Skipper of the Prairie Schooner

Richard Seaborn, conductor of the CBC's Prairie Schooner series, lives today in the house at 594 Arlington Street, Winnipeg, in which he was born; and this unbroken sojourn may be in a sense symbolic of his long, steady, and industrious career as a musician.

Dick played Mozart's difficult D Major Violin Concerto in public recital at the age of ten. He won the open violin competition at the Manitoba Musical Festival and the Gold Medal of the Toronto Conservatory in 1926-27. As events proved, music was to remain the central motif of his life, but other plans and purposes stirred him in his student years, and he did not settle down to his main vocation at once.

After graduation (B.A.) at the University of Alberta, he spent two and a half years studying theology with the definite intention of entering the ministry. But he could not leave the violin alone, and his technique advanced with such rapidity and brilliance that it carried all before it. Hearing him play the famous Paganini Concerto in D in Edmonton in 1932, Harold Samuel, celebrated pianist, predicted an outstanding career for him.

Sometime later during his studies, Dick happened by chance to meet Jacques Thibaud, eminent concert violinist, and was asked to play for him. That settled all doubts. Thibaud recommended that he should go to New York and study there with Louis Persinger at the Juilliard School of Music. Feeling that he was not yet ready for this, Dick went instead to Calgary to continue work with a pupil of the famous Leopold Auer — Gregori Carbovitsky, who was then permanent conductor of the Calgary Symphony Orchestra. But before a year was out he had put all doubts behind him, and was on his way to New York. He spent four years at the Juilliard, studying violin with Persinger and conducting with Hans Letz.

RICHARD SEABORN

As concertmaster of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, and formerly of the Calgary Symphony (at the age of 17), as performer and conductor in many CBC programs (Classical Strings, Prairie Schooner, CBC Concert Orchestra, etc.), Dick has remained since his return from New York at the forefront of western Canadian music. Yet mid-course in a busy professional career, he has never abandoned his studies. Only two years ago he took his Bachelor of Music degree at the University of Chicago. For the past eleven years he has been assistant conductor as well as concertmaster of the Winnipeg Symphony.

One new interest has attracted Dick recently. In June, 1958, he was elected to the Manitoba Legislature for his home constituency, and during sessions of the house he has pressed quietly, but persistently, for government attention to the cultural needs of the community. A provincial grant to the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra has been one of the results of his efforts, but he has not confined his advocacy to music. Art, literature, museum antiquities, and many other things of cultural importance, have found in him an equally strong advocate. He wants a proper cultural centre built in Winnipeg, and has no hesitancy in speaking out for it.

A warm supporter of national radio and television, Dick feels that where H.M. the Queen will see the 100th running of the Queen's Plate, to be broadcast Tuesday on CBC radio and television.

The Strange Story of The Queen's Plate

(Details on other Royal Visit broadcasts this week—page 5)

On June 30, Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, will attend the 100th running of the Queen's Plate at the New Woodbine Race Track in Toronto. This is the oldest stake race run continuously in North America. Queen Victoria donated the first purse in 1860. A horse named Don Juan won it over a mile and a-half.

The stakes have risen since then and the distance shrunk. Today a winning horse will pick up $50,000 (plus the Queen's 50 guineas) for racing over a mile and one-quarter. Nevertheless, the 50 guineas are obviously of more attraction to most owners than the $50,000. One man, for instance, paid a reported $30,000 for a promising horse to win the Plate. Another recent winner failed to win the Plate with 23 horses before succeeding; and at that time, breeding and training a horse for the Plate might cost around $10,000. There are better ways of making money than this.

The Queen's Plate is limited to Canadian-born three-year-olds. Decision to enter a horse for the Plate must be made before its first birthday, two-and-a-half years before the actual race. All horses have their official birthday on the same day, January 1, regardless of their actual birth date). A $50 fee on its second official birthday, another $100 on May 1, the year of the race, and a final $500 on the eve of the race complete the long process. At any stage a horse may be injured or fail to show form; but if the owner withdraws, any money he has paid (including the $500) is forfeit.

Although local and Royal Household records indicate the Queen's Plate started in 1860, rumours persist that its history goes even further back. Encyclopedia Canadiana, for instance, reports that the Plate was "originally endowed by King William IV in 1836." Perhaps the reference here is to a Quebec race which apparently was abandoned years ago.

Then again, back in 1909 a Mr. E. King Dodds published a book called Canadian Turf Recollections in which he looked back over 40 years of racing. He quotes a program of the Newcastle Turf Club of (Please turn to page 5)

* LIVE A BORROWED LIFE *

ARE YOU a policeman with an expert knowledge of the life of Napoleon? . . . If so you may stump the panel on Live a Borrowed Life and win yourself some money. "We're looking for little old ladies who are experts on the life of Marilyn Monroe, and truck drivers who know all about Louis Pasteur," says Claude Baikie, producer of this new CBC-TV quiz show.

The panel on Live a Borrowed Life has three minutes to establish the identity assumed by the contestant. The longer the panel fails, the greater the contestant's prize money.

BUT: for every question he answers wrongly, the contestant loses some of his prize money. "Naturally," says Baikie, "no contestant will leave the program showing a loss."

So—if you're an expert on the life of some famous figure, living or dead, write to:

European Drama

Further information on "Space Ship Vega," described briefly in last week's issue. The action takes place 300 years from now. War is imminent—more so than it has been at any time since the last great conflict in the middle of the 20th century; the conflict is still between western and Communist ideologies. The script, adapted from the German of Friedrich Durrenmatt by Ingeborg Woodcock, concerns the efforts of the west to establish an arms base on Venus, which had been used exclusively as a penal settlement in the 23rd century. When a group of western diplomats arrive on the planet, hoping to find the settlement amenable to Earth's intentions, they find a complete lack of government among the inhabitants. So great is their fight against the elements (which cause the entire population to live in water-craft to escape the continual terrestrial upheavals) that the preservation of human life is their prime aim. Outsiders with their views from the old settlements on earth are not welcome, but war is coming and any expedient is worth the sacrifice of ideals. As the drama draws to its end listeners must draw their own conclusions as to the worth of total human conflict. From Vancouver.

