STEWSPOT'S LOOK-OUT

I'm sure you all know the story of Guy Fawkes; how he tried to blow up James the First and his Parliament, but was stopped in the nick of time. Ever since then, we've remembered that day with bonfires and fireworks.

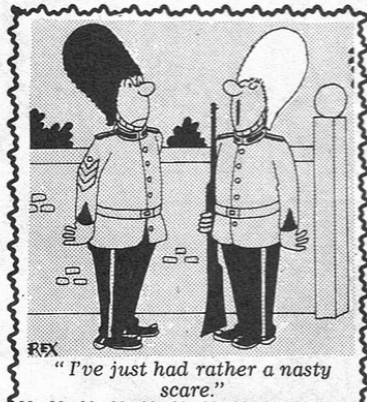

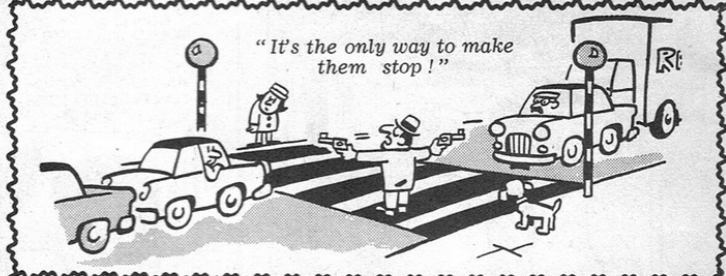

Well, it's Guy Fawkes Day again on Sunday, so it's time for me to nag you! Although the number of accidents last year was less than the one before, there are still too many of you disobeying the rules. Fireworks can be fun and safe if you remember at the same time, they are not toys. So read the instructions on them carefully, keep your pets indoors, and buy lots of cotton wool for Grandma's ears! But most important—don't be stupid or too clever with fireworks.

After all, Guy Fawkes didn't hurt himself with his gunpowder, did he? Not that it helped him much!

By the way, don't forget to dress up in your winter 'warmers' (like me) on the right!

SMILE WITH STEWPOT

BOOKSHELF

Calling all pony-lovers! There's a fabulous new book out called 'A Pony Scrapbook' which tells you everything you've ever wanted to know about ponies. It contains stories like 'The Great Horse' and 'The Race Against The Train', as well as quizzes and cartoons.

On top of that there are chapters on the care and choice of your pony and how to keep him happy throughout the year. This is a book of bits and pieces, and whether you own a pony or not, it's one that will appeal to everybody. I'm giving it to Zalabia for Christmas. It only costs 25p and is published by Pan Books. Don't miss it!

WATCH FOR WORTH

Stepping out from a London hotel, the bespectacled man, wearing a trilby hat and broad grin, shrugged resignedly and sidled up to a policeman nearby to ask for directions. Instantly, the obliging officer began to name a series of streets. But, suddenly, he halted in mid-sentence to peer more closely at the thoughtful, frowning face before him.

"Wait a minute! You're Harry Worth, aren't you?"

"Yes," came the reply.

With that, the officer started to walk on and beckoned to be followed.

"Come on then," he added. "I'd better show you. We don't want you getting lost!"

A brief incident which happened to Harry not so long ago—it proves the point that everyone expects this funny, friendly comedian to be as absent-minded as the 'image' ➤➤➤➤➤

Shown here are three 'sketches' from the series, with Harry as the jolly judge, keen cook and equally keen shot!

he portrays on television. But in real life, he's far from needing the helping hand.

Harry Worth has always known exactly where he's headed. Even from the time he left school at fourteen to become a miner in his home village of Tankersley, Yorkshire, he realized he wanted to become an entertainer.

Starting as an amateur, he bought himself a cheap doll and developed a ventriloquist act. "It was the only way of getting on," he recalls. "You had to have an act in those days."

After spending six years in the R.A.F., and appearing in a Gang Show abroad, he left the forces to take a job with a beach concert party at Southport. It was a start to the show business career he sought.

