Ohio State University Award WinnerRUPERT CAPLANCBC Montreal, Radio Drama Producer*

RUPERT CAPLAN, radio drama producer at CBC Montreal, has recently added another award to the already impressive collection of citations, awards and prizes that his work has won for him over a lifetime in radio and stage drama. The latest was bestowed upon him by the Ohio State University whose Institute for Education by Radio and Television singled out his production of September, last year, of Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey into Night for a First Award in the class of cultural programs.

Ken Withers, program director at CBC Montreal, says, "I cannot express how tremendously happy this particular award makes me feel inasmuch as so much contention surrounded this particular broadcast. It took a tremendous amount of courage on Mr. Caplan's part to mount this production and I think all of us in Montreal should realize a great deal of pride in Rupert's triumph."

There is no doubt that contention galore surrounded the production. Long Day is an out-spoken play dealing with O'Neill's own life, in which there was much that was sordid and miserable. The play telescopes events of his youth into one day and the resulting drama is a distillation of suffering, abuse, guilt and hatred.

Why did Rupert Caplan choose this particular play when there are so many other plays of equal stature that he might have produced without causing offence? The many answers to this question (which, incidentally, is invalid since any good play has the right to be produced) are intimately tied in with Mr. Caplan's past, and with his philosophy as a producer of dramas.

"I did not do it for any shock value the play might have had," Mr. Caplan explained. "And yet, it certainly did shock. I received some pretty wild letters of condemnation from all over the country. People wrote to say that it was depraved, obscene, unfit for broadcast. I might have been discouraged had there not been a strong, healthy balance of letters praising us for our courage and the quality of the production."

And then, of course, there was the final seal of approval, awarded by the Ohio State University in May of this year.

"I spent two and a half years acting under Eugene O'Neill with the Provincetown Players," he went on. "During that time, I learned drama and acting from a true master. I conceived an enormous admiration for the man and his works. In my estimation, O'Neill is second only to Shakespeare as a playwright and, even then, I don't consider him inferior to Shakespeare, but as great on a different plane.

"Long Day had to be produced. O'Neill had been almost entirely forgotten by the public when he died in 1953. It's an incredible fact CANADIAN youngsters don't have to run away from home to join the circus any more. The circus comes to them on Caravan, Friday afternoons on CBC-TV, complete with band, lion-tamers, acrobats, ringmaster (M. Maufette), clowns and all the exciting paraphernalia of the sawdust trail. The 700 youngsters who crowd into the Big Top each Friday are only a fraction of the audience, of course, for thousands of starry-eyed children in living rooms coast to coast are made to feel that they have ringside seats, too.

True to circus tradition, Caravan does not stay in one place. Among the centres in Ontario and Quebec it will visit during the summer season are Montreal, St. Johns, Joliette, Valleyfield, Cornwall, Hawkesbury and Hull.

Besides offering excitement, laughter and music, Caravan provides a particularly pleasant way for English-Canadian children to learn French and French-Canadian children to learn English, because the show is bilingual. Circus clowns Guy L'Ecuyer and Giani Scarpi talk in both languages. There are three important things a clown must learn: to "think funny," to pantomime, and to use props deftly. These two clowns have perfected this technique so that anyone watching them can understand them and get a big kick out of their antics, whether their remarks are in English or French. (The program seen Friday nights on CBWFT is identical to the one seen on English network stations; it is a videotape of the program seen "live" seven days earlier on the English network.) Caravan is produced by the children's department of the CBC-TV French network.

that only four people attended his funeral! The following year, in 1954, we did a CBC Wednesday Night memorial broadcast on him. Many distinguished theatrical people took part. Brooks Atkinson, New York Times drama critic and one of O'Neill's closest friends, came to Montreal and did the narration. The show was a success and its impact was such that directors and producers from all over the continent began to plead with his widow, the former actress Carlotta Monterey, for the rights to do Long Day."

O'Neill had expressed a dying wish that this play be withheld from production for at least 25 years after his death. Finally, however, Mrs. O'Neill gave in and awarded the rights to a select group: exclusive Canadian rights went to Rupert Caplan. In 1958, he produced, in English, the Canadian première by Le Théâtre du Nouveau Monde in Montreal. Previously, it had opened in New York at the Helen Hayes theatre, and the U.S. State Department had chosen it to represent American theatre at the Paris International Drama Festival in 1957. Finally, on September 23, 1959, Rupert directed its first radio performance as part of CBC Wednesday Night.

"I am frequently asked why I don't go to the States," he said. "The O'Neill play might serve as an example of one of the reasons I don't; I believe that the CBC is one of the few broadcasting systems in the world that allows its producers the intellectual freedom necessary to such a production.

But apart from that, I am a Canadian, I like Canada and I've made my life here. I would make more money in the U.S.; but here, I get a creative satisfaction, a constant stimulation that is worth more than money to me. Privately owned broadcasting companies are sponsor-conscious. They have to be. And sponsors are very diffident where public feelings are concerned. They have to be too. Therefore, I don't believe that I would have been allowed to produce Long Day—or many other works I've directed—in the U.S. Here at the CBC the intellectual climate is more liberal and more conducive to artistic achievement. This is true of Canada as a whole, I believe."

