victory, won him an Oscar award.

casual manner: "I'm not relaxed. I'm just tired!"

Perry and Roselle (he met his wife at a weiner roast in his home town) live with their three children (aged 19, 13, and 12) in a rambling home on Sands Point, Long Island.

The Comos prefer the no-tie, informal type of entertaining in the kitchen or at the outdoor grill. The food is prepared by Roselle or Perry, or both. (True to his Italian heritage Perry loves spaghetti, but has to watch the scales.) His heavy rehearsal schedule doesn't allow him to get home until 7:30 or 8:00 p.m. But he considers having worked half a day if he can be home in time for dinner with his family.

The Como vacations are simple: golf, fishing, motor trips. An ardent golfer, Perry shoots in the 70's and will play in any kind of weather. Perry once compared his golf game to his general attitude. "I walk slow, take it nice and easy. I'm not going anywhere." A frequent foursome on the golf course is Perry, his conductor Mitch Ayres, brother-in-law Dee Belline, and Mickey Glass, manager of Perry's music publishing business.

Perry's mother still lives in Canonsburg, and when the family gathered around the table last Thanksgiving Day they tried to explain to her how much financial success Perry had gained. This was because, like all mothers, she thought the children had bought her gifts that were far too extravagant. She listened calmly as one of Perry's brothers explained the huge record sales and his large television salary. She nodded and then said precisely: "Any man who makes seventy-five dollars a week steady, that man makes a good living." This was her gentle rebuke to the boys for what she thought was youthful exaggeration.

(3) The Turning Point—Moochie confesses he left his paint brush in the barn and the calf must have eaten it. (4) Newsreel—visit to Judo school in Japan. (5) A dog in Colorado plays baseball. (6) Children visit puppet clown show in Arts Theatre, Leicester Square, London. (7) A skyway trip over Disneyland. (8) Dutch children demonstrate twin bicycles. Jimmie Dodds says: "Let Your Hair Down."

CBWT—How About That!

This week Jim Mitchell presents a British film entitled "Song of the Clouds," telling the story of the world's airline industry. A Canadian airline captain will be on hand to talk about the International Air Transport Association—"IATA."

CBWT—Spotlight

Guests tonight include Johnny Horton, a Western singer and Roger Tilbury of England and James Gordon of Scotland who are meeting representatives of Canadian Universities in debates. They will be debating against two students from the University of Manitoba on Tuesday, November 3.

Let's Look

This week Donald Crowdis shows that such things as dust and smoke are very necessary parts of nature and shows what would happen if we were suddenly left without them.

Science All Around Us

This week the program takes a cue from Hallowe'en and deals with owls. How they live, why they should be considered our friends, and how they figure in fact and fable. Several different kinds of owls will be on camera, from the smallest in Eastern Canada, to the more familiar screech owl.

Youth '60

What goes on in the newspaper world? — what kind of a career is journalism? These are two topics which this week's show will touch on as it devotes itself to newspapers and the men and women who work for them. Guests will be Gordon Sinclair and Pierre Berton; Helen Palmer, women's editor of the Toronto Star; Jim Vipond, of the Globe and Mail sports' section; Albert Van, press photographer, and Frank Mazarra, editor of the youth section, Globe and Mail. Host is Tommy Common. From Toronto.

Don Messer's Jubilee

Special guest this week is dancer Eddy Borgeault. Marg Osburne sings My Happiness and Bill Bailey Won't You Please Come Home? The Buchta Dancers dance to The Royal Princess Two-Step and the Teenagers' Calypso. The Islanders will play Caribou Reel, Big Noise From Winneka, and My Love is But a Lassie. Charlie Chamberlain sings The Same Old Shil-lelah. From Halifax.

Riverboat

Life on the Mississippi in the 1840's, starring Darren McGavin and Burt Reynolds. This week—"A Night at Trapper's Landing." The Enterprise is requisitioned to take a platoon of soldiers to quell an Indian uprising. The boat goes aground and the men aboard find themselves at the mercy of the Indians.

Music '60

This week — The Jack Kane Hour, with Jack Kane and his orchestra, vocalist Sylvia Murphy, and emcee Bill Walker. This week's guests—Walter Susskind, pianist and conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Winnipeg's Alan Blye, and Metropolitan Opera soprano Patrice Munsel. Miss Munsel was just 18 when she won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air in 1943 and became the youngest singer ever to win a Met contract. In 1951 her TV debut was such a success that she won her own weekly series. In her hometown — Spokane, Washington, she showed equal versatility: she studied rhythmic whistling, was a Camp Fire Girl, and was captain of a girls' football team. She will sing "I Enjoy Being a Girl" from Rodgers and Hammerstein's Flower Drum Song.

Susskind will make his debut as a jazz musician, and the entire cast will offer a musical tribute to the late George Gershwin.

The Town Above

Roger Lemelin's series about the problems of a French Canadian famil, the Chevaliers, who live beyond their means in the exclusive "upper town" of Quebec City. Starring Roland Chenail as Fred Chevalier, Denise Pelletier as his wife, and Louis Turenne, Catherin Begin and Yvon Thiboutot as their teen-age children. From Montreal.

CBWT—Happyland

With Jake Park and his polka band, and singers Kerr Wilson and Donna Andert. Ernest Mutimer, producer. From Winnipeg. (Sundays on affiliated stations).