In 1947, Harry married a pantomime Principal Girl who persuaded him to write to the famous Windmill Theatre, a launching 'stage' for so many stars, such as Tony Hancock and Kenneth More. Upon making the trip to London for his audition, Harry was in for a shock. He was only one among forty others! But his luck held—and he was booked to perform six times a day.

Harry's own particular brand of ham-handed humour has brought him recognition in a big way. Having starred at all the leading theatres throughout the country—including the Palladium—he can now be seen on screen in the Thames TV series: 'Thirty Minutes' Worth'.

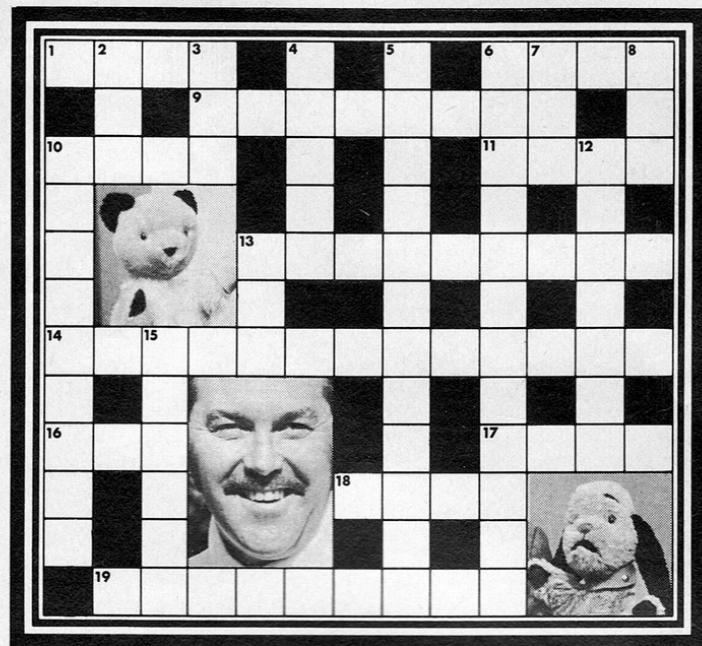

His ambition, though, is to make a film. It's probably not surprising when Harry explains that he used to take a trip to the cinema about three times a week.

Of course, today, his work keeps him more than busy—but when he can squeeze in a break, he enjoys nothing better than a cruise. The reason?

"I'm lazy—and everything's so close to hand aboard a luxury liner!" Everything, that is, except for a polite policeman to guide him around deck.

YOUR VIEW

This week Robert Vaughn who stars as Harry Rule in ATV's 'The Protectors', makes the selection of letters, jokes and pictures from the LOOK-IN Postbag, including the £2 Star Letter...

David Holder, Handsworth, Birmingham.

STAR LETTER

I have had lots of unusual pets, partly because I live near the seashore. Recently, an offshore oil-slick clogged up the wings of many birds. We collected sixteen oiled-up Scaup Ducks in a walk along the beach: the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds cared for twelve of them, and we looked after the rest. Other birds I have tended recently include two seagulls, a one-legged pheasant, a coot and two pigeons.

Barbara Evans, Edinburgh 15, Scotland.

★ It sounds as if your home is a regular hospital, Barbara.

Here are two more photographs sent in by LOOK-IN readers:

Derek Dobbie, East Kilbride, Scotland.

Clement Nestor, Wandsworth, London (Right).

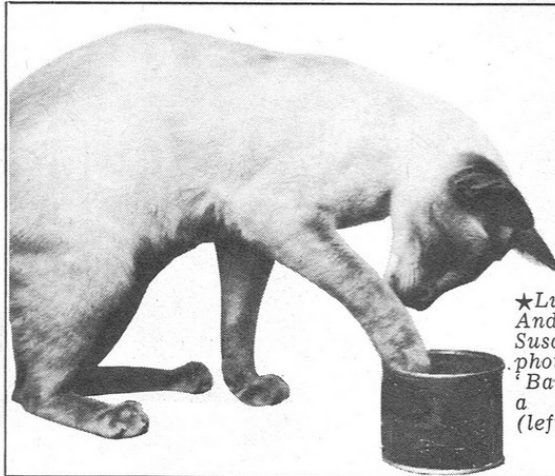

RUINED RICE

My mother was making a rice-pudding while the rest of us watched television. When we called to tell her that Shakespeare's play 'Hamlet' was beginning, she put the pudding in the oven and came to watch. After about an hour absorbed in the play, we smelled smoke. We rushed into the kitchen, but the rice-pudding was burned black. My father had to chip it out of the dish with a hammer and chisel!