Mr. Caplan is also well known, surprisingly enough, for his radio productions of "soap operas." We asked him to explain how it came to be that a man who had worked with Tyrone Guthrie, who had produced so many of the greatest plays in the world's literature could, at the same time, produce daytime serials such as Laura Limited, which ran for years on the Trans-Canada network, and The House of Horton, presently being heard daily in the late morning.

"Where's the contradiction?" he asked, disconcertingly. "There is a lot of deep wisdom, human warmth and good writing in what some people are pleased to sneer at as 'soap opera.' There is sensitivity, mood and plenty of swift-moving action. I sometimes wonder whether people who call such serialized dramas 'corny' or 'sloppy sentimentalism' are not a little limited in their capacity for emotional expression. Like the youngster who jeers at the love scene in the movie, he jeers because he is uncomfortable aware of something beyond his ken, something he cannot understand, and he takes refuge from the acceptance of his deficiency behind an artificial screen of derision.

"The House of Horton, for example, contains some very sensitive writing and the theme is a classical one—it treats of pride and its various psychological aspects. It tells in bigger-than-life terms (this is art) the story of two proud families and their struggle for power."

Caplan is also particularly noted for productions with religious themes and is a deeply religious man himself, in an almost non-

CBC SYMPHONY IN STRATFORD

MUSIC

STRATFORD'S 1960 music season—the most exciting in the Music Festival's six years—ends on Sunday in suitable fashion: with a concert by the CBC Symphony Orchestra, described by many world-famous conductors as Canada's finest and one of the top 10 orchestras on the continent. The two-hour program will be broadcast live from the Stratford Festival Theatre on CBC radio. It will be conducted by Walter Susskind, permanent conductor of another of the "top 10"—the Toronto Symphony Orchestra—and by Otar Taktakishvili, one of the most prominent composer-conductors in the U.S.S.R., and president of the Georgian Union of Composers.

Born in Tiflis, 36-year-old Taktakishvili graduated from the Conservatory there in 1947, and became a professor in 1949. He has written two symphonies, three overtures, a piano and a cello concerto, choral works, film music, and a symphonic poem, Mtsyri, the premiere of which he will conduct in Sunday's concert.

The program will include several other contemporary works to be performed in the presence of their composers. Modern French music will be represented by Les Oufandes Oubliées by Olivier Messiaen, one of France's best-known composers: Canada by the first public performance of John Weinzweig's Wine of Peace, two songs for voice and orchestra based on an Arabian poem and dedicated to the United Nations, with soprano Mary Simmons as soloist, and by First Symphony by Istvan Anhalt of Montreal; and the United States by the Canadian premiere of Music For Orchestra by Wallingford Riegger, one of the most respected of the American composers.

Otar Taktakishvili has been accompanied to Stratford by Kukharskyi, an important Russian critic and musicologist. Both have taken part in the International Conference of Composers held in Stratford this past week, particularly in a panel discussion on the relationship between the composer and the public. "Both these men have very strong opinions on the subject," says Louis Appelbaum, director of music for the Stratford Festival, "as have other speakers taking part, and it should be very interesting to hear the different points of view of East and West." A recording of part of the discussion will be included in the Sunday broadcast as an intermission feature. And there will also be an interview between Helmut Blume and a visiting composer.

In accepting the Festival's invitation to have the CBC Symphony Orchestra appear there during the Conference, CBC director of music Dr. Geoffrey Waddington said: "We are happy indeed to participate in what must be considered a most outstanding and history-making musical event in Canada. Distinguished composers from many parts of the world will have an opportunity to hear the high standard of orchestral playing developed in this country—particularly in the field of contemporary music in which the CBC Symphony has gained an enviable reputation."

The audience in the Festival Theatre on Sunday will be one of the most important ever assembled for a musical event in Canada. It will include, of course, delegates to the Conference from at least 18 countries. Most countries sent several delegates—the cream of their younger crop—and in the music world, where a composer often turns out fine work well into his eighties, "young" usually means anyone under 50. Also in the audience will be the 22 members of the National Festival Orchestra who are specially selected from over 100 applicants from all over the continent and overseas; Dr. Waddington; many big names from the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto and other Canadian music centres; a contingent of music authorities from below the border, and notable members of the casts of Romeo and Juliet, King John and A Midsummer Night's Dream who will be relaxing in the middle of their long schedule. Seats not filled by these important people will be occupied by music lovers who were fortunate enough to secure tickets for one of the CBC Symphony's rare public appearances.

It will be a gala occasion for several other reasons. On its previous visits to Stratford the CBC Symphony has performed in a converted barn. "The acoustics were awful," says Appelbaum. The building was three times as broad as it was deep, with the result that sound bumped around too loudly in the centre and dribbled off at the ends, so the audience was treated to too much or too little. The Festival Theatre offers a striking contrast. Appelbaum describes its acoustics as "marvelous." He told us that "never before has there been such an intimate relationship between audience and full symphony orchestra as there will be in Sunday's concert. The audience sits around three sides of the stage, none of the 2,258 seats in pit or balcony being more than 65 feet from the artists.

Of course there have had to be temporary alterations made to the small stage to allow 80 performers to play without gouging eyes with violin bows or slicing off ears with trombones. A large platform has been built to cover stage, steps, moats and completely change the atmosphere of the building from the haunts of Romeo, King John or Bottom. The apron stage was designed for the Festival in 1953 by Tanya Moiseivitch (who this year designed the costumes for Romeo and Juliet and King John) in collaboration with Tyrone Guthrie, who has returned to the Festival this

More About . . .