Royal Visit Schedule

CBC radio and TV cover three major events of the Royal Tour live this week while radio carries a fourth and fifth. The events are:

Sunday (radio only): Church Service from Kingston.

Tuesday: 100th running of the Queen's Plate at New Woodbine.

Wednesday: Address to the Nation from Ottawa.

Wednesday: Unveiling of the Commonwealth Air Forces memorial.

Thursday (radio only): Visit to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival.

CBC technicians will be taking special precautions during Her Majesty's address to the Nation on Dominion Day. As with the very successful 1957 broadcast, a complete set of spare cameras, microphones and lines will be standing by, ready for use in the event of technical difficulties.

To cover the Queen's Plate, producer George Retzlaff will have eight cameras including one on a hydraulic lift at the starting gate to get a birdseye view of the Queen going round the track and of the start of the race. When the Queen arrives at the track CBC cameras will record the event on videotape. An hour later, the actual program will open live, at the track, and then in a few minutes go to the video tape to show the arrival of 60 minutes earlier.

After about 25 minutes the cameras will return, live, to Woodbine and show the Royal Party in the paddock area meeting owners and jockeys as the horses parade. The Plate starts about 15 minutes later. After the race, cameras will show the Queen making the presentation to the winner, and stay until the Queen leaves.

I cannot wear fashionable clothes. People would doubt the existence of the Almighty if they saw me dressed like that. — Dame Edith Sitwell, the English poetress, speaking in a BBC television interview.

PORTABLE TV CAMERA developed in France is used by CBC to cover parts of the Royal Tour. The battery-operated transmitter is carried on the operator's back.

QUEEN'S PLATE

June, 1841. It advertises "The Queen's Plate of £25"—three-year-olds to carry 9 stone 7 pounds and on up to six years and aged to carry 11 stone 7 pounds. "Gentleman riders. Entrance, £5. (Signed) A. G. Allan, Secretary." — This, presumably, was a Queen's Plate the Queen never heard about.

It was, we hope, one of these unofficial Plates which Mr. Dodds describes: "I once saw a Queen's Plate awarded to a horse when to allow him to win it was necessary to pull another horse all over the track . . . with the pulling and yanking done all down the stretch. . . ."

Mr. Dodds also tells of a trainer of the time who just would not allow his horses to be pulled. His honesty did not perturb the gambling element. They bet on his horses and pulled all the other contestants in the race. When he entered a slow horse, the race apparently, came down to a jog.

A desire to clean up such situations led to the founding of the Ontario Jockey Club at Woodbine. An innkeeper and sportsman named Duggan originally owned this property. About 1874 two men called Pardee and Howell acquired half of the property and built an inn and a harness racing track.

Unfortunately, the patrons were a pretty rough bunch; fortunately the inn burnt down and the track went broke. Messrs. Pardee and Howell disappeared, and the property reverted to Mr. Duggan. In June, 1881, at Mr. Duggan's suggestion, a group of interested people decided to form the Ontario Jockey Club and race at Woodbine. The club flourished, and in 1884 Queen Victoria stipulated that the Queen's Plate should be held there permanently. (Previously, it had wandered round Ontario, with its first four years at the Carlton Course of the Toronto Turf Club).

Down through the years the Plate has caused immense excitement among racing fans, and some controversy. Mr. Dodds, for instance, back in 1909 recalled the 1873 Plate, won by a horse named Mignonette. "Some miserable kicker" (recalls Mr. Dodds in his usual vigorous style) started a whispering campaign that Mignonette was foreign bred and hence should be disallowed the Plate. The owner, a Mr. Pringle, stopped this nonsense by offering his oath and a thousand-dollar bet that his horse was a true Canadian.

(One last irrelevant quote from Mr. Dodds' Recollections: "I do not mean to imply that the latter class of vehicle—automobiles—has not its uses, but I do unhesitatingly declare that any vehicle that costs $1,000 a year to keep in repair and for supplies is not an article that will ever replace the horse in public favour").

After this example, it is dangerous to make predictions. But it seems likely that no other race in Canada will replace the Queen's Plate in the favour both of owners and of the racing public.

His mission, he said, was to seek the truth and to make all men seek it with him, and the truth, he claimed, was to be found not in the external world of matter, but in man himself. This line of thought was so revolutionary, and Socrates' method of propounding it so very revealing of the ignorance of the rulers of Athens, that he was considered a

Mary Grannan

Twenty years ago this Sunday a frightened little Maritime schoolmarm wearing a large, eye-catching hat stepped up to a CBC microphone in Toronto, and in a friendly voice proceeded to charm the first of the thousands of young listeners who were to fall under the spell of her stories of make-believe.

Now, well over two thousand scripts and several dozen hats later, Mary Grannan is opening up the world of fantasy for the children—and even grandchildren—of some of her original listeners. Just thinking about her tremendous output of scripts over the years is enough to make most writers run screaming from the room, but Mary takes it all in her stride. "I rarely repeat a script," she told a CBC Times reporter. "It's a bit of a challenge to me; I'd hate to think I was drying up!" There's small chance of that. If there's an adventuresome flea-about-town or entertaining bee, mouse, chipmunk, dog, cat, elf or goblin who hasn't made the acquaintance of Miss Grannan, he must live in a part of the world exceedingly remote. But chances are she'll get around to him soon.

We asked her if she followed a strict writing routine. She raised expressive eyebrows. "I most certainly do. I line up each of my scripts at night after I get into bed—sort it out in my mind; and then I get up very early the next morning, six or sevenish, and put it down on paper in my apartment. In the afternoon I go over to my office in the CBC Radio Building and edit it, catch up on my letters from listeners, etc., and that's my day.

