Drama Serves to Awaken Public

• I would like to thank you and congratulate you for your productions of "The Neutron and the Olive" on Quest March 11, and "The Offshore Island" on Festival March 12. I think the CBC should be commended for producing plays of such a controversial nature, and making people aware of what could be the situation after a nuclear war.

Through such programs as these, the public may wake up in time to the insanity of war, and try to do something constructive about it.

Again, thank you, and congratulations from one who believes in unilateral disarmament. — Miss M.H., Saskatoon.

... All Too Short

• The King Whyte program Saturday, March 10 with Al Oeming was wonderful, but all too short. Too bad we can't have more of such programs. We thoroughly enjoy This Living World. . . . The Wayne and Shuster humour is beyond understanding and a waste of CBC funds.—Mrs. R.B.M., Rocanville, Sask.

CBC Makes TV Worthwhile

• Congratulations are due to the CBC for presenting the Canadian intellect with something a bit more challenging than Danny Thomas and The Verdict is Yours. I refer, of course, to the programs Festival and Quest, which in recent weeks have presented such worthy features as "The Neutron and the Olive," "The Offshore Island," "Crawling Arnold" and "Bed-time Story."

For those who wish to remove these shows from the air, I can suggest that they instead shut-off their TV rather than try to prevent others who enjoy this type of show from watching. The CBC is the only thing that makes a TV set worth keeping.—K.C., Regina.

Now It's "Bonanza" Clubs

• After reading the little bit of a bump given in the Mailbag (March 10-16) to our Bonanza by Miss E.C. of Regina, let me put in a bit of a plug. I was going to write anyway after watching the splendid Bonanza program March 18. . . . I know there are "Bonanza clubs" where good friends gather and enjoy the program—not teenagers, I must admit, but I find all ages are ready to watch Bonanza and then Close-Up right afterwards. What a thrill to see Lorne Greene on Close-Up and have a few questions answered. My mother always listened to his program (on CBC Radio) in the war years, and now I, my children and grandchildren enjoy him on television. . . .—Mrs. H.W.S., Moose Jaw.

CBXT EDMONTON at the

Alberta Progress TRADE FAIR

HOW IS A television program put on the air? Visitors to the Alberta Progress Trade Fair in Edmonton, April 9-14, can find the answer first-hand, as major local productions of CBXT are staged right before their eyes in the Manufacturers' Building of the Exhibition Grounds.

This is the second annual such Trade Fair, sponsored by the Edmonton Exhibition Association. It provides a showcase for Alberta manufacturers and distributors, and all indications are that it will enjoy even more success this year than it did in 1961.

Jim Crossan

Jim Schrumm

Channel 5 will present a wide variety of productions, ranging from interviews, news and weather telecasts to special events and variety programs. All will take place on a specially-constructed show stage.

Probably CBXT's busiest person during the Fair will be Jim Crossan, new host of Channel 5's magazine-type program, Gateway. Each week-day evening between 6:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m., Jim will share the spotlight with weatherman Julian Kiniski and sportscaster Glenn Bjarnason, as Gateway highlights the events at the Fair. Later each evening, Jim will emcee the Fair's free stage show, to feature hypnotist Edwin L. Baron and Chinese impressionists Ming and Ling.

Tuesday and Thursday evenings between 7:00 and 9:00 p.m., announcer Jim Schrumm and commentator Molly Whelan will be seen in productions of Ladies First. Both programs will be video-taped and held overnight, to be seen in the regular program slot at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday and Friday.

CBC Edmonton's video-tape cruiser, which records television programs on tape, will be among the modern equipment displayed at the Trade Fair.

Friday evening at 7:00 p.m., following Gateway, CBXT's popular musical variety program First Nighter, will take the stage for camera and dress rehearsals. The program will begin live telecasting at 10:30 p.m. Song stylist Dorothy Harpell and baritone Glyn Williams will join announcer Neil Smith, the Harry Boon Sextet and the Ruth Carse dance trio in a musical salute to the Fair.

After watching the program originations on stage, visitors can view the technical equipment which makes remote telecasts possible: the three-camera mobile unit, and the video-tape cruiser. The video-tape cruiser can record both the visual and sound portions of a program on a magnetic tape for telecast at a later time, working in much the same manner as the familiar sound tape recorder, widely used in radio.

CBC Information Services will have a booth amongst the exhibits, at which copies of this edition of the CBC Times will be handed out. On display in the booth will be a miniature model of a television station, complete in the smallest detail, which will graphically illustrate the complexities of television production.