"The Lottery"

FOLLOWING the presentation of Shirley Jackson's The Lottery on Robert Herridge Theatre on July 25, CBC received many letters both from viewers who objected to it and from viewers who found it unusually interesting. (For three strongly worded samples, see Mailbag, page 11.)

As Miss Jackson's famous short story about the public stoning of a woman—chosen by lottery—has been so controversial since it was first published, the filmed version was screened and discussed at CBC's national program office before it was presented on CBC-TV. It was judged to be a good production worthy of presentation on the full network in a relatively late evening period (9:30 p.m. on CBWT, 10:30 p.m. on other stations).

The story is symbolic and susceptible of a variety of interpretations. (Before the Robert Herridge Theatre production was first presented on U.S. television, an advance publicity release issued by the Columbia Broadcasting System was headed "Every Man Must Decide For Himself What 'The Lottery' Means—Controversial Story to be Dramatized on Herridge Theatre"). It has been regarded as a retelling of the primitive custom of choosing a scapegoat who would by death or banishment bear away the sins of the community, as a poetic way of saying that the ostracism of an individual in a civilized society is really just as arbitrary and meaningless as the scapegoat custom, and simply as a dramatization of the extreme perversity of human nature.

Following are excerpts from the CBS press release referred to:

"The Lottery" is a fantasy, although a fantasy rooted in reality, according to Time Magazine. Every person must decide for himself exactly what the story means. "Like much genuinely first-rate fiction, it allows for a variety of interpretations because it reverberates with many possible meanings. But no one is likely to doubt that it will find a place as a minor classic in American literature. It is a ruthless fable about the human soul that might have come out of Hawthorne."

It is probably the most controversial short story in 20th century American literature. After it appeared in the New Yorker in June, 1948, the magazine received mail from 25 states, two territories, and six foreign countries—the most mail it had ever received about a piece of fiction. Comments ranged from "a little masterpiece" to "powerful and haunting" to "cancel my subscription." Christopher Morley said he could not put Miss Jackson's grim little fairy tale out of his mind.

The Library Journal wrote: "Miss Jackson uses the trick ending device adroitly. She can twist a seemingly normal situation into something that leaves you squirming."

"Miss Jackson uses the documentary treatment of contemporary life," wrote John Farrell in the New Republic, "that testifies to our disenchantment, loneliness and perilous confusion."

And Robert Halsband in the Saturday Review said, "Her precise, sensitive and sharply focused style makes her story luminous with meaning. She belongs to the literary line that goes back to Katherine Mansfield and Chekhov, She has, in addition to an enlightened point of view, a penetrating understanding of the subtle ways prejudices operate."

Producer Robert Herridge says "The Lottery" gives "form to the infinite contradictions of the human heart and illuminates man's awesome capacity for good and evil."

TV Movies

• I am surprised at the variety of late movies on the French network. I would much rather watch the French station than the English station even though I don't understand the language. As I look through my CBC Times for July 31-Aug. 6 I see CBWFT has English, German, Italian and French movies. Couldn't CBWT possibly put on movies from other countries besides Britain and the U.S.? —Miss M. M., Transcona.

Miss M.'s letter has been passed on to our film department.

Robert Herridge Theatre

• The Lottery was the most distasteful show I have ever had the displeasure to view. The story wasn't entertaining, or educational, or even stimulating. All it did was make me sick. For shame—perhaps you are sick too!—Mrs. I. C., Winnipeg.

• The Lottery was punk, disgusting, third rate acting—or worse, and should not be allowed on TV. If you can't find better stuff than that to put on you better give up.—C. M. S., Winnipeg.

• I wish to congratulate you for presenting Shirley Jackson's play, The Lottery, on Robert Herridge Theatre this week. I found it to be a gripping tale. No doubt its message will be lost upon most. I appreciated it as a refreshing change from the Roy Rogers drivél.—J. N., Winnipeg.

For more about "The Lottery" see page 9.

CBC Summer Festival

• I am writing immediately to thank you for the wonderful performance of H.M.S. Pinafore, broadcast last night from the Stratford Festival. All the singers had splendid voices, particularly the soloists, and everything concerned with the production was first class. It was a most enjoyable two hours. The timing of the broadcast, coming as it did the day after the CBC-TV program on the Stratford Festival, enabled us to visualize the performance and feel we were listening to a live production. As a lover of all Gilbert and Sullivan operas, I hope you will be giving us many more in the future.—Miss D. M. D., Winnipeg.

• It seems the calibre of programs you give us as "summer replacements" on TV surpasses the regular ones we watched all winter. Tuesday evening's Parade and Stratford Festival program were completely enjoyable. And this week you have made most worthwhile on radio with Madama Butterfly coming up and the chamber orchestra following. Music direct from such an international festival is thrilling (even if it is recorded). Please give us even more good music on both radio and television. How else will the younger generation learn to love good music if they are not summer after a two-year absence to direct H.M.S. Pinafore.

The stage is a modern version of the old Elizabethan stage, with a balcony, trap door, seven acting levels and six main entrances. Jutting out into the steeply-inclined theatre it creates an intimate atmosphere rarely possible with the usual proscenium arch-type of stage. The theatre has an orchestra loft above and behind the stage which can accommodate 50 musicians, and a special ceiling design reflects their music into the auditorium, but of course this loft could not be used for Sunday's concert.