Where do all those fantastic ideas of hers come from? "Well, she said, "I keep my eyes and ears peeled for interesting or amusing things and then weave in a bit of

Even though in natural science we can start where the last man left off—that is to say, we can take the best kind of penicillin and make it better, or we can take the fastest aeroplane or rocket and make it faster the most devastating atomic bomb and make it more deadly—no-one today is at all sure how the initial stroke of intuition by which a new scientific discovery is born comes about in the first place. It follows, therefore, that while every director of research knows how many science graduates he is likely to need to pursue his existing programme . . . the best of them are very much worried as to how they can foster one individual who will discover something quite new.—Dr. Magnus Pyke, F.R.S.E. on BBC.

Film Award to CBC

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation received a Special Award in the Eleventh Annual Canadian Film Awards at a presentation in Toronto on Friday, June 5.

The award was made to the CBC "for its encouragement of the appreciation of good film-making over the years, notably through the programs The Movie Scene and Music From the Films."

The award to the CBC was received by J. D. Nixon, assistant director of network radio programming, from W. J. Sheridan, president of the Canadian Public Relations Society and assistant general manager of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

The Canadian Film Awards were established in 1947 to bring attention to Canadian-produced films, to recognize Canadian creative effort and to raise the general standards of Canadian film production. The awards are sponsored by the Canadian Film Institute, the Canadian Association for Adult Education and the Canada Foundation.

Children Are to be Seen

Young talent will play an important part in new children's programs in fall TV schedule

After one of the longest runs on television, CBC's five-year-old Howdy Doody program steps aside next fall to make time available for new creative and imaginative children's programs.

CBC's tentative fall schedule of children's television programs re-are "Battersea Dogs' Home" and "Woodcarvers," a film shot especially for Junior Magazine in the Gaspé Peninsula.

Sky King

Adventure series about a flying rancher. This week—"Note for a Dam." Sky and Penny are held captive by a madman who plans to blow up a dam because his son was killed during its construction.

Chevy Show

Variety show with John Raitt, Janet Blair, and special guests.

A Long View on Canadian History

Second of two filmed discussions between Prof. Donald Creighton of the department of history, University of Toronto, and Prof. Paul Fox of the department of political science, University of Toronto.

Command in Battle

Second of seven programs on famous battles of World War II, presented by Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. This week—the Battle of Mareth—the story of the beginning of the end of the war in North Africa. Field Marshal Montgomery will show how the link-up with the First Army and the Americans after the Eighth Army had broken through the Mareth Line, was the prelude to the defeat of the German forces in that theatre of war. As the terrain played a vital part in the Mareth Battle the Field Marshal will use a specially-made model of the Mareth Line.

The Show That Jack Built

flects a trend towards having more children to entertain children.

In describing the fall schedule and giving the reasons for dropping Howdy Doody, Dr. Frederick Rainsberry, supervisor of children's programs, said:

"We have brought back several programs that have been very successful in the past. It is our policy to get producers to build upon what they have already done successfully. We have also introduced new, creative, entertaining and educational programs. We have now developed sufficient Canadian talent to build a schedule of our own. This is one of the reasons why we have dropped Howdy Doody.

"This is no discredit to the people who have played in it or worked on it in other ways. It was originally an American idea and was made to be a commercial program.

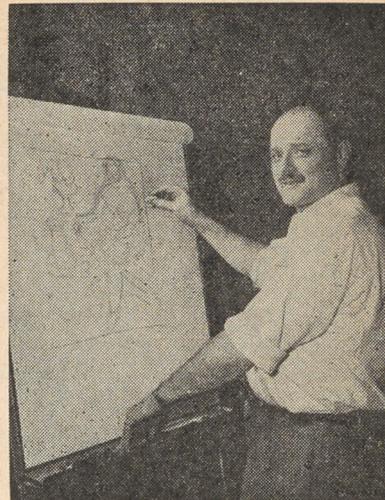

"We now feel we will have greater freedom for creativity and imagination in using the time, previously occupied three days a week by Howdy Doody, to give us a broader basis for program development. We intend to use those who have served Howdy Doody in other creative ways."

Two new live half-hour drama series, one from Toronto and the other from Vancouver, will probably have children playing leading roles. A showcase of young talent will be a new feature of Junior Magazine and children will participate in a number of other programs.

"We have planned the schedule to meet the wide and varied tastes of children in all age groups," said Dr. Rainsberry. "We are trying to build a truly national network schedule with contributions from all parts of Canada for young Canadians."

The hour given to live children's television programs on weekdays will be split in two. The first half hour will be mainly of interest to four- to eight-year-old youngsters

Johnny Holmes Back on CBC

Johnny Holmes, whose dance band was the idol of young Montrealers during the 1940's and the spawning ground for such top musicians as Oscar Peterson, Maynard Ferguson, Art Morrow and Ted Elfstrom, is back in business.

Starting this week (July 1) he'll lead a small dance band on CBC radio on The Johnny Holmes Show, summer replacement for Meet Mr. Morrow on Wednesday afternoons.

Johnny left the entertainment world eight years ago because of business interests, but his gnawing desire for music never diminished; he gets a "spring fever for music" every year, and welcomes the opportunity to do a radio show. It came about when he visited the CBC Montreal studios recently to hear Art Morrow's band on Meet Mr. Morrow. Montreal program director Ken Withers suggested nostalgically that Johnny should get back into business, and the need for a summer replacement for Meet Mr. Morrow paved the way.

Johnny Holmes took piano lessons from a private teacher and taught himself to play the cornet—a 10th birthday gifts from his father. When he was only 14, after playing in a church orchestra and in military bands, he was offered a position in the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, which he couldn't accept; even then he was too busy!

