An Evening with Mozart

• I would like to thank the CBC for Festival (An Evening with Mozart), December 3, CBC-TV).

It was wonderful to see as well as hear the splendid performance of the CBC Concert Hour Orchestra under the able conductor, Josef Krips. It was a real treat to have pianist Malcolm Frager, Pierrette Alarie and Leopold Simoneau perform.

I also enjoyed The Gondoliers two weeks ago. It is wonderful to have shows like this on television and would like to see more. Is there a possibility of televising The Mikado, Yeomen of the Guard or the Barber of Seville this season? The CBC Wednesday Night concerts are also most appreciated. Thank you for your fine programming.—O.B., Saskatoon, Sask.

Although neither THE MIKADO nor THE YEOMEN OF THE GUARD is scheduled for FESTIVAL this season, you will be interested to know that THE BARBER OF SEVILLE will be presented on the METROPOLITAN OPERA broadcast on Saturday afternoon, March 9 on CBC Radio.

One Time Around

• I cannot refrain from expressing my opinion on the recent Quest program (Sunday, December 2, CBC-TV). To say the least it was the most disgraceful and debasing performance we have ever seen on the screen. What an insult it is to ask self-respecting people to look at such indecency and especially on the Lord's Day. Who do you think wants to gaze on next-to-nude women doing the twist? Give us a break and let us have some properly-clothed ladies to feast our eyes on.—Mrs. F.A., St. James, Man.

The program in question profiled Hugh Hefner, Publisher of PLAYBOY magazine who has become a public figure through his amazing financial success in the magazine publishing field. The documentary was not meant to defend or promote his philosophy, but merely to report objectively on it. Consider also that such a documentary will provoke a variety of reactions. Such people and such philosophies do exist and to pretend that they do not would be unrealistic.

We were aware of the controversial aspects of this program and it was for this reason that it was scheduled in the latest available network time period and preceded by a special introduction which explained the nature of the program and advised that it was not suitable for children.

It is entirely likely that more people will be repulsed by the Hefner way of life than impressed by it.

Canada's Waterfowl

AS APRIL'S BITING winds deliver winter's last cruel blow to the freezing prairies, a dissonant, rhythmical, "honk . . . honk . . . honk" frequently can be heard from the clouds above. It's a sound as welcome as the twitter of the bluebird in more temperate climes, and it means the same: winter soon will withdraw to the north, making way for the more pleasant seasons that come as a reward for the prairie dwellers' fortitude over the preceding five months.

Gliding down from the sky, the giant Canada goose, nature's largest goose species, settles for the courting and nesting season in such areas as Manitoba's Delta Marshes and Oak Point Marshes. On Sunday, January 13, CBC-TV's 20/20 visits these marshes for an intriguing look at the Canada goose and other waterfowl in their natural habitat.

The program deals with a specialized study of ducks and geese being made by biology students, some of them from the U.S., at the Delta Waterfowl Research Station, on the southern tip of Lake Manitoba.

Seldom-seen courtship flights of native Canadian ducks are included in the film, shot by producer Peter Kelly and cameraman Harry Makin. The CBC-TV team worked over a six-month period on the subject, beginning in April with shots of the arrival of ducks and geese and ending in October with the migration back south.

The Delta Waterfowl Station is sponsored by the North American Wild Life Foundation, a national group with directors from both sides of the Canada-U.S. border, and supported by both countries. Its purpose is to provide facilities for qualified researchers to study marsh biology. The Delta area is considered a hunter's paradise during the autumn duck-hunting season.

ONE BLUSTERY day in 1894, six pioneer Winnipeg women put aside the more elemental demands of life in the new West to meet in the home of Mrs. Angus Kirkland. Their meeting, ultimately to have a profound effect on the cultural life of the Prairies, was for the purpose of studying and promoting fine music.

Five years later, the group was continuing to expand, and on November 13, 1899, the constitution of the Women's Musical Club of Winnipeg was set up under the guidance of Mrs. L. A. Hamilton. Officers were elected, and the study of various composers and their works was undertaken.

By 1907, the membership had grown to 400, and soon the world's great artists began beating a path to the remote Prairie city to perform for the club. The guest book began to read like a Who's Who of the musical world, with names like Padrewski, Tetrizzini, Melba, John McCormack, Kreisler, Maggie Teyte, Godowsky, Galli-Curci, Myra Hess and Rachmaninoff leaping from its pages.

Canadian artists presented at the outset of their careers include Glenn Gould, Maureen Forrester, Leopold Simoneau, Donald Bell, Elizabeth Benson Guy, Jan Simons, Betty Jean Hagen, Zara Nelsova, Ross Pratt and Gertrude Huntley Green.

The concerts continue, and next in the series is to be a performance in the Concert Hall of the Winnipeg Civic Auditorium, Monday, January 14, by violinist Lea Foli, cellist Peggy Sampson and pianist Mario Bernardi. On CBC Radio's Prairie Chamber Music Tuesday, January 15, one of the works performed at the concert, Brahms' Trio in C Major, opus 87 is heard.