An unpleasant aspect of previous visits of the CBC Symphony to Stratford was the heat and stuffiness of the old barnlike hall where 80 hard-working musicians and many perspiring music-lovers suffered willingly but intensely through the Music Festival season. So you can appreciate how delighted members of the orchestra were to learn that the Festival Theatre has a very modern air-conditioning and humidity control system. Even if Sunday turns out to be one of the dog days that frequently strike southern Ontario in August, the Theatre will maintain a comfortable 72 degrees.

It will be a busy day for the orchestra. We caught Louis Appelbaum as he was dashing out of his front door on his way to Stratford after a hasty visit to Toronto. In a breathless two-minute interview we learned how hectic broadcast day will be for the performers, conductor Susskind and producer Terence Gibbs. Towards the weekend Taktakishvili will have been commuting from Stratford to rehearse his symphonic poem with the orchestra. Appelbaum was not sure whether the conductor speaks English, but if Taktakishvili feels the need for an interpreter, one will be provided. And his remarks in the panel discussion on the composer and the public will be translated

Live A Borrowed Life

Guests include Professor Walter Young, Political Science Department, University of Manitoba, and Mary Elizabeth Bayer, host of Winnipeg afternoon women's "Mary Liz Show." Regular panelists are Bill Walker and Elwy Yost. Charles Templeton, moderator.

Happy

First Person

A Case For The Court

Seventh program in a new 13-week series produced by the CBC in cooperation with the Canadian Bar Association. In each program practicing lawyers argue a fictional case before an actual judge or magistrate. Host

Gil Christie questions people involved in the case, the plaintiff and defendant (or in criminal cases the accused and the police) and sometimes witnesses—all these people are played by professional actors. The scene then shifts to the courtroom where real lawyers present their side of the case to the judge. After the courtroom scene, a group of four panelists, all of them laymen with no more knowledge of the case than is possessed by the viewer, discuss the legal arguments among themselves, give their opinions and decisions, and question the judge (no longer in his courtroom robes) on points that interest or puzzle them. The judge then gives his decision.

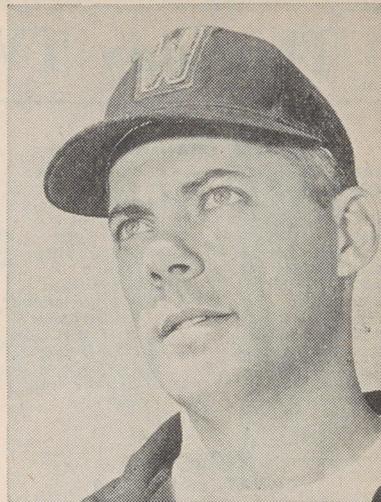

Today — "Theft From A Parking Lot." A supermarket has an arrangement with a private parking lot whereby its customers may park without charge. A car is stolen.

into English for the Sunday broadcast.

On Sunday morning Walter Susskind will rehearse the orchestra in Toronto. Then its members will all pile into buses to drive the 98 miles to Stratford. Those who play small instruments will carry them in the bus, and the larger instruments will follow in a truck. As the concert starts at 2:30 the cavalcade will have to fly low to make the Festival in time. We hesitated to mention so mundane a topic as food in connection with an event in the hallowed atmosphere of Shakespeare and musical giants, but finally we enquired just when and where the musicians, conductor, producer, etc., would grab a bite of lunch in their dash from place to place. Appelbaum is so busy with more urgent matters that he says he is "leaving them on their own to feed." It is likely that more than one violin case will include a packet of sandwiches as well as a precious instrument, and some quick munching in the wings of the Festival Theatre is a strong possibility.

Although the CBC Symphony has not travelled outside the continent in its eight-year career, its

Pictures With Woof

Woof the dog and his friend Patty (Donna Miller) present cartoons and pictures.

Today's three films are: "Thin Ice" (Snip and Snap)—The setting is a writing desk, and Snip and Snap perform winter sports. "The Faithful Kitten"—Bobby is a young lad who is not kind to his little kitten. The little girl next door, Mitzi, looks after the kitten and adopts her. "The Silly Goose"—A goose is silly because she is not satisfied. She exchanges her neck with a swan, her beak with a pelican, etc. She becomes an object of ridicule, and reverts to normal.

This week — "Fighting Sire." A former boxing champ who rejects his young son as unmanly, sees the lad in a new light when the ex-champ becomes marked for murder as the sole witness to a killing.

Mama

Peggy Wood plays the title role in "Mama," a comedy-drama based on the experiences of a Norwegian family living in America. "Mama" has been a favourite program on United States television for the past seven years.

Here's My Pet

This week Dr. Robert Kirk's guest will be Jerry Stollar of Winnipeg who will display his tropical fish. Included in today's program will be a filmed CBC-TV's popular host of "Spotlight on Sport" will also conduct "Football Huddle" on CBWT each Wednesday night commencing August 17.

insert on one of the larger types of tropical fish — "Oscars" (Astronotus ocellatus). Jean MacKay, producer. (Seen August 10 on CBWT).

CBWT—Green Thumbs

A program of interest to amateur gardeners with host John MacLeod and featuring Stan Westaway of the University of Manitoba.