Holmes is the man whose tireless efforts helped mould the potential of the great Oscar Peterson in the '40's. As a young pianist with natural talent but little experience with a band, Peterson received the expert coaching of Holmes for a couple of hours every day. Peterson was brought into the band by sax-player Art Morrow, and remained with it for about six years. Today Holmes takes vicarious pleasure in the great pianist's achievements. He hopes to have Peterson as guest on The Johnny Holmes Show this month.

Most of the music for The Johnny Holmes Show will be arranged by Johnny and his alto saxophonist Al Baculis. They've been working on arrangements since February.

"The most important thing to me is to have a relaxed sound," Johnny says. He wants a good beat, a mellow band that is pleasant to the ear. He shuns rock 'n' roll.

"Albert's Place"

Albert's Place is almost any spot where a child might like to play make-believe or make things.

This new CBC Vancouver television show, aimed at children of the six to nine-year-old group, will begin on Wednesday, July 1, on CBC-TV.

Producer Len Lauk says that the show will feature Albert himself—a little, smartly-dressed puppet—who will be entertained by singing guitarist John Chappell, handyman Bob Clothier and storyteller Nonie Stewart. Script for the 13-week series is by Kitty Marcuse.

"I'm intensely enthusiastic about this little show," says producer Lauk. "We expect our young viewers will continue in their own "place" after the show has finished each afternoon, carry on making the things they have been seeing on the program, and perhaps compose little songs after the manner of John Chappell.

"The show actually takes place in a studio attic, but it could be anywhere in the house, perhaps a rumpus room, a playroom or a basement," said Mr. Lauk.

"This will be more than just a show to watch," he said. "They'll be able to participate too."

* * *

It is difficult for the ordinary citizen to realize how large a part the law plays in preserving and maintaining the most enduring elements in our way of life; but to the dedicated lawyer the condition of all ordered government is dependent on law, and only by the sustaining power of law can all the varied activities of men and women flourish and develop to make a happy and a healthy State. I believe, therefore, that in any civilized state there must be wise laws and wise administration; and to that end there should be a body of men and women, schooled and expert in the law, available to defend the rights of the citizen, when necessary, from whatever quarter they are assailed; and that there should be independent and fearless judges to maintain the rights of the citizen and to be a sure defence against tyranny.—The Rt. Hon. Lord Birkett, P.C., on BBC.

these media have been the strongest unifying forces in Canada in recent years.

"They link us from coast to coast," he says, "and the chain they make is genuinely a cultural one. Without the CBC we could not have our symphony orchestra in Winnipeg. Many cities in the United States twice our size have no comparable cultural development."

Though essentially a virtuoso, Dick likes conducting, and sees the conductor primarily as an interpreter of the composer's work. Having played under many of the world's leading conductors, he has noticed how compositions may be vastly changed by the personality of the man conducting them, although the musical page may remain the same. Sir John Barbirolli is the leader to whom he pays greatest tribute.

and the remaining half hour for children eight years old and over.

For older children, Prof. George Swinton, University of Manitoba, will bring drawings, paintings and sculpture to life in Act in Action, a half-hour program from Winnipeg on Wednesdays.

After an absence of two years, Sports Time will return to the network, this time featuring recreational activities for younger children.

Friendly Giant with Robert Homme has proved so successful that it will be seen twice a week in the fall for 15 minutes on Tuesdays and for a half hour on Wednesdays.

On Safari, which will be introduced in the summer schedule, will continue in the fall on Mondays. Also on Mondays will be Let's Look, from Halifax, and Science All Around Us, from Ottawa. Ross the Builder, a familiar figure on CBC television, will return on Thursdays; Junior Magazine will be seen Sundays, and Maggie Muggins will be back Tuesdays.

The Passing of the Street Car

A bit of nostalgia by JEAN HINDS, CBC MorningCommentator for Saskatchewan(as broadcast on CBK)

I was listening to the radio the other evening when I heard a brief item about the street cars in Ottawa—the latest street cars to disappear in the march of progress.

Apparently their passing in Ottawa was attended by a half-humorous mourning. They had one old street car draped in black. They bade farewell to the out-of-date vehicles almost as if they loved the old things.

Now, a street car is surely not an object of affection. Yet those of us who grew up in a city can un-large brown paper parcels. At bonspiel time, after the year of a good crop, we could just about fill half a street car with relatives and their belongings.

The earliest street cars I remember were two-man cars, each with a motorman and a conductor. They had long seats facing each other, covered in green plush—dusty green plush. They weren't as good for eavesdropping as the buses with two rows of double seats, but they were excellent for staring at the people on the opposite seat.

One of our cousins had developed a technique of staring. None of us had much money, but she and her husband may have been a little more hard up than the rest of us. She had a very shabby muff she used to carry during a cold winter, but she hated it as a woman can only hate a piece of clothing that is useful but ugly. She was sensitive about it. When she went out she felt everyone was looking at that ratty old muff. On the street car it was bad because there were people sitting opposite who had nothing to do but stare at her muff. So she said, "Whenever I see anybody looking at my muff I just start looking at their feet. I look hard at their feet, and sometimes I pretend I'm trying not to laugh. After a while they begin to shuffle their feet and I know they're wondering what's the matter with them." She knew something about psychology even if she did have a ratty old muff.

In the hot summer in Winnipeg the street car company used to put on a few open cars, enclosed not by wooden walls, but only by rails, so that the breezes blew delightfully through them. When the blazing hot days of summer arrived we took excursions in the open cars to the end of the line and back. No wind in the palms in a tropic paradise ever stirred more deliciously derstand why they draped that car in black. When the street car passes away some people feel the way others have felt when a faithful old horse died.

Trolley buses are more efficient; they're faster quieter, they pull up to the curb to load. I'm quite satisfied to have them—and at the same time to keep that nostalgic affection for the street cars.

