A portrait of the owner of one of Canada's best-known voices

“This is Earl Cameron...”

YOU will see a very happy man if you tune in to the late CBC-TV newscast Monday to Friday nights. When we asked Earl Cameron how he feels about his relatively new job as national TV newscaster on weeknights, he flashed a big grin and said: “I’m as contented as a clam. It’s a fascinating business, and I wouldn’t want to do anything else.” He feels that his 20 years in radio announcing and newscasting were just a dress rehearsal for his exciting new TV job.

How does TV newscasting differ from reading radio news? “It’s a much more complicated business,” he told us. “In radio newscasting the whole production is your baby. But in TV so many people are involved—audio, camera and lighting men, news editors, copy boys, reporters, script assistants—that it’s a real team job, and there’s something very satisfying about being part of a big bustling unit. Of course you can’t lounge in, wearing an old sports shirt as you could in radio. You’re conscious every second of the camera’s eye, and of the frantic signals of the floor director to straighten your tie and pull your jacket down from behind your ears. And you have to remember not to cup your hand over your ear to check on your voice production the way you always do in radio. And believe me, habits of 20 years are hard to break.”

Cameron’s deep, resonant voice and easy delivery have been an important part of CBC broadcasting for so long that it is hard to believe he was told in no uncertain terms that he was not radio material when he first auditioned for the CBC back in 1938. But in 1939 his hometown station, CHAB, Moose Jaw, offered him a job as summer relief announcer. “After three weeks,” he recalls, “I was told the job would be permanent—at $20 a month. After a couple of months I figured I should be paying them to teach me.”

What attracted him to radio? “It seemed nice work after what I’d been doing—working as a section hand with the CPR, selling hardware and groceries, and driving a hearse.”

In 1943, with four years of announcing, operating and writing behind him at CHAB, Cameron moved to the original CKY, Winnipeg, as announcer-emcee, and in 1944 transferred to the CBC’s Toronto studios, where he was assigned to reading the national news bulletin several days a week—a job that was to last 16 years and make his voice one of the best-known in Canada. Cameron prefers the late shift. It gives him time to putter around his well-equipped workshop in Richmond Hill, just north of Toronto. He has just finished off a basement recreation room and a bedroom, and he and a neighbour helped their friend Peter Whittall (CBC-TV’s Mr. Fix-It) to build boats for all three of them. Cameron’s 16-foot job gets lots of use at his cottage on Lake Simcoe, where he and his wife Adelaide and two sons, Clark and Hal, spend the summer, with Dad commuting to the Toronto studios each weeknight.

Cameron thinks himself lucky. “I’ve enjoyed broadcasting all the way along,” he says, “and I’d like to think (maybe it’s just a wild dream) that on the day before I retire I’ll still be signing-off with ‘This is Earl Cameron saying goodnight for CBC television news.’”

EMERTON COURT

Descendant of Peeping Tom

—shares his own revealing glimpses of the world with CBC radio listeners Sunday on "Venture"

LADY GODIVA probably started it all. In her day and community a notorious ancestor of Emerton Court's hit the news when his curiosity got the better of him. And this ambition to see as much as possible of the world has been cropping up in the family ever since. But none of the Courts has been such an unusual hobo as Emerton. He has tried it two ways—as a bum and in elegance. Either way he travels lightly. He has just returned from a 20-day, 40,000-mile jaunt around the world (the elegant way, this time) with nothing to tote but a sheepskin coat, a tape-recorder, and a toothbrush.

Elegant in a sheepskin coat? "Ah!" he said pointing a finger at us and smiling as if he had anticipated our surprise. "It's the cane that makes the difference." After seeing Emerton Court decked out in his travelling outfit, nonchalantly leaning on his cane, suave, fiftyish, greying and debonair, we had to admit that of all the hobos we had met, he is certainly the

“Hedda Gabler”

“Ford Startime” presents Lister Sinclair’s adaptation of the play
by HENRIK IBSEN

HEDDA GABLER will probably make your flesh creep, but you will never forget her. No one who watches her can fail to be fascinated by what she will do next. She is a beautiful, clever, restless young woman married to a stuffy man, with no outlets for her talents and energies, and no ideals to sustain her — frustrated, jealous, and bored. A dangerous situation which, as you might expect, explodes.

Hedda is a real psychological study, and many fine actresses have considered her role the plum of their careers. It takes a clever, sensitive portrayal to do justice to the nuances of Hedda’s strange personality, and Mario Prizek, producer of CBC-TV’s Ford Startime performance this Tuesday, is delighted with the performance of his star — English actress Joan Greenwood. “Besides being a highly intelligent, sensitive actress,” he told us, “she is untemperamental in the right sense of the word, devoting all her temperament to her work rather than to her personality. This is evident in her approach to the role of Hedda Gabler. Although she had just played it in England in an entirely different translation, with different players and producers, she never once said: ‘This is the way we did it before.’ She was very excited about having a familiar play come alive for her in a completely new way.”

Lister Sinclair, who adapted Hedda Gabler for television, also did his own translation. Among his many accomplishments is the ability to read Norwegian.

Dipping into some of the reviews of Hedda Gabler since its first performance in 1891 it is striking to note the way the heroine’s personality seems to have fascinated the critics. One wrote that she is “so repulsive in her cold, clammy spiritual sterility that we are attracted to the phenomenon as we are to a poisonous snake.” Another critic wrote: “Ibsen’s greatest play, and one of the most interesting women he has created, with all the vices, all the virtues of womanhood.” Here are some other opinions:

“One of the most poignant character tragedies in history. . . .”
“What a hopeless specimen of degeneracy is Hedda Gabler! A vicious, heartless, cowardly, unmoral, mischief-making vixen.” And then, striking a different note: “Hedda Gabler is the girl we take down to dinner in London 19 times out of 20.”

Hedda Gabler is a character study; the well-knit plot is secondary to her portrait. In a letter to his French translator, Count Prezer, in 1890, Ibsen wrote: “It was not my desire to deal in this play with so-called problems. What I principally wanted to do was to depict human beings, upon a groundwork of certain of the social conditions of the present day.” The action takes place in only two days, and involves only seven characters.

Ibsen based Hedda on a young woman he knew who confided to him one day that she delighted in luring other women’s husbands away from them. Ibsen’s version makes her an extremely sensitive woman who hates things gross and stodgy, craves power, but only if it avoids ugliness. Evil does not make her blink an eyelid as long as it isn't violent. Few heroines have been more movingly or more revealingly portrayed.

Ibsen's earlier play concentrated on exposing some of the shame and conventions of society as he knew it. You can imagine the sensation they created among his Victorian audiences, used as they were to either classical tragedy, music-hall farces, or dramatic situations involving gorgeous ladies or dashing bandits. Then suddenly Ibsen jolted them in their orchestra seats with the suggestion that they think. Think? At the theatre? Shocking what some of these writer fellow were up to nowadays! "Festering sores" a London critic called An Enemy of the People, Ghosts, A Doll's House. But a Dubliner with a red beard, a tongue as sharp as his wit, and an intense interest in the play of ideas, took up the Ibsen cause, used it as a shillelagh to beat old conventions like the Lycaenum tradition, and moved a few boundary posts. Ghosts, for instance, was banned here and there for some years because it dealt with the problem of venereal disease. But before long George Bernard Shaw had whipped up a fair Ibsen following that soon grew to enormous proportions, and revolutionized theatre art all over the world.

Ibsen spent most of his writing life outside Norway, first because he had become involved in controversy over the new-found labour movement there, later because his plays provoked the prudish, and he was a retiring sort of individual who shunned verbal uprisings, and still later because he liked the life abroad — Italy for four years, then Germany. Perhaps because he was away from home he was able to see his people and their problems in clear perspective. Hedda Gabler is the product of his later years, when, at 62, he was less a crusader and more interested in the new flurry over psychiatry. He grew fascinated with the causes and results of frustration. What would happen to a beautiful, neurotic young matron with no purpose in life, as she drifts deeper and deeper into boredom? Hedda Gabler was the result.