Chez Helene

Helene Baillargeon presents French lessons for pre-schoolers. From Montreal.

Nursery School Time

Songs and stories for pre-schoolers, with Miss Madeleine (Madeleine Arbour). From Montreal.

Open House

ARTIST IN THE KITCHEN. Have you read any cook books lately? Ruth Fremes will report to Open House viewers during this year, on some of the cook books she keeps on her kitchen shelf.

ON THE MAP. Although the war has been over for many years, the homeless, the stateless, live by the thousands in camps all over the world. Paul Fox will discuss this with his guest today.

CHILD'S PLAY. It's quite easy for your child to make an attractive miniature garden even if you live in a crowded miniature apartment, as Peggy Austin will demonstrate today.

The Friendly Giant

This week's theme is "Lots and lots of hats." Jerome will have a selection to try on, and Rusty, not to be outdone, will have some too. They get the idea from a book that Friendly is going to read called "Caps for Sale." There is nothing like a hat to make one look different, and Jerome and Rusty are going to vie with each other in a friendly game as they see what chapeau suits them best.

Maggie Muggins

It's seven league boots for Fitzgerald this week, as he sets out to see the world. The trouble is, he is the only one taking the trip seriously. And that's not his only trouble. Seven league boots are all very well, but it's one thing to put them on; another to get them off the ground. Fitzgerald finds himself at the bottom of a river, with fish for company, and Maggie is hard put to rescue him.

On Safari

(1) Game Plains of Kenya—Armand and Michaela Denis focus their cameras on the zebras, gazelles, ostriches of these plains—all of which are accompanied by their young. (2) Three cheetahs are shown using almost telepathic insight as they plan an attack. (3) Minnie's Babies — The Denis' pet mongoose loses some of her babies to a night killer. Armand sets out to catch the killer.

Sky King

The adventures of a flying rancher starring Kirby Grant. This week—"Feather Serpent." Sky and Penny become involved with a carrier pigeon, an emerald and a gang of smugglers.

CBWT—Spotlight

The second in a new series of Chamber of Commerce programs also (tentatively scheduled) an interview with a Winnipeg private detective.

Another Special By Fred Astaire

Another Evening with Fred Astaire comes live to CBC-TV this Wednesday. Appearing with the No. 1 U.S. dancer is Barrie Chase, the girl who burst into overnight fame (after twenty years of hard practice) on the first Fred Astaire TV special last year.

"An hour that will rank among the great contemporary theatre nights in any media," said Jack Gould, famed critic of the New York Times when reviewing the first Astaire special.

Astaire has partnered some of the most beautiful dancers in show-business. His sister Adele, Ginger Rogers, Eleanor Powell, Paulette Goddard, Marjorie Reynolds, Rita Hayworth, Judy Garland, Leslie Caron and Cyd Charisse. Which has been his favourite partner?

"I don't live in the past," he has said. "It wouldn't be fair to name any one girl."

As for his partnership with Ginger Rogers, probably the most famous of them all: "One of my great privileges was to dance with Ginger. But I'd rather not get onto that subject. There are some areas that I shy away from. And that's one of them."

But Astaire certainly is not shy about extolling the merits of Barrie Chase. Asked about future plans after his first TV smash hit he said, "If I do a television show next season maybe I'll be lucky enough to get Barrie again. It is rare to find somebody who moves so—'individually.' You can't compare her with anyone I ever danced with. She has a style all her own."

Chevy Show

This week Dinah Shore welcomes columnist Art Buchwald, Eddie Constantine, Diane Dayde, Marcel Marceau, Les Marottes and Michel Renault.

Startime—Dean Martin Show

An hour of comedy and song with guest stars Frank Sinatra and Mickey Rooney. Program includes a 22-tune medley of Rodgers and Hart hits sung by Dean and Frank, solos by each, a soliloquy and solo by Rooney, and a comedy sketch in which Sinatra replaces David Rose as conductor of the orchestra. Also featured on the show is the youthful dance team of Augie and Margo. Martin, Sinatra and Rooney open the program with a Jubilee Time medley that includes Great Day, Hallelujah, September Song, Sunny Side Up, Everything is Fine and Dandy, I'll Never Smile Again, and When You're Smiling.

Press Conference

Leading journalists question a government official or well-known public figure on important issues in the news. From Ottawa.

Program Changes

At press time the schedules printed on this page were correct. However, some of the evening programs will be pre-empted by the second W.I.F.U. semi-final.

Open House

NEW FACES. Watching the hair-dresser set pin curls so quickly and seeing him brush out a "set," you've probably watched to see how he does it. To give you a closer look, a hair-dresser joins Lydia today.

TRIBES, TOTEMS, TEPEES . . . THE SOUTH SETTLES DOWN. Walter Kenyon's series on North American Indians and their development.

KEEP IN TRIM. Gwen Vernon . . . exercise while you do your house chores.

Our Miss Brooks

interest in the conductor, Mr. Boynton.

Friendly Giant

Today's theme is the circus. Friendly is reading a book about a circus called "Small Trot." Rusty gets in a circus mood with a guitar and Jerome, not to be outdone, proves he is a real "hooper" by doing a tap dance. His versatility is demonstrated by his blowing bubbles.