When we were small, taxis were something to be used at weddings and funerals. Calling a taxi at any other time was simply wild extravagance. When our relatives came in from the country to visit us, loaded with luggage, all available members of the family were at the station to meet them, to stagger to the street car with the luggage. I can still see the old street cars merrily loaded with half a dozen cousins, their "grips," and many

Starting Friday on CBC-TV

A New Quiz — Who Knows?

A new TV panel show called Who Knows? starts on the CBC network this Friday (July 3). Moderator James Bannerman will present an object—anything from a Chinese musical instrument to a South American backscratcher—to a panel of scientists who must then say what it is.

Regular panelists will be Walter Kenyon, anthropologist, and John Lunn, archeologist, both of the Royal Ontario Museum. First guest will be William Mayer-Oakes of the University of Toronto.

The combination of science and the "Voice of Wednesday Night's" James Bannerman, has led some people to think Who Knows? will be a highbrow show. Producer Vincent Tovell disagrees strongly. "It will be about as highbrow as an Agatha Christie detective yarn," he says.

The comparison is apt. Previous experiments with this format on CBC Toronto's Tabloid (under the title What in the World?) showed how detectives and anthropologists have similar lines of reasoning.

On one occasion Tabloid presented the panel with a stick, broken at one end and pointed at the other. Within minutes the panel correctly identified the stick as being part of a fishtrap built by the Huron Indians and mentioned by Champlain in his diary.

The deduction took four steps. (1) The kind of wood showed the stick was North American. (2) A ring just above the point separating different colourations suggested the stick had been in water with the point protected, presumably by being stuck in mud. (3) This suggested to the panel a fishtrap of the kind Huron Indians used to make. These were widely used after the white man brought metal tools to North America. The only known fishtrap built prior to the white man was mentioned by Champlain in his diary. (4) The axe marks that sharpened the point of the Tabloid stick were, to the expert eye, obviously made not by metal but by a stone axe. Therefore, the stick probably came from Champlain's fishtrap.

The panels are not always so sharp. On one occasion the members turned a Roman meathook into a backscratcher. "We'll be trying to catch the panel members out by using objects which look like something else and even by

Harpisichord Music

• I want to express my appreciation for the airing of Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue in D as played by Fr. Clayton Barclay recently. This was a completely new insight into this tremendous work. Our antiquated text-books all tell us that the harpsichord was a feeble instrument with no sustaining power. This performance certainly gives the lie to the books! After hearing the broadcast I wonder what ever made people of the 19th century lose all interest in this fascinating instrument. I should like to know why we don't hear more of this kind of music. It seems to me that Bach's keyboard works are sadly neglected. It would be of great help to students of these works to hear what they sound like on the instrument for which they were written. I have taught music for many years and it has been my experience that students who have difficulty with Bach change their attitude after hearing his music played on the harpsichord. There must be 50 other good composers whose music is never heard simply because most pianists don't know what to do with them on the piano. We hear so much of the standard works of Beethoven, Chopin, Schuman, Schubert, etc. Why don't you give us a relief with some of the delightful music of Handel, Telemann, Rameau, Couperin, Scarlatti, Frescobaldi, Gabrieli, Byrd, Gibbons, Froberger, Sweelinck . . . to mention only a few whose music is by no means tame or dull as some may think?—M. J. H., Winnipeg.

Harpisichord music is being heard with increasing regularity on CBC radio, played by Hugh MacLean in Vancouver, Fr. Barclay in Winnipeg, Kelsey Jones in Montreal and Greta Kraus and Douglas Bodle in Toronto. M. J. H. can hear more music by Bach, and some by Handel, played by Mr. Bodle this Sunday on radio—see page 20. Dr. Jones will be heard in music by Handel and Couperin next week.

MUSIC ON RADIO

By CHESTER DUNCAN, Winnipeg musician, teacher and critic

The particular Hell reserved for music critics, I imagine, must be the endless performances of pieces that audiences love not wisely but too well, or of pieces that are so good they become ubiquitous, not to say iniquitous. Needless to say such a sticky end is hardly the fault of the composer, who has built his own abode of the blessed and who is now, we hope, occupying it. It is no one's fault really, but merely the result of the fact that adults, like children, want to hear what they like again and again, until familiarity itself becomes a friend in a world full of dangerous and unfamiliar things. But in the midst of these extra-musical enjoyments or disasters one thing remains—the work itself, unspoiled, brilliant, outlasting us all.

Take the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto for example, to be performed by Howard Leyton-Brown in the program by the CBC Symphony on Sunday night. All the things that one might write about it after years of intrusive repetition and fading hope, all the bright or learned things that would seek to revive one's dead taste—are as nothing to a new listener. It is he whom the critics forget about, the one who is coming new this week to Mendelssohn, to Beethoven, to Brahms, with the joy and strength of the stranger. I like to think of these encounters, as the music of the week, some of it apparently so hackneyed, makes itself heard. If there are enough of them the music will truly live, and in them, vicariously, the critic will find his hope of seizing upon that which is imperishable, and, incidentally, of avoiding that Hell of the pain of extension. If he listens with the good ears of the young enthusiast, he will hear the ever-young Mendelssohn of this concerto, with the clean, effortless flight of the first movement, the pure Victorian tenderness of the Andante, and the midsummer magic of the Finale.