Open House

FAMILY FOOD—ADULTS— This month, Dr. Elizabeth Chant Robertson is going to talk about the food requirements of adults. Too high a percentage of North Americans are overweight because of poor eating habits and lack of exercise. Dr. Robertson reminds us of our daily food needs.

VISIT TO PARIS — How many Canadian housewives can say they have been to a world famous finishing academy in Paris—to learn cooking from the Comtesse de Toulouse-Lautres—wine tasting from Louis Vaudable, the owner of Maxim's—to learn how to select jewels, furs, painting, to entertain in grand and gracious manner? This all happened to Mrs. Grant Henderson, a young housewife from Winnipeg, wife of a civil engineer and mother of three young children. For three weeks, Mrs. Henderson rubbed elbows with princesses, millionaire's daughters, and the daughters of the rich and powerful from all over the world. Today—Mrs. Henderson visits OPEN HOUSE to tell us about the trip to Paris, the course at Maxim's Academy and her return to Winnipeg.

P.M. Party

With host Alan Millar, singers Donna Miller and Allan Blye, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, Rex Loring, and Daniel the Spaniel. Today's guests are the Wallace Brothers, nightclub dance act.

Let's Look

Let's Look . . . at crystals. Crystals are nature's handiwork and some of them may last a million years or be as shortlived as a snowflake. Viewers will learn where crystals may be found, how they form and how they are used by man. They will also find out how to grow some crystals for themselves.

Mr. "X" In Canada

School inspector Dr. Carter B. Storr talks about famous Canadians who have helped shape Canada's history and growth.

CBWT—Warren Davis Show

Today's telecast with Warren Davis and the teen-agers will originate at the West Kildonan Collegiate.

Don Messer Jubilee

With Don Messer and the Islanders, Charlie Chamberlain, Marg Osburne, the Buchta Dancers and emcee Don Tremaine. Buchta Dancers perform to Maple Sugar Two Step and Joys of Quebec. Charlie Chamberlain sings Robins and Roses; Marg Osburne sings Strange Little Melody. Marg and Charlie sing as duets Rose of Ol Paunee and Careless Hands. The quiet-time song is He Will Work Wonders for You, and the Islanders play John Durocher Breakdown and Harvest Home Hornpipe.

Danny Thomas Show

A temperamental painter attempts a portrait of the Williams family. In order to become better acquainted with his subjects, the artist decides to live with the family for a few days. But the Williams have other ideas and soon become fed up with his tantrums. Gale Gordon plays the role of the painter.

Music '60

Jack Kane will return to the show on this program. Guests will be Bob Goulet, singer Jane Forrest and Jose Greco and his flamenco dance group. Jack and the Music Makers will play the Hi-Fi Blues and a medley of Frank Sinatra's hits including I've Got You Under My Skin and Come Fly With Me. New singing discovery

ODDS and ENDS

A nine-day expedition to the Florida Everglades almost ended in disaster for the crew of CBC's "This Living World." Producer Adelin Bouchard and his crew were filming scenes on Alligator Lake when their boat started to sink in the alligator-infested waters—"14 miles from nowhere." By plugging a five-inch hole with whatever was at hand they managed to stay afloat until rescued by a boat making an unscheduled trip.

Live a Borrowed Life will originate this summer from Winnipeg (July 20 and 27), and in Calgary, Edmonton or Regina (Sept. 14 and 21), as well as in Vancouver (July 6 and 13), Ottawa (August 3 and 10), Montreal (August 17 and 24), and Halifax (August 31 and Sept. 7). Charles Templeton will be moderator on each occasion, and the regular panelists (Anna Cameron, Bill Walker, Elwy Yost) and Royce Firth, will take turns on the out-of-town shows.

A Hatful of Music, a new informal half-hour of popular music from Vancouver, will replace the Joan Fairfax Show Sunday nights on CBC-TV, starting July 24. The 13-week series, featuring musical comedy hits, pops, folk songs, and jazz, will star folk-singer Ernie Prentice, pop singer Lorraine Foreman, and Tommy Vickers and his dance trio. Ricky Hyslop will conduct the orchestra, and the chorus will be directed by Pat Trudell. Guests will include west Jane Forrest, from London, England, will sing Love Is Where You Find It and That Old Black Magic. Bob Goulet will take part in a musical production number involving his signing for an important part in the new Lerner and Loewe musical "Camelot," in which Bob plays the part of Sir Lancelot.

CBWT—Sit Back With Jack

Jack Shapira and his orchestra with guest vocalists Ray Eberle and Marilyne Keely and the Selkirk Septette. Shapira's Symphonette will focus on the Art School.

Marilyne Keely

coast entertainers and visiting cabaret artists.

The Chevy Suspense Show, a new series of one-hour suspense dramas, will replace the Dinah Shore Chevy Show for the summer, beginning May 31. Walter Slezak will be host, and many noted playwrights (including Gore Vidal and Adrian Spies) will write original scripts for the series. Producer Henry Jaffe says: "We plan to avoid violence, brutality and senseless action for the sake of overdramatization."

Sidney James, the resourceful Companion in misfortune of Tony Hancock on "Hancock's Half Hour" (Saturdays on CBC-TV) was born in Johannesburg, South Africa. His parents were both vaudeville actors, but Sidney served his apprenticeship as a diamond polisher, and from time to time followed the more muscular pursuits of stevedoring, coal-heaving and boxing. He went to Britain after the war and established a reputation as a pugnacious character actor. He has been with "Hancock's Half Hour" since 1954, and has taken part in over 150 films.

The Killarney Lake district of Ireland is the setting for "A Wind From the South," to be produced on "G.M. Presents" May 22. Frances Hyland, John Vernon and Charmion King play the leading roles in this sensitive love story by James Costigan.

Michael Craig, star of the British films "Upstairs and Downstairs" and "Sapphire," plays the lead in another G.M. Presents play, "Don't Take the Low Road," by Arthur Murphy of Halifax. Dr. Murphy wrote "You'll Be Calling Me Michael" and "The Death Around Us," earlier G.M. presents productions. Setting of his new play, to be seen in June, is Cape Breton.

Donald Jack, author of "Music in the Wall" (G.M. Presents, May 8) is working on his first novel, a story of a Canadian in the Royal Flying Corps during the First World War. A veteran of the R.A.F., he has just returned from a tour of NATO air bases in Europe, doing research from a teleplay about jet pilots. It will probably be seen on G.M. Presents before the end of the current season, and it will be his 10th television play.

Field's observations about youngsters' response to films; she has made a special study in this area. Gerdin Crawford continues her sewing series, showing how to make a fabric "grab-bag" from a pattern, and Cynthia Coop concludes her current examination of new wall coverings.

Friendly Giant

Jerome brings a book to Friendly, titled "Where Are You Going?" With Rusty, they invent a new game—guessing "where you are going" from clues. Friendly and Rusty are puzzled when Jerome puts a mop on his head and a false beard.

Maggie Muggins

Mr. McGarrity makes a raft for Maggie and her friends. They pretend they are lost at sea, then they hear a real cry for help. Mr. Fish is caught in some twigs in the pond. Big Bite Beaver comes to the rescue.

Sportstime

With host Doug Maxwell. Today's program is about track and field sports, with demonstrations of the broad jump, high jump, running broad jump and sprinting. There will also be more film on the 1956 Olympics in Australia.

CBWT—How About That!

Today, host Jim Mitchell presents "Journey Into Spring"—the film that won the academy award for the best documentary short subject of 1957. Special guest on today's show will be G. H. (Bert) Kynman, well-known Winnipeg naturalist, who will answer viewers' letters dealing with all phases of the care and training of household pets, native birds and other small animals.

Fred Davis is host as panelists Toby Robbins, Pierre Berton, Gordon Sinclair, and a guest panelist attempt to identify a headline news event of the past by questioning someone connected with it. From Toronto.

