 Or at least, that's what he appears to be doing! Singer Alvin Stardust (left) got a call on this rather strange-looking telephone (or should that be wellyphone?) whilst chatting to Sally on Tiswas. Who do you think it is calling him? And what are they saying? We thought you might like to have some fun and fill in the blank balloon with your own ideas... and no corny jokes, please!

SPLAT

This letter was sent to us by Jacky Johnson of Hutton, Lancs.

You will find enclosed a photo of me being flanned by a Scot flan-flinner whilst on holiday in Spain, much to the amazement of other guests in the hotel. I think they must watch that other programme which I can't name as they didn't seem to know what was going on.

Thanks for writing to us, Jacky. We're a little puzzled as to exactly what a 'flan-flinner' is, but he certainly delivers a face-full!

★ Here's something that you can all try when you've got nothing better to do! Thirteen-year-old Shaun Wooding from Flitwick in Bedfordshire has sent us a Flanflinger Twister — and it's left us absolutely speechless!

*How many flans can a flanflinger fling
 When a flanflinger flings his flans?
 He'll fling as many flans
 As a flanflinger can
 When the flanflinger flings his flans!*

Not so easy, is it?!

Mort's no sport!

'BEYOND BELIEF'

A little while ago I told you that experts in the 'paranormal' (which means the powers and senses which science cannot explain) believe children are more likely than anyone else to 'see ghosts', transmit and receive thought messages and see the future. Well, I asked Look-in readers to write to me about any supernatural experiences they might have had and I received many interesting reports. Here are some of the best ones, the senders of which will each be receiving a £3.00 postal order and Junior Reporter's Certificate . . .

For some time I had some strange things happen to me. To start with, I kept on having dreams about a man and then I started to see things. I am quite good at drawing so I drew a picture of the man. My dad said it looked like my grandad and when I saw a picture of him I saw that it was. But my grandad died before I was born and I had never seen a picture of him before.

David Cordery (age 13),
Stokenchurch, Bucks.

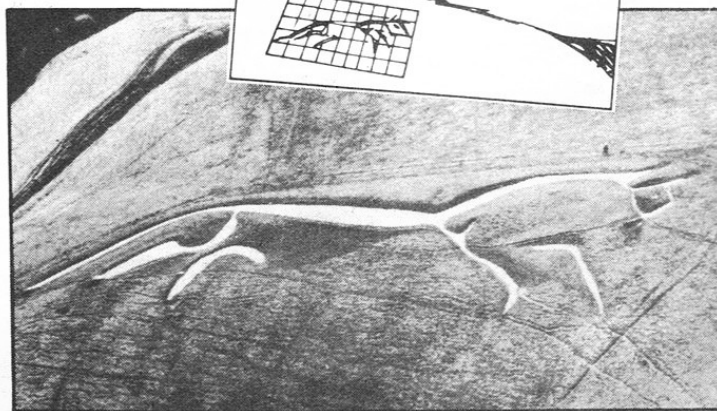

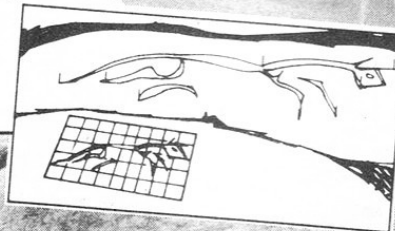

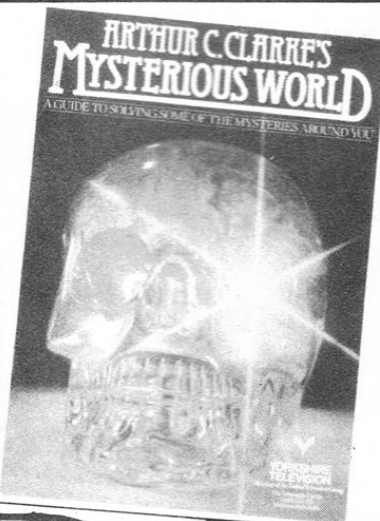

One night I was dreaming about a U.F.O. (Unidentified Flying Object) that flew over our house. It was big, yellow and full of lights. Then suddenly I woke up slightly frightened. I looked out of my bedroom window in curiosity and I saw the U.F.O. that I had been dreaming about. My eyes were half closed but I could just make out the