KEN MASON:

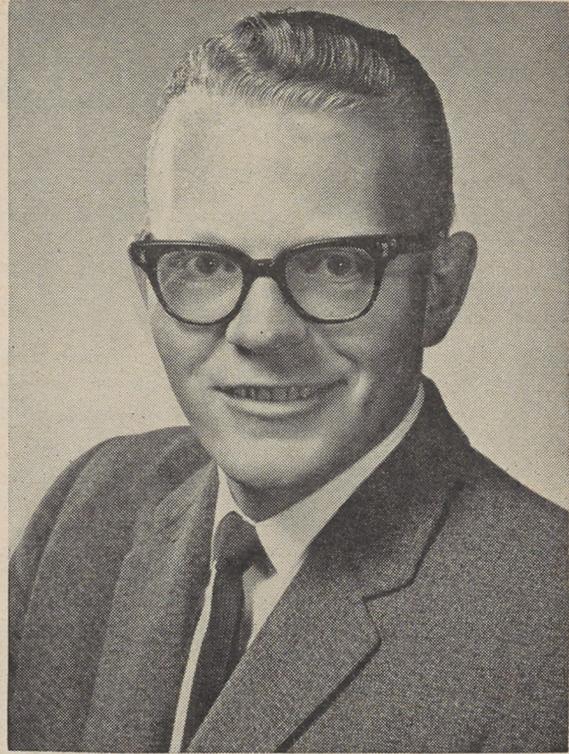

He Keeps in Shape On Parliament Hill

FROM COPY-CHASER to the CBC's reporter on Parliament Hill—that's the story of Ken Mason, born in Edmonton 32 years ago, whose "long and colourful working career," as he tells it, started in September, 1946, when he joined the Edmonton Journal as a copy boy, and then after a year or so was elevated to the position of cub reporter.

Now, Mason is known to national radio listeners as the regular CBC reporter on the Monday-Friday news program On Parliament Hill, a report on the interesting, significant and occasionally lighter happenings in official Ottawa.

"Back in my early days," Mason says, "the city editor ran his own training program which consisted largely of sending junior reporters to church on Sunday to cover sermons. In addition to covering sermons, I wrote obituaries, covered service club meetings, home and school association meetings and the like."

A Tribute to a Great American

"Verse-Writer"

"I'M HARDLY a literary man," said Robert Frost recently, "I'm just a verse-writer." He has always disclaimed the title "poet," but few would agree with the distinguished American's modest assessment of himself. He has been called "great" by men who are chary with their use of that word; he has been honoured by governments, by literary societies, and by two dozen universities which have conferred honorary degrees upon him. He has won four Pulitzer Prizes for his work. It has been said that if the United States had a poet laureate, it would be he; his volumes of poems have been sold in the hundreds of thousands, and read by millions.

He is, in short, the leading figure in American poetry. But all the praise and adulation means comparatively little to Frost. Like his poems, he is simple, strong and direct, a craggy individualist who is happier when he is living in complete isolation on his Vermont farm than when he is being lionized by some group of important personages.

His poems can bring glowing warmth to the heart, but he has the New Englander's independence and respect for privacy: "I want people to stand me off," he has said, "and I want to stand them off." A couple of years ago, he met a delegation of Soviet writers at the United Nations. "They didn't speak English," recalled Frost, "and one kept taking my hand and shaking it every 30 seconds. He embarrassed me. There was another Russian I liked better. We did not speak, but we exchanged hard looks, and we were men together."

With his lined face, shaggy brows and halo of unruly white hair, Frost looks the part of the grand old man of American poetry, but the large, strong hands and piercing blue eyes express more accurately the character of the man.

Last March, on the eve of his 88th birthday, a new volume of Frost's poems was published, and it was imbued with a vitality, vigour and excitement that belied the age of its creator. Until recent months, Frost has been actively pursuing his various interests, travelling about the country on lecture tours, teaching, "saying" his poems to audiences (he dislikes the term "reading" when applied to his poems) and generally showing the stamina of a man half his age. A month ago, however, he was admitted to a Boston hospital, suffering from an undisclosed ailment, and his condition has been described as serious since that time.

This week, CBC Radio's Project '63 series will present an hour-long study of Robert Frost and his work. The program will include a long interview with the poet by broadcaster Eleanor Fischer, recorded at his home in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in which Frost talks about the craft of poetry, politics, government, and other subjects that have interested him. Frost will also be heard "saying" some of his own poems.

If Pulitzer Prizes were awarded for modesty, Robert Frost now would have yet another such award to his credit. The noted poet is interviewed Sunday on

ROBERT FROST

Mexico's Great Legacy of ART

Some of the world's most advanced civilizations have lived in Mexico. THE LIVELY ARTS Tuesday presents a look at some of the art treasures that have come to Canada from that nation

WHEN CORTES and his Spanish army conquered Mexico in the early 16th century, they caused the destruction of much of the artistic triumphs of once-flourishing and remarkably refined Mexican cultures, some of them dating back 7,000 years or more, removing all evidence that the people they had overcome were not the barbarians the Spanish may have wanted to think they were.

Ever since, archeologists have been doing their best to dig up and piece together relics of those highly civilized cultures. Many monumental samples have been found, hidden in the jungles of Veracruz or Tabasco, buried in graves, gobbled by tropical growth, or washed by centuries of rain and sun on mountaintops, but it is estimated that there are some 10,000 archeological sites still to be uncovered when time and money permit—and this in a country one-fifth the size of Canada.