The Deputy

Henry Fonda stars as Simon Fry, marshal of the Arizona territory. Alan Case plays Clay McCord, his deputy.

This week—Angered by the burning of his store, Clay McCord disregards Simon Fry's orders and starts out after the culprits—who are holed up in an old mine—alone.

Star Playhouse

Today—"Thirty Pieces of Silver." A woman whose husband died in a Nazi concentration camp refuses to accept the restitution money offered by the German government; she then receives a surprise visitor. Starring Jo Ann Fleet.

Close-Up

This week Elaine Grand talks with Lady Epstein, widow of Sir Jacob Epstein, possibly the greatest of modern sculptors, and certainly one of the most controversial. Lady Epstein tells of her husband's difficulty in getting along with adults (children fascinated him), describes some of his work (to be shown on film), and talks about her plans to have Sir Jacob's studio preserved as a museum with some of his own works and pieces from his famous collection of African and other sculptures in it. She also tells some delightful anecdotes about her husband's dealings with such famous subjects as Sir Winston Churchill, the

As a program, there is little doubt but that A Case for the Court is highly entertaining. "It looks as though the Law Society and the CBC have wrought a minor miracle in educational TV," wrote Dennis Braithewaite of the Toronto Star. While Ron Poulton of the Toronto Telegram wrote, "If the first case is a fair sample it looks as though the CBC has a winner." And most newspaper critics across the country, as well as the great majority of those viewers who have written or phoned the CBC, seem to agree.

A Case for the Court, seen on Wednesdays on CBC-TV, takes fictional court cases, chosen for their interest and helpfulness to the public and argues them out in a TV courtroom with real lawyers presenting genuine (though of Archbishop of Canterbury, Yehudi Menuhin, and T. S. Eliot.

Man From Blackhawk

Starring Robert Rockwell as an insurance investigator for the Blackhawk Insurance Company in 19th century Chicago.

This week—"Station Six." While investigating a woman who has collected insurance on the death of two husbands, Sam Logan's stage is held up by outlaws.

CBWT—The Rifleman

Starring Chuck Connors as The Rifleman, and Johnny Crawford as his son, Mark.

CBWT—Sergeant Bilko

course highly abbreviated) legal argument before an actual judge or magistrate.

Not everybody likes the program, of course. One viewer strongly disagreed with the judge's decision on the first program (the judge disallowed a claim by a mother against the owner of the property on which her young son was drowned); the viewer disagreed so strongly that "I do not intend to watch the program again," she wrote.

Another viewer, speaking of the same case, wrote, "I am amazed at the effrontery of the plaintiff . . . She looks young, strong and healthy so why can't she work?"

A number of viewers have written the CBC giving considerable thought to the cases and going into detail about why they agree or do not agree with the decisions.

"This is very encouraging," says producer George Dick, "as one of the aims of the program is to get people thinking about the law."

So, in addition to its entertainment value, A Case for the Court has something more: "While I have mixed feelings regarding the Supreme Court judge's ruling last night (as I am the registered owner of an 18-year-old son's car), I do feel that this has enlightened a lot of people as to the difference between technical law and moral law," wrote a viewer.

Among those who have written asking for either transcripts or further details are the claims adjuster

ODDS and ENDS

Chue Kay Chung, one of the six new Canadians who received their citizenship papers on “A Day To Remember,” July 1, on CBC-TV, almost didn’t make it to Ottawa for the program. Mr. Chung, who owns a restaurant in Dartmouth, N.S., couldn’t get help to run the restaurant in his absence. Halifax’s Chinese community rallied to help, and Mr. Chung and his wife were on hand for the big day.

of a major insurance business, a probation officer, and a minister, all of whom felt they could use the details of one or another of the cases in their work.

Lawyers have generally been enthusiastic about the programs (although some have pointed out that decisions in the first two programs might well have gone differently under Quebec law). But perhaps one of the finest tributes came from a New York attorney: “It was most interesting to note the comparison between your presentation and those of our local Bar Association over the past several years. I personally believe that (your format) . . . is by far the best presentation of a legal topic . . .”

This week on A Case for the Court the Hon. Mr. Justice Stewart of the Supreme Court of Ontario presides over a case of Theft from a Parking Lot a car is stolen from a parking lot which has a special arrangement with a nearby supermarket for free customer parking. Is the parking lot responsible for the car?—The case is argued before Mr. Justice Stewart by Royce H. Frith, of Toronto, and Barry Pepper Q.C., of Toronto.

Thursday on Cine-Club. This film is a photographic documentary on life in Germany at the end of the war. In a middle-income family from Berlin, the father laments on the Nazi regime that has ruined him. The eldest of his two sons lives without his identification card, evading the police; his daughter is a come-on girl in a night club, and his youngest son, Edmond, alone, enables his family to survive by his many compromises with the regime. The young man one day confides to his professor who suggests that all anti-Nazi movements must be crushed. Edmond kills his father. But when he brags about it to his professor, the latter is repulsed. Disoriented by this attitude, the young man flees through the ruins of Berlin to his suicide.