Art in Action

The basic principles of Art, with Prof. George Swinton. Private stations this week carry the fifth program of the series — "The Practical Applications of Texture, Tone and Colour," in which Prof. Swinton analyzes these three factors in relation to their major function — the life of form in art. CBWT carries the sixth program in the series — "Insight Into Le Corbusier," the 20th century's most exciting architect. The Canadian premiere of his works is being held in Winnipeg. Frank Rasler, producer. From Winnipeg.

CBWT—Spotlight

The Winnipeg Ballet Auction is the subject of tonight's interview.

R.C.M.P.

Second program of a new filmed series about the work of a typical small R.C.M.P. detachment. This week — "The Accused," by George Salverson. A chain of apparently unrelated events adds up to irrefutable evidence that an R.C.M.P. officer (Constable Frank Scott) has assaulted one of Shamattawa's leading citizens. Cast: Gilles Pelletier as Corporal Jacques Gagnier; John Perkins as Constable Frank Scott; Dan Francks as Constable Mitchell; George Alexander as Martin Kovak; Eric Endersby as Howie Jacks, and Cec Linder as Dr. Wright.

Another Evening with Fred Astaire

A 60-minute dance spectacular starring Fred Astaire with his new sensational dancing partner Barrie Chase. (See story page 11).

The Unforeseen

This week — "Checkmate," by Michael Dyne, starring John Colicos as a young count who challenges the King to a game of chess against his mechanical chess player.

Explorations

This week — "The Logic of Life," the first of three programs devoted to a study of the survival of the fittest. (see story this page).

Wednesday on "Explorations"

"The Logic of Life"

A three-part series by LISTER SINCLAIR
on the survival of the fittest

THE INDIVIDUAL mates and has its young, then dies. But the species goes on. If the species fails in adapting to change, it dies. But life itself goes on, working through more successful species. The logic of life is ruthless: a sequence of migration and courtship whose failure can lead to extinction.

Courtship involves finding a mate, and, for the male, the fighting off of rivals. The deer, for instance, grows his antlers each year anew, at first wrapped in soft, protective velvet. But when fall frosts bring the rutting season the velvet has been scraped off and the antlers will attract a mate by their massive branches, or lock savagely with a rival; sometimes they lock permanently and the two struggling animals starve slowly to death.

The marine worm called Platynereis also does its courting. Great numbers of male worms dance around the female till eggs are ejected and fertilized. The male of the fiddler crab beckons with its enormous claw and the female follows into the mud hole. Crocodiles bellow loudly in front of the female and exude a smell of musk. And the lapwing makes its courtship flight in the air.

Successful courtship involves the right mate in the right place at the right time. To mate successfully, many creatures must migrate.

Each fall the delicate Monarch butterfly mass migrates to the south from Ontario—at least as far south as Galveston, Texas. An Arctic tern, tagged in the polar north, was seen in Africa, and scientists found the species makes an annual flight to the Antarctic and back.

The so-called muttonbird migrates from Stewart Island, the most southerly of the three islands of New Zealand, to Siberia. On its return it flies to above its last season's nest, then simply stops flying, plummets maybe fifty feet to the ground (accurately but violently) and waddles, unperturbed, to its nest a few feet away.

The very young salmon leaves its West Coast stream, moves down into the larger rivers and out into the Pacific. Maybe three years later, sexually mature, it returns up

"Close-Up" on "The Jew in Canada"

Forty Canadian Jews tell of their rich heritage and of the discrimination—both "blunt" and "polite"—experienced by all but one of them

"I DON'T KNOW what he thought a Jew was," says Alec Richmond, a young London, Ont., lawyer, in the one-hour film to be shown November 5 on Close-Up.

It had come up in conversation that Richmond was a Jew. His friend was amazed.

"He must have thought to be Jewish I would have to have a long beard and a long hooked nose and greasy curls, curly sideburns. I don't know what he expected."

Richmond's story is typical of the experiences reported by many of the 40-odd Jews in the Close-Up film.

All feel the pluralistic Canadian society is the best possible for any minority group. But most report special difficulties, "polite" anti-Semitism, blunt discrimination as a part of their lives.

Only one says nobody discriminates against him—"it may be because of my size." He's Al Passman, a six-foot-four, 245 pound centre for Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen of the O.R.F.U.

But Mrs. Shirley Strauss of Kitchener, Ont., tells:

"When I was in school I was running for president of the school council and a friend of mine was on the committee. And she was asking some of the students who they would vote for and one of them said, 'I guess I'll vote for Shirley, but my father would have a fit if he knew I was voting for a Kike.' And that happened."

And Jack Pascoe, of Toronto, recalls an incident in the Air Force.

"I was billeted with a French boy. We got to know each other periences, feelings, thoughts and hopes of Jews living in Canada. (See story this page).

The Man From Blackhawk

This week Sam Logan (Robert Rockwell) investigates a widow suspected of murdering her two husbands.

very well. A little while later I noticed he was very cool to me and I asked him why he wasn't talking to me any more. He finally comes out and says to me, 'You're a Jew, aren't you?' I said, 'Yes, I am; what about it?' He says, 'You killed Christ.'

That, says Pascoe, was the end of the friendship.