Striking examples of primitive Mexican art have found their way into Canadian public and private collections, and some of the most interesting of them will be presented to CBC-TV viewers on Tuesday night, January 15, on The Lively Arts, as a short introduction to pre-Columbian art—that is, art up until the Spanish conquest, but before the colonial influences set in.

Produced and directed by Ron Kelly, who has some early Mexican sculpture in his own collection, the film will be presented with an unusual background score especially composed by Norman Symonds of Toronto. This is Symonds' first film score. For percussion instruments only, it's a free abstract piece employing the talents of only one musician but using about 28 instruments.

Symonds says, "I just allowed the images of the sculpture to suggest what they would to me, and left room for the performer to use his art of improvisation occasionally. It's not jazz, but I chose a man with a jazz background to perform it—Hugh Barclay."

Kelly says "Symonds has used the most amazing economy in his music. It's incredibly tenuous stuff, using more silences than notes, and most effectively, too."

Kelly points out that 15 or 20 important and quite different cultures which once thrived in Mexico are evident in archeological discoveries there. Geophysical and environmental reasons and undulating waves of invasion kept changing the face of the country, and with each change, new arts and forms developed.

Most North Americans don't realize what a mine of art Mexico is, much of it of a high degree of sophistication and fine craftsmanship. These early Indians were not primitive artistically or socially. They had a rigorous caste system, and an aristocracy well-defined, with the priests at the top. Their artistic accomplishments can be appreciated all the more when it is realized that it was accomplished without metal tools, without beasts of burden to transport materials, and without any knowledge of the wheel.

Aztec art is widely-known but Kelly points out that it is more recent than much of the other Mexican art, and not the most important or the most accomplished. In the film he will show a few pieces of Aztec sculpture dating to just before the conquest, and some other pieces 7,000 years old. His art samples are from the Royal Ontario Museum, which has a modest collection of primitive Mexican art, and from public and private collections in Montreal. Included are some gorgeous alabaster masks, shown with the sun shining through them, some tiny figures of people and dogs, which were the toys of Mexican boys and girls around 5,000 B.C., and some fearful bits of sculpture, figures of men with flayed human skin hanging from their necks.

It wasn't until the First World War that North American and European private collectors and antiquarians began to realize the value of primitive art in Mexico. Before that, a few lucky adventurers had gotten in on the ground floor while artifacts were still cheap. In 1839, explorer-archeologist John Stephens bought a whole ruined Mayan city for $50. Early in this century a U.S. Consul in Yucatan found himself the proud owner of another Mayan city (complete with deep well housing and almost unlimited supply of

A Visit With Italian-Canadians

A new life of hope and prosperity is being won by the Italian immigrants to Canada. CAMERA CANADA visits with these people to learn of their progress, Monday on CBC-TV

CIAO (PRONOUNCED CHOW), is an Italian word that is often spoken through tears of joy or sorrow, for it has a double meaning. It can mean either "hello" or "goodbye."

When Toronto barber Frank Nalli called "ciao" to pretty Maria as the ship carried him away from sunny Italy, he felt as if life would never be the same again. But if he and Maria were ever to afford to marry, he would have to make his way in the world, and according to his friends who had emigrated and done well, the best way to acquire a nest egg, to say nothing of a nest, was to move to Toronto, where things were humming. So Frank gambled and emigrated.

Once in the new land, he was surrounded by dozens of welcoming Italians including his brother, Cesare, who made him feel very much at home, and he soon established himself in his trade. But he often feels lonely, and lives for the day when he will be able to send for Maria and they can have their own little home with all the modern gadgets. He smiles to himself as he pictures Maria's trim figure bustling about a tiny Toronto kitchen, pressing buttons and turning switches and dishing up some of those scrumptious meals she used to prepare for him back home. Mama mia! How his mouth waters at the thought of her lasagne verdi and that special spaghetti dish that tasted different from any one else's.

To help fill the gap in his life, and to add to the bank account that brings Maria closer every week, Frank leads a small band and is already quite well-known in Toronto's huge, bustling Italian community.

Monday night, January 14, CBC television's Camera Canada presents an hour-long documentary program offering a true-to-life picture of how new Canadians from Italy are carving satisfactory niches for themselves in their adopted land, and making valuable social and cultural contributions to Canada. Ciao Maria takes viewers through a typical weekend with Frank Nalli and four other Italian-Canadians, including Frank's brother, Cesare Nalli, who is a hairdresser, Tony Larotti, who works in a shoe factory, Joe Magistrale, a bricklayer, and Michelle Ceccarelli, a recent bride from Italy.