MUSIC ON RADIO

By FRANK HAWORTH

THE most immediately striking feature of the programs for the coming week is the amount of unfamiliar music they contain, ranging from obscure works by old-timers like Couperin (Apotheose de Lully, Sunday Chamber Music) and Pergolesi (in Distinguished Artists, Tuesday), to the latest in experimental modernity by people like Boris Blacher (Requiem, Summer Festival, also on Tuesday). There is, of course, a sprinkling from the established hierarchy, too, but even there, the emphasis seems to be on less familiar productions, like Mendelssohn's Die Erste Walpurgisnacht (CBC Wednesday Night). Altogether, a week of most stimulating listening is in prospect, in agreeable contrast to the sometimes ever-familiar (however much loved) pageant of the standard repertory.

Why does some music become and remain familiar, even to the occasional listener, while so much languishes in neglect? Some works, of course, are so manifestly superior in spiritual depth and power, cogency of expression, or general appeal, that they command repeated performances by the sheer force of these qualities. But these instances are fewer than you might imagine, and no such ready answer can be found in the majority of cases. Fashion, no doubt, has a bearing on the matter; the once-enormous popularity of Mendelssohn was due at least as much to his reflection of Victorian ideas and sentiments as to his creative genius, and he suffered eclipse when these ceased to be acceptable to latter generations. The most likely explanation, however, is the sheer inertia of familiarity itself; the laws of motion of the physical world have their analogues in the social sphere, and when a work has once become familiar it tends to remain so, for no better reason than that audiences expect it, and players learn it as a matter of course. But this doesn't explain how such a work becomes familiar in the first place. Many factors may be operating, from romantic legend to prosaic availability of the band parts; but the main reason may possibly lie deeper, in certain aspects of our listening habits. I haven't space to develop the point—but, briefly, some compositions may suffer from the less-experienced listener's habit of stopping to admire incidental beauties, and so losing the thread of the discourse, instead of letting his mind keep travelling with the music.

BRITISH JAZZ ON "VENTURE"

Sunday Evening on Trans-Canada Network

AS the London evenings dim, in a hundred cellars, attics and back room of Elizabethan pubs, prim-fronted Victorian buildings and fish-and-chip shops from Bow Bells to Westminster, a fast, loud, pulsating sound is added to the whirl of the city.

Britain has gone jazz crazy. This renaissance is intriguing a lot of people. Not just the kids in teens and early twenties—they're mad about it—but musicologists, psychologists, anthropologists and the man in the street. Why this sudden rebirth of jazz, and what is it like? It makes a fascinating study, and CBC London correspondent Donald Gordon has been doing just that with tape-recorder on hand for the last year, talking to the men and boys who play jazz, the fans who flock nightly to hear them, and parents, school teachers, casually-encountered people in pubs and on streetcorners. And he has gone into some of the dimly-lit cellars and rooms over pubs, some of the dozens of jazz clubs in London, to

Most contemporary compositions have not had time to become familiar, and which of them may eventually do so is anybody's guess. Prophecy is notoriously rash, but consideration of the present status of some contemporary composers may afford a clue. Roy Harris, whose Passacaglia, Cadenza, and Fugue for piano and strings will be heard on Saturday evening (Aug. 13), is solidly established as a composer, though it is possible that his ultimate importance may be rather as a teacher. Villa-Lobos, represented this week by his Bachianas Brasileiras No. 5 has obtained a footing in the regular repertory, as have Britten (Organ Recital, Sunday), Barber (Summer Festival, Monday), Bliss and Copland (both to be heard on CBC Wednesday Night)—at least in their own countries. Stravinsky (CBC Wednesday record music of the bands that are making news all over Britain, and of others with only a small but devoted following.

You will hear them Sunday afternoon on CBC Radio's Venture, when Gordon presents a one-hour impression of the British jazz revolution, vividly illustrated with music and frank comment in a wide variety of accents.

Gordon begins by describing how he first came to hear about the growing interest in jazz when he was walking down Oxford street one evening and heard some rough ragtime music crashing up through a basement window. He went through a drab doorway, paid his two-and-six, and drifted into another world. He says it was “like a scene from the low life Paris of the turn of the century—the girls made up like Toulouse Lautree washerwomen—heavy eye make-up, flushed faces and long, wild hair. They wore bright, eye-catching colors, crimson sweaters of chunky wool, vivid, flowing skirts, black stockings and scuffed shoes. The boys almost to a man played the Edwardian dandy . . . While the band pounded out the ragtime tune—clearly oblivious of their audience, one had an almost surrealistic impression—waving arms and feet, thick blue smoke, chatter, noise and vitality.”

On the show Gordon ranges over the whole London scene, introducing Ken Colyer who plays a record he made in a New Orleans kitchen; Humphrey Lyttleton, world famous, who tells how Basin Street Blues changed his life; Sonny Morris of the hot, swingy jazz; Chris Barber and his Irish songstress wife, Otilie Patterson; and Aker Bilk, who tells how he chose his unusual professional name.

This British craze for jazz—an antidote to the syrupy music of the war years—is not limited to big Metropolitan centres like London. It has swept the country. This spring the Bath Music and Drama Festival included a week-long jazz festival for the third year. It was a smashing success, according to Helen McNamara well-known Toronto newspaper columnist, CBC commentator and jazz authority. Helen was there opening night.