Beethoven's music also, at times, has to deal with the peculiarly modern circumstance of the jaded ear. However, in his case there is so much good music that some of it is always turning up as comparatively fresh, even though the idiom is easily recognizable. The Second Symphony in D (to be played this Sunday in the Winnipeg Summer Concert) is an example of the freshly old. Nobody is going to claim that it is as "great" a work as the Third, the Fifth, the Seventh, or the Ninth, but constant listeners are going to bless this unpretentious number in which Beethoven, still working with ingenuity and energetic skill the Haydn-Mozart plot, turns up some extraordinarily rich humor. It is more proper to think of it as buried treasure, I suppose, because, as is often the case with this composer, you often wonder how anything could come out of the bare, even at times stony, ground of his initial materials. Yet, by a kind of dogged persistence, the composer settles to the task, and before one knows it, the shape and beauty of a Beethoven discovery has appeared. One has to have a little time for Beethoven because, unlike flashier writers, he never gives it all away at the beginning. However, from the very beginning the music has plenty of vitamins—there's never any "atmospheric" lolling about—and soon the brilliant and subtle decoration is making all the details shine. On the whole this Second Symphony is a serene and happy work, with an undeniably pastoral character, but this serenity and bubbling happiness seem merely the natural result of good construction, which is quite enough to make anyone happy, poets and architects tell me, without introducing "philosophy" where no one asked for it.

At the other extreme from the case I first mentioned (the music that is falsified by repetition) is a program of piano music played by Earl Moss, in the Distinguished Artists period on Monday evening. I am not familiar with the Sonata by Herbert Elwell, but, luckily for this assignment, I have the other pieces Mr. Moss is playing—all these by French Canadian composers. They are all printed, a fact about Canadian music that is always worth mentioning. The Rondo by Jean Papineau-Couture was published in 1951 by BMI, that perennial champion of Canadian composers. It is an icily clear and brilliant exercise, whose rather

$3,500 Award to Winnipeg Writer

Former Winnipeg writer M. Charles Cohen, author of many CBC radio and television plays, has been awarded a fellowship worth $3,500 from the Canada Council. Cohen, whose award comes under the category of Journalists, Broadcasters and Film makers, plans to write a stage play and hopes to study theatre, perhaps in New York, this fall. Cohen's most recent play on CBC was the popular Pastorale seen on The Unforeseen on June 3. A French translation of his Hostage (first produced on Folio) was seen last May on the CBC's French TV Network. He recently completed a script for the National Film Board on the life of the former Governor General, Lord Elgin, and is currently researching another N.F.B. film on the impact on people of the South Saskatchewan Dam Project. Mr. Cohen, who now lives in Montreal, has adapted this Sunday's play on CBC Stage. (See note this page).

UNIVERSITY OF THE AIR

Today, the last of six lectures by Helmut Blume of McGill University on Form in Music. This week—"Sonata-form and the Form of a Sonata." The term sonata-form is a teaser. It does not refer to the form of a sonata, which varies in individual cases as to the number and type of movements, but to the constructional pattern of any one movement—which need not be a part of a sonata. The three units of the sonata-form movement—Exposition, Development and Recapitulation—and the frequently appended Coda ("tail piece") will be discussed by Mr. Blume.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Here I Go Again. Some people like to put down roots, make friendships, and spend their lives in the security of a single community. Not Flora McAmmond, wife of a Vancouver physician. She, like all other restless people everywhere, will move anywhere, anytime, with zest and anticipation, at the drop of a suitcase. She tells about it today.

Suburbia. What has happened to porches, six-foot hedges, neighbour women with endless supplies of cookies, and families who own a great variety of musical instruments? All gone, laments June Sheppard of Edmonton—victims of town-planning, the ranch bungalow and suburban conformity.

Royal Visit. A report on incidents taking place during the visit of the Queen and Prince Philip to Canada.

Here Comes the Bride. Canadian men often complain that weddings are for women, but in Fiji the opposite is true. A Muslim wedding in Fiji is really for the men, according to Gendawati Prasad of Suva. Today she tells Matinee listeners about her own wedding, the engagement that preceded it and the ceremonies that surrounded it. Mrs. Prasad teaches at the Arya School for Girls at Samabula, Fiji.

POST-NEWS TALK

"Blood Groups and Migrations." When it was learned that various human groups differed in respect to their blood groups it was thought to be a clue to the movement of peoples in early days. Tonight Sidney Katz of Maclean's Magazine interviews Dr. A. E. Mourant of the Blood Group Reference Laboratory of the Lister Institute in London, England, who finds interesting similarities between the west coast Indians and the Polynesians, and will tell whether this supports the theory that early peoples made mass movements across the Pacific. He will also have something to say about blood grouping as an indication of the origin of Eskimos.

The most important thing about a picture that hangs in a home isn't that some connoisseur should consider it good, but that its owner should enjoy it and feel that it expresses something of himself.—Sir John Rothenstein, Director of the Tate Gallery, on BBC.

Reflecting Manitoba

The mobile radio team from CBW-Manitoba is once again on the move, talking to the youngsters and the old-timers, the businessmen, farmers and housewives of rural communities throughout the province.

Manitoba Mirror, with its slogan—"reflecting the people, places and sounds of Manitoba towns," this year reaches into some far corners of the province so CBW listeners can get acquainted with these little known, yet colourful and industrious communities.

Starting with the church service this Sunday morning, Manitoba Mirror will be in the southeastern town of Killarney, one of the earliest homesteading areas of the province, now attracting tourists to its beautiful lakes, and thriving from the mixed farming on its rolling hills.

To interview Manitoba people, the Mirror team this year has a new member, Miss Doris Dickson, CBW's morning commentator. She will join announcer Bill Guest and farm commentator Gren Bates to bring CBW listeners some of the "sights and sounds" of Killarney, Swan River, Pine Falls, Arborg and Virden. The Mirror team will spend a full week in each of these districts, broadcasting nearly two hours a day of CBW programs (see CBW daily listings). The interviews, reports and talks, interspersed with music, come directly from temporary studios, usually set up on the main street of each town. The production of the shows will once again be handled by Dan Wood, and the technical operations of the mobile crew will be controlled by Alan Tasker.

slim materials would buckle if not played in glittering fashion. It has a cocktail zest not unlike that of Lennox Berkeley. I first saw François Morel's Etude de Sonorités No. 1 in an anthology of Fourteen Pieces by Canadian Composers, published by Frederick Harris in 1955. I mention the publisher because this book offers a very convenient assistance to those who wish to alleviate their ignorance of Canadian music, a group that includes many knowledgeable musical people. The Morel piece is the most difficult to read in the volume, being a complicated Debussy-like experiment in sound and atmosphere, but it is very rewarding if played correctly on a finely-tuned piano, a happy circumstance that is, strangely enough, not always possible even on the CBC. The Quadrilha Brasileira, by Claude Champagne, was written in 1942 at the request of the Canadian Ambassador to Brazil, and first performed in Rio de Janeiro. It is a very gay number, very rhythmic, full of brio, yet at a considerable distance from the exoticism one might expect. All these pieces are summer-weight music, but none the worse for that.