The 8th Day of the Week

MAREK HLASKO'S novel The Eighth Day of the Week, a realistic, unforgettable description of life under Communism, was published in his native Poland five or six years ago. It won the country's highest literature award—and then was savagely denounced by Soviet authorities. CBC-TV's Quest, Sunday night, April 15, will present a dramatization of it by Norman Klenman, prepared from a translation by Norbert Guterman. Production is by Daryl Duke.

In this brutal but moving indictment of life behind the Iron Curtain and the corrupting influence of Communism on the individual, Hlasko describes a brief period in the affairs of a Polish family. His characters all look forward to a future time—like the eighth day of the week—which may never come, but it's a hope they must cling to if they are to survive their grey, crude, graceless existence.

"Set in the spiritual wasteland that is Poland today," says the publicity note on the book's dust jacket, "this is a tremendously powerful and poignant story that unfolds in a nightmare world of unfulfilled love or furtive liaisons, where life has lost its savor,

Living with a Giant. A film produced by Associated-Rediffusion of England. Narrated by Lord Boothby. The program is designed as a perceptive report about Canada and its relations with the United States. Script writer Allan says he read many books about Canada and comments: "All the books agreed that Canada was living beyond its income and was dependent to a large extent on the United States. And they all seemed taken up with something called 'the search for the Canadian national identity'."

The film is taken at three communities and shows life as Anglo-Canadians and French-Canadians live. Guelph, Ontario, is the example of the English-speaking community's way of life, while the French-speaking community is Ste. Hyacinthe, about 30 miles from Montreal. The film also shows Rock Island, Quebec, a community on the U.S.-Canada border. Living with a Giant falls into two parts, the first showing how strong American domination is, and the second answering the question: "If the two countries are so alike, why don't they join up as one country?"

Explorations

This program has been postponed. Replace it with "Canada at War," second program of a 13-week series of documentaries prepared by the National Film Board.

On Our Cover . . .

Marking Easter week, during which special programming is carried on CBC television and radio networks, our cover features a Crucifixion painted by the Italian master Pietro Perugino (1450-1524). This is the centre panel of the great work, the two side panels showing more figures in mourning. The slide from which this was taken was supplied through the courtesy of the University of Manitoba and Prof. George Swinton.

CANADA AT WAR

DONALD BRITTAIN, who wrote the scripts for the series Canada at War, which started April 4 on CBC-TV, wasn't old enough to have much personal experience with World War II. But the 33-year-old writer has relived it the past two years, through dozens of war memoirs and reports, battle maps, millions of feet of film shot in action by Canadians, British, Americans, Germans and Russians and in interviews with men who fought abroad and with others who directed the Canadian war effort at home.

"I was a teen-ager during the war," says Brittain. "And I think I've approached the job of writing about it with a fresh view, without bias. I started from scratch."

The 13 programs cover the period from 1936 to 1946, from Canadian veterans' pilgrimage to Vimy Ridge in 1936, through Canada's reaction to the rise of dictators in Axis countries in the late 1930's, through the war itself—from the German Blitzkrieg, the early Allied defeats, the counter-attacks in North Africa, the battles in the Mediterranean, D-Day—and on to the atomic bomb and the crumbling of Japan.

"The thing which struck me most in reliving those 10 years was how Canada matured and began to start its own independent course in the world," says Brittain. "The series is, of course, concerned mostly with the war, the battles at the front and the struggles at home. I tried to boil down the mass of detail into salient aspects to try to get the real flavour of each event, each battle—the dust in Sicily, the tension of D-Day, the heat and smell in Normandy. The problem with so big a subject was to keep the commentary to an absolute minimum and let the film speak for itself."

Culling the more than 3,000 miles of film, all pre-war and wartime newsreel footage, was probably the biggest part of the series, which was two years in the making. Bulk of the film had been stored in a hangar at Pendleton near Ottawa, since the end of the war.

"We knew there was a lot of film there," said series producer Stanley Clish. "But we didn't know in detail what it contained and whether there was enough covering main events in Canada and the war over the 10-year period to give a good picture of that time."

There was film shot by Canadians at home and Canadian forces abroad; British film stored in Canada for safekeeping; and about 2,500,000 feet of film, on Hitler's Third Reich and its armies, confiscated during and after the war.

A four-man NFB crew under William Gallaway spent a year at the hangar cataloguing scene by scene the 10,000,000 feet shot by Canadian armed forces cameramen. Under executive producer Peter Jones, Clish began work in December, 1958, and spent 15 months examining film, including six weeks at England's Imperial War Museum which supplied him with considerable battle action footage.