"It was an all-night carnival," she told us, "beginning at 10:30 p.m. and going on without interruption until 7:30 the next morning. I quit at 5:30, but they tell me that of the 1000 who were dancing at the start, at least half were still hard at it when the last band stopped playing at 7:30! Over there everyone dances to jazz. They have terrific musicians—men of high artistic calibre—but in most cases I found that they were more imitative than original. You'll find bits of Charlie Parker and Dizzie Gillespie creeping in all over the place. Johnny Dankworth is one of the most original. He ended the Bath Jazz Festival by introducing his brand new band. I didn't hear it but they say it was wonderful—three Canadians in it incidentally. Johnny is coming over to the States this fall to tour with a symphony orchestra—they'll play his Improvisation for Jazz Band and Symphony Orchestra.

In London Helen got around to several of the little jazz clubs, including one over the Eight Bells pub in Chelsea, where the Wally Fox Band hangs out. "It's one of the best in London," she reports, "because it keeps away from traditional jazz. He's Canadian-born, played with Humphrey Lyttleton for a long time and then formed his own group. Most of the kids over there who go to the clubs like traditional jazz, because they want to dance to it, so bands like Fox's and Lyttleton's aren't as popular as they might be. The fans lean more towards Aker Bilk, Ken Colyer and Chris Barber. A good many of the players have daytime jobs, too, to keep going.

"They have a much more romantic conception of jazz over there," Helen went on. "That's why they're trying to recreate the New Orleans era—they even have river boat cruises on the Thames with a band beating it out past Big Ben and the Houses of Parliament! One of the strangest things I saw was a New Orleans-type band marching along a London street, loudly giving out with When the Saints Go Marching On and carrying banners protesting against the South African business. All the traditional bands use the banjo, by the way." We thought this would be interesting because you hardly ever hear the banjo in North American jazz groups any more. But Helen says after you have heard hours of loud banjo twanging it gets more than monotonous.

What struck her most forcibly about the fans in the jazz hangout was their boundless energy. "They never stop dancing," she said, "no matter how crowded the floor gets. It's exhausting to watch for long. They do an odd form of jitterbugging that seems passé to Canadian eyes. And they all dance to different beats—some to the banjo, some to the bass or the drums. They bring big towels which they drag out of pocket or purse to mop their brows! The beehive hair-do seems to be the thing, and the girls favor shoes with pointed toes so long that they have to walk up-

Night) and Bartok (Distinguished Artists, Tuesday), of course, have both been world figures for a number of years (though how much of their music could be described as "familiar" is a moot point). Wallingford Riegger, whose Music for Orchestra figures in Summer Festival on Sunday afternoon, is something of a dark horse—there are those who foresee a great future for his work. John Weinzwieg, whose Wine of Peace will be heard in the same program, has established a Canadian reputation for himself, as, to a somewhat lesser extent, have Istvan Anhalt, whose Symphony No. 1 precedes it, and Harry Freedman and Godfrey Ridout, whose music will be featured in Saturday's Summer Festival program (Aug. 13).

denominational way. Although a member of a synagogue, he once spent three weeks in a Benedictine Monastery in Quebec. "I was tired and depressed. I got to know one of the Benedictine fathers and, after talking to him, I went to the monastery and spent three weeks of contemplation there. It was as good as a therapy. I came out a new man and have been back since for a day or two at a time. There is much to be said for the contemplative life; we don't give ourselves time to think, today. I've often thought it odd that they call such a place a retreat; for me it was an advance."

Despite his reputation as a radio producer, Caplan thinks of himself as a stage director, and his interest in the one or two theatrical productions he does every year is keen. This year, however, he has done no stage work because "things did not look good, financially." He usually does at least two productions for Le Théâtre du Nouveau Monde and has done one for the well-known Comédie Canadienne. The Lark, an English translation of Anouilh's L'Alouette. His program Drama in Sound is heard 52 weeks a year on the CBC's Trans-Canada network and is now in its fourth year of production.

His story recalls to mind Aristotle's three dramatic unities: Unity of Time, Place and Action. He has devoted one lifetime, in one city, to one interest. The result has been success. There is a lesson to be found here.—Jim Harris.

"Chris Barber," she says is developing a distinctly British sort of jazz. It's based on New Orleans, but it has a different flavor. But most of the groups haven't the drive or vitality of American jazzmen. Their rhythm sections are too timid. I didn't encounter much interest there in compositional jazz. English jazzmen are too traditional in their jazz." She says they like to go back and recreate from the past. Canadians like jazz that's as new as now.

jazz we talked to Ron Collier, one of the country's top musician-conductor-composers. He had high praise for Johnny Dankworth and "Ted Heath has one of the cleanest bands you'll hear. Precision is part of the English heritage. But I've heard very little British jazz that shows it's going in any direction. They have some very fine musicians, but they lack originality. You don't get the searching recklessness over there that we're familiar with here, the 'I don't know where I'm going but I'm trying, anyway,' feeling. They're more inhibited. They're not exploring, but sticking more to the main roads—Dixieland, for instance. It's kind of ridiculous, you know. They'll have a jazz festival and play nothing but Dixieland!"

What would he call the sort of jazz Canadian are playing? "Just jazz," he said. "It's derived from bop, but you can't classify it otherwise. People here are beginning to accept jazz as an art form in itself."

CBC SYMPHONY

reputation has, through shortwave broadcasts by the CBC International Service, and because visiting European maestros often back the orchestra's recordings with them. When they are played the reaction, we hear, is usually: "We had no idea there was anything like this in Canada."

