Radio Strike Plans Gather Momentum

With over a hundred men taking part in the strike, the West End, where the BBC's broadcasting center is located, is almost empty of people. The strike has brought the BBC to a standstill, with only a skeleton staff remaining to keep the essential services running. The strike is expected to continue for at least a week, and the BBC is struggling to maintain its services.

Jazz in New Orleans

The reasons for the decline in Negro Jazz are suggested in this revealing article by Gerald Pritley for the MELIODA CLUB.

Although a letter into music, the Negro Jazz of the 1930s and 1940s was based on an understanding of the earlier work of the New Orleans and Kansas City bands. The early jazz musicians were connoisseurs of the work of the greats of the earlier period, and their music reflected this knowledge.

MU's Point-by-Point Reply To BBC Strike Statement

On July 15, the BBC issued a general statement on its refusal to sign the National Union's 10-point list in its current form. "The Corporation is not prepared to agree to the introduction of a television service of any kind," it said. The NUJ has taken up this point in its reply. We present the BBC's views here, interpreted by the NUJ reply.