Clish, Brittain, who served as associate producer, and three film editors spent the next 18 months condensing the mass of film, first into 13 bulky segments, each two to three hours long, and finally refining them into half hours. During the final process, which started last October, Brittain wrote the commentary which actor Budd Knapp voices over the film.

Of all the film he had to choose from, Clish said the German footage was available in greatest quantity and variety. "From the beginning, the Germans filmed almost every one of their battles. They had camera crews on submarines and with each battalion. Allied cameramen were not as numerous, but they did a thorough job and their number increased as the war progressed. The filming of D-Day was superb."

The title of the third episode, Wednesday, April 18, is "Year of Siege." It deals with the period September, 1940 - October, 1941, when the Empress of Britain was sunk, and Germany occupied Hungary, Roumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Crete. Rommel is shown in North Africa, Russia is invaded, and Canadian forces are sent to Britain.

GRAND EXITS

A family's disillusionment on moving day

FRENCH-CANADIAN playwright Jacques Languirand has taken an ordinary, if sometimes hectic aspect of life which we all experience sometime or other—moving day—and has woven it into a compelling, bitter-sweet drama with comic overtones. CBC-TV's Festival presents it on Monday night, April 16, with production by Mario Prizek. Titled "Grand Exits," the 90-minute drama was translated from the original French (Les Grands Departs) by Ivor Barry, Toronto actor-writer. It was first produced on the CBC's French TV network in 1957.

Grand Exits is built around the disillusionments of a modern Canadian family. The action takes place in an apartment where the melee of packing-cases, overflowing suitcases and stacked furniture of moving day exemplify the confused lives of the characters involved in the story. Starred as the husband and wife are John Drainie and Frances Hyland. Hector, the husband, has always wanted to become a great writer, but never seems to get anywhere near making the grade. In fact, he hasn't written a line for years, and hates himself for it. He and his wife have been living on the savings of old Grandpa, a helpless paralytic, and on what the wife's neurotic sister, Eulalie, inherited. But now nearly all that has dribbled away, they're down to rock bottom, and there's nothing for it but to move to a smaller apartment.

Moving day unearths all sorts of memories of bygone days and points up their fears for the future. And it emphasizes that nearly all of them haven't the courage to face reality.

FRENCH TELEVISION HIGHLIGHTS

Channel 6—CBWFT

Good Friday, April 20

Following are several highlights from CBWFT's Good Friday schedule, made up almost entirely of special religious programs and film features.

4:00—Par ce signe tu vaincras—A program on the Cross as a symbol of our Faith and Hope. Hostess is Jeanne Quémart who draws a parallel between the Cross as a symbol of growing Christianity, and as a symbol of hope in face of the daily burdens of the world.

4:30—Les Petits Chanteurs à la Croix de Bois—This Paris boys' choir, renowned throughout the world, mostly for its folk music, is featured in a recital of hymns pertaining to the death and resurrection of Christ.

7:15—Le Jugement dernier—Produced by Guy Perol, this commentary is a brilliant documentary on the 12th century artistry. It illustrates the tympanum of the Antun Cathedral, built in this century, depicting the Last Judgement.

7:30—Le Canada en guerre—(regular) Third in this 13-episode series depicting Canada at War in the second world conflict; a National Film Board production featuring original war films taken by Canadians overseas or captured from the enemy.

8:00—Car vivante est la parole de Dieu—Poverty, as it exists in the slums of our large cities, may not seem so cruel as, for example, that existing in concentration and refugee camps and in isolated, barren lands. But whatever the causes and wherever it may exist, poverty is always inhuman. The program tells how we can learn to understand, combat poverty, and show more love toward the needy.

8:30—Vigile pascale à St. Benoit du Lac—The Benedictine Abbey of St. Benoit du Lac, Quebec, is renowned for its "Oka" cheese, produced and packed by the monks themselves. However, the first aim of the monks is prayer and contemplation, and whatever agricultural products they sell serve only to afford them a means of living. Here, they are seen and heard in pre-Easter religious ceremonies where the Gregorian chant for which they are also renowned, serves as inspirational background.

9:00—Long Métrage: "Le Grand Jour" (feature movie)—stars Miguelito Gil and Miguel Rodriguez in the story

Atlanta, Ga.

Leading Lady of Desegregation

"Venture" on CBC Trans-Canada radio Sunday visits this southern U.S. city, scene of thus-far peaceful integration of black and white races.