Njabulo Mbele, Sheffield, Yorkshire.

★ 'Hamlet' is a wonderful play—but I never thought it was that gripping!

★ Lucky old 'Toot'. And thank you, Susan, for your photograph of 'Bambi' enjoying a meaty meal (left).

'TOOT' FOR SHORT

I have a pet rabbit called 'Tutankhamen' ('Toot' for short!). He has this rather strange name because my brother found him in a telephone kiosk in Chester, when he was on his way to see the Tutankhamen Exhibition in London. I also have a black poodle called 'Mandy' and three Siamese cats: 'Bambi', 'Ming' and 'Jason'.

Susan Kimpton, Prestatyn, Flintshire.

PET NAMES

My mum bought a budgie, but we couldn't decide what to call it: After a long discussion, I suggested LOOK-IN, after my favourite magazine. All the family liked the name—and I think the budgie does as well.

Christopher Todd, Keighley, Yorkshire.

I asked my mum if I could buy a young snake from a local pet-shop. She agreed, provided I looked after it properly—and kept it out of her sight! I'm very fond of my snake: he's called 'Reg', after Reg Varney in 'On The Buses'.

Bobby Taylor, Perth, Scotland.

★ The budgie's name's a nice compliment to LOOK-IN. But I wonder if Reg Varney would think the same about the snake!

RUBBER ZOO

About six months ago, I began to collect foam rubber animals. So far, I have four elephants, four cats, two dolphins, two whales, a dragon, an owl, a snail, a hedgehog, a monkey, a mock-turtle, a duckling, a seal, a hippo, a bear, a dog, a mouse, a lion, a chipmunk, an anteater, a pelican, a crocodile—and the Loch Ness Monster!

Robin Schafer, Bath, Somerset.

★ Where do you keep them all, Robin? Don't tell me—in a mattress... sounds like quite a comfortable collection!

Alan Tomkins, Croydon, Surrey.

"Mine's a forty-niner, what's yours?"

★ Win £2 for the Star Letter and £1 for any other letter or joke, plus, a special signed photograph of the Your View Star. Why not write now to Your View, LOOK-IN, 247 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P 0AU? Remember when you write—enclose a list of your six favourite features in order of preference. Don't forget if you'd like to see your photograph in LOOK-IN, please send in one when you write, and we'll try to print it. However, we regret that photographs cannot be returned.

HOW

HOW many children did Shakespeare have, and what were their names?

Ruth Cornforth, Pickering, Yorks.

He had three, Ruth, the eldest being Susanna. Then came the twins, Hamnet and Judith. Tragically, Hamnet died aged only eleven, but the other two lived on. There are no direct descendants from them alive today, but there are some from William's sister, Joan Shakespeare, who married a William Hart.

William Shakespeare, the great dramatist.

HOW fast does a bullet travel?

Tania Kidd, Catterick Camp, Yorkshire.

There is no single answer to this one, Tania. Bullets can speed from a rifle, for instance, at anything from a stately 750 feet per second to a rapid 4,000 feet per second. It depends on the design of the gun and the ammunition and the amount of powder used. The first .45 Colt revolver, which helped end the lives of many white and red men in the American West a century ago, used bullets which travelled at 910 feet per second.

HOW do cats use their whiskers?

Ian Whiterod, Norwich, Norfolk.

When cats move about in the dark, the whiskers act as feelers.

Free 4-page extra on the saintly persuader who has become 007 MOORE IS THE MOST!