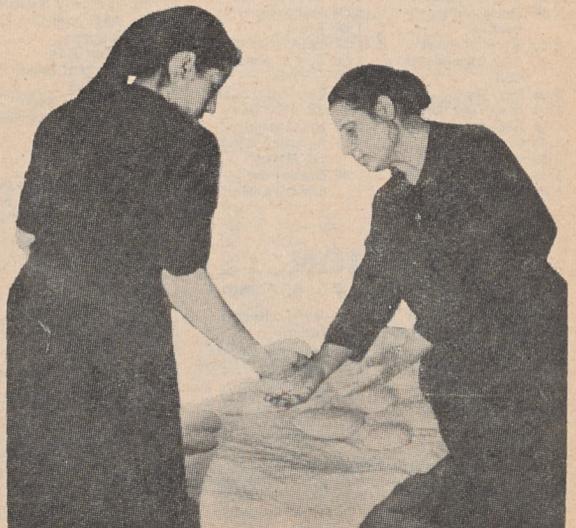

These young immigrants, coming from a country of lively, expressive people who love to sing and make merry, and who will have a party at the drop of a hat, with everybody from great-grandmother down to the smallest "bambino" joining in the good time, found life more subdued in Canada. At first they misinterpreted conservatism for unfriendliness, but most have learned to adapt to their new environment, to understand Canadian ways of having fun, though they have retained many of their homeland's delightful customs and traditions, and their kitchens are still redolent with the tantalizing odours of their Florentine or Neapolitan days.

In the film, viewers will see an Italian choir practicing; they'll look in on Frank Nalli while he leads his band through a light-hearted rehearsal; they'll drop around to an Italian home for a showing of family movies, and they'll imagine they're in Verona or Padua when they look in on a gay Italian dance. A highlight of the program will be a pilgrimage with a group of Italian-Canadians to Mary Lake Retreat, near Toronto, to mark the feast of St. Giuseppe.

When an Italian is married, it's a signal for a gathering of relatives and friends from near and far, for singing and dancing, tears and laughter, for vino and groaning tables, for flirting and getting up-to-date on community news. Ciao Maria visits the wedding of Michelle Ceccarelli in the church of the Immaculate Conception in Toronto, and the gala reception afterwards. Another important occasion covered by the film is the day Tony Larotti buys his first house in Toronto, a never-to-be-forgotten occasion which will always be surrounded in his memory with flashing neon lights.

Music for this warm-hearted program was especially composed and conducted by Lucio Agostini, based on two songs written by Frank Nalli. The narrator-producer is Ron Kelly, and cameraman is Grahame Woods.

QUEST:

A Suitcase of Mystery

IT IS VERY late on a cold, shivery night, and a remote railway station is closing down on the heels of the last train to the mountains until the next day.

The only people who haven't scuttled off through the darkness to their homes are a transient bum of some wit and imagination, who has been catching up on much-needed sleep in the dubious comfort of the station waiting-room, and the night watchman, a timid soul who lives by the rules but is resentful because his fidelity really hasn't paid off. Just as the watchman tries to shoo the bum out into the night so he can lock up, they discover an abandoned suitcase. Much against his better judgment, impelled by an insatiable curiosity whipped into a fever pitch by the hobo, the watchman allows the cockpit simulator. (The title, Dyna-Soar, is derived from the name given to the Air Force's latest experimental plane). Host is Walter Cronkite.

Citizens' Forum

The Family — The Push-Button Woman. Second of a five-part series about social problems facing present-day families. Today, a lighthearted look at the "ideal" housewife in her super-mechanical kitchen has implications which are not so lighthearted. When technology lifted heavy drudgery from the housewife, did it also carry off important side benefits? Is the modern housewife more isolated in her home than was her grandmother?

The problems of the modern housewife are dramatized and then discussed by a panel of experts. Host and moderator is Bernard Ostry.

The Nature Of Things

Brainwashing. British psychiatrist Dr. William Sargant, author of a book entitled Battle For The Mind, discusses and illustrates various techniques of brainwashing. He shows film on experiments with animals, building up to different types of brainwashing techniques used on humans including weakening of the mind, changing patterns of behaviour, breakdown and religious cults. Host is Dr. John Rich, a psychiatrist with the University of Toronto.

suitcase to be opened. From its intriguing contents, they try to piece together the personality and life of the unknown owner.

That is the situation in a wistful comedy which Quest presents on Sunday night, January 13 on CBC-TV. The Suitcase is by Peruvian writer Sebastian Salazar Bondy, translated by Gregory Rabassa. It stars Peter Donat as the hobo, Mervyn Blake as the watchman, and Hugh Webster as an old man. Production is by Leon Major.

Bondy was born in 1924 in Lima, worked as a journalist for a while, and then studied in Paris on a grant from the French government. He founded the Club de Teatro in Lima, which has produced many plays of interest, including his own. The Suitcase is one in a series of one-act plays, all with Bondy's delicate touch, which have been produced successfully in Buenos Aires.

Walt Disney

Little Dog Lost. The story of Candy, a Welsh Corgi puppy, and of her adventures when she runs away from her master because of her fear of house brooms.

Ed Sullivan

Ed's guests include veteran entertainer Sophie Tucker, musical comedy star Robert Goulet and comedian Jackie Mason.

Bonanza

Adam takes a firm stand beside a man falsely accused of murder.

Close-Up

A look at the psychological and physical factors of an accident that left a family with a bleak future.

Quest

The Suitcase. A wistful comedy built around a suitcase found abandoned in a remote railway station. Written by Peruvian writer Sebastian Salazar Bondy, it was translated by Gregory Rabassa. Starring Peter Donat, Mervyn Blake and Hugh Webster. Produced by Leon Major.

CBXT—Thriller

treasures) for $75 and now, about a million dollars worth of ancient Mexican art leaves the country yearly, most of it illegally. Looters do a thriving business. A few years ago some Americans with 35 diggers sailed to an island off the coast of Campeche, with false papers giving them authority to dig, and after six weeks sailed off with countless figures and other valuables said to be worth $20 million.