PEACH BLOSSOMS, honey-dipped accents, Aunt Pittypat, and frosted mint juleps passed round by coloured servants in the coolness of high-ceilinged livingrooms. That's the Atlanta many will picture when they think of the capital city of Georgia, the chataine of the Deep South, the Old South—slow, sunny, warm-hearted, azalea-clad in the piney foothills of the Appalachians. Right now this gracious old city is wearing one of its loveliest gowns, in the white-and-green zenith of the dogwood season.

While it retains the best of its past charm, Atlanta has come within the last few years to symbolize a New South, a bustling centre of business and culture where skyscrapers rub elbows with historic sites, and antebellum mansions raise startled eyebrows at the cantilevered modern houses appearing on Atlanta's curving streets.

The city's history is as colourful as its floral displays. First settled by one Hardy Ivy in 1833, it became a town named Terminus (at end of a rail line) in 1837, and was given its present name in 1845. During the Civil War Atlanta was important as a Confederate supply and communications centre. Burned by General Sherman's troops in 1864, Atlanta took its time about reassembling itself and kept pretty much out of the news, then romantically again came to the fore with the publication of Margaret Mitchell's novel Gone With the Wind. The city was forgotten again in the general economic stagnation of the American Southland, but it was reborn in the fall of 1961 when nine Negro children walked into a hitherto all-white school without incident. Coming after the debacle of Little Rock, Atlanta's peaceful school integration was like a fresh breeze blowing from the South, and Americans gratefully turned their eyes towards the city that had won back for them their country's good name.

What they saw was a city bursting with economic vitality and aglow with commercial success, still as Southern as corn pone, but exhibiting not a lazy bone in her body—a Southern town that had wisely bandaged her old Civil War wounds with the Yankee dollar. They saw, too, a city that appeared as the centre of Southern liberalism, where race sat down with race to discuss quietly how the inevitable could be accomplished quietly.

How true is this image? And if true, what problems does it pose? How much of the Old South remains in the "new," and how much of the "new" is really to be admired? Who are the leaders behind the city's revitalization and what do they really stand for? What does it mean to be "liberal" in Atlanta, and who are the liberals, who the reactionaries?

On Sunday at 5:00 p.m. CBC radio's Venture presents a program about Atlanta called City at the Crossroads. It examines what happened to the city when the tide of desegregation swept across it following the U.S. Supreme Court decision negating the concept of "separate but equal" facilities as an acceptable system in a democratic society. To gather material for the program, freelance broadcast-writer Eleanor Fischer travelled widely in the South, and in Atlanta talked to many men and women who live there and who control its life, including former Mayor William Hartsfield; present Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr.; the editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Eugene Patterson; powerful segregationist Lester Maddox; as well as bankers, labour leaders, artists and writers. Atlanta is seen at what is perhaps the most important crossroads in an America which, next January 1, will mark the 100th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's famed Emancipation Proclamation which abolished slavery in the U.S. The program is produced by Jack Vance.

During a visit to Toronto a few weeks ago, an Atlanta Baptist minister who is much in the news these days as a non-violent anti-segregationist, the Reverend Martin Luther King, said, "Old Man Segregation is on his deathbed." He feels that "integration is not some lavish dish that the federal government will pass out on a silver platter. We must struggle for it. We must fight for it." However, he noted that "you can't legislate morals. The law may not make a man love me, but it can stop him from lynching me. I think that's pretty important, too." And he added: "Our basic aim is to become the white man's brother, not his brother-in-law."

Venture paints a candid portrait of King's Atlanta as it is today, and as it promises to be, against the backdrop of the Deep South as it has been in its last troubled century.

METROPOLITAN OPERA

Così Fan Tutte (Thus Do They All), or The School for Lovers. Opera in two acts by Mozart.

Cast: Fiordiligi—soprano; Dorabella, her sister—soprano; Ferrando, officer—tenor; Guglielmo, officer—baritone; Alfonso, bachelor—bass; Despina, maid—soprano. Locale, Naples. Time, the 18th Century.

Act I. Alfonso lays a wager with the officers Ferrando and Guglielmo, by which they are to test the fidelity of their fiancées, Fiordiligi and Dorabella, for the space of a day. The officers seemingly bid farewell to them but return disguised as rich Albanians. They are unrecognized and make love to each other's ladies. The maid Despina tries to induce her mistresses to give ear to the rich strangers but the sisters remain steadfast. Alfonso does not wish to lose the wager and bribes Despina. When the Albanians pretend to take poison before the eyes of the ladies, the maid appears disguised as a physician and seemingly saves their lives by the power of magnetism.

