I CAN'T AFFORD MUSICIANS AT THESE PRICES!

Says Harold Fielding

Two bands for Frankie Laine

at Belle Vue

WHAT impresses Harold Fielding is the fact that two bands for concert work may cost him the same as a full-scale band for cinema work. He states that big bands are out and that he has to depend on lip-synching to save money. He feels that the audience at Belle Vue is not interested in the music and that they come for the big names. He is also concerned about the future of the music industry and fears that it is declining.

Maurice Berman, home from his French Riviera honeymoon, reports that Tango-land has gone
jazz crazy!
There has never been a time in the annals of music when the tango, the dance of passion, had such a vogue as it has today. Throughout the world, from Paris and Berlin to Buenos Aires and New York, the tango is being danced. And why not? It has a certain elusive charm and romanticism that makes it a perfect partner for the jazz tempo.

One must not that this is a modern phenomenon. Tango music has always been popular and the tango itself is an ancient music.

Musical
Merry-go-round

By Hubert W. David

FORTY PERCENT of the work of the Tin Pan Alley song-writers is devoted to the writing of music for children's shows. This is a facet of song-writing that is often overlooked, yet the public's reaction to this type of music is usually one of keen interest. It is a type of music which is in itself on a par with any type of serious composition, and it is a type of music which is never likely to be discredited.

TALKING TO More than 3,000 children a week in the weekly broadcasts of the Meyer Bros. shows is, I am sure, one of the most satisfying experiences a song-writer can have.

WHAT'S new

When I visited my father in New York City last week I found him engaged in recording a new song for the Meyer Bros. show. The song was entitled "The Lost Treasure." It was written in the style of "The Three Bears," and it was received with great enthusiasm by the children.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

On the occasion of my birthday last week I received a telegram from my old friend, the late Henry Ford, congratulating me on my birthday. It was a beautiful telegram, and I was much moved by it.

The ultimate aim

The ultimate aim of any song-writer is to write a song that will be loved by the children. This is a difficult task, but it is one that I shall continue to strive for.

What's the truth

The truth is, I am a song-writer, and I shall continue to write songs until I am no longer able to do so.

Refuse to sell

I refuse to sell my songs to anyone for any amount of money. I believe that songs should be enjoyed, and not sold. I shall continue to write songs until I am no longer able to do so.

How Jelly Roll picked his titles

In the year 1920, Jelly Roll was asked to pick his titles for the popular sheet music publishers. He chose three titles:

1. "Well, Well, Well"
2. "Is That a Storm A-Rollin'"
3. "A Girls's Tune"

The explanation

Jelly Roll explained that he had chosen these titles because they were the most popular of that year.

TWO NEW BIG CONTRACTS FOR ROWBERRY ORK

EDGAR JACKSON'S REVIEWS

Billy May has always been a master of arranging, as shown in the fine sound he has achieved on his recent album. His work has always been on the up and up, and this latest effort is no exception. The arrangements are tight, the sound is clear, and the overall production is excellent.

HOPE FADES AS FORGETFUL BING MAKES BRITISH BOW IN STAR SHOW FOR CLUBLAND

Reported by Tony Brown

Bing Crosby, the world's greatest performer, was on hand last night to add glamour and fame to the night's proceedings at the Carlton Hotel in Blackpool. The Carlton Hotel, known for its star-studded clientele, was filled with the usual mix of stars and royalty, all eager to see Bing in action.

The performance was a success, with the audience responsive and engaged. However, towards the end of the show, it became apparent that Bing was struggling to remember his lines.

"If you'll forgive me," he said, "I think I've lost my place card."

Despite this, the audience remained loyal and appreciative of Bing's efforts. The show was a success, and the Carlton Hotel was once again buzzing with excitement.

On-stage centre

The British stars were leading... "Not good enough" was the response of one British performer to Bing's forgetfulness. Despite this, the show went on, and the audience remained enthusiastic.