Ford Startime

Presents "Hedda Gabler," a drama of frustration by the Norwegian playwright Henrik Ibsen, starring Joan Greenwood, Douglas Rain, Mavor Moore and Leo Ciceri. A character study, set in the 1890's about beautiful and dashing Hedda Gabler, a woman with a terrific urge to do exciting things, who finds herself stifled by conventional society and doesn't have the courage to break out of it. Distressed by her recent marriage to

She Knows What Children Like

Film expert is guest on "Mary Liz Show" this Tuesday

CHILDREN, says Dame Mary Field, have naturally good taste. They will not tolerate bad production in films, bad story-telling, or, worst of all, bad acting. Until they are 10 they cannot do much with dialogue; beyond that age they can both look and listen. All children like action pictures, and they love cartoons, but 10 minutes is about enough. They are primarily interested in children, next in animals. They have little interest in adults except, perhaps, the very old. "Few cowboys would be popular if deprived of their horses," says Miss Field. "All whom you would like to be respected by an audience of children must be under 30. If you are a bad man you can be middle-aged."

Mary Field, an international authority on films for children, and one of the pioneers in the field, will be a guest on The Mary Liz Show this Tuesday (May 10) on CBWT.

George Tesman, a conventional man whom she considers dull, she becomes fascinated by the brilliance of a writer named Leovborg. Hyper-sensitive and neurotically bored, Hedda is impelled to relieve her frustration by manipulating the lives of others to show her power over them.

CBWT—Eye To Eye

A program of spontaneous discussions on controversial subjects to be found in our everyday living. Felix Lazarus and Ken Black, producers.

* * *

There are seven hundred and eighty-seven islands round the coast of Scotland—more than there are round any coast in Europe—not forgetting Norway or Greece—Andy Cowan-Martin on BBC.

DAME MARY FIELD

Miss Field is on a lecture tour of Canada, sponsored by the United Kingdom Information Service, the National Film Board, the Canadian Film Institute, and the CBC. Purpose of the tour is to acquaint interested groups with the mechanics involved in setting up a Canadian centre of children's films.

She came to work in films almost by accident when she was a post-graduate student at London University. Her professor received a batch of films on Commonwealth subjects to check for accuracy and passed the job on to her. Thus began her association with instructional films.

Determined to learn her subject thoroughly, Mary Field held a variety of posts, from continuity girl to editor, producer and director. Although she directed dramatic films she found she preferred instructional films. "They cost so little that you can experiment," she explains.

Many of the films became classics and won international awards. During the Second World War she made documentary films for the Ministry of Information, and following the war she was given the job of establishing and building up J. Arthur Rank's Children's Films Department. During her six years on this job she produced hundreds of films for children. Since 1951 she has been Executive most unusual—and the most elegant.

ELEGANT HOBO

When did this attack of itchy feet hit you? we asked. "Well," he said, "I was sitting at home looking at an atlas, and recalling that remark of Rabelais about one half of the world not knowing how the other half lives. Suddenly I said to myself: 'Emerton, what's the sense of sitting in an armchair imagining how the other half lives?' So I got up and went!"

But it was a trip with a difference, as you will hear on CBC radio's Venture this Sunday afternoon. Emerton Court has an ear for the unusual, and what his tape-recorder brought back was not the ordinary travelogue. With wit and a deft, delicate touch he will recreate for you some of the charming, weird, amusing and sentimental sounds he heard along the way. From London he flew to Berlin, then to Moscow, Tashkent, Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Hong Kong, Tokyo, Vancouver and back to London.

"The first thing that struck me when I landed in Berlin," he said,

"was the thought that I was a foreigner!" But once the initial shock was over he got along famously, and where his foreign vocabulary broke down he used sign language. This can often lead to hilarious situations, and Court made the most of them.

In Berlin he had a few words with a little Rhesus monkey who told him what his relations think about travelling into space. In Hong Kong he interviewed a Chinese woman about the life of a concubine — they still exist there. He recorded some of Omar Khayyam's poetry read in its native tongue; he recorded the distinctive personalities of bath water disappearing down the drains in a couple of foreign cities; and conversations with numerous village people he bumped into as he poked his enquiring nose into bazaar, tent or village square. He emphasizes that this is a program of sounds rather than of personalities, including a sound very few people have ever heard. It is most unusual and rather beautiful. They are all presented with a pleasant blend of sophistication and humour.

Tell us more about yourself, we urged. Every hobo had roots to start with. Where did you first put yours down?

"There's a little place in Sussex called Pevensey Bay," he said. "It's famous for two things. William the Conqueror landed there in 1066, and I landed there in — well, the early part of the century. This one, of course. As a matter of fact I landed in a theatrical family. Father, Wallace Court, was the original general in The Desert Song—he's still going strong too. Mother's stage name was Olive Eltone. And an uncle, Ray Emerton starred for a season here in Canada at Stratford. So you see there was no hope for me."

Child actor? His parents had too much sense. Schooling first and then they'd see. But from school young Emerton went straight into stock, and within three months was playing in London's West End. He was in the original production of Alf's Button by W. A. Darlington.

CBC Film Playhouse

“The Billion Franc Mystery.” Lee Paterson and Nicole Maurey star in this story about a foreign correspondent who gets involved with a former employee of the French mint who claims he will supply definite proof that the French government is corrupt in return for $2,000. The man claims the government has flooded the country with six billion worthless francs. The story takes place in 1938.

Mary Liz Show

Today, Mrs. Evelyn Franklin of the School of Home Economics at the University of Manitoba has some suggestions about interesting things to collect this summer with a view to their later transformation into attractive home decorations. Mrs. A. R. Gauer happily concedes to many requests from viewers, and shows us another variation on quick-rising buns and rolls. Frances McKay keeps us up-to-date on the best buys on the market shelves this week.

Just Mary

Mary's story today is about Penny Pink, a little girl who is having a birthday party. It happens that Matilda Mouse, who lives in the pickle closet in the cellar, is also having a birthday, and Milton Mouse has stolen a cup-cake for a birthday cake. Matilda is unhappy because it doesn't have a candle, so she persuades Milton to go upstairs and steal a candle from Penny's cake. Penny catches him, but Matilda pleads for his life, realizing she has been selfish. Penny and her friends come to Matilda's birthday party, and the little mouse gets her candle.

This Living World

With host Steve Bloomer. The happy world of spring is today's topic, and viewers will learn about a host of creatures in springtime: Salamanders, bluebirds, caterpillars, frogs, etc.

EXPERT ON RUSSIA

*Douglas Leiterman interviews
Edward Crankshaw Thursday on “Close-Up”*

RUSSIA is becoming less of a rigidly ideological state, and more of an authoritarian state struggling to manage an industrial society with flexible and practical policies. The United States and its western allies are coming to have less private enterprise and more central control of their economies. In time, the two systems may become sufficiently similar to align with one another against an ever more powerful communist China.

Edward Crankshaw, a leading British writer on Soviet affairs, puts forward this thesis in an interview with Doug Leiterman, to be seen on Close-Up this Thursday on CBC-TV.

Crankshaw's interest in Russia began in 1941 when he went to Moscow on a British military mission. Since then he has written four books on Russia, and many articles for British and American newspapers and magazines including Life, the New York Times, and the Atlantic Monthly. He has a research staff whose members all have a wide knowledge of Russia, he himself travels to Russia at least once a year, and above all “I read a vast amount of material, from Pravda to obscure provincial publications, military and scientific journals, and books and plays published in Russia. It's all there if you take the trouble to dig,” Newsweek quotes him as saying.

All this has enabled him to make some astonishingly accurate predictions about Russian successes and failures in science and economics, and about Russian political trends. He also admits to his blunders.

Why did he forecast Malenkov, not Khrushchev, as the strong man who would emerge after the death of Stalin? Leiterman asks.

“Because I didn't value Khrushchev highly enough,” says Crankshaw. “It's just as simple as that.

It was obvious Khrushchev was coming up very fast before Stalin's death. He was given a tremendous position at the last Party Congress in October, 1952; Stalin died in March, 1953. And Khrushchev was more or less given the party to clean up. . . . Malenkov is an extremely clever and gifted man and I thought he's been so long in the central apparatus that he'd be able to manoeuvre around Khrushchev.”