It was just accident that they and other diggers, authorized or otherwise, have been able to find any remains of those ancient cultures, for the Spanish soldiers and priests who went there with Cortes and afterwards destroyed every bit of the old cultures they could get their hands on. Three friars boasted around that they had wiped out 500 temples and 20,000 statues. And in the Holy Aztec city of Cholula, never more than a place of medium size, some 300 temples were torn down, and although the community didn't need that many places of worship, 300 churches were built in their stead. But now the Mexican earth is giving up its trust, and each year more evidence that the early Mexicans had a highly developed aesthetic sense are coming to light.

In delightful contrast to his display of primitive Indian art, Kelly will offer a look at the art of modern Canadian youngsters, in a six-minute film he made with three-to-five-year-olds at the Bayview Glen School in Toronto, which will follow the film on Mexico. He shows the world as small children see it — made up largely of themselves.

The Fantasy World of "Miss Madeleine" Arbour

THE WORK-A-DAY world of Madeleine Arbour is a world of story books, plasticine, a puppet and TV cameras.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, "Miss Madeleine" is hostess of the CBC-TV network program Nursery School Time, sharing the spotlight with a furry puppet called "Dick the Beaver."

On the program, Montreal-born "Miss Madeleine" emphasizes self-creativity. "It's important to their development that children be taught to use and enjoy everyday things about the house. And I do mean such simple things as string, boxes and wrapping paper. If children learn to be creative with such items, they acquire self-reliance. Such training stays with them in later life. As a result of it, they'll be more independent and mature as adults.

Nursery School Time's formula for success: education sugar-coated with entertainment. While "Miss Madeleine" is telling stories, she describes things to make and do, prompted by her own fertile imagination.

Madeleine Arbour is a girl of many talents. The vivacious blonde TV star also appears on a CBC French network show La Boite a Surprise, and writes her own scripts for it. She is a well-known teacher of window display at Montreal's l'Institut des Arts Appliqués. As a set designer, her work is highly appreciated by local theatrical and film organizations, including the Montreal Film Festivals. She is the mother of two.

"It was through teaching my own children that I got so interested in nursery school work," she explains. "As I watched them grow, my interests and hobbies were built around them."

National School Telecasts

Canadian History. The second in a series of five programs built around outstanding political leaders in the turbulent history of Canada's 19th Century — Joseph Howe, Alexander Galt, John A. Macdonald, Charles Tupper and Georges Etienne Cartier. The films were produced by the National Film Board of Canada and have been shown previously on the CBC-TV network.

Each program dramatizes episodes in the life of each man, attempting to show his personality, emotions, dreams and problems.

Today The Stubborn Idealist. (Alexander Galt). By the late 1850's the political situation in the Canadas had deteriorated to an alarming state. The population of English-speaking Canada had outgrown that of French-speaking Canada in the East and there were insistent demands to change the Act of Union which granted both provinces equal representation in the legislature.

PLAYDATE:

"A Wicked Woman" Stars Donald Harron

THE NEXT PLAYDATE production on CBC-TV, Thursday, January 17, will be A Wicked Woman, a new comedy drama by Roger O. Hirson, American TV playwright.

Hirson has confined his action to the visiting room of a prison, and his plot entirely to the interplay of emotion between two characters: a woman who has confessed to murdering her husband, and the lawyer who has been assigned by the court to defend her.

Eve (the woman) keeps insisting that she murdered her husband and that she fully expects to pay the price for her crime. Henry (the lawyer) intends to base his case on her innate goodness and the extenuating circumstances which he hopes to reveal surrounding the murder. But in his meetings with her in the prison visiting room he is puzzled by her seeming unconcern about her fate.

Hirson was so anxious to see his play come to life that he travelled to Toronto from New York to attend several rehearsals in the CBC Studios. Production is by Leo Orenstein, whose subtle interpretation of a wicked, wicked woman delighted its author. Hirson also was pleased with the casting of Donald Harron as Henry and Paddy Armstrong as Eve.

Following the taping of the play early last month, Harron headed for London to star in the West End production of Mary, Mary. He was seen recently as Christian in a Harron is a Canadian who is a veteran of the Stratford Festivals in Ontario and Connecticut; before that he was a well-known radio, stage and TV performer in Toronto. Perhaps his best-known role has been as the young man in the Broadway play, The Tenth Man, by Paddy Chayefsky. Now he lives and works mainly in New York.

Paddy Armstrong is a newcomer to Canadian TV drama. The 25-year-old actress was spotted by CBC-TV casting director Eva Langbord last year when Miss Armstrong was playing in a Manitoba Theatre Centre production, Look Ahead, a musical by Canadian playwright Len Peterson and composer Morris Surdin, which had an extensive run in the spring. In Winnipeg Miss Armstrong has played in a wide variety of shows, from Annie Get Your Gun to straight drama. She also had her own early morning radio show in Winnipeg.

Program Notes

11:30 a.m.—Sports College

Lloyd "Ace" Percival gives hints for developing athletic skill.

1:45 p.m.—Chansonettes

French music on records introduced by Jacques Des Baillets from Montreal.