THE MYS-TERIOUS WORLD

The picture below right shows the huge White Horse of Uffington in Lincolnshire which was carved out of the chalk by ancient man. It's so big that it can only really be seen from quite a distance and so to draw it must have been extremely difficult; one of the ways in which it could have been done is to have drawn a small horse first and then enlarged it by marking the shape with poles, as shown in the diagram (right). The mystery is why ancient man wanted to make such a big horse. Was it part of a religious celebration? Or a way of celebrating a battle? Or did he just like horses?

This is just one of the many mysteries of the world that is looked at in Yorkshire Television's Arthur C. Clarke's Mysterious World every Tuesday at 8.30 p.m. and it is also one of the many things you can read about in a new booklet (above right) produced by them called Arthur C. Clarke's Mysterious World: A Guide To Solving Some Of The Mysteries Around You. It also contains lots of experiments that you can do yourself. The booklet costs 50p (which includes postage and packing) and can be obtained by sending a cheque or postal order for that amount made payable to Yorkshire Television to: Mysteries, P.O. Box, Newcastle, NE99 1AL.

Pen Pals

Please do not send in any more pen pal requests, as I now have enough to last for quite a while longer. I will not be able to read, answer, or pass on any letters. It is up to readers to get in touch with each other direct — not via Look-in.

shape of it. The next morning I found that my brother had had the same experience.

Brennan Bartholomew (age 11), Whitefield, Manchester.

This ghostly experience didn't actually happen to me but to my brother-in-law. When he was fifteen he lived with his parents and younger sister in an old house in Nottingham. One day he heard his sister talking to someone on the stairs, and as he looked he saw her sitting next to a man dressed in old-fashioned clothes. On many occasions he saw her holding a conversation with the same man. It was many years before they left the house as the ghost never bothered them, but the night before they were to leave all the lights were going on and off and doors were slamming on their own. We suppose the ghost was upset that they were leaving as they never worried about him.

A.B. (age 11),
Sherwood, Nottingham.

Can you send me your full name, please, A.B. so that we can send you your postal order and certificate? Thanks.

One night when I was in bed and all the lights were out and everyone was fast asleep I suddenly woke up with a start. For some reason I felt frightened so I crept into mummy's and daddy's bed and we all fell back to sleep together. Soon after we all woke up again at the same time because all the lights were on. I could not reach the light switches so I had not put them on, and mummy and daddy had not been out of bed, so who put the lights on? We all felt very strange. Who or what had paid us a visit that night we will never know.

Michelle Conroy (age 7), Windsor, Berks.

Sometimes, when I am in bed, if I can't sleep I lie there and just think and often I'll 'dream' about something happening. Usually the next day, or certainly within about a week, my thoughts come true. For instance, one night I was thinking of being at my gran's house and there I was sitting on a chair when it suddenly collapsed. I fell off and knocked over the small coffee tables and with all this noise my uncle's pup came in (my uncle doesn't have a dog) and started licking me.

The next day, I was at my gran's house having forgotten my 'dream' and I sat on the chair. It collapsed, I fell off, bumped and knocked over the coffee tables and everyone started laughing because there was my uncle's newly-bought, six-week-old pup licking me! He had just come home after being at the pet shop, so my thoughts had come true. But it's scary!

Airdrie, Lanarks.

ALL MY OWN WORK

I have made a model of the ice planet Hoth from the film The Empire Strikes Back (above and below). It is made of plaster of Paris, papier maché and balsa wood. It is just the right size for the Star Wars figures. I made the lasers from painted straws. I have also made a 'Star Destroyer' and the swamp planet of Dagobah.