But Close-Up's report on The Canadian Jew is no mere recital of discriminatory thought and action. Jewish men and women tell of the rich significance of the Jewish faith and religious holidays, the strength the Jew draws from his deep sense of humor, and the great importance he attaches to home and family.

The report makes clear the desire of most Canadian Jews for integration, rather than assimilation. And they find in Canada a climate which favours integration instead of the melting-pot.

Says Rabbi Reuben Slonim, a Toronto newspaperman:

"In Canada there are many groups of people and cultures, like a diamond. And the Jew makes up a small facet of that diamond. But the more brightly he shines, the more brilliance does he add to the sparkle of that diamond."

Saul Hayes, of Montreal, national executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, puts the same thought a different way: "... Everyone is part of a great orchestra. And the beautiful music that's produced is because the violinist isn't anything else but a violinist, and the trombone player is only a trombone player."

Still-young Canadian Jews recall that only 20 years ago—as Rabbi David Monson, of Toronto, says—"my grandfather on his wagon, with his beard, would be stoned by Christian children."

They see the dramatic decline in anti-Semitism as a result, in part, of the war. Hitler helped people to see anti-Semitism for what it was. The birth of the state of Israel helped too; it gave the Jew a new honour and dignity.

Ralph Hyman, a Toronto newspaperman, sees a third factor: "There's been a different type of Jew growing up in this country. Third or fourth or fifth generation. He's a Canadian of the Jewish faith. He lacks, in many cases, a Semitic appearance, or what is called 'Jewishness.' He is part of the community. And it's difficult to hate people when those people in their everyday life are no different from others."

But, as Rabbi Stuart E. Rosenberg, of Toronto, puts it, the Jew is "empathetic."

"Somebody else's face is slapped somewhere else," he says, "and the Jew feels it... We're thin-skinned, you see, morally thin-skinned."

And Rabbi Rosenberg says of the anti-Jewish feeling that still exists:

"We're not concerned about the chap who is a 'no-gooder,' as it were, (but) about the fine people, the lovely people, the wonderful, the generous people who still have not yet been educated morally. There's something missing in the education of their hearts; they want to destroy themselves—not only those whom they would victimize."

"That is something that hurts very deeply."

Meet Your N.H.L. Stars

First in a new series of sketches of N.H.L. stars to be seen in action on Saturday night telecasts on the CBC-TV network

1. BOB PULFORD

The Toronto Maple Leafs came a long way during the 1958-59 season. So did Bob Pulford—and that may be one of the reasons for the Leaf's success.

Pulford moved up to Toronto from the Leafs junior organization in 1956-57 and it would be flattering to say he had even an ordinary season. He scored 11 goals and assisted on 11 more as the Leafs finished out of the play-offs. The following year Pulford, who still looked like a borderline pro, bagged 14 goals and 17 assists and again the Leafs put away their skates before the play-offs.

But patience and Pulford paid off last season. The big, rugged forward broke into the charmed 20-goal circle with 23, the second highest total on the club. Twelve play-off games earned him another 4 goals and 4 assists. In addition, he helped give the Leafs a reliable penalty killing unit and became quite a scoring threat even while the Leafs were shorthanded.

Pulford's improvement as an all-round player and leader in the Leafs' youth movement was recognized by fans and officials alike for he was named co-winner (with George Armstrong) of the J. P. Bickell Memorial Trophy, awarded

Hound vs. Art

• I wish to register the strongest of protests at the rescheduling of Huckleberry Hound to 4:30 p.m. on CBWT. Yesterday after risking life and limb driving through 5:00 p.m. traffic I arrived home at 5:30 to find Huck replaced by Art in Action. Having been remotely involved in CBC affairs since the days of the old CRBC, I realize your aim is to ram culture down our throats whether we like it or not, and as such I have stoutly defended your position, but this is too much. Gentlemen, you are now faced with a crisis. Return Huck to the 5:30 p.m. slot or face revolution. —H. V. R., St. Boniface, Man.

Sorry, but Huck's a network program; the time change was not made by CBWT. We hope that revolution may be averted by the fact that to the year's most valuable Leaf player.

Toronto coach "Punch" Imlach has been quoted as saying he "wants no Lady Byng Trophy winners on his team." He needn't worry about Pulford on that score. The 23-year-old 186-pounder loves the game's rough body contact and although he's not a heavily-penalized player he probably hits as hard and as often as any other forward in the league.

Born in Simcoe County, Ontario, Bobby Pulford has been in the Maple Leaf organization throughout his young hockey career. He came up through the ranks of the Cameron Minor Midgets and Midgets; the Weston juveniles and Junior B's and the Toronto Marlboro Junior A's. In two consecutive seasons 1954-55 and 1955-56 he helped the Marlies to Memorial Cup victories.

After last season's display there's a "guaranteed can't miss" label on Mr. Pulford of the Toronto Pulfords.—D. H. O'Neill.

H. V. R.'s children will be able to get home from school in time to see Huckleberry Hound and tell him about it.

• We are definitely looking forward to seeing more of Prof. Swinton's Art in Action programs. Our only complaint is that my husband has to rush home from the office a bit earlier than usual in order to see it, but I imagine that you can't do anything about making it possible for working men to catch the whole program.—Mrs. S. M. C., Winnipeg.