I notice that the Vancouver Chamber Orchestra, on Thursday, is playing M. Morel's Esquisse and two other Canadian works, "The Swallow's Nest," from Rocky Mountain Sketches by Bob McMullin, and Two Sketches for String Orchestra by Sir Ernest MacMillan. Though all this sounds engagingly national, it is not the sort of patriotic push that is, for one reason or two, more in our ears this summer. The heroic patriotic note is sounded on this program by a Pomp and Circumstance March. I must say that the more obvious forms of art as bursting love of country are not attractive to me, though I think that Russian music manages that challenge better than most (RCMP please note). However, I think most people would agree that the best sort of patriotism in music is to try to recognize the best we have, read it, practise it, and play it as often as possible.

The principal thing I've gained by success is the right to work, and that for an artist, and working in this profession, is a very difficult thing to achieve.—John Osborne, controversial young British playwright, speaking in the BBC's General Overseas Service.

A satirical review of Canadian history—in words and music

OLD MOORE has done it again. Last New Year's Eve, 1958 went out on wings of laughter induced by a satirical concoction for CBC radio by Mavor Moore, titled Old Moore's Almanack, in which he and a gang of rib-tickling cohorts poked fun at the events and personalities of the year. So successful was this tongue-in-cheek romp that the CBC Wednesday Night planners thought listeners might enjoy another, and commissioned the Moore gang to take an irreverent look at Canadian history on Dominion Day this Wednesday. They'll salute Our Emblum Dear in 80 minutes of trenchant wit edited and directed by Mr. Moore, with musical illustrations by Lucio Agostini, and production by Robert Weaver.

The contributing authors and composers include Ernest Perrault and David Brock of Vancouver; Neil Harris and Goldie Gelmon of Winnipeg; Tommy Tweed, Ben Lappin, Araby Lockhart, Ray Jessel, Robert Fulford and James Knight, all of Toronto, and "many other eminent historians." Among the performers will be Barbara Hamilton, John Drainie, Peter Mews, Donna Miller, Bernard Johnson, Jean Cavall, Araby Lockhart, Bruce Webb, Drew Thompson, Ruth Springford, Alan King, Ed McNamara, and "other distinguished Thespians."

"The program," said Mr. Moore, who, when tracked down, was found wallowing in a sea of precious Canadian documents, unpublished histories, private correspondence of the country's greats, candid snapshots, and other sundry relics of our colourful heritage, "will tell of Canada's history from its discovery by early explorers down to the present. However," and here Mr. Moore paused to mop his brow with a clipping from Sir John A. Macdonald's second upstairs maid's cousin's scrapbook, "the romantic sentimentality of our schoolbook histories will be ruthlessly exposed, and many important events set for the first time in their proper hilarious perspective. No respect will be shown facts, personalities, or other historians." Moore and his gang mean business, and they're

Hostess to Refugees. Not long ago Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hyndman of Crandall, Manitoba, received news of the arrival of a baby in Dundee, Scotland. It took them back 20 years, to the day when a 10-year-old boy from Scotland arrived at their farm to stay with them for the duration of the war. That 10-year-old boy is the father of the new baby. Molly Hyndman recalls the war years in today's talk.

Pets. Every home should have pets, says John Windsor of Vancouver, but he'll have none of your tame dogs and cats. He and his wife take to geese, goats and gold fish. Mr. Windsor, who served in Italy during the Second World War, was blinded in action in 1944.

Early Years With the Women's Institutes. Miss Mary MacIsaac, a nurse now retired and living in Toronto, spent most of her working life in Alberta. It was there that she helped found the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, an association of farm women that was to grow into an international institution—the Associated Country Women of the World. Today Miss MacIsaac recalls the early years of the FWI in an interview with Ruth Harding.

"How Much Democracy in New France?" A. L. Burt, one of the most distinguished of Canada's older historians, compares Quebec under the French regime with the France of that day, and claims that North American conditions made nonsense of attempts to transplant the feudal system to this continent. Dr. Burt began his academic career in 1913 at the University of Alberta, and is now professor emeritus of history at the University of Minnesota.

STREET CARS

than did the wind through the street car. As summer passed there was a rivalry among the children on our street . . . "How many rides have you had on an open car? How many have you?"

A Regina man I was talking to the other day remembered a practical use he and his small buddies used to make of cars that ran on rails. At that time, he recalled, the five cent piece was smaller than it is now (although considerably more powerful), but the movies at this period charged a dime admission for children. So he and his pals used to put their small nickels on the track and wait for a car to pass over them and flatten them out to the size of a dime.

I can remember putting fire-crackers on street cars—and then holding my ears so I wouldn't hear the lovely racket I had helped to make.

After a while the one-man car appeared. Instead of a man at each end of the car, one to drive and the other to take tickets and help passengers with babies and baby carriages, there would be only one at the front. What a lot of head-shaking this provoked. I remember my father stating pontifically, "One man can't drive a car, take the fares and look after his passengers." Some predicted that all kinds of loose-living characters would be sneaking on the street cars without paying their fares and that women with babies and baby carriages would be dragged helplessly for blocks, because the motorman had too much to do to help hoist them on. Or else the man would be collecting tickets and getting babies, baby carriages and mothers aboard while the street car ran beserk. But progress marched quietly on and I can remember no run-away street cars, no fascinating collection of dead-beats, no families mangled with their equipment.