This week's Starchart is based on aeroplanes and things to do with them. All the answers are in the chart and if you find them from my clues and spot the odd one out you could win our £3.00 postal order prize. As usual you have to find all the words in the chart by solving the clues and then finding the answers by linking together letters. You must stop and start as indicated, and you can link up letters in any direction except diagonally. That means you can go up, down, backwards or forwards in every word. You must use every letter just once — including the prize answer.

Now for the clues, with every answer being one word except where indicated: the engines are usually mounted on these; this provides the plane's power (2 words); and these provide the power on older aircraft. These help slow a plane down when flying (2 words); this is where the aircrew sit; he flies the plane; another name for the skipper. This is what planes do; he assists the pilot; he maps out the route; another name for height; these must be down for landing; these must be fastened at the take-off (2 words); these are the people carried in the plane; this what it must do to get up in the air (2 words); it takes off from here; the plane is guided from here on the ground (2 words).

This is generally put in the hold; this is where passengers first report for their flight (2 words); how a plane will move on the ground; what you need to buy to get on the plane; and what you wave goodbye through — as well as look out.

Now if you've spotted the answers to all those you will find just one word left which has nothing to do with air travel — although it does go up and down as anyone in the Navy will tell you.

Send just that one word, on a postcard only, please, to: Starchart, Look-in, 247 Tottenham Court Road, London, W1P 0AU. The sender of the first correct entry pulled from the postbag will receive the prize.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★ Here are last week's answers

Knight; Castle; King; Queen; Bishop; Pawn; Board; Move; Black and White; Eight squares; Chess Set; Opening Move; Take; Check; Checkmate; Stalemate; Win; Lose; Champion; Challenger; Opponent; Sideways; Think; Plan. Prize answer: Draughts.

This Tuesday, 28th October, at 7.30 p.m. Thames TV will once again be setting out to find Britain's Strongest Man — last year the title went to Olympic shot-putter Geoff Capes. So here we take a look at a few facts about some of the strongest, the biggest, the greatest and the most mind-boggling people and events in history ...

WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT?!

As early as Roman times, there were great competitions to find the strongest, fastest and most athletic men. And as soon as a record had been set, along would come someone else to do just that little bit better.

Compared to the rest of the animal world, man is ill-equipped for feats of physical endeavour. The strongest land animal is probably the African bush elephant (which also happens to be the largest) standing an average of 3.20m (10ft 6in) at the shoulder and weighing 5.6 tons. Compare this with the heaviest man recorded in the Guinness Book of Records — Francis John Lang of Iowa, USA, born in 1934, who was a mere 538kg (84st 11lb). He was so big that, when he had to undergo medical treatment, he couldn't get through the hospital doors and had to be treated in a caravan in the car park!

The fastest land animal in the world is the cheetah, which has achieved estimated speeds of 60-63 mph, whereas the fastest human runner was Robert Lee Hayes of Florida, USA, who reached a speed of about 27mph in June, 1963. Tortoise-like by comparison, you'll agree!

Fastest runner: Robert Lee Hayes.

Despite the facts and figures that tend to make man look rather feeble, there are 639 muscles in the human body, so there's plenty of scope for physical exertion.

Chest measurements are often used to judge the strength of a man and among the biggest recorded was that of a French Canadian strongman named Louis Cyr: 150cm (59in). Also deserving a mention is Arnold Schwarzenegger (a former Mr. Universe) of Austria, who has a chest measurement of 147cm (58in) and weighs 115kg (16st 8lb). Arnold has been described as 'the most perfectly developed man in the history of the world' but he must have trouble buying shirts that fit!

It is next to impossible to say with certainty who is the strongest man (or woman) in the world because how do you define strength? We do know who the heaviest sportsman of all time is — wrestler William J. Cobb of Georgia, USA — who in 1962 weighed-in at 363kg (57st 4lb), and the heaviest in Britain is another wrestler, Luke McMasters, at 223kg (35st 2lb).