On the Cover

Bandleader Jake Park welcomes vocalists Donna Andert and Kerr Wilson to Happyland in this week's cover photo. The three are featured regularly on CBC Winnipeg's TV series "Happyland," seen Monday nights on CBWT, Sunday afternoons on the network.

"Everyone has a special memory of his own particular Happyland," says producer Ernie Mutimer, "be it the boardwalk at Sunnyside in Toronto or the miniature train in Vancouver's Stanley Park."

Winnipeg's Happyland was originally located in the west end of the city. Equally well remembered by Winnipeggers was old River Park—now a new housing development. There is still a Happyland Park in the Winnipeg district—in the Cathedral City of St. Boniface. It's supported by a local service club as part of its youth program.

"One of the nicest things about producing 'Happyland' is the number of interesting letters it prompts from old-timers," says producer Mutimer. "Everyone remembers an incident or two, and many of these will be finding their way in to subsequent shows."

"The program is strictly for fun. We're trying to present a show that is informal and friendly—not slick, one which will give the viewers as much pleasure as it gives the performers."

Although "Happyland" is a new network program, its principals are well known to a vast audience in both the U.S. and Canada through the popular radio series "Polka Party."

MUSIC ON RADIO

by DR. BOYD NEEL

A VERY interesting program is to be given on Saturday evening (Oct. 31) by the New York Philharmonic, in which Schoenberg's Klammersymphonie is to be played. This work has very few performances these days, which is a great pity because it is one of the historical monuments of music. Probably, as it is really chamber music, the large orchestras fight shy of performing it for economical reasons, as it leaves many of their players idle.

It dates from 1906 when it was given for the first time in Vienna and when Schoenberg was very little known outside inner musical circles. It is an historic document for several reasons. First, because it marks the first signs of Schoenberg's transition from 19th century romanticism, as it was then known, to his "new music," which was to become the great achievement of his later life. Secondly, it makes history because it was the first attempt by a composer to reduce the size of the orchestra which was then in fashion. The symphony orchestra had grown to such an extent that it was becoming, in the first place, uneconomical, and secondly, it had also become a kind of rule that composers were forced to write for this enormous body of players. Works such as Wagner's Siegfried Idyll and Reger's Serenade were conspicuous in their employment of small forces and Schoenberg's Kammersymphonie joins these in employing only fifteen solo instruments.

The composer has minute instructions at the beginning of his score as to how these players should be set out on the platform. Schoenberg remarks that, when played in a small hall, there would be only one player to each part, but when dean of the Royal Conservatory of Music, returns as our regular music columnist this week. Dr. Neel spent the summer in Europe.

performed in large halls, he insists that a specially arranged score be used, which will be "supplied by the publishers on request."

The work is played in one continuous movement and yet it has clearly defined sections as in the ordinary symphony. The arrangement of these is, however, curious. For instance, the development section of the first movement is placed between the Scherzo and Adagio, so that we get in effect the first movement with two episodes occurring during its course: the first being the Scherzo and the second the Adagio. The music is very complex, but extremely beautiful, and a listener who wishes an introduction to the mysteries of Schoenberg cannot do better than start with this very approachable masterpiece.

At the same concert we shall hear Also sprach Zarathustra of Richard Strauss. This gargantuan composition dating from 1896 is one of those works written towards the end of the 19th century which I just mentioned as using so vast an orchestra that things had begun to get out of hand. The title is taken from Frederick Nietzsche's great philosophical work of the same name and it has been criticized as being too flippant in its centre section for the deep profundities of the German philosopher's masterpiece. It seems to me that the critics of the work have entirely missed the point of Strauss's idea in making this centre section a lively waltz. After all, Man has his carefree moments of recreation and the exuberance of the Strauss music at this point expresses such emotions extremely well.

The work has a celebrated opening section which consists of a huge crescendo ending on a chord of C major for the entire orchestra and organ, which instrument has an important part in the score. Strauss has, however, for some reason, made the organ hold on the chord after the rest of the instruments have stopped. At a certain performance which I once attended, the crescendo duly took place, and the chord of C major was duly held with deafening uproar, the organ, of course, being inaudible in the general hubbub. The conductor cut the chord off with a flick of his baton and the organ was left alone playing a fortissimo chord of D flat major! So excruciatingly funny was this effect that the whole orchestra and audience burst out laughing, thus ruining the solemn effect of this impressive prelude.

On Wednesday night I am delighted to see that there is a program devoted to the memory of Ernest Bloch, in which the Piano Quintet is to be performed. I well remember the first performances of this work in the 1920's, when the composer's use of quarter tones caused quite a sensation at the time. In his score he has a special indication as to where he wishes these to be played. Today, of course, we hardly notice the quarter tones at all, so used have our ears become to far stranger sounds than these.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Burning the Midnight Oil. Joan Greenwood is a teacher in a Vancouver Night School. Last year about 29,000 people enrolled in the classes and came away with a smattering of astronomy or Japanese, confidence in bidding no-trump, a clue to calculus, or a wider knowledge of creative writing. The school board has received an award for its contribution to adult education, and the teachers have received another kind of award—a feeling of satisfaction. Today Joan Greenwood takes listeners to some typical night school classes.