So a great many of us know how those people in Ottawa felt when they draped a street car in black. It wasn't the street car that was vanishing; it was part of childhood and youth.

When the street cars give way to trolley buses the company usually sells the body of the old cars. Some of them have turned into chicken coops, some of them into hot dog stands, some into beach cottages. It seems a rather sad end for them. But that's getting sentimental, and you can't get sentimental about a street car. Or can you?

WHO KNOWS?

using fakes occasionally," says Tovell. "Remember the Piltown fraud?"

Members of the museum staff are co-operating in the search for objects to confound their colleagues on the show. And they certainly have enough objects to choose from: well over three million pieces in the Royal Ontario Museum and the promise of help from other Canadian and American institutions.

"The show should get across some interesting information," says Tovell, "but that's not the main thing. What we're after is some entertaining conversation and the chance to see some off-the-cuff detective work."

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Edna May Goes to Stratford. Toronto's morning commentator for the CBC, Edna May, reports on this year's Stratford Festival offerings as presented to the Queen.

A Book I Like. Toronto newspaper-woman Doreen Corps first read Charlotte Bronte's classic romantic novel, "Jane Eyre," when she was 10 years old. Today she tells why she was enchanted with it—and why she never lost that first enchantment.

Social Register Fugitive. When the first issue of the Canadian Social Register appeared with much fanfare last fall Chris Higginbotham, Regina journalist, was astounded to find his name listed. It led to all kinds of embarrassment, and Mr. Higginbotham soon decided that he'd rather have been socially ostracized.

Daily Features . . . Today's news commentary is by Jeanne Sauve of Montreal. Winnipeg-born soprano Maxine Miller will present some more songs, and there will be another reading from Robert Louis Stevenson's "Travels With a Donkey."

OUR "EMBLUM" DEAR

leaving no stone unturned in their search for the truth about Canada's pioneers and moulders, and what they were really up to.

Almost everything and everybody in Canadian history will turn up in one way or another. Says Mr. Moore: "You will hear how the early explorers got lost, how many of them returned home as soon as possible, and how the Indians handled those who were left. You will hear how General Wolfe won Quebec accidentally, and—brace yourself — the lamentable story of the cow that led Laura Secord to safety. Interspersed with these military and political events will be landmarks in our cultural history. The public will for the first time have the opportunity of hearing the original (or scrapped) versions of poems by Pauline Johnson, Robert W. Service, etc., and several recently-discovered folk songs which show French Canada in a new light."

Well, as you can see, Moore and his bunch of satirists are going all-out to put you straight about this big country of ours and how it got that way. If, at the end of the program, you have any illusions left, you're made of sterner stuff than the delighted listeners who wrote to the CBC after they heard Mr. Moore's last bit of satire, Old Moore's Almanack. It's been said that we Canadians take ourselves too seriously, that we're a trifle smug, and—shiver the thought—even a little stuffy. The Moore gang is out to kill this rumour for once and all, and please don't trip over the scalps.

imagination and reminiscences of my own childhood, and there it is! One thing I make a point of doing is this . . . I always bring my listeners back from the realm of fantasy to reality at the end of each script. It gives the children a feeling of security. And that reminds me of one of the nicest fan letters I ever received. It came from a little boy in Ottawa, who said: "Some stories make me dream. Yours don't."

Meeting Mary Grannan for the first time brings a bit of a shock. Like most people, this reporter had pictured her (because of her very young, gay voice) as someone petite, rather shy, and demurely attired. Instead, she's a fairly tall, well-built, sophisticated-looking woman who wears extremely chic gowns, large, beautiful hats, and oversize earrings and bracelets. She's the sort of person who stands out in a crowd. But don't let that fool you. Talk to her for five minutes and you'll find that a little girl lives under those striking hats. A little girl who loves circuses, the Wild West, the theatre and folklore; who, in spite of many years of big-city life and nation-wide popularity, still has a wide-eyed interest in small things, who's down front every time the Big Top hits Toronto, watching the elephants and acrobats with as much delight as the youngsters who make up her large and devoted following. And therein lies her charm.

Even away from the microphone Mary has few equals as a raconteur. It's a pity listeners can't see and hear her talking about the funny people and experiences in her long career. She could make the saddest sack dissolve in a sea of giggles. Originally she wanted to be an actress, and the stage lost a great comedienne when she took up teaching ("It was there so I got into it") in her home town, Fredericton, N.B. On the side she wrote comedy and commercials for the local radio station, CFNB, and in 1939 she got her big break—an invitation to broadcast regularly for the CBC from Toronto as Just Mary. The show is still a Sunday highlight.

A year later the first Just Mary book was published by Thomas Allen, and there have been nine others. Next came the Maggie Muggins books (there are now eight of them), and in 1947 Mary introduced radio listeners to that little freckle-faced red-head who then romped through countless adventures on CBC Trans-Canada for seven years before becoming a CBC-TV series.

This spring Mary acquired an American publisher, Pennington Press, and she was greatly feted on publicity visits to Chicago and New York with young Deanne Taylor, who plays Maggie in the TV series. But the Grannan claim to fame isn't based entirely on Just Mary and Maggie Muggins. She has written many other adventure series, mostly for radio, including The Land of Supposing, The Children's Scrapbook, Jubilee Road, Karen Discovers America, The Cotton Sprouts and others. And she has won several Columbus and Beaver Awards for the high quality of her work.

Looking back over the highlights of the last 20 years, Mary said what she treasures most of all is her acceptance by the public. It has never ceased to thrill her when people speak to her on the street, write her letters and phone her to tell her how much they enjoy her shows.