Wrestling is one of the most strenuous of all sports, so perhaps Martin Klein and Alfred Asikainen, who took part in the longest recorded bout of 11 hours and 40 minutes in the 1912 Olympic Games, deserve the title 'strongest men of all time'. Martin Klein won, by the way.

Weightlifting is another sport that requires super-human muscle-power and it's easier to judge the strongest man in any contest. The greatest weight ever raised is 2,844kg (6,270lb) by Paul Anderson of the USA, the 1956 Olympic heavyweight champion. This was a weight lifted off trestles; the greatest overhead lifts from the ground exceed 254kg (560lb) and are made by super-heavyweights.

Arnold Schwarzenegger: 'the most perfectly developed man in the history of the world'!

Not quite so spectacular, but probably equally tiring, was the record set in July 1979 by 34-year-old Tommy Gildert. He's the world press-up champion, having done no less than 9,105 consecutive press-ups in 4 hours 17 minutes at Burnley Boys' Club. Korean Lee Chin-yong holds the record for chinning the bar, having done 120 continuous chin-ups from a dead hang position, in March, 1979.

A sport that requires a healthy collection of big, strong, hefty men is tug-of-war. The longest recorded pull under Amateur Athletic Association rules (yes, there are rules!) is one of 11 minutes 23 seconds between Isle of Oxney and St. Claret's at Chertsey, Surrey in May, 1979. There have been longer pulls but these have included participants lying on the ground or bracing their feet which is strictly against the rules!

Though animals have nature on their side when it comes to strength and agility, there have been occasions when a man has beaten them 'at their own game'. In 1928 a German, Otto Kemmerich, swam with a sealion round and round a pool in a contest of endurance. After almost two days and nights of continual swimming the sealion had had enough but Otto went on swimming for another two hours.

The swimmer couldn't claim to be the strongest man in the world but he could fairly boast to be 'stronger than a sealion'!

Bob Barton

Thames TV's Britain's Strongest Man brings together eight competitors (including Geoff, of course) from all over the country, to struggle, heave and grimace over a variety of fiendish obstacles designed to sort out the men from the boys, and the strong from the very strong. The competitors spend two exhausting days bending steel bars, dragging two ton lorries, ripping telephone directories, and shouldering steel girders loaded with pretty girls: all in the course of finding the strongest man from within our shores. For the winner there's a cash prize, a silver salver and, of course, the chance of a well earned rest!

ANIMAL ALLSORTS

DOGS AND PUPPIES

Dogs can make wonderful companions, but a good, happy relationship isn't something that just happens; like most good things it requires thought and quite a bit of hard work. If you are thinking of buying a dog, you should really consider the following points first:

1. Have you discussed buying a dog with your family and do they all feel the same as you about it?
2. Will someone be at home with the dog during the day? Don't buy a dog if everyone is going to be out all day, as this will result in the dog being left alone either shut indoors, or locked out to roam the streets.
3. You must decide who is going to be responsible for the dog. Remember, it will need to be fed, groomed, exercised regularly, house trained and obedience trained.
4. Does someone in the family know how to look after a dog or a puppy? If not you will need to learn more about this: your local library will have some books that will help you.
5. Dogs come in various sizes, so consider how much space you have at home. Do you have a garden, and how large is it? Is it securely fenced? Do you live in the town or country?
6. Can you afford to keep a dog? Obviously big dogs cost more than medium-sized and little dogs to feed, but costs don't stop at food, lead and dog basket. Don't forget the veterinary fees: your dog will need to be innoculated against distemper and other illnesses, and you should also consider the cost of neutering and spaying if you wish to prevent unwanted puppies. Veterinary treatment will also be necessary if the dog is ill.
7. Other costs will arise at holiday times if you need to leave the dog with boarding kennels. Think, too, how you will manage if the family has to go on a long day's outing and you can't take the dog with you.
8. Spend some time deciding what kind of dog you might buy and where to buy it. Don't buy in a hurry and take trouble to ensure that you don't buy a dog with a bad temperament.