Crankshaw believes we misunderstand Russian tactics in foreign affairs if we look at them as manifestations of revolutionary zeal and enthusiasm. Russian power “simply fills up spaces and goes on filling up spaces, and then it comes against a blank wall and stops, and then it tries to flow around the blank wall. . . .”

The interesting thing about this description is that it applied to Russian policies (says Crankshaw) long before the Communist revolution. “The other day I was reading a letter of Lord Palmerston, who was British Foreign Secretary in the 19th century, at the time of the Crimean war. . . . (He gives) a half page description of the character of Russian expansion. As I read this thing I thought: Good heavens, I've written this. Then I realized I hadn't and Palmertson had written it a hundred years before. Then I realized that anyone who had read this thing of Palmerston must have thought: ‘goodness me, Crankshaw must have copied this thing direct from Palmerston’ . . .”

Other quotations in the interview:

“Russian motives and ideas are as mixed and muddled as ours . . . Our great mistake has always been to assume that not only Russians but all foreigners have absolutely clear-cut ideas, years ahead, of exactly what they're going to do. All foreigners think we have the same thing.”

“I always think that much too much importance is laid on the idea of a summit as such. . . . If you just take a summit in your stride, if when Khrushchev had first asked for it two years ago,

Open House

THE LITTLE GIRL - Anna Cameron will give another of her popular readings from the short stories of Katherine Mansfield. "The Little Girl," is a story of the memories of a small child and the grand times she had with her father. This is a happy, pleasant story and possibly reflects a very true period from the early life of Katherine Mansfield.

THE VISITING HOMEMAKER—

We all know the chaos the house can get into when mother is sick, particularly if there are small children and there is no relative nearby to come in and give a hand. This is often where homemakers are called in, to get the family back into good routine until mother is well again. Our guest today is a homemaker from Toronto, who for eighteen months, has been helping out in other people's homes. Mrs. Wharpole tells her story of The Visiting Homemaker.

P.M. Party

With emcee Alan Millar, singers Donna Miller and Allan Blye, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, Rex Loring, and Daniel the Spaniel. Today—Also Maggiorotti returns with more scenes from old-time movies.

Pictures With Woofer

Woofer and Patty (Donna Miller) introduce today's films: Acapulco; Sense of Smell and Taste, and Pool of London.

Minnow On The Say

The adventures of two young boys, Adam and David, who are looking for treasure reportedly hidden by Adam's ancestor. Bill Duncan portrays David Moss, and Teddy Walker plays Adam.

Follow Me

Today—"Pulp and Paper." A visit to Oak Falls, B.C. where logs are ground into pulp and converted into paper.

Country Hoedown

Country music with Gordie Tapp, King Ganam, the Hames Sisters, Tommy Hunter, Tommy Common, and the Singing Swinging Eight.

GENE KELLY

presents a 60-minute dance spectacular Friday night on CBC-TV, replacing "Cavalcade of Sports" this week only.

"I think the development of aviation in the next decade should be cheaper machines and more of them between urban areas. I'm not as keen on the prestige routes of the supersonic machine and that sort of thing. That seems to me a vast expense in order to get a few business men to New York at three o'clock in the morning instead of half-past four.—Lord Brabazon of Tara, holder of Britain's first pilot's license, on BBC.

Red River Jamboree

A program of country and western music with Stu Davis, Peggy Neville, The Altones, the Tumbleweed Trio (Carl Aspland — bass; Irwin Hall — rhythm guitar; Jim Pirie — steel guitar); The Valley Beaux and Belles with square dance caller, Joe Johansson; and music by the Selkirk Settlers. Choreography by Sam McConnell. Today's special guest is Jack Paget as "Uncle Hiram." Musical selections to be heard on this program will include: Detour; Cimarron, Super Sonic; When It's Springtime in the Rockies; Tall Timber; Zip Pe Dee Doo Dah; Fighting Irishman and Good Old Fashioned Hoedown. Ernest Mutimer, producer. From Winnipeg.

Peggy Neville

"That won't mean much to people out here," he said, "but it was quite the thing at the time."

In 1924 he joined his mother in Vancouver and she arranged for him to become a juvenile lead with the Allan Players. Verna Felton was the leading lady. Now she appears with Spring Byington in the TV series December Bride. When the company closed down for a month in the summer, Court had his first taste of the hobo life that has taken him to far-away places off and on ever since.

"First I hied me off to Lake Louise," he recalled, "and worked as a 'cowboy' guide, dug graves—anything to get a taste of life, (rather incongruous, we thought), and then I decided to go further afield, and I finally landed in Chicago on the back of an engine at the Grand Union Station."

Before long he was working on the lake boats as a deck hand. "My shoes lasted until the day I was paid off. With two dollars in my pocket and a new pair a size too big I bought a loaf of bread, a can of sardines, and went to see Chaplin in A Dog's Life, and then started hoboing south. I hopped the Illinois Central Railway as far as Memphis, Tennessee. Because I'd ridden blithely into Chicago on the back of an engine, I thought I could make my triumphant entry into Memphis the same way, but the authorities didn't see it my way. I was arrested as a vagrant, spent time in the city and county jails, and was shipped eventually to New Orleans as an undesirable alien. I was hustled aboard a ship bound for Germany, and had, of course, to work my passage."

Undaunted by his luck so far, Court decided to hobo in Germany, and drifted to Hamburg, where he played the piano in pubs for his meals and beer. When the locals had had enough of his talent, and he had worn out the publicans' generosity, he shipped out on an oil tanker for Houston, Texas, made another trip to Europe, this

Officer of the Children's Film Foundation. She is also chairman of the Film and Television sub-committee of UNESCO's National Co-operating Body for Mass Communication in the U.K., and president of the International Centre of Films for Children.

Miss Field has travelled widely, lecturing on the making of films for children. In 1950 she demonstrated children's films in Scandinavia. In 1954 she toured Australia, New Zealand and India, and in the latter country she assisted in the setting up of the Children's Films Society of India. Following the Brussels World Fair of 1958, where the British exhibition of children's films aroused world-wide interest, she was invited to Poland to advise on children's films and television.

ELEGANT HOBO

time to Rotterdam, then headed for Mexico, ending up in Tampico as an "assistant engineer" in the oil fields, which amounted to nothing grander than hammering the stakes. But he managed to save enough for a trip to Baltimore, and there he decided that, much as a hobo's life appealed to him, it was time he got back to greasepaint and buskins. So he made his way to Vancouver, and bearded, dirty, hungry and healthy as a coon, re-joined the repertory company. Later he threw in his lot with the British Guild Players, with Basil Radford as leading man — played with them for four years in Vancouver. "And I got into radio at the very beginning—used to write my own scripts, and I've had five plays done by the CBC."

He has been back to England 25 times, usually for stage, film or television roles, and has appeared with some famous English performers, including Cicely Court-nidge, Peter Ustinov (see pages 30-31), Ivor Novello, and Sir Lewis Casson. His last big film was A Night to Remember, in which he played the chief engineer. Recently he appeared on CBC-TV in two G.M. Presents dramas: Murder, Anyone? and The Death Around Us.

Which medium does he prefer? "Oh films, decidedly. You can get perfection in a film, but in a long run on the stage it's hard to sustain it, because so many things influence you, like the weather, the way you are feeling, or the bill that just came in the post."

What sort of role does he usually play? "I always get cast as a titled gentleman or a villain—if there's any difference," he replied with a wink. We asked if he liked seeing himself in movies. He puffed on his cigarette and squinted through the smoke as he thought for a minute. "Yes, I do," he said. "You know, an actor has an awful lot to learn. Acting is more a mental process than anything, so it's invaluable to be able to see whether the thought has registered on the screen as you intended it to."

We asked him about his stage work in England, where he was in Ivor Novello's last play, Gay's the Word. "One of the highlights of my career," he said, "was being directed by George Bernard Shaw. It was in 1933, in On the Rocks, and the title was appropriate, because it ran only nine weeks. Actually the director was Lewis Casson, but sometimes Shaw would take over, with different instructions. When I asked G.B.S. whom I should follow he said: 'Listen to us both, then do what you like, my boy. They all do.'"