2:00 p.m.—Metropolitan Opera

Un Ballo in Maschera (A Masked Ball). Opera in three acts by Verdi. Cast: Count Riccardo, Governor of Boston—tenor; Renato, his secretary—baritone; Amelia, wife of Renato—soprano; Ulrica, fortune teller—contralto; Oscar, page—soprano; Silvano, sailor—baritone; Samuel and Tom, conspirators—bass. Place, in and near Boston. Time, the end of the 17th century.

Act I. Officers and citizens in the house of Count Riccardo express their love for him, while the Negro conspirators, Samuel, Tom and their friends, declare their hatred. Ulrica, a Negress, is about to be banished as a witch. Riccardo loves Amelia, the wife of his secretary. Renato sees the list of the invited guests and warns the governor of treachery to come. He resolves to visit Ulrica in disguise. The conspirators learn of this and determine to take advantage of the opportunity to wreak their vengeance.

Change of scene: Ulrica's dwelling. Incantation scene. Amid a crowd of women and children Riccardo appears disguised as a fisherman and is recognized by Ulrica. Amelia arrives and the witch dismisses the crowd. Riccardo overhears that Amelia loves him and that she desires forgetfulness from the sorceress. Ulrica tells Amelia to pluck a certain plant at midnight in a lonely place, and she departs. Riccardo now has his fortune told and hears that death is near and that the first man to press his hand that day will be his murderer. Renato appears and extends his hand to Riccardo. Riccardo is recognized as the governor and is joyfully greeted by the people.

Act II. Midnight. A deserted spot. Amelia meets Riccardo and both declare their love. Renato unexpectedly arrives on the scene to save the governor from the conspirators. He does not recognize his disguised wife, and first having changed cloaks with Riccardo, promises to escort her to safety. The conspirators are foiled but in revenge tear the veil from Amelia's face, and Renato, thunderstruck, recognizes his wife. Renato's love for the governor turns to hate and he arranges with the conspirators to meet him the next day.

Act III. Renato's chamber. Renato plans to kill Riccardo. He promises aid to the conspirators and compels Amelia to take part in the drawing of lots. His name is found on the slip and Amelia suspects his designs. Oscar, the page, brings an invitation to the masked ball.

Change of scene: Masked ball at the palace of the governor. Riccardo resolves to allow Renato and Amelia to sail for England and thus be true to honour and duty. The conspirators seek the governor but he is warned by Amelia and bids her farewell, renouncing his love for her. He is stabbed by Renato who has followed him. Dying, he declares Amelia's innocence and forgives Renato.

The Early Years of a Western Town

(From a talk on SPEAKING PERSONALLY by G. R. Stevens)

YOU PROBABLY remember the rhyme of the inquisitive little darling who asked her mother where babies came from. And how mother, wishing to be bright and helpful without giving too much away, replied "Out of the Nowhere into the Here."

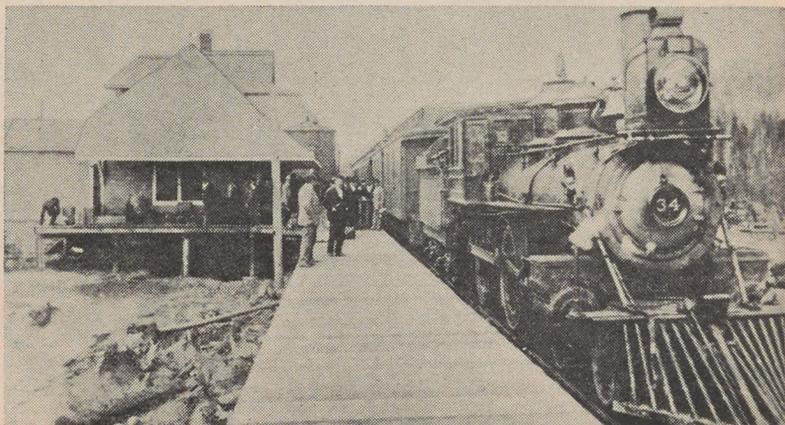

Now, that describes almost exactly how many Canadian towns came into being. For some, of course, there were perfectly good reasons. Halifax, Saint John, Vancouver and Victoria are where they are because ships need shelter. Quebec was built as a fortress to command a river and hence stands on the highest ground for miles around. Calgary and Edmonton were originally Hudson's Bay Company forts and the early settlers snuggled up to them.

Saskatoon — perhaps I should not tell you this — is a monument to man's frailty. For when the Temperance Society of Ontario purchased 100,000 acres along the South Saskatchewan River it was with a view to a model community, where everyone would drink cold water, or at worst, strong tea. But there were backsliders, individuals who lacked the strength of character to refuse an occasional noggin. These renegades slipped off the Temperance Society's holdings and took up land nearby where they drank anything they could get. And that is where Saskatoon came from.

EARLY YEARS OF A WESTERN TOWN

But these were exceptions. On the prairies, for instance, the townsites were usually left to the tender mercies of land speculators, who were concerned with getting signatures on the dotted line. Bob Edwards of the Calgary Eye-Opener said that in the early years of this century there was not a tinhorn gambler left in Nevada — they were all in Western Canada selling town lots. But in 1905 or thereabouts the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company got the idea of building its line and the towns along it at the same time.