So You're Elected! Today in the fifth of eight talks designed to help the club woman, Sallie Phillips describes the work of the club treasurer. Mrs. Phillips, a Vancouver housewife who has long been active in community groups and who has done her stint as treasurer, answers such questions as Where do you get the money? Where do you spend it? What about budgets?

Daily features . . . News commentary by Constance Garneau of Montreal, recorded music introduced by Ruby Mercer, and another episode in Marian Waldman's serial, "The Dancers," produced in Winnipeg by Gus Kristjanson.

W-3:33 pm K-2:33 pm X-2:33 pm

POST-NEWS TALK

Tonight—"The Best-off Farmers in Ireland." "The tourist mind," says Lyn Harrington, Toronto free-lance writer-broadcaster, "is unreliable. It has a trick of straining out the familiar, and noticing only difference." Mrs. Harrington, a seasoned traveller, is glad that she had two opportunities to observe life in the countryside of western Eire. Along with her first "tourist impressions" she is able to report on her more accurate second view. Nor is it simply a view of the road. She and her photographer husband visited a number of farm people, and among them found a wide variety in modes and standards of living. But despite all her enquiries and observations, she came back with one baffling question unanswered—and she leaves this puzzle with her audience in this talk.

Farm Forum Returns

Farmer's Biggest Challenge

20th season begins with a 90-minute study of the farmer's problem of adjusting to rapid technological changes and new agricultural policies

HARD-HITTING panel discussions and occasional thought-provoking dramas and documentaries will explore some of the Canadian farmer's current problems in the 20th season of National Farm Radio Forum, which returns to CBC radio this Monday night.

This year for the first time the Forums will be concerned with one theme—adjustment. "Because of the rapid changes in the food industry and the recent alterations in agricultural policy affecting farms," says producer Frank Nicholson, "it has become apparent that the biggest challenge facing the Canadian farmer this year is his ability to adjust to these changes. We have decided that all our discussions will centre around them. The CBC will explore all facets of each topic, and introduce some new techniques in presenting farm opinion."

The programs will be a half-hour in length, with the exception of the opening broadcast, which will be extended to 90 minutes and will involve over 200 farm people who are deeply concerned with the threat to their future on small farms. The program will originate in the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, at the scene of the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. The discussions will concern the special policies and programs needed to help the small farmer with problems. The broadcast will be divided into five segments. First there will be tape-recorded statements on the case for the small farmer by agricultural economists, farm organization leaders, and farmers. Then there will be a brief musical interlude by the Four Gentlemen male quartet. Next comes a 20-minute interval in which specially organized groups across the country will express their opinions and ask questions. You'll hear speakers in Vegreville, Alberta; Melville, Saskatchewan; Portage la Prairie, Manitoba; Shawville, Quebec; and the Nova Scotia Agricultural College in Truro. After more songs by the Four Gentlemen there will be a panel discussion of the problems of the small farmer, and the questions asked by the cross-country groups will be answered. Panelists include Gordon Greer, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture; Dr. W. E. Haviland, research director of the Ontario Farm Markets Enquiry Committee; Ed Nelson, president of the Farmers' Union of Alberta; and the chairman will be Doug Waterston, editor of the Farmers' Advocate.

lish at the University of Alberta. Tonight's talk touches on science fiction and such classics as Alice in Wonderland and Gulliver's Travels.

This week—the last of three talks by M. H. Scargill, professor of English at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, and chairman of the Canadian Linguistic Associations Dictionary Committee. Tonight Professor Scargill discusses the proposed Dictionary of Canadian English on Historical Principles. "Far from being dull," he says, "such a dictionary when completed will be a fascinating record of words and phrases which reflect the authentic history of this country."

POST-NEWS TALK

Tonight—"A Challenge from the Duke." Several times in recent months Canadians have received the same criticism: that in spite of one of the highest standards of living in the world, we are "unfit." No less a person than the Duke of Edinburgh has reminded us twice of our lack of good circulation and muscle-tone, and in many parts of the country people are beginning to feel that the challenge to get in better physical shape must be taken up with vigor. One of these groups is the Central Fitness Council of North Vancouver, led by its executive director, Harcourt Roy. The Council recently submitted a brief on the subject to the Canadian government, urging it to set up a National Fitness Council. In this talk Roy explains why he and his group feel so strongly on the subject, and urges the rest of us to get out of our rocking-chairs.

through the network of rivers to the same gravel beds in which it was hatched. There it spawns and, the species continued, the individual rots to death. Only the young are important.

The young European stork migrates before its elders, the New Zealand cuckoo not till some weeks after. Both arrive at their destination, yet neither knows what that destination is. More accurately: naturalists cannot explain how the birds know their destination.

Some say chance and trial-and-error. But too many birds home too quickly and too accurately over vast distances to make this plausible. Others say the creatures follow sensory clues, such as prevailing cloudbanks, thermal gradients, the colour of ocean water. But where could the European stork learn such clues without its parents?

Some say migrating animals have a sixth sense, yet no corresponding sense organ has been found. Others say birds home by using the earth's magnetism, but no one has managed to prove how.

The right mate in the right place at the right time: sometimes a creature requires conditions too strict for mating, and when some natural process interferes with those conditions, mating cannot take place.