Act II. Persuaded by Despina, Dorabella is the first of the two to listen to the pleadings of the disguised Guglielmo, to whom she gives the picture of her betrothed Ferrando. In a fury over the success of his friend, Ferrando then wins Fiordiligi. At the suggestion of Alfonso, Despina now disguises herself as a notary and brings the marriage contracts. At this moment news arrives of the return of the officers. The covering Albanians, who have been hidden by the sisters, escape in order to reappear in their true characters. They unmask Despina, show the faithless brides their marriage contracts, and finally reveal their true identities. At the critical moment, Alfonso, who has won the bet, explains all and brings about a reconciliation.

SPORTS

"Spring has sprung;

"CBC Television
"Is where the sports is."

by
WITTMAN

That lame little limerick will certainly never win any Nobel Prize for poetry, and for grammatical reasons if nothing else I'm surprised the editor even accepted it. But it pretty well portrays the situation during the next week on CBC Television. As this column goes to press, the boys battling for Lord Stanley's coveted hunk of silverware, have skated onto the pond just three times with Montreal and Toronto leading their respective semi-final series two games to one. And as this writing reaches the homes of many viewers, the National Hockey League playoffs may already be completed, with the Stanley Cup resting in the trophy cabinet of the Montreal Canadiens. At least that's what it says in my crystal ball. However, should the Stanley Cup finals still be in progress the CBC will continue to provide complete coverage on both radio and television.

Saturday afternoon, April 14, CBC television viewers will be treated to their first "game of the week" baseball telecast. Dizzy Dean and Pee Wee Reese team up to call the action from Briggs Stadium in Detroit, as the Tigers play host to the world champion New York Yankees. The Tigers took a pretty good run at the Bronx Bombers for a portion of last season, but then ran out of gas in the stretch and finished some eight games off the pace. However it's a brand new season, and optimism runs rampant among the clubs who just missed last time out, the Tigers being no exception.

And if the new blood can fit in with that strong Tiger mound staff and the likes of Kaline, Cash Colavito and company, Tiger fans might just have something to cheer about this semester. But don't bet against the Yankees. That double "M" combination of Maris and Mantle, plus Berra, Ford, Skowron, Blanchard, Richardson, etc., makes the pinstripe boys from Gotham, favourites to repeat.

The same afternoon, Stan Leonard on his golf instructional series discusses the hook shot, or in other words, what causes a shot to veer sharply to the left. Stan tells how to avoid such a shot . . . and also how to deliberately hook a ball. This particular show appears to be designed for the more advanced golfers.

Also on Saturday, we pay our usual visit to O'Connor Bowl for five-pin action.

Sunday afternoon we journey across the pond to take in one of the world's classic sporting events, the famed Oxford-Cambridge boat race.

Hockey (possibly), baseball, golf, rowing and bowling are the highlights of a varied program in sporting coverage. And as we said a few lines back, "CBC television is where the sports is."

Man Presses On

"The mere fact that our own planet is still in chaos is no good argument in history to prevent us from exploring outer space. This is the way human beings work. We are not content to consolidate like the ants or the termites might do."—Dr. Grey Walter, in the 'London Forum' Brains Trust broadcast on the BBC.

Canadian History. A series about unfamiliar characters and events in Canadian history. This week Harold Kemp talks about Gabriel Dumont, a famous plainsman and buffalo hunter and one of Louis Riel's lieutenants at the time of the 1885 North-West Rebellion. Mr. Kemp, now retired and living in Prince Albert, is a writer and broadcaster who lived in the North for many years as a fur trader.

THE 8th DAY OF THE WEEK

where beauty struggles for existence against seemingly hopeless odds."

The central figures in the story are Agnieszka, played by Sharon Acker, and Piotr, played by Neil McCallum, a young couple strongly, idealistically, in love, who have been waiting four years for an apartment so they can get married. All they ask for is a place where they can be alone. Doug Master plays the father who longs for the day when he can escape, even briefly, from his whining, bedridden wife, played by Alice Hill. Zawadzki, played by John Vernon, who has a job at the gas works and shares their home, looks for the day when the girl he loved and lost will return and never leave him. Others in the cast are Sean Sullivan, Ivor Barry and Marit Pool.