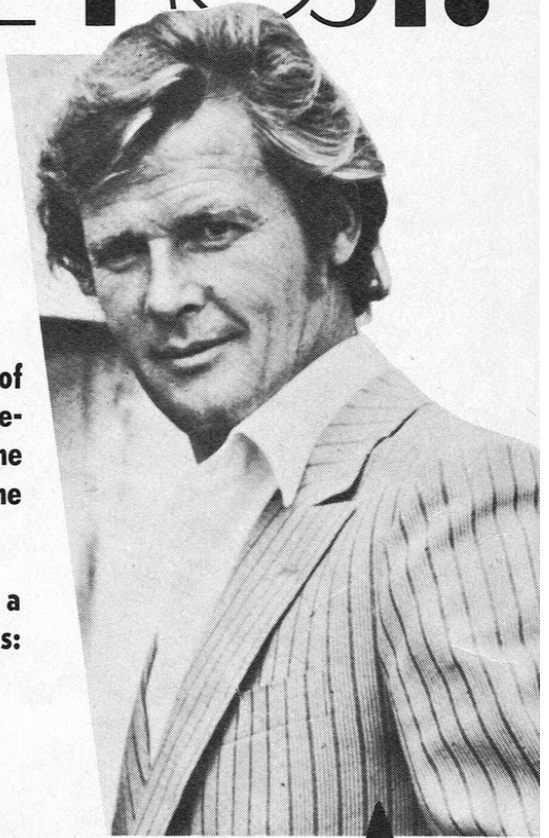

He's been called 'the handsomest man in the world'. He says:

“When I was a teenager, girls used to say I was tall, fat and ugly”

He's been nominated by tailors as 'one of the world's best-dressed men'. He designed his own clothes for his part as the English aristocrat in ATV's series 'The Persuaders'.

He's the first British actor to become a millionaire from TV parts alone. He says:

“I like beans — but I've had to learn to prefer caviare on my toast”

He's ROGER MOORE and he's...

A SMALL-SCREEN SUPER STAR ★

1957. In 'Ivanhoe' Roger played a dashing knight-errant of the Middle Ages (top left). "It was great fun at first; I felt as though I was being paid to play like a kid. But I got tired of wearing long wigs and tin armour: I felt like a member of the medieval fire-brigade."

1962. 'The Saint' (left) established Roger as an international star. The series ran for seven years and 120 episodes. He recalls: "What was going to be a six-month stint making the series went on and on."

1971. As 'Lord Brett Sinclair' (top right), Roger roared through 'The Persuaders', along with Tony Curtis, in a bright yellow Aston Martin DBS V8. Of super-heroes, Roger says: "I think I might enjoy acting even more if I played villains. Heroes are highly improbable — they always win."

'Gold of the Seven Saints' (1961) was a rough, tough western.

● I had to be tortured: tied up in wet leather thongs which would shrink in the sun. The only way to make it look real — was to do it for real! I had the marks for months!

Roger Moore began his big-screen career in a spectacular way . . .

MOORE IN MOVIES

... opposite Elizabeth Taylor (above) in 'The Last Time I Saw Paris' (1955).

● On my first day, in my first scene, I was supposed to bop Van Johnson. He was a world-famous star then, and I was nobody. I was terrified!

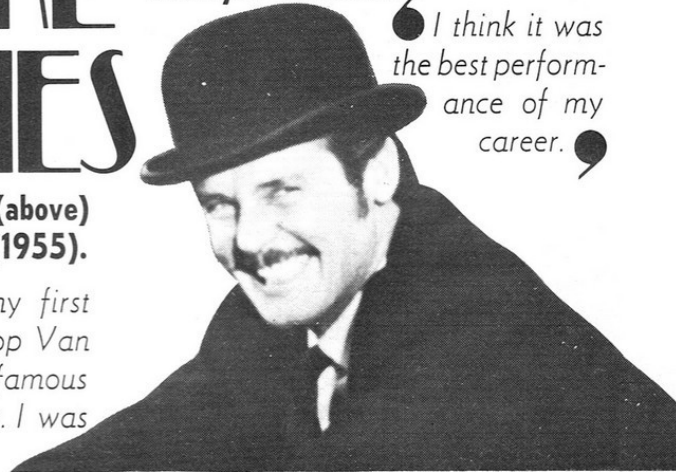

'The Miracle' (1959) a costume drama.