If you'd like to know more about looking after dogs and puppies a 'How To Care For Your Dog' wallchart (price 40p) and a 'Dogs and Puppies' leaflet (price 25p) can be obtained from the address below.

SWALLOW THIS!

TVTimes cookery editor
Kathie Webber introduces Look-in's weekly fun food spot...

Robertson's Golly (that distinctive little character from all those jam jars) is 50 years old this year. To celebrate, Robertson's have produced a poster called Four Seasons With Golly, taking you through Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, with lots of seasonal ideas for things to make and do. The instructions for all the ideas (there are 20 of them), which include Happy Face Biscuits, Corn Dollies, Cotton Wool Lambs and Seed Necklaces, are in a booklet which comes with the poster.

One of the ideas for Autumn is making Toffee Apples. This is the best time to make them because there are lots of apples in the shops. Our tasty recipe uses honey to coat the apples before dipping them in the toffee: it's slightly different to the one from the Golly poster but both are delicious!

★ This recipe is not suitable for you to use alone, as the toffee gets very, very hot and is extremely dangerous. You must be sure that an adult makes the toffee.

Toffee Apples

- 8 small rosy eating apples
- 8, 15cm (6 inch) clean wooden sticks
- 75ml (5 tablespoons) clear honey
- 225g (8 oz) demerara sugar
- 25g (1oz) butter
- 15ml (1 tablespoon) golden syrup
- 75ml (5 tablespoons) water
- 10ml (2 teaspoons) lemon juice

Wash and dry the apples and press a stick into the stalk end of each one. Ask an adult to make the rest of the recipe. Heat the honey in a small pan over low heat until dissolved. Put the remaining ingredients into a thick bottomed medium-sized saucepan and stir over low heat until all the sugar has dissolved. Bring to the boil, stirring occasionally, and then boil steadily for 10-12 minutes without stirring. Test to see if the toffee is ready by dropping a small spoonful into a saucer of cold water, the toffee should set instantly and "crack" when broken in half. If you are using a sugar thermometer the toffee should be 145 deg. C (290 deg. F) which will probably be marked the "hard crack" stage on the thermometer. Allow the bubbles to subside and then dip the apples first into the honey and then into the toffee, tilting the toffee pan so the apples are well coated. Place the apples on greased greaseproof paper until set — about 30-40 minutes. Wrap separately in plastic food wrap or waxed paper and store in an airtight tin.

You can obtain your Golly poster and booklet by writing to: Golly Department, James Robertson & Sons, Golden Shred Works, Droylsden, Manchester, M35 6DR, enclosing a cheque or postal order for 75p (which includes the cost of postage and packing).

CALL US, BLONDIE!

You may have noticed that, over the past few months, Blondie haven't exactly been in the limelight — not since their glittering sell-out tour of Britain at the turn of the year, in fact.

At the time of that series of live dates, the band felt that they needed to undertake a tour here as a boost to their confidence, because their singles had not been reaching the chart heights which had been expected of them. So, in that respect, the British tour was a resounding success, with capacity audiences giving them an ecstatic welcome — and subsequently putting two singles, Atomic and Call Me at the top of the charts.

But what has become of Blondie since then? Call Me reached number one in May, and since then we have heard very little from them. One of the reasons is that they have been hard at work in America, establishing as loyal a following there as they have on this side of the Atlantic. "America is so much bigger that it takes a lot longer for things to happen there," said drummer Clem Burke when the band were last in Britain. "You can be big in one area, only to discover that in another region no-one has ever heard of you." Now, though, surely everyone must have heard of them!

Call Me was the theme music for the big box-office, X-rated film American Gigolo, and the song was included on the soundtrack album which just crept into the charts — which meant that a lot of people who may not otherwise have had a chance to hear the band were introduced to them. And Debbie is currently advertising jeans in America — the manufacturers reckon that the advertising poster featuring her is selling as well as the jeans themselves!