Marek Hlasko, the author, is a towering blond man who closely resembles the late Hollywood hero James Dean, and is one of the most furious and most idolized (by young Poles) of Poland's Angry Young Men. His life is a string of sordid experiences. When the Nazis marched into Poland he was seven. He was 13 when the Communists took over. For a while he was a bellboy in a Warsaw hotel, then drove a taxi for six years. The sense of futility he encountered everywhere, the brutalization of life, the personal anguish, infuriated him. His considerable literary talents enabled him to express his feelings forcefully in print during a two-year period when Polish censorship restrictions were relaxed.

Four of his published stories were filmed. He gave up taxi driving and became literary editor of the outspoken student paper Pro Prossu, which then was banned. He managed to get out of Poland and travelled luxuriously in Western Europe on his impressive royalties, wearing blue jeans and a cowboy shirt and boasting that he had breezed through $4,000 in a few weeks on the Riviera. Meanwhile in Poland he was being denounced as "decadent" and a "traitor." His books were burned and the films made from them forbidden in the country. A Warsaw Communist daily labelled him a disciple of George Orwell, "that classical master of anti-Communist pamphleteering."

"It was not I who made Warsaw—that Warsaw that was for so many years a city without a smile,"

OXFORD UNION SOCIETY DEBATE

Resolved: That This Motion Should Be Overwhelmingly Defeated.

By long tradition the Oxford Union Society's fifth debate in the summer term is always unashamedly and hopelessly frivolous. It is the week of the inter-college boat race on the River Isis and nothing is really taken seriously except exams. These light-hearted debates are regarded as opportunities for the exercising of under-graduate wit at its most irresponsible and should not be taken as typical examples of the debating standards of the Union, which is one of the training grounds for the world of politics where many famous men acquired their first experience in public speaking.

commented Hlasko. "It was not I who made the Warsaw in which people trembled with fear; it was not I who made the Warsaw in which the greatest treasure of the poor was a bottle of vodka; it was not I who made the Warsaw in which a girl was cheaper than a bottle of vodka—it was that Warsaw that made me."

When Hlasko asked for an extension of his passport for six months, Poland agreed—if he would return there for three days. Hlasko knew what that meant, and decided to remain in the West. But he was not happy, found it difficult to write away from his homeland. He went to Israel with a Jewish pal (Hlasko is a Roman Catholic), learned Hebrew, worked in a garage. But he has difficulty fitting into any society. Finally he became so depressed in exile that he offered repeatedly to return to Poland and face life imprisonment. "The world," he said bitterly, "is just one big death cell." Producer Daryl Duke says he hasn't been able to find out whether or not Hlasko ever returned to his homeland.

New Stan Leonard Series

Super-Slow Motion

Shows Golfers' Fine Points

A FOUR-SECOND golf swing will be shown in graphic detail as a super slow motion film technique extends it to almost 60 seconds on CBC-TV's new Golf with Stan Leonard series.

The 13-week series of quarter-hour programs was to start Saturday, April 7, on the CBC-TV network. Leonard, Canada's best-known pro golfer, will act as chief instructor and host on the series, designed to provide practical aid to Canadian golfers.

The super slow motion camera films 1,000 frames per second, compared to a normal motion picture camera speed of 24 frames per second. A golf swing filmed at the former speed, then shown at the latter speed, is slowed down to a point where a viewer can carefully study every motion. With this camera—originally designed for scientific studies—the golf swing can be made to last 10 times longer than any previously-used slow motion could achieve. Leonard, as narrator, is thus able to point out every important movement while the picture is shown.

"I taught professional golf for 17 years before starting on the pro tournament tour," says Leonard, "and I have seen many films about golf. The slow motion techniques used on this series are the best I have ever seen."

"These techniques allow the instructor unprecedented opportunity to talk about the golf swing and let the viewer see what's being discussed while the swing is actually in progress," adds Leonard. "I'll bet there are a lot of golfers who would give anything to be able to see themselves analyzed in this way. Watching somebody else in action, however, will be a close second best."

The new series will cover golf instruction from tee to green, and will be more advanced than the CBC-TV series on golf fundamentals shown in 1960 and repeated in 1961. A brief refresher course on basics of golf technique will be included in the first episode. Guest experts will appear in some episodes.

The series will cover not only the problems of the average golfer, but also those of players who have specific problems: the left-hander; the short golfer; the tall golfer. One program will be devoted to the particular difficulties of lady golfers.

On the April 14 program, Leonard helps golfers to overcome one of their most difficult problems: the hook. He explains what makes an otherwise well-hit drive pull off to the left side rather than go straight. He tells how to make such a shot deliberately when it is required to skirt an obstacle, and how to avoid a hook when a straight shot goes for the greatest distance.