A type of warbler must migrate to one and only one island in the Caribbean. Let a storm force it down elsewhere, and the bird will surely die. The koala bear of Australia can eat only one kind of leaf.

When a creature gets too specialized, changing conditions can extinguish the species. And often, the arrival of man is one of those changing conditions. The passenger pigeon, the bison, the whooping crane, the dinosaur, the moa, the dodo—all are extinct or near to extinction.

There are no insects on this list. They breed in very large numbers and if the individual cannot adapt rapidly, the species can. Often the largest animals fail to survive. One dinosaur stood nearly twenty feet high, with a stride of nine feet.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

The Kingdom of Food. From time to time on Matinee Kate Munro, a Toronto housewife, recalls her childhood days in Scotland. Today she remembers some of the delicious foods her childish palate encountered—scones fresh from the griddle, cock-a-Leekie soup, fruit dumpling, beef tea, and many others. Now that she thinks about it she can't remember why anyone ever said that Scottish food was stodgy and plain.

Fairy Tales. Ann Moray is a Washington resident who has a special interest in folk music, folk lore and fairies. She has some special knowledge about the "little people" too, which she confides to Maude Ferguson, former CBC morning commentator in Ottawa, and now wife of Canada's press councillor at the Canadian Embassy in Washington.

At Home With the Ancients. Anyone who thinks for a moment will realize that women were a power in Egypt. George Woodcock, Vancouver author and editor, reminds his listeners that although not every woman was a Cleopatra women's rights were a very real thing nevertheless. Women in ancient Egypt were, in fact, more independent than English women before 1882. In this Matinee talk, the third in a series of seven, Mr. Woodcock takes his listeners into the homes of the Egyptians.

PRAIRIE TALKS

This week—"The Harpies," a tourist's-eye view of India by A. D. Henry of Edmonton, with special reference to the kite-hawks which make themselves unwelcome guests at picnics and golf courses. "Ornithologists may have another name for them," Mr. Henry states. "The British soldiers certainly had."

The Face of Violence

A modern parable by J. Bronowski, winner of the 1951 Italia Prize

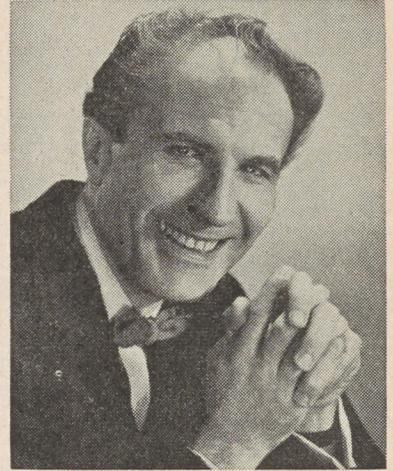

THE CULT of violence is explored this week in The Face of Violence, the second of the Italia Prize-winning dramas to be presented this season on CBC Wednesday Night.

The Face of Violence won the famed international radio drama award for J. Bronowski in 1951. It was originally produced on BBC by the distinguished drama director Douglas Cleverdon, friend and teacher of CBC's John Reeves, who will direct the CBC production from Toronto this week.

Dr. Bronowski, 51, lives in England where he combines the seemingly dissimilar careers of mathematician and poet. He knows the effect of violence from first-hand experience; after the Second World War he led an expedition of investigators to Hiroshima. In the foreword to the published edition of The Face of Violence he writes: "The notion of drawing a portrait of the motives and manifestations of violence in modern society first grew in my mind in 1947. From that time I began to put together material for it, mostly from records of anthropology and literature, because my plan was to unfold the drama of violence in the historical growth of society itself.

"Then, early in 1950, I saw that this was not the way to present the theme in speech, and that instead of the portrait, though informed by history, must be shown more directly and passionately. When this came home to me, I wrote the play of The Face of Violence headlong, in less than a month."

After its successful radio premiere, a critic writing in The Observer said: "This poetic exploration of human behaviour is a landmark in wireless revelation . . . The sheer invention of the narrative is matched by a brilliant image, epithet and association that transforms the topicality of the plays the leading role in "The Face of Violence." The Heavenly Twins are played by Ivor Barry and Mary Savage, and Tiny (the chief "spiv") by Henry Comor. Lucio Agostini will conduct the original score written for the BBC premiere by Anthony Hopkins.

theme into a vivid philosophical narrative."

The Face of Violence is extremely listenable, much of it being written in a loose-rhythmed, sardonically humorous style, changing from realism to symbolism, from generalities to specifics with a swift grace particularly suitable for the medium of radio. Two Heavenly Twins comment on the action throughout, and at the beginning one of them enquires what is in the paper. The other replies: "What? Oh, the usual patter. Two

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Best Foot Forward. Today in the sixth and final broadcast of Matinee's series on beauty and grooming, Sally Hamilton recapitulates her advice of previous lessons and reminds her listeners that a beauty regimen must be constantly maintained. Miss Hamilton is an advertising agency executive, writes a beauty column, and holds positions in several community and women's organizations.