We mentioned that we had read that Shaw used to pop up on stage to act out the roles himself when a performer couldn't grasp his instructions quickly enough. Was that true? "Oh yes," Court told us. "And what's more, when he and the cast first met, he always read his play straight through for the performers, instead of the other way around. When he read the women's lines he'd put one arm akimbo, prance around and read in a high voice that would have convulsed the cast if everyone hadn't been so intent on grasping from him all we could of his intent."

We wondered if Court's career allowed any time for outside interest. "I like fishing," he said, "but I always end up feeling so sorry for the fish!" What he prefers more than anything though is travelling. Where is he off to next? "Timbuctu! And don't laugh," he cautioned us as we began to. "I'm going primarily because so many people have said to me when I've been away for some time: 'Where on earth have you been, Emerton? Timbuctu?' I want to see the expression on their faces when I say 'Yes!'"

Most girls suffer greatly, in my opinion by being educated unsuccessfully as boys. Not so noticeable when they are young, but ridiculous for adolescents. We simply must give more thought to the proper education of girls. Fundamental re-thinking is necessary.

Oliver Cromwell

The play by JOHN DRINKWATER, adapted for CBC Stage by

DIANA PEARCE

OLIVER CROMWELL has been bandied about by so many unsympathetic historians that most people are inclined to agree with critics who described him as "a brave, bad man with all the wickedness for which hell fire is prepared," who "lived a hypocrite and died a traitor." And, of course, if you mention his name to an Irishman, fur flies.

But playwright John Drinkwater, realizing that Cromwell must have had a wonderful understanding of "the nature and humour of men," to achieve the success he did, peeled off the historical trappings surrounding the man, sifted through the facts and fancies about his personality and private life, and put together a sympathetic portrait of one of the most controversial figures in British history. The action is set in Cromwell's early years, before he became Lord Protector.

Diana Pearce of Toronto adapted Oliver Cromwell for radio, and CBC Stage presents it this Sunday night.

Drinkwater's Cromwell is understood and beloved by his family, his friends and the people of his own community, God-fearing, resolute and courageous, a good son, father and husband, not greedy or lustful—in other words, a solid citizen. He believed that his whole career was directed by God and that "his deeds and inspirations were crowning mercies of the Most High." Occasionally he would wallow in a deep religious depression, feeling that his sins were unbearably heavy. But basically his nature was cheerful, and he was usually back to his normal self again before long. He could be quite merry at times, loved horses and music, and in his home setting was quite a different figure from the cruel, hard, shrewd tactician he is pictured in the field of military or political battle.

He is the man who says in the play, before he has come forward to fulfil his historic destiny: "I am a plain Burgess of this city. I farm a few lands and am known to none. But I have faith that the people of this country are born to be, under God, a free people. That is the fundamental principle of this English life. If your masters, be they who they may, forget that, then, as you say, there will be lessons to be learnt. Here in Ely it is my part to see that my fellows do not lose their birthright. You shall not find us ignorant nor afraid. I would have no violence; let all be by persuasion and tolerance. But

MUSIC ON RADIO

By BOYD NEEL

ON MONDAY evening the Vancouver Chamber Orchestra plays Richard Strauss' Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. This is the music incidental to Molière's famous play and preceding the opera "Ariadne auf Naxos," which was written to follow the condensed version of the "Gentilhomme" by Hofmannsthal. The original idea was that there should be a little opera lasting about half an hour which would be introduced into Molière's play, taking the place of the usual Turkish ballet. In the end, however, Hofmannsthal and Strauss, who never did anything by halves, got so interested in the opera, that they almost forgot the play and the final product was found to play about an hour and a half! The result was that, if the opera and the play were performed on the same evening, it made an almost impossibly long entertainment, and the theatre was saddled with the problem of employing a complete theatrical and a complete operatic company on the same evening, which, of course, proved to be beyond the means of most managements. So Strauss had to revise the opera, which he did by substituting a musical prelude, lasting about half an hour, for the Molière play, and making a few alterations in the body of the opera itself. It is in this revised version that we usually hear Ariadne today. Sir Thomas Beecham, in his autobiography, states that he much prefers the earlier version and, in fact, he revived it at the Edinburgh Festival in 1950.

The result of all these changes was that the incidental music to the play, which we shall hear on Monday, became rather forgotten and submerged during the changes these just liberties must not be touched."

Cromwell was born in 1599 to an old Huntingdon family. His father was a brewer and gentleman farmer. Oliver was educated locally under a Dr. Beard who pounded into the boy his fear of a wrathful God, and further education in the puritanical atmosphere of Sidney Sussex College at Cambridge established the trend of Cromwell's intensely religious life. When he was 18 his father died, and Cromwell went home to look after family affairs, as well as his mother and five sisters. He was active in protecting his humbler neighbours from injustices and legal entanglements, but little is known of him until he was elected Member of Parliament for Huntingdon in 1628. When Parliament was dissolved he sold his land and moved to St. Ives, near Cambridge, as a grazier, and in 1640 was elected Burgess of Cambridge.

A contemporary described him at a public debate in those days as "very ordinarily apparelled in a plain cloth suit made by a country tailor, his linen plain and not clean, his hat without a hat-band. His stature of a good size, his sword stuck close to his side, his countenance swollen and reddish, his voice sharp and untuneable, and his eloquence full of fervour, for the matter would not bear of much reason - yet he was very much harkened unto."

Drinkwater's play brings him into focus at this point, before he had achieved his purpose, when England was just beginning to know him as a great leader.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Report on Refugees. World Refugee Year, the U.N. sponsored activity to rehabilitate the world's refugees, ends in June. During its final six months, Toronto writer and broadcaster Monica Muga has been reporting on developments. This is her fifth report.

In My Opinion. "In My Opinion" is Matinee's discussion feature of controversial topics. At round tables in various Canadian centres people with strong opinions and convictions debate a variety of topics. Today, a panel in Edmonton discusses the pros and cons of simplification of classic literature. In the chair will be Dolores MacFarlane, CBC morning commentator in Edmonton.

Wanted: Cook-Housekeeper. Household help is a scarce commodity in Canada; it is even more scarce than it needs to be because of the way some employers treat their household employees. Monica Downes, a Vancouver freelance writer and broadcaster, has had some experiences as a "cook-housekeeper" and speaks with authority in the subject. In the first of a two part broadcast, she talks about her experiences.

W-2:03 pm K-3:33 pm X-2:33 pm

SCHOOL BROADCASTS

Saskatchewan - "Rhythm and Rhyme," for Grades I and II. Third in a series of four broadcasts to try to link poetry with experiences within the child's own scope or with those he can relive. Today's program will be based on "Our Helpers." Poems about the policeman, the postman, the baker and the window man will be heard. Second part of this program is "Ici-le Francais," for grades 9-10.

K-3:00 pm

NOW AND THEN

With co-hosts Gordon Sinclair, Jr., and veteran actor Gerry Rowan. From Montreal. The show will look back on the music, news and customs of other years and make humorous comparisons with today's trends. Singers Sheila Graham and Fred Hill, the Buck Lacombe Quintet and accordionist Gordie Fleming will provide music and song from now and then—the swinging music of today and the authentic old tunes of another era.

W-3:30 pm K-4:30 pm X-3:30 pm

SONG ALBUM

Baritone Orville Derraugh accompanied by Chester Duncan. Lawrence Taylor, producer. A program of songs arranged by Arnold Foster. TALK

Sixth in a series of eight talks by John Emerson, Vancouver actor and humourist, who gives his own personal views on the leading literary figures of the Victorian age and reads from their writings. Today - Charles Dickens.

W-11:00 pm

I regard books as a more important means for the spread and enlargement of culture than films, the theatre, newspapers, the play, anything. They go further, they last longer, they sink deeper into the mind.—Frederick Warburg a publisher, on BBC.

Humanistic Values In Literature

A new "University of the Air" series starting Monday on CBC radio

OF what value is the study of English? Everyone admits it is "a good thing" for students of engineering and commerce to be able to express themselves clearly and fluently. And no good organization man will make the grade without the ability to write memos. Certainly, these are practical values of studying English.