The orchestra is fortunate in being close to the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto—the largest college in the British Commonwealth—which has contributed some brilliant string musicians to form the backbone of the orchestra. Every visiting conductor is amazed and delighted by the quality of its performance. When, under Rudolf Antonini, it played a new work without a mistake in the first read-through, Antonini told Dr. Waddington: "I've never been so astounded in my life!" Not only is this sight-reading ability a pleasure for the conductor but it saves hours of expensive rehearsal time, and also makes it possible for the orchestra to perform a greater number of contemporary works (which usually require more rehearsal) than most symphony orchestras. Producer Terence Gibbs says it is thrilling to watch the orchestra dig into a tough new work.

This closely-knit group, working together so smoothly and brilliantly, is an answer to people who contend that no orchestra can achieve a high standard without a long close association under one conductor. The CBC Symphony performs under a different maestro each week. But each of these visiting conductors—some of the world's most renowned—has left a little bit of his greatness behind with the orchestra. Its members have been newly inspired by each, have become extremely pliant, and while they have not had the experience and the benefits of working in close rapport with a permanent head, they have demonstrated that they can respond instantly and in top form to many highly personalized conducting techniques. Perhaps that is the secret of their freshness, and the visiting composers at Stratford are eagerly looking forward to seeing and hearing this for themselves.

Such a combination of beauty, brains and wit as she displays is rare indeed, and CBWT should be heartily congratulated for its excellent judgment in recognizing this young woman's wholesome qualities. May she continue to grace our screens for a long time to come.—E. J., Winnipeg.

much baseball being broadcast on Saturday. I can, I am sure, get the majority of this town's population to sign if necessary. Although we have no objection to the game itself, they have no time to sit down for this long to follow the game. Many object to an American game occupying so much Canadian air-time . . . Please remember that we can get no other station here except the A.F.R.B. on short wave which regularly broadcasts the game.—C. M., Kitimat, and 18 other names.

It May Be A Man's World

But KIT KINNAIRD holds her own in it. She's been industrial photographer, animal doctor's assistant, and oil expert. And now this Edmonton adventurer is the CBC's English networks' only woman announcer

KIT KINNAIRD of CBC Montreal is the only woman staff announcer on CBC's English radio and TV stations. She also writes poetry:

*"I am moved to wonder
by these ebullient shapes that flow in constant permutation of incognate lines; . . ."*

Miss Kinnaird seemed like an interesting person to talk with. And we did so in CBC radio's Studio 61 in Montreal, where, slim and blonde, she sat behind the mike.

"I'm from Edmonton," said Kit. "Born and brought up there, began learning the piano there, and later got my degree as teacher and performer at the Toronto Conservatory of Music."

"That's how you got into radio—through music?" we suggested.

"Later," she said languidly. "First I taught music in Edmonton, 40 pupils a week, and was also a music critic for the now defunct Edmonton Bulletin. But the wanderlust got me."

"So you came east and got into radio?"

"Later," she said patiently. "First I spent six months in Edmonton as a photographer's assistant. Then I bought a Speed Graphic and a single lens reflex and set up in my own business—in Whitehorse in the Yukon.

"While in Whitehorse," Kit went on, "I decided to do a picture story on the road built during the war by the U.S. army, from Whitehorse to Norman Wells, N.W. Territory—the Canol Highway. I took lots of pictures in temperatures ranging down as far as 81 degrees below; I was certain a magazine would go for that." She thought a little: "Would you care for lots and lots of pictures of a road taken at 81 degrees below?"

We tried again: "So you got discouraged and went into radio?"

"Later," she said. "First I went into partnership with a friend in Edmonton and we specialized in baby pictures and industrial work. We did so well we decided to shut up shop and have a holiday. We drove all the way to Halifax, financing the gas on credit cards, and had a wonderful time till we got back to Edmonton and found the summer slump had taken our customers away somewhere. The oil company whose credit card we used thought it would like some money back, so my friend and I tossed to see who would start working. I lost.

"Radio, by any chance?"

"Later," said Kit. "First I got a job as assistant to a veterinarian and I learned to diagnose things like feline enteritis and distemper, and after fainting the first time the vet used his scalpel, I became quite good as an operating room nurse. I enjoyed it all very much but I got a very attractive offer from elsewhere I just couldn't turn down."

"Radio?"

"Later," she said. About then we gave up. "This was an oil information service. We gave oil companies and prospectors information about mineral rights and wells and the location of dry holes and so on. Everybody wanted their information yesterday, so the pace was gruelling. The boss's sister turned the job down because she didn't want an ulcer. I took a job, and within a year I had an ulcer. That meant a year in Vancouver to convalesce."

"That's when you went shark hunting in the Philippines." we wondered to ourselves, a little hysterically.

"That's when I went into radio," she said. "I came to Montreal and substituted as women's editor with a private station, then got my own program. And in 1958 I joined the CBC as staff announcer."

Kit's first show was Ensemble heard on the Trans-Canada Network, featuring music for small combinations of instruments and solo piano. "I also wrote the script, when there was a script. It went off last March after 180 broadcasts," said Kit. She has also interviewed regularly on CBC television in Montreal.

Currently Kit is heard on CBM, Montreal, Monday through Friday. Her program Women in Town is, logically enough, about women in town. This logical and straightforward title is also typical of her poetry; like the one we began earlier and now finish:

*"aberrated rhomboid imposed tipsy and trapezoid
in articulate perpetuity of geometric design."*

Exactly! We've often thought so ourselves.