● Hollywood was a strange place then. The movie bosses decided my voice was 'a little too English'. Too English! — when I was playing the Duke of Wellington's nephew!

'The Man Who Haunted Himself' (1969) gave Roger the chance to play a 'scruffy' part for once. Two parts, in fact, for he played a 'Jekyll and Hyde' character.

● I think it was the best performance of my career.

And so, Ten Years Later . . .

One of the biggest showbiz stories of 1972 was that Roger Moore was to take over the part of 'James Bond', formerly played by Sean Connery (and in one film, 'On Her Majesty's Secret Service' (1969), by George Lazenby). But to Roger Moore, himself, the news came ten years later than it might have done.

● Harry Saltzman, co-producer of the 'Bond' films, is now one of my closest friends. I didn't know it at the time, but back in 1961-62, when the film series began, I was suggested for the part — only Sean got it.

Shooting of Roger's first '007' movie has now begun in New Orleans, U.S.A. Roger is certainly tough enough for the 'Licensed to Kill' part — he's expert at boxing, judo and karate. But he's had to change his looks a little:

● I've slimmed down to twelve-and-a-half stone — and I must have lost at least a stone when they chopped my hair off!

'Live and Let Die', Roger's debut as 'Bond', will cost about £5 million to make. Roger's part will earn him around £1 million. Doesn't that suggest he's being unduly modest when he declares:

● Of course I'm not a great actor. I just use what talent I have to the best of my ability.

The Sound Revolution

"You ain't heard nothing yet, folks!" Those words, spoken on the movie-screen by Al Jolson (above), the popular 'minstrel' singer, heralded a revolution in the film industry: the coming of the 'talkies'. No longer need audiences rely on printed captions, flashed on the screen between action sequences, to give them some idea of the words the actors were mouthing on the silent screen.

In 1923, an American wireless expert called Lee DeForest patented his Phonofilm System, a technique which allowed sound and action to be recorded at the same time, as parts of a single process. With this early 'sound-camera', DeForest made several short movies featuring popular music-hall entertainers. His films attracted audiences and made money; but the major movie-studios showed little interest.

'SONNY BOY' SOUND

Then Warner Brothers—a little-known company which was to become one of the Hollywood giants—decided to take a chance. Late in 1927 they produced THE JAZZ SINGER, in which only Al Jolson's musical sequences were filmed with the sound-camera. Within a year, the success of this movie—and a second, THE SINGING FOOL, in which Jolson sang his famous 'Sonny Boy'—had proved that the silent cinema was dead.