School For Parents. Children are in constant touch with science in very many of its manifestations and a child has learned many scientific facts long before he arrives in the classroom. A child is full of curiosity—"Mommy, where does the sun go when it rains? What makes the toast pop in the toaster?" Today, in the sixth of nine talks Dr. S. R. Laycock tells how the good teacher takes advantage of this when planning science classes. Dr. Laycock is former dean of the college of education at the University of Saskatchewan, author of several books on parent education, and a well-known lecturer.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Ken McTaggart of Toronto, recorded music presented by David Ouchterlony, and another episode in Marian Waldman's serial, "The Dancers," produced in Winnipeg by Gus Kristjanson.

Brachiosaurus, the bulkiest land-living animal known, may have weighed around fifty tons.

But the dodo was no larger than a turkey. It lived in great numbers on Mauritius. Early explorers took at least 15 dodo to Europe, including one exhibited in London in 1683. But the same voyagers killed the clumsy flightless bird for food; by 1680 the dodo was extinct. Having himself killed off the species, man gave it the name Didus ineptus and also a sort of immortality by preserving a dodo's foot in the British Museum.

Man is not always successful in wiping out species. The Maori supposedly killed off all the New Zealand flightless bird called the notornis (or takahe). But in 1948, after fifty years of "extinction," colonies of the bird were found in lonely Fiordland. Maybe small varieties of the "extinct" flightless moa (largest variety stood about 15 feet) still hide in the vast, rugged, thick rain-forests in the south of the South Island.

Given man's failure to kill off the notornis, he may also fail to extinguish himself. This, suggests Lister Sinclair, in Logic of Life, is also a matter of adaptation, though cultural rather than biological.

Sinclair will be host on this three-part Explorations series, in which he will talk with John Livingstone, Executive Director of the Audubon Society of Canada. Producer is Norman Caton, program organizer, David Walker. The program will use stills and film.

boys beat up a woman in a train; the judge was very grave. There's a bigger bomb. A man's been found dead; they haven't got his head. You can make your own guess about Lake Success. They're setting up a Royal Commission on crime, and the forecast says rain. Does it matter?" And the other Twin answers: "It fixes the time." And the time is definitely the present.

Dr. Bronowski tells his tale in the form of a parable. The hero, Mark, cannot find inward peace because he is oppressed by an act of brutality he saw in a German prisoner-of-war camp some years before. He has a strong compulsion to hunt out the evil-doer, even though he cannot remember his face clearly, and is not sure of his name—it may be Crump. Because his memory of Crump is dredged with brutality and bitterness, he decides he must seek him in places where violence is at home.

He journeys into an alien society, to the haunts of criminals, and then into the company of circus freaks, and people whose minds and bodies are warped and twisted into hate. But slowly he sees that these forms of violence cannot answer the questions he has begun to ask: What is violence, and why? Now he knows that it is not "the venom of a pervert or a hunchback's spite," but the thwarted passions in every human heart that rise and strike. He turns to ordinary people, and there finds Crump. And he finds, too, that Crump has learned the only real lesson there is to learn in life, whereas Mark himself has been turned into a creature of hate and violence.

The moral is finely but plainly drawn: "Life stares at the man out of the stony eyes of his boyhood and the man shivers to think what he has become. If the stony face will not flinch under his pleading look, forgive the man his violence, for violence has a human face."

Sports Final's
Regina Reporter

Among the regular contributors to Prairie Sports Final is Harvey Dryden of Regina.

Born in Winnipeg 38 years ago, Harvey's sports-writing career dates back to his University days, when he was sports editor of the student paper The Manitoban. (He later became editor-in-chief). After receiving his B.A. he joined the news staff of the Winnipeg Free Press. When he returned to that paper following war service with the Royal Canadian Navy he switched to the sports staff as night sports editor. In 1948 he became sports editor of the new Winnipeg Citizen, and when that paper ceased publication he moved to Regina to join the sports staff of the Leader Post.

He was sports editor of the Regina paper at the time of his appointment to the position of Tourist Director for the province of Saskatchewan in 1953. In this job he is well-known for his work in promoting Saskatchewan's sports fishing.

Harvey's interest in sports dates back to his school days, when he was active in hockey at St. John's Tech in Winnipeg. Throughout his career he has been active in covering the development of big-time football on the prairies. He is co-founder of the popular Quarterback Club in Regina, a regular commentator on all sports activities for CBC, and Saskatchewan correspondent for both Football News and Hockey News.

Harvey is married and is the father of two children.

More About
Faerie Queen

The radio adaptation of Purcell's The Faerie Queen, to be heard Oct. 28 on CBC Wednesday Night from Vancouver, was made specially for this performance by the British musicologist and conductor Denis Stevens. Mr. Stevens has aimed at including the best of Purcell's music and the best of the two versions of the opera libretto, printed in 1692 and 1693.

Since the libretto, far from improving on Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, lowers both poetry and prose almost to the level of doggerel, the original Shakespearean text has been used wherever possible. The proportions of drama and music have been adjusted to the requirements of radio, but very little of Purcell's vocal music has been cut. The dances, on the other hand, make little sense without visible choreography, and these have been curtailed throughout.

The cantata Singers and the orchestra will be conducted by Winnipeg-born organist Hugh McLean. The singing cast includes Kay Morrison, Margaret McCrae, Donald Brown, William Reimer, and Audrey Farnell. Actors taking part are Derek Ralston, Peter Haworth, Christine Best, Pat Williams, Ian Thorne, Nonie Stewart, Jack Ammon, Ivor Harries, and Roy Brinson.