The rest of the band have also been keeping busy since their return to the United States, with keyboard man Jimmy Destri following up the production of an album by a band called The Revlons, whom he discovered, by producing a compilation album, called Nine Times Five, with tracks by New York new wave bands. Clem Burke has been working on producing other bands — and on an EP of his own — and Chris Stein has been working as a producer for some new bands. Blondie members all agree that taking a break to follow their solo ambitions is a good thing for the band, because it means that they stay fresh, can bring new ideas to the group and don't get frustrated.

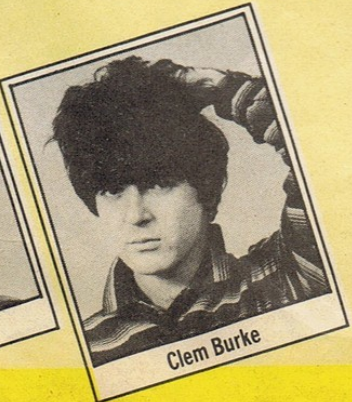

Now they are back together working on a new album — their first since Eat To The Beat last November — and judging by the ▶▶▶ to p.18 from p.15] rumours about the content of the LP, they're determined to prove that they have not fallen into a rut. Alan Edwards, Blondie's spokesman in England, says: "I'm told that it will have a disco flavour, and when I last spoke to Chris he told me that the most recent music he had been listening to, and enjoying, was Tibetan bells — so it's anyone's guess as to what we can expect!" The recording is shrouded in mystery, and even the release date of the album is being kept a closely guarded secret, with predictions that it could be ready in November. A single is also expected sometime this month, but at the time of writing no title or release date has been announced.

Debbie and the boys

Jimmy Destri and Chris Stein are responsible for most of Blondie's songs, and while they have been helping other bands by producing their records, they agree that the bands also help them, by giving them new ideas and widening the influences in their writing and their partnership with disco-king Giorgio Moroder (the producer responsible for making Donna Summer's music such a distinctive and outstanding success) on the production of Call Me was an indication of their search for new and interesting sounds.

At one time, it looked as if Giorgio would produce the new Blondie album, and they abandoned their recording plans with Mike Chapman — who produced Parallel Lines and Eat To The Beat for them — on the West Coast of America, to return to New York and start work with Giorgio. However, that didn't work out as they had hoped, and they went back to the West Coast and Mike, with whom they are now working. Once the album is completed, it doesn't necessarily mean that the band will follow it with a tour, because they apparently have no plans to do any live shows for the rest of this year. While the recording continues, there is no time to work on a stage show, and rather than rush into anything, they're saying at the moment that they'd prefer to wait until next year before deciding whether to hit the road again.

They may be producing a video-disc, however, to coincide with the album, following the success of their Eat To The Beat video, which was one of the first to be released. Blondie have always been interested in videos, and they are aware of how much TV showings of the videos of their singles helped them to establish themselves in this country, so they take considerable care about getting them exactly as they want them. Now, with the boom in home video cassette recorders, they have been quick to realise how popular video versions of albums can become.

SILVER SCREEN

Films are another of the band's interests, but as yet we have not had the opportunity to see any of their film projects. Roadie (expected to receive an AA-rating) a film about a member of a rock show touring crew also featuring the larger than life Heavy Metal singer Meat Loaf, has just been released in America, and although there is no definite release date for Britain yet, it is thought that it will be on the cinema circuit before Christmas. Blondie are in the film for about half an hour, and they enjoyed it so much that they are considering more films, although they have not yet found anything that they want to do.

Debbie, of course, had a leading role in the film Union City, (which has only been shown in the States), which inspired her to write the song Union City Blue, about her experiences of film making, and her performance has encouraged other film producers to try to tempt her back in front of the cameras. She is studying a number of scripts at the moment, but has made no firm decisions — partly because she does not know how much time she will have for filming. Union City has been quite well received in the United States, but it could well be that Britain will not get the chance to see it at all as so far no distributor has been found to release it here, and until someone picks it up, it must sit on the shelf.

