Steve Race in the Sound Track talks about the "Pianists of the NAFFI School who break into boogie"

By Lee Conway

ONE of the most interesting of the young pianists and composers who have broken into boogie and rhythm and blues today is Alphonse Ray. For though he is not yet 20, the impact he has made has been all the more remarkable because he is not American. He is from Togo, West Africa, and is one of the many black.P'African musicians who have found a way into American popular music through the NAFFI (National Association for the Advancement of the Performing Arts) school.

Alphonse Ray

Born in his native country, he came to this country in 1955 and was impressed by the local music scene, particularly by the boogie-woogie style. He began to play the piano and soon became well-known among other musicians. In 1958, he was approached by a record producer who wanted to record some of his songs. The result was the album "Boogie Woogie Boogie Man," which sold over a million copies.

Ray's success continued, and he has since released several more albums, all of which have been well-received. His music is characterized by its energetic and lively rhythms, and he is widely regarded as one of the most important figures in the world of boogie-woogie music.

HOLLYWOOD HEADLINES
(From Lynne Hammond)

BING CROSBY

It was 10:30 by this time and, as a matter of fact, we were in danger of being involved in another of those Hollywood publicity stunts that are becoming a regular feature of our daily lives. But Bing Crosby, in the midst of a tour of the United States, was determined to do his bit for the entertainment of his fans. He had already given a private performance in Los Angeles, and now he was on his way to New York.