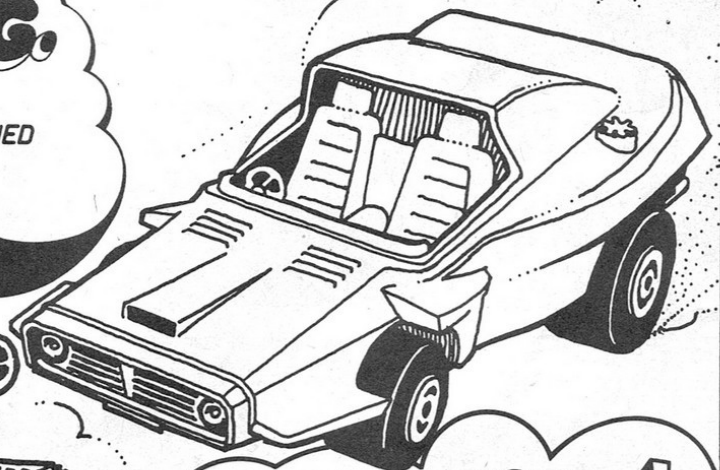

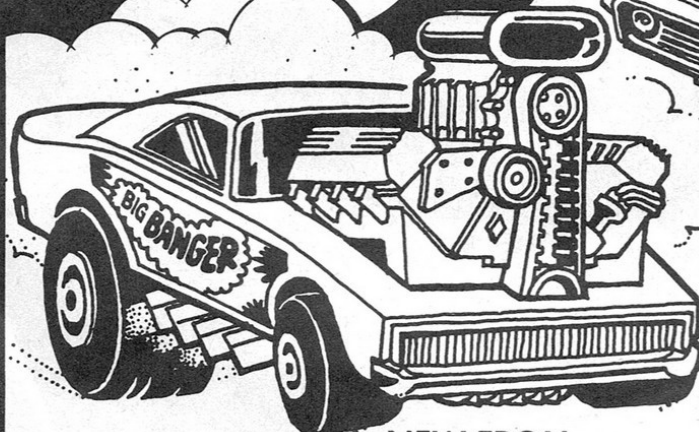

STAR SWITCH

The changeover to sound caused a few heartbreaks. Some super-stars of the silent screen found themselves out of work because they had ugly accents. Additionally, writers who had earned big money turning out story-lines for silent films were paid off: their studios needed the cash to lure best-selling novelists to write for Hollywood.

On the Trail of the Giant Rat!

PROBABLY A LOT of us think of shooting as a sport limited to a few very rich men, who pay huge sums every year to shoot over Scottish grouse moors or at park!) so it's obvious that their numbers must be kept down if crops are not to suffer. As for the grey squirrel, he harms more attractive forms of wildlife: he eats birds' eggs and nestlings, and makes life harder for the remaining red squirrels, an animal native to Britain.

The red squirrel's tail is larger and bushier than that of the grey.

carefully reared pheasants. That's one side of it—and many people wouldn't call it 'sport' at all. But the countryman who goes out with his shotgun and dog—like Jack Hargreaves, with his black Labrador 'Bess'—is probably combining sport with a necessary job of work. He's after pests like the greedy woodpigeon or the grey squirrel.

PEST PROBLEM

It has been estimated that at the end of every breeding season there are around ten million woodpigeons in Britain. They have enormous appetites (try feeding the pigeons in your local

The grey squirrel was introduced into Britain, as a domestic pet, from Canada in the nineteenth century. Its 'population explosion' in the wild state began in Woburn Park (where the famous nature reserve now is) around 1900. It isn't always easy to tell red and grey squirrels apart at a distance, for both are about eighteen inches long and the grey squirrel's fur often has a reddish tint. The best guide is that the red squirrel's tail is larger and bushier (the name 'squirrel' means Shadow-tail', because the animal can raise its tail to cover its back and head) and that it has prominent tufts of fur on its ears.

RIVER RODENT

A more spectacular pest, but mainly limited to East Anglia, is the coypu, a really impressive rodent that grows up to forty-two inches long (including a sixteen-inch, hairless tail) and may weigh up to twenty pounds. Before the coypu was generally known in Britain—it was introduced from its native South America around 1930—the occasional specimen was exhibited at fairs, with suitably horrific pictures of men being attacked by it, as a 'Giant Sewer Rat'. It is bred for its fur, called 'Nutria' in the fur-trade, but individuals which have escaped from ranches now breed in the wild on the Norfolk Broads and along East Anglian rivers. Because of its size and its fast breeding—one pair may produce up to three litters of between three and twelve young yearly—it could become a serious pest.

Next week: a costume clean-up!

This week, LOOK-IN's series on soccer through the alphabet reaches the letter 'Q'—and among the famous football names that begin with that letter are Queen's Park Rangers. Here is a run-down on the history of this Second Division club.

Founded: 1885; then known as St. Jude's and played at Welford's Field, Shepherds Bush. Changed name to Queen's Park Rangers in 1887. Later moved home ground to Brondesbury, Kilburn, and then to Loftus Road, Shepherds Bush (now known as Rangers Stadium) in 1917.

Colours: Blue-and-white hooped shirts, white shorts and socks.

Above: Queen's Park Rangers hail the third and winning goal scored by Lazarus (in shirt number seven) against West Bromwich Albion in the Football League Cup final at Wembley in 1967. Right: Rangers forward Terry Venables signs an autograph for a fan.

Honours: Champions Third Division South, 1947/8; and Third Division, 1966/7. Won the League Cup in 1966/7 after beating West Bromwich Albion 3-2. Promoted to the First Division 1967/8, but unfortunately relegated the same season.

Record Home Gate: 35,567 in the F.A. Cup against Chelsea, 1968.