A lot of people thought this plan would not work, but the Grand Trunk was a British Company and rather set in its ways, so on its 800 miles from Winnipeg to Edmonton, it laid out a townsite every 15 miles or so. They were all on the same model, a main street running back from the station, one space reserved for a park and another for a market, and a special section set aside for the livery stables because they stank. There was no phony salesmanship or hidden charges and the price everywhere was the same — $500 for a lot on the main street descending to $75 for a lot on the outskirts.

Not all of these townsites made the grade. Some of them never became more than a cluster of shacks around a whistlestop, and others never even got that far. But most of them did take root and fill up. Usually the first people to look them over were representatives of the elevator companies, seeking sites. These stark structures, standing against the sunset and the dawn, were the advance guard of the occupation. They ended the age-old aloofness of the plains.

The first general traders would drift in with small stocks of everything and would set up some sort of shop. As soon as the land-seekers began to show up, an overnight stopping place would be erected with perhaps a dozen beds and half-price for doss-downs on the floor.

Presently distributors would turn up with consignment stocks of agricultural implements. Then well-dressed chaps would arrive — they might be bank officers spying out the land for new branches, or medical graduates or young lawyers looking for a place to hang out their first shingles, or parsons or priests in search of congregations.

The skeleton history of one of these Grand Trunk towns began in an error of judgment. An Englishman named Jimmy Dawson believed that he knew the exact spot where the railway would build its divisional point between Saskatoon and Edmonton. He therefore bought a lot of land and he sold quite a bit of it to other early birds, such as Mr. and Mrs. Martin Forster, who built a hotel before there was any need of one. But

SOUNDINGS:

"Home Again, Kathleen"

CBC RADIO's documentary series, Soundings, returns to the air for another season Tuesday, January 15, with the first part of a two-program study of present-day Ireland. The two programs will be heard, as will all the Soundings broadcasts through the season, at 10:30 p.m. each Tuesday. They have been prepared by freelance broadcasters Marion McCormick and Jean Smith, who have entitled the programs Home Again, Kathleen . . . respectively To Eire (January 15) and To Ulster (January 22). In both programs, the emphasis is on the attitudes of the Irish towards the social, cultural, political and industrial changes taking place in their homeland.

If the proverbial Kathleen were to return to Ireland today, says Miss McCormick, she would find many changes behind the familiar facade. In independent Eire particularly, there are new faces—Austrian, Hungarian, Japanese, and many others; her wages might be almost as high as those available for the same job in England; her brother might be a member of the United Nations Forces, and talk at the pub would probably centre on the European Common Market. Some things, of course, would be unchanged. For example, no books by Hemingway, Faulkner, Salinger, or Canada's Hugh MacLennan would be obtainable at libraries or bookstores.

Among those interviewed by Miss McCormick were taxi-drivers, pub-owners, housewives and newspapermen, as well as such dignitaries as the Bishop of Cork, the Lord Mayor of Limerick, and a Dublin judge who serves as Eire's Chief Censor.

If Kathleen was from the north of Ireland, she'll find some changes, too, though not quite as many as she would in the south. Old animosities dating from "the trouble" cast a shorter shadow than they used to, but the strict divisions between Catholics and Protestants still exist. The International Grand Master of the Orange Order, Sir George Anthony Clark, tells Miss McCormick that the movement is growing in strength and purpose, that new members are more aware of the meaning of the Order. Another official claims that the Orange Lodges stand for freedom and liberty, not just for Protestants, but for everyone. Hostile to the Catholics? Not at all, he answers; why "at every meeting we pray for their deliverance from error and false doctrine." Another view is expressed by Presbyterian minister John Young of Belfast, who says that Orangemen play too great a part in Irish politics, and have undue influence on the government of the day. A spokesman for the Nationalist Party claims that "religion determines every aspect of one's living—social, economic and political," and accuses the government of gerrymandering to keep Roman Catholics from obtaining the representation in parliament to which their numbers entitle them.

But the winds of change are blowing strongly, and Kathleen might find that, although the traditional oppositions remain, some of the passion has gone out of them. As for re-union of South and North, it's not likely to happen by force, but if both Eire and Ulster should join the Common Market, the customs officials at the border might not have so much to do; and, in time, who knows what might come about?

KEN MASON ON PARLIAMENT HILL

From there, Mason went through the usual mill—police beat, Supreme Court, City Hall, and finally the Provincial Legislature—after various stints as assistant city editor, assistant telegraph editor and night editor. He was the Journal's legislative and political reporter for six years or so. During some of this time he worked as a "stringer" for Time Magazine.

He joined the CBC on September 1, 1961, when CBXT opened in Edmonton. His previous broadcasting experience was as a freelance contributor to CBC News Roundup during the early 1950s. He did general reporting and desk work, and covered the 1962 session of the Legislature for television news on CBXT. Then, on a call from CBC Ottawa, "with barely time enough to pack a couple of suitcases, I boarded my Morris Minor convertible and headed for Parliament Hill."

Of his present job, Mason says he feels the "switch from printed news to broadcast news agrees with me. I like the idea of saying things the way I want to say them. I find that in many ways radio and television newsmen work under far more pressure than their newspaper counterparts—for one thing, deadlines in radio and television are absolutely brutal. But this sort of thing adds to the challenge."

Of his regular program, Mason says that the danger is that a discourse on obscure points of procedure can be deadly dull and uninteresting.