But why study imaginative literature of the present and the past—novels, short stories, essays, plays and particularly poetry? These may, of course, amuse or interest or excite during an idle moment. But why spend (waste?) time in thoughtful consideration of them?

Dr. William Robbins asks this question in the opening sentences of the new University of the Air series, starting this Monday night on CBC radio. The five lectures themselves provide an answer. And a clue to that answer lies in the title of the series: Humanistic Values in English Literature. For imaginative literature illuminates, places in specific contexts, those general values which men find in their diverse activities:

The Psychological (May 9): The poet, the novelist and the dramatist long before Freud gave us insights, often fragmentary perhaps, but nonetheless valid and important, into the meaning of our emo-

PROGRAM NOTES

UNIVERSITY OF THE AIR

"The Greek and Roman World." Sixth of a ten program series by Dr. W. G. Hardy, head of the department of classics at the University of Alberta. Today — "The Torch of Greek Thought." It has been said with truth that the Greeks founded Western philosophy and Western science. Time will not permit more than a glimpse of the pre-Socratic thinkers, the first exponents of the restless inquiring mind. This lecture will concentrate its attention on Plato and Aristotle, the "giants of Greek philosophy" and will then give a brief summary of Epicureanism, Stoicism, and Cynicism, three philosophical systems which made a strong impact on the Romans.

W-9:45 am K-10:30 am X-9:30 am

KINDERGARTEN OF THE AIR

This week Ruth Johnson is teacher. Theme — Outdoor Play. Today — Marbles.

W-10:15 am K-11:15 am X-10:15 am

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

What's New? Today — What's new in Newfoundland? Daphne House of St. John's talks about "The Confederation Building."

Matinee Quiz. A professor of psychology, a textile chemist and a home economist meet in a Toronto studio today to discuss listeners' problems in those fields. Dr. Robert Joyner is the psychologist; he teaches at the University of Toronto and is the father of four children. Mrs. Mary Humphries is the chemist; she is also chairman of the textile department of the Canadian Association of Consumers. Mrs. Margaret Pope is the home economist; she is also the CBC's morning consumer broadcaster and is the mother of two children.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Isabel Wilson of Toronto, recorded musical selections by Sir Ernest MacMillan from Toronto, and another reading by Weldon Hanbury from C. P. Lee's "Athenian Adventure" adapted for radio by Doris Mosdell.

W-2:03 pm K-3:33 pm X-2:33 pm

SCHOOL BROADCASTS

Saskatchewan. "Poetry for Seniors," for grades 7-8. Third broadcast in a five-part series to introduce students of senior grades to some of the work of our Canadian poets. Today's poems will include "Snow in April" by Marjorie Pickthall; "March Field" by F. R. Scott and "Sudden Spring" by Margaret Coulby. Part two of this program—"Young Saskatchewan," for grades 7-10. Today—"A Use for Straw." One of the sights we associate with harvest time on the prairies are the fires in the wheat fields burning up waste straw left behind by the combines. Today, this straw is being used in the manufacture of a building product. A new factory in Saskatoon is buying baled straw from district farmers and processing it into a board which has many uses in the construction of homes and commercial buildings.

K-3:00 pm

PRAIRIE PLAYHOUSE

This week — "Move Along, Little Sister," by Lee Schacter of Winnipeg. The familiar triangle theme, this time involving a married woman, her husband, and her unprincipled young sister. Gust Kristjanson, producer. From Winnipeg. (This is the last program in the Prairie Playhouse series. Halifax Theatre will be heard in this period, starting next week. For de-tional life. These insights may even have therapeutic value.

The Social-Political (May 16): The passion of political idealism and of social reform can move us in poem, play or novel, in tones ranging from fervent appeal to bitter satire. Shelley even suggested that imaginative writers are the "unacknowledged legislators."

The Scientific (May 23): "To the modern mind," says Dr. Robbins, "science as knowledge has been overshadowed by science as technology." But if science is taken as the search for knowledge, inspired by the "shared intellectual passion," then it is another aspect of humanism and finds its way into literature.

The Religious (May 30): Niebuhr said that man must believe in "something greater and more inclusive than himself." And the belief in that something—sometimes, but certainly not always, expressed in Christian terms—permeates literature.

The Moral-Philosophical (June 6): Men of letters may not be philosophers in the sense that philosophers seek a complete and consistent expression of reality. But men of letters often do exhibit the philosophic mind in a search for wisdom. The elements they derive from philosophy are usually of moral or ethical nature, they bear on how we live and how we should live, they arise from an impassioned interest in man, his experience, and his total environment.

In his opening lecture, Dr. Robbins suggests that imaginative writers "have made use of the raw mass of psychological data, for literary purposes, which the modern psychologist attempts to analyze scientifically. Freud himself called attention to this aspect of literature when he said, 'The poets and philosophers before me discovered the unconscious. What I discovered was the scientific method by which the unconscious may be studied'."

Dr. Robbins goes on to suggest that this insight into human nature operates in many ways. "One of these is the way of theoretical knowledge, or theory, when our awareness of what the writer is saying about life is in part an awareness of the particular psychological belief he holds. It may be the old doctrine of humours, which referred to a man's dominant char-

The Artists' Workshop. In a red brick coach house just below Bloor Street in Toronto there's an Artists' Workshop that was begun by a group of Toronto's leading painters and that now attracts more than 200 students in drawing, painting, poetry and sculpture. Freelance broadcaster Barbara Greene, who has contributed to Matinee from England and the continent and more recently from Canada's west coast, now makes her headquarters in Toronto. She visited the Workshop with her tape recorder recently and this is her record of what goes on in a typical session.

How To Invest Wisely. Jean Edmonds is a Winnipeg economist and a contributing editor of The Financial Post as well as a broadcaster who is heard frequently on Trans-Canada Matinee and other CBC programs. She begins her new series today with a talk about investments we make as Saskatchewan — "Neighbours of Wood and Plain." In this program, we continue our study of how birds help man. There are many birds that are helpful to man because they are insect-eaters. And since we are told there are nearly a million different kinds of insects in the world the services of insect-eating birds are most important. Larks and sparrows scratch for insects in dead leaves and grasses. Warblers, wrens and vireos examine foliage. Creepers and nuthatches search the bark of trees. Swallows and flycatchers guard the air. Waterbirds feed on insects in the water. Other important insect-eaters are: vesper sparrow, rose-breasted grosbeak, wren, brown creeper, flicker, martin, nighthawk, bobolink, starling, snipe, grebes, gulls, terns, cranes and bitterns.

acteristic. It may be the associationist psychology favoured by Wordsworth. Many modern works, naturally, are influenced by Freudian analysis and reflect an informed interest in the workings of the unconscious mind.

"From the challenging complexity of Hamlet to the baffling simplicity of Lord Jim, the imaginative writer confronts us with the psychological subtleties that can fascinate or irritate, that compel many questions and evade final answers. But . . . the writer is psychologically useful to us when he perceives with unusual clarity the sources of thought and action in the feelings, whether of himself or of others, and exposes these to us with uncompromising honesty."

Perhaps the case of John Stuart Mill is the most striking example of the therapeutic value of literature. Born in 1806, Mill was brought up under a strict regimen of solely intellectual stimulation. He began studying Greek when he was three, by 14 had read widely in Greek, Latin, mathematics, and English, and had begun courses in logic and political economy.

Under this regimen "His goal was to realize the Utilitarian heaven of the greatest happiness of the greatest number, by the maximizing of pleasures and the minimizing of pains," says Dr. Robbins. "In the autumn of 1826, at the age of 20, Mill suffered a prolonged depression of mind, 'a dull state of nerves,' in which he asked himself this question: 'Suppose that all your objects in life were realized; that all the changes in institutions and opinions that you are looking forward to, could be completely effected at this instant: would this be a great joy and happiness to you?' The honesty and clarity of his disciplined intellect compelled him to answer 'No!' 'And,' says Mill, 'at this my heart sank within me: the whole foundation on which my life was constructed fell down.'