Perhaps when the album is ready, and a single is high in the charts, someone will release the film. Then, after what appears to have been a bit of a hibernation, Blondie will once again be seen and heard everywhere around the country.

On holiday with his family, sixteen year old Chris finds himself at odds with his parents and the self-sufficient families who return, summer after summer, to sail the creeks and bays of a remote Cornish estuary. Surprisingly, it is not his dynamic older brother Nick who saves the situation, but a reserved local girl Rowan, in whom he recognises a kindred spirit and whose independent way of life makes Chris's own seem unreal and unimportant. In the company of Rowan and her vulnerable friend Rose, Chris discovers that his own ideas about girls are very different from his experienced brother's and, through his increasing concern for Rose, he learns the distinction between love and friendship.

This week finds Rugby Union's New Zealand All Blacks midway through their tour of Wales. So let's take a look back at their glorious history . . .

The HAKA! (above), the traditional Maori dance performed by the side before a match, really does show that the All Blacks mean business!

BLACKS' MAGIC!

The impact of the New Zealand Rugby team's first tour of the British Isles, in 1905, was nothing short of phenomenal. From their first fixture, against a much fancied Devon side that was swept aside by a massive 55-4 victory, the touring team entertained with their scintillating all out attacking rugby, the notable feature of which was the running of the ball from the back. Indeed, one of the explanations of how the New Zealanders came to acquire their nickname was that one newspaper intended to head a feature on the side 'ALL BACKS'. However, because of a typographical error, the headline read 'ALL BLACKS'! The more likely explanation is that the team owe their nickname to the colour of their playing strip, the famous black jersey with the silver fern leaf. The only defeat inflicted upon the All Blacks on that 1905 tour was in the final game, at Cardiff Arms Park, and by the slenderest of margins. The Welsh 3-0 victory was hotly disputed. As All Black Bob Deans was going over for a try, he was tackled. The referee disallowed the try, although he was way behind the play. Both countries viewed the affair, naturally, from opposing standpoints, but the incident helped to establish the splendid rivalry that still exists today whenever the two teams meet.

The 1924-25 touring side were not expected to do well, but in fact went on to become one of the most successful All Blacks sides to visit Great Britain, completing their 32 matches without loss.

It can be said that the legend of the All Blacks was built on the foundations of the 1905 and 1924 tours, and the All Native tour of 1888. However, there have been periods when the All Blacks have lost their way. In the late 1940s and 1950s the glorious attacking style gave way to an inferior defensive alternative, contested between the two sets of forwards. The 1972 tour was disastrous. More matches were lost than ever before and the sending home of Keith Murdoch is still the low-spot of All Black history.

Keith Murdoch (right), the first All Black to be sent home, after unbecoming conduct off the field.

C. G. Porter, (left), captain of the unbeaten side of 1924-25 that became known as the 'Invincibles'.

The 1905 Devon result (below) was such an upset, most papers in Fleet Street refused to believe the scoreline and printed their own!

IT'S BETTER YOU DON'T KNOW, MR. CONWAY. SORRY TO HAVE CAUSED YOU TROUBLE!

I HAVE LEARNED SOMETHING. EARTH PEOPLE ARE PLEASED WHEN YOU REPAIR WHAT YOU HAVE BROKEN!

VERY GOOD. BUT THE GOLDEN RULE IS, DON'T BREAK ANYTHING IN THE FIRST PLACE!

NOTHING MORE IS SAID, BUT THE LESSON REMAINS, AND WHEN, NEXT DAY, MORK IS ON HIS OWN, DOWNTOWN IN BOULDER, EARLY IN THE MORNING...

OHH! MORE BREAKING GLASS! I CAN SAVE THESE GENTLEMEN A WHOLE LOT OF TROUBLE!

AND EVEN AS LEFTY LANE REACHES TO ROB MINSKY'S JEWELLERY STORE, MORK PUTS ON THE 'FLUENCE'....

AAAGH! ME FINGERS!

DID I NOT DO THE RIGHT THINGS...?

Apparently not! Follow the fun next week!