"In order to keep the program as bright as possible, I try to be on the lookout for the lighter incidents. Often I use these as a sort of 'kicker' on a day when On Parliament Hill is a 'potpourri' of parliamentary happenings. For example, an item on the parliamentary victory for Quebec Social Creditors when the menu on the blackboard in the cafeteria was translated into French.

"More often I use On Parliament Hill to explain both the mechanics and the tradition of what Parliament is doing. Just before the opening of the current session, I did one on the office of Speaker, based on the fact that the new Parliament's first job would be the election of a Speaker."

Married, and with a seven year-old daughter, Ken Mason still has to call on the agility he displayed as a copy-chaser, especially in meeting the exacting deadlines of broadcasting, whipping out of the Press Gallery to the CBC studios in the Chateau Laurier, back to the Commons for a last-minute check, then to the studio again for a later "feed" for News Roundup or some other program.

"That," he says, "is what keeps me slim."

Jimmy Dawson missed his guess, for the divisional point went in just three miles from his holdings. He had no hard feelings, so he cut his losses and went back to England; whereupon the Forsters and the other settlers who had built, put their buildings on skids and rollers and hauled them down to the Grand Trunk townsite. The town was named Wainwright eventually, after a vice-president of the Grand Trunk. He gave the first church an old locomotive bell — it tolls in the steeple to this day.

The Bank of Montreal was first to open and two of the bank clerks, Lilly and Betts, threw up their jobs and opened the first general store. Every week someone new arrived and went into business, even if there was no business offering—everyone counted on the future. In 1905 a school district was organized and in 1906 Wainwright was incorporated as a village. By then it had 450 inhabitants, four general stores, two hardware stores, two jewellery shops, a flour and feed store, a drug store, a candy shop, a harness shop, two livery stables, a blacksmith shop, two lumber yards and a laundry. There was also a baker, a butcher, and two real estate agents. The professions were represented by two doctors, two school teachers, two ministers of the gospel and a lone lawyer. There were also three dentists and a weekly newspaper. Recreation facilities included three pool-rooms, a bowling alley, a quadrille club and an open-air rink.

All this was ready and waiting when in January 1909 the railway reached the town. Next year the village became a municipality and began to dream dreams—of branch lines from north and south that would make Wainwright an important market town. But the war gave Canadians something much more serious to think about.

Nowadays Wainwright is a prosperous town of about 3,000 population and, as a sign of maturity, it is beginning to be conscious of its past.

If you talk to any of the old-timers they will tell you hilarious and preposterous stories which have doubtless improved with the years. Through their yarns the railway runs, as a thread of continuity, as a dramatic axis in the life of the town. The railway still remains the Old Faithful for Wainwright. It is much more than a means of communication — it is the essential cement of the community.

Danny Gallivan:

10 Years of NHL Hockey

FOURTEEN THOUSAND boisterous hockey fans leap to their feet as the Montreal Canadiens' Pocket Rocket starts a rush down home ice. As the roar of the crowd rises to an ear-splitting crescendo, all the colour and excitement of the moment is brought to millions of fans at home by the familiar voice of Danny Gallivan who has been reporting the Canadiens' home and away games for the past ten years.

One of the most popular broadcasters on the Canadian sports scene, the Sydney-born sportscaster got his start in the Maritimes at CJFX in Antigonish, N.S., while doing post-graduate work and teaching at St. Francis Xavier University.

Early in life, Danny Gallivan had more than a spectator's interest in sports. As a baseball player, he was of sufficiently high calibre to be invited to try out for the New York Giants. However, an arm injury while at the Giants' training camp at Baton Rouge ended a budding baseball career.

Returning from overseas in 1946, Danny joined CJCH in Halifax as sports director and, while on that job, was invited to handle the commentary for a Canadiens-Bruins game, replacing an ailing Doug Smith.

"I'd only seen one big league game in my life and knew none of the players," Danny recalls. "I did have two days to get to know the team but when they skated out on the ice that Saturday night, believe me, they didn't look too familiar. However, I concentrated hard and got through it without difficulty."

He took over the job on a permanent basis in 1952 and considers himself fortunate in having been associated with the Canadiens during years that made hockey history.

One of the most dramatic developments Danny Gallivan witnessed occurred in a 1958 Stanley Cup final between Boston and Montreal. With the score tied 2-2 at the end of regular play, Frank Selke, general manager of Les Canadiens, came on TV for an intermission interview and stated coolly that he wasn't worried because he had "a fellow out there who would look after things." Five minutes and forty-five seconds later, his confidence was justified when The Rocket scored.

Danny Gallivan reacts strongly to the charge of bias often levelled against sportscasters. "The accusations of bias are to be found more in the accusers than in the accused," he states firmly. "When a fan wants a certain team to win and they fail to do so, he's often looking for a scapegoat. If the announcer sounds excited, he screams bias. But when your voice must ride over the roar of 13 to 14,000 excited fans, it's pretty hard not to sound excited."

Danny Gallivan looks back on ten years of NHL hockey broadcasting with pride and satisfaction. "During nine of those years, Les Canadiens were Canada's leading exponents of hockey. Led by the incomparable Rocket Richard and backed by a cast of 14,000 enthusiastic fans it's been a wonderful show.