"The perfect description of the resulting state of mind, which lasted for several months, Mill says he found later in a few words from Coleridge's poem Dejection:

*A grief without a pang, void,
dark and drear,
A drowsy, stifled, unimpassioned
grief,
Which finds no natural outlet or relief
In word, or sigh, or tear."*

For two years Mill suffered from this depression. Then he opened a book of Wordsworth's poems, not with any great expectations:

"What made Wordsworth's poems a medicine for my state of mind," Mill later wrote, "was that they expressed not mere outward beauty, but states of feeling, and of thought coloured by feeling, under the excitement of beauty. They seemed to be the very culture of the feelings, which I was in quest of. In them I seemed to draw from a source of inward joy, or sympathetic or imaginative pleasure, which could be shared in by all human beings; which had no connection with struggle or imperfection, but would be made richer by every improvement in the physical or social condition of man-

My Life With Peter. What is it like to be married to a man who is actor, playwright, novelist, writer of short stories, humorist and linguist. The man, of course, is Peter Ustinov, and his wife, the former Suzanne Cloutier of Ottawa, tells us about her life with him and their two children. One fact emerges in this interview with freelance broadcaster Kati Vita and that is that life is anything but dull.

The Metre Reader. The month of May is traditionally the poet's month; here is Toronto actor Tommy Tweed with another chapter from his anthology of humorous verse to lighten a May day.

Consumer Broadcast. Another report on a subject of interest to Canada's consumers. Jean Morrison is an Ottawa housewife and mother who spends her spare time doing television research, looking into consumer matters, and preparing freelance broadcasts.

SCHOOL BROADCASTS

Saskatchewan. "Choral Showcase," for all grades. Third of five broadcasts set aside for general listening to school choirs. These programs provide an opportunity for school choirs in various parts of the province to be recorded and their numbers heard over the air by Saskatchewan schools. To supplement numbers by the school choirs we have also recorded solo items by visiting artists.

undergone by the opera. It is now rather coming back into its own as a concert suite and contains some of Strauss's loveliest music, especially his setting of some of Lully's original tunes. The original version was performed at Stuttgart in 1912, and the following year Beecham did it in London (in English) with Sir Herbert Tree as Jourdain. The translation on that occasion was by none other than Somerset Maugham. In the 1950 revival at Edinburgh, also in English, Miles Malleon did the translation and played Jourdain.

On Wednesday evening we have a most interesting choral concert during which we shall hear Constant Lambert's Rio Grande. This is one of the best choral works to come out of England in the last fifty years and has a most elaborate part for solo piano, which I see is to be played by our old friend Walter Susskind. I remember in the original performance (I think it was around 1930), Sir Hamilton Harty played the piano part with the composer conducting, and the work caused a sensation. The poem is by Scheverell Sitwell and the music is full of jazz idioms. There are no woodwind instruments in the orchestra, only brass, percussion and strings. The composer asks for five percussion players and weird, exotic instruments are included in this department. Lambert specifies, among many others, Jeu de timbres (keyed glockenspiel) a small Cow-Bell (without clapper), a Chinese tom-tom, Chinese block, and a Turkish crash (this is one large suspended cymbal). He also directs that the Side-drum player should be provided with a wire brush as used in jazz bands. This stimulating work contains music of great beauty in the central section where a solo quartet sings of the calm of the night descending over the town. There is also a long and most exciting cadenza for the solo piano and the percussion instruments. This is altogether one of the masterpieces of the music of our time.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

At The United Nations. Activities at the United Nations during the past week; and stories about U.N. personalities and work of U.N. bodies, are reported regularly by Kathleen Teltsch, Matinee's on-the-spot observer. Miss Teltsch is U.N. correspondent for The New York Times.

The Wolfenden Report. When Sir John Wolfenden visited Canada recently he was interviewed by Vancouver barrister, H. A. D. Oliver. In 1958, Sir John was appointed chairman of the Departmental Committee set up in England to study homosexual offences and prostitution. The findings and recommendations of that committee were issued last year in a report which has become widely known as the Wolfenden Report. Sir John and Mr. Oliver discuss that report today. Sir John Wolfenden is Vice Chancellor of Reading University, England.

Books On A Desert Island. George Woodcock, Vancouver author and editor of the University of British Columbia quarterly, Canadian Literature, begins a new series of broadcasts on an old subject: "If I were marooned on a desert island, what books would I want?" Mr. Woodcock's theory is that they wouldn't necessarily be the greatest books but they would be books that would combine entertainment, a power to provoke thought and a power to keep the reader feeling a part of human life. The first one on his list is Tolstoy's "War and Peace" which he discusses today.

W-2:03 pm K-3:33 pm X-2:33 pm

TALES THE PRAIRIE TELLS

First program of a new dramatized series, based on legends about the Canadian prairies. This week—"How the Prairie Became," an original story by Marian Waldman of Winnipeg, done in the style of an Indian legend. Mighty Bird, a young Indian brave who had lost one arm in a boyhood accident, is nevertheless able to hold his own in hunting and at war. When he returns from battle to find that his young bride has disappeared his wrath and disappointment cannot be contained. He must tear up the very hills around him to find his bride. From Winnipeg.

W-3:30 pm K-4:30 pm X-3:30 pm

NATIONAL SCHOOL BROADCAST

In this broadcast, Victor Feldbrill discusses the transition of instruments from the stage of accompaniment to that of complete independence. He also explains the positioning of the various instruments in a modern symphony orchestra and the reasons for the different numbers of instruments in each section. Mr. Feldbrill points out that in Johann Sebastian Bach's time, the strings were considered the basic orchestra. In Bach's later years, he experimented a great deal with woodwinds — the oboes, flutes and bassoons. He found they added musical colour that the strings alone could not give. The percussion section of the orchestra was also becoming increasingly important. Finally, to show what power and expression can be achieved by using the complete orchestra as one unit, the last movement from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony will be played. Music included in this broadcast will include:

ALBERT PRATZ violinist, is soloist with the CBC Symphony Orchestra Friday night on radio. Mr. Pratz is concertmaster of the orchestra.

- Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 (last movement) .....Bach
  - Minuet from "Haffner" .....
  - Symphony No. 35 .....Mozart

HUMANISTIC VALUES

kind. From them I seemed to learn what would be the perennial sources of happiness, when all the greater evils of life shall have been removed. And I felt myself at once better and happier as I came under their influence."

A word on the title chosen by Dr. Robbins: "While speaking of imaginative literature in general terms, I have limited myself to examples from English and American literature but only for reasons of familiarity and ease of reference. Nor does including American writing mean that I do not regard it as a great and independent literature; merely that I have used the phrase 'English literature' in preference to a clumsier description such as 'literature written in English!'"

Born and educated in British Columbia, William Robbins graduated from the University of B.C. in 1930. High school teaching and a year at the University of London on an IODE Overseas Scholarship, were followed by college teaching in Winnipeg and Victoria. After taking his Ph.D. degree at the University of Toronto, he joined the English department of the University of B.C. where he has taught for the past 15 years. Dr. Robbins is co-editor with Professor E. Morrison, of a book of essays, As a Man Thinks, and author of many articles. His most recent book, The Ethical Idealism of Matthew Arnold, was published in September, 1959.

The Canadian Navy After Fifty Years

Some background facts for viewers of the special R.C.N. anniversary programs on CBC-TV, starting this Saturday

THIS YEAR the Royal Canadian Navy celebrates its fiftieth anniversary. The story begins on May 4, 1910, when Royal assent was given to the Naval Service Act. By 1914, the Royal Canadian Navy consisted of two ships and less than 400 officers and men. During the First World War about 9,600 Canadians served in the navy.

During the 1920's the RCN shrank to two destroyers and 366 officers and men, but gradually expanded again in the '30's until, in 1939, it had six destroyers, another about to be commissioned, and five minesweepers.

Then began a remarkable war-time effort by the nation to build up what became the third largest Allied navy: from 11 ships and 3,657 personnel on active service at the declaration of war, the RCN expanded to 392 armed ships and 95,000 officers, men and Wrens. The major RCN effort centred on the Battle of the Atlantic. From 1943 onward, the RCN was responsible for nearly half the convoy work in the North Atlantic. And in mid-1944 it undertook the close escort of all North Atlantic convoys, and at the same time provided 110 ships and 10,000 men for the invasion of Normandy. The Canadian warships were wholly or partially credited with sinking 29 enemy submarines, and with the capture or destruction of 42 enemy surface vessels.

Canadian ships and landing craft also took part in landings in North Africa, Sicily and Southern France; destroyers and motor torpedo boats fought in the English Channel and other narrow seas; Canadian operated aircraft carriers escorted convoys to North Russia, and raided the enemy-held Norwegian coast; in 1945 a Canadian cruiser took part in Pacific operations against Japan. After the war, of course, came peace-time reductions. In 1950, however, the RCN again went into action, this time in Korean waters where, for the next three years, eight Canadian ships and 3,500 officers and men saw service. And again in 1957 the United Nations called on the RCN to transport troops, supplies and vehicles to the newly-created U.N. Emergency Force in the Middle East.

Today the RCN has 60 ships and 150 aircraft in operation, with about 20,000 officers, men and Wrens. Following the Second World War naval planners saw the RCN's best role as an anti-submarine force. This belief was confirmed by the post-war development of atomic-powered submarines capable of firing missiles with atomic warheads. And with the formation of NATO's Allied Command Atlantic in 1952, the RCN was asked to take the special anti-submarine role.

The largest unit of the fleet at present is the aircraft carrier HMCS Bonaventure, with a displacement of 20,000 tons and a ship's company of more than 1,000. From her deck fly Canadian-built Tracker anti-submarine aircraft. Depending on the mission, the Bonaventure may also carry either anti-submarine helicopters or Banshee twin-jet all-weather fighters armed with the side-winder missile. With the carrier providing the essential aerial element, the surface strength of the RCN is spear-headed by four squadrons of destroyer escort. The majority of these ships are new, designed and built in Canada with a reputation as the best ships of their kind in the world.

These destroyer escorts are of two classes: St. Laurent and Restigouche, both designed essentially for the anti-submarine warfare. Their main armament consists of electronically - controlled mortars that fire high-explosive projectiles with great accuracy in any direction, and homing torpedoes that pursue and destroy an enemy target on or below the surface of the sea. Radar-controlled high-velocity 3-inch guns form their anti-aircraft and surface armament.

Making up the rest of the fleet are two squadrons of frigates, two minesweeper squadrons, two escort repair ships, some local patrol craft, and two British submarines on loan to the RCN for training purposes. Future plans include construction of six more destroyer-escorts and a large tanker-supply vessel.

The modern navy, with its highly complex electronic basis, seems radically different from the sail-propelled navy of a century ago. Yet, in an article written just two years ago, Rear-Admiral Walter Hose, CBE, RCN (Ret'd), a man who started his naval career in sail in 1889, argues that certain things stay the same:

"I must refer to seamanship in modern sea-going," he wrote. "Seamanship means being the master of your ship, and the ability to be prepared for, and to cope with, any of the peculiar contingencies and difficulties which arise at sea, and the lore of the sea calls for all the resourcefulness and initiative that it ever did.

"During my trip in the St. Laurent (which Admiral Hose took in 1957) the ship refuelled at sea five times. I had the greatest admiration for the seamanship displayed. It requires just as good seamanship to gauge the right degree of helm, and the correct increase or decrease of revolutions to maintain the ship in position, under such conditions, as it did to watch the weather leach of the main-top sail, when sailing close-hauled, to prevent its going flat aback, and the results of an error in judgment might well prove worse today than it would have then."

Land-based sailors who regret the good old days when seamen were seamen and not electronic dial-readers may learn something from an old salt.

No Talent

• Let us admit that Toronto has no real talent and give us shows from across the border. They've got it; admit we have not. The phony English accents, Duffy and Creely, are abominable. Toby Roberts and Anna Cameron are not my cup of tea. Would like to see other females occasionally on them quiz programs.—Mrs. A. D., Winnipeg.

Shakespeare, Etc.

• I heartily agree with Mrs. G., the revolutionary of Englefield. Certainly let us burn Shakespeare's works. His drama and poetry, drawn from the essence of life itself, are surely too strong meat for our over-protected children. But don't stop there. Demand the obliteration of all geniuses; all great men are contaminated with the same truth. Ban Beethoven, destroy Rembrandt, suppress Einstein! Long live censorship! Mediocrity over all!—Sylvia D., Winnipeg.

Bewildered

• Professor Wardle's Little Nell is Dead (April 17-23 issue), which I have just read, and enjoyed, leaves me somewhat bewildered. He says that "the death of Agnes Copperfield caused Prime Minister Lord John Russell and his good lady to sob like Johnny Ray." Like Mr. Wardle I also had read and re-read most of Dickens' books by the time I was twelve, and I decided that surely my memory must be playing me false. I raked out my old and cherished copy of David Copperfield and found that the closing paragraphs read as follows: My lamp burns low, and I have written far into the night, but the dear presence, without which I were nothing, bears me company. Oh Agnes, O my soul, so may thy face be by me when I close my life indeed . . ." Is Mr. Wardle sure that it was not the death of David's first little insipid child wife, Dora, which caused the Prime Minister and his lady such harrowing grief?—Mrs. Robert A. Wilson, Calgary.

Hour With Juliette

• Those of us who have at any time had occasion to complain to the CBC have a certain obligation also to praise when we feel a program especially merits such praise. I am referring to An Hour With Juliette. It was young, fresh, uncluttered, and with a human interest sustained throughout. Thank you for one of the happiest hours I have spent in front of our TV. I think we appreciated it more because the Perry Como show coming on immediately afterwards seemed contrived, cluttered, and just plain tired.—Mrs. P. G., Winnipeg.

Easter Programs

• This is just a personal note to congratulate you on making available so many fine programs on both radio and television. The Easter programs were particularly good, especially those on Good Friday. The Face of God was a valuable contribution, and The Hill was a moving experience.—Dr. A. A. B., Saskatoon.

• The Hill was in supreme bad taste. One's faith has to be pretty strong to survive such sadistic garbage, believe me.—J. W., Edmonton.

• This is a word of commendation for the Good Friday production. The Hill. Leaving the artistic criticism to the professionals, let me say that I enjoyed it most thoroughly. The whole thing was handled masterfully, and it lacked that "gooey" piety that one so often associates with productions of this type. Those types of films steeped in religious sentimentality do more harm than good. Yes, indeed, BRAVO.—K. J. B., Grand Seminaire, Saint Boniface, Man.

Racial Discrimination

• I would like to thank you for the program on racial discrimination. I hope the listeners to Trans-Canada Matinee were many that afternoon. It was a timely program, since casting our eyes abroad we may say "Lord I thank thee that I am not as other men are." It is, however, a matter of degree, which is an elusive thing sometimes. However, let us not forget to speak our piece at the right time.—E. D., Saskatoon.

Questions and Answers

• Will you be kind enough to tell me if the wrestling program on CBWT is a film.—Mrs. J. Van L., Pipestone, Man.

Yes.

• Are Denise Pelletier on The Town Above and Gilles Pelletier on R.C.M.P. and The Town Above husband and wife?—K. B., Edmonton.

No—brother and sister.

EXPERT ON RUSSIA

MacMillan and Eisenhower and everyone had said, 'by all means come and talk whenever you like,' then the whole thing would have been deflated at once. If you say, 'no, we must prepare for the summit, this is a very difficult thing, everything depends on it,' then everything does depend on it. When it fails you lose heart as they did after Geneva. . . ."

"If one takes a fairly rigid view of how civilizations rise and fall I should say the Russian one is the one coming up. It's got the vitality, it's making all the immense mistakes (but) it's on the move. . . ."

Leiterman: Looking ahead then you see us in danger of becoming an isolated island of freedom in a sea of Communism?

Crankshaw: I see a very very great danger of it but the fault is ours, not theirs.

Leiterman: Can we do anything to prevent this happening?

Crankshaw: Just go on trusting God and education, I think. . . . That's all we've got. We've suddenly lost heart in education, just because the first results were not what we expected — or what our fathers expected.
